ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY.

L.

IHRE has observed, that words in Gothic ending in L, often denote something of a circular form. He mentions, in proof of this, hagel hail, hwirfwel a whirlpool, spindel a spindle, &c. vo. Hagel.

Elsewhere he remarks, after the Latin philologists, that this letter has, aliquid blandi, a certain softness in it, for which reason it is often used.

L, in our language, is a letter evidently denoting diminution. In this sense it occurs in the formation of bagrel a child; gangarel, gangrel, a child beginning to walk, q. a little ganger; hangrell, q. v.

Ihre, in order to prove that Gothic diminutives are formed by this letter, refers to Moes.G. mawilo, a diminutive from mawi, a girl, barnilo, a little child, from barn; Su.G. kyckling, a chicken, wekling, an effeminate man. He remarks the affinity of the Lat. in this respect; as, in puellus, cultellus, &c. In Germ. l is also a mark of diminution; as, maennl, homuncio, from man, homo; steinl, lapillus, a little stone, from stein, lapis.

Germ. gengeln, like gangrel, is a term employed with respect to infants, who have not learned the proper use of their feet. Su.G. gaenglig denotes one who walks in a tottering way. V. Ihre, vo. Gunga. From these, and a variety of other examples, it would appear indeed, that, in the northern languages, l not only marks diminution, but forms the termination of those words which express inequality of motion, or a proneness to fall; as, E. waddle, viewed as a diminutive from wade, wriggle, hobble, &c. S. hoddle, to waddle, weeggle, id., toddle, to totter in walking, coggle, to cause to rock, shoggle, to shake, weffil, easily moved from one side to another, from AS. waf-ian, to wave; bachle, shachle, &c.

LAB

I know not, if it be merely accidental, that many words terminate in l or le, which denote the falling, or dispersion of liquids in drops or in smaller quantities: as, E. dribble, trickle, sprinkle, draggle; S. bebble, scuttle, q. v. A sanguine philologist might fancy that he perceived a resemblance between the liquid sound of the letter, and that of the object expressed.

L in S. seems sometimes to denote continuation, or habit. Thus, gangrel also signifies one who is accustomed to wander from place to place; haivrel, one who is habituated to foolish talking, or haivering, S.; stumral, applied to a horse which is prone to stumbling.

It may perhaps be added, that l or le is frequently used as the termination of words denoting trifling or procrastination in motion or action: as, E. fiddlefaddle; S. haingle, to hang about in a trifling way, daddle, druttle, to be slow in motion; taigle, to delay; pingil, to work diligently without much progress; muddle, id., niddle, &c.

To LA, v. a. To lay.

Glaidlie wald I baith inquire and lere,
And to ilk cunnand wicht la to myne ere.

Doug. Virgil, 11, 52.

LAB, s. A lump, or large piece of any thing, S.; perhaps the same with E. lobe, a division, as, a lobe of the lungs.

LAB, s. A stroke, a blow, Ang.

It seems to be generally used metaphorically, to denote a handle for crimination, an occasion for invective; corresponding to Gr. habe, ansa, manubrium, occasio; although most probably the resemblance is merely accidental. Ihre observes that Sw. labbe denotes the hand, especially one of a large size; vo. Lofwe.

LABOURIN, s. "A farm," S. Sir John Sinclair's Observ. p. 181.

LACHTER, s. A lecher.

Came ve to wow our lasse, now lachter, Ye ar sa rasch thair will be slachter, Ye will not spair nor speir quhais aucht hir. Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 6.

Junius derives lecherous from Fland. lack, luxuriosus, lascivus; Lye, from Arm. lic, lascivus. These seem radically the same with Germ. laich-en, lascivire, scortari. Its original sense is ludere, Isl. leika, whence minstrels or musicians were denominated leikari, Verel. Ind.; leikare, lusor; leika, amica, G. Andr.: Su.G. lek-a, ludere; lascivire.

LACHTER, s. A fowl is said to have laid all her lachter, when it is supposed that she will lay no more eggs at one time, S. Lochter, Perths.

In The Gander and Goose, it is said, In offspring soon so rich he grew, That children's children he cou'd view, While thus she liv'd his darling pet, Her lachter's laid with which she's set. Morison's Poems, p. 68.

A Bor. lawter is undoubtedly the same, although this might scarcely occur from Grose's definition; "thirteen eggs, to set a hen." Gl.

Sibb. properly refers to Teut. legh-tyd, the time of laying, ovatio, eyeren legghen, ova ponere. Isl. barnsleg, loci matricis vel secundina, G. Andr.

LACHTER, LAICHTER, s. A layer, stratum, or flake. A lachter of woo, a flake of wool, Ang. Lochter is used Perths. Tweedd.; as, a lochter of hay or straw.

Teut. logh-en, componere foenum in metam. Su.G. Isl. lag, a layer, from laegg-a, ponere; Belg. laag, Teut. laeghe.

LACHTERSTEAD, s. The ground occupied by a house, as much ground as is necessary for building on, S. B.

Su.G. lazgerstad, a bed-chamber, a lodgingroom; from laeger, a couch, and stad, a place. Lacger, Isl. ligr, ligri, is from ligg-ia, Moes.G. lig-an to lie. Thus the term lachterstead originally conveyed the simple idea of a place where one's couch might be laid, or where one might make his bed. We use it only in a secondary sense; as the principal use of a house, in the savage state of society, is as a place of rest during night. Belg. leger also denotes a bed; een leger van stroo, a bed of straw: hence legersted, a place to lie down; Sewel.

E. leaguer, used to denote a siege, has the same origin. The word properly signifies a camp; Teut. legher, Germ. lager, Su.G. laeger, Dan. lajer. id.; from legg-en, Su.G. ligg-a, ponere, jacere; because troops take their station there. Hence S. leagerlady, q. v.

To LACK, v. a. To slight. V. LAK. LAD, n. 1. It is used as signifying one in a menial situation.

Pandaris, pykthankis, custronis and clatteraris, Loupis vp from laddis, sine lichts amang lardis. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 198.

It still denotes a male scrvant, who has not arrived at manhood, or at least at his prime, S.

2. A sweetheart, S.

And am I then a match for my ain lad, That for me so much generous kindness had? Ramsay's Poems, ii, 187.

Lass is the correlate.

The cadger clims, new cleikit from the creill, And ladds uploips to lordships all thair lains. Montgomery, MS. Chron. S. P. iii, 499.

"Lay up like a laird, and seek like a lad," S. Prov.; "spoken to them who take no care to lay up what they had in their hands, and so must drudge in seeking of it." Kelly, p. 240.

The origin is certainly AS. leode, juvenis. Isl. lydde, servus, mancipium, seems allied. V. Seren. LADDIE, s. 1. A boy; a diminutive from

Then Hobbie had but a laddie's sword, But he did mair than a laddie's deed; For that sword had clear'd Conscouthart green,

Had it not broke o'er Jerswigham's head. Minstrelsy Border, i 191. 2. A fondling term, properly applied to a young man, S.

If kith and kin and a' had sworn, I'll follow the gypsie laddie.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 178. LADE, LAID, s. A load, in general; as much as man or beast can carry, S. Your claith and waith will never tell with me, Tho' ye a thousand laids thereof coud gee. Ross's Helenore, p. 80.

Hence a lade of meal, two bolls, the quantity sufficient to load a horse, S.

A.S. hlad, id.; Isl. ladsla, onus navis. LADE, LEAD, MILL-LADE, s. The canal or trench which carries the water of a river or pond down to a mill, S.

"Myllers—take the fry, or smolts of salmon, in the myln dame or lead, contrair the ordinance of the law." Chalmerlan Air, c. 11, § 4.

Camden renders lade, "passage of waters;" observing that, in an old glossary, aquaeductus is translated water-lada; Remains, p. 147. A.S. lade, canalis; Teut. leyde, aquaeductus. Baillie gives millead, milleat, as used in the same sense.

LADENIN TIME, the time of laying in winter provisions, S.

Su.G. lad-a, to heap together, to stuff, congerere, stipare, Ihre. Hence lada, a barn, because grain is collected in it.

LADE-STERNE, LEIDE-STERNF, s. 1. The polestar, E. loadstar.

-Arcturus, quhilk we cal the leide sterne, The double Vrsis weill couth he decerne.

Doug. Virgil, 37, 5.

2, Metaphorically a leader, guide, or pattern. Lanterne, lade sterne, myrrour, and A per se. Ibid. 3, 11.

From A.S. lead-an, Su.G. led-a, Isl. leid-a, Teut. leyd-en, ducere, q. the leading or conducting star; Teut. leyd-sterre, also leyd, id. cynosura, polus. E. loadstone has the same origin. The Icelanders call the magnet leidar-steinn, lapis viae, from leid a way; Landnamabok, Gl. V. Ledisman.

LADY LANDERS. V. LANDERS.

LADNAIRE, LAIDNER, LARDNER, s. A larder, the place where meat is kept, S. A foule mellé thar gane he mak.

For meill, and malt, and blud, and wyne,

Ran all to giddyr in a mellyne,

That was unsemly for to se.

Tharfor the men off that countré,

For swa fele thar mellyt wer, Callyt it the Dowglas Lardner.

Barbour, v. 410, MS.

Laidner being the vulgar pronunciation, it is altered to this, edit. 1620, with the addition of a line:

-Called it the Dowglas Ladnaire, And will be called this mony yeere. It occurs in both forms in our old Acts.

"They lay ane lardnar in great, and selles in their builths be peces, contrair the lawes and statutes of burrowes." Chalmerlan Air, c. 8. § 10. Lardarium in grosso, Lat.

—" For this cause na fisher sould make laidner." Ibid. c. 21. §

The ground of complaint evidently was, that fleshers and fishers kept by them a stock of what should have been brought to market.

Lye conjectures that Arm. lard, fat, may be the origin of larder.

LADRY, s. "Idle lads," Pink.

Thay lufit nocht with ladry, nor with lown, Nor with trumpours to travel throw the town. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. 1. 3.

This seems rather to mean what the Fr. call canaille, S. canallyie, perhaps from A.S. leod-wera, incola, leod-weras, common people, Somn. Isl. lydur, plebs; or, as this term is connected with trumpours, deceivers, it may be allied to Isl. loddari, a travelling musician, a juggler, ludio, histrio, probably from liod carmen, A.S. hleothr-ian canere, Isl. laudermenne is rendered homo nauci, from lauder, laudr, spuma, as E. scum is used. Lodur menne, homo vilis, a lodur spuma, q. spumeus homo, i.e. inutilis ut spuma. Olai. Lex. Run.

G. Andr. expl. loddare, as signifying a dirty sneaking fellow. V. next word.

LADRONE, LAYDRON, s. A lazy knave; laithron, S. It often signifies a sloven, a drab. Quhair hes thow bene, fals ladrone lown? Doyttand, and drinkand, in the toun?

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 8.

Here it is used as if an adjective.

But when Indemnity came down,

The laydron caught me by the thrapple.

Watson's Coll. i. p. 11.

Sibb. views it as "probably a variation of lurdane, if not from Teut. ledig, otiosus, deses, supinus, and the common termination roun." It seems more to resemble Su.G. lat, lazy, laett-ias, to be indolent; or lidder, q. v.-q. lidder ane, a lazy one.

It may be observed, however, that Isl. loddare is used in a similar sense; impurus et invisae notae tenebrio, quasi incomptus, insulse hirsutus; G. Andr. He seems to deduce it from lod, earth rough with grass, lodinn hairy, rough, shaggy; while he mentions Fr. lourd as a synon. term. But the Isl. word has evidently more affinity to ladrone than to lurdane, q. v.

LAFE, LAIFF, LAYFF, LAVE, LAW, s. The remainder after partition or division, the persons or things remaining; pron. laive, S. lave,

And the lave syne, that dede war thar, Into gret pyttis erdyt war.

Barbour, xiii. 665, MS.

His men entryt, that worthy war in deid, In handis hynt, and stekit of the lauff.

Wallace, iv. 255, MS.

Than said he thus, All weildand God resawc My petows spreit and sawle amang the law: My carneill lyff I may nocht thus defend.

Wallace, ii. 174, MS.

A.S. lafe, Moes.G. laib-os, Alem. leibba, Isl. leif, Su.G. lefw-or, Germ. laib, id.; all from the different verbs signifying to leave.

LAGENE, LAGGEN, pron. leiggen, s. 1. The projecting part of the staves at the bottom of a bushel or cask, S.

"That-the edge of the bottom, entring within the lagene, be pared out-with, towarde the nether side; and to be maid in-with plaine and just rule richt." Acts, Ja. vi. 1587. c. 114.

2, The angle within, between the side and bottom of a cask or wooden vessel, S.

An' I hae seen their coggie fou, That yet hae tarrow't at it; But or the day was done, I trow, The laggen they hae clautet Fu' clean that day.

Burns, iii. 98.

Su.G. lagg is used precisely in the first sense. Usurpatur-de ultima parte lignorum in vasis ligneis, quae extra commissuras eminet; Ihre. In general, it denotes the extremity of any thing. E. ledge is evidently allied; whence probably our phrase, the ledgins of a brigg, for the parapets of a bridge.

LAGEN-GIRD, s. A hoop securing the bottom of a tub or wooden vessel, S.

To cast a lagen-gird, to bear a spurious child, S. Or bairns can read, they first maun spell.

I learn'd this frae my mammy, And coost a legen girth mysel, Lang or I married Tammie.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 274. "There wis ane o' the queans, I believe, had casten a lagen-gird." Journal from London, p. 7. LAGGERY, adj. Miry, dirty. A laggery road, a road that is covered with mire, S.B. V. next word.

LAGGERIT, part. pa. 1. Bemired, besmeared with mud, S.

The law valis flodderit all wyth spate, The plane stretis and euery hie way Full of fluschis, dubbis, myre and clay, Laggerit leyis wallowit fernis schew, Broun muris kythit thare wissinyt mossy hew.

Doug. Virgil, 201, 5.

2, Encumbered, from whatever cause; as by heavy armour, S.B.

An' as you ay by speed o' fit Perform ilk doughty deed, Fan laggert wi' this bouksome graith, Ye will tyne haaf your speed.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 12. Rudd. supposes that this may be compounded of AS. laga water, and gara gurges. This, as far at least as it respects the first of these words, is the only probable conjecture among a variety which he throws out. Su.G. lag, Isl. laug-r, laug-ur, water; log-ur, a collection of waters. The radical term is laa, unda fluens. Laa in Hervarar S. is used to denote the sea; Verel.

LAGMAN, s. The president in the supreme court formerly held in the Orkney islands.

"The president, or principal person in the Lawting, was named the Great Foud or Lagman."

Barry's Orkney, p. 217.

Su.G. lagman, Isl. lagmadr, judex provincialis summae apud veteres dignationis, quippe qui non judex tantum erat in conventibus publicis, sed etiam coram Rege tribunitiam potestatem exercuit; Ihre, vo. Lag. V. Foud.

LAGRAETMAN, s. One acting as an officer to a lagman.

"As the chief judge had a council consisting of several members called Raddmen or counsellors, so the inferior ones [Lagmen] had their council also, composed of members denominated Lagraetmen or Lawrightmen, who were a kind of constables for the execution of justice in their respective islands." Barry's Orkney, p. 217.

From Su.G. lag law, and raett right; men whose business it was to see that justice was done according to law.

LAY, s. Law.

Yone pepil twane sall knyt vp peace for ay, Bynd confederance baith conjonit in ane lay. Doug. Virgil, 442, 32.

Leges et foedera jungerit. Virg.

O. Fr. lai is used for loi, id. LAY, s. Basis, foundation.

"But this plainly enough says, that this rising did not flow from any correspondence with the earl of Shaftsbury; and indeed the narrow lay upon which the first setherese together set up, makes this which the first gatherers together set up, makes this matter beyond debate." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 42; in margin, expl. foundation.

Teut. laeghe, positus, positura, positio; Kilian. LAY, s. The slay of a weaver's loom, S.

—" The instrument which inserted the woof into the warp, radius the shuttle; which fixed it when inserted, pecten the lay." Adam's Rom. Antiq. p. 503

Teut. laede, weverslaide, pecten; probably from leggh-en ponere, because by means of this the woof is as it were laid, or kept firm.

To LAY, v. α. To alloy, to mix other substances with more precious metals.

"Tuiching the article of gold-smythis, quhilkis layis and makis fals mixture of euill mettall." Acts, Ja. iv. 1489, c. 29. edit. 1566. V. LAYIS, LAYIT. To LAY ON, v. a. To strike, to give blows, S.

"For the Lords rebukes ar ever effectuall, he mynteth not against his enemies, bot he layeth on." Bruce's Eleven Sermons, 1591, Sign. S. 3, a.

Beanjeddart, Hundlie, and Hunthill, Three, on they laid weel at the last.

Raid of Reidswire; Minstrelsy Border, i, 120.

To lay on strokes is E. But the verb is used eliptically in S. I'll lay on, I will strike; he laid on me, he struck me. It seems properly to denote repeated blows.

Su.G. laegg-a, id., laegga pa en, aliquem verberare. To LAYCH, v. n. To linger, to delay.

—Mony tymis hym selfin has accusit, That he sa lang has laychit and refusit To ressaue glaidlie the Troiane Enee.

Doug. Virgil, 433, 15.
Rudd. derives it from Fr. lach-er, lasch-er, or Lat. lax-are, to slacken, to unbend. Did not the form of the word favour the Fr. etymon, we might deduce it from Su.G. laet-ja, intermittere, laett-jas, otiari; Alem. laz, lazze, piger. Fr. lasche, however, is used as nearly equivalent to E. lazy. Chaucer, lache, sluggish, lazy; lachesse, lazines.

"If a wight be slowe, and astonied, and lache, men shall holde him like to an asse." Boeth. 389,

LAICHLY, adj. A laichly lurdane; Lyndsay. V. WASH. Perhaps it should be laithly. V. LAITHLIE.

LAID, s. The pollack, a fish. V. LYTHE. LAIDLY, adj. Clumsy. V. LAITHLIE. LAID-SADILL, s. A saddle used for laying burdens on; q. a load-saddle.

I haif ane helter, and eik ane hek,
Ane coird, ane creill, and als an cradill,
Fyfe fidder of raggis to stuff ane jak,
Ane auld pannell of ane laid sadill.
Bannatyne Poems, p. 159, st. 7.

V. LADE.

LAYER, s. The shear-water, a bird. V. LYRE. LAIF, LAEF, s. A loaf, S.

But I haive a laef here in my lap,
Likewise a bottle of clarry wine;
And now, ere we go farther on,
We'll rest a while, and ye may dine.
True Thomas; Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 9.

"Keep as muckle of your Scots tongue as will buy your dog a leaf," S. Prov.; "a reprimand to conceited fellows who affectedly speak English, or, as they say, begin to knap." Kelly, p. 229.

Moes.G. hlaibs, hlaifs, A.S. hlaef, hlaf, laf, Alem. leib, Isl. hleif, lef, Su.G. lef, Fenn. leipa, Lappon. leab, Fris. leef, leaf, id. L.B. leib-o, Lat. libum. Junius refers to Heb. מתרות, hhalaph, innovare, instaurare, Goth. Gl.; Ihre to Germ. lab-en refocillare, or lope coagulum. It would be more natural to trace it to Germ. leib, and the cognate terms denoting life, bread being almost universally considered as "the staff of life."

Mr. Tooke, however, exhibits a very ingenious theory as to the origin of these terms used to denote this simple species of aliment, bread, dough, and loaf. Bread, he says, is the past part of the verb to bray, to pound, to beat to pieces; as suggesting the idea of corn, grain, &c. in a brayed state.

Dough, the past part. of A.S. deaw-ian, to moisten, denotes this grain as wetted; and loaf, laif, Alem. hlaf, is the past part. of hlef-ian to raise, and means merely raised; as Moes.G. hlaibs, loaf, is the same part. of hleib-ian, to raise, or to lift up. "After the bread has been wetted," he says, "(by which it becomes dough), then comes the leaven (which in the Anglo-Saxon is termed haef and haefen); by which it becomes loaf." Divers. Purley, ii. 46, 156.

The etymon of bread, however, is highly questionable. For as bray does not seem to be a Gothic verb, grain merely in a brayed state has never been reckoned bread.

To LAIG, v. n. To wade; Gl. Sibb. LAIGH, LAYCHE, adj. Low in situation, S.

All the streynthis that thai hade
Thai ewyn layche with the erde has made.

Wyntown, viii. 37. 114.

"Where the dike's laighest, it is eithest to lowp;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 77.

2, Not tall. A laigh man, one of a small stature: A tall person is said to be heich, S.

Su.G. laag, Isl. lagr, Teut. laegh, leegh, humilis, non altus.

LAIGH, s. Flat, low part. S. B.

"I have also been told, upon good authority, that there is a passage in the Red Book of Pluscardine,—that the whole laigh of Moray had been covered with the sea in the year 1010." P. Dyke, Elgin, Statist. Acc. xx. 232.

LAIGLIN, s. V. LEGLIN.

LAYIS, s. The alloy mixed with gold or silver.

--" Na goldsmyth sall mak mixture, nor put fals layis in the said metallis." Acts Ja. iv. 1489, c. 29, edit. 1566.

Fr. lier, id. alli-er, ali-er, to alloy. Allier or alier is most probably the original form of the Fr. word, which Menage derives q. a loy, according to law. Somn. however renders A.S. alecg-an, i to embase, as by mixing baser with better metals, vulgarly termed Alloy." The verb primarily signifies ponere, deponere. V. next word.

LAYIT, adj. Base, of inferior quality; a term applied to money.

Quhat care over your comoun-welthe doethe hir Grace instantly bear, quhen evin now presentlie, and of a lang tyme bygane, by the ministry of sum, (quho better deserved the gallows than ever did Cochran), sche doeth so corrupte the layit mony, and hes brocht it to suche basenes, and to sick quantitie of scrufe, that all men that hes thair eyis oppin may persave ane extreame beggarie to be brocht tharethrow upoun the wholle realme." Knox's Hist. p. 164. Layed, p. 222.

The sense of the passage is totally lost in the London edit., p. 175. "Sche doth so corrupt the good money, and hath brought it to such businesse, and such a deale of strife," &c.

The money here meant appears to be that commonly called billon.

The word seems to have been still in use in Ramsay's time, although printed as if contracted from allay'd:

Yet all the learn'd discerning part Of mankind own the heav'nly art Is as much distant from such trash, As 'lay'd Dutch coin from sterling cash. Poems, i. 317.

V. LAYIS and LAY, v.

LAIK, LAKE, s. Very fine linen cloth.

Thir fair ladyis in silk and claith of laik,
Thus lang sall not all foundin be sa stabill,
This Venus court, quhilk was in lufe maist abil,
For till discrive my cunninges to waik,
Ane multitude thay war innumerabill.

Palice of Honour, i. 52.

Leg. cunning is, as in edit. 1579.

The tents that in my wounds yeed,
Trust ye well they were no threed.
They were neither lake nor line,
Of silk they were both good and fine.

Sir Egeir, p. 12.

Chaucer uses the same word:

He didde next his white lere
Of cloth of lake, fin and clere,
A breche and eke a sherte.

Sir Thopas, v. 13788.

It would appear, from other dialects, that this term was anciently used with greater latitude, as denoting cloth in general. Belg. lak, and laaken, are used in this sense; laken-kooper, a cloth merchant. The word conjoined generally determines the kind of cloth meant; as, slaap-laken, a sheet for a bed, tafel-laken a table cloth. Although Germ. lacken seems properly to denote woollen cloth, leilach signifies sheets for a bed. Su.G. lakan, a sheet.

The same diversity appears in the more ancient dialects. Alem. lahhan was used to signify both woollen and linen cloth; lahhan pallium, lahhan chlamys; proprie pannus est, sed metonymice pro pallio accipitur è panno confecto; Schilter. It is used by Kero to denote a linen cloth; stuollahhan, the covering of a seat or stool; panelahhan, the covering of a bench.

Ihre has observed, vo. Lakan, that Plautus uses the term lacinia for a piece of linen cloth.

Sume laciniam, et absterge sudorem.

Merc. i, 2.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 3.

The term might seem to signify render, give up. A. S. lean-ian, Su.G. laen-a, reddere. But layne, or lain, very often occurs in the sense given above.

In lede is nought to layn, The hunters him biheld.

Sir Tristrem, p. 30. st. 43.

In lede is nought to layn, He sett him bi his side.

Ibid. p. 41. st. 65.

To LAYNE, v. n.

Men sayis ane met thame in the Forde, That prewaly wyth-owtyn worde Led thame wp by the wattyr syne. Qwhill thai to the Gask come and Duplyne. Thare mony wes lwgyd, noucht to layne: Of thai the mast part have thai slayne. Wyntown, viii. 26. 119.

This word is left by Mr. Macpherson without explanation. Perhaps the meaning is, that the persons lodged here, were appointed to keep watch; for it is evident that they formed only an outpost. Thus, noucht to layne would signify, "not to lie down;" Su.G. laen-a, A. S. hlyn-an, hleon-ian, recumbere.

If such were their orders, they disobeyed them. For we learn from Fordun, Scotichr. ii. 305, that many were slain, sine vigile cubantes.

The phrase in Wyntown may, however, merely signify, not to lie, i. e. to tell the truth.

In the same sense may we understand the follow.

ing passages.

There come a lede of the lawe, in londe is not to layne,

And glides to Schir Gawane, the gates to gayne. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. 1. 7.

O tell us, tell us, May Margaret, And dinna to us len;

O wha is aught you noble hawk That stands your kitchen in?

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 85.

The amiable editor is mistaken, in viewing this as signifying "to stop or hesitate;" and as the same with O. E. lin, synon. with blin, to cease. To LAYNE, LEIN, v. α. To conceal.

"Whae drives thir kye?" can Willie say;-"It's I, the captain o' Bewcastle, Willie;

I winna layne my name for thee." -It's I, Watty Woodspurs, loose the kye!

I winna layne my name frae thee.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 103, 106. Su.G. hlaun-a, Moes.G. ga-laugn-ian, Germ. laugn-en, Isl. leyn-a, A. Bor. lean, which Ray improperly derives from A. S. leanne to shun.

Than lukit scho to me, and leuch; And said, Sic luf I rid yow layne, Albeid ye mak it never sa teuch, To me your labour is in vain.

Maitland Poems, p. 209.

I am uncertain, whether this signifies conceal; or avoid, shun, from A.S. leanne vitare, fugere, Somn.

The phrase, quoted under the preceding verb, from Sir Gawan, might bear the sense of conceal.

"Little can a lang tongue lein." S. Prov. "Spoken as a reproof to a babbler." Kelly, p. 240.

To the same purpose it is said, "Women and Su.G. laeger, Germ. lager, Dan. laijer. Alem. legar, Moes.G. ligr, all signify a bed, from ligg-a, &c. to lie. Sometimes another term is added, as A.S.

legerbedd, Alem. legerstede, cubile. Teut. laegher is properly applied to the den or resting-place of wild beasts. Some of these are transferred to our last resting-place; as Germ. lager, Su.G. laeger, sepulchrum; or with addition, laegerstaette, laegerstad, A.S. legerstow; Isl. legi, id. Verel.

Hardyng uses leyre in this sense.

Kyng Arthur then in Aualon so dyed,
Where he was buryed in a chapel fayre,
Which nowe is made, and fully edifyed
The mynster church, this day of great repayre,
Of Glastenbury, where now he hath his leyre:
But then it was called the black chapell
Of our Lady, as chronicles can tel.

Chronicle, Fol. 77, a.

Although many have denied the existence of the celebrated Arthur, Leland quotes an ancient MS. which asserts that his grave was discovered at Glastenbury, A.D. 1192, with a cross of lead upon his breast, having his name inscribed. Collect. i. 242. He also refers to Gervase, as giving the following testimony: A. 1191, apud Glasconiam inventa sunt ossa Arturii famosiss. regis, qui locus olem Aualon, i. e. insula pomorum, dicebatur; p. 264. Gervase lived in the reign of K. John. Leland also quotes John Bevyr, who wrote about the year 1300, as attesting the same circumstance; p. 280.

To LAIR, v. α. To inter, to bury.

If they can eithly turn the pence,
Wi' city's good they will dispense;
Nor care tho' a' her sons were lair'd
Ten fathom i' the auld kirk-yard.

Ferguson's Poems, ii. 104.

I am not certain, however, whether this may not be the v. signifying, to mire, used in a ludicrous sense.

LAIR, s. A stratum, S.

Rudd. observes, that the term lairs is used "for the different beds, rows, and stratums, of fossils, or such like;" Gl. vo. Lare. This is merely E. layer.

He also says that S. Bor. "generally the ground or foundation upon which any thing stands is called a lair;" mentioning stance and stead as synon. I have never remarked that it is used in this sense. It certainly does not convey the idea of standing, but of lying.

LAIR, LARE, s. A mire, a bog, S. A. Bor.

Rudd. thinks that this may have the same origin with lair, as signifying a place of rest. But it seems radically the same with Isl. leir, clay, mire, lutum, coenum, G. Andr.; leyra, fundus argillosus; leirvik, paludes glebosae; lertekt, the liberty of digging clay for constructing walls. Su.G. ler, Dan. leer, clay.

To LAIR, v. n. To stick in the mire, S.

"When James Finlay was tenant of Bridge of Don, his cattle sometimes laired in the waggle, and were drawn out by strength of men." State, Leslic of Powis, 1805, p. 74.

To LAIR, v. a. To mire, S.

"They came to a place called The Solway-moss, wherethrough neither horse nor man might pass, and thair laired all their horse, and mischieved them." Pitscottie, p. 176.

LAIRBAR, LARBAR, s.

Bot with an lairbar for to ly, Ane auld deid stock, baith cauld and dry—

Ane auld deid stock, bath cauld and dry— Philotus, S. P. R. i, 16.

Mr. Pink. renders it "dirty fellow." But the term seems properly to suggest the idea of great infirmity; as the phrase deid stock, which is still used in this sense, is added as expletive of the other. It is used in a similar sense, Maitl. P. p. 47, 49.

It may have been formed from AS. leger a bed, and bear-an to carry; as originally denoting one bedrid, or who needed to be carried on a couch. It is in favour of this etymon, that legere is rendered "sicknesse, a lying sick," leger-faest, bedrid; and leger-bedd, which signifies a couch of any kind, also denotes "a sick man's bed, a death-bed;" Somn. or as inverted in Germ. bettlaerig, clinicus, lecto affixus; Wachter. Larbitar denotes one who is quite unactive, Ang. q. leger-bedd-er.

The term, however, may radically be still more emphatic, as referring to a corpse.

Scho lyis als deid, quhat sall I deime?
—Scho will not heir me for na cryis,
For plucking on scho will not ryis,
Sa lairbairt lyke lo as scho lyis,

As raveist in a trance.

Philotus, st. 112.

As leger also signifies a grave, (V. LAIR, 1.), q. one fit to be carried to the grave; or from leger cubile, and baer nudus, q. the bed to which one returns naked.

The word is also used adj. in the sense of sluggish, feeble.

His luve is waxit larbar, and lyis into swowne. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 51.

—His back is larbour grown and lidder. Ever-green, i. 76.

It seems also to signify ghastly.

Ibid, ii. 56. st. 16.

LAIRD, LARDE, n. 1. A lord, a person of superior rank.

Doug. Virgil, 136, 39.

2. A leader, a captain.

Ibid. 156, 19.

3. A landholder, a proprietor of land; a term applied, as Sibb. observes, to a "landed gentleman under the degree of a knight," S.

"Quha sa vsis not the said archarie, the laird of the land sall rais of him a wedder, and gif the laird rasis not the said pane, the Kingis Schiref or his ministers sall rais it to the King." Acts Ja. I. 1424, c. 20. Edit. 1566.

"Quhatsumeuer tennent, gentilman vnlandit, or yeman hauand takkis or steidingis of ony lordis or lairdis, spirituall or temporall, that happinnis to be slane be Inglismen in our souerane Lordis armie,—the wyfis and barnis of thame,—sall bruke thair takkis, malingis or steidingis. Acts Ja. V. 1522, c. 4. Ibid.

That laird is originally the same term with lord, is undeniable. Mr. Macpherson has justly observed, that "in Wyntown's time it appears to have been equivalent to Lord, and is sometimes used to express the feudal superiority of an over-lord."

This Kyng in fe and herytage That kynrik held, and for homage Of a grettare kyng of mycht, That wes hys Oure-Lard of rycht.

Cron. viii. 3. 34; also, v. 40. 44. They are used as synon. in O. E. In a Norm. Sax. paraphrase on the Lord's Prayer, written before 1185, God is called Lauerd, for Lord. We have also Lauerid king, R. Brunne.

This is lord in R. Glouc. Chron.

A kne to the kyng heo seyde, Lord kyng wasseyl. P. 117.

It would appear that anciently the title of Laird was given to no proprietor but one who held immediately of the Crown. This distinction is still preserved in the Highlands. The designation Tiern, corresponding to our Laird, and rendered by it, is given to one whose property is perhaps not worth two or three hundred per ann., while it is withheld from another, whose rental extends to as many thousands; because the former acknowledges no superior under the king, while the latter does.

A.S. hlaford, lavord, Isl. lavard-ur, Su.G. laward, dominus. Verel. derives the Isl. term from lad land, soil, and vard a guardian. Dicitur lavard, quadvard, fundi vel soli servator et defensor; Ind. p. 150. Stiernhielm deduces it from hlaf bread, and waerd an host, hospes; Junius, from hlaf, and ord initium, origo, q. he who administers bread. G. Andr. views it q. lavagardr, horrei oeconomus, from laf, lave, an area, a barn, a storehouse, p. 160.

Mr. Tooke, having observed that hlaf is the past part. of A.S. hlif-ian to raise, adds, that hlaford is "a compound word of hlaf, raised or elevated, and ord, (ortus) source, origin, birth. Lord," he subjoins, "therefore means High-born, or of an exalted origin." Divers. Purley, ii, 157, 158. Hlafdig, lady, he views as merely lofty, i. e. raised or exalted: her birth being entirely out of the question; the wife following the condition of the husband." Ibid. p. 161.

In an old Isl. work, quoted by G. Andr. the serpent is made to say to Eve, Thu ert lafde myn, en Adam er lavardr min. "Thou art my Lady, and Adam is my Laird." The same passage occurs in Spec. Reg. p. 501, 502, in the amusing account given, by the author, of the dialogue between our common mother and the serpent. This phraseology is perfectly analogous to that of our own country.

For, among all classes, within half a century, the wife of a laird was viewed as entitled to the designation of Lady, conjoined with the name of the estate, how small soever: and among the vulgar, this custom is still in use.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 50. Callander strangely seeks the origin in MoesG. laistjan sequi; although it is evidently Isl. lat, laete, gestus, usually derived from laet, me gero, I behave myself. Isl. laet and Su.G. lat-ur are much used in composition: Mikillatur proud, litillatur modest, litillaeti modesty, tystlatig silent, lettlatr of a light carriage. The character of Venus is, Miok lettlat horkona, scortum levissimum; Damascen. ap. Verel This exactly corresponds to the S. phrase quoted above, licht of laitis; lett signifying levis. Lauslaete, vita dissoluta; lauslatr, lascivus, ibid.

Isl. lit, lyt, is used as synon. with laet gestus; which might seem to suggest that the latter, although immediately connected with the v. laet-a, se gerere, is radically allied to lit vultus, leite respectus, auglit facies. The extensive use of the Teut. term would appear to confirm this idea.

To LAIT, $v. \alpha$. To personate, to assume the appearance of.

This word occurs in an ancient specimen of translation, extant in the Scotichron., most probably by Walter Bower, Abbot of Inch Colme in the Frith of Forth; which entitles him to a place of considerable distinction among our Scottish Poets. It must have been written before A. 1435, in which year he seems to have concluded his work.

The passage referred to is a translation of the following singular verses from Babio's Comedies.

Indisciplinata mu-

Cornuta capite, ut hoedus; Effurens fronte, ut taurus; Oculis venenata, ut basiliscus: Facie blanda, ut scorpio; Auribus indisciplinata, ut aspis; Signo fallax, ut vulpes; Ore mendax, ut Diabolus.

The unlatit woman the licht man will lait, Gangis coitand in the curt, hornit lik a gait: Als brankand as a bole in frontis, and in vice; Mair venumit is hir luke than the coketrice. Blyth and bletherand, in the face lyk an angell, Bot a wisle in the taill, lyk a draconell. Wyth prik youkand eeris as the awsk gleg. Mare wily than a fox, pungis as the cleg! Als sikir for to hald as a water eeil; Bot as trew in her toung as the mekyl Devil. Fordun, ii. 376.

The meaning of the first line, as here given, may be, "The woman, who is a stranger to propriety of manners, will act as if she were a wanton man." I have a strong suspicion, however, that licht man is, q. lic-man, and allied to Su.G. lek-a, Isl. leik-a to play, to make sport, lekur a jester, a buffoon, a mimic, O. Fr. leceour. Thus, the sense would be; "She personates a buffoon or harlequin:" and perhaps there is an allusion to the Julbok, or cervulus, as she is hornit lik a gait. Dunbar would almost seem to have imitated this passage, in the following counsel, which he puts into the mouth of his loose

Be dragounis bayth and dowis, one in doubill

LAITHLIE, LAIDLY, adi. 1. Loathsome, impure.

Our mesis and oure meit thay reft away And with there laithlie twich all thing fyle thay. Doug. Virgil, 15, 18.

Immundo, Virg. It is used as giving the sense of obscoenus, lib. id. 47. "Laidly, ugly, lothsome, foul." A. Bor. Gr. Grose.

2. Base, vile.

Thare was also the laithly Indigence, Terribil of schape, and schameful hir presence. Doug. Virgil, 12, 48. Turpis, Virg.

3. Clumsy, inelegant. A laidly flup, a clumsy and awkward fellow, S. B.

O. E. lothly is radically the same. V. LAITH.

LAITTANDLY, adv. 1. Latently, secretly. V. Мемміт.

To LAK, LACK, LACKIN, v. α. 1. To blame, to reproach.

Gif ye be blythe, your lychtnes thai will lak. Gif ye be grave, your gravitè is clekit.

Maitland Poems, p. 158. For me lyst wyth man nor bukis flyite, -Nor na man will I lakkin nor dyspyse. Doug. Virgil, 8. 4.

Howbeit that divers deuot cunning clerkis In Latyne toung hes written sindrie buikis; Our vnleirnit knawis litle of thir werkis, More than thay do the raing of the ruikis. Quhairfoir to colyearis, carters, & to cuikis, To Jok and Thome, my ryme salbe directit; With cunning men howbeit it wilbe lackit. Lyndsay's Warkis, p. 14.

2. To depreciate, to vilify, S. B.

"Agayne yhoure will and of malis

"Hely yhe releve thare prys.

"Yhe wene to lak, bot yhe commend "That natyown, as yhe mak ws kend." Wyntown, ix. 13. 3

I see that but spinning I'll never be braw, But gae by the name of a dilp or a da. Sae lack where ye like, I shall anes shak a fa', Afore I be dung with the spinning o't. Song, Rose's Helenore, p. 135.

"He that lacks my mare, would buy my mare." S. Prov. Kelly, p. 130.

It occurs in this sense in O. E.

Amongis Burgesis haue I be, dwellyng at London, And gard Backbiting be a broker, to blame men's ware, Whan he sold and I not, than was I ready To lye & loure on my neyghbour, and to lak his chaffer.

P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 22. 6. Su.G. lack-a, Isl. hlack-a, Teut. lack-en, vituperare; Su.G. lack, Isl. hlack, Teut. lacke, lacke, vituperium.

These terms seem originally to suggest the idea of sport; as if radically the same with MoesG. laik-an bi-laik-an, Isl. leik-a, Su.G. lek-a, ludere. sport is often carried on at the expence of another, the Su.G. verb signifies, to make game of any one.

Moes. bi-laik-an is used in the same sense. Bilailaikun ina, they mocked him, Mark 15. 20.

LAK, s. 1. Dispraise, reproach.

For thi, ilk man be off trew hardy will, And at we do so nobill in to deid, Off ws be found no lak eftir to reid.

Wallace, ix. 818. MS.

Na manere lak to your realme sal we be, Nor na repruf tharby to your renowne, Be vs nor nane vthir sal neuer sprede.

Doug. Virgil, 213. 28. Quhat of his lak, sa wide your fame is blaw,-Na wretchis word may depair your hie name. Palice of Honour, ii. 22.

"Shame and lak, is an usual phrase, S. B." Rudd.

2. A taunt, a scoff.

Wallace, scho said, Yhe war clepyt my luff, Mor baundounly I maid me for to pruff.-Madem, he said, and verité war seyn, That ye me luffyt, I awcht yow luff agayn. Thir wordis all ar no thing bot in wayn; Sic luff as that is nothing till awance, To tak a lak and syne get no plesance. In spech off luff suttell ye Sotheroun ar, Ye can ws mok, supposs ye se no mar. Wall. viii. 1407. MS.

It is corruptly printed alak, Perth edit.; while liking is substituted in other editions. It seems to have been a prov. phrase, expressive of the folly of taking the blame of any thing, while one received no advantage; as we still say, "He has baith the scaith and the scorn," Prov. S. V. the v.

LAK, s.

The land loun was, and lie, with lyking and love. And for to lende by that lak thocht me levare, Becauss that thir hertis in herdis coud hove.

Houlate, i. 2. MS.

Place, station? A.S. leag, locus; Isl. lage, statio, from ligg-ia to lie. It may indeed signify plain, as the A. S. word also does.

LAK, adj. Bad, mean, weak, defective, comp. lakker, worse; superl. lakkest.

Wisser than I may fail in lakker style. Doug. Virgil, 9. 26.

Into the mont Apenninus duelt he, Amang Liguriane pepil of his cuntré, And not forsoith the lakkest weriour, Bot forcy man and richt stalwart in stoure.

Ibid. 389. 43.

Harry the Minstrel seems to use lakest as signifying the weakest.

Wald we him burd, na but is to begyn; The lakest schip, that is his flot within, May sayll we down on to a dulfull ded. Wall. ix. 98. MS.

Isl. lakr is used in the same sense; deficiens a justa mensura, aut aequo valore, G. Andr. LAKE-FISHING. V. RAISE-NET-FISHING. LAKIE, s. An Irregularity in the tides, observed in the Frith of Forth.

"In Forth there are, besides the regular ebbs and flows, several irregular motions, which the commons betwixt Alloa and Culross (who have most diligently observed them) call the Lakies of Forth; by which name they express these odd motions of the river, when it ebbs and flows: for when it floweth, sometime before it be full sea, it intermitteth and ebbs for some considerable time, and after filleth till it be full sea; and, on the contrary, when the sea is ebbing, before the low water, it intermits and fills for some considerable time, and after ebbs till it be low water: and this is called a lakie. There are lakies in the river of Forth, which are in no other river in Scotland." Sibbald's Hist. Fife, p. 87.

This term appears to be used elliptically. For another mode of expression is also used.

"The tides in the river Forth, for several miles, both above and below Clackmannan, exhibit a phenomenon not to be found (it is said) in any other part of the globe. This is what the sailors call a leaky tide, which happens always in good weather during the neap tides," &c. P. Clackmannan, Statist. Acc. xiv. 612.

The word seems properly to denote deficiency or intermission; and may therefore be from the same origin with Laikin, q. v.

To LAMB, v. α. To bring forth lambs, to yean, S.

"I wish you lamb in your lair, as many a good ew has done," S. Prov.; "Spoken to those who lie too long a-bed;" Kelly, p. 195.

"Tip when you will, you shall lamb with the leave [lave], S. Prov.; "An allusion to sheep taking the ram, and dropping their lambs; used in company when some refuse to pay their clubs because they came but lately in, signifying that they shall pay all alike notwithstanding;" Kelly, p. 306.

"If in the spring, about lambing time, any person goes into the island with a dog, or even without one, the ewes suddenly take fright, and through the influence of fear, it is imagined, instantly drop down as dead, as if their brains had been pierced through with a musket bullet;" Statist. Priests of Peblis, p. 30. V. Leman.

LAMITER, s. A cripple, one who is lame, S.

LAMMAS-TOWER, s. A hut or kind of tower erected by the herds of a district, against the time of Lammas; and defended by them against assailants, Loth.

c' All the herds of a certain district, towards the beginning of summer, associated themselves into bands, sometimes to the number of a hundred or more. Each of these communities agreed to build a tower in some conspicuous place, near the centre of their district, which was to serve as the place of their rendezvous on Lammas day. This tower was usually built of sods, for the most part square, about four feet in diameter at the bottom, and tapering to a point at the top, which was seldom above seven or eight feet from the ground. The name of Lammastowers will remain (some of them having been built of stone) after the celebration of the festival has ceased." Trans. Ant. Soc. Scot. i. p. 194. 198.

LAMMER, LAMER, s. Amber, S.

My fair maistres, sweitar than the lammer, Gif me licence to luge into your chammer.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 13.

"O wha's blood is this," he says,
"That lies in the châmer?"

"It is your lady's heart's blood;

Teut. lamertyn-steen, succinum, synon. with am-

LAMOO, s. Any thing that is easily swallowed, or that gives pleasure in the act of swallowing, is said to gang down like lamoo.

This is sometimes understood, as if lamb wool, S. pron. in the same manner, were meant. But the dea is repugnant to common sense. The phrase is probably of Fr. origin, from moust, mout, with the article prefixed, le mout, new or sweet wine; also, wort.

To LAMP, v. n. The ground is said to lamp, or to be lampin, when it is covered with that kind of cobwebs which appear after dew or slight frost, S. B.

Perhaps from Teut. lompe, lint, spun flax; because the ground appears as if covered with the finest threads.

LAMPET, LEMPET, s. The limpet, a shell-fish; which adheres to rocks washed by the sea, S. patella.

Butter, new cheis, and beir in May, Connanis, cokkillis, curdis and quhay, Lapstaris, lempettis, mussillis in schellis, Grene leikis, and all sic men may say, Suppois sum of thame sourly smellis.

Scott. Chron. S. P. iii. 162. Bann. MS. Kilian gives the name of lompe to a species of fish of the holothuria kind.

LAMSONS, n. pl. A term used to denote the expences of the Scots establishment at Campvere; or rather the expences incurred by those who were sent over, in their passage.

"Many ways had been projected for the payment of your lamsons; but all had failed." Baillie's Lett. ii. 344. This letter is addressed to Mr. Spang at Campvere.

The word is probably corr. from A.S. land-socn, Germ. land-suchung, transmigratio.

LAND, s. A "clear level place in a wood," Gl. Wynt.

The kyng and that lord alsuá

Fr. lande, a wild or shrubby plain; C. B. llan, a plain; O. E. lawnd, mod. lawn.

LAND, s. A hook in the form of the letter S; S. B.

LAND, s. The country; on land, to land, in the country.

"That na indwellar within burgh nor land, purches ony lordschip in oppressioun of his neichtbouris." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 88. Edit. 1566.

"That this be done alsweill in burrowes, as on lande throw all the realme." Acts, Ja. I. 1425. c. 76. Ibid.

"That the auld statutis and ordinancis maid of befoir, baith to burgh and to land—be obseruit." Acts, Ja. iv. 1491. c. 55. Ibid.

A.S. land, rus, the country; Su.G. id. In oppositione ad civitatem notat rus, Ihre; landslag, the law of the country, as opposed to stadslag, that of the city. Belg. land, id. whence land-rost a country sheriff, land-huys a country house, land-raad the council of the country.

LAND, s. A house consisting of different stories; but always used to denote the whole building. It most commonly signifies a building, including different tenements, S.

"From confinement in space, as well as imitation of their old allies the French (for the city of Paris seems to have been the model of Edinburgh), the houses were piled to an enormous height; some of them amounting to twelve storeys. These were denominated lands." Arnot's Hist. Edin. p. 241.

This seems only a secondary and oblique sense of the word, as originally denoting property in the soil or a landed estate; a house being not less heritable property than the other. The name of the proprietor was often given to the building; as signifying, perhaps, that this was the heritable property of such a one. Estate, in a similar manner, denotes property in general, whether moveable or immoveable.

LAND of the leal, the state of departed souls, especially that of the blessed.

I'm wearin awa, John, I'm wearin awa, man, I'm wearin awa, John, To the land of the leal.

Old Song.

This is a simple and beautiful periphrasis for expressing the state of the just; as intimating, that he who enjoys their society, shall suffer no more from that multiform deceit which so generally characterizes men in this world. V. Leal.

LANDBIRST, LAND-BRYST, s. "The noise and roaring of the sea towards the shore, as the billows break or burst on the ground," Rudd. But it properly signifies not the noise itself, but the cause of it; being equivalent to the English term breakers.

In hy thai put thaim to the se, And rowyt fast with all thair mayne: Bot the wynd wes thaim agayne, That swa hey gert the land-bryst ryss, That thai moucht weld the se na wyss.

Barbour, iv. 444, MS.
Ryueris ran rede on spate with wattir broun,
And burnis harlis all thare bankis down;
And landbirst rumbland rudely with sic bere,
Sa loud neuir rummyst wyld lyoun nor bcre.
Doug. Virgil, v. 200, 26.

The prynce Tarchon can the schore behald, Thare as him thocht suld be na sandis schald, Nor yit na land birst lippering on the wallis. Ibid. 325. 51.

The ingenious Mr. Ellis renders this, " landsprings, accidental torrents;" Spec. E. P. i. 389. It may perhaps bear this sense in the second passage quoted. But in the other two, it is applied to the sea.

Teut. berst-en, borst-en, rumpi, frangi; crepare; primarily denoting the act of breaking, and secondarily the noise caused by it; Isl. brest-a, Su.G. brist-a, whence brestr, brist, fragor; nearly allied to the idea suggested by E. breakers.

LANDIMER, s. A land-measurer.

"But it is necessar, that the measurers of land, called Landimers, in Latine, Agrimensorcs, obscrue and keepe ane juste relation betwixt the length and the bredth of the measures, quhilk they vse in measuring of landes." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Particata.

This word is here used improperly. For it is evidently the same with A.S. landimere, landgemere, which denotes a boundary or limit of land, Su.G. landamaere, Isl. landamaeri, id. from land and mere, Su.G. maere, Belg. meere, a boundary. In this sense, the E. use meerstone for a landmark. Landimers is by Cowel rendered measures of land. L. B. Landimera. Ihre views Gr. pugo, divido, as the origin.

LANDIS-LORDE, LANDSLORDE, s. A landlord.

"That all Lands-lordes and Baillies of the landes on the Bordours, and in the Hie-landes, quhair broken men hes dwelt, or presentlie dwellis,—sall be charged to finde sufficient caution and sovertie;— That the Landis-lordes and Baillies, upon quhais landis, and in quhais jurisdiction they dwell, sall bring and present the persones compleined upon." Acts, Ja. VI. 1587. c. 93. Murray.

LAND-LOUPER, s. A vagabond; one who frequently flits from one place or country to another. It usually implies that the person does so in consequence of debt, or some misdemeanour, S. synon. scamp.

Land-louper, light skouper, ragged rouper, like a rayen.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. p. 30. Heh, Sirs! what cairds and tinklers come, An' neer-do-weel horse-coupers; An' spae-wives fenying to be dumb, Wi' a' siclike landloupers?

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 27.
Teut. land-looper, erro vagus, multivagus, vagabundus, Kilian. This sense is quite different from that given by Johns. of E. landloper. This word is however, by Blount, rendered "a vagabond, or a rogue that runs up and down the country."

Skouper most probably has a similar sense; from Isl. skop-a, discurrere. Perhaps MoesG. skev-ian, ire, is radically allied.

Land-man, s. A proprietor of land.

Bot kirk-mennis cursit substance semis sweit Till land-men, with that leud burd-lyme are kyttit.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 199, st. 20. In the old Gothic laws landzman signifies an inhabitant of the country; A.S. landman, terrigena, Somn. But it is more immediately connected with Isl. lender menn, Su.G. laens-men, nobiles terrarum Domini, vel a Rege terris Praefecti, G. Andr.; according to Verel. those who held lands in fee. Ihre defines laensman, laendirman, as denoting one who held lands of the king, on condition of military service. He derives it from laen, feudum; vo. Laena. Land-tripper, s. The sand-piper, a bird. Galloway.

"The sea fowls are sand-pipers, here called land-trippers," &c. P. Kirk cudbright, Statist. Acc. xi. 14.

LANDWART, LANDART, LANDUART, adj. 1. Inland, of or belonging to the country; as opposed to boroughs.

"The maist anciant nobilis that hes bene in ald tymis, tha detestit vrbanite, and desirit to lyue in villagis and landuart tounis to be scheiphirdis." Compl. S. p. 66.

2. Having the manners of the country, rustic, boorish, S.

But, bred up far frae shining courts,
In moorland glens, where nought I see,
But now and then some landart lass,
What sounds polite can flow from me?
Ramsay's Works, i. 102.

"This idea of rusticity," as Sir J. Sinclair observes, "seems to have been taken from a notion, that the interior parts of the country are more barbarous and uncivilized than those of the sea-coast." Observ. p. 103.

This term is sometimes used adverbially.

"And thay that sa beis fundin, haue a certane takin to landwart of the schireffis, and in burrowis of aldermen and bailleis." Acts, Ja. i. 1424. c. 46. edit. 1566.

"To burrow and landwart" is the common distinction used in our laws.

"Far to the landwart, out o' sight o' the sea, is a common phrase among the fishermen on the coasts of Fife and Angus." Gl. Compl.

It sometimes occurs as a s.

"At last scho was delyuerit of ane son namit Walter, quhilk within few yeris became ane vailyeant & lusty man, of greter curage & spreit than ony man that was nurist in landwart, as he was." Belleud. Cron. b. xii, c. 5. Ruri, Boeth.

try. V. LAND.

LANDERS. Lady Landers, the name given to the insect called the Lady-bird, Lady Fly, E. "Lady-Couch, or Lady-Cow, North;" GI. Grose. The coccinella bipunctata, C. quinque-punctata, and C. septem-punctata, of Linn. all go by the same name.

I am indebted to a literary friend for the following account.

"When children get hold of this insect, they generally release it, calling out;

Lady, Lady Landers! Flee away to Flanders!

The English children have a similar rhyme.

Lady-bird, Lady-bird, fly away home;

Your house is on fire, your children at home. These rude, but humane couplets, very generally secure this pretty little insect from the clutches of children. It is very useful in destroying the aphides that infect trees. For the Eng. rhyme, V. Linn. Transact. V.

In the North of S. there is a third rhyme, which dignifies the insect with the title of Dr. Ellison.

Dr. Dr. Ellison, where will I be married? East, or west, or south or north? Take ye flight, and fly away."

It is sometimes also knighted, being termed Sir Ellison. In other places it is denominated Lady Ellison.

We learn from Gay, that the Lady-fly is used by the vulgar in E., in a similar manner for the purpose of divination.

This Lady-fly I take from off the grass,

Whose spotted back might scarlet red surpass. "Fly, Lady-bird, north, south, or east, or west, Fly, where the man is found that I love best."

Pastorals.

This insect seems to have been a favourite with different nations; and to have had a sort of patent of honour. In Sw. it is called Jung fru Marias gullhona, i. e. the Virgin Mary's gold hen; also, Jung fru Marie nyckelpiga, the Virgin Mary's keyservant, q. housekeeper. It has another designation not quite so honourable, Laettfuerdig kona, wanton quean. It would appear, that both our names and those used in E. refer to the Virgin, who, in times of Popery, was commonly designed Our Lady; as is still the case in Popish countries.

LAN

As so many titles of honour have been given to this favourite insect, shall we suppose that ours has a similar origin; from Teut. land-heer, regulus, a petty prince? It being sometimes addressed as a male, sometimes as a female, the circumstance of lady been prefixed, can determine nothing as to the original meaning of the term conjoined with it.

To LANE, v. a.

I may not ga with the, quhat wil thow mair? Sa with the I bid nocht for to lane, I am full red that I cum never againe.

Priests of Peblis, i. 41.

Leave? G1. Pink. I have been inclined to view this as bearing the sense of conceal. But it seems the same with layne; merely signifying, not to lie, to tell the truth; "a common expletive," as Mr. Scott has observed. It occurs frequently in Sir Tristrem—

Nay, moder, nought to layn,

This thef thi brother slough. P. 94.

In the same sense we may understand the following passages:

Monye alleageance lele, in lede nocht to lane it, Off Aristotle, and all men, schairplye thai schewe.

Houlate, i. 21. MS.

For the quhilk thir lordis, in lede nocht to lane it, He besocht of socour, as sovrane in saile, That thai wald pray Nature his present to renew.

Ibid. iii. 17. MS.

In one place it seems to signify conceal:
From the lady we will not lane,
That ye are now come home again.

Sir Egeir, p. 14.

V. LAYNE, 3.

LANE, n. A loan; or perhaps gift.

The thrid wolf is men of heretege; As lordis, that hes landis be Godis lane.

Henrysone, Bann. P. p. 120. st. 19.

Su.G. laan, donum, concessio, from laen-a, laan-a, to lend, to give.

Ihre (vo. Laena) mentions the very phrase which occurs here as of great antiquity, and as applied by the peasants of the north to all the fruits of the field.

Annotabo,—omnia cerealia dona a ruricolis nostris appellari guds laan, quod proprie notat Dei donum. Antiquitatem phraseos testatur Hist. Alex. M.

The fylla sik swa af Guds laane:

Ita se opplent Dei munere, hoc est, cibo potuque. Teut. leen, also, is rendered, praedium clientelare vel beneficiarium, colonia, feudum; Kilian.

LANE, adj. Lone, alone.

This may be merely an abbrev. of alane, q. v.

Seren. however, derives E. lone from Isl. lein-a occultare, leine latebrae. He mentions as synon. Sw. loenligt clandestinus, abditus.

To LANG, v. n. To long, S.

Whan they had eaten, and were straitly pang'd, To hear her answer Bydby greatly lang'd. And Lindy did na keep her lang in pain.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

Germ. lang-en, A.S. laeng-ian, Su.G. lang-ta, desiderare.

This is a secondary sense of the v. which signifies to draw, to draw out, to protract. It has this signification in other dialects; A.S. lang-ian, ge-laengan, Alem. leng-en, Germ. lang-en, trahere, protrahere, prolongare.

To Lang, v. n. To belong, to become, to be proper or suitable.

He is na man, of swylk a kynd Cummyn, bot of the dewylis strynd, That can nothyr do na say Than langis to trowth and gud fay.

Lat thame commaund, and we sall furnis here The irne graith, the werkmen, and the wrichtis, And all that to the schippis langis of richtis. Ibid. 373. 40.

Sometimes it is used without a prep. And hir besech, that sche will in thy nede Hir counselle geve to thy welefare and spede; And that sche will, as langith hir office,

Be thy gude lady, help and counseiloure. King's Quair, iii. 41.

Germ. lang-en, pertinere.

Wachter views this as a metaphorical sense of lang-en tangere, to touch; " because," he says, "things pertaining to us resemble those which are contiguous, i. e. which nearly touch us." But, although this learned writer seems disposed to view lang-en tangere, as radically different from langen trahere: the former appears to be merely a sccondary sense of the latter. Objects are said to touch each other, when the one is so drawn out, or extended, as to make the nearest possible approximation to the other.

LANG, LANGE, adj. Long, S. Yorks. Eftyr all this Maximiane Agayne the empyre wald have tane; And for that caus, in-tyl gret stryfe He lede a lange tyme of hys lyfe Wyth Constantynys sonnys thre, That anelyd to that ryawté.

Wyntown, v. 10. 478.

To think lang, to become weary, especially in waiting for any object; evidently an elliptical phrase, q. to think the time long.

O wow! quo' he, were I as free, As first when I saw this country, How blyth and merry wad I be! And I wad never think lang.

Gaberlunyie-man, Ritson's S. Songs, i. 165. Lang is used in the same sense in almost all the northern languages.

This appears to be formed from the v., as originally signifying, to draw out. The primary idea is undoubtedly length as to extension of bodies. It is applied to time only in a secondary sense.

LANG, adv. For a long time.

Lang asseguand thaire thai lay. Wyntown, viii. 37. 159.

I lang hae thought, my youthfu' friend, A something to have sent you, Tho' it should serve nae other end

Burns, iii. 208.

LANGARE, LANGAYR, LANGERE, LANGYRE, adv. Long since, long ere now.

Than just a kind memento.

I knew ful wele, that it was thou langure, That by thy craft and quent wylis sa sle, Our confederationn trublit and treté.

Doug. Virgil, 434. 8.

Syc sawis war langayr out of thy mynde. Ĭbid. 339. 33.

From A.S. lang, and aere, Belg. eer, prius. As has been observed, it is a complete inversion of E. erelong.

LANG-GRAIG, s. A name given to an onion that grows all to the stalk, while the bulb does not form properly, S. q. long neck.

LANG-CRAIG, s. A cant term for a purse, Aberd. O! had ye seen, wi' what a waefu' frown, He drew lang craig, and tauld the scushy down. Shirref's Poems, p. 35.

To LANGEL, v. a. To entangle. Fat gars you then, mischievous tyke! For this propine to prig,

That your sma' banes wou'd langel sair, They are sae unco' big.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 12.

Su.G. lang-a, to retard, from lang, long. LANGELL, s. V. LANGET. LANGIS, prep. Along.

Ane hale legioun in ane rout followis hym,-And thay that duellis langis the schil ryuere Of Anien .-

Doug. Virgil, 232. 38.

Alangis, q. v. is used in the same sense. But langis is evidently the more simple form; Su.G. laangs, laangs utmed floden, along the river's side; Belg. langs, id. langs de straat, alongst the street. The origin is lang, long, extended: for the term conveys the idea of one object advancing in respect of motion, or extending as to situation, as far as another mentioned in connexion.

LANGER, LANGOURE, s. 1. Weariness, dejec-Langour lent is in land, al lichtnes is loist. Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 20.

It is always pron. langer. To hald ane out of langer, to keep one from becoming dull, to amuse one, S.

"He was a fine gabby, auld-farren carly, and held us browly out o' langer bi' the rod." Journal from London, p. 2.

"Out o' sight, out o' langer," Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 26.

2. Earnest desire of, eagerness for.

"Wouldest thou desire to dwell with the Lord, desire to flit out of thy bodie: for if thou hast not a desire, but art afraide to flit, it is a token that thou hast no langour of God, and that thou shalt neuer dwell with him." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 383.

This may be merely Lat. languor, Fr. langueur, id. But there is considerable probability in the hint thrown out by Rudd. that it is from long, S. lang, as we say, to think lang, i. e. to become weary. It may be added, that the Goth. terms, expressive of gaiety, are borrowed from the adj. directly opposed, as signifying short. V. Jamph, Schortsum.

LANGET, LANGELL, s. A tether, or rope, by which the fore and hinder feet of a horse or cow are fastened together, to hinder the animal from kicking, S.

"It is not long since Louse bore langett, no wonder she fall and break her neck," S. Prov.; "spoken when one has suddenly started up in a high station, and behaves himself saucily in it;" Kelly, p. 198. Ferguson gives it thus: "It is short while since the louse bore the langell;" p. 21. "Ye have ay a foot out of the langel;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 82. This seems the more ancient form, as allied to the v. Langel, q. v. Langet, indeed, seems merely the part. pa. of the v., q. langelt, that by which any animal is entangled. A. Bor. langled, "having the legs coupled together at a small distance," Gl. Grose.

Hence to lowse a langet, metaph. to make haste, to quicken one's pace, S.

LANGRIN, AT LANGRIN, adv. At length, S.; at the long run, E.

At langrin, wi' waxin and fleechin, And some bonnie wallies frae Hab, And mammie and daddie's beseechin, She knit up her thrum to his wab.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 295.

LANGKAIL, s. Coleworts not shorn, S.
And there will be langkail and pottage,
And bannocks of barley meal.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 208. V. KAIL.

LANGLINS, prep. Alongst, S. B.

Whan she her loof had looked back and fore, And drawn her finger langlins every score, Up in her face looks the auld hag forfairn. Ross's Helenore, p. 61

From lang, and the termination ling, q. v.

LANG-NEBBIT, adj. Having a long nose, S.

Impos'd on by lang-nebbit jugglers,
Stock-jobbers, brokers, cheating smugglers,
Wha set their gowden girns sae wylie,
Tho' ne'er sae cautious, they'd beguile ye.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 330. V. Nebe.

Lang pare eff, long after, for a long time.

Scotland was dissawarra left,

And wast nere lyand lang pare eft.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 116.

Probably corr. from A.S. lang-faer, of long duration; whence lang-fernysse, long distance of time.

LANGSYNE, adv. Long ago, long since.

Hame o'er langsyne, you hae been blyth to pack Your a' upon a sarkless soldier's back.

Ferguson's Poems, ii. 74.

Langsyne is sometimes used as if it were a noun.
Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to min'?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And days o' langsyne?

Burns, iv. 123.

A.S. longe siththan, diu exinde; Sw. laenge sedan, long ago, long since. V. Syne.

LANGSUM, adj. Slow, tedious, S.

On fute I sprent, into my bare sark, Wilful for to complete my langsum wark. Doug. Virgil, 403, 54.

A.S. langsum, nimis longus, Isl. langsamur, Teut. langsaem, tardus, lentus.

LANG-TONGU'D, adj. Babbling, apt to communicate what ought to be kept secret, S.

"Lang-tongu'd wives gae lang wi' bairn;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 48.; i. e. they too soon tell others of their situation.

To LANS, LANCE, v. α. To throw out, to fling.
Frekis in forstarne rewllit weill thar ger,
Ledys on luff burd, with a lordlik fer,
Lansys laid out, to thar passage sound.
Wallace, ix. 57. MS.

-Leads on leiburd with a lordly feere, Lynes laid out to look their passage sound. Edit. 1648, p. 211.

-Leids on loof-board, with a lord-like effeir.

Lansys laid out, their passage for to sound.

Edit. 1758, p. 251.

I suspect that ledys does not signify leads affixed to lines, for the purpose of taking soundings; but people, as equivalent to frekis in the preceding line; and that laid is for leid or lead. Thus lansys laid is throws out lead, the sing. being very frequently used in S. for the pl.

Fr. lanc-er, id. The term seems borrowed from the act of throwing a lance or spear; L.B. lanc-eure, hastiludio sese exercere; Arm. lanc-a, jaculari, lanceam vibrare.

To Lans, v. n. 1. To spring forward, to move with velocity.

Quham Turnus, lansand lichtly ouer the landis, With spere in hand persewis for to spyll. Doug. Virgil, 297. 16.

Evidently a secondary sense of the v. a.

2. It seems to denote the delicate and lively strokes of a musician on his violin.

Thome Lutar was thair menstral meit, as he culd lunss!

He playit sa schill and sang sa sweit.

He playit sa schill, and sang sa sweit, Quhill Towsie tuik ane transs.

Chr. K. st. 6.

The minstrels, it is said, could in general acquit themselves as dancers, as well as singers and poets. I am inclined, however, to view the term as used in the sense given above.

LANS, LAUNCE, s. A leap, a spring.
And he that wes in juperty
To de, a launce he till him maid,
And gat him be the nek but baid.

Barbour, x. 414, MS.

A loup, edit. 1620.

LANSPREZED, s. A term of contempt, borrowed from the military life.

Beld bissed, marmissed, lansprezed to thy lowns. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 32.

The term is used by Massinger: "I will turn lance prezado."

"The lowest range and meanest officer in an army is called the lancepesado or prezado, who is the leader or governor of half a file; and therefore is commonly called a middle-man, or captain over four." The Soldier's Accidence, Massinger, iii. 51. N.

O.E. lancepesade, "one that has the command of ten soldiers, the lowest officer in a foot company, who is to assist the corporal in his duty, and supply his place in absence; an under-corporal;" Phillips.

Fr. lance-pessade, the meanest officer in a foot company; Cotgr. Lance spezzate is thus defined, Dict. Trev.: "Est un officier reformé, qui etoit entrefois un gendarme demonté qu'on plaçoit dans l'infanterie avec quelque avantage, dont on a fait Anspessade, qui marche après le caporal. Le Pape a encore pour sa garde, outre trois cens Suisses, douce lances spezzates, ou officiers reformés." It is also written lanspecade and lansespezzade. The term is properly Ital. lancia spezzata; lancia a lance, and spezzata broken, synon. with lancia rotta. It seems originally to refer to the reduction of the regiment or corps, in which such officers have served. Lansprezed to thy lowns, is therefore equivalent to, petty officer to thy rascally followers; as beld bisset and marmissed signify, bald buzzard and marmoset.

To LAP, v. a. 1. To environ; applied to the surrounding of a place with armed men, in order to a siege.

Bot Sotheroun men durst her no castell hald, Bot left Scotland, befor as I yow tald, Saiff ane Morton, a capdane fers and fell, That held Dunde. Than Wallace wald nocht duell; Thiddyr he past, and lappyt it about. Wallace, ix. 1840, MS. also, xi. 96.

2. To embrace; applied to the body.

- Gruflyng on his kneis, He lappit me fast by baith the theys. Doug. Virgil, 88, 54.

Genua amplexus, Virg.

3. To fold; used in a sense nearly the same with that of the E. word, but in relation to battle.

- Thay desirit on the land, To lap in armes, and adione hand in hand. Ibid. 470. 42.

From Su.G., Germ., lapp, Alem. lappa, A.S. laepp, segmentum panni, a small bit of cloth.

LAP, pret. Leaped. V. Loup, v.

LAPPERED, part. pa. Coagulated; elappert milk, milk that has been allowed to stand till it has soured and curdled of itself; lappert blude, clotted blood, S.; lopperd, A. Bor. Lan-

There will be good lapper'd-milk kebbucks, And sowens, and fardles, and baps. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211.

I vow, my hair-mould milk would poison dogs. As it stands lapper'd in the dirty cogs.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 3. It is surprising that Sibb. should view this as " slightly corrupted from Teut. klotter-melck, or klobber-suen, lac coagulatum." It is beyond a doubt radically the same with Isl. hlaup coagulum, liquor coagulatus, (from hleipe, coagulo); G. Andr. Su.G. loepe, Dan. loebe, Alem. lip, Belg. lebbe, id. We call that milk, says Thre, micelken loepnar, and loepen mioelk, which thickens, being soured by heat.

Germ. lab-en, to coagulate, lab rennet.

These terms have certainly been formed from the different verbs signifying to run. This is the primary sense of Isl. hleyp-a, and of Su.G. loep-a, to which loepe is so nearly allied. Dan. loebe assumes the very form of loeb-er, currere. Our vulgar phrase is synon. The milk's run, i.e. it is coagulated, q. run together into clotts. It may be added, that the E. s. rennet is undoubtedly from Germ. rinn-en; ge-rinnen, coagulari, in se fluere, Wachter; whence the phrase, exactly synon. with ours, die milch gerinnend.

LAPPIE, s. A plash, a sort of pool, a place where water stands, Ang. Laip, Loth.

Shall we deduce this from Teut. lapp-en, sorbendo haurire; because at such a place cattle use to drink, and dogs to lap? We might suppose it to be radically the same with loup, s. q. v. did not this properly denote running water.

LAPRON, s. A young rabbit; Gl. Sibb.

LARD, s.

I him forbeit as ane lard, and laithit him mekil. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 58.

Mr. Pink. gives this word as not understood. But it is most probably the same with Belg. laerd, luyaerd, a stupid or inactive fellow; ignavus, stupidus, -non recte fungens officio.

LARBAR. V. LAIRBAR. LARDUN, s. A piece of bacon.

The ravin, rowpand rudely in a roch rane, Was Dene rurall to rede, rank as a rake, Quhill the lardun was laid, held he na houss.

Houlate, i. 17. MS. Fr. lard. This sense is certainly preferable to that of larder, given by Mr. Pink. LARE, s. Place of rest. V. LAIR, 1.

To LARE, v. n. To stick in the mire. V. LAIR. To LARE, LERE, LEAR, v. a. 1. To teach, S.

LAREIT, LAUREIT, s. The name of a chapel dedicated to our Lady of Loretto, which formerly stood a little eastward from Musselburgh. A small cell still remains. The place is now called, according to the original design of the designation, Loretto.

This chapel, it is evident, once possessed great celebrity. Hence it is often mentioned by our poets. Persons of both sexes used, in the time of Popery, to go thither in procession; or to meet at this place, as a favourite rendezvous. The greatest abuses were committed under pretence of religion.

I have sene pas ane maruellous multitude, Young men and wemen flingand on thair feit: Under the forme of fenyeit sanctitude, For till adorne ane image in Laureit. Mony cum with thair marrowis for to meit, Committing thair foull fornicatioun: Sum kissit the claggit taill of the Hermeit; Quhy thole ye this abhominatioun?

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 75. Here, it appears, there was not only an image of the Virgin, but a hermit who had the highest character for sanctity and miraculous power. Hence the poet adds, Quhy thole ye vnder your dominioun Aue craftie Preist, or feinyeit fals Hermeit? Ibid. p. 76.

As it has b en customary, from time immemorial, for young women to go to the country in the beginning of May, the maidens of Edinburgh used to go a-maying to Lareit.

In May gois madynis till La Reit,
And has thair mynyonis on the streit,
To horss thame quhair the gait is ruch:
Sum at Inche bukling bray thay meit,
Sum in the middis of Musselburch.

Scott, Ever-green, ii. 189. st. 12. MS.
Alareit is used in the same sense. The Earl of Glencairn intitles his Satyre against the Romish clergy, Ane Epistill direct fra the halie Hermeit of Alareit, to his brethren the Gray Freirs. Knox's
Hist. p. 24.

The reader may, for a further account of this chapel, consult a curious note, Chron. S. P. iii. 74.

LARG, LARGE, adj. 1. Liberal, munificent.
Off other mennys thing larg wes he.

Barbour, xi. 148. MS.

Welle lettryd he wes, and rycht wertws; Large, and of gret almws
Till all pure folk, seke and hale,
And til all othir rycht liberale.

Wyntown, vii. 6. 346.

Fr. id. Lat. larg-us.

2. Abundant.

"As, fodder is large, plentiful, or in plenty." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 103.

LARGES, LERGES, s. 1. Liberty, free scope, opposed to a state of confinement or restraint.

And for he dred thir thingis suld faile, He chesyt furthwart to trawaill, Quhar he mycht at his larges be; And swa dryve furth his destané.

Barbour, v. 427. MS.

Fr. au large, at large, in a state of liberty.

2. Liberality in giving.

Of all natyownys generally Comendit he wes gretumly Of wyt, wertew, and larges, Wyth all, that he wyth knawyn wes.

yth khawyn wes. Wyntown, ix. 27. 85.

Fr. largesse. In ancient times it was customary to use this term, in soliciting a donative on days of jollity; as appears from the metrical title of a poem in Bann. Collection, p. 151.

Lerges, lerges, lerges hay, Lerges of this New-yeir Day.

This custom also prevailed in France. At the time of the consecration of their kings, and at other great ceremonies, the heralds were wont to throw among the people pieces of gold and silver; and the people used to cry, Largesse, largesse. Hence the money thus scattered was called pieces de largesse; Dict. Trev. A similar custom prevailed in England, of which some vestiges yet remain. When tournaments were held, "a multitude of minstrels," as Godwin observes, "furnished with every instrument of martial music, were at hand, to celebrate the acts of prowess which might distinguish the day. No sooner had a master-stroke taken place in any in-stance, than the music sounded, the heralds proclaimed it aloud, and a thousand shouts, echoed from man to man, made the air resound with the name of the hero. The combatants rewarded the proclaimers of their feats in proportion to the vehemence and loudness of their cries; and their liberalities produced yet other cries, still preserved in the customs of our husbandmen at their harvesthome, deafening the ear with the reiteration of largesse." Godwin's Life of Chaucer, i. 206. 207.

LARGLY, adv. Liberally.

And largly among his men
The land of Scotland delt he then.

Barbour, xi. 146. MS.

LARICK, s. A lark. V. LAVEROK.

LARICK's LINT, s. Great golden maidenhair, S. Polytrichum commune, Linn.

Doug. Virgil, 307. 40.

Quhy will thou not fle spedely by nycht, Quhen for to haue thou has lasere and mycht? Ibid. 119. 54.

Fr. loisir.

LASCHE, adj. 1. Relaxed, in consequence of weakness or fatigue, feeble, unfit for exertion, S.B.

Ouer al his body furth yet the swete thik;—
The feblit breith ful fast can bete and blaw,
Amyd his wery breist and lymmes lasche.

• Doug. Virgil, 307. 42.

- 2. It is also rendered lazy, Rudd. I am not certain whether it be used in this sense, S.B.
- 3. Devoted to idleness, relaxed in manners.

"Allace, I laubyr nycht and day vitht my handis to neureis lasche and inutil idil men, and thai recompens me vitht hungyr and vitht the sourd." Compl. S. p. 191.

It is rendered base, Gl. But this is too indefinite a sense.

Fr. lasche, Teut. leisz, and Lat. lax-us, have been mentioned as cognate terms. To these we may add Germ. lass, tired, faint; and Su.G. loes. Notat id, quod molle et flaccidum est, opponiturque firmo et duro; Ihre. Isl. loskr, ignavus, MoesG. laus, and A.S. leus, are radically allied.

LASHNESS, LASHNES, s. 1. Relaxation in consequence of great exertion.

"In the end, after some lashness and fagging, he made such a pathetic oration for an half-hour, as ever commedian did upon a stage." Baillie's Lett. i. 991.

- Looseness of conduct, relaxation of discipline or of manners.
- "Alwaies in the meane time, suppose there be trews promised, yit stand ye on your gairds, & let it not come to passe be your misbehaueour and lashnes, that the glorie of God, & libertic of this citie be impared in any waies, bot stand on your gairdes, that as this citie hath bene a terrour to euill men of befoir, so it may terrifie him also." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. O. 5. b.

LASK, s. A diarrhoea, to which black cattle are subject, S.B.

"The lusk, or scour, is likewise a distemper seldom cured. It generally originates from feebleness, cold, or grazing on a soft rich pasture, without a mixture of hard grass." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 208. This word occurs in Skinner.

LASKAR, s. A large armful of hay or straw, as much as one can lift in both arms, Tweedd.

Isl. hlas denotes the load of a sledge; quantum portat traha vel currus; Su.G. lass, id. It might, however, be deduced from las-a, A.S. les-an, to gather.

LASS, s. A sweetheart, S.

In these and other passages, leave is substituted, edit. 1648.

This is a very ancient sense of the v., corresponding to Sw. laat-a, to leave, Seren. A.S. laet-an, id. Laet thaer thin lae, Leave there thy offering, Matt. v. 24. Ic laete nu to thinum dome ma thone to hiora; Relinquo nunc tuo judicio plus quam eorum; Boeth. 38. 5. MoesG. let-an, af-let-an, id. Aftetandans ina gath lauhun allai; Leaving him, they all fled, Mark xiv. 50. Germ. lass-en.

This is the most simple, and probably was the original sense of the v. For what does the idea of permission, which is the ordinary sense, imply; but that a man is left to take his own will, or to prefer one mode of acting to another?

2. "They say also, iron is lated, when it is covered with tin," S. Rudd.

In the latter sense it seems allied to Su.G. laad-a, lod-a, loed-a, to solder. In the former, it is more allied to A.S. lithe-gian, lith-ian, ge-lith-ian, to soften, to attemper, mollem et tractabilem se praebere, Lye; as indeed iron is softened by heat.

"Life or limme may not be adjudged, or decerned as escheit, in ane court, inferior to ane Baron Court, except that court have the like libertie and fredome," &c.

In this sense it is also used by Chauc.

But now in Capricorne adoun he light,
Where as he shone ful pale, I dare wel sain.

So striking is the resemblance between this, and the description given by Douglas, that one would almost think that he had had the language of Chaucer in his eye.

LAUCH, LAWIN, LAWING, pron. lauwin, s. A tavern-bill, the reckoning.

The first is sometimes used, S.B. only the latter in other parts of S.

Ay as the gudwyf brocht in, Ane scorit upon the wauch. Ane bad pay, ane ither said, nay, Byd quhill we rakin our lauch.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 535.
—Sojors forcing alchouse brawlings,
To be let go without their lawings.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. i. p. 32.

Sibb. derives it from Goth. laun, remuneratio. Lawin has indeed considerable resemblance to this: and Germ. lohn is used in the same sense; wages, recompence, pay; fuhrlohn, fare, freight; taglohn, pay for a day's work.

But as lauch seems the original form, the term. ing, or in, being apparently of later use, the word claims a different parentage. Teut. ghe-lagh, ghe-lagh, symbolum, compotatio; club, or shot, a drinking together. Kilian derives this from legghen, to lay, because every one lays down or contributes his share. Ghe-lagh-vry, shot-free; ghe-lagh betaalen, to pay the reckoning. Germ. gelag, gelach, compotatio. Proprie, says Wachter, est collatio, vel symbolum convivale, quod quisque comessantium pro rata confert, a legen offerre, conferre, prorsus ut gilde a gelten offerre. Ge est nota collectivi, quia unus solus non facit collectam nec symposium.

According to this account, the origin of the term is referred back to that early period, in which the northern nations, when celebrating the feasts of heathenism, were wont to contribute, according to their ability, meat and drink, which they consumed in convivial meetings. V. Skul.

Su.G. lag, in like manner, signifies social intercourse, fellowship; also, a feast, a convivial entertainment: laegga samman, to collect, or gather the reckoning; Sw. betala laget, to pay for the entertainment, Wideg. Isl. lagsmen, lagbraeder, lagunautur, denote companions, properly in feasting or drinking. Enn thessa tign a huer, laugonautur adrum at veita; Hunc vero honorem contubernalium quisque contubernali suo exhibere debet; Spec. Regal. p. 370.

According to Olaus, lag has a different origin from that which has been assigned to the Germ. word. He derives lagunautur from Isl. laug, drink, liquor, and nautr a partaker, from nyt-a, to use. Lex. Run.

LAUCH, LAUCHT, s. 1. Law.

This word occurs in an old and curious specimen of S. and Lat. verse conjoined:

Su.G. laegg-ia signifies to covenant, to agree; Germ. leg-en, to constitute, to ordain. But neither of these is used precisely in the sense of this v. Some view the Germ. v. as the origin of lage law. Ihre derives Su.G. lag from laegg-a, ponere, in the same manner as Germ. gesetze, a law, is formed from setzen collocare.

LAUCHT, part. pa.

He raid apon a litill palfray, Laucht; and joly arayand His bataill, with an ax in hand.

Barbour, xii. 19. MS.

This might seem at first view to express the cheerfulness of the king's min l, especially as connected with joly, q. laughed. But the meaning is certainly quite different. It may either refer to the king, as • signifying that he wore some sort of mantle; or rather to the palfrey, as denoting that it was clothed or dressed in proper trappings. This explanation is confirmed by the use of the word lauchtane, in the same work, which must evidently be understood in a sense allied to this. V. next word. LAUCHTANE, adj. Of, or belonging to, cloth.

A lauchtane mantell than him by, Liand apon the bel, he saw; And with his teth he gan it draw Out our the fyr.

Barbour, xix. 672. MS.

Mr. Pink. leaves this for explanation. Mr. Ellis, on this passage, inquires, " if it be Louthian, the place where it was manufactured, or where such mantles were usually worn?" Spec. E. P. i. 242. It undoubtedly signifies a mantle of cloth; perhaps woollen cloth is immediately meant. V. LAIK, s. 1. LAUCHTANE, adj. Pale, livid.

LAVELLAN, s. A kind of weasel, Caithn.

"Sir Robert Sibbald mentions an animal, which he says is common in Caithness, called there lavellan: by his description it seems to belong to this genus. He says it lives in the water, has the head of the weasel, and resembles that creature in colour; and that its breath is prejudicial to cattle. Sibb. Hist. Scot. ii." Pennant's Zool. i. 86.

The latter writer elsewhere says: " I inquired here after the lavellan, which, from description, I suspect to be the water-shrew-mouse. The country people have a notion that it is noxious to cattle; they preserve the skin, and, as a cure for their sick beasts, give them the water in which it has been dipt. I believe it to be the same animal which in Sutherland is called the water-mole." Tour in S. 1769, p. 194.

"East to west?" Pink. A.S. luefer signifies a rush; Teut. laer, locus incultus et vacuus. This, however, seems to have been a prov. phrase, the sense of which is now lost.

Thus Wyntown, when celebrating the virtues of David I., the great favourite of the Roman clergy, makes a curious allusion to the first words of Psalm 132, suggested by the identity of the name:

LAUS, s.

Mr. Pink. inquires if this be lows, fires? Laus may indeed be allied to Su.G. lius, Isl. lios, light. Fel laus would thus mean great splendour. But fel may be here used in the sense of many; and laus may refer to the crest of the helmet; q. many hairs on loft, i. e. a bushy and lofty crest; from Dan. lu, luv, hair, Su.G. lo, lugg, rough, hairy. Lugg and luf denote the hair that grows on the foreheads of horses. According to this view, lemand is not immediately connected with laus, but is a farther description of the helmet itself.

LAWLY, adj. Lowly, humble.

"And this lawly and meik submission in the confession, with consent to resaue the said discipline & pennance, is ane part of satisfaction, quhilk is the thrid meane to cum to the sacrament of Pennance as is afore rehersit." Abp. Hamiltoun's catechisme, Fol. 155. b.

LAW, s. 1. A designation given to many hills or mounts, whether natural or artificial, S. Loe, A. Bor. Ray.

"Its name is derived from the old Celtic word Dun, a hill; its original site having been on the top of a most beautiful little hill, which is called Dunse Law." P. Dunse, Berwicks. Statist. Acc. iv. 378.

This might be viewed as the same with loe, "a little round hill, or a great heap of stones," A. Bor. V. Gl. Grose.

A.S. hlaewe, hlawe, agger, acervus, cumulus, tumulus, "a law, low, loo, or high ground, not suddenly rising up as a hill, but by little and little.—Hence—that name given to many hillocks and heaps of earth to be found in all parts of England: being no other but so much congested earth brought, and in a way of burial used of the ancients, thrown upon the bodies of the dead." Somner in vo. He refers to Dugdale's Descr. of Warwickshire.

According to this account, it might be supposed that the name had been primarily given to the artificial mounts raised above the dead, and afterwards transferred to those that were natural. For it is unquestionable, that in S. this designation is given to several hills of the latter description; as Largolaw in Fife, North-Berwick-law in Lothian, &c. It might be conjectured, that the reason of this transition was, that after our ancestors ceased to bury their dead under such tumuli, the places were still viewed as in some measure sacred; that they therefore assembled there in the conventions which were held in particular districts; and at length, in S. at least, gave this name to all those rising grounds, on which they used to meet for enacting laws, or regulating matters of general concern.

It must be admitted, however, that the invariable orthography of the A.S. term opposes this supposition; as it never assumes the form of lag, lage, or laga, the words which denote a law, as corresponding to Lat. lex. But two circumstances deserve to be mentioned, which render it doubtful whether the term, as used in S., is radically the same with A.S. hlawe. The first is, that such a mount is often called the Law-hill of such a place. The other, that a correspondent word occurs in Isl., evidently formed from lag, laug, loeg, lex. The name of laug-berg, i. e. the rock of law, is given to many hills in Iceland. Their Fridrekr Biskup oc Thorvalldr foro til things, oc bad Biskop Thorvalld telia tru fyrer mönum at Lögbergi: Profectis ad comitia universalia Episcopo Friderico et Thorvalldo, ille hunc rogavit, ut se praesente in Logbergo (rupe, in qua jus dieebatur) religionem christianam populo praedicaret; Kristnisag. c. 4. All their public and judicial assemblies were, and, if I mistake not, still are, held at these bergs. Ibid. p. 89—91. Laugberg, locus publicus ubi judicia peraguntur; Verel. Ind.

It has been said; "The word law, annexed to the name of so many places in the parish [Coldstream] attests, that it had belonged to the kingdom of Northumberland during the Heptarchy; as Hirsel-law, Castle-law, Spy-law, Carter-law, &c." P. Coldstream, Berwicks. Statist. Acc. iv. 420.

But this of itself cannot prove that the parish was under the dominion of the Anglo-Saxons; as the same designation is found in many parts of S. where we are certain that their jurisdiction never extended.

2. In one passage, lawe seems to signify the tomb, grave, or mound.

There come a lede of the lawe, in londe is not to layne,

And glides to Schir Gawayne, the gates to gayne; Yauland, and yomerand, with many loude yelles. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 7.

To what has been formerly observed, I may add that MoesG. hlaiw signifies monumentum. Gangith thu thamma hlaiwa; He cometh to the tomb, Joh. 11. 38.

LAW, s. The remainder. V. LAFE.

LAW-BORROIS, LAW-BORROWS, s. pl. The legal security which one man is obliged to give, that he will not do any injury to another in his person or property, S.

Saw-borrois, and forbid thame in the Kingis name to trubill the Kingis peax, vnder the pane of Law." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 83. Edit. 1566. called "Borrowis of peax," i. e. peace, 1449. c. 13.

"The action of contravention of lawborrows is likewise penal. It proceeds on letters of lawborrows, obtained at the suit of him who is disturbed in his person or goods by another, and containing a warrant to charge the party complained of to give security, that the complainer shall be kept harmless from illegal violence." Erskine's Inst. B. 4. Tit. 1. s. 16.

"The import of lawborrows in Scotland is, when two neighbours are at variance, the one procures from the council, or any competent court, letters charging the other to find caution and surety, that the complainer, his wife, bairns, &c. shall be skaithless from the person complained upon, his wife, bairns, &c. in their body, lands, heritages, &c. and before such letters can be granted, the complainer must give his oath expressly, that he dreads bodily harm, trouble, and molestation, from the person complained upon." Wodrow's Hist. i. 473.

It is from law and borgh or borrow, a pledge, a surety, used in pl. V. Borch.

A.S. laewed, lewd, id. laewed-man, a layman;
O. E. lewd.

And they meet in her mirth, whan minstrels berestyll.

Than telleth they of the trinitie a tale or twaine. P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 46, a.

The history of this term affords, at the same time, a singular proof of the progressive change of language, and of the influence of any powerful body on the general sentiments of society. By Bede, Aelfric, and other A.S. writers, it is used in its primitive sense. This meaning it retained so late as the reign of Edw. III. when R. de Langland wrote his Vision of Piers the Ploughman. But as, in the dark ages, the little learning that remained was confined almost entirely to the clergy; while the designation, by which they were known, came to denote learning in general, the distinctive term lewd was considered as including the idea of ignorance. It did not stop here, however. The clerical influence still prevailing, and the clergy continuing to treat the unlearned in a very contemptuous manner, as if moral excellence had been confined to their own order; by and by, the term came to signify a wicked person, or one of a licentious life. Hence, the modern sense of E. lewd.

The A.S. word may have been formed from Lat. laic-us, which must be traced to Gr. $\lambda \alpha$ -05, populus. Other dialects retain more of the original form; Su.G. lek, Isl. leik, Alem. leig. It seems doubtful, however, whether laewed be not radically the same with leode, populus, plebs, Isl. lid, Germ. leute. V. Spelman, vo. Leudis. In Fr. the phrase, le lais gens resembles the secondary sense of lawit; lepetit peuple; Dict. Trev.

L.B. lax-a denotes a gift; Donatio, legatum; Du Cange. The S. term may be immediately from Lat. lax-us, loosed, released. But Goth. laus, Su.G. loos, id. seems to be the root.

LAX, s. A salmon; formerly the only name by which this fish was known, Aberd.

This was indeed the general designation of the salmon in the northern languages: A.S. leax, O. E. lax, (V. Jun. Etym.) Dan. Su.G. id. Teut. lachs, Belg. lass, Ital. lacc-ia. The origin of the term, however, seems lost in obscurity.

Doug. Virgil, 245. 41.
——The fomy stoure of stremes lee
Upwaltis from the brade palmes of tre.

Ibid. 321, 53.

"It seems to signify," says Rudd., "nothing but sea-water, and so may come from the A.S. ea, with the Fr. particle l'." But I have no doubt that here we have a vestige of the old Isl. word lae, laa, mare, Verel.; hodie, unda fluens, G. Andr. Hence la-gardur, the sea-shore covered with weeds, sand, &c. hlaes meyar, poetically, the virgins of the sea, i. e. the waves, laa-var, fluit, fluctitat; laugr, laug, liquor fluens. The same root may perhaps be traced in the compound A.S. words, lago-flod, lago-stream, a deluge, an inundation.

This seems also to give us the true origin of E. lee, which has been strangely derived by Skinner from Fr. l'eau, water. Others have traced it to le, as denoting shelter. But a lee shore, is that towards which the winds blow, and, of consequence, the waves are driven. From the lee side of the ship being understood to denote that which is not directly exposed to the wind, it seems to have been oddly inferred, that the term lee, as thus used, signifies calm, tranquil. Dr. Johns. has fallen into a very singular mistake in relation to this subject; having given precisely the same sense to leeward, as to windward. He thus explains both terms; "Toward the wind."

LE, LIE, LEE, LYE, s. 1. Shelter, security from tempest.

The cilly schepe and thare litill hird gromes Lurkis vnder lye of bankis, woddis and bromes.

*Doug. Virgil, 201. 27.

2. Metaph. peace, ease, tranquillity. In this sense it most frequently occurs; as in that beautiful elegy on the death of Alex. III., one of the oldest specimens of S. poetry extant.

Quhen Alysandyr oure Kyng wes dede, That Scotland led in luwe and le, Away wes sons of ale and brede, Of wyne and wax, of gamyn and gle.

Wynt. Cron. vii. 10. 528.

Ibid. 81. 19.

Jun. renders to live in lee, to live at his own ease and liking. It also signifies, to live in peace, as opposed to contention or warfare.

Now is the grume that was sac grim Richt glad to live in lie.

Ever-green, ii. 182. st. 14.

Also, to live in security.

Fra hence furth he sal baith heir and se Baith theif puncist, and leil men live in lie. Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 14.

Su.G. lae expresses the very idea conveyed by this word in its primary sense; locus tempestati subductus, Ihre. Isl. hle, hlie, id. A.S. hleo, warmth; a place secure from the winds, a place of shelter. In old Gothic monuments, this is written ly.

Ok hade for ragn ok weder ly. Tecti a pluvia et tempestate.

Chron. Rythm.

Dan. lye, lae, a shelter, a cover, chiefly from severe weather. These terms are evidently allied to Isl. hlyr, hly, calidus; de aethere et aere dicitur; hlyende, calor aethereus; hlyn-ar, aer incalescit, ac clemens fit ex frigido. Perhaps the obsolete Isl. v. hlau-a may be viewed as the root; votn hlaua, aquae calent; G. Andr. p. 114. 115. S. Lew, lithe and lowne, q. v. seem also radically allied.

Le occurs in a passage in which the sense is un-

Spynagros than spekis; said, Lordingis in lc, I rede ye tent treuly to my teching.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 3.

It may have the same meaning as in the passages cited above: but it must be left doubtful.

LEAGER-LADY, s. A soldier's wife, one who follows a camp; a term used in contempt, S.

Sir J. Smythe, in Certain Discourses concerning the Forms and Effects of divers sorts of Weapons, 1590, speaking of Officers, says: "These, utterlie ignorant of all our auncient discipline and proceedings in actions of armes, have so affected the Walloons, Flemings, and base Almanes discipline, that they have procured to innovate, or rather to subvert all our auncient proceedings in matters military:as, for example, they will not vouchsafe in their speaches or writings to use our termes belonging to matters of warre, but doo call a campe by the Dutch name of legar; nor will not aford to say that such a towne or such a fort is besieged, but that it is belegard." LEASH, s. Freedom, liberty, S. B. Gie us the leash, set us at liberty.

I'm of your proffer wond'rous fain; Gie us our leash the night, and ye sall be My dauted lass, and gang alang wi' me.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52. Shirr. views the phrase mentioned as equivalent to "give us licence." But the word is more allied to Isl. leis-a, leys-a, solvere, whence leysinge a freedman; MoesG. laus, solutus. Lat. lic-et, whence licentia, would indeed seem to have the same origin.

"Interrogated, If some parts of the bank to the east of the croft-dike be not faced or barricadoed with stone? depones, That he does not know if any leaws must be made at any part of the water-side, but he knows of no bulwark." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. p. 91.

"The biggest leauws there for felling at does not exceed one space and one half in breadth, from the declivity of the brae to the margin of the water; but they extend several paces in length along the margin of it, by which he means only the shots in deep water immediately below the braes." Ibid. p.

"When there are any obstructions made by the river, in hollowing in one place, and raising hirsts in others, at the leaws or felling, or landing places, the hollows are in like manner filled up, and the hirsts and every other obstruction removed." Ibid. p. 114.

"Further depones, That a Leauw is a place wherever a net can be hauled ashore." Ibid. p. 138.

This might seem to be Fr. lieu, place, but more probably is the same with Teut. loo, lo, locus altus adjacens stagnis, torrentibus, aut paludibus; Becan. ap. Kilian. A.S. hlaw, hlaew, agger, acervus, tumulus. The latter is the word from which we have our Law, q. v.

Me thocht I lurkit vp vnder my hude, To spy thys auld, that was als sterne of speiche, As he had bene ane medicynare or leiche.

Doug. Virgil, 450. 29. This is evidently a very ancient word. MoesG. leik, lek; A.S. laec, laece, lyce; Alem. laehi; Isl. laeknar, laeknir; Su.G. lakare; Dan. laege; Sclav. Dalmat. Bohem. likar; Pol. likartz; Fenn. laeackaeri; Ir. liagh, id. Hence horse-leech; and lough-leech, sanguisuga, which, by translation into modern language, although it has a ludicrous effect, is sometimes called, S. B. a black Doctor. "In Aberdeen, it is said that leeches are cried in the streets under the name of Black Doctors, whelped in a pool." Sir J. Sinclair, p. 123. S. horse-leech, " a farrier or horse-doctor," Rudd.

Chaucer, lodisman; A.S. ladman, Teut. leydsman, Belg. loodsman, Su.G. ledesman, Sw. lots, E. loadsman; not as Sibb. supposes, "q. the heaver of the lead;" but all from the idea of leading.

LEE, adj. Lonely.

When seven years were come and gane, Lady Margaret she thought lang; And she is up to the hichest tower, By the lee licht o' the moon.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 88.

This seems to have been a favourite allusion. It occurs also in p. 25. st. 1. Vol. ii. 46. V. Leefow. LEED, pret. Left.

With both his hands he hint his sword, And all the strength that he had leed, He set upon Sir Gryme his head.

Sir Egeir, v. 1603.

Lewed, left, R. Glouc. Perhaps here head and leed have been originally heued and leued; as the poem is much modernized.

LEEFOW, LIEFU', adj. Lonely, solitary. phrase used is leefow lane, quite alone, S.

Whan he came in, wha's sitting here but Jean, Poor Colin's honest wife, her liefu' lane?

Ross's Helenore, p. 44.

Here the idea of being lonely is conjoined with that of being alone. It may be allied to Sw. ledsam, lonely; Su.G., Dan., Germ., Belg. ledig empty, without an inhabitant. Wachter observes that Belg. ledig is also written leeg per syncop. Teut. led, vacuity, is the root. Isl. hliae, however, signifies umbra, umbraculum; ad draga a hlie, occultare, coelare, subducere. G. Andr. p. 115. Or, shall we refer to Isl. hliod, subtristis, taciturnus, and full?

LEEFUL, LEEFOW-HEARTIT, adj. Compassionate, sympathizing. Loth. Leiful, friendly.

"The leeful man is the beggar's brother;" S. Prov. "Spoken when we have lent something that we now want, and must be forced to borrow." Kelly, p. 315.

Leveful is used by Wynt. in the sense of friendly. This seems radically different from the preceding; most probably from A.S. leof, dear. Isl. hlif-a, Su.G. lif-a, tueri, parcere, are considerably allied in signification. But the former is preferable.

LEE-LANG, adj. Livelong, S.

LEESOME, adj. Pleasant. V. Leifsum.

LEET, s. 1. One portion of many, a lot: as, a leet of peats, turfs, &c, when exposed to sale,

"Peats are estimated by the leet, which is a solid body piled up like bricks, 24 feet long, and 12 feet broad at bottom, and 12 feet high." P. Pitsligo, Aberd. Statist. Acc. v. 101. 102.

2. A nomination of different persons, with a view to the election of one or more of them to an office, S.

To put on the leet, to give in one's name in order to nomination, S.

"After long delay, and much thronging, being set in our places, the Moderator for the time offered to my Lord Commissioner a leet, whereupon voices might pass for the election of a new Moderator." Baillie's Lett. i. 98.

3. The term is also used to denote a list.

My Burchet's name well pleas'd I saw Amang the chosen leet, Wha are to give Britannia law. And keep her rights complete.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 400.

A.S. hlete, a lot. It is used perhaps in the second sense, in reference to the mode in which persons are often chosen by lot. Mr. Macpherson, however, seems to think that it is contracted from elyte, as formed from elect; "lists of persons chosen for an office under the controul of a superior power," being "in Sc. called Lytts in 1583. Maitland's Hist. of Edin. p. 228." V. LYTE, LITE.

"Thy disciples don that thing that is not leefful to hem to do on the Sabotis .- He-eat looves of proposicioun, which looves it was not leeful to him to etc." Matt. 12.

This is derived from le law, Gl. Wynt. But it is questionable whether it be not from leif leave, and full, q. allowable, what may be permitted; especially as it is often written leifful. V. LESUM. To LEG, v. n. To run; a low word, S.

Su.G. lack-a, id. whence lackare, a runner, a running footman; softened into Fr. laquai, Ital. lacché, Hisp. lacayo, E. lacquey. Ihre views laegg, LEG-BAIL, s. A ludicrous but emphatic term, applied to one, who, when chargeable with any crime or misdemeanour, instead of waiting the course of law, or endeavouring to find bail for himself, provides for his safety by flight. It is said, He has tane leg-bail. i. e. He reckons his limbs his best sureties.

LEGATNAIT, s. One who, as being an Archbishop or Bishop, enjoyed the rights of a Papal Legate within his own province or diocese.

"Johne be the mercie of God Archbischop of Sanct Androus, Metrapolitan and Primat of the hail kirk of Scotland, and of the seit Apostolyck Legatnait, till all & sindry Personis, Vicars and Curattis, specially within our awin Diocye, and generally within the boundis of al our hail primacie of Scotland, desyris grace and peace in Christ Jesu our Saluiour." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Pref.

Such Archbishops or Bishops were designed Legati Nati; q. native Legates, as it was a right belonging, in succession, to those who presided in such provinces or dioceses. They were free from the jurisdiction of the Legates a latere. The Archbisbop of Canterbury is acknowledged as Legatus natus, in a bull of Pope Urban, A. 1378. V. Du Cange.

LEGLIN, LAIGLIN, s. A milk-pail, S. The wooden vessel to which this name is given, has one of the staves projecting as a handle.

It occurs in that beautiful old song, The Flowers of the Forest.

At bughts in the morning nae blyth lads are scorning,

The lasses are lonely, dowie and wac; Nae daffin, nae gabbin, but sighing and sabbing, Ilk ane lifts her leglin, and hies her away. Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 3.

In a traditionary version of this song, the second line is still more emphatic.

But wooers are runkled, liart and gray.

P. Ploughman's Vision, Fol. 92. a. Liarde, as appears from the connexion, denotes the mule on which the Samaritan rode. This, as Tyrwhitt observes, was a common appellative for a horse, from its grey colour. Note, Cant. Tales. v.

LEI LEI

A.S. leod, comes, satelles, homo; a poetical word, Hickes. Isl. lyd, Su.G. lid, miles. This seems only a restricted, if not a secondary sense of Su.G. lyd, lid, laud, Isl. liod, A.S. leod, populus; Germ. leute, Belg. lieden, C.B. lliwed, gens, natio, turba. The modern term lad, as denoting a young man, seems radically the same. It is indeed used by Ulph. in the compound word juggalaud, vir juvenis.

LEID, s. A country, a region.

Ye ar welcum, cumly king, said the kene knyght, Ay quhil yow likis, and list, to luge in this leid. Gawan and Gol. i. 15.

This may be an oblique sense of A.S. leod as properly signifying a people, hence transferred to the territory inhabited by them; A.S. leod-geard, a region. 1sl. laad, however, significs terra, solum.

i. e. "Thou must not tell a falsehood in any respect."

Rudd. is uncertain whether to refer this to A.S. lead, people; Belg. lied, a song; A.S. hlydan, to make a noise, hlyd a tumult; or laeden, leden, Latin, the learned, the best and most universal language, and therefore, by way of emmence, as he imagines, taken for language in general. Sibb. prefers the last of these etymologies.

It may seem to confirm this derivation, that so late as the age of Chaucer, leden occurs in the same sense.

This faire kinges doughter Canace,
That on hire finger bare the queinte ring,
Thurgh which she understood wel every thing
That any foule may in his leden sain,
And coude answere him in his leden again,
Hath understonden what this faucon seyd.

Squieres T. 10749.

Tyrwhitt observes, that Dante uses Latino in the same sense. It may be added, that A.S. lyden is sometimes used to denote the Latin language, and also language in general; lingua, sermo. Notwithstanding, as our word still occurs without the termination, it seems doubtful whether it should not rather be traced to Su.G. liud, sonus, or lyd-a, sonare. Ihre deduces it from the latter. The use of the Su.G. v. has a striking analogy; Orden lyden saa, ita sonant verba. V. next word.

LEID, LEDE, LUID, s. A song, a lay.

Sum sang ring sangis, dancis, ledis, and roundis, With vocis schil, quhil all the dale resoundis.

Doug. Virgil, 402. 33.

Rudd. has overlooked this very ancient word. It occurs in another form, as used in the title of a poem composed on the death of Sir Richard Maitland and his lady.

"A luid of the said Sir Richard; and his Lady, who died on his burial day." Maitland Poems, p. 353.

Mr. Pinkerton has observed, that "Leudus was a sort of ode among the Gauls," and that "it seems to have been of the mournful kind." Ibid. Note, p. 432. Of this, however, there is no evidence; as far as we can judge from the vestiges still remaining. Lhuyd mentions Ir. lyidh, as simply signifying a song, a poem; Gael. laoidh. The term seems to have been general in the Gothic dialects; A.S. leoth, lioth, carmen, ode, poema. This was a generic word, the adj. conjoined determining the particular sense; as, idel leoth, frivolum carmen, hilde-leoth, militare carmen. Hence leoth-wyrhta, a poet, literally a song-wright; as playwright is still used, E. for one who composes plays. Belg. lied, a song or ballad; minnelied, a love-song; bruylofts lied, an epithalamium or wedding song; herders lied, a pastoral song. Isl. hliod, liod, a song, verses, metre; lioda-book, liber cautionum. Liuth-on is an old Gothic word, signifying to sing. Hence, as would appear, MoesG. awi-liud-on to praise, to celebrate. V. Ihre, vo. Liud.

I am inclined, with G. Andr., to derive this term from Isl. hliod, voice, hliod-a, to resound; Su.G. liud, liud-a; especially as Germ. laut-en is used in both senses, sonare, resonare; canere, sonum modulare, sive id fiat ore, sive instrumento; Franc. liuton canere; Wachter. From this sense of the word, he adds, are derived the names of songs, actors, and musical instruments, in many languages. He mentions Lat. lituus, buccina, a trumpet. Verel. explains Isl. hliod as equally signifying cantus and sonus; although the latter is unquestionably the primary sense, as appears from Snorro Sturleson. V. Von Troil's Letters on Iceland, p. 317. Isl. loddari, ludio, a player, ludr, tuba; Germ. laute, testudo, (E. lute), lied, cantus. Ital. lai, Fr. E. lay, may be merely the Gothic or Celtic term softened in pronunciation; although, it must be observed, that A.S. legh and leij are used in the sense of canticum.

LEID, LIED, s. A leid of a thing, is a partial idea of it. One is said to have a leid of a song, when he knows part of the words, S. B.

Whether this is allied to the preceding word, seems doubtful. Shall we refer it to lith a joint? Leyt occurs in Chron. Sax. for the link of a chain, membrum catenae; Schilter.

LEID, s. Safe-conduct, or a state of safety.

Off his modyr tithandis war brocht him till,

That tym befor scho had left Elrisle,

For Inglissmen in it scho durst nocht be.

Fra thine disgysyt scho past in pilgrame weid,

Sum gyrth to sek to Dunfermlyn scho yeid;

Seknes hyr had so socht in to that sted, Decest scho was, God tuk hir spreit to leid.

Wallace, ix. 1529. MS.

Su.G. leid, Germ. leit, geleit, signify safe conduct, or the liberty of going to any place and returning without injury. Thus, Su.G. komma hem pa leid, is a phrase used with respect to those who, being at a distance from home, have the public faith pledged for their safe return; leid-a, legd-a, salvum conductum dare.

Utan han honom legdemaen saende, Som honom leegdo ok forwara. Nisi ille mitteret duces itineris, Qui ipsum salvum praestarent.

Chron. Rhythm. p. 364. ap Ihre, vo. Leid. i. e. "Unless he should send leid-men, or guides of his journey, who should conduct him in safety."

Hence also leidebref, letters of safe conduct. It seems uncertain, whether the term leid has its origin from Isl. leid-a to lead, or Germ. leit-en to depart. Wachter has observed, that Belg. lyde, and hence overlyd, denote a departure, and metaphorically death; overleeden, deceased. The ancient Lombards used lido as simply signifying death.

The idea suggested by the term, as used by Blind Harry, is evidently that God received the soul of the mother of Wallace into his protection. According to this view, a contrast is stated, happily enough, not only between her dangerous situation while at Elrisle, and the gyrth or sanctuary she sought at Dunfermline; but even between the latter, and the more secure sanctuary she obtained with God.

To LEIF, v. n. To believe.

He saw nane levand leid upone loft lent, Nouthir lord na lad; leif ye the lele.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

i. e. " believe ye the truth, or what is testified by an honest person."

Murning Maidin, Maitl. Poems, p. 208. Mr. Ellis explains it, "Love you! a mode of address." Spec. E. P. ii. 37. But it certainly means, 66 Believe you, be assured;" and is to be viewed as the language of the Maidin, although otherwise printed. It seems to be the same with O.E. leue.

Be here al the Lordes lawes? quod I. Yea leve me, he sayd.-

Lo here in my lappe, that leved on that charme, Josue and Judith, and Judas Machabeus, Yea and vi. thousand beside forth.

LEIF, LEIFF, s. Leave, permission.

Su.G. lefw-a, Isl. lif-a, A.S. lyf-ian, Belg. lev-en, id. It is highly probable that this is merely a secondary sense of the v. signifying to leave; like Lat. superesse, to be, or remain, over, i. e. to be left. while others are removed.

LEIFULL. V. LEFUL.

LEIF, LIEF, adj. 1. Dear, beloved, S. Remembrand on the mortall anciant were That for the Grekis to hir leif and dere, At Troye lang tyme sche led before that day. Doug. Virgil, 13. 44.

2. Leesome, which is evidently the same word, is now used in the sense of pleasant, S.

O gear will buy me rigs o' land, And gear will buy me sheep and kye. But the tender heart o' leesome luve, The gowd and siller canna buy.

Burns, iv. 320.

Dignus, Virg. as unleif for indignus, p. 442. This, according to analogy, should be the comparative of A.S. leof, charus, and sum, as unleif is A.S. un-leof, non dilectus, odiosus. It seems radically different from lesum, q. v. as well as used in a different sense.

LEISOM, adj. Lawful. V. Lesum.

3. Honest, upright; as denoting veracity in testimony, S. In this sense leill and loyall are synon. "Gif the priest sayes, that the thing challenged was bred and vpbrocht in his house, he sall nocht be heard to alledge the samine; but gif he prove the samine be the testimonie of thrie loyall men.-He sall verifie the samine be the testimonial of leill men, quha knaw the samine to be of veritie." Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 19. s. 3. 6. Honest is used in the same sense in the following section.

Her dowie pain she could no more conceal: The heart, they'll say, will never lie that's leal. Ross's Helenore, p. 79. 80.

4. Giving to every one his due; as opposed to chicanery or theft.

And fra hence furth he sal baith heir and se Baith theif puneist, and leil men live in lie. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 14.

Ibid. v. 125. MS.

-All the wyis I weild ar at his aune will, How to luge, and to leynd, and in my land lent. Gawan and Gol. i. 12.

Mr. Pink. views lent as synon.

Here is our duellinge place quhare we sall leynd, For to remane here is our cuntré heynd.

Doug. Virgil, 209. 10.

It is frequently used in this sense in Sir Eglemore, Edin. edit. 1508.

By awght wokis war cumyn till ende, In lande of Egyp can he leynde.

Ilke man tuke his awn way Quhare that hym lykyt to leynde.

Thus in Arteas ar thai lent.

Mr. Pink. calls this an English metrical romance. But from the orthography, as well as from various words which occur in it, as given in this edition, it appears at least to have been altered by a Scotsman.

The term is used, however, by R. Brunne.

He went vnto Wynchestre, his conseile gaf him

Unto the somerestide ther gan he lende, Fyve and thritty batailes had he brouht tille

Turn we now other weys vnto our owen geste, And speke of the Waleys, that lies in the foreste. In the forest he lendes of Dounfermelyn.

Ibid. p. 324.

Lenged seems to be used in the same sense, P.

Was neuer wight as I went, that me wysh could Where this ladde lenged, lesse or more. I-prayed hem for charitie, or they passed fur-

If they knewe any courte, or contrye as they went,

Fol. 39. b. Pass. 8.

2. To tarry, to stay.

He said, Allace, I may na longer leind! Sen I my twa best freinds couth assay: I can nocht get a freind yit to my pay, That dar now tak in hand, for onie thing, With me for to compeir befoir you king. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 41.

Mr. Pink. leaves this word for explanation. But the sense is precisely the same as in the following passage:

Desist, quod he, this mater mon be left, For the day lycht, quhilk is to vs vnfreynd, Approchis nere, we may no langar leynd. Doug. Virgil, 288. 39.

No longer than against the day,

It is not my will for to lend; For I would that no man me kend.

O.E. leende.

Withinne the thridde day of May, No lengor nolde thei leende.

Kyng of Tars, Ritson's E. M. Rom. ii. 162.

Lenit and lent are apparently used in the same sense:

-Ilk foule tuke the flicht: and, schortly to schawin,

Held hame to thair hant, and to thair harbry, Quhair thay wer wont to remane,

All thir gudly and gane: And thair lenit allane

The Howlate, and I.

Houlate, iii. 24. MS. He saw nane levand leid upone loft lent, Nouthir lord na lad.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

3. To continue in any state; applied to the mind. Thus the ledis on loft in langour war lent. The lordis, on the tothir side, for liking thay leugh.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 6.

Rudd. without reason deduces this v. from A.S. lend, provincia; Sibb. with more plausibility, from Sw. linna, linda, cessare. But, although this word sometimes signifies to stop, as on a journey; it does not seem to occur in the sense of permanent residence. It must be acknowledged, however, that A.S. bilened is rendered inhabitatus; Lye. But it is more probable that this word primarily signified to remain under covert, to lodge in a place of concealment; from Isl. lein-a to conceal, leind hiding, leine lurking-place, latebrae, clancularia loca, pl. leind-er. There is an apparent affinity to Heb. | loon, pernoctare, divertere, commorari.

Douglas in one passage uses this v. as conveying the idea of concealment:

Al the feildis still othir, but noyis or soun, All beistis and byrdis of divers cullours serc, And quhatsumeuir in the brade lochis were, Or amang buskis harsk leyndis vnder the spray, Throw nichtis sylence slepit quhare thay lay. Virgil, 118. 34.

From this use of the word we might suppose that the O.E. and S. phrase, under the lind, were originally from leind, covert, hiding, rather than from the linden tree; were not the latter etymon confirmed by the use of a similar mode of expression in Isl. V. LIND.

LEINE, s.

Haill lady of all ladies, lichtest of leine! Haill! blissit mot thou be For thy barne seine.

Houlate, iii. 7.

Leg. leme, gleam, and barne teme, as in MS. The latter has been first written, barne tyme, in MS.; then tyme has been deleted, and teme put in its place.

LEYNE, pret. Lied, told a falshood.

For sikkirly, les than wyse authoris leyne, Eneas saw neuer Touer with his ene.

Doug. Virgil, 7. 17.

"As sayne for say, and fleyne for fly, all for the verse sake," Rudd.

LEINEST.

The larbar lukes of thy lang leinest craig, Thy pure pynd throple peilt, and out of ply, Gart men dispyt thair flesch, thou spreit of Gy. Evergreen, ii. 56. st. 16.

It does not appear whether this be a superlative from lean; or a kind of participle from A.S. hleanan, to wax lean.

LEIPIT. V. LEEPIT.

To LEIS, v. a. To lose. O.E. leise. I leis my fader, al comfort and solace, And al supple of our trauel and pane.

Doug. Virgil, 92. 24. MoesG. lius-an, fra-lius-an, Su.G. foer-lis-a, Belg. verlies-en, id. Isl. lyssa, grande damnum. To LEIS, Leiss, v. a. To lessen, to diminish.

A.S. laes, minor.

To LEIS, v. a. "To arrange, to lay in order. Goth. lis-an congregare;" Gl. Sibb.

LEIS ME, LEESE ME, LEUIS ME, "pleased am I with;" an expression of strong affection and good wishes, S. Sibb. seems to give the literal sense in these words above quoted.

I schro the lyar, full leis me yow.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 158, st. 2. i. e. "I wish a curse on the liar, I love you heartily." It being said, that he was only scoffing, he wishes that a curse might light upon him, if he did not speak the truth in declaring his love.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 258.

O leese me on my spinning wheel, O leese me on my rock and reel; Frae tap to tae that cleeds me bien, And haps me fiel and warm at e'en.

Burns, iv. 317.

This might seem allied to Su.G. lis-a, requiem dare. But I prefer deriving it from lcif, dear, agreeable; q. "leif is to me," literally, "dear is to me," a phrase the inverse of wo is me, S. wae's me. This derivation is confirmed by the form in which Douglas uses the phrase:

Take thir with the, as lattir presand sere, Of thy kind natiue freyndes gudis and gere; O leuis me, the lykest thing lyuing, And verray ymage of my Astyanax ying.

Virgil, 84. 45. We find an A.S. phrase very similar, leofre me ys, gratius est mihi, Gen. xxix. 19.; only the comparative is used instead of the positive.

LEISCH, LESCHE, v. 1. A thong, a whip-cord, S. Thow for thy lounrie mony a leisch has fyld. Dunbar, Evergr. ii. 53. st. 7.

2. A cord or thong, by which a dog or any other animal is held.

Nixt eftir quham the wageoure has ressauc, He that the lesche and lyame in sounder draue. Doug. Virgil, 145. 45.

3. A stroke with a thong, S. V. LEICH. -Let him lay sax leischis on thy lends. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 50. st. 8.

To LEISCHE, LEICH, LEASH, v. a. To lash, to scourge, S.

"Gif ony childer within age commit ony of thir thingis foirsaid, because thay may not be punist for nonage, their fathers or maisters sall pay for ilk ane of thame xiii. s. iiii. d. or els deliuer the said childe to the juge, to be leichit, scurgeit, and dung, according to the fault." Acts, Ja. IV. 1503. c. 103. Edit. 1566; leisched, Skene, c. 69.

Seren. derives E. lash from Isl. lask-ast, laedi; Su.G. laest-a percutere, caedere. Perhaps it is formed from the s.

To LEIST, v. n. To incline, Dunbar; E. list. Leist, expl. "Appeased, calmed, q. leased, from Fr. lacher, Lat. laxare," Rudd.

Desist hereof, and at last be the leist, And condiscend to bow at our request.

Doug. Virgil, 441. 34.

Sibb. derives it from Teut. lessch-en, extinguere; (sitim) levare. If leist signify appeased, the most natural origin would be Su.G. lis-a, requiem dare, lenire mala; whence lisa, requies a dolore, vel sensu quolibet mali; Ihre. But I hesitate, whether it be not used for least, adj.; as Jupiter is here requiring submission, although in very respectful terms, from his haughty and vindictive spouse:

Desine jam tandem, precibusque inflectere nos-Virg.

LEISTER, LISTER, s. A spear, armed with three or four, and sometimes five prongs, for striking fish; an eel-spear, S.

"The modes [of fishing] are four. 1. With leisters: a kind of four-pronged fork, with the prongs turned a little to one side; having a shaft 20 or 24 feet long. These they run along the sand on their edge, or throw them when they see any fish. In this manner they often wound and kill great quantities. Some of our people are very dexterous at this exercise, and will sometimes upon horseback throw a leister, and kill at a great distance. This is also called shauling, as it is generally practised when the tide is almost spent, and the waters turned shallow." P. Dornock, Dumfries, Statist. Acc. ii. 15.

"The lister is a shaft, with three iron prongs barbed on one side, fixed on the end, not unlike the figure of Neptune's trident." P. Canoby, Ibid. xiv.

An awfu' scythe, out-owre ae shouther, Clear-dangling hang; A three-tae'd leister on the ither

Burns, iii. 42.

Perhaps it is here poetically used, in the description of Death, as denoting a trident.

Lay, large and lang.

It has no affinity to Teut. eel-schere, eel-spear, referred to by Sibb. I can indeed find no vestige of this word in A.S., or in any of the Germ. dialects. But it is preserved, in the same form, in Su.G. liuster, liustra, id. Liustra signifies to strike fish with a trident or eel-spear, when they approach to the light. Far med liustra ok elde; If they use the leister and fire. Leg. Upland. c. 13. ap. Ihre. This phrase irresistibly suggests the idea of what is vulgarly called, in our own country, the black fishing, i. e. fishing under night, or under the covert of darkness. It also shews that the same illegal mode of fishing has been practised in Sweden, as in Scot-'and. A torch or light is held above the water, and the fish running towards it, are struck. Verel. defines Isl. liustra, liuster, so as in fact to give a description of our black-fishing. Tridens, s. fuscina plurium dentium hamata, manubrioque longissimo adfixa, qua ad faculas lintre circumlatas, pisces nocturno tempore percutiuntur et extrahuntur a piscatoribus : Ind.

The v. liustra originally signifies, to strike in general; anc. lyst-a, Isl. liost-a, list-a; liste haugg, verber grave, G. Andr. V. BLACK-FISHING.

Weblyster occurs in the O.E. law; whether the same instrument be meant, is uncertain. V. Cowpes.

To LEIT, v. a. To permit, to endure; E. let.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 207. st. 2. "They will not endure the company of any false or disloyal man;" Lord Hailes. V. LAT, v. 1.

To LEIT, v. n. To delay.

Henrysone, Bann. P. p. 132.
According to L. Hailes, "probably leet, give one's suffrage or vote." But it rather signifies, that, as being a young man, he would pass some part of his time in love; Su.G. laet-ia intermittere, MoesG. lat-jan, A.S. laet-an, tardare, morari, A. Bor. leath, ceasing, intermission, Ray.

To LEIT, LEET, LET, v. n. 1. To pretend, to give out, to make a shew as if, S.B.

Henrysone, Bann. P. p. 119. It is surprising that L. Hailes should say, on this word, "probably, voting." Here, as on the preceding term, the bench evidently predominated with the worthy Judge.

Barbour, ii. 157. MS.

In edit. 1620, it is rendered thought. But although the v. signifying to think is written in a similar manner, that here used does not seem properly to express the idea entertained by the person, but the external semblance. Thus it occurs in Ywaine and Gawin:

Than lepe the maiden on hir palfray, And nere byside him made hir way; Sho lete as sho him noght had sene, Ne wetyn that he thar had bene.

Ritson's Met. Rom. i. 76. "He's no sa daft as he lects," S.B. a phrase used with respect to one who is supposed to assume the appearance of derangement to serve a purpose. "You are not so mad as you lecten you," Chesh.

Su.G. laat-as, to make a shew, whether in truth 'or in pretence; prae se ferre, sive vere sive simulando; Ihre. This learned etymologist mentions E. leeten as a kindred word. Isl. lat-a, laet-a, id. Ihre prefers Su.G. lat, later, manners, behaviour. Lye explains the prov. term leeten prae se ferre; and refers to A.S. lytig, astutus; MoesG. liutei, dolus; liuta, hypocrita; adding that the Icelanders retain the root, in laet-a simulare. V. LAIT.

2. To mention, or give a hint of, any thing. Nexir leet, make no mention of it, S.B.

To let on, is now more generally used in the same sense.

(1.) To seem to observe any thing; to testify one's knowledge, either by words or looks, S.

A weel-stocked mailin, himsel for the laird, And marriage aff-hand were his proffers: I never loot on that I kend it, or car'd.

Burns, iv. 249.

(2.) To make mention of a thing. He did nae let on, he did not make the least mention; i. e. he did not shew that he had any knowledge of the thing referred to.

(3.) To give one's self concern about any bu-

Never let on you, but laugh, S. Prov.; spoken when people are jeering our projects, pretensions, and designs. Let on you, trouble yourself about it; Kelly, p. 262.

Isl. laet-a is also rendered ostendere.

To let wit, lut wit, to make known, S. is probably from the same stock.

Let na man wit that I can do sic thing. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 81. Belg. laat-en weeten, Sw. let-a en weta, id. Also, to let with it, id. S.B.

To LEIT, LEET, v. n. To ooze; especially applied to thin ichor distilling through the pores of the body, S.

This is perhaps merely a secondary sense of the preceding v. as signifying to appear. The humour may thus be said to shew itself through the pores. LEYT, pret. Reckoned. V. LAT, 3. LEYTHAND.

To LELL, v. a. To mark, to take aim, S.B. From A.S. laefel; or E. level, which is used in the same sense.

LEMANE, s. A sweetheart.

Rudd. and Sibb. render it as if it signified only a mistress or concubine; which is the sense in modern E. But Jun. properly explains it as applied to either sex.

Douglas mentions as the name of an old song: - The schip salis over the salt fame, Wil bring thir merchandis and my lemane hame.

Virgil, 402. 38.

This must naturally be viewed as referring to a male. Chaucer uses it in both senses:

Now, dere lemman, quod she, go farewele. -Good lemman, God thee save and kepe. And with that word she gan almost to wepe. Reves T. v. 4238. 4245.

Unto his lemman Dalida he tolde, That in his heres ail his strengthe lay. Monkes T. v. 14069.

It is evident that anciently this word was often used in a good sense; as merely denoting an object of affection.

Many a louely lady, and lemmans of knightes Swoned and swelted for sorow of deathes dintes. P. Ploughman's Vision, Sign. H h, 2. b.

But it is not always used in this favourable sense. Thys mayde hym payde suythe wel, myd god wille he hyr nom,

And huld hyre, as hys lefmon, as wo seyth in hordom.

R. Glouc. p. 344.

Rudd. and Johns. both derive it from Fr. l'aimant. Sibb. has referred to the true etymon, although he marks it as doubtful; "Teut. lief dilectus, carus, and man, pro homine, faeminam aeque notante ac virum." Hickes mentions Norm. Sax. leue-mon, amasius, Gram. A.S. He also refers to Fr. lief-mon, carus homo. But this is certainly of Goth. origin; A.S. leof, carus.

To LEME, v.n. To blaze, to shine, to gleam, S.; lemand, part. pret.

The blesand torchis schane and sergeis bricht, That fer on bred all lemes of there licht. Doug. Virgil, 475. 53.

O thou of Troy, the lemand lamp of licht! Ibid. 48. 21. Now by this time, the sun begins to leam, And lit the hill heads with his morning beam. Ross's Helenore, p. 55.

A.S. leom-an, Isl. liom-a, splendere; A.S. leoma, Isl. liome, splendor. MoesG. lauhmon, lightening, is undoubtedly from the same origin. E. gleam is evidently A.S. ge-leoma, ge-lioma, lumen, contr. Thwaites traces Su.G. glimma, micare, to the same source; Ihre in vo.

LEME, s. Gleam.

LEN, LEANE, LEND, s. A loan, S.

"That quha ever committis usuric, or ocker in time cumming, directlie or indirectlie, (that is to say) takis mair profite for the leane of money, nor as it cummis to ten pundes in the yeir for a hundreth pundes, or five bolles victual; and swa pro rata, -sall be counted and esteemed usurers and ockerers." Acts, Ja. VI. 1594. c. 222, Murray.

What say you for yourself man? Fye for shame. Should not a lend come always laughing hame? Pennecuik's Poems, 1715, p. 49.

Su.G. Isl. laan, A.S. laen, lean, Fris. lean, id. MoesG. laun, merces, remuneratio.

To LEN, v. n. V. LAYNE.

To LEND, v. n. To abide, to dwell. V. LEIND. LENDIS, s. pl. 1. Loins.

Plate futt he bobbit up with bendis, For Mauld he maid requeist. He lap quhil he lay on his lendis.

Chr. Kirk, st. 5.

2. Rendered "buttocks," by Ramsay. Se sune thou mak my Commissar amends, And let him lay sax leischis on thy lends. Kennedy, Ever-green, ii. 49. 50.

A.S. lendenu, lendena, lendene; Germ. lenden, Isl. Sw. lendar, id. Isi. lend in sing. clunis, a haunch or buttock. Callender derives it from leing-a " to extend, the loins being the length of the trunk of the body."

LENYIE, LENYE, adj. 1. Lean, meagre. His body wes weyll [maid, and lenye,] As that that saw him said to me.

Barbour, i. 387.

The words in brackets are not in MS.

2. Of a fine or thin texture.

Su.G. Isl. laen-a, dare, concedere. LENIT, LENT, pret. Abode, remained. V. LEIND. LENIT, LENT, pret. Leaned, reclined.

—As I lenit in an ley in Lent this last nycht, I slaid on ane swevynyng, slomerand and lite. Doug. Virgil, 238. a. 7.

Sum vthir singis, I wil be blyith and licht, My hert is lent apoun sa gudly wicht.

Ibid. 402, 40.

LENT.—LENT-FIRE, s. A slow fire.

"They saw we were not to be boasted; and before we would be roasted with a lent-fire, by the hands of churchmen, who kept themselves far aback from the flame, we were resolved to make about through the reek, to get a grip o some of these who had first kindled the fire, and still lent feuel to it, and try if we could cast them in the midst of it, to taste if that heat was pleasant when it came near their own shins." Baillie's Lett. i. 171.

It must have received this name, because, in the time of Popery, fire was less needed for culinary purposes during Lent than at any other season.

LENTFULL, adj. Apparently, mournful, melancholy; from Lent, the season in Popish countries appropriated to fasting.

In relation to the bloody heart in the arms of Douglas, Holland speaks-

Of metteles and cullours in lentfull attyre.

This is explained by what follows;

All thair deir armes in dolie desyre.

Houlate, ii. 9. MS.

LENTRYNE, LENTYRE, s. The season of Lent: still used to denote that of Spring, S. Schyr Eduuard, fra the sege wes tane,

A weile lang tyme about it lay, Fra the Lentryne, that is to say, Quhill forouth the Saint Jhonys mess.

Barbour, x. 815. MS.

-At Saynt Andrewys than bad he, And held hys Lentyre in reawtè.

Wyntown, viii. 17. 42. Lentyren, ibid. 18.2. The quadragesimal Fast received its name from the season of the year in which it was observed. In the Laws of Alfred the Great, it is called lengtenfaesten, or the fast in Spring. So early as the translation of the Bible into A.S., lengten, or lencten was the term for Spring, as in Psa. 74. 17. Sumer and lengten thu gescope hig; Thou hast made summer and spring. They called the vernal equinox lenctenlican emnihte. Belg lente, Alem. Germ. lenze, the spring.

Both Skinner and Lye derive A.S. lencten from lencg-an, because then the days begin to lengthen. LENNO, s. A child; Gael. leanabh.

Ye's neir pe pidden work a turn
At ony kind of spin, mattam,
But shug your lenno in a scull,
And tidel highland sing, mattam.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 190.

To LENTH, v. a. To lengthen, to prolong. He did of Deith suffer the schouris:

And micht not lenth his life ane hour,
Thocht he was the first conquerour.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 80. Teut. lengh-en, Sw. leng-a, prolongare.

LEOMEN, s. A leg, Aberd.

"Sae I tauld her I rather hae the leomen of an auld ewe, or a bit o' a dead nout." Journal from London, p. 9.

A.S. leome, a limb.

To LEP, v. n.

Thai delt amang thaim that war thar, [And gaif] the King off Inglandis ger, That he had levyt in Biland, All gert thai lep out our thair hand, And maid thaim all glaid and mery.

Barbour, xviii. 502. MS.

i. e. "They spent it freely; they did not act the part of misers." This seems to have been anciently a proverbial phrase, synon. with that now used with respect to money spent lavishly, that one makes it go. The idea is borrowed from rapid motion; Isl. leip-a, hleip-a, Su.G. loep-a, to run.

To LEPE, LEIP, v. a. To heat; properly to parboil, S.

Sum latit lattoun but lay lepis in lawde lyte. Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 49.

"We say that a thing is leeped, that is heated a little, or put into boiling water or such like, for a little time," S. Rudd.

They cowpit him then into the hopper, Syne put the burn untill the gleed, And leepit the een out o' his head.

• Allan o' Maut, Jamieson's Pop. Ball. ii. 239. It is explained "scald," in Gl., but rather improperly.

Unleipit occurs in an old poem.

rough, having the hair on.

In Typerius tyme, the trew imperatour, Quhen Tynto hills frå skraiping of toun-henis was keipit, Thair dwelt ane grit Gyre Carling in awld Betokis bour,

That levit upoun Christiane menis flesche, and rewheids unleipit.

Bann. MS. ap. Minstrel'y Border, ii 199.
This seems to signify, raw heads that had not got the slightest boiling. Rew, however, may signify

I take this word to be radically the same with A.S. hleap-an, Isl. leip-a, MoesG. hlaup-an, to leap; because the thing said to be leped, is allowed only to wallop in the pot. By the way, the E. synon. wallop is not, as Johnson says, merely from A.S. weal-an to boil. It is an inversion of Belg. op-well-en, to boil up. That some of the Gothic words, similar in form to E. leap, had been anciently applied to boiling, appears from the Belg. phrases, Zyn gal loopt over, His heart boils with choler; De pot loopt over, The pot runs over; Teut. overloop-en, exaestuare, ebullire.

LEPER, LEEP, s. A slight boiling; q. a wallop, S. LEPER-DEW, s. A cold frosty dew, S. B.

I know not if this derives its designation from being somewhat hoary in its appearance, and thus resembling the spots of the leprosy; or from Isl. hleipe, coagulo.

LEPYR, s. The leprosy. V. LIPPER, s.

To LERE, to learn. V. LARE.

LERGES. V. LARGES.

LERGNES, s. Liberality.

Doug. Virgil, 103. 31.

2. Lest.

I knew it was past four houris of day, And thocht I wald na langare ly in May, Les Phebus suld me losingere attaynt.

Doug. Virgil, 404. 11.

Les than is also used for unless, Doug.

"He counsalit hym—neuir to moue battall, les than he mycht na othir wayis do." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 23, b.

Les na, les nor, id.

"The chancellar sall mak the panis contenit in the said actis of Parliament to be put to executioun vpoun the brekaris of the saidis actis, les na thay leif the said beneficis efter thay be requyrit thairupone." Acts, Ja. IV, 1488, c. 13. Edit. 1566. Les nor, Skene.

A.S. laes, les, id. laes hwon, ne quando, Lye. The laes, and thy laes, are used in the same sense. The original signification of this word is minor, minus, less; as the conj. implies diminution. It occurs in O. E. and is viewed as the imperat. of A.S. les-an, to dismiss. V. Divers. Purley, i. p. 172.

LES-AGE, s. Non-age, minority; from less and age

Johne Duke of Albany, chosen be the nobilitie to governe in the Kingis les-age,—the Hammiltounis thinking that he had bene als wickit as thay,—held thame quyet for a season." Buchanan's Admonitioun to Trew Lordis, p. 10.

LESH PUND, LEISPUND, LISPUND, s. A weight used in the Orkney islands, containing eighteen pounds Scots.

''Item, ane stane and twa pound Scottish makis

Dutch pounds. By various acts, however, and different imperfect agreements, it has been gradually raised to 30 lb." P. Unst, Shetland, Statist. Acc. v. 197.

Su.G. lispund, a pound of twenty marks. Ihre observes that this is properly Liwesche pund, the Livonian pound.

LESYT, LESYT, pret. Lost.

Thair gudis haiff thai lesyt all.

Barbour, x. 759. MS.

A.S. leos-an, O.E. lese, to lose.

LESS, lies; pl. of LE, lie. For owtyn less, but less, in truth, without leasing.

Lest, s. is also used, ibid. st. 38.

Opyn thy throte; hastow no lest to sing? i. e. inclination, desire.

LEST, pret. Waited, tarried.

This seems the meaning in the following passage. For he thocht he wald him assail,

Or that he lest, in plain bataill.

Barbour, ix. 557. MS.

Elsewhere, it is used for E. last, endure.

A.S. laest-an, to remain, to stay.

LESUM, Leison, adj. Allowable, what may be permitted; often used as equivalent to lawful. Lovely, acceptable, q. lovesum. In our law it signifies lawful," Rudd.

Is it not as lesum and ganand, That fynalie we seik to vncouth land?

Doug. Virgil, 111. 54.

Lesum it is to desist of your feid,

And now to spare the pure pepil Troyane.

Ibid. 164. 47.

In both these places, the word used by Virgil is fas, which has little analogy to "lovely, acceptable." In another place lesum is used in rendering non detur.

Bot it is na wyse lesum, I the schaw, Thir secrete wayis vnder the erd to went.

Ibid. 167. 46.

Douglas uses lesum and leful in common for fas. Mot it be leful to me for to tell Thay thingis quhilkis I have hard said of hell. Ibid. 172. 26.

"There was no man to defend the burgesses, priests, and poor men labourers haunting their leisom business, either publickly or privately." Pit-

Sibb. derives it from lé, law. But on a more particular investigation, I find the conjecture I had thrown out on Lefull confirmed. A.S. leaf, ge-leaf, licentia, permissio, is indeed the origin. From the latter is formed ge-leafful, licitus, allowable; and also ge-leafsum, id. Lye. We observe the same form of expression in other dialects; Isl. oleifr, oleifi, impermissum, illicitum, from o negat. and leifi, leave, permission: Sw. laaflig, allowable, olaeflig, what may not be permitted; from laaf, lof, leave. LESURIS, LASORS, s. pl. Pastures.

In lesuris and on leyis litill lammes

Full tait and trig socht bletand to thare dammes.

Doug. Virgil, 402. 24.

"Quhare sum tyme bene maist notable cietes or maist plentuous lesuris & medois, now throw erd quaik & trymblyng, or ellis be continewall inundation of watteris, nocht remanis bot othir the huge sevs or ellis ynproffitable ground & sandis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 1.

"Caranach fled to Fyffe, quhilk is ane plenteous regioun lyand betuix two firthis Tay and Forth, full of woddis, lesuris, and valis." Bellend. Cron. B. iv. c. 11. Nemoribus, pascuis, Boeth. "Valis and lesuris." Ibid. B. vi. c. 17. Valles, totaque planities, Boeth.

Thay me demandit, gif I wald assent With thame to go, thair lasors for to sie.

Maitland Poems, p. 261.

A.S. leswe, lueswe, signifies a pasture; and R. Glouc. uses lesen in this sense.

For Engelond ys ful ynow of fruyt and of tren, Of welles swete and colde ynow, of lesen and of mede.

Cron. p. 1. Gl. "lees, commons, pastures." In the same sense lese occurs in his account of Ireland.

Lese lasteth ther al the wynter. Bute hyt tho more wonder be,

Selde me schal in the lond eny foule wormes se. Ibid. p. 43.

Ir. leasur, according to Lhuyd, signifies pratum. Du Cange gives L. B. lescheria as denoting a marshy place where reeds and herbs grow.

To LET, v. n. To reckon, to esteem; conjoined with of; pret. leit of.

To LET GAE, v. a. To raise the tune; a term especially applied, by old people, to the precentor, or reader, S.

O Domine, ye're dispossest,— You dare no more now, do your best, Lat gae the rhyme.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 3. To LET ON, LET WIT. V. LEIT, v. 3.

To LETE, v. n. To pretend. V. Leit, v. 3.

To LETE, v. n. To forbear, to exercise patience.

Rohand bad him lete,

And help him at that stounde.

Sir Tristrem, p. 38. st. 58. V. LAT, v. 1. LETE, s. But let, literally, without obstruction; an expletive.

He wes nere in the twentyde gre Be lyne discendande fra Noye, Of his yhungest son but lete That to name was callyd Japhete.

Wyntown, ii. 8. 7.

LETLES, adj. Without obstruction.

The Scottis men saw thair cummyng,
And had of thaim sic abasing,
That thai all samyn raid thaim fra;
And the land letles lete thaim ta.

Barbour, xvi. 568. MS.

From let and les, corresponding to E. less. LETE, s. Gesture, demeanour. V. LAIT. LETH, LETHE, s. 1. Hatred, evil, enmity.

Wyntown, viii. 5. 106.

A.S. laeththe, hatred; lath, evil, enmity; Su.G. led, Isl. leidr, Alem. Germ. leid, Belg. leed, C. B. a-laeth, grief, adversity.

2. A disgust, a feeling of detestation, S. B.

Clerkys sayis that prolixyté, That langsumnes may callyd be, Gendrys leth mare than the delyté.

Wyntown, vi. Prol. v. 3.

LETTEIS, s. Some kind of ornament, prohibited except on holidays.

"And as to thair gownis, that na wemen weir mertrikis nor letteis, nor tailis unfitt in length, nor furrit vnder, bot on the haly day." Acts, Ja. II. 1457. c. 78. Edit. 1566.

Sibb., for what reason does not appear, conjectures that "scarlet cloth" is meant. That the term referred to some kind of fur, might appear probable from letteis being conjoined with mertrikis. But that this is the signification, will scarcely be doubted, when it is observed, that Cotgr. mentions Fr. letice as denoting "a beast of a whitish gray colour." Whether this be the ermine, which the Swedes call lekatt and leksen, I cannot say.

LETTER-GAE, s. The precentor or clerk in a church; he who raises the tune, and, according to the old custom in this country, reads every line before it be sung, S.

The letter gae of haly rhime
Sat up at the board-head;
And a' he said was thought a crime
To contradict indeed.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 265.

"So lightly were clergy and divine worship esteemed some time before the Reformation, that in Mr. Cumming's days, the last Episcopal minister in this parish, there was no singer of psalms in the church but the lettergae, as they called the precentor, and one Tait, gardener in Braal." P. Halkirk, Caithness, Statist. Acc. xix. 49. N.

This word might at first view seem allied to Fr. latrie; as having the same origin with letteron, q. v. The clerk, however, has undoubtedly received this name from his employment in raising the tune, as this is still called letting gae the line, S. V. Let GAE.

LETTERON, LETTRIN, s. 1. The desk in which the clerk or precentor officiates; extended also to denote that elevated semicircular seat, which, in Scotland, surrounds the pulpit, S.

2. "A writing desk, or table," Rudd.
And seand Virgill on ane letteron stand,
To wryte anone I hynt my pen in hand.

Doug. Virgil, 202. 38.
From O.Fr. letrin, now lutrin, the pulpit from which the lecture was anciently read, Alem. lectrum, Su.G. lectare; all from L.B. lectorium.

LEUCH, Leugh, pret. Laughed, did laugh, S. Moes G. A.S. hloh, id. V. Leind.

LEUE, adj. Beloved, dear.

Sir Tristrem, p. 183. A.S. leof, carus, dilectus, Alem. lief, id.

LEUEDI, s. Lady.
The leuedi and the knight,
Both Mark hath sene.

Sir Tristrem, p. 152.

A.S. hlaefdige, hlafdia, id. It seems very doubtful if this have any affinity to hlaf a loaf, (V. LAIRD); as Isl. lafd, lafda, lofde, are rendered hera, domina, which seem no wise related to lef panis.

LEVEFUL, adj. Friendly.

The Duk of Burgon in leveful band
Wes to the Duk bundyn of Holand.

Wyntown, ix. 27. 263.

V. Leue. LEVER, s. Flesh.

I was radder of rode then rose in the ron; Now am I a graceless gast, and grisly I gron. My leuer, as the lelé, lonched on hight. Sir Gawan and Sir Gol. ii. 24.

V. Lyre.

Lonched may signify, extended itself, like the lily; Germ. lang-en, porrigere; Fr. along-er to lengthen.

LEVER, LEUER, LEUIR, LEIR, LEWAR, LOOR, LOURD, adv. Rather.

Bot Wallace weille coude nocht in Corsby ly, Hym had leuir in trauaill for to be.

Whan he ower Liddel his men did lead.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 106.

Lever, leifer, O.E. id. liever, A.Bor. loor, S.B. Properly the compound of leif, willing; as A.S. leofre of leof, Germ. lieber of lieb. Thus Belg. liever, rather, is formed in the same manner from lief, lieve, dear. V. Leif, adj.

LEUERAIRES, s. pl. Armorial bearings.

"There is discrete princis that gyffis the tryumphe of knychted and nobilite, vitht leverairis, armis and heretage, to them that hes committit vailyeant actis in the veyris." Compl. S. p. 231.

in the veyris." Compl. S. p. 231.

Fr. livree. The word may be from livrer to deliver, L. B. liberare; because certain distinctive badges were delivered by the sovereign or superior when he conferred the honour of knighthood.

LEVERE', LEVERAY, s. 1. Delivery, distribution.

Tharfor he maid of wyne levere', To ilk man, tha. he payit suld be.

Barbour, xiv. 233. MS.

2. Donation.

Ye ar far large of leveruy,
Agane the courteour can say.
Apperandly ye wald gif all
The teindis of Scotland greit and small,
Unto the Kirk for till dispone,
And to the Court for till gif none.

Diall. Clerk and Courteour, p. 13.

Fr. livrée, the delivery of a thing that is given; la livrée de chanoines, the stipend given to canons, their daily allowance in victuals or money. L.B. librare and liberatio were used to denote the provision made for those who went to war; as also Fr. livrée. V. Du Cange, and Dict. Trev. Thus, the stated allowance given to servants is called their livery-meal, S. Livery is used in E. in a similar sense.

LEVIN, s. Lightening, a flash of fire; sometimes fyry levin.

Dym skyis oft furth warpit fereful levin, Flaggis of fyre, and mony felloun flaw. Doug. Virgil, 200. 53. The skyis oft lychtned with fyry leuyn.

2. The light of the sun.

All thought he be the lampe and hert of heuin, Forfeblit wox his lemand gilty leuin, Throw the dedynyng of his large round spere.

Doug. Virgil, 200. 15. i. e. his "shining gilded light, or rays."

This is perhaps the primary sense of the word; especially as it seems nearly allied to A.S. hlif-ian, hlif-igan, rutilare, to shine, to glitter. Levin may be viewed as embodied in the Su.G. v. liung-a to lighten, whence liungeld, anc. lyngeld, lightening.

LEVIN, s. Scorn, contempt; with levin, in a light manner.

Sall neuer sege undir son se me with schame, Na luke on my lekame with light, nor with levin:

Na nane of the nynt degre have noy of my name.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 4.

Teut. laff-en, leff-en, garrire, loquitari? Leme occurs, however, in edit. 1508. But levin corresponds to the rhyme.

Wallace, iv. 38, MS.

A.S. lef-an, lyf-an, alef-an, alyf-an, concedere, permittere. The original idea is retained in Su.G. lofw-a, to leave, whence lof permission. For to permit, is merely to leave one to his own course. From A.S. alef-an, is formed O.E. alleuin, and the modern v. allow. Instead of lewyt, in edit. 1648, leasome is substituted; which is indeed a derivative from the v. V. Lesum.

- Thai durst than abid no mar; Bot fled scalyt, all that thai war: And levyt in the bataill sted Weill mony off thair gud men ded.

Isl. leif-a, linguere.

To LEW, v. a. To warm any thing moderately; usually applied to liquids; lewed warmed, made tepid, S.B.

MoesG. liuhad is used by Ulph. to denote a fire. Was warmjands sik at liuhada; Was warming himself at a fire; Mark xv. 54. The word properly signifies light; and has been transferred to fire, perhaps, because the one depends on the other. Our v. is evidently the same with Teut. lauw-en, tepefacere, te-

Ibid. 243. 52.

This word is used by Wiclif.

"I wolde that thou were coold either hoot, but for thou art lewe, and neither coold neither hoot, I schal bigyune to caste thee out of my mouthe."

Apocalyps, c. 3.

Teut. Germ. lauw, Belg. liew, low, Su.G. ly, whence liom, lium, Isl. lyr, hlyr, id. A.S. hleoth, tepor, must be radically the same; as Belg. laewte, liewte, are synon. Ihre and Wachter view the Goth. terms as allied to Gr. χλιαινω, tepefacio. With more certainty we may say that an Isl. v., now obsolete, claims this term as one of its descendants. This is hloa, to be warm. Heilog votn hloa; Aquae sacrae (in coelo) calent; Edda, App. 12. G. Andr. p. 114. A.S. hliw-an, hleow-an, tepere, fovere, is synon. Mr. Tooke views lew, A.S. hliw, hleow, as the part. past of this v.

To LEWDER, v. n. To move heavily, S.B. But little speed she came, and yet the swate Was drapping frae her at an unco rate; Showding frae side to side, and lewdring on, With Lindy's coat syde hanging on her drone. Ross's Helenore, p. 59.

Thus making at her main, and lewdring on, Thro' scrubs and craigs, with mony a heavy groan-Ibid. p. 61.

This is radically the same with E. loiter. Teut. leuter-en, loter-en, morari; probably form laet, Su.G. lat, piger, lazy.

LEWIS, Lewyss, s. pl. Leaves of trees.

-Lewyss had lost thair colouris of plesence. Wallace, iv. 8. MS.

All sidis tharof, als fer as ony seis, Was dek and couerit with there dedely lewis. Doug. Virgil, 170. 32.

LEWIT. V. LAWIT. Hence,

LEWITNES, s. Ignorance, want of learning. Quhare ocht is bad, gais mys, or out of gre, My lewitnes, I grant, has all the wyte. Doug. Virgil, 272. 23.

LEWS, s. pl.

For from Dumfermling to Fife-ness, I do know none that doth possess His Grandsire's castles and his tow'rs: All is away that once was ours.-For some say this, and some say that, And others tell, I know not what. Some say, the Fife Lairds ever rews, Since they began to take the lews: That bargain first did brew their bale, As tell the honest men of Creil.

Watson's Coll. i. 27.

The only conjecture I can form, as to this phrase, take the lews, is that it signifies, "take state upon them," or "shew an ambition for rank." Fr. lieu denotes not only a place, but quality, rank, state. This sense agrees with the reason assigned, in the progress of the poem, for the change of property. V. GOODMAN. LIAM, LYAM, s. A string, a thong; pl. lyamis.

Nixt eftir guham the wageoure has ressaue, He that the lesche and lyame in sounder draue.

Doug. Virgil, 145. 45. Of goldin cord wer lyamis, and the stringis Festinnit conjunct in massie goldin ringis.

Palice of Honour, i. 33.

Fr. lien, a string, a cord; Arm. liam, id. liama, to bind, to tie; Basque, lia, a cord. This Bullet views as the origin of all the words above mentioned, as well as of Lat. ligo.

LIART, LYART, adj. 1. Having gray hairs intermixed, S.

At bughts in the morning nae blyth lads are scorning,

But wooers are runkled, liart, and gray.

Flowers of the Forest.

A term appropriated to denote a peculiarity which is often seen to affect aged persons, when some of the locks become gray sooner than others;" Bee.

The passage is otherwise given by Ritson. At harst at the shearing nae younkers are jearing,

The bansters are runkled, lyart, and gray. Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 3.

This word is often conjoined with gray. Efter mid-age the luifar lyis full lang, Quhen that that his hair is turnit lyart gray. Maitland Poems, p. 314.

Elsewhere it is connected with hoir, i. e. hoary. Thus Henrysone speaks of

- Lyart lokis hoir.-—Bann. P. p. 131.

2. Grey-haired in general.

I knaw his canois hare and lyart berde, Of the wysest Romane Kyng into the erde, Numa Pompilius.

Doug. Virgil, 194. 28.

Ir. liath signifies gray, gray-haired. But the resemblance seems accidental. Lord Hailes derives this term from A.S. lae hair, and har hoary, Bann.

P. Note, p. 284. Tyrwhitt observes that this word " belonged originally to a horse of a grey colour." In this sense it is used by Chaucer, when he makes the carter thus address his horse:

That was wel twight, min owen liard boy.

Freres T.

The immediate origin is either L.B. liard-us, according to Du Cange, that colour of a horse which the Fr. call gris pommelé, dapple gray; or Ital. leardo. In the same sense liard frequently occurs in the O.Fr. romances.

LIBART, LIBBERT, s. A leopard.

The mast cowart

He maid stoutar then a libart.

Barbour, xv. 524. MS.

He also uses libbard, Ibid. xiv. 2. which occurs in E. works.

Alem. libaert, Belg. libaerd, id. O.E. liberd. LIBBERLAY, s. A large staff or baton.

Than up he stert, and tulk ane libberlay Intill his hand, and on the flure he stert.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 82.

"Libbet, a great cudgel, used to knock down fruit from the trees, and to throw at cocks. Kent." Gl. Grose.

LIBBERLY, s.

With twa men and ane varlot at his bak; And ane libberly ful lytil to lak; With ane wald he baith wod and wraith Quha at him speirit how sald he the claith? Priests of Peblis, p. 11.

Wax or worth, or rather some word of two syllables, as become, seems wanting in the third line. It may denote a servant of some description; as corr. from livery, Germ. liberei, vestis servientium. But more probably, it is the same with the preceding word; as denoting, that the varlet, for the defence of his master, carried a staff, which was by no means to be despised. Thus it appears that, more than three centuries ago, that self-important thing, called a footman, was no stranger to the use of the cane.

LICAYM, LIKAME, LECAM, LEKAME, 9. 1. An animated body.

Sall never my likame be laid unlaissit to sleip. Quhill I have gart youe berne bow,

As I have maid myne avow.

Gawan and Gol. i. 23. i. e. "My body, freed from the weight of armour, shall not be laid to rest in my bed." In all his lusty lecam nocht ane spot.

King Hart, i. st. 2.

In the same sense it occurs in O.E. In praiers and penaunce, putten hem many In hope to have after heavenrich blisse And for the loue of our Lord, liuyden ful harde, As Ankers & Hermets, that hold hem in her selles And coueten nought in countrey, to carien

For no liquerous liuelod, her lykam to please. P. Ploughman, Sign. A. 1. edit. 1561.

2. A dead body, a corpse.

His frosty mouth I kissit in that sted, Rycht now manlik, now bar, and brocht to ded; And with a claith I couerit his licaym.

Wallace, vii. 281. MS.

A.S. lichama, Isl. lykame, Su.G. lekamen, anc. likama, Alem. lihham, Germ. leichnam, Dan. legeme, corpus. Some view it as compounded of lic the body, and MoesG. ahma the spirit; others, of lic and A.S. hama a covering. Somner, who gives the latter etymon, thinks that the term properly denotes the covering of the body, i. e. the skin. V. Lik.

LICHELUS, adj.

He scalkt him fowlar than a fuil; He said he was ane lichelus bul, That croynd even day and nycht.

Maitland Poems, p. 360.

This, I suspect, is an error for licher-us, lascivious. Or, it may be a word of the same signification, allied to Fland. lack, lascivus, Germ. laich-en, lascivire, scortari, laek-en, saltare, Su.G. lek-a, ludere, lascivire. Dunbar uses lichour for lecher, and lichroun for lechery.

LYCHLEFUL, adj. Contemptuous; corr. lyth-leful.

"And quhasaeuir sais to his brothir racha, (that is ane lythleful crabit word), he is giltie and in dangeir of the counsell." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 48. b. V. LICHTLY, adj.

LYCHT, adj. Cheerful, merry.

Bot his vysage semyt skarsly blyith, Wyth luke doun kast, as in his face did kyith That he was sum thing sad and nothing lycht. Doug. Virgil, 197. 5.

LICHTER, LICHTARE, adj. Delivered of a child, S.B.

Sevyn hundyr wynter and sextene, Quhen lychtare wes the Virgyne clene, Pape of Rome than Gregore.

Wyntown, v. 13. 382.

Willie's ta'en him o'er the faem, He's wooed a wife, and brought her hame; He's wooed her for her yellow hair, But his mother wrought her meikle care; And meikle dolour gar'd her drie. For lighter she can never be, But in her bour she sits wi' pain, And Willie mourns o'er her in vain. Minstrelsy Border, ii. 29.

O! is my corn a' shorn, he said; Or is my toors a' won? Or my lady lichter, sen the streen, Of a dochter or a son?

Old Ballad.

Toors a' won, turfs all dried.

This phraseology occurs in the Legend of St. Margrete; where a curious account is given of the imagined power of fairies, or of wizards, over unblisted. i. e. unbaptised, children.

Ther ich finde a wiif, That lizter is of barn, Y com ther also sone, As euer ani arn: Zif it be unblisted, Y croke it fot or arm; Other the wiif her seluen, Of childehed be forfarn.

V. Gl. Compl. S. p. 311.

The same word is used by R. Brunne, p. 310.

The quene Margerete with childe then was sche,
The kyng bad hir not lete, bot com to the north cun(re

Unto Brotherton, on wherfe ther scho was & lighter of a sonne, the child hight Thomas.

This mode of expression, as it is evidently very ancient, seems to have been common to the Northern nations. Isl. Ad verda liettare, eniti partum; in our very sense, literally, "to be lichter:" The opposite is, oliette kona, gravida mulier; G. Andr. p. 165. Su.G. olaett, id. from Isl. liette, levo, attollo; liett-ur, Su.G. laett, levis, light.

LYCHTLY, adj. Contemptuous.

His lychtly scorn he sall rapent full sor, Bot power faill, or I sall end tharfor.

Wallace, viii. 51. MS.

It is also used as a noun, signifying the act of slighting. "As good give the lightly as get it," S. Prov. Rudd.

From A.S. liht and lic, q. having the appearance of lightness.

To Lichtlie, Lycurly, Lightlie, v. a. 1. To undervalue, to slight, to despise; also written luthly: S.

lythly; S. G. Bot nou sen that ar cum to stait and dignite is trocht me, that ar be cum ingrat, and lychtleis me."

Compl. S. p. 199.

"But the king of Scotland was greatly commoved through his passage into England; not only he himself lightlied by the earl of Douglas, but also he thought some quiet draught to be drawn betwixt the earl of Douglas and the king of England to his great dishonour and offence." Pitscottie, p. 35.

"Trewlie till thame quhilk contemnis, dispysis, and lythleis him and his godly lawis, he is ane mychty and potent inge, to quhais powar & will na creatur may mak resistence." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 27. b.

This might seem an errat. for lychleis, did not the same orthography occur Fol. 106. b. 130. b. &c.

Ay vow and protest that ye care na for me, And whiles ye may lightly my beauty a wee; But court nae anither, tho' jokin ye be, For fear that she wyle your fancy frae me. Burns, iv. 98.

2. To slight, in love, S.

I lean'd my back unto an aik,
I thought it was a trusty tree;
But first it bow'd, and syne it brak,
Sae my true love did lightly me.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 156.

I have met with no similar v. in the cognate languages. This is evidently formed from the adj.

LYCHTLYNESS, s. Contempt, derision.

He gat a blaw, thocht he war lad or lord, That proferryt him ony lychtlynes.

IVallace, i. 349. MS.

In lychtlynes thai maid ansuer him till, And him dyspysyt in thar langage als. Ibid. xi. 166. MS.

For thai ware few, and thai mony, Thai lete of thame rycht lychtly. Bot swa suld nane do, that ware wys: Wys men suld drede thare innymys; For lychtlynes and succedry Drawys in defowle comownaly.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 53.

LY CHTNIS, s. pl. Lungs. This term is used, as well as lichts, S.; the former, it is supposed, rather in the southern parts.

"I sau ysope, that is gude to purge congelie fleume of the lychtnis." Compl. S. p. 104.

Teut. lichte is the name given to the lungs, according to the general idea, from their lightness; as they are also called loose, from loos, empty, because of their sponginess. V. Jun. Etym.

To LICK, v. a. 1. To strike, to beat, to lash, S.

But Davie, lad, I'm red ye're glaikit; I'm tauld the Muse ye hae negleckit, An' gif it's sae, ye sud be licket Until ye fyke.

Burns, iii. 375.

2. To overcome, S.

Su.G. laegg-a, ferire, percutere. Ihre observes that Plautus uses pugno legere in the same sense; also, scipione legere. He views laegg-a as a diminutive from ligg-a jacere. Isl. lag-a, legg-ia, transfigere, perfodere; alias lagg-a, verberibus caedere. Hence lag, ictus, a stroke. Han geck a lagit; He received a stroke: legg-log, the art of striking, or to express it in the language of this refined age, "the noble science of pugilism." V. Verel. Ind. Germ. leg-en, ponere, also signifies sternere, prosternere, facere ut jaceat; like A.S. lecg-an, which has both senses, jacere; pulsare, sternere, occidere. Somn., Benson.

Lick, s. A stroke, a blow, S. To give one his licks, to beat, to chastise one; a vulgar phrase.

When he committed all these tricks, For which he well deserv'd his licks, With red-coats he did intermix.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 28.

Johnson mentions this as a low word, used by Dryden. He derives it from the verb, while he has mentioned no similar sense of the latter. The v. lick is indeed used as a provincial term, both in the N. and S. of England.

LICK, s. A wag, one who plays upon another, S.

He's naithing but a shire daft lick, And disna care a fiddlestick, Altho' your tutor Curl and ye Shou'd serve him sae in elegy.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 342.

And was nae Willy a great lown, As shyre a lick as e'er was seen?

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 272.

Perhaps from Su.G. lek-a, Isl. leik-a, to play. It may, however, be allied to A.S. liccet-an to dissemble, to feign, liccetere a hypocrite; lycce, a liar. LICK-SCHILLING, s. A term of reproach expressive of poverty.

-Lick-schilling in the mill-house.

Dunbur, Evergreen, ii. 60. st. 25. i. e. one who lives by licking what is called schilling at a mill. V Schilling.

LICK-WAKE. V. LYK-WAIK.

LIDDER, LIDDIR, adj. 1. Inactive, sluggish. A. Bor. lither.

Ye war not wount to be sa liddir ilk ane At nycht batellis and werkis Veneriane.

Doug. Virgil, 391. 23. Ibid. 10.7.

Lidder spede, slow progress. 2. Not forward, in comparison of others.

Thocht I be in my asking lidder, I pray thy Grace for to considder, Thow hes maid baith Lordis and Lairdis, And hes geuin mony riche rewairdis, To thame that was full far to seik, Quhen I lay nichtlie be thy cheik.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 262. 263. 3. "Loathsome," Gl. Sibb.

It is used by Douglas in a sense apparently different from that of sluggish, in the description of Cha-

His smottrit habit ouer his schulderis lidder Hang peuagely knyt with ane knot togidder. Virgil, 173. 47.

This corresponds to—

Sordidus ex humeris nodo dependet amictus.

Rudd. refers to A.S. lythre, nequam. But this seems to have no affinity. It is probably formed as a comparative from lith mollis, lenis; whence lithnesse inertia. Germ. liederlich signifies careless, negligent. It may be allied to Su.G. lat, Isl. latur, lazy, laettia, laziness. Isl. leidur, however, is rendered turpis, sordidus, Sw. leed, from Isl. leid-a, taedio afficere, molestum et aegre alicui facere, ut ab incaepto desistat; Verel. Ind. Hence, he adds, Ital. laido, Fr. laide, foedus, sordidus.

LIDDERLIE, adv. Lazily.

—Debora rulit Juda

With spreit of prophecie,

Quhen men wes sueir, and durst not steir; But lurkit lidderlie.

Arbuthnot, Maitland Poems, p. 144. LIE, adj. Sheltered, warm, S.-LYE, s. Shelter. V. LE.

LIESOME, adj. "Warm, sultry," Gl. Shirr. Aberd. This explanation seems to refer to the following Ay, Ned, says she, this is a liesome night! It is, says he; I fear that birn's no light. Ye better lat me ease you o't a wee, It winna be sae great a lift to me.

Shirref's Poems, p. 90.

The word, as used in this sense, must have a common fountain with LE and LITHE, calm, q. v.

LYFLAT, adj. Deceased.

A child was chewyt thir twa luffaris betuene, Quhilk gudly was, a maydyn brycht and schene; So forthyr furth, be ewyn tyme off hyr age, A squier Schaw, as that full weyll was seyne, This lyflat man hyr gat in mariage. Rycht gudly men came off this lady ying.

Wallace, vi. 71. MS.

In Gl. Perth edit. ly flat is absurdly rendered, the very same. In edit. 1648 it is life lait, q. lately in life. In the same sense late is still used. The term, however, has most affinity to Su.G., Isl. liftat, loss of life, amissio vitae, interitus, Verel.; from lif vita, and lat-a perdere; Isl. lata lifid, liftat-ast, perdere vitam, to die; liflatinn, fato sublatus, defunctus, ibid. The old bard, by giving this designation to the Squire Schaw, who had married Wallace's daughter, means to say that he had died only a short while before he wrote.

LYFLAT, s. Course of life, mode of living. As I am her, at your charge, for plesance, My lyflat is bot honest chewysance. Flour off realmys forsuth is this regioun, To my reward I wald haiff gret gardoun.

Wallace, ix. 375. MS. Edit. 1648, life-lait. A.S. lif-lade, vitae iter, from lif life, and lade a journey, or peregrination. Wallace means that he had nothing for his support but what he won by his sword.

LIFT, LYFT, s. The firmament, the atmosphere.

- With that the dow

Heich in the lift full glaide he gan behald, And with hir wingis sorand mony fald.

Doug. Virgil, 144. 53.

"If the lift fall, we'll a' gather laverocks, a proverb used when a person expresses improbable expectations." Gl. Compl.S. More generally, "May be the lift will fall, and smore the laverocks;" spoken to those who are afraid of every thing evil befalling themselves or others.

Another proverb is used, in relation to one who possesses great power of wheedling. It evidently alludes to the idea of the fascinating power of serpents, by means of their breath. He could souck the larricks out of the lift, S.B.

Lyfte and lefte seem to have been used in the same sense, O.E. although overlooked by Jun., Hearne, and other etymologists.

The hurde he thulke tyme angles synge ywys Up in the lufte a murye song, & that songe was

R. Glouc. p. 280.

A voyce was herde on hygh the lefte, Of whiche all Rome was adradde.

Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 46. b.

The latter may, however, signify the left hand, sinistra; this being a bad omen.

A.S. lyft aer, Alem. lupht, Su.G. luft; Isl. loft, lopt, id. alopte in aera, a lopt in aerem levatum, lopt-a in aerem a terra levo, (G. Andr.) E. aloft. Thus it would appear that this is the origin of the v. lift, to elevate, q. to carry up into the air. Some have derived A.S. heof-an, heaven, from the Gothic verbs signify to heave. But Schilter renders it q. hochfan, summum aulaeum, because it extends like a high curtain; vo. Ban.

I find that Mr. Tooke inverts the etymon given of lift. He views the S. term, signifying firmament, as merely hlifod, the past part. of A.S. hlif-ian, to elevate; and as equivalent to heaven, from heaf-an, id. Divers. Purley, ii. 161. 162.

To LIFT, v. a. To carry off by theft, especially used with respect to cattle, S.

This term has been adopted by those who, living on the confines of the Highlands, did not deem it expedient to give its proper name to a practice formerly sanctioned by the most powerful chieftains.

It seems to be merely an accidental coincidence that MoesG. hlift-us signifies a thief, and hlif-un to steal. Junius, however, is uncertain whether to connect it with Gr. 2257715, fur, or with Belg. lift-en levare, tollere; Gl. Goth.

To LIG, v. n. To lie, to recline, Aberd. A. Bor-Slane ar the wachis liggand on the wal, Opnyt the portis, leit in there feris all.

Doug. Virgil, 47. 46.

This night sall ye lig within mine armes, To-morrow my bride sall be.

Edom o' Gordon, Percy's Reliques, i. 88. "Lig ye down there; lie down there. North." l. Grose.

MoesG. lig-an, A.S. licg-an, Isl. lig-a, Su.G. ligg-a, Chauc. ligge, id.

LIGGAR, s. The name given, in the south of S., to a foul salmon.

Perhaps from the preceding v., as fishes of this species become foul by lying too long in the fresh water, and not going to the sea.

LIGGAT, s. A gate, properly a park-gate, Galloway.

LIGLAG, s. 1. A confused noise of tongues as that of a multitude of people talking at the same time, S.

2. A great deal of idle talk, S.

Liklaking occurs in Davie's Life of Alexander, for the clashing of swords; probably from Isl. hlack-a clango; G. Andr. Su.G. klick-a leviusculum crepitum edere, Ihre. Teut. klick-en crepitare, klick verber, ictus, klack-en, verberare resono ictu. The reduplication in the form of our word denotes the reiteration of the same or similar sounds. It may have been softened from click-clack. Su.G. ligg-a, however, signifies to harass by intreaties. LIK, s. A dead body.

Quha aw this lik he bad hir nocht deny. Wallace, scho said, that full worthy has beyne. Than wepyt scho, that peté was to seyne.

Wallace, ii. 331. MS. Isl. lyk, Su.G. lik, A.S. lic. id. The Su.G. term primarily signifies an animated body; in a secondary sense, one that is destitute of life. MoesG. leik, Isl. lyk, A.S. lyc, are used with the same latitude. Hence Isl. lyk kysta a coffin, lyk born a bier. V. LICAYM.

LYK, LIKE, adj. Used as the termination of many words in S., which in E. are softened into ly. It is the same with A.S. lic, lice; and denotes resemblance.

Ihre observes, with very considerable ingenuity: "The Latins would hardly have known the origin of their terms talis, qualis, but from our word lik. For cognate dialects can scarcely have any thing more near, than qualis, and the term used by Ulph., quileiks, Alem. uniolih; similis, and MoesG. samaleiks; talis and Goth. tholik, &c. Thus it appears, what is the uniform meaning of the Lat. terminations in lis, as puerilis, virilis, &c. with the rest which the Goths constantly express by lik, barnslig, manlig. Both indeed mark similitude to the noun to which they are joined, i. e. what resembles a man or boy. I intentionally mention these, as unquestionable evidences of the affinity of the languages of Greece and Rome to that of Scythia; of which those only are ignorant, who have never compared them, which those alone deny, who are wilfully blind in the light of noon-day." V. Lik.

LYK, Lik, v. impers. Lyk til us, be agreeable to LIKING, LIKYNG, I. Pleasure, delight.

It occurs in that beautiful passage in The Bruce:
A! fredome is a noble thing!
Fredome mayss man to haiff liking!
Fredome all solace to man giffis;
He levys at ess, that frely levys.

Barbour, i. 226. MS.

2. A darling, an object that gives delight.

And I sall fallow the in faith, or with fayis be

A.S. licung, pleasure, delight.

LYKLY, adj. Having a good appearance, S. Off lykly men that born was in Ingland, Be suerd and fyr that nycht deit v thousand.

Wallace, vii. 513. MS.

This word is used by Shakespeare. I take notice of it, merely to observe that Su.G. lyklig signifies, bono similis, sat bonus; according to Ihre, from lik good. Isl. liklig, id. madur likligste, vir aspectu pulcherrimus; Heims Kr. Tom. i. p. 280. From lik, bonus, Ihre derives lik-a to please, because we are pleased with what is beautiful.

To Likly, v. a. To adorn, to render agreeable. So me behuffit whilum, or be dum,

Doug. Virgil, 5. 18.

Formed from the adj.

LYK-WAIK, LIKE WALK, s. The watching of a dead body during night.

Als mony syne he takin has anone, Bred and vpbrocht besyde the flude Ufens, Quham that he ettilles for to send from thens, To Pallas like walkis and obsequies, To strow his funeral fyre of birnand treis As was the gise, with blude of prisoneris, Eftir the auld rytes into mortall weris.

Doug. Virgil, 336. 4.

Mr. Brand supposes that Pennant has erroneously written late-wake; Popular Antiquities, p. 26. But this is the modern corruption of the term in S.

Sibb. uses this improper orthography. Lye has justly observed, that walk is used by Douglas merely in the sense of wake, it being common with S. writers to insert l; Jun. Etym. The word is evidently formed from A S. lic a body, and wac-ian to watch. V. Lik.

This ancient custom most probably originated from a silly superstition, with respect to the danger of a corpse being carried off by some of the agents of the invisible world, or exposed to the ominous liberties of brute animals. But, in itself, it is certainly a decent and proper one; because of the possibility of the person, considered as dead, being only in a swoon. Whatever was the original design, the lik-wake seems to have very early degenerated into a scene of festivity extremely incongruous to the melancholy occasion.

Pennant gives an amusing account of the strange mixture of sorrow and joy in the late-wakes of our Highlanders.

"The Late-wake is a ceremony used at funerals. The evening after the death of any person, the relations and friends of the deceased meet at the house, attended by bagpipe or fiddle; the nearest of kin, be it wife, son, or daughter, opens a melancholy ball, dancing and greeting, i. e. crying violently at the same time; and this continues till day light; but with such gambols and frolics among the younger part of the company, that the loss which occasioned them is often more than supplied by the consequences of that night. If the corpse remain unburied for two nights, the same rites are renewed. Thus, Scythian like, they rejoice at the deliverance of their friends out of this life of misery. This custom is an ancient English one, perhaps a Saxon. Chaucer mentions it in his Knight's Tale, v. 2960.

——Shall not be told for me, How Arcite is brent to ashen cold; Ne how the liche-wake was yhald All thilke night.——

It was not alone in Scotland that these watchings degenerated into excess. Such indecencies we find long ago forbidden by the church. In vigiliis circa corpora mortuorum vetantur chorew et cantilenæ, seculares ludi et alii turpes et fatui. Synod. Wigorn. An. 1240." Pennant's Tour in S., 1769, p. 112.

The lik-wake is retained in Sweden, where it is called wakstuga, from wak-a to watch, and perhaps stuga, a room, an apartment; or cottage. Ihre observes, that "although these wakes should be dedicated to the contemplation of our mortality, they have been generally passed in plays and compotations, whence they were prohibited in public edicts;" vo. Wake.

Not only did the Synod of Worcester prohibit songs, and other profane, loose, and foolish amusements; but enjoined that none should attend wakes, except for the purposes of devotion. Nec ad dictas Vigilias aliqui veniant, nisi causa devotionis. Du Cange, vo. Vigiliae.

LIL FOR LAL, tit for tat, retaliation.
Your catale and your gude thai ta;
Your men tha spar nought for to sla,
Quhen ye set you thaim for to grewe:
To serve you sua tha ask na leve,
Bot ay tha qwyte you lil for lal,
Or that thai skale thare markat all.

Wyntown, ix. 13. 63.

At first view this phrase seemed to have some reference to musical symphony, q. one stroke for another. V. Lill. But I have accidentally discovered, in the laws of Alfred, what must undoubtedly have been the origin of the expression. It is a law requiring strict retaliation; Honda for honda, fet for fet, berning for berning, wund with wund, lael with laele; i. e. Manum pro manu, pedem pro pede, adustionem pro adustione, vulnus pro vulnere, vibicem pro vibice, or, stripe for stripe. It is indeed the very language of the A.S. version of Ex. xxi. 24. 25. only with is used throughout the passage there, but for in some of the clauses here; both having the same meaning. Thus lael for laele would be precisely the same as lael with laele.

LILL, s. The hole of a wind instrument, S. V. Gl. Ramsay. In Edit. 1800, this word in pl.

is erroneously printed lilts.

Go on, then, Galloway, go on,

And Rosie lilts swiftly the "Milking the Ewes."
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 106.

Lilts sweetly, Edit. Foulis, 1768.

In this sense it is also applied to the music of birds.

The sun looks in o'er the hill-head, and The laverock is liltin' gay.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 152. 2. To sing on a high or sharp key, S.

Wha winna dance, wha will refuse to sing?
What shepherd's whistle winna lilt the spring?
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 190.

Hence, perhaps, the phrase, to lilt and dance, to dance with great vivacity; Fife.

4. To lilt out, to take off one's drink merrily, S. an oblique sense.

Tilt it lads, and lilt it out,
And let us ha'e a blythsome bowt.

plied to what is sung, S.

Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

"The lilt-pype," says Ritson, "is probably the bag-pipe." Essay on S. song, cxv. This conjecture is confirmed, as far as it can be by analogy, from the sameness of the signification of Teut. lulpipe, lulle-pijpe, tibia utricularis; whence lulle-pijper, a player on the bag-pipe, utricularius ascaules, Kilian.

LIME, s. Glue; Gl. Sibb. Teut. lijm, gluten. LIMITOUR, s. An itinerant and begging friar.

I charge the yit as I have ellis, Be halie relickis, beidis and bellis, Be ermeitis that in desertis dwellis, Be limitoris and tarlochis.

Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 48.

Skinner supposes that this was a seller of indulgences, thus denominated as limiting or fixing the price for each sin. Jun. defines the term as denoting a friar or monk who discharged his office within certain limits or bounds. From the Visions of P. Ploughman it appears, indeed, that the limitour was properly a confessor, who, by virtue of episcopal letters, although he had no parochial charge, was authorised to hear confession and grant absolution within a certain district. R. de Langland describes him metaphor. in allusion to a surgeon.

Conscience called a leche that coulde well shriue; Go salueth tho that sick ben, & through syn wounded,

Shrift shope sharpe salue, and made hem do penaunce,

For her misdedes that they wrought had.—
The frere hereof harde, and hyed hym ful fast
To a lord for a letter, leave to have curen,
As a curatour he were; and came with his letters,
Boldly to the bishop, and hys briefe had
In countreys there he came in confession to here.

The writer then gives a character of a friar of this description; which, in that age, it may be supposed, was by no means singular.

I knew such one once, not eyght winters passed, Came in thus coped, at a court where I dwelled, And was my lordes leche, and my ladyes both. And at last this limitour, tho my lorde was oute, He salued so our women, till some were with childe.

—Here is Contrition, quod Conscience, my cousin sore wounded.

Comfort him, quod Conscience, & take kepe to hys soores.

The plasters of the Person, and pouders beaten to sore.

He letteth hem lig ouer long, & loth is to chaunge hem.

From lenten to lenten his plasters biten.

That is ouer long, quod this limitor, I leue I shall amend it;

And goeth & gropeth Contrition, and gaue him a plaster

Of a priny payment, and I shall praye for you.— Thus he goth, & gathereth, and gloseth ther he shriueth,

Till contrition had cleane forgotten to crie, & to wepe,

And wake for his workes, as he was wont to do. P. Ploughman, Fol. ult. Edit. 1561.

The character given by Chaucer is nearly alike.

A Frere ther was, a wanton and a mery,

A Limitour, a ful solempne man.

In all the ordres foure is non that can So moche of daliance and fayre langage. —His tippet was ay farsed ful of knives, And pinnes, for to given fayre wives.

—Somwhat he lisped for his wantonnesse, To make his English swete upon his tonge; And in his harping, whan that he hadde songe, His eyen twinkeled in his hed aright,

As don the sterres in a frosty night.

Cant. T. Prol. v. 208—271.

LIMMAR, LIMMER, s. 1. A scoundrel, a worthless fellow.

"The noblis hauand gret indignation in lykwise of the trubyl falling baith to tham and thair commonis, send ane certane of gentyl men as ambassatouris to king Gryme, persuading hym in thair name to deuoid hym of vnhappy & mischeuous limmaris, in quhom he had ouir gret confidence." God send grace to our Quene Regent, Be law to mak sic punishment, To gar lymmars forbeir For till oppress the innocent, Now into this new yeir.

Maitland Poems, p. 279. ur laws as equivalent to thick

Limmer is used in our laws as equivalent to thief, riever.

"Sik hes bene, and presentlie is the barbarous cruelties, and dailie heirschippes of the wicked thieves and limmers of the clannes and surnames following, &c.—This mischief and schamefull disordour increasis, and is nurished be the oversight, hounding-out, receipt, mainteinance, and not punishment of the thieves, limmers and vagaboundes." Acts, Ja. VI. 1594. c. 227; Murray.

Mr. Pinkerton justly observes, that lymmar, like shrew E., was anciently masculine. It is still thus used, Aberd.

I hitcht about Lyrnessus wa'as
Till I my time cou'd see;

Syne gart the lymmers tak their heels.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 19.

V. also p. 2.

Chaucer uses limer for a blood-hound, Fr. limier, id. Hence it might be used metaphor. for one, who, like a blood-hound, was constantly in pursuit of prey. Teut. luymer, however, is rendered, insidiator, from luym-en observare, insidiari. According to the latter, limmar might originally denote one who lays snares for others, who lies in wait to deceive.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. limon, limons, id. Whence the phrase cheval limonier, a thill horse. Menage ridiculously imagines that limon is instead of timon, from temo. It may naturally be traced to Isl. lim, pl. limar, Sw. lem, pl. lemmar, rami arborum; Su.G. lima, laem, lemm, tabula, asser.

Ibid. ii. 49.

It seems uncertain which of these is the primary sense. For A.S. hlynna denotes a torrent, Isl. lind a cascade, aqua scaturiens, Verel. Ind.: and C.B. lhynn, Arm. len, Ir. lin, a pool.

I have met with no evidence, that lyn is used in the sense given by Sibb., as denoting "two opposite contiguous cliffs or heughs covered with brushwood."

LIN, LINN, v. s. To cease.

LINCUM LICHT.

Thair kirtillis wer of lincum licht, Weill prest with mony plaittis.

Chr. Kirk. st. 2.

This has been understood as denoting some cloth, of a light colour, made at Lincoln. Mr. Pinkerton, however, says, that it is a common Glasgow phrase for very licht, and that no particular cloth was made at Lincoln; Maitland Poems, p. 450, Append. Sibb. also thinks it not probable that this signifies "any cloth manufactured at Lincoln, but merely linen;" Chron. S.P. ii. 368.

With respect to the phrase being used in Glasgow, I can only say, that during twenty years residence there I never heard it. But although it were used, it would rather strengthen the idea that the allusion were to Lincoln; as suggesting that the colour referred to, which was brought from that city, excelled any other.

It confirms the common interpretation, that the phrase, lincum green frequently occurs.

His merryemen are a' in ae liverye clad, O' the Linkome grene sae gave to see.

Outlaw Murray, Minstrelsy Border, i. 8. As Spenser uses the phrase Lincolne greene, there is no room to doubt as to the meaning of the allu-

It seems scarcely necessary to add, that the term lincum is not only used with respect to the colour, but the peculiar texture or mode of manufacture.

LIND, LYND, s. A teil or lime tree, E. linden.

Licht as the lynd is a common allusion, because of the lightness of this tree; as Virg. uses the phrase, tilia levis, Georg. i. 173.

-Set in stede of that man, licht as lynd, Outhir ane cloud or ane waist puft of wynd. Doug. Virgil, 316. 6.

I wait it is the spreit of Gy, Or ellis fle be the sky. And lycht as the lynd.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 173. st. 2.

It occurs also in P. Ploughman.

Was never leafe upon lind lighter thereafter. Fol. 7. a.

This allusion seems to have had its origin from the use anciently made of the bark of this tree; especially as bonds and fetters were formed of it. It was employed for this purpose so early as the time of Pliny. Inter corticem et lignum tenues tunicas multiplici membrana, e quibus vincula tiliae vocantur. Hist. Lib. 16. c. 14. Wachter observes, that the Germans call bonds of this kind lindenbast, i. e. vincula tiliacea; and that, from these fetters, the Swedes not only give the name of linden true, but also of bast, to the tree itself, from bind-en to

Under the lind, " under the teil tree, or any tree, or in the woods; a way of speaking very usual with poets." Rudd.

I haif bene banneist undir the lynd This lang tyme, that nane could me fynd, Quhill now with this last eistin wynd, I am cum heir.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 176.

Lord Hailes renders this phrase, "under the line or equator." As this language was used with respect to those who were in a rambling state, either from choice or from necessity, the poet seems to play on the words by his allusion to the eastern wind; as if this had brought him back from the regions under the equator. But at most it is merely a lusus poeticus. The phraseology properly signifies, being in the woods.

Thare housis thay forhow, and leuis waist, And to the woddis socht, as thay war chaist, And lete thare nekkis and hare blaw with the Sum vtheris went yelland vnder the lynd, Quhyl a the skyis of thare skrik fordynnys. Doug. Virgil, 220. 40.

Here under the lynd is used as synon. with to the woddis. We have a similar phrase in Adam Bell, Cloudeslé walked a lytle beside, Look't under the grene wood linde.

Percy's Reliques, i. 128.

That this is the sense appears also from a passage in Gower.

The kynges doughter, which this sigh, For pure abasshe drew her adrigh, And helde her close vnder the bough.-And as she loked her aboute, She sawe, comende vnder the lunde, A woman vpon an hors behynde.

Conf. Am. Fol. 70. a. b. I find one instance of the phrase being used with the prep. on, as would seem, improperly.

> — Grass on ground or beist on lind. Dunbar, Ever-green, ii. 57. st. 19.

The teil tree is celebrated by the old Northern Scalds. G.Andr. quotes the following passage from an ancient Isl. poem, where this tree is introduced as an emblem of the return of Spring.

Vex ydn, vellur rodna, Verpur lind, thrimur snerper. Crescit assiduus labor, prata rubescunt, Mutat colores Tilia, praelia exasperantur.

As bonds are made of the bark of the teil-tree, Ihre seems to think that it is denominated lynd from this circumstance, from lind-a to bind. But G. Andr. gives the word as primarily denoting a tree, and only applied, in a more confined sense, to the teil-tree: Lind, arbor, tilia, p. 167. Lundr denotes a wood: and it deserves observation, that Isl. writers use this term precisely in the same sense in which lind is used by our old poets. A ec veg til lundar; Ad sylvam mihi eundum est:——in quibus verbis poeta exul, et ad sylvas damnatus, suum statum respexit. Gl. Landnamabok. C.B. llwyn also signifies a wood, a tree.

Thus, it seems natural to conclude, either that this phrase, under the lynd, did not originate from lind the teil-tree, but Isl. lund-ur a wood; or, that the name, originally denoting a wood in general, came to be transferred to one particular species of tree, because of the great partiality that our ances. tors had for it, both because of its beauty and its usefulness.

I know not whether this may be allied to Teut. lingh-en, to lengthen, or Ir. ling-im to skip or go away, also to fling or dart.

To Link, v. n. 1. To walk smartly, to trip, S. Quhen scho was furth and frie sche was rycht fain And merrylie linkit unto the mure.

Henrysone, Chron. S.P. i. 113. The lasses now are linking what they dow, And faiked never a foot for height nor how. Ross's Helenore, p. 73. 2. Used to denote the influx of money.

My dadie's a delver of dikes.

My mither can card and spin;
And I am a fine fodgel lass,

And the siller comes linkin in.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 242.

This seems a frequentative from Ling, v.

Su.G. lunk-a conveys an idea quite the reverse, tarde incedere, ut solent defatigati; Ihre.

LINGEL, LINGLE, s. 1. Shoemaker's thread, S. also pron. lingan, Fr. ligneul. A. Bor. langot, the strap of the shoe, Gl. Grose.

Nor hinds wi' elson and hemp lingle, Sit soleing shoon out o'er the ingle.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 203.

The canty cobler quats his sta',
His rozet an' his lingans.
His buik has dreed a sair, sair fa'
Frae meals o' bread an' ingans.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 61,

2. A bandage.

—Or louses of thy lingels sa lang as thay may last.

Polwart. V. Bouk.

Linda is the word used in this sense in Su.G.; hence lindebern, a child wrapt in swaddling-clothes. Ital. lunga, a girth or thong of leather.

LINGEL-TAIL'D, adj. A term applied to a woman whose clothes hang awkwardly, from the smallness of her shape below, S.

LINGET, s. Properly, a rope binding the fore foot of a horse to the hinder one, to prevent him from running off, Ang. Su.G. lin-a, funis crassior. V. Langet.

LINGET-SEED, s. The seed of flax. This is usually called linget, S.B. pron. like Fr. linge, flax; A.S. linsaed, lini semen.

"Sik-like, that nane of the subjects of this realme, take upon hand, to carry or transport foorth of this realme, ony maner of linning claith, linget seed," &c. Acts, Ja. VI. 1573. c. 59. Murray.

LINGIS, Lings, term. Sommer has observed that this termination, added to an adj., forms a subst. denoting an object possessing the quality expressed by the adj. Hence also, perhaps, the adv. of this form, as backlingis, blindlingis, half-lingis, langlingis, newlingis, &c.

Ling in A.S. is also a common termination, denoting diminution.

LINGIT, adj. Flexible, pliant; lingit claith, cloth of a soft texture, E. Loth. "Lingey, limber. North." Gl. Grose. V. LENYIE.

LINKS, s. pl. 1. The windings of a river, S.

"Its numerous windings, called links, form a great number of beautiful peninsulas, which, being of a very luxuriant and fertile soil, gave rise to the following old rhyme:

The lairdship of the bonny Links of Forth, Is better than an Earldom in the North."

Nimmo's Stirlingshire, p. 439. 440. 2. The rich ground lying among the windings of a river, S.

Attune the lay that should adorn Ilk verse descriptive o' the morn;

Vor. II.

Whan round Forth's Links o' waving corn
At peep o' dawn,
Frae broomy know to whitening thorn
He raptur'd ran.

Macneill's Poems, ii. 13.

3. The sandy flat ground on the sea-shore, covered with what is called bent-grass, furze, &c. S. This term, it has been observed, is nearly synon. with downs, E. In this sense we speak of the Links of Leith, of Montrose, &c.

"Upoun the Palme Sonday Evin, the Frenche had thameselfis in battell array upoun the Links without Leyth, and had sent furth thair skirmischears." Knox's Hist. p. 223.

"In his [the Commissioner's] entry, I think, at Leith, as much honour was done unto him as ever to a king in our country.—We were most conspicuous in our black cloaks, above five hundred on a brae-side in the Links alone for his sight." Baillie's Lett. i. 61.

This passage, we may observe by the way, makes us acquainted with the costume of the clergy, at least when they attended the General Assembly, in the reign of Charles I. The etiquette of the time required that they should all have black cloaks.

- "The island of Westray—contains, on the north and south-west sides of it, a great number of graves, scattered over two extensive plains, of that nature which are called links in Scotland." Barry's Orkney, p. 205. "Sandy, flat ground, generally near the sea," N. ibid.
- 4. The name has been transferred, but improperly, to ground not contiguous to the sea, either because of its resemblance to the beach, as being sandy and barren; or as being appropriated to a similar use, S.

Thus, part of the old Borough-muir of Edinburgh is called Bruntsfield Links. The most probable reason of the designation is, that it having been customary to play at golf on the Links of Leith, when the ground in the vicinity of Bruntsfield came to be used in the same way, it was in like manner called Links.

In the Poems ascribed to Rowley, linche is used in a sense which bears some affinity to this, being rendered by Chatterton, bank.

Thou limed ryver, on this linche mais bleede Champyons, whose bloude wylle wythe this waterres flowe.

Elin. and Jug. v. 37. p. 21.

This is evidently from A.S. hlinc, agger limitaneus; quandoque privatorum agros, quandoque paroecias, et alia loca dividens, finium instar. "A bank, wall, or causeway between land and land, between parish and parish, as a boundary distinguishing the one from the other, to this day in many places called a Linch," Somn.

According to the use of the A.S. term, links might be q. the boundaries of the river. But, I apprehend, it is rather from Germ. lenk-en, flectere, vertere, as denoting the bendings or curvatures, whether of the water, or of the land contiguous to it.

Sir J. Sinclair derives links "from ling, an old English word, for down, heath, or common." Observ. p. 194. But, the term, as we have seen, is sometimes applied to the richest land.

LYNTQUHIT, LINTWHITE, s. A linnet, S., often corr. lintie; Fringilla linota, Linn.

"The lyntquhit sang cunterpoint quhen the oszil yelpit." Compl. S. p. 60.

O sweet ar Coila's haughs an' woods, When lintwhites chaunt among the buds.

Burns, iii. 251.

Larks, gowdspinks, mavises and linties.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 516. V. Goldspink.

A.S. linetwige, Aelfr. Gl.; supposed to receive its name from feeding on the seed of flax, also linet; as for the same reason, in Germ. flachefinke, q. a flax-finch; Sw. hampspink, id., q. a hemp-finch, as feeding on the seed of hemp. C.B. llinos, a linnet, according to Junius, from llin lint.

LIPPER, s. Leprosy.

"Quhen thir ambassatouris was brocht to his presence, he apperit to thair sicht sa ful of lipper, that he was repute be thaym maist horribyll creature in erd." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 19. Lepra infecto. Boeth.

Wyntown writes lepyr. V. Apon.

Fr. lepre, Lat. lepra, id.

LIPPER, adj. 1. Leprous.

"Na lipper men sall enter within the portes of our burgh.—And gif any lipper man vses commonlie contrair this our discharge, to come within our burgh, his claiths quherewith he is cled, sall be taken fra him, and sall be brunt; and he being naked, sall be ejected forth of the burgh." Stat. Gild, c. 15.

2. Applied to fish that are diseased, as synon. with

"They open the fishe, and lukes not quhither they be mysel or lipper fish or not." Chalmerlan Air, c. 21. s. 9. Leprosi is the only word used in the Lat. A.S. hleapere, leprosus.

To LIPPER, v. n. A term used to denote the appearance of foam on the tops of the waves, or of breakers.

Thare, as him thocht, suld be na sandis schald, Nor yit na land birst lippering on the wallis, Bot quhare the flude went styl, and calmyt al is, But stoure or bulloure, murmoure, or mouyng, His steuynnis thidder stering gan the Kyng.

Doug. Virgil, 325. 51.

Hence the tops of broken waves are called Lipperis or lopperis.

This stoure sa bustuous begouth to rise and

Like as the sey changis first his hewe In quhite lopperis by the wyndis blast.

Ibid. 226. 13.

This may either be the same with lapper, to curdle, according to Rudd., sometimes written lopper, "as if the sea were curdled;" or it may be immediately allied to MoesG. hlaup-an, A.S. hleap-an, Su.G. loep-a, currere, whence loepare, cursor; especially as Germ. lauff-en denotes the flowing of water, fluere, manare, and lauff, Su.G. loep, Isl. hlaup, laup, are used as nouns in a similar sense. V. Loup. LIPPIE, s. The fourth part of a peck, S.

"The stipend—consists of 5 bolls of wheat, 33 bolls 3 pecks 1 lippie barley, 9 bolls 1 peck 1 lippie meal." &c. Statist. Acc. P. Dalmenie, i. 236.

Several vestiges of this word remain in modern E. In Sussex, a leap or lib is half a bushel. In Essex, a seed leap or lib is a vessel or basket in which corn is carried; from A.S. leap a basket, saed leap a seed-basket, Ray. "Leap, a large deep basket; a chaff basket, North." Gl. Grose.

It occurs in O.E. "Thei token that that was left of relifis sevene lepfull;" in another MS., "leepis full." Wiclif, Matt. 15. "Seven leepis." Mark 8.

To this agrees Isl. laup calathus, quasillum; Su.G. lop, loep, mensura frumenti, sextam tonnae partem continens; Ihre. He also renders it by modius. For although the cognate terms are used to denote certain measures, these differ much from each other. In Sw. laupsland denotes as much land as is necessary for sowing this quantity of seed. In like manner, in S. we speak of a lippie's sawing, especially as applied to flax-seed, i. e. as much ground as is required for sowing the fourth part of a peck. Hence L. B. lep-a, a measure, according to Lye, vo. Leap, containing two thirds of a bushel. But in the passage quoted by him, it evidently signifies the third part of two bushels. Teut. loope korens denotes a bushel. For loope lands is expl. quadrans jugeri, agri spatium quod modio uno conseri potest; Kilian. Fris. loop, the fourth part of a bushel, synon. with viertele.

To LIPPIN, LYPPYN, LIPPEN, v. n. 1. To expect; sometimes used in vulgar language without any prep., at other times with for, S. Lancash.

This tre may happyn for to get The kynd rwte, and in it be set, And sap to recovyr syne;— Than is to lyppyn sum remede.

Wyntown, vii. 4. 138. The ferd Alysawndyr oure kyngis sone,

And lyppynyt than to be hys ayre.

Ibid. vii. 10. 382.

But some chield ay upon us keeps an ee; And sae we need na lippen to get free.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Ne'er—deal in cantrip's kittle cunning,
To spier how fast your days are running;
But patient lippen for the best,
Nor be in dowy thought opprest.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 123.

2. To lippin in, to put confidence in, to trust to, to have dependence on.

Lippin not Troianis, I pray you in this hors; However it be, I drede the Grekis fors. And thame that sendis this gift always I fere. Doug. Virgil, 40. 13.

Do neuer for schame vnto your self that lak, To lippin in spede of fute, and gyf the bak. Ibid. 329. 18.

3. To lyppyn off, used in the same sense.

The fyrst is, that we had the rycht;

And for the rycht ay God will fycht.

The tothyr is, that thai cummyn ar, For lyppynnyng off thair gret powar, To sek ws in our awne land.

Barbour, xii. 238. MS.

4. To lippen till, to entrust to the charge of one.

1 love yow mair for that lofe ye lippen me till,

Than ony lordschip or land.——

Houlate, ii. 12. MS.

5. To lippin to, to trust to, or confide in; the phraseology commonly used, S.

Lippyn not to yone alliance ready at hand. To be thy mach sall cum ane alienare.

Doug. Virgil, 208. 14.

"Lippen to me, but look to yourself," S. Prov. Kelly.

6. To lippin upon, to depend on for.

"The first command techis the hart to feir God, to beleif fermelie his haly word, to traist vpon God, lippin all gud vpon him, to lufe him, and to loue him thairfore." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 29, 6.

None of our etymologists have given any derivation of this word. But it is unquestionably allied to the different Goth. verbs which have the same signification; although it most nearly resembles the participle.

Moes G. laub-jan, ga-laub-jan, credere; whence ga-laubjand-ans credentes, lippinand, S. ga-laubeins fides. It needs scarcely to be observed, that b and p are often interchanged. Alem. loub-en, gi-loub-en, AS. ge-lyf-en, leaf-an, lef-an, Germ. laub-en, Belg. ge-loov-en, id.

Wyntown, vii. 8. 686. LIRE, Lyr, Lyre, s. 1. The fleshy or muscular parts of any animal, as distinguished from the bones.

Thus it is frequently used by Blind Harry.

Quham euir he strak he byrstyt bayne and lyr.

Wallace, v. 1109. MS.

This seems equivalent to bayne and brawne, ver. 962.

The burly blaide was braid and burnyst brycht, In sonder kerwyt the mailyeis off fyne steyll, Throwch bayne and brawne it prochit euirilkdeill.

Thus it is applied to the flesh of brute animals, offered in sacrifice.

Syne brocht flikerand sum gobbetis of lyre.

Doug. Virgil, 19. 35.
God Bacchus gyftis fast thay multiply,
Wyth platis ful the altaris by and by

And gan do charge, and wourschip with fat lyre.

Ibid. 456. 2.

2. Flesh, as distinguished from the skin that covers it.

Of a sword it is said: What flesh it ever hapneth in, Either in lyre, or yet in skin; Whether that were shank or arm, It shall him do wonder great harm.

Sir Egeir, p. 26. The origin is certainly AS. lire, lacerti, the pulp or fleshy parts of the body; as scanc-lira, the calf of the leg. Rudd. has observed, that S. "they call that the lyre, which is above the knee, in the forelegs of beeves." This has an obvious analogy with Su.G. Dan. laar, Mod. Sax. lurre, femur, the thigh.

The phrase fat lyre used by Doug. would almost suggest that our term had some affinity to Isl. hlyre, lyre, which is the name of the fattest fish, piscis pinguissimi nomen; piscis pinguissimus maris, G. Andr. p. 115. 167. whence hlyrfeit-er, lyrfeit-er, very fat.

LYRE, LYIRE, s. That part of the skin which is colourless, especially as contrasted with those parts in which the blood appears.

As ony rose hir rude was reid, Hir lyre wes lyk the lillie.

Chr. Kirk, st. 3.

Hir lips, and cheikis, pumice fret; As rose maist redolent. With yvoire nek, and pomells round, And comelie intervall. Hir lillie lyire so soft and sound; And proper memberis all, Bayth brichter, and tichter, Then marbre poleist clein.

Maitland Poems, p. 239.

This term is common in O.E. in the same sense. His lady is white as wales bone, Here lere brygte to se upon,

So fair as blosme on tre.

Isumbras, MS. Cott. V. Tyrwh. iv. 321. Her tyre light shone. Launfal. "Lyre," says Mr. Pink., "is common in old English romances for skin, but originally means flesh," Maitl. P. N. 394. But this word is most probably different from the preceding. If its original signification be flesh, it is strange that it should be appropriated to one part of the skin only. It seems also to have quite a different origin. Rudd. mentions Cimb. hlyre gena, a word I have found nowhere else. But it corresponds to AS. kleor, klear, which not only signifies the cheek, but the face, the coun-

LYRE, LAYER, LYAR, s. That species of petrel, called the Shear-water, Procellaria Puffinus,

"The-lyre-is a bird somewhat larger than a pigeon, and though extraordinary fat, and moreover very fishy tasted, is thought by some to be extremely delicious." P. Kirkwall, Statist. Acc. vii. 537.

"This species inhabits also the Orkney isles;—it is called there the lyre; and is much valued, both on account of its being a food, and for its feathers." Penn. Brit. Zool. ii. 552.

"The lyar bird is not peculiar to this island, but abounds far more here than in other places of the country.—This bird makes its nest by digging a hole horizontally in the loose earth, found among the slielvings of high rocks." P. Walls and Flota, Orkney, Statist. Acc. xvii. 322.

"There is a bird, called a layer, here, that hatches in some parts of the rocks. It is reported, that it is only to be found in Dunnet Head, Hoy Head in Orkney, in Wales, and in the Cliffs of Dover, (where it is said to be known by the name of the puffin), and in no other place in Britain." P. Dunnet, Caithness, Statist. Acc. xi. 249.

Pennant says they are "found in the Calf of Man, and as Mr. Ray supposes in the Scilly Isles." There is no reason for supposing the Lyre to be the Puf-Feroensibus, Liere, Brunnich, 119. Penn. Zool. 551. Seren. calls the Shearwater, Larus Niger. May we suppose that this name has originally been. formed from Lar-us? or vice versa.

It is also used as a n. v., to contract, to shrivel,

Isl. lerk-a contrahere; lerkadr contractus, inplicas adductus. Hosur lerkadr at beinum; caligae eirca crura in plicas coactae, Landnam. Gl. In the same sense we say that stockings are lirkit.

LIRK, s. 1. A crease, a mark made by doubling. any thing, S.

2. A fold, a double, S.

3. A wrinkle.

Some loo the courts, some loo the kirk, Some loo to keep their skins frae lirks; For me, I took tham a' for stirks That loo'd na money.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 307.

4. A hollow in a hill.

The hills were high on ilka side, An' the bought i' the lirk o' the hill; And aye, as she sang, her voice it rang, Out o'er the head o' you hill.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 281.

LISS, s. "Remission, or abatement, especially of any acute disease. Fr. and Sax. lisse, remissio, cessatio." Gl. Sibb,

We may add, as cognate terms, Dan. lise, Su.G. lisa, otium, requies a dolore vel sensu quolibet mali. Ihre seems to view Isl. leys-a, A.S. lyse, [lys-an], to loose, as the origin.

LISTARIS, s. pl. The small yard arms.

"Hail on your top sail scheitis, vire your listaris and your top sail trossis, & heise the top sail hiear. Compl. S. p. 63.

Perhaps from list, the border of a garment, or Germ. latz, sinus vestis.

To LIT, LITT, v. a. To dye, to tinge, S. A.Bor. Part. pa. littyt, dyed.

"Na man bot ane burges may buy woll to lit, nor make claith, nor cut claith, without or within bourgh." Burrow Lawes, c. 22.

- Turnus by his hait and recent dede Had with his blude littut the ground al rede. Doug. Virgil, 462. 9.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. lit-um, the supine of lino. Sibb. with far greater propriety mentions Sw. lett-a, id. Onr term is more immediately allied to Isl. lit-a colorare, tingere, litr, Su.G. let, anc. lit, color; hence twaelitt, variegated, q. of two colours; Isl. lit-laus decolor, litklaedi vestes tinctae, litverpur colorem deponens, &c.

This term seems to be confined to the Scandinavian dialects of the Goth. I have, at least, observed no vestige of it in the Germ.

LIT, LITT, s. Colour, dye, tinge, S.

King's Quair, ii. 22. I you beseik my febyl lyffe to respite, That I may leif, and endure yit ane lyte, All pane and labour that you list me send. Doug. Virgil, 263. 34.

The term is used in O.E.

Sithen he gan him drawe toward Normundy, The londe to visite, & to comfort his frendes. He rested bot a lite, a soude the Inglis him sendes.

R. Brunne, p. 81.

2. A small portion.

- I knaw tharin full lyte. Doug. Virgil, 3. 41.

A.S. lyt, lyte, parum, pauci; Su.G. lite, Isl. litt, parum. It is not improbable that this is allied to Su.G. lyte vitium, as littleness implies the idea of defect. Thus the origin may be Isl. liot-a damnum accipere; Verel.

LYTE, s. Elect, contr. of elute, q. v. He stud as Lyte twa yhere owre, And Byschape thretty yhere and foure. Wyntown, vii. 5. 141.

To LITH, LYTH, v. n. To listen, to attend. Than said he loud upone loft, "Lord, will ye lyth, Ye sal nane torfeir betyde, I tak upone hand." Gawan and Gol. iii. 18.

This word is common in O.E. Su.G. lyd-a, Isl. hlyd-a, audire, obedire; hlyding, hlydin, Dan. lydig, obediens. From the v., as Ihre observes, are formed A.S. hlyst-an, Su.G. lyst-ra, lyst-a, hlust-a, lysn-a, Germ. laust-ern, Belg. luyst-ern, E. list, listen.

LITH, s. 1. A joint, S.

2. Used metaphor. to denote the hinge of an argument, S.

The Squire perceiv'd; his heart did dance, For he had fall'n on this perchance. He did admire, and praise the pith of 't, And leugh and said, I hit the lith of 't. Cleland's Poems, p. 31.

A.S. lith, artus, membrum, Isl. litha, id. Verel. Ind. p. 158. This learned writer deduces it from led-a to bend; observing that it properly denotes the flexion and articulation of the joints. Proprie est flexus et commissio articulorum. Alem., Dan., Belg., lid, Chaucer lithe. MoesG. uslitha is used to denote a paralytic person, Matt. 8. 6.; 9. 9. deprived of the use of his limbs; us signifying from or out of. 3. Affectionate, metaphor used. One is said to have a lithe side to a person or thing, when it is meant that he has attachment or regard, S.B.

A.S. hlithe, quietus, tranquillus, hloowth apricitas, sunshine, hleoth-faest calidus, are evidently allied. Leite, locus soli, ascendens inter humiliora terrae, tanquam latibulum depressionis loci; G. Andr. Isl. hlyd dicebatur latus cujusvis montis, potissimum tamen pars montis a ventis frigidioribus maxime aversa. Jun. Et. vo. Lukewarm. V. Le, under which some other cognate terms are mentioned; as both words claim the same origin.

To LYTHE, v. a. To shelter, S.B.

'Twas there the Muse first tun'd his saul To lilt the Wauking of the Faul'. When ance she kindly lyth'd his back, He fan' nae frost.

Shirrefs' Poems, viii. V. the adj.

LYTHE, s. 1. A warm shelter, S.B.

—— She frae ony beeld was far awa',
Except stanesides, and they had little lythe.

Ross's Helenore, p. 58.

2. Encouragement, favour, countenance; metaph. used, S.B.

And he, 'bout Nory now cud see nae lythe, And Bydby only on him looked blythe.

Ross's Helenore, p. 106.

LYTHNES, s. Warmth, heat.

"To excesse, thair may never cum gud nor profit, nor body nor lif is nevir the bettir. And sa it tynis all maner contience, voce, ayud, lythenes and colour." Porteous of Nobilnes, Edin. 1508.

Perhaps it may signify softness, A.S. lithenesse

To LITHE, v.a. 1. To soften.

"I beleif that trew repentance is the special gift of the haly spreit, quhilk be his grace lythis and turnis our hart to God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552. Fol. 119. a.

2. To thicken, to mellow; S. Chesh. Spoken of broth, when thickened by a little oat-meal, or by much boiling. Lancash. "lithe, to put oatmeal in broth." Tim Bobbin, Gl. "Lithing, thickening of liquors. North." Gl. Grose.

A.S. lith-ian, to mitigate; lithewaec-an, to become mellow. Our v. is also used, like the latter, in a neut. sense.

A v. of this form seems to have been anciently used in Isl. Hence Olaus mentions this as an old proverb addressed to maid-servants, when their work went on slowly. Huad lydur grautnum genta? Quid proficis pultem coquendo? or, as it would have been expressed in vulgar S., "What speid do ye mak in lithing the crowdie, maid?" Lex. Run. vo. Genta.

LYTHE, adj. Of an assuaging quality.

Water thai asked swithe, Cloth and bord was drain; With mete and drink lithe,

And seriaunce that were bayn .---

Sir Tristrem, p. 41.

Moes G. leithu denotes stronk drink; whence A.S. lith poculum. V. the v.

LITHE, s. A ridge, an ascent.

Here I gif Schir Galeron, quod Gaynour, withouten ony gile,

Al the londis, and the lithis fro laver to layro. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 27.

In this sense, doubtless, are we to understand the term lithe, as used by Thomas of Ercildoune; although viewed by the ingenious Editor, as "oblique for satisfaction." V. Gl.

No asked he lond, no lithe, Bot that maiden bright.

Sir Tristrem, p. 97.

A.S. hleoth, hlithe, jugum montis, clivus, Su.G. lid clivus, colli altior; Hist. Alex. Magn.

Them lister at dwaeljas under ena lida.

Placet sub clivo subsistere.

Isl. leit, id. lid, hlid, latus montis, seems also allied; pl. lidar, declivitates; Verel. Ind.

LYTHE, LAID, s. The pollack, Gadus Pollachius, Linn. Statist. Acc. v. 536. Laith, Martin's St. Kilda, p. 19.

"The fish which frequent Lochlong, are cod, haddocks, seath, lythe, whitings, flounders, mackarel, trouts, and herrings." P. Arroquhar, Dunbart. Statist. Acc. iii. 434.

They are called leets on the coast near Scarborough; Encycl. Brit. vo. Gadus.

"Laid, a greenish fish, as big as a haddock."

Sibb. Fife, p. 129.

Lyth is also the name in Orkney.

"The pollack,—with us named the lyth, or lyfish, is frequently caught close by the shore, almost among the wrack or ware in deep holes among the rocks." Barry's Orkney, p. 293.

This, by mistake, is viewed as the same with the scad. P. Kirkcudbright, Statist. Acc. xi. 13.

LYTHYRNES, s. Sloth.

The statis of Frawns soucht for thi Til the Pape than Zachary, And prayid hym be hys consaile To decerne for thare governale, Quhether he war worth to have the crown, That had be vertu the renowne Of manhad, helpe, and of defens, And thare-til couth gyve diligens; Or he that lay in lythyrnes Worth to nakyn besynes.

Wyntown, vi. 4. 69.

Y. LITHRY. This, however, may be allied to Isl. lat-ur, Su.G. lat, piger.

LYTHIS, s. pl.

For lythis of ane gentil knicht, Sir Thomas Moray, wyse and wycht, And full of ——.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 359.

It is difficult to determine the meaning, the sentence being incomplete in the printed poem. It may denote manners; Isl. lit, lyt, mos. Med fugram lyt och nyom fundom; Pulcris moribus et novis artibus. Hist. Alex. Magn. ap. Ihre, vo. Later. If so, it is synon. with lait, q. v. Or it may signify tidings, from lith, to listen; Su.G. hliod-a, id. hliods, a hearing. Hliods bid ek; Audientiam peto; Voluspa, Ihre, vo. Liuda. The language of Dunbar may be equivalent to, "I have tidings to give concerning a gentle knight."

To LYTHLY, v. a. To undervalue. V. LYCHT-

LIE.

LITHRY, s. A crowd; " commonly a despicable crowd," Shirr. Gl.

"In came sik a rangel o' gentles, and a lithry o' hanyiel slyps at their tail, that in a weaven the house wis gaen like Lawren-fair." Journal from London, p. 8.

This is either a deriv. from leid, people, q. v. or from A.S. lythre malus, nequam; lythre cynne, adulterinum genus, Lye; Isl. leid-ur, turpis, sordidus vel malis moribus praeditus.

LITTLEANE, s. A child, S.

—Fu soon as the jimp three raiths was gane, The daintiest littleane bonny Jean fuish hame, To flesh and bluid that ever had a claim.

Ross's Helenore, p. 12.

This may be q. little one; or from A.S. lytling parvulus. V. Ling, term.

LITTLEGOOD, LITTLEGUDY, s. Sun-spurge, or wart-spurge, an herb, S. Euphorbia helioscopia, LIUE, s. Life. Eterne on line, eternally in life, or alive, immortal. On lyve, alive.

Was non on lyve that tok so much on hand For lufis sake.—

King's Quair, iii. 11.

—All ane begynnare of enery thing but drede,
And in the self remanis eterne on line.

Doug. Virgil, 308. 52. The phrase on line is from A.S. on lyf, alive;

Tha he on lyf waes, when he was alive, Lye.
Lyue is used for live or life, O.E.

The emperour of Alymayne wyllede to wyue Mold the kynge's dogter, & to rygte lyue.

R. Glouc. p. 433.
To LIVER, v. a. To liver a vessel, to land the goods carried by her, S.
Germ. liefer-n, Fr. livr-er, to deliver, to render.

LIVERY-DOWNIE, s. A haddock stuffed with livers, meal, and spiceries; sometimes the roe is added, Ang.

LIVER-MOGGIE, s. The stomach of the cod filled with liver, &c. a dish used in Shetland; evidently from Sw. lefwer, liver, and mage, the maw or stomach.

LIUNG, s. An atom, a whit, a particle, Ang. synon. yim, nyim, hate, flow, starn.

I scarcely think that this can be allied to Su.G.

liung-a to lighten, q. a flash, a glance.

LYWYT, pret. Lived.

For auld storys, that men redys, Reprasentis to thaim the dedys Of stalwart folk, that lywyt ar, Rycht as thai than in presence war.

Barbour, 1. 19. MS.

Mr. Pink. thinks that the phrase lywyt ar signifies are dead, as equivalent to Lat. vixerunt; Gl. But it simply means "lived in former times," or "before." V. Air, adv.

LOAN, LONE, LOANING, s. 1. An opening between fields of corn, near or leading to the homestead, left uncultivated, for the sake of driving the cattle homewards, S. Here the cows are: frequently milked.

Thomas has loos'd his ousen frae the pleugh; Maggy by this has bewk the supper-scones; And muckle kye stand rowting in the loans.

Ramsay, ii. 7...

On whomelt tubs lay twa lang dails, On them stood mony a goan, Some fill'd wi' brachan, some wi' kail, And milk het frae the loan.

Ibid. i. 267.

Hence the phrase, a loan soup, "milk given to passengers when they come where they are milking;" Kelly, p. 371.

But now there's a moaning on ilka green loaning, That our braw foresters are a' wede away.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 2.

The term, I suspect, is allied to E. lawn. As this signifies an open space between woods, there is great affinity of idea. The E. word is generally derived from Dan., Su.G., lund, a grove. V. Jun. Etym. Gael. lòn, however, signifies a meadow.

Launde, as used by Chaucer, is rendered "a plain not plowed;" Tyrwhitt.

To the launde he rideth him ful right, Ther was the hart ywont to have his flight. Knightes T. v. 1693.

2. A narrow inclosed way, leading from a town or village, sometimes from one part of a village to another, S. This seems at first to have been applied to a place where there were no buildings, although the term has in some instances been continued afterwards. It is nearly allied to E. lane, as denoting "a narrow way between hedges."

He spang'd out, rampag'd an' said,
That nane amon' us a'
Durst venture out upo' the lone,

Wi' him to shak a fa'.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 10.

LOCH, Louch, s. 1. A lake, S. Thai abaid till that he was Entryt in ane narow place, Betwis a louchsid and a bra.

> Barbour, iii. 109, MS. Bot suddainlie thay fell on slewthfull sleip, Followand plesance drownit in this loch of cair. Palice of Honour, iii. 6.

It is used metaphor. by Douglas.

2. An arm of the sea, S.

"Kingsburgh conducted us in his boat across one of the lochs, as they call them, or arms of the sea, which flow in upon all the coasts of Sky." Boswell's Journ. p. 244.

Gael. loch, Ir. lough, C.B. lhugh, a lake. Loch in Gael. also signifies an arm of the sea. Lat. lac-us is radically the same. This term seems to have been equally well known to the Goths. Hence A.S. luh, and Isl. laug, Su.G. log, a lake. A.S. luh also denotes a firth, an arm of the sea; fretum, aestuarium, Lye. The Northern languages, indeed, seem to retain the root, Su.G. lag, Isl. laug, which have the general sense of moisture, water. V. Lag, Ihre.

LOCH-REED, Common Reed-grass, S.

"Arundo phragmites. The Loch-Reed. Scot. aust." Lightfoot, p. 1131.

LOCHTER, s. A layer. V. LACHTER.

LOCHTER, s. The eggs laid in one season. V. LACHTER.

LOCK, LOAKE, s. A small quantity, a handful; as a lock of meal, a lock of hay, or a lock meal,

" Lock, a small parcel of any thing. North." Gl. Grose. Lock, E. sometimes signifies a tuft.

Ye may as weel gang sune as syne To seeke your meal amang gude folk: In ilka house yese get a loake, When ye come whar yer gossips dwell.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 225.
"May bids keep a lock hay;" Ramsay's S.

Prov. p. 52.

The original application seems to have been to hair, as the phrase is still used; from Isl. lock-r, Su.G. lock, capillus contortus; in the same manner as tait, q. v.

LOCKMAN, LOKMAN, s. The public executioner. It occurs in this sense, in the Books of Adjournal, Court of Justiciary, so late as the year 1768; and is still used, Edinburgh.

His leyff he tuk, and to West Monastyr raid. The lokmen than thai bur Wallace but baid On till a place his martyrdom to tak,

For till his ded he wald na forthyr mak. Wallace, xi. 1342, MS.

Ay loungand, lyke a lock-man on a ladder; Thy ghaistly luke fleys folks that pas thee by, Lyke a deid theif that's glowrand in a tedder. Dunbar, Evergreen, il. 56.

In both passages, this is the most natural sense. That from Wallace, in edit. 1648, is nonsensically printed cleughmen; in edit. 1673, cleugmen.

Lockman seems originally to have denoted a jailer; Germ. loch, a prison, a dungeon; einen in loch stecken, to clap up one in prison; Teut. luck-en, lock-en, to lock; A.S. loc claustrum, "a shutting in," Somner. A place of confinement in Dundee is still called the Lock-up House.

From the apparent origin of the term, it would appear, that, in former times, the jailer, or perhaps the turn-key, who had the charge of a condemned criminal, was also bound to act as executioner.

Analogous to this, A.S. bydel, ergastularius, exactor, "the keeper of a prison or house of correction," Somn., in mod. language signifies a doorkeeper, E. beadle. Germ. buttel is radically the same word, lictor; in Teut. softened into beul, an executioner; carnifex, tortor, lictor; Kilian. Hence beulije, beulerije, a prison, carcer; Germ. buttelei. Wachter derives buttel from beit-en capere, because his office is to seize and bind the guilty. Sw. boedel, from the same source, is the common designation for an executioner. V. DEMPSTER.

LOFF, s. Praise. V. Loif.

LOG, s. The substance which bees gather for making their works, S. B.

Perhaps radically the same with A.S. loge, Su.G. lag, humor. Lag, Ihre observes, is one of the most ancient Goth, words, as appears from the great variety of forms which it assumes in different languages. Isl. laug-r, berialaugr the juice of berries; Belg. loog, lye for washing.

LOGE, s. A lodge, a booth. A litill loge tharby he maid; And thar within a bed he haid.

Barbour, xix. 653, MS.

Celt. lug, log, a place; whence, according to Callender, Lat. loc-us. Dan. loge, however, denotes a lodge, a shed, a hut; Su.G. laage locus recubationis, Isl. laag latibulum, Seren. A.S. log-ian to lodge.

LOGIE, KILLOGIE, s. A vacuity before the fireplace in a kiln, for keeping the person dry, who feeds the fire, or supplies fuel, and for drawing air. Both terms are used, S.

And she but any requisition, Came down to the killogie,

Where she thought to have lodg'd all night. Watson's Coll. i. 45.

I have sometimes been inclined to deduce this from Su.G. loga, Isl. log, flame. But perhaps it is from Belg. log a hole; or merely the same with the preceding word, as denoting a lodge for him who feeds

LOY, adj. Sluggish, inactive; Ang.

This is merely Belg. luy lazy, Fenn. loi, id. Isl. lue fatigue, and luen weary, seem allied. Hence, LOYNESS, s. Inactivity, Ang. Belg. luyheit. To LOIF, Loife, Loiue, Love, Luff, Loue, v. a. To praise.

Now sal thair nane, of thir wayis thrie, Be chosen now ane bishope for to be; Bot that your micht and majestie wil mak Quhatever he be, to loife or yit to lak; Than heyly to sit on the rayne-bow. Thir bishops cums in at the north window; And not in at the dury nor yit at the yet: Bot over waine and quheil in wil he get.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. p. 16. 17.

The meaning seems to be, "to merit praise or dispraise;" the term being used rather in a passive sense, like to blame, S. instead of, to be blamed.

Thy self to loif, knak now scornefully With proude wourdis al that standis the by. Doug. Virgil, 300. 24.

Now God be louit has sic grace till vs sent.

Ibid. 485. 13.

Thai prysyt him full gretumly, And lovyt fast his chewalry.

Barbour, viii. 106, MS.

Leavté to luff is gretumly;

Throuch leavté liffis men rychtwisly.

Ibid. i. 365, MS.

i. e. loyalty is greatly to be praised.

"Loive thow the Lord O my saule, and all that is within me loiue his halv name, loiue thow the Lord my saule, and forget nocht his benefitis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme 1552, Fol. 90, 6. This is for benedic in the Vulgate.

This word appears in most of the Goth. dialects; Isl. Su.G. lofw-a, A.S. lof-ian, Alem. lob-on, Germ. lob-en, Belg. loob-en, id. A.S. Isl. Belg. lof, Germ. lob, praise, Isl. loftig laudable, loford commendation.

Ihre informs us that some derive lofw-a, to praise, from lofwe, loft, the palm of the hand, S. lufe; because the clapping of the luves is a sign of praise, as 2 Kings xi. 12. is rendered in the Isl. version, Their kloppudu lofum saman; They clapped their hands. Hence lovaklapp applause.

Loif, Loff, s. Praise.

Leill loif, and lawté lyis behind, And auld kyndnes is quyt foryett.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 184. st. 1.

i. e. honest commendation, void of flattery. Thair toff and thair lordschip of so lang date, That bene cot armour of eld, Thair into herald I held.

Houlate, ii. 9. Lofs, MS.

LOIS, s. Praise.

The sege that schrenks for na schame, the schent might hym schend,

That mare luffis his life, than lois upone erd. Gawan and Gol. iv. 7.

Sa grete dangere of battal it was he Prouokit sa, and mouit to the mellé, For young desire of hye renowne perfay, Aud lois of proues, mare than I bid sav.

Doug. Virgil, 469. 6. Laus is the word used by Maffei. V. Los.

LOISSIT, pret.

Thair lufly lances thai loissit, and lichtit on the ground.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 3.

"Loosed," Pink. But it is rather, lost, broke, or destroyed; A.S. leos-an perdere, or los-ian perire, amittere. This is confirmed from another pass-

Thair lancis war loissit, and left on the land. Ibid. st. 18.

LOIT, s. A turd, S. Isl. lyte, deformity; or Su.G. lort, dung, filth.

To LOKKER, v. n. To curl, S. part. pr. lokkerand; part. pa. lokkerit. Vol. II.

The benk ybeildit of the grene holyne Wyth lokkerit lyoun skyn ouerspred was syne. Doug. Virgit, 247. 1.

"When your hair's white, you would have it lockering," S. Prov.; spoken of one who is immoderate in his desires; Rudd.

Isl. lock-r, capillus contortus; locka-madr, a man who has long and curled hair; Franc. loche, curled hair; also to curl, Gl. Pez. According to Somner, A.S. locca sometimes bears this sense. Gr. Thorog cirrus, has been fancifully viewed as the origin by Helvigius, Rudd. and others.

LOKKER, LOKAR, adj. Curled.

LOKMAN. V. LOCKMAN.

His heid was quhyt, his een was grene and gray, With lokar hair, quhilk owre his shulder lay.

Henrysone, Evergreen i. 186. st. 5.

LOKLATE, adj.

Wicht men assayede with all thair besy cur, A loklate bar was drawyn ourthourth the dur; Bot thai mycht nocht it brek out of the waw. Wallace, iv. 234, MS.

Edit. 1648. locked. The term seems to signify a bar that guarded or covered the lock, so as to let or hinder it from being opened by a key or forced open.

LOLLERDRY, s. The name given, for some ages before the Reformation, to what was deemed heresy.

The schip of faith, tempestous wind and ne, Dryvis in the see of Lollerdry that blawis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 190. st. 4.

From Lollard, a name reproachfully given, in England, to any one who adhered to the doctrines of Wiclif. Some think that it was derived from Lat. lol-ium cockle. To this origin, as Tyrwhitt has observed, Chaucer seems to allude.

He shal no gospel glosen here ne teche, He woulde sowen som difficultee, Or springen cockle in our clene corne.

Shipmanne's Prol. v. 12923.

Others trace it to Teut. lollaerd mussitator, a mumbler of prayers, loll-en mussitare. V. Kilian, vo. Lollaerd.

LOME, Loom, pron. lume, s. 1. An utensil or instrument of any kind, or for whatever use, S. Loom, Chesh. id.

Eneas himself also with ful gud willis For to be besy gan his feris pray:

With lume in hand fast wirkand like the laif.

Doug. Virgil, 169. 25. Werklome is often applied to instruments used in labour; S. warkloom. Al instrumentis of pleuch graith irnit and stelit, As culturis, sokkys, and the sowmes grete,-War thidder brocht, and tholis tempyr new. The lust of all sic werklomes wer adew:

Thay dyd thame forge in swerdis of mettal brycht, For to defend thare cuntré and thare richt.

Doug. Virgil, 230. 31.
2. A tub, or vessel of any kind, S.; as brew-lumes, the vessels used in brewing; milk-lumes, those employed in the dairy; often, in this sense, simply called lumes.

H

A.S. loma, ge-loma, utensilia Hence, as Lye observes, the word heirloom is used by E. lawyers, in the sense of hereditaria supellex, i. e. S. the splechrie which one enjoys by heritage.

LOMPNYT, part. pa.

Barbour, when describing the conduct of Bruce, in dragging his ships across the narrow neck of land called the Tarbet, says;

Bot thaim worthyt draw thair schippis thar; And a myle was betwix the seys; Bot that wes lompnyt all with treys.

The King his schippis thar gert draw.

p. 294. Loupnyt. Ed. 1758.

Sibb. renders " lompnit, lonit, hedge-rowed." But the meaning seems to be, that the way, across the neck of land, was prepared for the passage of the ships, by trees being laid in a straight line, on which the ships might slide along; somewhat in the same manner as when vessels are about to be launched. It may be allied to A.S. limp-ian, gelimp-ian, convenire; or Sw. laemp-a to adapt, to fit. The origin is, however, uncertain; as is even the proper form of the word. If lompnyt be the true reading, as in MS., it may be allied to lamp, applied to the appearance of the ground when covered with the gossamer. V. LAMP, 2. Perhaps it is from Isl. lunn, pl. lunner, Su.G. lunnar, (abl. lunnum, writlen also lummum, Ihre,) phalangae sive truncae teretes et volubiles super quos in terram vel aridum extrahuntur naves per hyemem siccandae vel reparandae; Verel. Ind. This conveys precisely the same idea.

LONE, s.

He ladde that ladye so long by the lawe sides, Under a lone they light lore by a felle. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 3.

Perhaps a place of shelter; Isl. logn, Su.G. lugn, tranquillitas aeris. Or it may signify a secret place; Isl. laun, occultatio, loen-bo, furis occultae latebrae. LONY.

The land lony was, and lie, with lyking and love. Houlate, i. 2.

Read loun, as in MS., sheltered.

LOOGAN, s. A rogue, Loth.; synon. with Loun,

LOOM, s. V. Lome.

LOOPIE, adj. Crafty, deceitful, S. either, q. one who holds a loop in his hand, when dealing with another; or as allied to Belg. leep, id.

LOOR, adv. Rather. V. LEVER.

To LOPPER. Lopperand, part. pr.
The swelland seis figure of gold clere

Doug. Virgil, 267. 45. lipperand, MS. V. Lipper, v.

LOPPERIS, s. pl. The broken, foamy waves, when the sea is agitated by the wind. V. LIPPER, v.

LOPPIN, LOPPEN, pret. and part. pa.

Sum to tha erd loppin from the hie touris of stone.

Doug. Virgil, 57. 53.

"Our longsome parliament was hastened to an adjournment, by the sudden and unexpected invasion of Kintyre, by Coll, Mr. Gillespie's sons, who, with 2500 runagates from Ireland, are loppen over there." Baillie's Lett. ii. 48.

i. e. Have fled thither, have gone hastily.

A.S. hleop, insilit, pret. of hleap-an salire. Sw. imperf. lopp, pret. lupit, lupen.

LORE, part. pa. Solitary, forlorn.

He ladde that ladye so long by the lawe sides, Under a lone they light lore by a felle. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 3.

Mr. Pink. renders the term, probably in reference to this passage, low. But here it would seem to signify, that they had separated from the rest of their company, Belg. ver-lor-en, to lose; as synon. with lorn used by later writers.

LORER, s. Laurel, or an arbour of laurel.
Under a lorer ho was light, that lady so small,
Of box, and of berber, bigged ful bene.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 6.

Fr. laurier, a laurel; lauriere, a plot or grove of bay trees. V. Ho.

LOSE, Loss, s. Praise, commendation, good name. Sir Ywayne oft had al the lose, Of him the word ful wide gose,

Of thair dedes was grete renown.

Ywaine, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 66.

The lyoun he bure, with loving and loss,
Of silver, semely and sure.—

Houlate, ii. 20.

It is used by R. Glouc. and Chaucer.

Hys los sprong so wyde of ys largesse

To the verrost ende of the world,

That such man was nour non.

R. Glouc. p. 181.

This, Mr. Tooke observes, is the past part. of the A.S. v. hlis-an celebrare. He views the northern word as also the origin of Lat. laus, praise. Divers. Purley, ii. p. 303. V. Lois.

LOSEL, s. "Idle rascal, worthless wretch," Gl.
Away, away, thou thriftless loone,
I swear thou gettest no alms of mee;

For if we shold hang any losel heere, The first we wold begin with thee.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 136. 137.
Tyrwhitt observes, that in the Prompt. Parv. "Losel, or Lorel, or Lurden, is rendered Lurco;" Gl. vo. Lorel. It is perhaps allied to Teut. losigh, ignavus.

LOSYNGEOUR, Losingene, s. 1. A lying flatterer, a deceiver.

For thar with thaim wes a tratour, A fals lourdane, a losyngeour, Hosbarne to name, maid the tresoun, I wate nocht for quhat enchesoun.

Barbour, iv. 108. MS.

Chaucer uses losengeour in the same sense. Fr. lozeng-er to flatter, to couzen, to deceive. Ital. lusingare, Hisp. lisongear, a flatterer; Alem. los guile, losen crafty, losonga guile. V. Menage. Isl. lausingia folk, liars, lausungar ord, a lie; A.S. leasunga, whence E. leasings.

2. A sluggard, a loiterer.

I knew it was past four houris of day, And thocht I wald na langare ly in May, Les Phebus suld me losingere attaynt.

Doug. Virgil, 404. 11.

It seems used by Douglas rather improperly; as it can scarcely be viewed as a different word, allied to Teut. losigh, leusigh, piger, ignavus. LOSS, s. Praise. V. Lois, Los.

LOT, s.

-Lantern to lufe, of ladeis lamp and lot.-Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 202.

Lord Hailes views it as put for laud, praise. From the connexion, it seems rather to signify light; A.S. leokt, Alem, leoht, lioht. It may, however, be used in the former sense, from Ital. lode praise.

LOT-MAN, s. One who threshes for one boll in a certain number, as in twenty-five, S.

"There are several threshing machines here; but they seem, as yet, to save only a lot-man, as he is called, who threshes for so much the boll." P. Dunbog, Fife. Statist Acc. iv. 234.

LOTCH, s. A snare, a situation from which one cannot easily extricate one's self, S.

Near to his person then the rogues approach, Thinking they had him fast within their lotch; And then the bloodhounds put it to the vote, To take alive or kill him on the spot.

LOUCH, s. (gutt.) 1. A cavity, a hollow place of any kind.

The Lord of Douglas thiddir yeid, Quhen he wyst thai war ner cummand, And [in] a louch on the ta hand Has hys archers enbuschit he, And bad thaim hald thaim all prine, Quhill that that hard him rayss the cry. Barbour, xvi. 386. MS.

2. A cavity containing water, a fountain.

And O thou haly fader Tyberine,-Quhare ever thy louch or fontane may be found. Quhare ever so thi spring is, in quhat ground, O flude maist plesand, the sal I ouer alguhare Hallow with honorabill offerandis euermare.

Doug. Virgil, 242. 28.

Germ. loch apertura, cavitas rotunda, foramen, Loch is also explained latibulum, spelunca. Wachter views these as radically different, but without sufficient reason; Alem. loh, fovea, Fohun habent loh; The foxes have holes; Tatian. ap. Schilter. Otfrid uses luage in the sense of spelunca; A.S. loh barathrum; Isl. lyk concavitas, Verel. Louch, as denoting a fountain, may be from the same root; as Franc. loh signifies, orificium. At any rate, Lye seems mistaken in confounding this with loch, a lake. V. Jun. Etym.

LOUCHING, part. pr. Bowing down, louting. Than fied thay, and sched thay, Euery ane from ane vdder, Isl. lyst, laut; at lut-a, pronus fio, procumbo, flecto me prorsum; lutr pronus, lotinn cernuus; G. Andr. A.S. hlut-an. To this fountain undoubtedly ought we to trace E. slouch, which Dr. Johnson inconsiderately derives from Dan. sloff, stupid.

To LOUE, Love, v. a. To praise. V. Loif.

LOVEDARG, s. A piece of work done from a principle of affection, S. V. DAWERK. LOVERY, LUFRAY, s.

The feynds gave them hait leid to laip;

Thair lovery wes na less.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30. "Their desire was not diminished; their thirst was insatiable." Lord Hailes.

Lufray occurs in the same poems. Grit God releif Margaret our Quene; For and scho war as scho hes bene, Scho wald be lerger of lufray Than all the laif that I of mene, For lerges of this new-yeir day.

P. 152. st. 10.

It seems to be the same word that occurs in both places, as signifying bounty, in which sense Lord Hailes renders it in the latter passage, from Fr. l'offre. If so, in the former, it is used ironically. It may be allied to Su.G. lufr, qui aliis blanditiis inescat, from liuf carus; or from lofwa, to extend the hand in token of engagement; a derivative from lofwe, S. lufe, the palm of the hand; whence Su.G. for-lofware, a surety, one who "strikes hands with" another.

LOUING, s. Praise, commendation.

3. Unruffled; applied to water.

The streme bakwartis vpflowis soft and still;

4. Applied metaph. to man. One who has been agitated with passion, or in the rage of a fever, is said to be loun, when his passion or delirium subsides, S.

Ye hae yoursell with you snell maiden locked, That winna thole with affsets to be joked; And sae, my lad, my counsel's ye be lown, And tak a drink of sic as ye hae brewn.

Ross's Helenore, p. 92. When the wind falls, we say, It lowdens, or, It's lowdening, S.B. V. Loun, v.

To be loun, or lowden, also signifies to be still, or silent, "to speak little or none in the presence of one of whom we stand in awe." Rudd.

Isl. logn, Su.G. lugn, tranquillitas aeris. Logn denotes serenity, both of air and of water. Tha var logn vedurs, logn söar; Erat tranquillitas aeris, tranquillum mare, Olai Lex. Run. Or, as we would express it, including both the first and the third sense given above; "There was loun weddir, and a loun sea."

Su.G. lugn is also used metaph. as applied to the mind. Hog lugn, tranquillitas animi. Spegelius derives the term from lun, quietness, peace, to which styr, battle, contention, is opposed; Ihre, from laegg-a ponere, as the wind is said to be laid. Og vinden laegdes, og thar var logn mykit; Ventus subsedit, et tranquillitas magna facta est. Bibl. Isl. Mark. 4. 39.

Besides Su.G. lugn, Sibb. mentions Isl. lundr sylva, which has no connexion; and MoesG. analaugn occultum. I have sometimes hesitated whether S. loun, with the cognate terms already mentioned, might be allied to Isl. laun, Su.G. lon, clam; lagga a lon, to hide. But the most natural deduction is from Isl hlaun-ar, aer calescit, et fit blandus, the air becomes warm and mild; hlyn-ar, id. hlyende, calor aethereus; from hloa, to grow warm. Loun has thus a common fountain with lew, tepid, q. v. Although Belg. laauw, tepid, is written differently from luuw, sheltered from the wind, they seem originally the same. Luuw-en is evidently allied to loun; Het begint te luuwen, the wind begins to cease; hence luuwte, a shelter, a warm place.

Lé, lie, sheltered, and lé, shelter, are evidently from the same root. Hence, as appears from the preceding quotations, loun and lé seems to have been a common phrase, in which the same idea was expressed, according to a common pleonasm, by sy-non. terms.

I shall only add, that although lowden, mentioned under sense 4. as applied to the wind, when it falls, and also as signifying, to be still, to speak little, might be viewed as allied to Belg. luwte, it seems preferable to consider it as radically different. Isl. hliod is used in a sense nearly correspondent. Its original signification is, voice, sound. But, like some Heb. words, it also admits a sense directly contrary, denoting silence. Bidia hliods, to demand silence, hliodr, silent, tala i hliodr, to speak with a low voice, hliodlatr, multum tacens; G. Andr. Su.G. liud, silence; kyrkoliud, the silence of the temple. V. Liud, Ihre.

To Loun, Lown, v. n. To turn calm, S. "Blow the wind ne'er so fast, it will loun at the last;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 65.

LOUN, Loune, Lown, Loon, s. A rogue, a worthless fellow, S.

Quod I, Loune, thou leis.

Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 26.

Loun, lyke Mahoun, be boun me till obey.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 59. st. 24.

It is sometimes applied to a woman. The phrase loun-queyn is very common for a worthless woman,

S.B. Hence a female, who has lost her chastity, is said to have played the loun, S.

Then out and spake him bauld Arthur,

٠.,

And laugh'd right loud and hie—
"I trow some may has plaid the lown,
"And fled her ain countrie."

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 75.

Loun is used by Shakespeare for a rascal.

Sibb. refers to Teut. loen homo stupidus, bardus, insulsus; A.S. lun egenus: Lye, to Ir. liun, slothful, sluggish, (Jun. Etym.) which is evidently the same with the Teut. word. Lye mistakes the sense of it as used in S.; viewing it as agreeing in signification with the Teut. and Ir. terms. If originally the same with these, it has undergone a very considerable change in its meaning. Mr. Tooke gives lown as the part. pa. of the v. to low, to make low. Divers. Purley, ii. 344. What, if it be rather allied to MoesG. leygands, A.S. laewend, traditor, proditor, a traitor. Alem. loug-en signifies to lie; hence lougn-a, a falsehood, lugenfeld, campus mendacii, luggenwizagon, false prophets, pseudoprophetæ. Could we view loogan, Loth., synon. with loun, as giving the old pronunciation, it might with great probability be traced to A.S. leog-an mentiri, as being the part. leogende, mentions, q. a lying person, a lyar. (V. Loun, 2.) Hence, Lounfow, adj. Rascally, S. from loun and full. LOUN-LIKE, adj. 1. Having the appearance of a loun, or villain, S, lowner-like, compar.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 59. st. 23. And Dunde gray, this mony a day, Is lichtlyt baith be lad and loun.

Evergreen, i. 176.

"The usual figure of a Sky-boy, is a lown with bare legs and feet, a dirty kilt, ragged coat and waistcoat, a bare head, and a stick in his hand." Boswell's Journ. p. 264.

It is not improbable that this word originally denoted a servant, as allied to Isl. liodne, lione, servus. Hence lionategt, quod est servile, G. Andr.; lionar, legati, Verel. There is a considerable analogy. For loun, S. is often used to denote a boy hired either occasionally, or for a term, for the purpose of running of errands, or doing work that requires little exertion. In a village, he who holds the plow is often called the lad, and the boy who acts as herd, or drives the horses, the loun. In like manner, lad, a youth, is derived from Isl. lydde servus, Seren.

Loun's Piece, the uppermost slice of a loaf of bread, S.

In Su.G. this is called skalk. Ihre is at a loss to know, whether it be from skal crusta, because it has more of the crust than those slices that are under it. Singulare est, says this learned writer, quod vulgo skalk appellent primum secti panis frustum. He would have reckoned it still more singular, had he known that the S. phrase, loun's piece, is perfectly consonant. It would also have determined him to reject skal, crusta, as the origin. He has properly given this word under skalk as the root, which primarily signifies a servant; and in a secondary sense, a deceitful man, a rascal (nebulo) a loun. Now this Su.G. term primarily denoting a servant, and being thus allied to S. loun, as signifying a hired boy; the uppermost slice must, according to analogy have been denominated skalk, as being the loun's piece, or that appropriated to the servant, perhaps because harder than the lower slices. This coincidence is very remarkable in a circumstance so trivial; and exhibits one of those minute lines of national affinity, that frequently carry more conviction to the mind than what may be reckoned more direct evidence. Dan. skalk, id. "the kissing-crust, the first slice, crust or cut of a loaf;" Wolff.

If we could suppose that loun had been used by our ancestors to denote a servant in general, we might carry the analogy a little farther. We might view this as the primary sense, and rogue, scoundrel, as the secondary. For this process may be remarked, in different languages, with respect to several terms originally signifying service. This has been already seen with respect to Su.G. skalk. In like manner, E. knave, which primarily means a boy, secondarily a servant, has been used to denote a rascal. Wachter views Germ. dieb, Su.G. thiuf, a thief, as an oblique sense of MoesG. thiwe, a servant; as Lat. fur, a thief, was originally equivalent to servus. Both Ihre and Wachter ascribe this transition, in the sense of these terms, to the depraved morals of servants. Cui significationi haud dubie procacia servorum ingenia occasionem dedere; Ihre, vo. Skalk.

This, however, may have been occasionally, or partly, owing to the pride of masters. Of this, I apprehend, we have a proof in the E. word villain, which, originally denoting one who was transferable with the soil, came gradually to signify "a worthless wretch," from the contempt entertained for a bondman. Perhaps varlet, which formerly conveyed no other idea than that of one in a state of servitude, may be viewed as a similar example.

Lines seems used for linns, as equivalent to loupes. The word is still used in this sense.

"The Endrick-then turns due W., rushing over the Loup of Fintry, and inclosing part of the parish within 3 sides of a square."

- The only curiosity which is universally remarked in this parish, is the above mentioned Loup of Fintry; a cataract of 91 feet high, over which the Endrick pours its whole stream." P. Fintry, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xi. 381.

Leap occurs in the same sense; but I suspect, that it is the common word Anglified.

"Still farther up the burn, agreeable to the description in the dialogue of the second scene [of the Gentle Shepherd], the hollow beyond Mary's Bower, where the Esk divides it in the middle, and forms a linn or leap, is named the How Burn." P. Pennycuik, Loth. Append. Statist. Acc. xvii. 611.

It occurs in a sense, although different, yet nearly allied, in other Northern languages: Isl. laupur, alveus, calathus, Su.G. lop, watnlop, the channel of a river; Teut. loop der rivieren, id. These terms, denoting the channel or course of a river, are from Su.G. loep-a, &c. as signifying currere, to run. Our word is from the same v. in the sense of saltare, to leap or spring.

LOUPING AGUE, a disease resembling St. Vitus's dance, Ang.

"A singular kind of distemper, called the louping ague, has sometimes made its appearance in this parish. The patients, when seized, have all the appearances of madness; their bodies are variously distorted; they run, when they find an opportunity, with amazing swiftness, and over dangerous passes; and when confined to the house, they jump, and climb in an astonishing manner, till their strength be exhausted. Cold bathing is found to be the most effectual remedy." P. Craig, Forfars. Statist. Acc. ii. 496.

"There is a distemper, called by the country people the leaping ague, and by physicians, St. Vitus's dance, which has prevailed occasionally for upwards of 60 years in these parishes, and some of the neighbouring ones. The patient first complains of a pain in the head, and lower part of the back; to this succeed convulsive fits, or fits of dancing at certain periods. This disease seems to be hereditary in some families. When the fit of dancing, leaping, or running, seizes the patient, nothing tends more to abate the violence of the disease, than the allowing him free scope to exercise himself in this manner till nature be exhausted." P. Lethnot, Forfars. Ibid. iv. 5.

Leaping ague must be an error of the press; as louping is the term invariably used,

This is indeed allied to E. lowre, lower, to frown, as Jun. and Rudd. conjecture, in as far as they are both connected with Teut. loer-en. But the E. word retains one sense, retortis oculis intueri, also, frontem contrahere; the S. another, observare insidiose, insidiari. Germ. laur-en has both senses, insidiari; also, limis oculis intueri; whence laur, a lurker. In other languages the v. is used only in one sense; Su.G. lur-a, oculis auribusque insidiari; Isl. lure, more aluri in insidiis latere; Dan. lur-er, to lurk, to watch, to lie sneaking or in ambush; whence lur, an ambush, lurer, a lurker. This is undoubtedly the origin of E. lurk, which Seren. and Ihre both trace to Su.G. lurk, Isl. lurkr mendicus vago, homo rudis et subdolus. But Verel. explains lurkr as simply signifying a staff, clava, baculus. It is the compound designation, lurkr landafaegir, which he renders, mendicus vagus, cui in manu scipio, et rotunda patera vel lagena, ad excipiendum potum datum. This is almost the very description that a Scotsman would give of a sturdy-beggar;

Su.G. lut-a, Dan. lud-er, incurvare se; whence lutr, bowed, and Isl. lotning, which denotes not only submission, but religious worship. Spelm. and Jun. view this as the origin of O.E. lout, lowt, a subject, a servant, from the homage or obeisance required by his superior. Our term has less affinity to A.S. leg, lig, flamma, than to any of the rest. It may be observed, that Isl. log-a signifies, to diminish, to dilapidate, to consume; but whether allied to loge, flame, seems doubtful.

Junius has a curious idea with respect to Goth. orlog, battle, a word that has greatly puzzled etymologists. He views it as composed of or, great, and log, flame, q. the great flame that extends far and wide. Etym. vo. Brand.

To LOWDEN, v. n. 1. Used to signify that the wind falls, S.B.

2. To speak little, to stand in awe of another, S.B. It is also used actively, in both senses. "The rain will lowden the wind," i. e. make it to fall; and, "He has got something to lowden him;" or, to bring him into a calmer state; S.B. V. Loun, adj.

LOUN, adj.

Wyntown, ii. 8. 106.

"Q. lourdaner. See Lourdane," Gl. Sibb. But with far more reason, Mr. MacPherson derives it from Teut. lunderer cunctator, dilator; lunder-en cunctari, morari. The origin is probably Su.G. lund intervallum. Hence Isl. bid-lund, expectatio, mora, Verel.; mora concessa, Ihre; the time that any one is allowed to stay.

LOWRYD, adj. Surly, ungracious.
Set this abbot wes messyngere,
This kyng made hym bot lowryd chere:

Wyntown, viii. 10. 116. By the sense given to this Mr. MacPherson seems to view it as allied to the E. v. lower, to appear gloomy.

LOWRIE, LAWRIE, s. 1. A designation given to the fox; sometimes used as a kind of surname, S.

Then sure the lasses, and ilk gaping coof, Wad rin about him, and had out their loof. M. As fast as fleas skip to the tate of woo, Whilk slee Tod Lowrie hads without his mow, When he to drown them, and his hips to cool, In summer days slides backward in a pool.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 143.

He said; and round the courtiers all and cach Applauded Lawrie for his winsome speech.

1bid. ii. 500.

2. A crafty person; one who has the disposition of a fox.

Had not that blessit bairne bene borne, Sin to redres,

Lowries, your lives had bene forlorne For all your Mes.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 38. The name Tod Lowrie is given to this animal in S., in the same manner as in E. he is called Reynard the Fox, and perhaps for a similar reason. The latter designation is immediately from Fr. renard, a fox. This Menage derives from raposo, a name given to the fox in Spain and Portugal, from rabo, a tail; as he supposes that Reynard has received this designation from the grossness of his tail. But what affinity is there between raposo and renard. It is worth while to attend to the process, that the reader may have some idea of the pains that some etymologists have taken, as if intentionally, to bring ridicule on this important branch of philology.

This word must be subjected to five different transmutations, before it can decently assume the form of renard. The fox himself, with all the craft ascribed to him, could not assume so great a variety of shapes, as Menage has given to his name. Raposo is the origin of Renard. "The change," he says, "has been effected in this manner; Raposo, raposus, raposinus, rasinus, rasinardus, renardus, Renard!" Quod erat demonstr.

The author sagely subjoins; "This etymon displeases me not. On the contrary, I am extremely well pleased with it."

But it would be cruel to torture Reynard himself so unmercifully, notwithstanding his accumulated villanies. The writer had no temptation whatsoever to do such violence to his name. For this term, like many others in the Fr. language, is undoubtedly of Goth. origin. Isl. reinicke signifies a fox, from reinki, crafty, to which Germ. raenke, Dan. renk, fraudes, versutiae, correspond.

Hisp. raposo may be from Lat. rapio, -ere, to snatch away, or Su.G. raef, Isl. ref-r, a fox, whence perhaps refiur, technae, deceptiones, stratagems. Ihre mentions Pers. roubah, Fenn. rewon, as also denoting this animal.

Henrysone expresses his S. designation, as if he had viewed it as the common diminutive used for the proper name Lawrence. But for this supposition, if really made by him, there is no foundation. Speaking of the fox, he says;

Lawrence the actis and the process wrait.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 112. st. 14.

This agrees to what he had formerly said;

The fox wes clerk and notar in that caus.

P. 110. st. 5.

The name might seem formed from Corn. luern, Arm. luarn, vulpes. But it is more probably of Goth. extract. It has been seen, that Fr. renard appears nearly allied to some Northern terms denoting craft. Ihre thinks that the fox in MoesG. was denominated fauho, from its faw or yellow colour, and that hence its Germ. name fuchs is formed. But Wachter, with greater probability, deduces the latter, whence E. fox, from fah-en dolo capere, Isl. fox-a decipere, fox false; as, raup fox, a false sale; Verel. It is therefore probable, from analogy, that lowrie owes its origin to some root expressive of deception.

Sibb. has materially given the same etymon that had occurred to me; "Teut. lorer, fraudator; lorerye, fraus, lore, illecebra." The designation may have been immediately formed from our old v. loure, to lurk, q. v. I need only add to what is there said, that Fr. leurr-er and E. lure, are evidently cognate terms. Not only Teut. lorer, but loer, denotes one who lays snares.

It is impossible to say, whether the term has been first applied to the fox, or to any artful person. Its near affinity to the v. loure would seem to render the latter most probable.

LOZEN, s. A pane of glass, S. corrupted from lozenge; so called from its form.

LUBBA, s. A name given to coarse grass of any kind; Orkney.

"As to hills,—they are covered with heath, and what we call lubba, a sort of grass which feeds our cattle in the summer time; it generally consists of different species of carices, plain bent, and other moor grasses." P. Birsay, Statist. Acc. xiv. 316.

Isl. lubbe conveys the idea of rough, hirsutus; kua lubbe, boleti vel fungi species; G. Andr. p. 171. c. 2. He derives it from lufe, haereo, pendulus lacer sum. Dan. lu, luv, the nap of clothes; lubben, gross.

In Isl. lubbe we perceive the origin of E. lubber. For it is also rendered, hirsutus et incomptus nebulo; q. a rouch tatty-headit lown, S.

This term appears nearly in its primitive Goth.

form in O.E.

Hermets an heape, with hoked staues, Wenten to Walsingham, & her wenches after. Vol. II. Great loubies & long, that loth were to swinke, Clothed hem in copes, to be knowen from other, And shopen hem hermets, her ease to haue.

P. Ploughman, Sign. A. 1, b.

Lubberly fellows assumed the sacerdotal dress, or appeared as hermits, because they were unwilling to swinke, i. e. to labour.

To LUCK, v. n. To have good or bad fortune, S.

Quhair part has perisht, part prevaild, Alyke all cannot luck.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 103.

Teut. ghe-luck-en, Su.G. lyck-as, Isl. leik-ast, Dan. lykk-es, to prosper. Ihre derives lyck-as from lik-a, to please; as Wachter, gluch, fortune, from gleich-en, which is synon. with lik-a.

LUCKEN, part. pa. 1. Closed, shut up, contracted.

Lucken-handed, having the fist contracted, the fingers being drawn down towards the palm of the hand, S. "close fisted," Gl. Shirr. "Hence," says Rudd. vo. Louk,—"the man with the lucken hand in Th. Rhymer's Prophecies, of whom the credulous vulgar expect great things." The same ridiculous idea, if I mistake not, prevails in the North of Ireland. This man is to hold the horses of three kings, during a dreadful and eventful battle. I am not certain, however, if this remarkable person does not rather appear with two thumbs on each hand.

Lucken-taed, also, lucken-footed, web-footed, having the toes joined by a film, S.

"This [Turtur maritimus insulae Bass] is palmipes, that's lucken-footed." Sibbald's Hist. Fife, p. 109.

Chaucer uses loken in a similar sense. "Loken in every lith," contracted in every limb. Nonne's Preestes T. v. 14881.

2. Locked, bolted.

Rudd. thinks that "the Lucken-booths in Edinburgh have their name, because they stand in the middle of the High-street, and almost joyn the two sides of it." Vo. Louk. But the obvious reason of the designation is, that these booths were distinguished from others, as being so formed that they might be locked during night, or at the pleasure of the possessor.

A.S. locen signifies clausura, retinaculum. But the term is evidently the part. of luc-an, to lock.

V. Lour, v.

To Lucken, Luken, v. a. 1. To lock, S.

—— Baith our hartis ar ane,

Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 169..

2. Metaph. used to denote the knitting of the brows, as expressive of great displeasure.

His trusty-true twa-hannit glaive
Afore him swang he manfullie,
While anger lucken'd his dark brows,
And like a wood-wolf glanst his ee.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 173. This v. is formed from the part. Lucken.

Lucken or Lukin Gowan, The globe flower, S. Trollius europaeus, Linn.; q. the locked or Cabbage daisy. V. Lightfoot, p. 296.

Let all the streets, the corners, and the rewis Be strowd with leaves, and flowres of divers hewis;—

With mint and medworts, seemlie to be seen, And lukin gowans of the medowes green. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 379. 380.

We'll pou the daizies on the green, The lucken gowans frae the bog.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 227.

LUCKIE, LUCKY, s. 1. A designation given to an elderly woman, S.

As they drew near, they heard an elderin dey, Singing full sweet at milking of her ky.—
And Lucky shortly follow'd o'er the gate,
With twa milk buckets frothing o'er, and het.
Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

How does auld honest lucky of the glen? Ye look baith hale and fair at threescore-ten. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 96.

Fair ought to be feer or fere.

2. A grandmother, Gl. Shirr, often luckie-minny, S.B. ibid.

I'll answer, sine, Gae kiss ye'r lucky, She'dwells i' Leith.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 351.

"A cant phrase, from what rise I know not; but it is made use of when one thinks it is not worth while to give a direct answer, or think themselves foolishly accused." Ibid. N.

Perhaps it signifies, that the person seems to have got no more to do than to make love to his grandmother.

Luckie-daddie, grandfather, S.B.
We shou'd respect, dearly belov'd,
Whate'er by breath of life is mov'd.
First, 'tis unjust; and, secondly,
— 'Tis cruel, and a cruelty
By which we are expos'd (O sad!)
To eat perhaps our lucky dad.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 507.

The gentles a' ken roun' about,

He was my lucky-deddy.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 15.

"Ha'd your feet, luckie daddie, old folk are not feery;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 164.

3. Used, in familiar or facetious language, in addressing a woman, whether advanced in life or not, S.

Well, Lucky, says he, hae ye try'd your hand Upon your milk, as I gae you command?

Ross's Helenore, p. 125.

4. Often used to denote "the mistress of an ale-house," S. V. Gl. Ross.

It did ane good to see her stools, Her boord, fire-side, and facing-tools;— Basket wi' bread.

Poor facers now may chew pea-hools,
Since Lucky's dead.

Elegy on Lucky Wood, Ramsay, i. 229.

Lucky Wood kept an ale-house in the Canongate; was much respected for hospitality, honesty, and the neatness of her person and house." N. ibid. p. 227.

The source is uncertain. Originally, it may have been merely the E. adj., used in courtesy, in addressing a woman, as we now use good. This idea is suggested by the phraseology of Lyndsay, when he represents a tippling husband as cajoling his obstreperous wife.

Ye gaif me leif, fair lucky dame.

— Fair lucky dame, that war grit schame, Gif I that day sowld byid at hame.

—— All sall be done, fair lucky dame.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 8. 9.

It may, however, have been applied to an old woman, primarily in contempt, because of the ancient association of the ideas of age and witchcraft; Isl. hlok, maga. Hlokk is also the name of one of the Valkyriar, Parcae, or Fates of the Gothic nations; Grimmismalum, ap. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 153.

Louke is a term used by Chaucer, in a bad sense, although of uncertain meaning.

Ther n'is no thefe without a louke, That helpeth him to wasten and to souke Of that he briben can, or borwe may.

Coke's T. v. 4413.

This has been explained, "a receiver to a thief."
But he seems evidently to use it as equivalent to trull.

LUCKY, adj. Bulky, S.

"The lucky thing gives the penny;" S. Prov. "If a thing be good, the bulkier the better; an apology for big people." Kelly, p. 334.

It is also used adv. for denoting any thing exuberant, or more than enough. It's lucky muckle, it is too large, S.

But she was shy, and held her head askew; And cries, Lat be, ye kiss but lucky fast; Ye're o'er well us'd, I fear, since we met last.

Ross's Helenore, p. 82.

Our acquaintance was but lucky short,
For me or ony man to play sic sport.

This use of the word has probably originated from a custom which seems pretty generally to have prevailed, of giving something more to a purchaser than he can legally claim, to the luck of the bargain, as it is called, S. or to the to-luck, S.B. V. next word, and TO-LUCK.

LUCK-PENNY, s. A small sum given back by the person who receives money in consequence of a bargain, S. lucks-penny, S.B.

"A drover had sold some sheep in the Grass-market last Wednesday morning.—In the afternoon the drover received his payment from the butcher's wife, and not only went away content, but returned a shilling as luck-penny." Edin. Even. Courant, 28 Oct. 1805.

This custom has originated from the superstitious idea of its ensuring good luck to the purchaser. It is now principally retained in selling horses and cattle. So firmly does the most contemptible superstition take hold of the mind, that many, even at this day, would not reckon that a bargain would prosper, were this custom neglected.

LUDE, part. pa. Loved, beloved, S.

Doug. Virgil, 238, b. 26.

This is a very ancient word; Moes G. lofa. Lofam slohun ina; Did strike him with the palms of their hands; Mark xiv. 65. Su.G. lofae, Isle loft, loofve, loove, vola manus; whence loefd, ar span, loef-a to span, loefatak plausus, G. Andr., the clapping of the hands; also, stipulatio manualis. Dan. luen, vola, differs in form. Wachter, vo. Law, refers to Celt. llaw the hand, and Gr. 2004, id. plur. He views llaw as the radical term. Lhuyd mentions lhaw as signifying, not only the hand, but the palm of the hand; and Ir. lamh, pron. law, the hand; whence lamhach a glove, lamhagan, groping, &c. These terms are retained in Gael. The word has thus been common to the Goth. and Celt. tribes.

No similar term occurs in A.S. Always where Ulphilas uses lofa, we find another word in the A.S.

LUFRAY, s. V. LOVERY. LUG, s. The ear; the common term for this member of the body in S. as well as A. Bor.

-" He sall be put vpon the pillorie, and sall be convoyed to the head and chief place of the townc, and his taker sall cause cutt ane of his lugges .- His taker sall cause his other lug to be cutted." Burrow Lawes, c. 121. s. 3. 4. V. Trone.

"Ye canna make a silk purse o' a sow's lug;"

Fergusson's S. Prov. p. 35.

This term is used by E. writers, but in a derisory sense.

-With hair in characters, and lugs in text. Cleaveland's Poems, Ray.

2. At the lug of, near, in a state of proximity, S. "Ye live at the lug of the law;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 83.

3. Up to the lugs in any thing, quite immersed in it, S.

It has been supposed that this phrase alludes to one's drinking out of a two-handed beaker. It may, however, refer to immersion in water.

4. If he were worth his lugs, he would do, or not do, such a thing; a phrase vulgarly used to express approbation or disapprobation, S.

The same idea has been also familiar with the E. in an early age. Langland speaking of the absurd custom of pretending to sell pardons, says;

Were the bishop blessed, and worth both his

His seale shold not be sent to deceyue the people.

P. Ploughman, A. ii. a. This proverbial phrase has most probably had its origin from the custom of cutting off the ears; a punishment frequently inflicted in the middle ages. One part of the punishment of a sacrilegious person, according to the laws of the Saxons, was the slitting of his ears. These and other crimes were punished, several centuries ago, with the loss of both ears. Du Cange refers to the statutes of St. Louis of France, and of Henry V. of England; vo. Auris.

Sibb. thinks that this word may be from A.S. locca caesaries, the hair which grows on the face. Although the origin is quite uncertain, I would prefer deriving it from Su.G. lugg-a to drag one, especially by the hair; as persons are, in like manner, ignominiously dragged by the ears. V. Blaw, v.

LUG, s. A worm got in the sand, within floodmark, used by fishermen for bait, S. Lumbricus marinus, Linn.

"All the above, except the partans and lobsters, are taken with lines baited with mussels and lug, which are found in the bed of the Ythan at low tides." P. Slains, Statist. Acc. v. 277.

"The bait for the small fishes—a worm got in the sand, lug." P. Nigg, Aberd. ibid. vii. 205.

"Eruca marina; the fishers call it lug." Sibb.

Fife, p. 138.

Perhaps from Fris. luggh-en, ignave et segniter agere; as descriptive of the inactivity of this worm, as another species is called slug, for the same reason. LUGGIE, adj. Corn is said to be luggy, when it does not fill and ripen well, but grows mostly to the straw, S.B.

Belg. log, heavy; Teut. luggh-en, to be slothful. LUGGIE, s. A lodge or hut in a garden or park, Teut. logie tugurium, casa. V. Loge.

LUGGIE, Loggie, s. A small wooden vessel, for holding meat or drink, provided with a handle, by which it is laid hold of, S.

The green horn-spoons, beech luggies mingle,

On skelfs forgainst the door.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 114. Among the superstitious rites observed on the eve of Hallowmas, the following is mentioned.

In order, on the clean hearth-stane, The luggies three are ranged, And every time great care is ta'en, To see them duly changed.

Burns, iii. 138. V. Note ibid.

It is also written loggie.

The sap that hawkie does afford Reams in a wooden loggie.

Morison's Poems, p. 48.

Perhaps from lug the ear, from the resemblance of the handle. The Dutch, however, call a wooden sauce-boat lokie. Some might be disposed to trace this word to Heb. לונ, log, sextarius, the smallest measure of liquids used among the Jews, nearly equal to an English pint and a half.

LUID, s. A poem. V. Leid.

LUIK-HARTIT, adj. Warmhearted, affectionate, compassionate.

Thair is no levand leid sa law of degre

LUIT, pret. Let, permitted.

Lute also occurs in the same sense; and lute of,

for reckoned, made account of.

"That carnall band was neuer esteemed off be Christ, in the time he was conversant heere vpon earth; he lute nathing of that band." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. I. 3. b. V. Let, v.

LUKNYT, part. pa. Locked. V. Lucken. LUM, LUMB, s. I. A chimney, the vent by which

- -" A cave, or rather den, about 50 feet deep, 60 long, and 40 broad, from which there is a subterranean passage to the sea, about 80 yards long, through which the waves are driven with great violence in a northerly storm, and occasion a smoke to ascend from the den. Hence it has got the name of Hell's Lumb, i. e. Hell's Chimney." P. Gamrie, Banffs. Statist. Acc. i. 472. 473.
- 2. Sometimes it denotes the chimney-top, more commonly denominated the lum-head, S.
- "The house of Mey formerly mentioned is a myth, sign or mark, much observed by saillers in their passing through this Firth between Caithness and Stroma, for they carefully fix their eyes upon the lums or chimney heads of this house, which if they lose sight of, then they are too near Caithness." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 145.

Sibb. conjectures that this may be from A.S. leom lux, "scarcely any other light being admitted, excepting through this hole in the roof." LUMB-HEAD, s. A chimney top, S.

Now by this time, the sun begins to leam,-And clouds of reek frae lumb-heads to appear. Ross's Helenore, p. 55.

LUME, s. An utensil. V. Lome.

LUMMLE, s. The filings of metal, S. Fr. limaille, id.

Chaucer uses lumaile in the same sense.

LUNYIE-BANE, s. Hucklebone, Fife.

LUNKIT, adj. Lukewarm; also, half-boiled, S. Dan. lunk-en to make lukewarm, whence, indeed, the E. word may be most directly deduced.

LUNT, s. 1. It is used, as in E., for a match. -- "Ane of thame be chaunce had a loose lunt, quhilk negligently fell out of his hand amang the great quantity of poulder, and brunt him and divers utheris to the great terror of the rest." Historie James Sext, p. 126.

2. A column of flaming smoke; particularly, that rising from a tobacco pipe, in consequence of a violent puff, S.

She fuff't her pipe wi' sic a lunt, In wrath she was sae vap'rin, She notic't na, an aizle brunt Her braw new worset apron Out thro' that night.

Burns, iii. 131.

3. Improperly used to denote hot vapour of any kind, S.

LUNTUS, s. A contemptuous designation for an old woman, probably from the practice of smoking tobacco, S.B.

LURDANE, LURDON, s. 1. A worthless person, one who is good for nothing, whether man or woman.

Thire tyrandis tuk this halv man, And held hym lang in-til herd pyne: A lurdane of thame slwe hym syne, That he confermyd, in Crystyn fay Befor that oure-gane bot a day.

Wyntown, vi. 12. 133.

In this sense Douglas applies the term to Helen. That strang lurdane than, guham wele we ken, The Troiane matronis ledis in ane ring, Fenyeand to Bacchus feist and karolling.

Doug. Virgil, 182. 9. Rudd. renders it, as here used, "a blockhead, a sot." But for what reason I do not perceive.

In the same sense we may understand the following passage, in which Lord Lindsay of the Byres is made to address the Lords who had rebelled against K. James III; although, from its connexion, it perhaps requires a still stronger meaning.

"Ye are all Lurdanes, my Lords; I say, ye are false Traitors to your Prince.-For the false lurdanes and traitors have caused the King (Ja. IV.) by your false seditions and conspiracy, to come against his Father in plain battle," &c. Pitscottie,

2. A fool, a sot, a blockhead.

"Sir John Smith's second fault, far worse than the first, albeit a lurdane to defend all he had done. and to draw the most of the barons to side with him. was a very dangerous design." Baillie's Lett. ii. 173. 174.

3. It is still commonly used, in vulgar language, as expressive of slothfulness. Thus one is called a lazy lurdane, S.

4. It is used, improperly, to denote a piece of folly or stupidity.

His Popish pride and threefald crowne Almaist hes lost their licht;

His plake pardones are bot lurdons, Of new found vanitie.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 35.

It occurs in P. Ploughman. Haddest thou ben hend, quod I, thou wold have asked leue.

And gyued me in goutes, I may not go at large. Sign. Hh. 3, b.

It is also used by R. Brunne.

Sibriht that schrew as a lordan gan lusk, A suynhird smote he to dede vnder a thorn busk. Chron. p. 9.

This word has been fancifully derived from Lord Dane. It deserves notice, that this derivation is at least as old as the time of Hector Boece.

"Finalic the Inglismen were brocht to so grete calamité & miscrie be Danis, that ilk hous in Ingland wes constranit to sustene ane Dane, that the samyn mycht be ane spy to the Kyng, and advertis hym quhat wes done or said in that hous. Be quhilk way the Kyng mycht knaw sone quhare ony rebellion wes aganis hym. This spy wes callit tord Dane. Quhilk is now tane for ane ydyll lymmer that seikis his leuyng on othir mennis laubouris." Bellend. Cron. B. xi. c. 14.

It is more fully expressed in the original. Dictus est is explorator dominus Danus, vulgo Lordain. Quod nomen nostrates et populi nunc Angli dicti ita usurpaverunt, ut quem viderint ociosum ac inutilem nebulonem, ocio deditum, alienis laboribus queritantem victum, omnique demum aspersum infamia, Lordain vel hac aetate appellitent.

I need scarcely say, that this etymon is evidently a chimera.

The immediate origin seems to be Fr. lourdin, blockish, blunt, clownish; allied to which are lourdat, a dunce, lourdade, an awkward wench, from lourd, heavy, stupid, blockish. Bullet derives lourdat from Arm. lourdod, id. But as many Fr. words have their origin from Teut., it has occurred to me, as also to Sibb., that Fr. lourdin may be immediately traced to Teut. luyaerd piger, desidiosus, ignavus homo, or loer, loerd, which have the same meaning, homo murcidus, ignavus. To the latter Kilian traces Fr. lourd. Thus the radical Teut. term will be luy, id. V. Loy. It may be added, however, that as Ital. lordo corresponds to Fr. lourd, Verel. derives the former from 1sl. and Sw. lort, stercus. Seren. deduces all the modern terms from this Goth. fountain; vo. Lordane. From the Ital. word L.B. lurdus seems formed. Du Cange is uncertain whether it should be rendered impurus, or stolidus.

LURDANERY, LURDANRY, s. 1. Sottishness, stupidity.

Frendschip flemyt is in France, and faith has the flicht.

Doug. Virgil, 238, a. 14.

2. It seems also used to denote carnal sloth, or security in sin.

LUTE, LEUT, s. A sluggard; Gl. Sibb. "Probably," says Sibb. "from Lurdane." But there is not a shadow of probability here. It is certainly the same with E. lout, from Teut. loete, homo agrestis, insulsus, bardus, stolidus. This is perhaps radically allied to Su.G. lat piger, whence laettia, anc. laeti, ignavia.

LUTE, pret. Permitted. V. LUIT. LUTHE.

This lene auld man luthe not, but tuke his leif. And I abaid undir the levis grene.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 133. Lord Hailes renders this, "remained." If this be the sense, it may be allied to MoesG. lat-jan, Su.G. laett-ias, morari, otiari; the pret. often taking u instead of a. It may indeed be formed from leit; and thus signify, took no notice.

LUTHRIE, s. Lechery.

From the connexion, it is evident that the term here means lechery. But R. Glouc. uses luther as signifying wicked, in a general sense; and lutherhede, luthernesse, vileness, wickedness, villany. Lither, Chauc. wicked. A.S. lythre, nequam. LUTTAIRD, adj. Bowed. A luttaird bak, a Wachter has observed that this letter is used in forming substantives from verbs, and from adjectives; as A.S. cwalm, interitus, death, from cwell-en, to kill; Franc. galm, clangor, from gell-en sonare, uuahsmo, fruit, from wahs-en, to grow; Sw. sotma, sweetness, from sot, dulcis; Germ. baerm, dregs, from baer-en, levare, helm, a helmet, from hull-en, to cover.

It is used S., with the addition of a or e, in forming some alliterative words, being employed as the medium of conjoining their component parts; as clish-ma-claver, hash-me-thram, whig-me-

The sacrilegious blasphemer, and the bloody adulterer, and infinite maa vther sins, concurring in one persone, shall not these shorten this miserable life?" Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. K. 5. a.

"It is statut—that the secretarie mak and constitute deputis, ane or mae, in every ane of the placis foresaid." Act Sed. 3 Nov. 1599.

Mr. Tooke views A.S. mowe, a heap, as the radical word; supposing A.S. ma, E. mo, to be the positive, A.S. mare, E more, the comparative, and A.S. maest, E. most, the superlative. But not to say that A.S. mowe does not seem to have been used to denote quantity in general, or applied to persons, the hypothesis labours under several considerable difficulties. The first is, that mo never occurs in A.S., but always ma, which has been corruptly changed in later times into mo, like many other words ori-ginally written with a. But besides this, A.S. ma is as really a comparative as mare, both being used adverbially, in the sense of plus, magis. As an adjective, mare properly denotes superiority in size, or in quality, major; ma, superiority in number. plures. This word, even as changed into mo, has been always used in the same manner. One of the very examples brought by Mr. Tooke, is a proof of this. 'Yf it be fayre a man's name be eched by moche folkes praysing, and fouler thyng, that mo folke not praysen." Chaucer, Test. Love, Fol. 319, b.

Mr. Tooke has charged Junius with saying untruly, that most is formed from the positive maere, having maerre as the compar., and maerest, contrumest, as the superl. But candour required, that this singularity in A. S. should have been mentioned, that maere is used both as a positive, magnus, and a compar., major; while maerest is the superl. It does not appear, indeed, that this is the origin of maest, which occurs in the simple form of maists in MoesG. from the comparative maiza.

Lat. plus and magis may both be mentioned as analogous. For although both used as comparatives, it would appear that they had been originally positives. Plus is certainly from the Gr. positive πολπε, many; and magis has also been traced to μεγαε, great. To MA, v. a. To make; frequently used where the metre does not require it. .

Thai durst nocht bid to ma debate.

Barbour, x. 692, MS.

In this form the v. resembles Germ. mach-en facere, which Seren. derives from the very anc. Goth. v. meg-a, valere.

MAAD, MAWD, s. A plaid, such as is worn by shepherds; a herd's mawd, S.

This seems to be a Goth. word. Su.G. mudd denotes a garment made of the skins of reindeers; also, lapmudd. Ihre thinks that the word has come to Sweden along with the goods.

MABBIE, s. A cap, a head-dress for women;

The E. v. match is occasionally used nearly in the same sense.

MACKLACK, adv.

Then the Cummers that ye ken came all mack-

To conjure that coidyoch with clews in their creils;

While all the bounds them about grew blaikned and black,

For the din of thir daiblets rais'd all the de'ils. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 22.

This evidently denotes the noise made by their approach, particularly expressing the clattering of feet. The word is formed, either from the sound, or from mak make, and clack a sharp sound; Teut. klacke, the sound made by a stroke.

MACRELL, MAKERELL, s. 1. A pimp.

"He had nane sa familiar to hym, as fidlaris, bordellaris, makerellis, and gestouris." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 1. Utricularios, ganiones, lenones, mimos. Boeth.

2. A bawd.

"The auld man speikis to the macrell to allure the madyn." Philotus, S.P.R. iii. 7.

Teut. maeckelaer, proxeneta, Fr. maquereau; fem. maquerelle. Thierry derives the Fr. term from Heb. machar to sell. Est enim lengum puellas vendere, et earum corpora pretio prostituere. As panders, in theatrical representation, wore a particoloured dress; hence he also conjectures that the term magnereau has been transferred to the fish, which we, after the Fr., call mackerel, because of its spots. Wachter more rationally derives Germ. maekler, proxeneta, from mach-en jungere, sociare.

MACKREL-STURE, s. The tunny, or Spanish mackrel, Scomber thynnus, Linn.

"The tunny frequents this [Lochfine] and several other branches of the sea, on the western coast, during the season of herrings, which they pursue: the Scotch call it the mackrel-sture, or stor, from its enormous size, it being the largest of the genus." Pennant's Tour, 1772, p. 8.

Isl. Su.G. stor, anc. stur, ingens, magnus. To MAE, v. n. To bleat softly, S. This imitative word is used to denote the bleating of lambs, while bae is generally confined to that of sheep.

Shepherds shall rehearse His merit, while the sun metes out the day, While ews shall bleet, and little lambkins muc. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 14.

MAE, s. A bleat, S.

To MAGG, v. a. To carry off clandestinely, to steal; as to magg coals, Loth., apparently a cant term.

MAGG, s. A cant word for a halfpenny; pl. maggs, the gratuity which servants expect from those to whom they drive any goods, Loth. Sibb. refers to "O.Fr. magaut, a pocket or wallet, q. pocket-money." V. MAIK.

MAGGIES, s. pl. "Jades," Pink.

Sen ane of them man be a deill, My maiglit face maks me to feill That myne man be the same.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 56.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. manc-us; Sibb. from Teut. maeck-en castrare. Perhaps mangel-en, to be defective, is preferable.

MAGRAVE, prep. Maugre, in spite of. Than all the Inglis cumpany

MAHOUN, s. 1. The name of Mahomet, both in O.S. and E.

2. Transferred to the devil.

Thow art my clerk, the devill can say, Renunce thy God, and cum to me.

Gramercy, tailyor, said Mahoun, Renunce thy God, and cum to me.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 31. 32.

Lord Hailes observes; "It would seem that the Franks, hearing the Saracens swear by their prophet, imagined him to be some evil spirit which they worshipped. Hence, all over the western world Mahoun came to be an appellation of the devil." But it is more natural to suppose, that this was rather the effect of that bitter hatred produced by the crusades, than of such gross ignorance, among those at least who had themselves been in Palestine.

Lye mentions Norm. Sax. mai, as not only denoting a virgin, but as the same with mag, cognatus. In relation to the former sense, he adds; "Hence, with the O.E. The Queen's Meys, the queen's maidens: among whom it came also to be a proverb, There are ma Meys than Margery." V. Maries.

Perhaps O.Fr. mye, maitresse, amie, is from the same origin. V. Gl. Rom. Rose. As Belg. maeghd, also meydsen, meyssen, are used in the same sense with our term, Mr. MacPherson ingeniously inquires, Vol. II.

if the latter be 't' the word Miss, of late prefixed to the names of young ladies?"

Maich is used in the same sense by Bellenden, as the translation of gener, Cron. B. ii. c. 6.

"My meaugh, my wife's brother, or sister's husband," A. Bor. Ray.

Rudd. has observed, that "after the same manner other names of consanguinity and affinity have been often confounded by authors." But we are by no means to suppose, that the word was originally used in this restricted sense. Perhaps it primarily denoted consanguinity. The most ancient vestige we have of the term is in MocsG. mag-us, a boy, a son. It seems, however, to have been early transferred to affinity by marriage. Thus A.S. maeg, maega, not only has the same signification with the MocsG. word, but also denotes a father-in-law; Moses kept, his maeges sceap, the sheep of his father-in-law; Ex. iii. 1. It is also used for a kinsman in general, cognatus; and even extended to a friend, amicus. V. Lye.

O.E. mowe denotes relation by blood in a general sense.

R. Glouc. p. 316.

Isl. magur denotes both a father-in-law, and a step-father, Verel.; and maagr, an ally, a fatherin-law, a son-in-law; maegd affinitas, maeg-ia affinitati jungi; G. Andr. We learn from the latter, that maeg-ur anciently signified a son. Ihre gives Su.G. maag, anc. mager, maghaer, as having the general sense of affinis; but shews, at the same time, that it is used to denote a son, a parent, a son-inlaw, a father-in-law, a step-father, a step-son, &c. He is uncertain, whether it should be traced to Alem. mag, nature, or Sw. magt, blood, or if it should be left indeterminate, because of its great antiquity. Wachter derives Germ. mag, natura, also, parens, filius, &c. from mach-en, parere, gignere; Schilter, from mag-en posse, as, according to him, primarily denoting domestic power.

A.S. maeg not only signifies a relation by blood, and a father-in-law, but a son. Maeg waes his agen thridda; He was his own son, the third; Caedm. 61.

21. ap. Lye.

Isl. maug-r occurs in the sense of son, in the most ancient Edda. Gaztu slikan maug; Genuisti talem filium; Aeg. 36. As maeg-r signifies a son-in-law; so, in a more general sense, a relation. Both these have been deduced from mae, meg-a valere, pollere; because children are the support of their parents, especially when aged; and because there is a mutual increase of strength by connexions and allies. Hence the compound term, barna-stod, from barn and stod, columen, q. the pillar or prop of children; and maega-stod, the support given by relationship. Maug-r often appears in a compound form; as Maug-thrasir, q. filius rixae, a son of trife, i. e. a quarrelsome man. Maug-r also signifies a male.

I need scarcely add, that Gael. mac, a son, pronounced gutt. q. machk, has undoubtedly a common origin. Macamh, a youth, a lad, and macne, a tribe, are evidently allied.

MAICH, s. (gutt.) Marrow, Ang.

It is uncertain, whether this be A.S. maerh, id. eliso r.; or, as it is accounted a very ancient word, radically different. For both maich and mergh are used S.B. in the sense of medulla.

MAICHERAND, part. adj. (gutt.) Weak, feeble, incapable of exertion, Ang.; allied perhaps to Su.G. meker, homo mollis.

MAID, s. A maggot, S.B.

MAID, adj. Tamed; applied to animals trained for sport.

"It is statute,—that na maner of persounis tak ane vther mannis hundis, nor haulkis maid or wylde out of nestis, nor eggis out of nestis, within ane vther mannis ground, but licence of the Lord, vnder the pane of x. pundis. Acts Ja. III. 1474. c. 73. Edit. 1566. Murray, c. 59.

It seems radically the same with Mait, q. v.; as if it signified, "subdued by fatigue,"—this being one mean employed for breaking animals. V. MATE, v. MAIDEN, s. An instrument for beheading, nearly of the same construction with the Guillotine, S.

of the place and the salubrity of the air, designed here a noble recess and retirement from worldly business, but was prevented by his unfortunat and inexorable death, three years after, anno 1581, being accused, condemned and execute by the Maiden at the cross of Edinburgh, as art and part of the murder of King Henry Earl of Darnly, father to King James VI, which fatal instrument, at least the patern thereof, the cruel Regent had brought from abroad to behead the Laird of Pennecuik of that ilk, who notwithstanding died in his bed, and the unfortunat Earl was the first himself that handselled that merciless Maiden, who proved so soon after his own executioner." Pennecuik's Descr. of Tweeddale, p. 16. 17.

This circumstance gave occasion for the following proverb; "He that invented the Maiden, first hanseled it." Kelly, p. 140. He refers to James, Earl of Morton.

"He [E. of Argyle]—falling down on his knees upon the stool, embraced the Maiden (as the instrument of beheading is called) very pleasantly; and with great composure he said, 'It was the sweetest maiden ever he kissed, it being a mean to finish his sin and misery, and his inlet to glory, for which he longed." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 545.

MAIDEN, s. 1. The name given to the last handful of corn that is cut down by the reapers on any particular farm, S.

The reason of this name seems to be, that this handful of corn is dressed up with ribbons, or strips of silk, in resemblance of a doll. It is generally affixed to the wall, within the farm-house.

They drave an' shore fu' teugh an' sair;
They had a bizzy mornin':
The Maiden's taen ere Phæbus fair
The Lomonds was adornin'.

By some, a sort of superstitious idea is attached to the winning of the maiden. If got by a young person, it is considered as a happy omen, that he or she shall be married before another harvest. For this reason perhaps, as well as because it is viewed as a sort of triumphal badge, there is a strife among the reapers, as to the gaining of it. Various stratagems are employed for this purpose. A handful of corn is often left by one uncut, and covered with of corn is often left by one uncut, and covered with a little earth, to conceal it from the other reapers, till such time as all the rest of the field is cut down. The person who is most cool generally obtains the prize; waiting till the other competitors have exhibited their pretensions, and then calling them back to the handful which had been concealed.

In the North of S. the maiden is carefully preserved till Yule morning, when it is divided among the cattle, "to make them thrive all the year round." There is a considerable resemblance between this custom and that of the Northern nations. with respect to the Julagalt, or bread-sow; as related by Verel. Not. Hervarar S. p. 139. He views the custom referred to as transmitted from the times of heathenism, and as a remnant of the worship of Odin. "The peasants," he says, "on the Eve of Yule, [i. e. the evening preceding Christmas-day], even to this day, make bread in the form of a boarpig, and preserve it on their tables through the whole of Yule. Many dry this bread-pig, and preserve it till spring, when their seed is to be committed to the ground. After it has been bruised, they throw part of it into the vessel or basket from which the seed is to be sown; and leave the rest of it, mixed with barley, to be eaten by the horses employed in plowing, and by the servants who hold the plow, probably in expectation of receiving a more abundant harvest." This was also called Sunnugoltr. because this bread-boar was dedicated to the Sun. Verel. Ind. V. KIRN, RAPEGYRNE, and YULE, § II.

2. This name is transferred to the feast of Harvest-home, S. It is sometimes called the Maiden, at other times the Maiden-feast.

The master has them bidden Come back again, be't foul or fair, 'Gainst gloamin', to the Muiden.

Douglas's Poems, p. 144. Then owre your riggs we'll scour wi' haste, An' hurry on the Maiden feast.

Ibid. p. 117.

It may be observed, that, in some parts of S., this entertainment is given after the grain is cut down; in others, not till all is gathered in.

"It was, till very lately, the custom to give what was called a Maiden feast, upon the finishing of the harvest, and to prepare for which, the last handful of corn reaped in the field was called the Maiden." [The reverse is undoubtedly the fact; the name of the feast being derived from the handful of corn.] 46 This was generally contrived to fall into the hands of one of the finest girls in the field; was dressed up in ribbons, and brought home in triumph, with the music of fiddles or bagpipes. A good dinner was given to the whole band, and the evening spent in jovialty and dancing, while the fortunate lass who took the maiden was the Queen of the feast; after which, this handful of corn was dressed out, generally in the form of a cross, and hung up, with the date of the year, in some conspicuous part of the house. This custom is now entirely done away; and in its room, to each shearer is given 6d. and a loaf of bread. However, some farmers, when all their corns are brought in, give their servants a dinner, and a jovial evening, by way of Harvest-home." P. Longforgan, Perths. Statist. Acc. xix. 550.

The custom is still retained in different parts of the country,

MAIDEN MYLIES, Orach, an herb, S.B. Chenopodium viride, et album, Linn. The name, in some parts of Sweden, is mell, in others melre; which evidently resemble Mylies. The Chenopodium rubrum is called swin-molla; Linn. Flor. Suec.

Burrow mailles, duties payable within burghs. Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 8.

- 2. The rent paid for a farm or possession, whether it be in money, grain, or otherwise.
- "The arrears of rent, or, in our law-style, of mails and duties, prescribe, if they be not pursued for within five years after the tenant's removing from the lands out of which the arrears are due." Erskine's Inst. B. iii. T. 7. s. 20.
- 3. Rent paid for a house, or for any thing of which one has had the use.
- "We ordain and appoint our present Town-the-saurer, and his successors in office, to pay the house-rent and mails of his Lordschip and succeeding Presidents of the Session." Act Sederunt, 12. Jan. 1677.

House-rent is often called house-mail, improperly pron. q. house-meal. Stable-mail, horse-mail, what is paid for entertainment for a horse, S. Horse-mail is improperly printed, according to the vulgar pronunciation, horse-meal.

"Mr. Blair has a chamber, I another, our men a third; our horse-meals every week above £11 Sterling." Baillie's Lett. i. 217.

This is also called stable-meal. V. ABEECH.

Grass-mail, rent paid for grass, S.

"King Robert—was so well pleased with the goats as his bed-fellows, that, when he came to be king, he made a law that all goats should be grassmail (or grass-rent) free." P. Buchanan, Stirl. Statist. Acc. ix. 14.

The term, as denoting rent, is evidently used in a secondary sense; but nearly allied to the primary meaning. For what is rent, but the duty or tribute paid to another, in respect of which he possesses a superiority? For still "the borrower is servant to the lender."

A.S. male, Isl. mala, Su.G. maala, Ir. mal tributum, vectigal. Male is used in the Sax. Chron. to denote the rent at which lands are let. Arm. mael, profit, gain; Pers. mal, riches; Gael. mal, rent.

The Su.G. word also signifying pay (stipendium), Ihre thinks that it is the root of C.B. milwr, and Lat. miles, a soldier, as signifying one who rights for pay. Allied to this is Su.G. muala maen, mercenary soldiers. It is probable that Su.G. maala, as denoting tribute, rent, pay, &c. is derived from maal mensura; because these being anciently paid in kind, were mostly delivered by measure.

It has been said; "The word Maill was antiently the name of a species of money. It was also made use of to signify some kind of rent, such as geese, &c. This makes it probable, that this word was intended by our ancestors to comprehend both money, rent, and kain." Russel's Conveyancing, Pref. ix.

Cowel has indeed derived mail, in Black mail, from Fr. mail, which, he says, 's signifieth a small piece of money." But Fr. maille is comparatively of late origin, and seems to have no connexion with our term. By Du Cange, vo. Mailla, it is viewed as merely a corruption of medaille. V. Spelm. vo. Maille. The idea, indeed, that it first signified money, and then tribute, is inconsistent with general history. For, among barbarous nations, tribute is first paid in kind; money is afterwards employed as a substitute.

BLACK-MAIL, s. A tax or contribution paid by heritors or tenants, for the security of their property, to those freebooters who were wont to make inroads on estates, destroying the corns, or driving away cattle.

"The thicres, and broken men, inhabitants of the saidis Schirefdomes,—foirmentis the partis of England—committis daylie thieftis, reiffis, heirschippes, murtheris, and fyre-raisings, upon the peaceable subjects of the countrie.—And—divers subjects of the Inland takis and sittis under thair assurance, payand them black-maill, and permittand them to reif, herrie, and oppresse their nichtbouris, with their knawledge, and in their sicht, without resistance or contradiction." Acts Ja. VI. 1567. c. 21. Mur-

This predatory incursion was called lifting the herschaw, or hership, which, by a singular blunder, is, in Garnet's Tour, denominated hardship, as if it had been the English word of this form.

Depredations of this kind were very common in the Highlands, or on their borders. Rob Roy Macgregor, one of the most famous of these freebooters, overawed the country so late as the year 1744, and used often to take the rents from the factor to the Duke of Montrose, after he had collected them for his master. His hostility to the duke, and, as would appear, his engaging in this strange kind of life, was owing to the following circumstance. Being proprietor of the estate of Craigrostan, he, with one Macdonald, had borrowed a considerable sum of money from the duke, for purchasing cattle. Macdonald, having got possession of the money, fled with it; and Roy being unable to refund the sum, the duke seized on his lands, and settled other tenants on the farms.

Such was the power of these freebooters, and so feeble was the arm of the law, that at times this illegal contribution received a kind of judicial sanction. A curious order of the justices of peace for the county of Stirling, dated 3d February [1658-9], is preserved in the Statistical Account of the parish of Strathblane, vol. xviii. 582. By this, several heritors and tenants in different parishes, who had agreed to pay this contribution to Captain Macgregor, for the protection of their houses, goods, and geir, are enjoined to make payment to him without delay; and all constables are commanded to see this "order put in execution, as they sall answer to the contrair."

An exception, however, is added, which, while it preserves the semblance of equity, shews, in the clearest light, the weakness of the executive power.

"All who have been ingadgit in payment, sal be liberat after such tyme that they go to Captaine Macgregor, and declare to him that they are not to expect any service frac him, or he expect any payment frac them." V. Garnet's Tour, i. 63-66.

This term was also used in the Northern counties of E., to denote "a certain rate of money, corn, cattle, or other consideration, paid unto some inhabiting near the Borders, being men of name and power, allied with certain known to be great robbers and spoil-takers within the counties; to the end, to be by them protected and kept in safety, from the danger of such as do usually rob and steal in those parts. Ann. 43. Eliz. c. 23." Cowel.

Spelman strangely thinks that it received this name from the poverty of those who were thus assessed, as being paid in black money, not in silver; -- uere vel opsoniis plerumque pendebatur, non argento; vo. Blackmail.

Du Cange adopts this idea, with a little variation. He says, "Brass money is with us called blanque, or blanche maille;" literally, white money. "But with the Saxons and English," he adds, "it is called black;" vo. Blakmale.

It might seem, perhaps, to have received this denomination in a moral sense, because of its illegality. Wachter, however, defines Blackmal tributum pro redimenda vexa; deriving it from Germ. placken vexare, exagitare; whence baurenplacker, rusticorum exagitator. Schilter says, that blak-en signifies, praedari.

MAILER, MAILLAR, s. 1. A farmer, one who pays rent.

The thrid wolf is men of heretege; As lordis, that hes landis be Godis lane,

Syne vexis him or half the term be gane, Wyth pykit querrells, for to mak him fane To flitt, or pay the gersum new agan.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 120.

2. It now signifies one who has a very small piece of ground; nearly synon, with cottar, S.

"Another class of people still remains to be mentioned, who, though they cannot be strictly called farmers, are so in part, as they occupy one, two, or three acres of ground. These are commonly called cottars, i. e. cottagers, or mailers, and often hold of the principal farmer. They do not depend on farming for their entire support, being, in general, artificers, mechanics, or day-labourers." P. Kiltearn, Ross. Statist. Acc. i. 275.

"The mailers are those poor people who build huts on barren ground, and improve spots around them, for which they pay nothing for a stipulated number of years." P. Urray, Ross. Ibid. vii. 254.

The word, however much it has fallen in its signification, is perfectly equivalent to furmer; as denoting one who pays mail or rent. V. FERME, s.

MAIL-GARDEN, s. A garden, the products of which are raised for sale; corr. pron. meal-garden, S.

It seems to be thus denominated, not because mail or rent is paid for the garden itself, but because, the fruits being raised for sale, he, who either sends for them, or consumes them in the garden, pays mail. It is thus distinguished from a garden, which, although rented, is kept for private use.

Mailin, Mailing, Maling, s. 1. A farm, S. from mail, because it is rented.

To tak ane maling, that grit lawbour requyris; Syne wantis grayth for to manure the land. Maitland Poems, p. 315.

2. The term during which a tenant possesses farm.

- " Nor yet is he [the lord of the tenement] prejudged in his right be the deed of his Fermour, done be him in the time of his mailling." Baron Courts, c. 48.

This, however, may be the gerund of the v.

According to Sir J. Sinclair, " maling comes from mail, in consequence of rents being originally paid in mails or bags." Observ. p. 181. But this is a very singular inversion. The bag might possibly receive this designation, as having been used for carrying the tribute paid to princes. V. Mail. MAIL-MAN, s. A farmer, q. a rent-payer.

" Na Mail-man, or Fermour, may thirle his Lord of his frie tenement, althought he within his time haue done thirle service, or other service, not aught be him." Baron Courts, c. 48.

Schilter mentions malman as used in Sax. A. 961. to denote one who served a monastery, perhaps by lifting the rents due to it, vo. Mal, census, p. 563. Maalman, according to Du Cange, dicti quod homines erant tributo obnoxii. Wachter gives various senses of this word, Gl. col. 1031.

"Fra thyne furth, it is statute and ordanit, that ilk officiar of the kingis, as Maire, or kingis Seriand, and Barronne Seriand, sall not pas in the countrie, na Barronne Seriand in the Barronny, but ane horne and his wand." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 110. Edit. 1566.

"It is ordanit, that al Mairis and Seriandis arreist at the Schireffis bidding, albeit that na partie followar be, all trespassouris." Ibid. 1436. c. 140.

According to Skene, "the Kings Maire is of ane greater power and authoritie, nor the messengers or officiars of armes, and speciallie in justice aires, and punishing of trespassors." De Verb. Sign. vo. Marus.

An officer of this description is now commonly denominated a Sheriff's Mair, S.

2. Maire of fee, a hereditary officer under the crown, whose power seems to have resembled that of sheriff-substitute in our times.

The power of this officer might extend either to one district in a county, or to the whole. He might appoint one or more deputies, who were to discharge the duty belonging to their office immediately in his name.

"A Mair of fee, quhether he be Mair of the schirefdome, or of part, sall haue power to present ane sufficient personn or personnis, & habill to the Schiref in court to be deputis vnder him.—He sall schaw nane vther power in his attachiamentis, na in his summoundis making, bot allanerly the precept of his ouerman, the quhilk commandis him to mak the summoundis." Acts Ja. I. 1429. c. 126. Edit. 1566.

Skene, in an inserted explanation, calls "the Mair of fee, Schiref in that part." Stat. David II. c. 51. s. 6. Vicecomites in hac parte, Marg. Lat. Elsewhere, he complains that "now the said office is given in fee and heritage to Maires of fee, quha knowis nocht their office: bot ar idle persones, and onely dois diligence in taking vp of their fees, from them to quhom they do na gud, nor service to the King." De Verb. Sign. vo. Marus.

In the reign of Alexander II., this office was not reckoned unworthy of the rank of an earl; and it had powers attached to it, to the exercise of which he had no claim merely as a nobleman.

"Na Earle, nor his servants may enter in the lands of anie freehalders haldand of the King, or take vp this vnlaw; bot onlie the Earle of Fife: and he may not enter as Earle; bot as Mair to the King of the Earledom of Fife, for vptaking of the kings deuties and richts." Stat. Alex. II. c. 15. s. 3.

Skene views the term, Mair of fee as synon. with Toscheoderach.

"It is necessare that the executer of the summons sall declare and exprime in his executions, his awin proper name, with the name of his office: As gif he be the Kings Mair or his Toscheoderach (ane serjeand, ane officiar, ane Mair of fie) or anie other name of office perteining to the execution of summons." Reg. Maj. I. c. 6. s. 7.

Toscheoderach, barbarum nomen, priscis Scotis, et Hybernis usitatum, pro Serjando, vel Serviente Curiae, qui literas citatorias mandat exsecutioni. Etapud interpretes Juris Civilis Nuncius dicitur. David 2. Rex Scotiae dedit et concessit Joanni Wallace suo Armi-gero, et fideli, officium Serjandiae Comitatus de Carrik, quod officium, Toschadorech dicitur, vulgò, ane mair of fee. Not. ad loc. Lat.

I am inclined, however, to think that Skene is mistaken here, and that the Toscheoderach was indeed the deputy of the Mair of fee. For in the text they seem to be distinguished:—Si fuerit Marus Domini Regis, vel Toscheoderach ipsius, vel aliquod nomen officii pertinentis ad summonitionem faciendam. According to this view, ipsius refers immediately to Marus; not to Regis, as Skene has understood it.

The same distinction occurs in another place.

"Sche sall gang to the principal Mare of that schirefdome, or to the Toschoderach gif he can be found." Reg. Maj. IV. c. 8. s. 3. Ad capitalem Marum illius comitatus, vel ad Toscheoderach.

If we could suppose, indeed, that Skene quoted the very words of the charter of David II., it would confirm his view. But he seems merely to subjoin his own explanation of the term, when he says; Dicitur vulgo, ane mair of fee.

Boece makes the Toscheoderach to be nothing more than a thief-catcher. Thus he explains the term; Latine emissarii lictores, seu furum et latronum indagatores. Hist. Ind. vo. Tochederach.

The term was also used to denote the office itself.

Hence it is thus explained by Skene.

"Tocheoderache, ane office or jurisdiction, not valike to ane Baillerie, speciallie in the Isles and Hie-landes. For the 9. Mart. 1554, Neill Mack Neill disponed and analied to James Mack Oneil, the lands of Gya, and vthers, with the Toschodairach of Kintyre." De Verb. Sign.

The term might at first view seem to have some affinity to Gael. Tosh, Toshich, primarily, the beginning or first part of any thing; sometimes, the front of the battle; hence, Toshich, the leader of the van of an army. But, from its determinate meaning, it appears to be merely a corruption of Gael. and Ir. teachdaire, a messenger, or teachdaireacht, a message. It may indeed be supposed, that tosh or toshich has been prefixed, as signifying that he was the first or principall messenger under the hereditary Mair.

The farther back we trace the office of Mair, the greater appears its dignity. The Pictish Chronicle, A. 938. mentions the death of Dubican, Mormair of Angus. The same title occurs in the Annals of Ulster, for the year 1032. Maolbryd is styled "Murmor of Mureve," or Moray. In these Annals, in the description of a battle between the Norwegians and Constantin, A. 921. Murmors are named as chiefs on Constantin's side: and, A. 1014. Douel, a great Murmor of Scotland, is killed with Brian Borowe. V. Pinkerton's Enquiry, ii. 185.

Mr. Pink. observes, that "this title seems equivalent to thane or iarl;" adding, "But I know not if it is any where else to be found." The late learned Dr. Donald Smith, whose early death every friend of the literature of our country must deplore, had the same idea. "Mormhair was the highest title of nobility among the ancient Scots, and still continues, among the speakers of Gaelic, to be applied to earl or lord, as banamhor air is to countess." Report Comm. Highland Soc. App. p. 269.

Did we pay any regard to the order of enumeration observed by Wyutown, we would infer that the Mair was inferior, not only to the Earl, but to the Baron, or at least nearly on a level with the latter. Speaking of the conduct of William of Normandy, after the conquest, he says;

And to the mare sykkyrnes, Of Lordis, that mast mychty wes, Thaire eldast barnys, and thare ayris Of Erlys, Baronys, and of Marys, For ostage gret he tuk alsua, And delyveryd til hym war tha: He send thame all in Normandy.

From the passage quoted above, from the statutes of Alexander II., with respect to Makduff, it appears that the office of "Mair to the King of the Earledom of Fife," was one of the hereditary privileges granted to his family. This was probably in consideration of his signal service in bringing Malcolm Canmore to the crown; although it is not particularly mentioned among the honours which he claimed as his reward. From the marginal note to the statute of Alexander II., Cuninghame, in his Essay on the Inscription on Makduff's Cross, not only infers, "that the Earl of Fife was Marus Regis Comitatus de Fife," but "makes the words graven upon the cross, to relate to the privileges of the regality the king gave to him, and to the asylum or girth." V. Sibbald's Fife, p. 219.

Robert II. granted a charter "to John Wynd, of the office of Mairship Principal, vic. Aberdeen,

Robert II. granted a charter "to John Wynd, of the office of Mairship Principal, vic. Aberdeen, with the lands of Petmukstoun, whilk land and office Robert de Keith, son to William de Keith Marshal of Scotland, resigned." Robertson's Index of Charters, p. 121, No. 71.

During the same reign, a charter is granted "to William Herowart, of the office of Mairship of the east quarter of Fife, with the land called the Mairtoun, whilk William Mair resigned." Ibid. p. 120. No. 68. From the connexion, it is probable, that some ancestor of the latter had received his surname from his office.

Perhaps it was the same land, that was afterwards given to William Fleming, who received "the office of Mair-of-fee of the barony of Carale [Crail], with the land of Martoun, and the acre called Pulterland, belonging to said office." Ibid. p. 127. No. 25.

Mr. Heron has said, that "the transient dignity of Murmor in the Scottish history, and that of iarl introduced into England, and more permanently established, are both of Danish origin." Hist. Scotland, i. Sect. 2. p. 148. 149. He refers to Mallet's Northern Antiquities, and Johnstone's Antiq. Celto. Scand.; but in that loose mode of quotation that generally characterises his work. I have not been able to find this word in either of the books referred to.

It would seem that Murmor, or more properly Mormair, is immediately of Gaelic origin. For Ir. mormaor not only signifies a lord mayor, but a high steward; V. Obrien. Shaw renders Gael. mormhaor, "a lord mayor, a high steward; an earl, lord." It is evidently from mor great, and maor "a steward, an officer, a servant; formerly, a baron," id. "Maor," says Obrien, "among the Scots, was anciently the same with Baron afterwards, and maormor, with Earl." C.B. maer a ruler, a governor; Arm. maier, the head of a village, whence perhaps Fr. maire a mayor, anc. maier.

But this term was by no means confined to the Celtic. It occurs, in a variety of forms, in the Gothic and other languages. Alem. mer a prince; whence, Marco-mer, the lord of the marches, Inguimer-us, the prince of the youth, Chlodo-mir, an illustrious prince. O.Teut. mari, maro, illustrious, celebrated; A.S. maere, id. O.Sw. mir, a king, according to Rudbeck. Hence, says Schilter, speaking of this radical term, Mayor hodie pro praefecto, rectore villae, Villicus, Hofmeister; Gl.Teut. Chald. Syr. mar, a lord; Turc. emir, Arab. emir, a prince, a governor; in anc. Ind. mor, moer, a king; Perimir a lord; Tartar. mir, a prince.

To pass your way, and der no mayr the toun. Wallace, viii. 872, MS.

"That the Mair and Baillie sall be chosen be the sicht and consideration of the communitie." Stat. Gild. c. 34.

The Provost, or Mayor, of Edinburgh seems formerly to have been distinguished from other officers, to whom the same name belonged, by being called the maister Mair.

The nomber of thame that wer thair, I sall descrive thame as I can; My Lord, I mene the maister Mair, The Prouest ane maist prudent man: With the haill counsall of the toun, Ilkane cled in a veluet goun.

Burel's Entry Q. 1590. Watson's Coll. ii. 14. It was written in the same manner in O.E.

"My Lord Mayr, Sir John Guillott Knyght, companyd of the Aldermen,—reseyved the said Quene very mykely. And after, they rod befor Hyr to the Mother Church, the sayd Mayre beryng his Masse." Q. Margaret's (Daughter to Hen. VII.) Journey to Scotland, Leland's Collect. iv. 271.

Langland seems to use it in the sense of Judge. Salomon the sage, a sermon he made

For amend Mayres, and men that kepe lawes; And tolde hem this teme, that I tel thinke, Ignis devorabit tabernacula eorum, qui libenter accipiunt munera.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 13, a.

Elsewhere it is conjoined with judge.

Therfore I red you reukes, that rich be on this earth,

Apon truste of your treasure, trientales to haue, Be ye neuer the bolder, to breake the ten hestes; And namely ye maisters, mayres, & judges, That haue the welth of this world, & for wise men be holden.

Ibid. Fol. 39, a.

In another place, it would seem to denote only an officer of a court of justice, as equivalent to the sense in which it is still used in S.

Shal neither king ne knight, constable ne mayre, Ouerleade the common, ne to the court sommone,

Ne put hem in panel, to done hem plight her truth.

Ibid. Fol. 16, b.

Where governors occurs in our version, Wiclif uses the term meyres. "And to meyris or presidentis, and to kyngis ye schul be led for me in witnessyng to hem, and to the hethen men," Matt. x. 18. The Gr. word is myspeoras.

In addition to the etymological hints given under sense 2., I shall only observe that mair, as denoting a magistrate, or mayor, has been generally, but improperly, derived from Lat. major. It is most probable that the Lat. compar. is from the same root with our theme, or with S. mair, greater, q. v. Maer, says Keysler, etiam Celtis praepositus est, a qua voce mallem Anglorum Major (Mayor) arcessere, quam e Latino fonte. Antiq. Septent. p. 395. MAIR, adj. More. V. MARE.

MAISTER, MASTER, s. 1. A landlord, a proprietor of an estate, S.

The word, in this sense, being used in relation to tenants, is evidently a remnant of the old feudal sys-

2. In composition, like master E., it is often used to denote what is chief or principal in its kind; as maister-street, the chief or principal street, Doug. V. 51. 8. &c. Mayster-man seems equivalent to Lord.

Wyntown, vii. 7. 201.

Feretawch or Ferchard, here called a maysterman, is designed by Fordun Comes de Strathern. As Wyntown speaks of "othir fyve mayster-men," we learn from Fordun, that six earls were engaged in this rebellion. Mayster-men, however, as used by Wyntown, may denote great men in general; corresponding to majoribus in Fordun. Concitatis regni majoribus, sex comites, Ferchard scilicet comes de Strathern et alii quinque. Scotichron. Lib. 8. c. 4.

Su.G. mester denotes a landholder, mesterman an architect; Mod. Sw. maesterman, -one who certainly gets the mastery,—an executioner, a hangman.
The term Master has generally been viewed as radically from Lat. Magister. But it may be questioned, whether, in some of the Northern dialects at least, it may not claim a Gothic origin. It occurs in almost all the dialects of this language; Alem. mestar, Germ. meister, Belg. meester, Isl. meistare, Dan. mester; as well as in C.B. meistr. A.S. muester was used as early as the reign of Alfred. As Lat. magister is evidently from magis, more, A.S. maester may be from maest, most, greatest; Alem. meistar from meist, id. &c. V. Ihre.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 63. 65. Can this have any affinity to MoesG. maihst, a dunghill, Belg. mest dung, mest-en to dung?

MAIT, MATE, adj. 1. Fatigued, overpowered with weariness.

Thare fa thay did assailye and inuade, Sa lang, quhil that by fors he was ouerset, And of the heuy byrdin sa mait and het, That his micht failyeit.-

Doug. Virgil, 417. 17. "Wery and mate." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 22, b.

2. Confounded, overwhelmed with terror. Affrayit of the ferlie scho stude sic aw, And at the first blenk become scho mate, Naturale hete left her membris in sic state, Quhill to the ground all mangit fell scho doun. Doug. Virgil, 78. 13.

3. Dispirited, dejected. The lordis, that than in Ingland ware, Feld thame of this a-grevyd sare, In peryle and in hard dowt stad, Of a gud rede all mate and made.

Wyntown, vii. 2. 30.

4. Stupified, or elevated, by means of strong drink. Ane Ingliss Captane was sittand wp so lait, Quhill he and his with drynk was made full mait. Nyn men was thar, now set in hye curage, Sum wald haiff had gud Wallace in that rage, Sum wald haiff bound Schir Jhon the Graym throught strenth.

Wallace, ix. 1405. MS. Rudd. derives it from O.Fr. mat overcome, beaten. In Gl. Rom. Rose, mat-er, to vanquish, is mentioned. Teut. matt, fessus, has also been referred to. We may add to these Su.G. matt, languidus, pro lassitudine viribus defectus, from Św. matt-a, Su.G. moed-a, Isl. maed-a, fatigare, molestia afficere, mod, lassus; Alem. muothe fatigatus, muade lassus, muad lassitudo; Schilter. A.S. methig, defatigatus, is radically allied. The Fr. word is most probably from the Goth. V. MUTH.

To MAK, MACK, MAKE, v. n. 1. To compose poetry.

3. To counterfeit, to assume prudish airs. Wow, quod Malkin, hyd yow; Quhat neidis you to maik it sua? Peblis to the Play, st. 8.

MAK, MAKE, s. 1. Manner, fashion; as make, E. Wallace slepyt bot a schort quhill and raiss, To rewll the ost on a gud mak he gais. Wallace, x. 554, MS.

2. It seems anciently to have denoted a poem, or work of genius.

Hence Kennedy says to Dunbar; Fule ignorant, in all thy mowis and makks, It may be verryfeit thy wit is thin, Quhen thou wryts Densman-Evergreen, ii. 66. V. MAKING.

MAKAR, MAKKAR, s. A poet.

I see the Makkaris amangis the laif Playis heir thair padyanis, syne gois to graif; Spairit is nocht thair facultie.

Dunbar, "Lament for the Deth of the Mak-karis," Bannatyne Poems, p. 74—78. Mr. Pink. has observed, that "the word maker is common in this sense in the English writers from the time of Henry VIII. to that of Elizabeth.'

It is formed from mak, A.S. mac-an, or Teut. maeck-en, in the same manner as Belg. dichter, a poet, from Germ. dicht-en facere, parare. The anc. Icelanders also used the v. yrk-ia in the sense of versificare, and yrkia visor, carmina condere, from yrk.

It is worthy of observation, that, in various languages, the name given to a poet contains an allusion to the creative power which has been ascribed to genius. Gr. TOINTHS, from TOILL, facio. A.S. sceop, id. literally a former or maker, from sceap-ian creare, facere. Omerus se godu sceop; Homer the excellent poet; Boeth. 41. 1. According to Ihre, Isl. skap, from skap-a creare, is used only to denote genius or ingenuity. Isl. skalld, poeta, seems to have a similar origin. G. Andr. derives it from skial figmentum. Alem. machara is rendered auctores. Dera heidenon irridun machara; Gentilium errorum auctores. Notk. Psa. 77. ap. Schilter. p. 558.

Making, s. Poetry.

Schir, I complaine of injure;

MAKDOME, s. 1. Shape, form; more generally used.

Makdome, and proper members all, Sa perfyte, and with joy repleit, Pruifs hir, but peir or perce all.

Montgomery, Maitland Poems, p. 165.

2. Elegance of form, handsomeness.

Doug. Virgil, 156. 40.—Aequatae spirant aurae, Virg.

Rudd. and Sibb. both refer to Maik, a mate or equal. It seems immediately allied to Isl. makligt, what is fit, suitable, equal; commodum, opportunum, par, Verel. Ind. A.S. maccalic, Germ. gemaechlico, id. Ihre views Su.G. mak, commoditas, as the root. G. Andr. derives the Isl. term from make, socius. Perhaps makly is used by Doug. as an adj.

Fr. malvoisie, a name given to a Greek, or Cretan wine, according to Sibb. "from Malvasia, a city of Candia." But Malvasia was a city of Peloponnesus, anciently called Epidaurus, and Epidaurum, from which this wine was first brought. The name was also given to the wine of Chios, an island in the Archipelago. Hence the Romans called it vinum arvisium, from Arvisium a promontory of Chios. Hence Kilian defines Teut. malvaseye with such latitude; Vinum Arvisium, Creticum, Chium, Monembasites. Ital. malvosio, Hisp. marvisia.

MAN, s. 1. A vassal, or subject.

That brocht him till the Erle in hy,
And he gert louss him hastily;
Then he become the Kingis man.

Barbour, x. 766, MS.
A.S. Germ. Belg. Isl. Su.G. man, a vassal. In this sense it is used, in the Laws of the Ostrogoths, as opposed to herre, a lord. Hence, as Wachter observes, the phrase, king's man, the king's vassal, and others of a similar kind. Isl. man-sal, the value of a slave, Verel.; a strange prostitution of the name of man!

Manes, among the Phrygians, denoted a servant; whence, it is supposed, the term came to be used by the Athenians in the same sense. V. Wachter, vo. Man. For the manner in which one became the bond-man of another, V. Tappie-Tousie.

2. One dedicated to the service of another from love.

MAND, s. Payment.

Ony partie that sall haif occasione to complain of ony decision gevin in the utter-hous, sall be hard in the haill presence upon ane mand of ane six lib. peise;" i. e. upon payment of a piece of money six pounds Scots in value. Acts Sederunt, 11. Jan. 1604.

This word at first view may seem allied to Su.G. mon, pretium, valor. It is used in the very same connexion as mand. Thingmaen sculu medh loghum doema thiuf til hanga fore half mare mun, oc eij fore minna; Judices jure damnabunt furem ad suspendium pro valore marcæ dimidiæ, sed non pro minore. Skane L. p. 29. ap. Ihre. It also signifies emolument, utility; Giorde honom aera och mycken monn; Ipsum honore et multo commodo ornavit. Histor. Ol. S. p. 47. ibid.

This Ihre considers as worthy to be enumerated amongst the most ancient terms in that language; although, as he supposes, entirely obliterated in the other Gothic dialects. He views MoesG. manvi. sumtus, as belonging to the same family; and both as probably allied to Heb. Manah, numeravit, supputavit.

Su.G. mund may also be mentioned, which signifies a gift, especially one given by a bridegroom, as an earnest to his bride, or the dowry given by her parent.

Mand, however, is probably the same with amand, which signifies a penalty or fine. " Each of the six clerks in the outer-house shall keep a book, in which all fines or amands, for the poor, shall be entered." Act Sederunt, 11. Aug. 1787. sed. 10.

Thus the origin is L.B. amanda, O.Fr. amande, mulcta, a fine. Nulla alia amanda pro tali forisfacto ab illis hominibus exigetur. Lobinell. Gloss. ad calicem Histor. Britan. ap. Du Cange. This, in Dict. Trev., is given as synon. with amende.

MANDMENT, s. An order, a mandate.

The scripture clepys the God of goddis Lord: For guhay thy mandmentis kepis in accord, Bene ane with the, not in substance bot grace. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 311. 33.

Fr. mandement, id. from Lat. mand-o.

MANDRIT, part. adj. Tame.
Thir ar no foulis of ref, nor of rethnas, Bot mansuete bot malice, mandrit and meke. Houlate, i. 19.

This word may be from A.S. manred, homage, as he who did homage to another might naturally enough be said to be tame, as opposed to one who struggled for his independence. V. MANREDYN.

MANE, s. Lamentation. V. MAIN.

MANE. BREID OF MANE. This seems to be what is called manchet-bread, E.

Thair is ane pair of bossis, gude and fyne, Thay hald ane galloun-full of Gaskan wyne.-And als that creill is full of breid of mane.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 71. Paindemaine is used in the same sense by Chaucer.

Sir Thopas was a doughty swain; White was his face as Paindemaine.

Skinner derives pannemaine, white bread, from Fr. pain de matin, " because we eat purer and whiter bread to breakfast." By the way, the O.Fr. main, signifying morning, would have been nearer his purpose. Mr. Pink. supposes that this designation is equivalent to the chief bread, or bread of strength, from Isl. magn, strength. Tyrrwhitt is " inclined to believe that it received its denomination from the province of Main, where it was perhaps made in the greatest perfection."

It would seem that this phrase is Teut., but not as referring to the strength of the bread. Kilian explains muene, by referring to wegghe. This again he renders wheaten bread; an oblong cake, and a cake shaped like an half moon; (panis triticeus: libum oblongum, et libum lunatum). As maen signifies the moon, this name may have been given to the wegghe from its form. We have still a very fine wheaten bread, which is called a wyg, sometimes a whig. Now as the Teut. wegghe was also called maene, our wyg may have been one species of the bread of maen. We have another kind of bread, of the finest flour baked with butter, called a plaited roll. Its form is oblong, and it is pointed at each end, so as to resemble the horns of the moon; only the points are not turned in the same direction. I should rather suspect that this bread has been thus denominated, not merely from its form, but from its being consecrated and offered to the moon, in times of heathenism. We know, that in different nations, " women baked cakes to the queen of heaven."

The idea, however, of the ingenious Sibb. deserves attention. He understands it as signifying almond biscuit, Fr. pain d'amand, Germ. mand bred; Chron. S. P. ii. 390, N. But the Germ. word is mandel.

MANELET, s. Corn Marigold. V. GUILD. MANER, s. Kind, sort. Maner dyk, maner strenth, a kind of wall or fence. Fr. maniere.

A maner dyk into that wod wes maid, Off thuortour ryss, quhar bauldly thai abaid. Wallace, ix. 906, MS.

Off gret holyns, that grew bathe heychand greyn, With thuortour treis a maner strenth maid he. Ibid. xi. 379, MS.

MANG, s. To mix one's mang, S.B. And I was bidding Jean e'en gee's a sang, That we amang the laeve might mix our mang. Ross's Helenore, p. 117.

This seems to be a proverbial phrase, of a redundant kind, q. to mix our mixture; here signifying, "to take our part in the song," or "join in the chorus." A. Bor. mang, however, signifies "a mash of bran or malt;" Gl. Grose. Isl. Su.G. meng. a, A.S. ge-meng-an, miscere. V. AMANG. To MANG, v. a. 1. To stupify or confound.

Naturale hete left her membris in sic state, Quhill to the ground all mangit fell scho down, And lay ane lang time in ane dedely swown. Doug. Virgil, 78. 15.

It is still used as signifying to run into disorder, from whatever cause. One is said to be mang't in his affairs, when they are in disorder; or with a farm, when he is not able to manage it, Ang. 2. To mar, to injure.

Thay lost baith benefice and pentioun that mareit, And quha eit flesch on Frydayis was fyre-fangit.-

To mend that menyé hes sa monye mangit, God gif thé grace aganis this guid new-yeir. Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 196.

3. To overpower, to master, Ang. Dool fell the swain that's mang'd wi' love! He goves for comfort fra' above; But Cupid, and hard-hearted Jove. Blink na' relief:

And a' his gaunts and gapes but prove Milk to his grief.

A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 22.

4. To render, or to become, frantic or delirious, Ang.

Bot than Turnus, half mangit in affray, Cryis, O thou Faunus, Help, help! I the pray, And thou Tellus, maist nobill God of erd. Doug. Virgil, 440. 27.

Will ran reid wod for haist, With wringing and flinging, For madness lyke to mang.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 67. She choaked and boaked, and cry'd, like to mang, Alas for the dreary spinning o't.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 133. Rudd. explains mangit as also signifying, maimed, bruised, &c. as if from Fr. mehaigne, changed to mayhim, afterwards maim, E.; which he deduces from L.B. maham-ium, macham-ium, mahem-ium; and this from Lat. manc-us. Sibb., who uses the same latitude of interpretation, refers to Teut. mencken mutilare. The origin may rather be Alem. mengen, deesse, deficere, (V. Mangel, Ihre;) probably from Isl. mein damnum, impedimentum. Perhaps the most simple derivation is from A.S. meng-an, &c., to mix; V. the s.; as a man is said to mix, when he begins to be stupified with drink; and as confusion is generally the consequence of mixture. V. BEMANG and MANYIE.

It seems very doubtful if it be the same word that is used by Langland, which Skinner renders quarrelsome, wicked; deriving it from A.S. man scelus.

And nowe worth this Mede, maried unto a manzed shrewe,

To one fals fickell tongue, a fendes beyet.

i. e. child, S. get. P. Ploughman, Fol. 8, b. also 19, b.

This word is sometimes printed mansed, as signifying, cursed. It occurs in a curious passage in P. Ploughman, which, as it contains some traits of ancient manners, may be acceptable to the reader. Ireland was, in an early period, called the Island of Saints. But if we judge of their saintship by the portrait drawn by Langland, in his age, the estimate will not be very high. In our own time, if Fame lies not, some of the Romish clergy in that country are not only much given to inebriety and broils, but, even in their public addresses to the people, endeavour to compel them to their duty by the common language of execration.

Proude priests come with him, mo than a thow-sand,

In paltokes and piked shoes, and pissers long kniues,

Comen agayne Conscience with couetyse they helden.

By Mary, quod a mansed priest, of the march of Ireland,

I count no more conscience, by so I catch silver, Than I do to drinke a draught of good ale. And so sayde sixty of the same contrey;

Mangyie is defined, "vice, or fault in the thing quhilk is bocht and sauld." Ind. ibid.

Du Cange derives L.B. maham-ium, O.Fr. mahain, mehain, not from Lat. manc-us, but from L.B. malign-are, nocere. Mehain, however, approaches so near to Goth. mein damnum, vitium, that this may rather be viewed as the origin. Isl. meinlaete signifies a wound. V. Mein, Wachter; Men, Ihre; and MANG, v.

Rudd. thinks that from manys, as denoting a manor-house, " is derived the S. Manse, i. e. a minister's dwelling-house." But it comes immediately from L.B. mansus, as used in a different sense. V. Manse. Manys is the same with Mains, q. v.

A.S. manred, id. The S. phrase, to mak manrent or manredyn, is merely A.S. manred maec-an, to do homage. Thus, the Gibconites are said to be the man-raedene, the servants or vassals of the Israelites, Josh. ix. 11. The word is compounded of A.S. man, which often signifies a servant or vassal, and raeden, law, state, or condition; q. the state of a vassal. Man been, or man weerthian, is to profess one's self to be the vassal of another. V. MAN.

Among the ancient Germans, manheit was used to denote homage; Su.G. manskap, Teut. manschap, id.; the terminations heit, skap, schap, all conveying the same idea with raeden.

The house which is set apart for the churchman's habitation is, in our law-language, called a manse." Erskine's Inst. B. ii. Tit. 10. s. 55.

This learned writer has remarked, that, from a variety of authorities cited by Du Cange, it appears that L.B. mans-us in the middle ages denoted "a determinate quantity of ground, the extent of which is not now known, fit either for pasture or tillage;" and that in the "capitulary of Charlemagne, it signifies the particular portion of land which was to be assigned to every churchman." He adds; " It has been by degrees transferred from the church-man's land to his dwelling-house." Ibid.

But he does not seem to have observed, that, according to Du Cange, so early as the year 1336, it was used for the parsonage-house.

To MANT, MAUNT, v. n. 1. To stutter, to stammer in speech, S.

"Hee who manteth or stammereth in his speach while hee is young, will in all appearance speake so vntill his dying day. Fooles dreame that man is like March, if hee come in with an Adders head, they thinke that hee shall goe out with a Peacok's taile; as if an euill beginning were the way to an happie end." Z. Boyd's Last Battell of the Soule,

Ramsay writes it both mant and maunt.

2. It is metaph. applied to rough, unpolished — Or of a plucked goose thou had been knawn, Or like a cran, in manting soon ov'rthrawn, That must take ay nine steps before she flee. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 29.

3. It is used as v. a., to denote the indistinct mumbling of the Romish litany.

Thay tyrit God with tryfillis tume trentalis, And daifit him with [thair] daylie dargeis-Mantand mort-mumlingis mixt with monye leis. Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 197.

Lat. mant-o, are, signifies to stay. But this seems rather from C.B. Ir. mantach, a stutterer, Gael. mandagh, id. Sir J. Sinclair gives a different etymon. "To mant [μαντομαι, Gr.], to stammer; or to hesitate in speaking, as the persons who pronounced the heathen oracles affected to do, when they pretended to be inspired." Observ. p. 89.

"It is customary to ride the marches, occasionally, so as to preserve in the memory of the people the limits of their property." P. Dunkeld, Perths. Statist. Acc. xx. 441.

MARCHSTANE, MARCH-STONE, s. Alandmark, S. " - Therefore ordain—the march-stones in the muir and moss to be taken up and removed away." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 66.

Isl. markstein, id. from mark, A.S. mearc, Teut. marck, merch, a limit, a boundary, and stein, a stone. Kilian quotes And. Velleius, as observing that Teut. marck first denoted any peculiar sign or seal; was then used for a standard, merch and buniere having the same meaning; and that, as the design of a standard is to direct the eyes and minds of the soldiers towards a particular spot, it came at length to signify a boundary.

MARCHET, s. The fine, which, it is pretended, was paid to a superior, either in cattle or money, for redeeming a young woman's virginity, at the time of her marriage.

"-Conforme to the law of Scotland, the marchet of ane woman, noble or servant, or hyreling, is ane young kow, or thrie schillings." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 31.

Those who wish a full and satisfactory account of the meaning of this term, may consult Lord Hailes, Annals, i. 312-329.

There seems, indeed, to have been no other foundation for the story told by Boece, and adopted by others, than either the fine paid to a superior by his vassal, or by one who held of him, for the liberty of giving away his daughter in marriage; or that exacted of a dependant, when his daughter was debauched.

Mercheta, according to Whitaker, is nothing more than the merch-ed of Howel Dha, "the daughter-hood, or the fine for the marriage of a daughter." Hist. Manchester, 8vo, i. 359. But Lord Hailes seems justly to hesitate as to ed signifying, in C.B., a fine for a marriage.

As C.B. merch denotes a virgin, Pruss. Lithuan. merg, Wachter deduces the term from Isl. maer, id., and thinks that the writers of the dark ages thence formed their marcheta in L.B.

If we suppose the word to have been used by German writers, mercheta might have been formed from merch and heyd, heit, a termination denoting state or condition, q. the state of virginity.

In addition to the various authorities given by our learned Judge, it may not be improper to quote what has been said on this subject by Pennant, when giving an account of the Pulestons of Emral Hall in Flintshire.

"His son,—Richard, held, in the 7th of Edward II. lands in the parish of Worthenbury, by certain services et per ammabrogium, or a pecuniary acknowledgment paid by tenants to the king, or vassals to their lords, for the liberty of marrying, or not marrying. Thus Gilbert de Maisnil gave ten marks of silver to Henry III. for leave to take a wife; and Cecily, widow of Hugh Pevere, that she might marry whom she pleased. It is strange that this servile custom should be retained so long. It is pretended, that the Amobyr among the Welsh, the Lyre-wite among the Saxons, and the Marcheta mulierum among the Scots, were fines paid by the vassal to the superior, to buy off his right to the first night's lodging with the bride of the person who held from him: but I believe there never was any European nation (in the periods this custom was pretended to exist) so barbarous as to admit it. It is true, that the power above cited was introduced into England by the Normans, out of their own country. The Amobyr, or rather Gobr merch, was a British custom of great antiquity, paid either for violating the chastity of a virgin, or for a marriage of a vassal, and signifies, the price of a virgin. The Welsh laws, so far from encouraging adultery, checked, by severe fines, even unbecoming liberties. The Amobr was intended as a preservative against lewdness. If a virgin was deflowered, the seducer, or, in his stead, her father, paid the fine. If she married, he also paid the fine." Tour in Wales, p. 221. 222.

"The Merch-Gobr of his [the Bard's] daughter, or marriage fine of his daughter, was cxx pence. Her cowyll, argyffreu, or nuptial presents, was thirty shillings; and her portion three pounds. It is remarkable, that the Pencerdd Gwlad, or chief of the faculty, was entitled to the merch-gobr, or amobr, for the daughters of all the inferiors of the faculty within the district, who paid xxiv pence on their marriage; which not only shews the antiquity, but the great authority of these people." Ibid. p. 432. MARCHROUS.

MoesG. marisaius, Alem. mersch, Belg. maerasch, Fr. marais. Rudd. views Lat. mare, the sea, as the root. Ihre refers to Su.G. mor, Belg. moer, moorish land, terra palustris. Isl. myra, palus, moer lutum, argilla, or Su.G. maer, terra putris, may be the more immediate source. But all these terms seem originally allied to some radical word denoting a pool, or body of standing water; as A.S. mere, Teut. maer, lacus, stagnum. Su.G. mar signifies not only the sea, but a lake, and stagnate water in general.

MARIES, s. pl. The designation given to the maids of honour in Scotland.

"The nintein day of August 1561 yeirs, betwene seven and eicht hours befoirnone, arryved Marie Quene of Scotland, then wedo, with two gallies furth of France: in her cumpany, besydes hir gentilwemen, called the Maries, wer hir thrie uncles, the Duke d'Omal, the grand Prior, the Marques d'Albufe." Knox's Hist. B. iv. p. 283.

This Queen had four maids of honour, all of the name of Mary. These were Mary Livingston, Mary Fleming—Seaton, and—Beaton. V. Keith's Church Hist. p. 55. Hence it has been supposed, that the name passed into a general denomination for female attendants; according to the old Ballad:

Now bear a hand, my Maries a',

And busk me brave, and make me fine.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 173.

Ye do ye till your mither's bower,

As fast as ye can gang,

And ye tak three o' your mither's marys,
To had ye unthocht lang.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 130.

From analogy, I am much inclined to think that the term is far more ancient than the period referred to. For we learn from Lye, that the O.E. called the queen's maids, the Queen's Meys. V. Max. Hence it is highly probable that our term Marie is an official designation, and allied to Isl. maer, a maid, a virgin. This more anciently was written meijar in plur. Meijar ordum skal mange trua,—Let no one give faith to the words of young women; Havamal, p. 75.

In an ancient poem on the devastation of the Hebudae, or Western Isles, by Magnus King of Norway, about the year 1093, the same term occurs.

Geck hatt Skota steckvir
Thiod rann Mylok til maedi
Meijar sudr i eyom.
Ivit altum Scotos qui fugat
Populus cucurrit Mylsicus lassatus
Virgines ad meridiem in insnlis.

Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 232. By thiod Mylsk the inhabitants of Mull seem to be meant.

In the Edda, mention is made of three female deities of the northern nations, supposed to dispense to men their fates, which are called the Three Meyar; Myth. 15. These Keysler considers as the very personages called Dis Mairabus in one of Gruter's Inscriptions. V. Antiq. Septent. p. 394—397.

Thus the Queen's Maries, a phrase still common among the vulgar, may be exactly synon. with the Queen's maids. The author of the Gloss. to Gunnlaug. Saga derives Isl. maer, a virgin, from maer, purus, candidus, eximius; which has more probability than the etymology given by G. Andr., from moir, mollis. R in Isl., in the end of a word, is often to be viewed as a sort of quiescent letter, because although found in the nominative, it is lost in the other cases. But maer is not of this description, as the r is preserved in declension. Tha minntiz hann thess er maerin mikillata hafdi maelt; He called to recollection the words of that magnanimous virgin. Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 2.

In Norfolk, as we learn from Spelman, moer denotes a virgin; a word which, he thinks, was left by the Danes, who obtained possession of that county. A. 876. It may be added, that mæer, O.Dan., is viewed as corresponding to bower-maidens.

—— See that ye're buskit bra', And clad ye in your best cleading, Wi' your bower maidens a'.

In this manner Mr. Jamieson renders the language. of the original in Kaempe Viser.

Tag kun dine beste klaeder paa, Med all dine mæer og kvinde.

Popul. Ball. ii. 110. 115.

It has been supposed that Isl. maer, virgo, may be merely the s. feminine formed from maug-r, a son, also, a male. Maer oc maugr, foemina et mas; Gl. Edd. V. MAICH.

This name might be derived from Martigues a town in Provence. But it seems rather borrowed from the commander or colonel. Knox afterwards mentions this as the designation of a person.

Rudd. refers to Fr. mari, a husband, Sibb. to mariée a spouse. Perhaps it is rather from anc. Su.G. mager, maghaer, affinis, a relation; whence maghararf, an inheritance possessed by right of relationship. As marrow is applied to the matrimonial relation, it is probable that the term was primarily used to express that fellowship or equality which subsists among those who are connected by blood or marriage; especially as Fr. macar, which seems to acknowledge a Goth. origin, is used for a mate. V. Maag, thre.

He callit his marschall till him tyt, And bad him luke on all maner; That he ma till his men gud cher; For he wald in his chambre be, A weill gret quhile in privaté.

Barbour, ii. 4, MS.

This, if not radically a different word, is a deviation from the original sense. For, in the Salic law, Marescalcus properly denotes one who has the charge of a stable, Germ. marschalk, Su.G. marskalk, id. from Goth. mar, Su.G. maer, a horse, and skalk a servant. The term, however, was used with great latitude. Hence some have supposed, that, although written in the same manner, it was differently derived, according to its various applications. Thus as Germ. marschalk also signified praefectus servorum, Wachter deduces it from mer, mar, major vel princeps; the same word, as denoting a prefect of the boundaries, from A.S. maera, fines. Sibb. derives the term, as rendered by him, from A.S. maer summus, and schalk.

- "In 1565, the rents were £263:16:2 sterling, —60 marts or fat beeves, 162 sheep," &c. Statist. Acc. V. 4.

2. Used metaph. to denote those who are pampered with ease and prosperity.

"As for the fed Marts of this warlde, the Lord in his righteous judgment, hes appoynted them for slaughter." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591, A. 4. a.

The word mart in Gael. denotes a cow. But as used by us at least, it is probably an abbreviation of Martinmas, the term at which beeves are usually killed for winter store. This is commonly called Martlemas in E., whence the phrase mentioned by Seren. Martlemas beef, which is evidently equivalent to Mairt. The term is used A. Bor.

"Two or more of the poorer sort of rustic families still join in purchasing a cow, &c. for slaughter at this time, (called in Northumberland a Mart), the entrails of which, after having been filled with a kind of pudding-meat, consisting of blood, suet, groats, &c. are formed into little sausage links, boiled, and sent about as presents, &c. From their appearance they are called Black Puddings." Brand's Popular Antiq. p. 355.

The Black Puddings are still an appendage of the Mart in S. They are made of blood, suet, onions, pepper, and a little oat-meal.

The season of killing beeves is sometimes called Mart time. This designation, as the time itself falls in November, corresponds to that which the ancient Northern nations gave to this month. For they called it Blot-monath, or "the month of sacrifice, because they devoted to their gods the cattle which were killed in it." Ol. Worm. Fast. Dan. p. 43. In Denmark the modern name of November is Slactemanet, Ib. p. 46. V. Moneth.

MARTIN (St.) OF BULLION'S DAY, s. The fourth day of July O.S.

The idea of prognosticating as to the future state of the weather, from the temperature of the air on certain festival days, has very generally, and very early, prevailed amongst our ancestors. It seems extremely doubtful, whether these prognostications were formed from any particular regard to the saints, with whose festivals they were conjoined, or from any peculiar influence ascribed to them. It may rather be suspected, that they were in use previously to the introduction of Christianity; and that the days formerly appropriated to such prognostication, merely changed their names. Such observations, perhaps, have been treated with more contempt, in some instances, than they deserved. Were any particular idol or saint supposed to have an influence on the weather, the idea could not be treated with too much ridicule. But certain positions of the heavenly bodies, in relation to our earth, concurring with a peculiar temperature of the atmosphere surrounding it, may have a stated physical effect, which we neither thoroughly know, nor can account for. Human life is of itself too short, and the generality of men, those especially who are crouded together in cities, are too inattentive, to form just rules from accurate observation; while they refuse to profit by the remarks of the shepherd, or the peasant. These, perhaps, they occasionally hear; but either they have not opportunity of putting them to the test, or they overlook them with contempt, as acknowledging no better origin than the credulity of the vulgar. It is certain, however, that those who still reside in the country, such especially as lead a pastoral or agricultural life, often form more just conjectures with respect to the weather, than the most learned acade. micians. Almost all their knowledge is the fruit of experience: and, from the nature of their occupations, they are under a much greater necessity of attending to natural appearances, than those who reside in cities. We must add to this, that from their earliest years they have been accustomed to hear those traditionary calculations, which have been transmitted to them from their remotest ancestors, and to put them to the test of their own observa-

We find that the mode of prognostication from particular days, was in use in Britain, as early as the time of Bede. For this venerable author wrote a book expressly on this subject, which he entitled Prognostica Temporum. It has been observed, indeed, that it was much earlier. Mizaldus has remarked, that 'Democritus and Apuleius affirm, that the weather of the succeeding year will correspond to that of the dies Brumalis, or shortest day of the year; and that the twelve following months will be similar to the twelve days immediately succeeding it; the first being ascribed to January, the second to February, and so on with respect to the rest.' Aeromantia, Class. 5. De signis fertilitatis, Aphor. 16. ap. Ol. Wormii Fast. Dan. p. 110.

The Danish peasants judge in like manner of the temperature of the year, from that of the twelve days succeeding Yule; and this they call Jule-mercke. Worm, ibid. I have not heard that any correspondent observation of the weather is made by the inhabitants of the Lowlands. But so very similar is the account given by Wormius, of the Danes, to that of our Highlanders by Pennant, that It is worth while to compare them. Speaking of the twelve days immediately following Christmas, Wormius says; Ab hoc duodecim inclusive diligenter Agricolae observant dies, quorum temperiem circulo creta inducto trabibus ita appingunt, ut si totus fuerit serenus, circulo saltim delineetur; sin totus nubilus, totus circulus creta inducatur; si dimidius serenus, dimidius nubilus, proportionaliter in circulo descripto id annotent. Ex iis autem totius anni futuram temperiem colligere solent; affirmant namque primum diem Januario, secundum Februario, et ita consequenter respondere. Idque Jule-mercke vocant. Fast. Dan. L. 2. c. 9.

"The Highlanders form a sort of almanack, or presage of the weather, of the ensuing year, in the following manner. They make observation on twelve days, beginning at the last of December; and hold as an infallible rule, that whatsoever weather happens on each of those days, the same will prove to agree on the corresponding months. Thus January is to answer to the weather of December the 31st, February to that of January 1st; and so with the rest. Old people still pay great attention to this augury." Pennant's Tour in Scotland 1772, Part ii. p. 48.

In Banffshire, particular attention is paid to the three first days of winter, and to the first night of January, which is called Oidhch' Choille.

"On the first night of January, they observe, with anxious attention, the disposition of the atmosphere. As it is calm or boisterous; as the wind blows from the S. or the N.; from the E. or the W.; they prognosticate the nature of the weather, till the conclusion of the year. The first night of the New Year, when the wind blows from the W., they call dàr-na-coille, the night of the fecundation of the trees." P. Kirkmichael, Statist. Acc. xii. 458.

I have specified St. Martin's day, as it is particularly attended to in the north of Scotland. The traditionary idea is, that if there be rain on this day, scarcely one day of the forty immediately following will pass without rain, and vice versa. It is sometimes expressed in this manner; "If the deer rises dry, and lies down dry, on St. Martin's day, there will be no rain for six weeks; but if it rises wet, or lies down wet, it will be rain for the same length of time." Some pretend that St. Martin himself delivered this as a prophecy. St. Swithin, whose day, according to the new stile, corresponds to our St. Martin's, has been called the rainy saint of England, and the weeping saint, in consequence of a similarity of observation. Gay refers to this, in his Trivia.

Let cred'lous boys, and prattling nurses tell,— How if, on Swithin's Feast the welkin lours, And ev'ry penthouse streams with hasty show'rs, Twice twenty days shall clouds their fleeces drain, And wash the pavements with incessant rain.

Martin is often denominated the drunken saint.

Why this saint is denominated of Bullion, I cannot pretend to say. It is not from Boulogne. For it does not appear that he had any connexion with this place. Du Cange calls this day Festum Sti Martini Bullientis, adding, vulgo etiamnum S. Martin Bouillant. Both words undoubtedly signify boiling, hot, fervid. In Dict. Trev. this name is supposed to originate from the warmth of the season in which this feast falls. On apelle S. Martin bouillant, la fete de S. Martin qui vient en été.

I have met with several intelligent people, who assert that they have found the observation very frequently confirmed by fact. There is a remarkable coincidence with the traditionary system of Danish prognostication. The Danes indeed take their observation not from St. Martin's day, on the fourth of July, but from that of the Visitation of the Virgin, which falls on the first. Their prognostication is thus expressed by Wormius.

Si pluit, haud poteris coelum sperare serenum,

Transivere aliquot ni prius ante dies.

"Our peasants," he adds, "expressly assert, that if there be rain on this day, it will continue to the day of Mary Magdalene," that is, from the fifth to the twenty-second day of the month. Fast. Dan. p. 115.

MARTIN. Saint Martunis Fowle. Then Myttaine and Saint Martynis fowle Wend he had bene the hornit howle, Thay set upon him with a yowle, And gaif him dynt for dynt.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21. Lord Hailes says, this is "the marten or martlet, which is supposed to leave this country about Sc. Martin's day in the beginning of winter." I suspect, however, that this is a translation of the French name of the ring-tail, a kind of kite, oiseau de S. Martin, especially as conjoined with the Myttaine, which is evidently a bird of prey.

2. One is said to be martyrit when "sore wounded or bruised;" Rudd. S. pron. q. mairtird, like

3. The term is used improperly as signifying to bespatter with dirt. Any thing mismanaged is also said to be mairtir'd; Ang.

Rudd. also explains this martyred, as being the same word. This is the most probable supposition; as Fr. martyr-er not only signifies to martyr, but to torment, to put to extreme pain. Hence, perhaps, by the same transition, Sw. marter-a to torture, to torment. The term might, however, seem allied to MoesG. maurthr slaughter, Isl. myrth-a, to kill, whence E. murder.

Lat. " acer a quo f. corr. est B. maeser, Scot. saepissime maser." Rudd. vo. Hattir.

But the idea of the term being derived from the Lat. word seems groundless; especially as it assumes a form similar to that in our language, in a variety of others. Germ. maser, Su.G. masur, Isl. mau-sur, mosor, C.B. masarn. Ihre derives masur from mas macula, because of the variegation of the wood of this tree. V. MAZER.

MASHLIN, Mashlie, Maischloch, s. 1. Mixed grain, S. mashlum, Shirr. Gl. mislen, E.

"Na man sall presume to grind quheit, maischloch, or rye, with hande mylnes, except he be compelled be storme,—or be inlaik of mylnes, quhilk sould grind the samine." Stat. Gild. c. 19.

This has evidently the same origin with mislen, which, according to Johnson, is corrupted from miscellane. Sibb. gives a more natural etymon; Fr. meslange, meslée, a mixture. But this word is probably of Goth. origin. Teut. masteluyn, farrago, Belg. masteleyn, id. A.S. mistlic, various; Germ. misslich, Alem. Franc. missilihho, MoesG. missaleiks, id. Wachter views it as compounded of miss, expressing defect, and like. Perhaps it is rather from missch.en, to mix.

2. Mashlie also denotes the broken parts of moss. Mashlie-moss, a moss of this description, one in which the substance is so loose that peats cannot be cast; but the dross, or mashlie, is dried, and used for the back of a fire on the hearth, S.B.

MASKERT, s. Swines maskert, an herb, S. Clown's all-heal, Stachys palustris, Linn.

The Sw. name has some affinity; Swinknyler, Linn. Flor. Suec. 528. This seems to signify, swines' bulbs or knobs. Swine, he says, dig the ground in order to get this root. The termination of our word is evidently from wort; perhaps q. mask-wort, the root infused for swine.

MASSIMORE, s. The dungeon of a prison or castle, S.A.

It is said, that, in exercise of his territorial jurisdiction, one of the ancient lairds had imprisoned, in the Massy More, or dungeon of the castle, a person named Porteous." Border Minstrelsy, i. Intr.

This is evidently a Moorish word, either imported during the crusades, or borrowed from the old romances.

Fr. mastin, Ital. mastino, L.B. mastin-us, perperam mastiv-us; Du Cange.

I have met with a curious etymon of this word.

"Budaeus calleth a Mastiue Molossus, in the olde Brittish speeche they doe call him a Masethefe, and by that name they doe call all manner of barking curres, that doe vse to barke about mens houses in the night, because that they doe mase and feare awaie theefes from the houses of their masters." Manwood's Forrest Lawes, Fol. 93, b. MAT, Mot, aux. v. May.

O thou my child, derer, so mat I thriue, Quhill that I leuit, than myne awin liue. Doug. Virgil, 152. 5.

"Well mat, or mot ye be, well may it be, or go with you, S." Rudd. Mat is more commonly used, S.B.

Doug. Virgil, 44. 5.

Rudd. derives it from Belg. moet-en, debere, teneri, obligari. Were this the etymon, there would be r change from the idea of possibility to that of neresity. Belg. Ik moet, I must, is certainly from moet-en. A.S. mot signifies, possum, licet mihi; we moton, we might. Su.G. maatte, pron. motte, is used in the same manner. Ing mautte goerat: it is necessary for me to do, or, I must do. The true origin seems to be Isl. Su.G. maa, maatte, possum, potnit. Seren. derives E. may from this roots and certainly with good reason. For although, at first view, this form of the v. may appear to imply permission only, it necessarily includes the idea of power. Thus, when a wish is expressed in this manner, Well mot ye be, if the language be resolved, the sense is; "May power be granted to you to continue in health and prosperity!" Mot is indeed the sign of the optative.

MATALENT, MATELENT, s. Rage, fury. On him he socht in ire and propyr teyn; Vpon the hed him straik in matalent. Wallace, iv. 465. MS.

Hunting with houndis, hornes, schout and crye, Wylde dere out throw the woddis chace and mate. Doug. Virgil, 299. 15.

In this sense it might seem allied to Isl. meid-a mutilare, laedere, membris truncare; MoesG. maitan, laedere, conscindere. But the language of the original is;

Venatu invigilant pueri, silvasque fatigant.

It therefore signifies, to weary out, to overcome the game by fatiguing it. Mait, q. v. may therefore be viewed as the part. pa. of this verb.

MATERIS, s. pl. Matrons; Lat. matres, mo-

MAUCH, MACH, MAUK, s. A maggot, S. A. Bor. mauk.

" A mach and a horse's hoe are baith alike;" S. Prov. Ferguson, p. 7.

This seems to have as much of the enigma, as of the proverb.

Mauch mutton is one of the ludicrous designations that Dunbar gives to Kennedy, in his Flyting; Evergreen, ii. 60. He evidently alludes to mutton that has been so long kept as to become a prey to maggots.

Su.G. matk signifies not only a worm but a maggot; Dan. maddik, Isl. madk-ur, id. Seren. views Isl. maa terere, as the origin; perhaps, because a maggot gnaws the substance on which it fixes.

MAUCHY, adj. Dirty, filthy, S., if not from the preceding word, radically the same with E. mawkish, q. what excites disgust, generally derived from E. maw, Su.G. mag, the stomach, whence maegtig, mawkish. V. Seren.

Probably from the same origin with E. mellow: Su.G. miaelt, mitis, mollis, Isl. mioll, snow in a state of dissolution; q. malm, if not corrupted from Su.G. mogn-a, to become mellow. It may be observed, however, that Teut. molm signifies rottenness; caries, et pulvis ligni cariosi; Kilian.

MAUN, a term used as forming a superlative; sometimes maund, S.

Muckle maun, very big or large; as muckle maun chield, a young man who has grown very tall; a muckle maun house, &c. This phraseology is very much used in vulgar conversation.

A.S. maegen, in composition, has the sense of great or large; maegen-stan, a great stone; hence E. main. Isl. magn vires, robur; magandemadr, adultus, et viribus pollens, nearly allied to the phrase, a maun man, S., i. e. a big man; magn-ast, invales-

MAUNDRELS, s. pl. Idle stuff, silly tales; auld maundrels, old wives fables; Perths., Bor-Jawthers, haivers, are nearly synon.; with this difference, that maundrels seems especially applied to the dreams of antiquity.

Perhaps from Su.G. men, communis, vulgatus, or maengd multitudo, and Isl. draeft, sermo stultus et ructantia verba, q. the talk of the vulgar or of the multitude. Drucken oc drafvelsfuller, drunk and full of foolish conversation, Verel. It may, how-ever, be a derivative from E. maunder, to grumble, to murmur. This Johnson derives from Fr. maudire, to curse, (Lat. maledicere); Seren. from Su.G. man-a provocare, exorcizare.

MAW, SEA-MAW, s. The common gull, S. Larus canus, Linn.

Vol. II.

Through the whole of the year, the sea gulls (called by the vulgar sea maws) frequently come apon land; but when they do so, it assuredly prognosticates high winds, with falls of rain from the E. and S.E.; and as soon as the storm abates, they return again to the frith, their natural element." P. St. Monance, Fife, Statist. Acc. ix. 339.

"Give your own sea maws your own fish guts;" S. Prov. "If you have any superfluities, give them to your poor relations, friends, or countrymen, rather than to others." Kelly, p. 118. "Keep your ain fish-guts for your ain sea-maws," is the more common mode of expressing this proverb.

Dan. maage, a gull; Su.G. maase, fisk-maase, id. As maase signifies a bog, a quagmire, Ihre thinks that these birds have their name from the circumstance of their being fond of bogs and lakes.

S. P. Repr. iii. 130.

Chaucer uses maumet in the same sense, and maumetrie for idolatry; corrupted from Mahomet, whose false religion, in consequence of the crusades, came to be so hated, even by the worshippers of images, and of saints and angels, that they represented his followers as if they had actually been idolaters; imputing, as has been often done, their own folly and criminality to those whom they opposed.

R. Glouc. uses the term in the same sense.

A temple heo fonde faire y now, & a maxmed a midde,

That ofte tolde wonder gret, & wat thing mon bi tidde.

Of the mamet he tolden Brut, that heo fonden there.

Cron. p. 14.

MAWSIE, s. A drab, a trollop; a senseless and slovenly woman, S.

The French use maussade in the sense of slovenly. But this is derived from Fr. sade, proper, and mal, Lat. mal-us, used as a privative.

Isl. mas signifies nugamentum, masa nugor; Su.G. mes homo nauci; Germ. matz, vanus, futilis, inanis, also used as a s. for a fool; musse, otium. In the same language metse denotes a whore. This has been deduced from Mazzen, the name anciently given to the warlike prophetesses of the Northern nations, whom the Greeks called Amazons; Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 460. El. 2. Warm, as expressive of the effect of a sultry day, S.B.

And they are posting on whate'er they may, Baith het and meeth, till they are haling down. Ross's Helenore, p. 73.

This word may originally have denoted the fatigue occasioned by oppressive heat, as radically the same with Mait, q. v.

MEETHNESS, s. 1. Extreme heat, S.B.

The streams of sweat and tears thro' ither ran Down Nory's cheeks, and she to fag began, Wi' wae, and faut, and meethness of the day. Ross's Helenores, p. 27.

Douglas is here describing the chariot of Venus, the furuiture of which was hung with little bells; as the horses of persons of quality were wont to be in former ages. Mr. Pink. leaves megir unexplained. But although it cannot admit of the common sense of E. meagre, it is certainly the same word. It seems to have been used by our S. writers with great latitude. It occurs in this very poem, i. 21. as denoting timidity, or some such idea connected with pusillanimity.

- Certes my hart had brokin, For megirness and pusillamitie, Remainand thus within the tre all lokin.

Or, it may be allied to Belg. meusel-en pitissare, ligurire, et clam degustare paulatim, (smaigher, synon. Ang.); as primarily referring to the conduct of children, who consume any dainty by taking a very small portion at once.

MEITH, aux. v. Might. V. MITH.

MEITH, MEETH, METH, MYTH, s. 1. A mark, or anything by which observation is made, whether in the heavens, or on the earth, S. pron. q. meid, Ang. as, I hae nae meids to gae by.

Not fer hens, as that I beleif, sans fale, The freyndlie brotherly coistis of Ericis, And souir portis of Sicil bene, I wys, Gif I remember the meithis of sternes wele.

Doug. Virgil, 128. B.

Ross's Helenore, p. 25.

"The fishermen direct their course in sailing, by observations on the land, called meeths, and formed from the bearings of two high eminences." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 191.

Myth, Brand's Orkn. V. Lum.

This seems to be the primary sense of the term: Isl. mide, a mark, mid-a to mark a place, to take observation; locum signo, spatia observo et noto; G. Andr. p. 178; mid, a certain space of the sea, observed on account of the fishing; certum maris spatium, ob piscaturam observatum. Isl. mid-a also signifies, to aim in a right line, to hit the mark; Su.G. matt-a, id. Ihre supposes, rather fancifully perhaps, that both these verbs are to be deduced from Lat. med-ium, q. to strike the middle. But that of hitting a mark seems to be only a secondary idea. It is more natural to view them as deducible from those terms which denote measurement, especially as Dan. maade signifies both a measure, and bounds; Alem. mez a measure, the portion measured, and a boundary. V. Schilter. The ideas of marking and measuring are very congenial. For the memorials of the measurement of property are generally the marks by which it is afterwards known.

2. A sign, a token, of whatever kind, S.

For I awow, and here promittis eik, In sing of trophé or triumphale meith, My loupt son Lausus for to cleith With spulye and al harnes rent, quod he, Of younder rubaris body fals Énee.

Doug. Virgil, 347. 34.

Isl. mide signum, nota intermedia in re quapiane inserta, G. Andr.

3. A landmark, a boundary.

"Ane schyre or schireffedome, is ane parte of lande, cutted and separated be sertaine meithes and marches from the reste." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Schireffe, par. 1.

"Gif the meithes and marches of the burgh, are wel keiped in all parties." Chalmerlan Air, c. 39.

A.S. mytha meta, limes, finis.

4. The boundary of human life.

Thare lyis thou dede, quhom Gregioun oistis in Nowthir vincus nor to the erde smite micht,-Here war thy methis and thy terme of dede.

Doug. Virgil, 430. 11.

5. A hint, an innuendo. One is said to give a meith or meid of a thing, when he barely insinuates it, S. B.

Perhaps we ought to trace the word, as thus used, to MoesG. maud-jan to suggest. V. MYTH, v.

MEKYL, Meikle, Mykil, Muckle, adj. 1. Great, respecting size, S.

The meikle hillis

Bemys agane, hit with the brute so schill is. Doug. Virgil, 132. 30. 2. Much: denoting quantity or extent, S.

"Little wit in the head makes muckle travel to the feet;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 51. This is the most general pronunciation, S.

A.S. micl, micel, mucel, Alem. Isl. mikil, Dan. megil, MoesG. mikils, magnus, Gr. μεγαλ-ος.

3. Denoting pre-eminence, as arising from rank or wealth. Mekil fouk, people distinguished by their station or riches, S.

In the same sense MoesG. mikilans signifies principes, Isl. mikilmenne, vir magnificus, magnus.

It is also used adverbially.

MEKILDOM, s. Largeness of size, S.

"Meikledom is nae virtue;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 53.

MEKILWORT, s. Deadly nightshade: Atropa belladonna, Linn.

"Incontinent the Scottis tuk the ius of mekil-wort berijs, & mengit it in thair wyne, aill, & breid, & send the samyn in gret quantité to thair ennymes." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 2. Solatro amentiali. Boeth.

This seems to receive its name from mekil, great, and A.S. wyrt, E. wort, an herb; but for what reason it receives the designation mekil does not appear.

To MEL, Mell, v. n. To speak.

Thairfore meikly with mouth mel to that myld, And mak him na manance, bot all mesoure.

Gawan and Gol. II. 4.

Su.G. mael-a, Isl. mal-a, A.S. mael-an, Germ. Belg. meld-en, Precop. malth-ata, MoesG. mathljan, loqui; Su.G. mael, voice or sound, Isl. malspeech. Ihre views Heb. D, malal, locutus fuit, as the root. This word suggests the origin of mahal, mal, (whence E. mall) as used by the Goth. nations to signify a forum, also a court, L.B. mall-us; because there public matters were agitated in the way of discourse or reasoning. For MoesG. mathls denotes a forum, from the v. already mentioned; and this being the most ancient of the Goth. dialects, we may believe that the same analogy is preserved in the rest. This seems to be the same with Meill, q. v.

Mell is still used in the same sense, to mention, to speak of, S.B.

MELDER, Meldar, s. 1. The quantity of meal ground at the mill at one time, S.

When bear an' ate the earth had fill'd, Our simmer meldar niest was mill'd.

Morison's Poems, p. 110.

"Melder of oats; a kiln-full; as many as are dried at a time for meal. Chesh." Gl. Grose.

2. Flour mixed with salt, and sprinkled on the sacrifice; or a salted cake, mola salsa.

The princis tho, quhylk suld this peace making, Turnis towart the bricht sonnys vprisyng, Wyth the salt melder in there handis raith.

Doug. Virgil, 413. 19. Also 43. 4.

Lat. molo, to grind, q. molitura;" Rudd.
But Isl: mulldr, from mal-a to grind, is rendered molitura, G. Andr. p. 174. Sw. malld, id. Seren.

Indeed Germ. mehlder seems to be the same with our word.

MELYIE, s. A coin of small value.

And gif my claith felyie, Yeis not pay a melyie.

Evergreen, 1. 182.

Fr. maille a half-penny. The term may be originally from A.S. mal, Su.G. maala, &c. tribute; or Alem. mal, signum et forma monetae, which is allied to mal-en, to mark with the sign of the cross; this, in the middle ages, being common on coins; Su.G. maal, a sign or mark of whatever kind.

MELL, s. 1. A maul, mallet or beetle, S. A. Bor.

Quo Colin, I hae yet upon the town, A quoy, just gaing three, a berry brown;— She's get the mell, and that sall be right now. Ross's Helenore, p. 113.

He that takes a' his gear frae himsel, And gies to his bairns,

It were well wair'd to take a mell, And knock out his harns.

Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 16.

2. A blow with a maul.

The hollin souples, that were sae snell, His back they loundert, mell for mell, Mell for mell, and baff for baff, Till his hide flew about his lugs like caff.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 238.

Hence the phrase, to keep mellinshaft, to keep straight in any course, to retain a good state of health, Loth.; a metaph. borrowed from the custom of striking with a maul, which cannot be done properly when the handle is loose.

This has been derived from Lat. mall-eus, in common with Fr. mail. But it may be allied to Moes G. maul-jan, Isl. mol-a contundere, to beat, to bruise.

To MELL, v. a. To mix, to blend.

Or foreign gill.

Burns, 111. 16.

2. To be in a state of intimacy, S.B.

But Diomede mells ay wi' me,

And tells me a' his mind;

He kens me sicker, leal, an' true.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 24.

3. To contend in fight, to join in battle.

Forthi makis furth ane man, to mach him in feild.-

Doughty dyntis to dell'

That for the maistry dar mell With schaft and with scheild.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 18.

Dar is inserted from Edit. 1508.

Thare Willame Walays tuk on hand, Wyth mony gret Lordys of Scotland, To mellay with that Kyng in fycht.

Wyntown, viii. 15. 19.

Rudd. properly enough derives this from Fr. melor to meddle. But the Fr. word itself has undoubtedly a Goth. origin; Isl. mille, i mille, Su.G. mellan, between, (amell, id. Gl. Yorkshire). This, again, q. medlom, is deduced from medla to divide. (Isl. midla) medla emell-an, to make peace between contending parties. The primary term is Su.G. mid, middle. For to meddle, to mell, is merely to interpose one's self between other objects. V. Ihre vo. Mid. Teut. mell-en conjungi.

Melle, s. Mixture; in melle, in a state of mixture. V. next word.

Melle, Mellay, s. Contest, battle.

Rycht peralous the semlay was to se Hardy and hat contenyt the fell mellé.

Wallace, v. 834. MS.

It is sometimes requisite that it should be pron. as a monosyllable.

This Schyr Johne, in till playn melle, Throw sowerane hardiment that felle, Wencussyt thaim sturdely ilkan.

Barbour, xvi. 515. MS.

Thus it also occurs in the sense of mixture, or the state of being mingled.

Fede folke, for my sake, that failen the fode, And menge me with matens, and masses in melle. Sir Gawan and Sir Gol. i. 25.

Fr. melée, id. whence chaude melée; L.B. melleia, melletum, certamen, praelium.

MELLYNE, MELLING, s. Mixture, confusion.

Barbour, v. 406. MS.

Fr. mellange, id.

MELL, s. A company.

"A dozen or twenty men will sometimes go in, and stand a-breast in the stream, at this kind of fishing, [called heaving or hauling], up to the middle, in strong running water for three or four hours together: A company of this kind is called a mell." P. Dornock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. ii. 16.

Germ. mal, A.S. Teut. mael, comitia, coetus, conventus; from macl-en conjungi, or Su.G. macl-a toqui. Hence L.B. mall-us, mallum, placitum majus, in quo majora Comitatus negotia, quae in Villis, Centuriisve terminari non poterant, a Comite finiebantur. Spelm. Gl. vo. Mallum; Schilter. Gl.

Allied to this seems mell-supper; "a supper and merry-making, dancing, &c. given by the farmers to their servants on the last day of reaping the corn or harvest-home. North." Grose, Prov. Gl. Teut. mael convivium.

MELT, s. The milt or spleen, S.

"I sau madyn hayr, of the quhilk ane sirop maid of it is remeid contrar the infectioune of the melt." Compl. S. p. 104.

-The bleiring Bats and the Bean-shaw, With the Mischief of the Melt and Maw.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. Su.G. mielte, A.S. Alem. milte, Dan. milt, Isl. millte, id. A.S. milteseoc, lienosus, sick of the spleen; miltesare, the disease or sore of the spleen; probably the same called the infectioune, and the mischief, of the Melt.

To Melt, v. a. To knock down; properly, by a stroke in the side, where the melt or spleen lies, S.

But I can teet an' hitch about. An' melt them ere they wit; An' syne fan they're dung out o' breath They hae na maughts to hit.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 36. "The phrase, to melt a person, or an animal, is used, when either suddenly sinks under a blow on the side," Gl. Compl.

MELTETH, MELTITH, s. A meal, food, S. meltet, S.B.

Unhalsome melteth is a fairy mous, And namely to a nobil lyon strang, Wont to be fed with gentil venison.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 193. The feckless meltet did her head o'erset, Cause nature frae't did little sust'nance get. Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

"A hearty hand to gie a hungry meltith;" S: Prov. "an ironical ridicule upon a niggardly dispenser;" Kelly, p. 27.

"Twa hungry meltiths makes the third a glutton;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 32.

Verstegan, meul-tide, "the time of eating"; Chauc. mele-tide, according to Tyrwhitt, dinner-time. Isl. mael-tid, hora prandii vel coenae; Gl. Edd. Teut. maal-tyd, convivium, from maal, mael, a meal, a repast, and tyd, tempus; literally, the time, the hour of eating. Thus Belg. middag-maal, dinner, or the meal at midday; avond-maal, supper, or the meal taken at evening. A.S. maele, id. LL. Canut. aermaele, dinner, i. e. an early meal. Yfel bith thaet, man faestentide aer-maele ete; Malum est hominem jejunii tempore prandium edere. Ap. Somner. The use of the word in this sense seems to shew, that they were not wont in the time of Canute to take what we call breakfast. Dan. maaltid, a meal. Ihre observes that Su.G. maaltid signifies supper. But Seren. renders this word simply, a meal, a meal's-meat; for supper he gives aftonmaaltid. Some derive the word maal from Su.G. maal-a, molere, because we use our teeth in grinding our food. Wachter from maal, sermo, because conversation is one of the principal enjoyments at a feast. Ihre observes that the word maaltid is a pleonasm, tid and mal equally denoting time, as Su.G. maal is a sign either of time or of place. Amongst the various opinions as to the origin of this word, I wonder that no one has mentioned Su.G. maal-a, mensurare, maal, mensura; as set measures or portions were given to servants at fixed hours.

To MELVIE, v. a. To soil with meal, S. Waesucks! for him that gets nae lass, Or lasses that hae naething!
Sma' need has he to say a grace,
Or melvie his braw claithing!

Hit marred; hit memered; hit mused for madde.
Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 9.

A.S. mymer-ian, reminisci.

MEMERKYN, MYNMERKIN, s. A contumelious term, apparently expressive of smallness of size.

—— Mandrag, memerkyn, mismade myting.

Stewart, Evergreen, i. 120.

Marmadin, mynmerkin, monster of all.

Ibid. ii. 74.

Mynmerkin seems the primary form. As connected with marmadin, it might seem to suggest the idea of a sea-nymph; the last part of the word being allied to C.B. merch a virgin, a maid. But it may be Goth., min signifying, little. Lord Hailes has observed; "Within our own memory, in Scotland, the word merckin was used for a girl, in the same sense as the Greek purgazio." Annals, i. 318. As it seems doubtful whether an O.E. word, of an indelicate sense, does not enter into the composition, I shall leave it without further investigation.

MEMMIT, part. pa.

Thay forge the friendschip of the fremmit, And fleis the favour of their freinds; Thay wald with nobill men be menimit, Syne laittandly to lawar leinds.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 208. st. 7.

"Probably, matched," Lord Hailes. This conjecture is certainly well-founded. From the connexion, the word evidently means alliance by marriage. Women are here represented, as first wishing to be allied to nobility, and afterwards as secretly leaning or inclining to those of inferior rank. It is most probably formed from Teut. moeme, mume, an aunt by the father's or mother's side; in Mod. Sax. an ally. Muomon suni, consobrini, Gloss. Pez. Wachter observes, that the word is used to denote every kind of consanguinity.

MENARE, s. One of the titles given to the Virgin, in a Popish hymn; apparently synon. with Moyaner, q. v. as denoting one who employs means, a mediatrix.

The feind is our felloun fa, in the we confyde, Thou moder of all mercye, and the menarc.

Houlate, iii. 9. MS.

Teut. maener, however, signifies monitor, from maen-en monere, hortari.

MENDS, s. 1. Atonement, expiation.

- —"He hais send his awin sone our saluiour Jesus Christ to vs, to make ane perfite mendis, and just satisfaction for all our synnis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 17, b. Thus he renders propitiationem.
- 2. Reparation; denoting change of conduct.
- "There is nothing but mends for misdeeds;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 320.
- Addition. To the mends, over and above; often applied to what is given above bargain, as E. to boot. V. Keltie.

"I will verily give my Lord Jesus a free discharge of all, that I, like a fool, laid to his charge, and beg him pardon to the mends." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 161.

Contr. from O.E. amends, compensation, which is evidently Fr. amende used in pl. It appears that amends had been also used in S., from the phrase, applied both to persons and things; He would thole amends; i. e. He would require a change to the better

Edward sore it ment, when he wist that tirpeil, For Sir Antoyn he sent, to cum to his conseil.

R. Brunne, p. 255.

Biment, bemoaned, K. of Tars. E. M. R. ii. 200.

- 2. To mean one's self, to make known one's grievance, to utter a complaint.
- —"Ye shall not hereafter advocat unto you any matter, from any Presbyterie within that kingdom, without first the partie, suiter of the same, have meaned himself to that Archbishop and his conjunct commissioners, within whose Province he doth remain, and that he do complain as well of them, as of the Presbytery." Letter Ja. VI. 1608, Calderwood's Hist. p. 581.

In nearly the same sense it is said, in vulgar language, to one who is in such circumstances, that he can have no reason for complaint, or can have no difficulty of accomplishing any matter referred to; I dinna mein you, or, You're no to mein, i. e. Your situation is such as to excite no sympathy.

I think, my friend, an' fowk can get A doll of roast beef piping het,-And be nae sick, or drown'd in debt, They're no to mean.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 350.

Yes, said the king, we're no to mean, We live baith warm, and snug, and bien. R. Galloway's Poems, p. 132.

3. "To indicate pain or lameness, to walk or move as if lame," Sibb. Gl.

"You mein your leg when you walk." This seems an oblique sense of the same v.

To Mene, Meane, v. n. 1. To utter complaints, to make lamentation, S.

If you should die for me, sir knight, There's few for you will meane; For mony a better has died for me, Whose graves are growing green.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 276.

2. To utter moans, as a person in sickness, S. A.S. maen-an, dolere, ingemiscere.

To MENE, MEAN, MEEN, v. a. 1. To intend; as E. mean, S.

How grete wodnes is this that ye now mene? Doug. Virgil, 40. 3.

A.S. maen-an, Germ. mein-en, Su.G. men-a, velle, intendere.

2. To esteem, to prize.

And eik, for they beheld before there ene His dochty dedis, thay him love and mene. Doug. Virgil, 330. 29.

3. To take notice of, to mention, to hint. She drew the curtains, and stood within, And all amazed spake to him: Then meened to him his distress, Heart or the head whether it was; And his sickness less or mare; And then talked of Sir Egeir.

Sir Egeir, p. 32.

A.S. maen-an, memorare, mentionem facere. There is scarcely any variation in the sense, in which it occurs in the Kyng of Tars.

Dame, he seide, ur doughter hath ment To the soudan for to weende.

Ritson's E. M. R. ii. 167.

i. e. she hath made a proposal to this purpose.

4. To make known distinctly.

Sa heuin and eirth salbe all one, As menis the Apostil Johne.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 175. -" Gif refusing the same, ye declare thareby your evill mynd towards the comoun-welthe and Libertie of this Realme, we will (as of befoir) mein and declair the caus unto the haill Nobilitie and Comounis of this Realme." Knox's Hist. p. 181,

It is often conjoined with schaw, shew, in old law-deeds.

"Unto your Lordschips humblie meinis and schawis, I Sir James Elphinston of Barneton, Knicht," &c. Act Sed. 3 Nov. 1599.

It occurs also in this sense, O.E. The toun he fond paired & schent, Kirkes, houses beten doun. To the kyng they ment tham of the town,

That many of the best burgeis Were fled & ilk man yede his weis. R. Brunne, App. to Pref. clxxxviii. Menyng also denotes mention.

Whilk tyme the were kynges, long or now late, Thei mak no menyng whan, no in what date. Ibid. Chron. p. 25.

Germ. mein-en, Su.G. men-a, significare, cogitata sermone vel alio signo demonstrare. Alem. gemein-en, id. Schilter suggests a doubt, however, whether this be not rather from meina commune, publicum.

5. To know, to recognise. He bigan at the shulder-blade, And with his pawm al rafe he downe, Bath hauberk and his actoune, And all the fless doun til his kne. So that men myght his guttes se; To ground he fell, so alto rent, Was thar noman that him ment.

Ywaine and Gawin, E. M. R. i. 110.

It is also used as a neut. v.

6. To reflect, to think of; with of or on added. Bot quhen I mene off your stoutnes, And off the mony grete prowes, That ye haff doyne sa worthely; I traist, and trowis sekyrly To haff plane wictour in this fycht. Barbour, xii. 291, MS.

Lat ilkane on his lemman mene; And how he mony tyme has bene In gret thrang, and weill cummyn away. Ibid. xv. 351. MS.

- Althocht hys Lord wald mene On his ald seruyce, yet netheles I wene, He sal not sone be tender, as he was are.

Doug. V. Prol. 357. 34.

A.S. maen-an, in animo habere; Germ. mein-en cogitare; reminisci. Su.G. men-a, Isl. mein-a, MoesG. mun-an, cogitare. Alem. farmana suggests the contrary idea; aspernatio, Jun. Etym. vo. Mean. Farmon, contemtor, Schilter.

7. To make an attempt.

"Finding in his Majestie a most honourabil and Christian resolution, to manifest him self to the warld that zelous and religious Prince quhilk he hes hiddertill professit, and to employ the means and power that God hes put into his handis, as weill to the withstanding of quhatsumever forreyme force sall mean within this island, for alteration of the said religion, or endangering of the present estate; as to the ordering and repressing of the inward enemies thairto amangis our selfis," &c. Band of Maintenance, Collection of Conf. ii. 109.

MENE, s. Meaning, design.

To pleis hys lufe sum thocht to flatter and fene, Sum to hant bawdry and vnleifsum mene.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 402. 50.

Alem. meinon, Germ. meinung, intentio.

MENE, MEIN, s. An attempt, S.B. mint synon. He wad ha geen his neck, but for ae kiss; But yet that gate he durst na mak a mein; Sae was he conjur'd by her modest een,

That, tho' they wad have warm'd a heart of stane.

Had yet a cast sic freedoms to restrain.

Ross's Helenore, p. 32.

Perhaps it strictly signifies, an indication of one's intention.

MENE, adj. Middle, intermediate; mene gate, in an equal way, between two parties.

I sall me hald indifferent the mene gate, And as for that, put na diversité, Quhidder so Rutulianis or Troianis thay be.

Doug. Virgil, 317. 14.

Fr. moyen, id.

MENE, adj. Common. V. MEIN.

To MENG, v. a. To mix, to mingle. V. MING. To MENGE, v. a.

Fede folke, for my sake, that failen the fode; And menge me with matens, and masses in melle.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 25.

It seems to signify, soothe, assuage; perhaps obliquely from A.S. meng-an, myneg-ian, monere, commonefacere.

MENYEIT, part. pa. Maimed. V. MANYIED. MENYIE, MENGYIE, MENYE, MENYHE', s. 1.

The persons constituting one family.

"Properly the word," according to Rudd., "signifies the domesticks, or those of one family, in which sense it is yet used in the North of England; as, We be six or seven a Meny (for so they pronounce it) i. e. 6 or 7 in family, Ray."

It is thus used by our old Henrysone.

Hes thow no reuth to gar thy tennent sueit Into thy lawbour, full faynt with hungry wame? And syne hes littill gude to drink or eit, Or his menyé at evin quhen he cumis hame.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 121. st. 21. It is used in a similar sense by Wiclif, and Lang-

"If thei han clepid the housebonde man Belzebub: how myche more his houshold meynee?"

I circumcised my sonne sithen for hys sake; My selfe and my meyny, and all that male were Bled bloud for the Lordes loue, & hope to blyss the tyme.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 90, b.

It occurs in the same sense in R. Brunne, p. 65.
Tostus ouer the se went to S. Omere,

His wife & his meyne, & duelled ther that yere. O.Fr. mesnie signifies a family.

2. A company, a band, a retinue. A great menyie, a multitude, S.B. A few menye, was formerly used; i. e. a small company.

In nowmer war thay but ane few menye, Bot thay war quyk, and valyeant in mellé.

Doug. Virgil, 153. 8.
Thus Wyntown uses it to denote those who accompanied St. Serf, when he arrived at Inchkeith.

Saynt Adaman, the haly man, Come til hyme thare, and fermly Mad spyrytuale band of cumpany, Vol. 11. And tretyd hym to cum in Fyre, The tyme to dryve oure of hys lyfe. Than til Dysard hys menyhé Of that counsale fwrth send he.

Cron. v. 12. 1170.

3. The followers of a chieftain.

"If the laird slights the lady, his menyie will be ready;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 42. i. e. ready to follow his example.

Till Louchmabane he went agane; And gert men with his lettres ryd, To freyndis apon ilk sid, That come to hym with thar mengye; And his men als assemblyt he.

Barbour, ii. 75. MS.

4. Troops, an army in general, or the multitude which follows a prince in war.

The King Robert wyst he wes thar, And quhat kyn chyftanys with him war, And assemblyt all his mengye; He had feyle off full gret bounté.

Barbour, ii. 228. MS.

Nor be na wais me list not to deny That of the Grekis menyé ane am I.

Doug. Virgil, 41. 15.

Neque me Argolica de gente negabo. Virg. ii. 78.

It is used by R. Glouc. as denoting armed adherents or followers.

Tuelf yer he byleuede the here wyth nobleye v nou.—

And bygan to astrongthy ys court, & to eche ys maynye. P. 180.

5. A multitude, applied to things, S.

Black be the day that e'er to England's ground
Scotland was eikit by the Union's bond;
For mony a menyie o' destructive ills
The country now maun brook frae mortmain

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 86.

The word is evidently allied to A.S. menegeo, menigo, manige, menge, &c. multitudo, turba. Isl. meingi, id. Alem. menigi, multitudo, also, legio; Moes G. manag, A.S. maenige, Alem. Belg. menige, O. Teut. menie, multus; whence E. many. Wachter derives these terms from man, plures; Ihre views them as having a common origin with Su.G. men, publicus, communis. Jun. deduces them from man, homo, as being properly used to denote a multitude of men. V. Goth. Gl. vo. Manag.

"Many," Mr. Tooke says, "is merely the past participle of (A.S.) meng-an, miscere, to mix, to mingle: it means mixed, or associated (for that is the effect of mixing) subaud. company, or any uncertain and unspecified number of any things."

Divers. Purley, ii. 387.

I have given that as the first sense, which Rudd. views as the proper one. But I am convinced that the term primarily respected a multitude, because it uniformly occurs in this sense in MoesG. A.S. and Alem. Not one example, I apprehend, can be given from any of these ancient languages, either of the adj. or subst. being used, except as denoting a great company. The phrase, which Mr. Tookey quotes from Douglas,—a few menye, in support of the idea, that from the term itself we can learn nothing certain as to number, is a solitary one; and only goes to prove, what is evident from a variety of other examples, that the term gradually declined in its sense. Originally, signifying a multitude, it was used to denote the great body that followed a prince to war; afterwards it was applied to those who followed an inferior leader, then to any particular band or company, till it came to signify any association, although not larger than a single family.

I hesitate greatly as to A.S. meng-an being the origin. It seems in favour of this hypothesis, that a multitude, or crowd, implies the idea of mixture. But this is one of these theories which will turn either way. Wachter conjecturally deduces the Germ. synon. meng-en, miscere, from menge many, or a multitude. "For what is it to mingle," he says, "but to make one of many?" This, indeed, seems the most natural order. For, although a multitude or crowd necessarily includes the idea of mixture; there may be mixture where there is not a multitude of objects.

MENYNG, s. Pity, compassion.

Than lukyt he angyrly thaim to,
And said grynnand, Hyngis and drawys.

That he, that to the dede wes ner,
Suld ansuer apon sic maner;
For owtyn menyng and merey.

Barbour, iv. 326. MS.

V. Mene, to lament; q. that principle which makes one bemoan the helpless situation of another. MENKIT, pret. Joined.

Now, fayr sister, fallis yow but fenyeing to tell,

Sen men first with matrimonie yow menkit in kirk,

How have ye farne?

Dunbar, Maitland's Poems, p. 51.
This is the reading of Edit. 1508, instead of mensit, Edit. 1786.

A.S. mencg-an miscere; also, concumbere. MENOUN, MENIN, s. A minnow; S. mennon, minnon.

—With his handis quhile he wrocht Gynnys, to tak geddis and salmonys, Trowtis, elys, and als menovnys.

Barbour, ii. 577. MS. To where the saugh-tree shades the menin pool, I'll frae the hill come down when day grows cool.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 133.

Alem. mina is rendered fannus piscis. Perhaps the minnow has its name from Germ. min little. Since writing this, I am informed that its Gael. name meanan, is traced to meanbh little.

MENSK, Mense, s. 1. Manliness, dignity of conduct.

Tharfor we suld our hartis raiss, Swa that na myscheyff ws abaiss; And schaip alwayis to that ending That beris in it mensk and lowing.

Barbour, iv. 549. MS.

on their modesty." Kelly, p. 244.

"Mence is hansomness, or credit." Gl. Yorks. Dial. "Mense, decency, credit." Gl. Grose.

Isl. menska humanitas; menskur, A.S. mennisc, Su.G. maennisklig, humanus; formed from man, in the same manner as Lat. human-us from homo.

Menske, adj. Humane.

Thou gabbest on me so
Min em nil me nought se;
He threteneth me to slo,
More menske were it to the Better for to do,--

This tide;

Or Y this lond schal fle, In to Wales wide.

Sir Tristrem, p. 118. V. the s.

To Mense, Mense, one, v. a. 1. To behave with good manners, to make obeisance, to one in the way of civility; to treat respectfully. It is opposed, however, to giving homage, bowing ane bak.

I sall preive all my pane to do hym plesance;
Baith with body, and beild, bowsum and boun,
Hym to mensk on mold, withoutin manance.
Bot nowther for his senyeoury, nor for his summoun,

Na for dreid of na dede, na for na distance, I will noght bow me ane bak, for berne that is borne.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 11.

2. To do honour to; written menss, mense.

Cum heir, Falsat, and menss this gallowis;

Ye mon hing up amang your fallowis.—

Thairfoir but dowt ye sall be hangit.

Lindsay's S.P.R. ii. 191.

"They mense little the mouth that bites aff the nose;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 33; "spoken when people, who pretend friendship for you, traduce your near friends and relations." Kelly, p. 302.

Menskit, part. pa.

The mereist war menskit on mete at the maill, With menstralis myrthfully makand thame glee. Gawan and Gol. i. 17. Mr. Pink. renders this, arranged. But it may mean, that those, who were most gay, behaved with moderation and decorum, while at that meal, from respect to the royal presence. Or perhaps it rather signifies that they were honourably treated; in reference to the —seir courssis that war set in that semblee; and especially the music which accompanied it.

Thus it is merely the passive sense of the v. Mensk.

Menskful, Menseful, Mensfou, adj. 1. Manly; q full of manliness.

Schyr Golagros' mery men, menskful of myght, In greis, and garatouris, graithit full gay; Sevyne score of scheildis thai schew at ane sicht. Gawan and Gol. ii. 14.

2. Noble, becoming a person of rank.

He is the riallest roy, reverend and rike.—

Mony burgh, mony bour, mony big bike;

Mony kynrik to his clame cumly to knaw;

Maneris full menskfull, with mony deip dike.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 8.

3. Modest, moderate, discreet, S. In Yorks, it signifies comely, graceful.

But d' ye see fou better bred
Was mens-fou Maggy Murdy,
She her man like a lammy led
Hame, wi' a weel-wail'd wurdy.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 278. V. MISTIRFUL.

4. Mannerly, respectful, S.

Thus with attentive look mensfou they sit, Till he speak first, and shaw some shining wit. Ramsay's Poems, i. 327.

Menskles, Mensless, adj. 1. Uncivil, void of discretion, S.

This menskless goddes, in every mannis mouth, Skalis thyr newis est, weist, north and south.

Doug. Virgil, 106. 39.

2. It is more generally used in the sense of greedy, covetous, insatiable, S.

The staik indeid is unco great;—
I'm seer I hae nae neef
To get fat cou'd be ettl'd at
By sik a mensless thief.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 3.
3. Immoderate, out of all due bounds, S.
But fu rules trade, are hats, and stockings dear,
And ither trocks that's fit for country wear?
Things has wi' dearth been mensless here awa,
Since the disturbance in America.

Morison's Poems, p. 183.

Menskly, adv. Decently, with propriety.

And quhen thir wordis spokyn wer,
With sary cher he held him still,
Quhill men had done of him thair will.

And syne, with the leve of the King,
He broucht him menskly till erding.

MERCAL, s. A piece of wood used in the construction of the Shetland plough.

"A square hole is cut through the lower end of the beam, and the mercal, a piece of oak about 22 inches long, introduced, which at the other end, holds the sock and sky." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 585.

MERCH, MERGH, (gutt.) s. 1. Marrow; synon. smergb.

Waystis and consumis merch, banis and lire.

Doug. Virgil, 102. 4.

V. FARRACH.

But they hae run him thro' the thick o' the thie,

And broke his knee-pan,

And the mergh o' his shin ban has run down on his spur leather whang.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 208.

It is commonly said, when a person is advised to take something that is supposed to be highly nutritive, That will put mergh in your beins, S.B. It is singular that the same mode of expression is used in Sweden: "They prepare themselves [for the hard labour of ploughing] on this day [the first of May] by frequent libations of their strong ale, and they usually say, Maste man dricka marg i benen; You must drink marrow in your bones." Von Troil's Lett. on Iceland, p. 24, N.

2. Strength, pith, ability, S.

Now steekit frac the gowany field,
Frac ilka fav'rite houff and bield,
But mergh, alas! to disengage
Your bonny buik frac fettering cage,
Your free-born bosom beats in vain
For darling liberty again.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 36.

But mergh, i. e. without strength.

A.S. merg, maerh, Su.G. maerg, Isl. mergi, Belg. marg, C.B. mer, Dan. marfwe, id. It has been supposed that maerg-el, the Goth. name of marle, Lat. marg-a, is to be traced to this as its origin, q. fat or marrowy earth. V. MERKERIN. MERCIABLE, adj. Merciful.

King's Quair, vi. 19.

O 2

MERCIALL, adj. Martial, warlike; Bellend. Cron. pass.

MERE, s. 1. A march, a boundary; pl. merys.

The thryd castelle was Kyldrwmy,

That Dame Crystyane the Brws stowtly Held wyth knychtis and Sqwyeris.

That reddyt abowt thame welle thare merys.

Wyntown, viii. 27. 230.

To radd marches, is a synon. phrase still used, as signifying to determine the limits. That employed here has a metaph. sense,—to keep off the enemy from their boundaries; as our modern one often means, to settle any thing that is matter of dispute.

A.S. maera, Su.G. maere, Belg. O.E. meer, id. Ihre derives it from Gr. muew divido.

MERE, s. The sea.

He Lord wes of the Oryent, Of all Jude, and to Jordane And to the mere swa Mediterane.

Wyntown, ix. 12. 38.

A.S. Alem. mere, Isl. maere, mar, MoesG. marei, Germ. Belg. mer, Lat. mare, Fr. mer, C.B. mor, Gael. Ir. muir. Su.G. mar signifies either the sea, or a lake; any large body of water. The terms, in different languages, denoting any great body of water, are promiscuously used in this manner. Thus the lake of Gennesaret is also called the sea of Gennesaret: and in A.S. the same word is sometimes rendered a lake, and at other times a sea. Mereswine, Meer-swine, s. 1. A dolphin.

Bot hir hynd partis ar als grete wele nere As bene the hidduous huddum, or ane quhale, Quhareto bene cuplit mony mereswyne tale, With empty mawis of wolfis rauenous.

Doug. Virgil, 82. 26.

Delphinum caudas, Virg. Elsewhere the same word is rendered dalphyne by Doug. But that this name was, at least occasionally, given to the dolphin, by our forefathers, appears also from the evidence of Sir R. Sibbald.

"The bigger beareth the name of dolphin; and our fishers call them Meer-swines."—"Delphinus Delphis," N. "The lesser is called Phocaena, a porpess."—"Delphinus phocaena," N. Fife, p. 115. 116.

2. A porpoise. This is the more modern and common use of the term.

As a vast quantity of fat surrounds the body of this animal, it has given occasion to the proverbial allusion, "as fat as a mere-swine," S.

Teut. maer-swin, delphinus, q. d. porcus marinus; Su.G. marswin, Fr. marsouin, a porpoise.

MERGH, s. Marrow. V. MERCH.

MERY, adj. "Faithful, effectual;" Gl. Wynt. On what authority this sense is given, I have not observed. The phrase mery men, as denoting adherents or soldiers, is very ancient.

Be it was mydmorne, and mare, merkit on the day,

Schir Golagros' merymen, menksful of myght, In greis, and garatouris, grathit full gay; Sevyne score of scheildis that schew at ane sicht. Garan and Gol. ii. 14.

Sibb. refers to mor great, Su.G. maere illustri. ous. But this seems to be merely a phrase expressive of the affection of a chief to his followers, as denoting their hilarity in his service; from A.S. mirige cheerful.

MERGIN, adj. (g hard) Most numerous, largest. The mergin part, that which exceeds in number, or in size, S.B.

Su.G. marg, Isl. marg-ur, multus; mergd multitudo.

These words, as Ihre observes, are evidently allied to Su.G. mer magnus.

MERK, s. A Scottish silver coin, formerly current, now only nominal; value, thirteen shillings and fourpence of our money, or thirteen pence and one third of a penny Sterling, S.

the Earl of Lennox, then regent, and the lords of the secret council, that two silver pieces should be struck;—that the weight of the one should be eleven penny weight twelve grains Troy, to be called merks [a merk]; the other, one half of that weight, and to be called half a merk." Introd. to Anderson's Diplom. p. 150.

It does not appear, however, that any such coins were struck at this time.

"The mark," says Mr. Pinkerton, "was so called as being a grand limited sum in account (Marc, limes, Goth.) It was of eight ounces in weight, two thirds of the money pound." Essay on Medals, ii. 73, N.

Su.G. mark, as applied to silver, denoted eightounces. The term has still this sense in Denmark. Ihre says, that it had its name from maerke, or a note impressed, signifying the weight.

MERK, MERKLAND, s. A certain denomination of land, from the duty formerly paid to the sovereign or superior, S. Shetl.

"The lands are understood to be divided into merks. A merk of land, however, does not consist uniformly of a certain area. In some instances, a merk may be less than an acre; in others, perhaps, equal to two acres. Every merk again consists of so much arable ground, and of another part which is only fit for pasturage; but the arable part alone varies in extent from less than one to two acres. Several of these merks, sometimes more, sometimes fewer, form a town." P. Unst, Shetland, Statist. Acc. v. 195. N.

"These merks are valued by sixpenny, ninepenny, and twelvepenny land. Sixpenny land pays to the proprietor 8 merks butter, and 12s. Scotch per merk." P. Aithsting, Shetland, Ibid. vii. 580.

An inferior denomination of land is Ure.

"The lands of that description—are 329 Merks and three Ures or eighths, paying of Landmails yearly 109 Lisponds 19 Merks weight of butter, and £238:14 Scots money." MS. Acc. of some lands in the P. of Unst.

At first it might seem that this term should be traced to Su.G. mark, a wood, a territory, a plain, a pasture, rather than to mark as a denomination of money; because a merk of land receives different designations, borrowed from money of an inferior value, as sixpenny, ninepenny, &c. But although the name merk seems now appropriated to the land itself, without regard to the present valuation, there is no good reason to doubt that the designation at first originated from the duty, imposed on a certain piece of land, to be paid to the King or the superior.

This exactly corresponds to the division of property, among the Northern nations, according to this mode of estimation. The ures mentioned above, are merely the orue of Ihre, also used as a denomination of land. According to Widegr. three oeres make an English farthing; but Seren. says that a farthing is called halfoere.

One sense given of mark, by Ihre is, Certa agrorum portio, quae dividitur, pro ratione numerandi pecunias in marcas, oras, oertugas et penningos; vo. Mark.

The same learned writer, after giving different senses of oere, adds;

IV. Apud agrimensores nostros oere, oertig & penning est certa portio villae dividendae in suas partes. Ett oeres land, en oortig land, &c. cujus ratio olim constitit in censu, quem pendebant agri, nunc tantum rationem indicant unius ad alterum, ita ut qui oram possidet in villa triplo plus habet altero qui oertugam, &c. Ihre, vo. Oere.

Verel. gives a similar account, vo. Oere, p. 193.

V. URE, s. 4.

The same mode of denomination has been common in S.

"The Lordes of the Session esteeme ane marke land, of auld extent, to four mark land of new extent." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Extent.

"The common burdens were laid on, not according to the retour or merkland, but the valuation of the rents." Baillie's Lett. i. 370.

MERK, adj. Dark. V. MARK.

To MERK, v. n. To ride.

Than he merkit with myrth, our ane grene meid,

With all the best, to the burgh, of lordis I wis. Gawan and Gol. i. 14.

" Marched," Gl. Pink. But it seems rather to mean, rode.

O.Fr. march-er, C.B. marchogaeth, Arm. marckat, Ir. markay-im, to ride; C.B. march, Germ. marck, mark, a horse, (probably from Goth. mar, id.); whence Teut. marck-grave, equitum praefectus,

To MERK, v. a. To design, to appoint. -To rede I began-

Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit. man.

The mouring of the mapamound, and how the mone schane.

Doug. Virgil, 239, a. 54. Merkit is often conjoined with made, S.B. "The like of that was nevir merkit nor made." A.S. mearc-ian, designare; merced, statutus.

"In the Shetland islands, the merry dancers, as they are there called, are the constant attendants of clear evenings, and prove great reliefs amidst the gloom of the long winter nights." Encycl. Brit. vo. Aurora Borealis.

These lights had appeared much less frequently in former times than in ours, and were viewed as portentous. The first instance mentioned by Dr. Halley, is that which occurred in England A. 1560, when what were called burning spears were seen in the atmosphere. Baddam's Mem. Royal Soc. vi. 209. Phil. Trans. N. 347.

Su.G. Ital. messa, Germ. Fr. messe, Belg. misse.
This has been derived from the concluding words of this service, Ite, missa est; or from the dismission of the catechumens before the mass. Ten Kate, however, deduces it from MoesG. mesa, A.S. mysa, myse, O. Belg. misse, a table, q. mensa Domini. V. Ihre, vo. Messa.

MES, or MASS JOHN, a sort of ludicrous designation for the minister of a parish, S. Gl. Shirr.

This breeds ill wiles, ye ken fu' aft,
In the black coat,

Goes ti' the pot.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, P. ii. 42. This has evidently been retained from the time of Popery, as equivalent to mass-priest.

MESALL, Mysel, adj. Leprous.

Bellenden, speaking of salmon, says; "Utheris quhilkis lepis nocht cleirlie ouir the lyn, brekis thaym self be thair fall, & growis mesall." Descr. Alb. c. 11.

"They open the fishe, and lukes not quhither they be mysel or lipper fish or not." Chalmerlan Air. c. 21. s. 9.

It also occurs in O.E.

MESCHANT, adj. Wicked. V. MISCHANT. To MESE, v. a. To mitigate. V. Meis. MESE of herring, five hundred herrings.

"Mese of herring, conteinis fiue hundreth: For the common vse of numeration & telling of herring, be reason of their great multitude, is vsed be thousands; and therefore ane Mese comprehendis fiue hundreth, quhilk is the halfe of ane thousand. From the Greek word proof, in Latin medium," &c. Skene, Verb. Sign. in vo.

It may have originated, however, from Isl. meis, a netted bag in which fish are carried, or Alem. mez, Germ. mes a measure, mess-en to measure.

Or it may be viewed as of Gaelic origin; as muoiseisg, signifying "five hundred fish," Shaw. Maois, however, simply signifies a pack or bag, corresponding to Isl. meis, and eisg Gael. is fish. MESH, s. A net for carrying fish, S.

Isl. mois, saccus reticulatus, in quo portantur pisces; Verel.

MESSAGE, s. Embassy, ambassadors, messengers. Wallace has herd the message say thair will.—
The samyn message till him thai send agayn,
And thar entent thai tald him in to playn.—
Thai wald nocht lat the message off Ingland
Cum thaim amang, or thai suld wndirstand.

Wallace, viii. 541. 633. 672. MS. This is a Fr. idiom; for Fr. message denotes, not only a message, but a messenger or ambassadour.

MESSAN, Messin, Messoun, Messan-dog, s. 1. It seems properly to signify a small dog, a lapdog, S.

He is our mekill to be your messoun; Madame, I red you get a les on; His gangarris all your chalmers schog. Madame, ye heff a dangerous Dog.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 91.
2. It is also used, more laxly, to denote such curs as are kept about country houses.

This silly beast, being thus confounded, Sae deadly hurt, misus'd and wounded, With messan-dogs sae chas'd and wounded,

In end directs a letter
Of supplication with John Aird,
To purchase license frae the Laird,
That she might bide about the yeard,
While she grew sumwhat better.

Watson's Coll. i. 46.

Wounded, in v. 3., has most probably been written hounded.

Messen-tyke is used by Kennedy in the seme sense.

—A crabbit, scabbit, ill-faced messen-tyke.

Evergreen, ii. 73.

Sibb. derives the word from Teut. meyssen puella, q. a lady's dog. Some say that this small species receives its name, as being brought from Messina in Sicily. This idea is far more probable; especially as it was otherwise denominated Canis Melitensis, as if the species had come from Melite, an island between Italy and Epirus, or, as others render it, from Malta, anciently Melita. "Canis Melitensis, a Messin, or Lap-dog." Sibb. Scot. p. 10.

It might be conjectured that the name has been borrowed from Fr. maison a house, as originally denoting a dog that lies within doors.

To MESTER, v. a.

Quhat sall I think, allace! quhat reverence Sall I mester to your excellence?

King's Quair, ii. 24.

"Perhaps administer," Tytler. But it seems rather to signify, stand in need of; q what obeisance will it be necessary for me to make? V. MISTER, v. and s.

MESWAND, s.

"Because Achan in the distruction of Hierico, tuk certane geir that was forbiddin be the special command of God, a cloke of silk verrai fyne, twa hundreth syclis [shekels] of siluer, and ane meswand of gold, he was stanit to the deade." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme 1551, Fol. 61, b.

This corresponds to wedge in our version, but seems literally to signify "a measuring rod," from Alem. mez, Germ. metz, mensura, and wand virga. MET, METT, METTE, s. 1. Measure; used indefinitely, S. A. Bor.

"Swa weyis the Boll new maid, mair than the auld boll xLI. pund, quhilk makis twa gallownis and a half, and a chopin of the auld met, and of the new met ordanit ix pyntis and thre mutchkinnis." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 80. Edit. 1566. Mette, Skene, c. 70.

"Herrings, caught in the bays in Autumn, sell for 1d. per score, or 3s. per mett, nearly a barrel of fresh ungutted herrings." P. Aithsting, Shetland, Statist. Acc. vii. 589.

Su.G. maatt, A.S. mitta, mete, mensura. The word, as used in the latter sense, is perhaps originally the same with Mese, q. v., although the measure is different. Mete, A. Bor. signifies "a strike, or four pecks;" Gl. Grose. The v. is used in E. as well as metewand, S. mettwand, a staff for measur-

Doug. Virgil, 47. 53.

A.S. met-an pingere; perhaps only a secondary sense of the v. signifying to measure, because painting is properly a delineation of the object represented.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 172.

There has been a general prejudice against the E. word methinks. It has been compared to the language of a Dutchman, attempting to speak English. "This," says Dr. Johnson, "is imagined to be a Norman corruption, the French being apt to confound me and I." But the term has not got common justice. Its origin, and its claims, have not been fairly investigated. In Gl. Wynt. it has been observed; "The v. is here used impersonally: and this seeming irregularity, which still remains in the English, is at least as old as the days of Ulfila, and seems to run through all the Gothic languages."

But the irregularity is merely apparent. The phraseology has been viewed as anomalous, from a mistaken idea, that me is here used for I, as if the accusative were put for the nominative. Thus it is rendered by Johnson, I think. Now me is not the accusative, but the dative. The term, so far from being a modern corruption, is indeed an ancient idiom, which has been nearly repudiated as an intruder, because it now stands solitary in our language. It has not been generally observed, that A.S. thine-an, thine-ean, not only signifies to think, but to seem, to appear; cogitare, putare; also, videri. Lye, therefore, when quoting the A.S. phrase, me thincth, properly renders it, mini videtur, (it appears to me), adding; Unde nostra methinketh, methinks. The thincth frequently occurs in a similar sense: Tibi videtur, It seems to thee.

As MoesG. thank-jan not only signifies to think, but to seem, Ulphilas uses the same idiom in the plural. Thunkeith im; Videtur illis; It appears to them; Matt. vi. 7. There is merely this difference, that the pronoun is affixed. Alem. thenk-en, thunken, is used in the same manner. Uns thunkit: Nobis videtur, It seems to us. Isl. thyk-ia, thikk-ia, videri; Thikke mier; Videtur mihi. V. Jun. Gl. Goth. vo. Thank-jan. Sw. mig tyckes, mihi videtur, Seren. Belg. my dunkt; Germ. es dunket mich, id. METIS, 3. p. v. V. METE.

MEW, s.

" Make na twa mews of ae daughter;" Fergu-son's S. Prov. p. 24.

The meaning of this term is uncertain; unless it be from Fr. mue, a coop or inclosure, whence E. mew. Isl. miove, angustum; Seren. It might thus be a prohibition to a parent to use one daughter as a lure for different suitors; and, as Kelly conjectures, be borrowed from the Lat. Eaedem filiae duos generos parare, as "spoken to them who think to oblige two different persons with one and the same benefit." P. 255.

MEWITH, 3. p. v.

The King to souper is set, served in halle, Under a siller of silke, dayntly dight, With al worshipp, and wele, mewith the walle; Briddes branden, and brad, in bankers bright. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

To MEWT, v. n. To mew, as a cat.

"Wae's them that has the cat's dish, and she ay mewting;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 74. "spoken when people owe a thing to, or detain a thing from needy people, who are always calling for it." Kelly, p. 343.

MYANCE, s. Means; apparently used in the sense of wages, fee.

In leichecraft he was homecyd, He wald haif for a nycht to byd

A haiknay and the hurtman's hyd, So meikle he was of myance.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20. Fr. moyen, mean, endeavour. Myance seems properly a s. pl. q. moyens. V. Moyen.

S. Athamanta meum, Linn.

"The athamanta meum, (spignel,) here called moiken or muilcionn, grows in the higher parts of the barony of Laighwood, and in the forest of Clunie. The Highlanders chew the root of it like liquorice or tobacco.—The root of this plant, when dried and masticated, throws out strong effluvia, which are thought a powerful antidote against contagious air, and it is recommended by some in gout-ish and gravellish complaints." P. Clunie, Perths. Statist. Acc. ix. 238. The name is Gael.

MICHTIE, adj. 1. Of high rank.

Than come he hame a verie potent man, And spousit syne a michtie wife richt than. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 10.

2. Stately, haughty, in conduct, S.

3. Strange, surprising; used also adv. like the E. word, as a sign of the superlative, as michtie rich, michtie gude, S.B.

This is entirely Su.G., maagta signifying very; maagta rik, maagta godt, corresponding to the S.

phraseology mentioned above.

MID-CUPPIL, s. That ligament which couples or unites the two staves of a flail, the hand-staff and soupple; S.B.

This is sometimes made of an eel's skin; at other times, of what is called a tar-leather, i. e. a strong slip of a hide salted and hung, in order to prepare it for this use. It is not easily conceivable, why this should be called a tar-leather, unless it be from Isl. tarf-r taurus, as originally denoting a piece of bull's hide.

MIDDEN, MIDDYN, MIDDING, s. A dunghill, S. A. Bor. Lincolns. id. Muck-midding, a dunghill consisting of the dung of animals, S. A.Bor.; ass-midding, one of ashes; marl-midding, a compost of marl and earth, S.

Thai kest him our out of that bailfull steid, Off him that trowit suld be no more ramede, In a draff myddyn, quhar he remanyt thar. Wallace, ii. 256. MS.

Syne Sweirnes, at the secound bidding, Come lyk a sow out of a midding.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29. "Better marry o'er the midding, than o'er the moor;" S. Prov. "Better marry a neighbour's child, whose humours and circumstances you know, than a stranger." Kelly, p. 60.

A.S. midding, id. Dan. moeding; Ihre, vo. Lena, p. 60. Ray derives this word from E. mud; but ridiculously, as he admits that midding is "an old Saxon word," whereas mud is certainly modern, perhaps from Belg. moddig nasty, Isl. mod, any thing useless, refuse, or rather Su.G. modd, lutum, coe. num, whence Isl. modig, Sw. maaddig, putridus, lutulentus.

A.S. midding is radically one with moeding, used in Scania precisely in the same sense. Ihre derives it from moeg, dung, muck, and ding a heap, vo. Dyng. This is nearly the same with Bp. Gibson's etymon; A.S. myke dung, and ding a heap; Notes on Polemo Middinia.

MIDDEN-HOLE, s. 1. A dunghill, S.

"What adds considerably to their miserable state, is the abominable, but too general practice, of placing the dunghill (middenhole, vulgarly) before the doors of their dwelling-houses, many of which, in every point of view, much accord with the situation in which they are placed." P. Kinclaven, Perths. Statist. Acc. xix. 333.

2. Sometimes, a hole or small pool, beside a dunghill, in which the filthy water stands, S.

MIDDEN-MYLIES, s. pl. Orrach, S.B. Chenopedium viride, et album, Linn.; thus denominated, as growing on dunghills.

For the etymon of the last part of the word, V. MAIDEN-MYLIES; as it has been erroneously printed in a former sheet.

i. e. I knew, or wist of no woman so fair on earth.

A.S. middan-eard, middan-geard, mundus, orbis terrarum; MoesG. midjungard, id. Alem. mittilgard, approaches most nearly to our word, from mittil middle, and gard area. Middangard occurs in the same language. Gard or geard seems the true orthography of the last syllable.

Ihre, vo. Mid, conjectures, that the earth may have been thus denominated, either because it was supposed to be placed in the centre of the universe, or that there is an allusion to the fabled partition made among the three sons of Saturn; this world being considered as the middle lot between heaven and hell. The Goths, he thinks, wanted a word for denoting the world, before the introduction of verold, werold, &c. and that for this reason they framed the terms manasedh, or, the seat of man, fairqhus, q. fair or beautiful house, and midjungard, or the middle area.

MYDDIS, s. The middle.

MILK, s. A day annually observed in a school, on which the scholars present a small gift to their master; in return for which he gives them the play, as it is called, or freedom from their ordinary task, and provides for them a treat of curds and cream, sweetmeats, &c. Sometimes they have music and a dance. Loth.

am informed by a gentleman who resides in that country, that the wife of one of his tenants complained to him of a neighbouring female, that she witched away the milk of her cows by means of a haar-rep, i. e. a hair-rope.

The same effect is ascribed to what is called trailing the tether. On Rood-day, the Fairies are supposed to trail or drag the tether over the clover, in order to take away the milk. Hence, if one has an uncommon quantity of milk from one's cows, it is isually said, "You have been drawing the tether." MILKER, s. A vulgar designation for a cow that gives milk, S.

MILKNESS, s. 1. The state of giving milk, S. Afore lang days, I hope to see him here, About his milkness and his cows to speer. Ross's Helenore, p. 78.

2. Milk itself, improperly, S.

3. A dairy, S. A. Bor.

MILK-SYTH, s. A milk-strainer, a vessel used for straining milk, S. corr. milsie, milsey.

-Ane ark, ane almry, and laidills two, Ane milk-syth, with ane swyne taill.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 159. st. 4.

This word has given rise to a proverb addressed to those who make much ado about nothing, or complain of the weight of that work which deserves not to be mentioned. Ye are sair stressed wi' stringing the milsey. This refers to the cloth, through which the milk is strained, being taken off the wooden frame, wrung out, and tied on again.

Sibb. views it "q. milk-sieve." But the last syllable is from Sey to strain, q. v. It is also called the Sey-dish.

MILK-WOMAN, s. A wet nurse; a green milkwoman, one whose milk is fresh, who has been recently delivered of a child, S.B.

'To Mill one out of a thing, to procure it rather in an artful and flattering way, Loth. It seems nearly synon. with E. wheedle. Isl. mill-a lenire, to mitigate.

*MILL, s. The vulgar name for a snuff-box, one especially of a cylindrical form, or resembling an inverted cone; also snuff-mill, sneechin-mill, S.

No other name was formerly in use. The reason assigned for this designation is, that when tobacco was introduced into this country, those, who wished to have snuff, were wont to toast the leaves before the fire, and then bruise them with a bit of wood in the box; which was therefore called a mill, from the snuff being ground in it.

I may observe, by the way that the word mill is radically from Isl. mel-ia, contundere, to beat; hence mael, farina, meal, and mal-a to grind. V. G. Andr. Lex. p. 174.

MILLER'S THUMB, s. The river Bullhead, S. Cottus Gobio, Linn.

Ross's Helenore, p. 106. 3. Affecting great moderation in eating or drinking, S.

" Makes a mim maiden at the board end." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 9.

i. e. The maiden who eats in the kitchen, and in the larder, must of necessity have little appetite at the dining-table.

It might be supposed, that mim resembled Alem. mamm-en, to please, whence mammende, those who are meek, pleasant, or complacent; Schilter: and indeed, our term often includes the idea of an aukward and unnatural attempt to please. But as it is synon. with Moy, and occasionally interchanged with it, they have probably a common origin. V. Mox. MIN, Myn, adj. Less, smaller.

Burns, iii. 79.

One sense given of E. mind is, "memory, remembrancy." But in all the proofs Johns. gives, a prep. is prefixed, in mind, to mind, out of mind. question much if in E. it is used as with us.

A.S. ge-mynd, Dan. minde. Isl. minne, Alem. minna, Su.G. minne, memoria. Hence the cup drunk by the ancient Goths, in memory of their ancestors, was called minne. V. Skoll. Sibb. mentions Minmyng daies, minding or commemoration days; a phrase which I have not met with elsewhere.

Sir Tristrem, p. 35. "Apparently from Mint to offer.—They began to offer marks or money." Gl. It seems rather to signify, contribute; as allied to Isl. mynd-u procurare, from mund dos, pecunia. Teut. muynigh-en, communicare, participare.

MINNIE, MINNY, s. Mother; now used as a childish or fondling term, S.

Sen that I born was of my minnie, I nevir woult an uther but you.

Clerk, Evergreen, ii. 19.

This word, although now only in the mouths of the vulgar, is undoubtedly very ancient. It is nearly allied to Belg. minne a nurse; a wet nurse; minne-moer, a nursing mother; minne-vader, a fosterfather. This is to be traced to minne, love, as its origin; minn-en, to love. Teut. Minne is also the name of Venus. Correspondent to these, we have Alem. minna, love, Minne, Venus, Meer-minne, a Siren, min-oon, to love; Su.G. minn-a, id., also to kiss. Hence Fr. mignon, mignot, mignard, terms of endearment. This designation is thus not only recommended by its antiquity, but by its beautiful expression. Love and Mother are used as synon. terms. Can any word more fitly express: the tender care of a mother, or that strength of affection which is due from a child, who has been nourished by the very substance of her body? It must be observed, however, that Isl. manna is used in the same sense as S. minnie. Manna dicunt pueri pro matercula. G. Andr. 175.

MINNIE'S MOUTHES, s. A phrase used to denote those who must be wheedled into any measure by kindness.

"The solistations, protestations and promises of great reward, often used since the beginning of the Parliament, are here againe enlarged amply, and engyred finely for soupling such with sueeties, as they take to be Minnie's mouthes." Course of Conformitie, p. 93.

Alem. minlicho is rendered suavissime. Schilter: so that it seems doubtful, whether the phrase, minnie's mouthes, refers to the indulgence given by a fond mother, or literally respects sweetness, as equivalent to the E. phrase, "having a sweet tooth."

We are here so far the other way, that our rascals, without shame,

Shall we suppose that it was originally applied to acts of hostility; as allied to Isl. myrd-a, occulte interimere?

MIRE-BUMPER, s. The bittern, S. Ardea stellaris, Linn.

It seems denominated from the noise which it makes; E. bump, to make a loud noise. This Johns. derives from Lat. bomb-us, which indeed denotes a buzzing noise, also, that made by a trumpet. But the term is perhaps more immediately connected with Isl. bomp-a, pavire, to beat or strike against; bomps a stroke, ictus, allisio, G. Andr.

This animal seems to receive its name for the same reason, in a variety of languages. In the South of E. it is called butterbump, q. the bumping butour or bittern; in the North, miredrum, Gl. Grose; q.

the drum of the mire: Sw. roerdrum, rohrtrum. mel, either from roer a reed, and trumma drum, trumla to beat the drum; Teut. roer-domp, roertrompe, id. Kilian. Or roer may, as Ihre conjectures, be from A.S. raer-en to bray as an ass. In Germ. it is called mosskuhe, q. cow of the moss, from the resemblance of its noise to that of bellowing. V. Moss-Bummer.

MYRIT, pret. Stupified, confounded. Rutulianis wox affrayit with myndis myrit. Doug. Virgil, 278. 35.

I scarcely think that this is the same with merrit, marred, as Rudd. conjectures; or from A.S. myrran, profundere, perdere. It seems merely a metaph. use of the E. v. to mire, which is often applied S.B. to a person in a state of perplexity from whatever Mirkest, Edit. 1648, 1758.

This is most probably from the same source with Isl. morkinn, Su.G. murken, rotten, putrid; murket traa, rotten wood. That part of a moor is said to be most rotten, which sinks most, or is most unfit to be trode on. G. Andr. connects the Isl. term with moor, solum grumis sterilibus obsitum; also, clay. In Finland maerkae signifies humid.

MIRKY, adj. "Smiling, hearty, merry, pleased; mirky as a maukin, merry as a hare,"

"The third wis—as mirkie as maukin at the start, an' as wanton as a speanin lamb." Journal from London, p. 7.

Sibb. views it as radically the same with smirky, which is from A.S. smerc-an subridere. But as the s seems to enter into the original form of this word, perhaps the former is from A.S. myrig, merry, pron. hard, or from myrg pleasure.

A.S. maerlic, bright, q. dazzled with brightness. Perhaps rather q. merrily go, because when the faculty of sight is disordered, objects seem to dance before the eyes.

MIRROT, s. A carrot, S.B. Daucus carota,

This is the only term used for this root among the vulgar in Sutherland, who do not speak Gaelic; also, in Ross-shire.

It is pure Gothic. Su.G. morrot, id. Linn. writes it morot, Flor. Suec. 237. Ihre views it as denominated, either from its red colonr, morroed denoting a brownish colour; or from mor, marshy ground, because, he says, it delights in marshy places. Lye mentions A.S. mora as denoting a root; Add. Jun. Etym. Aelfric renders waldmora cariota, [by L. carota, Somn.] This seems to signify, the wood-root, from weald, sylva, a wood, a forest; as feld-mora, a parsnip, q. the field-root. I am, therefore, inclined to differ from the learned Ihre, as to the etymon of Morrod, as he prefers that from mor a marsh. It seems rather to mean, the red root; especially as Germ. mor signifies, fuscus. MYRTRE, adi. Of or belonging to Myrtle.

To MISFAYR, MISFARE, v. n. To miscarry.

I have in ryme thus fer furth tane the cure, Now war I laith my lang labour misfure.

Doug. Virgil, 272. 18. Fra this sair man now cummin is the King,

Havand in mynd great murmour and moving;

And in his hart greit havines and thocht; Sa wantonly in vane al thing he wrocht, And how the cuntrie throw him was misfarne, Throw yong counsel; and wrocht ay as a barne. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. p. 22.

Misfarin, S.B. signifies ill-grown. A.S. misfar-an, male evenire, perire, to go wrong. Somner. Hence, MYSFAR, s. Mischance, mishap.

Ingliss wardanis till London past but mar, And tauld the King off all thair gret mysfar, How Wallace had Scotland fra thaim reduce. Wallace, xi. 940, MS.

MISHANTER, s. Misfortune, disaster, S. For never since ever they ca'd me as they ca' me, Did sic a mishap and mishanter befa' me.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 133. Sibb. has rightly observed that this is from Fr. misaventure, q. mis-aunter. For indeed it occurs in the latter form in O.E.

The vnrygt ydo to poueremen to suche mysauntre turnde. R. Glouc. p. 375.

To MISGRUGGLE, MISGRUGLE, v. a. 1. To disorder, to rumple; to handle roughly, S.

"I took her by the bought o' the gardy, an' gar'd her sit down by me; bat she bad me had aff my hands, far I misgrugled a' her apron." Journal from London, p. 8.

2. To disfigure, to deform; often applied to the change of the countenance in consequence of grief or hard treatment, S.B.

It seems originally the same with Belg. kreukelen, to crumple, to rufile, from kreuk, a crumple; Isl. ruck-a, Lat. rug-a, id. Mis seems redundant, as Gruggle is synon.

MISHAPPENS, s. Unfortunateness.

" My heart pitied the man; beside other evils, the mishappens of the affair, which could not be by any hand so compassed as to give content to all, made him fall in such danger of his Majesty's misinterpretation, that no other means was left him to purchase a good construction of his very fidelity." Baillie's Lett. i. 117. MISHARRIT, part. pa.

And I agane, maistlike ane elriche grume, Crap in the muskane aiken stok misharrit.

Palice of Honour, i. 19.

It seems to mean, disconcerted, disappointed, q. unhinged, from A.S. mis, and hearro a hinge.

Sibb. says, " perhaps mis-scheirit, hollow and shattered." He seems to refer to this very passage, and to view the term as applied by Doug. to the tree, instead of the person who took refuge in it. To MISKEN, v. a. 1. Not to know, to be ignorant of, S. Yorks.

Quhay knawis not the lynnage of Enec? Or quhay miskennys Troy, that nobyll cieté? Doug. Virgil, 30. 47.

"Poor fowk's friends soon misken them." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 58.

2. To overlook, to neglect.

The vane gloir that my tua brethir takis in sic vane gentilnes, is the cause that thai lichtlye me, trocht the quhilk arrogant mynde that thai haf consauit, thai mysken God and man, quhilk is the occasione that I and thou sall neury get releif of our afflictione. Compl. S. p. 201. "Mistake," Gl. But this is not the sense. For this is nearly allied to lichtlye.

"He suddenly resolveth to do all that is commanded, and to forego every evil way, (yet much miskenning Christ Jesus) and so beginneth to take some courage to himself again, establishing his own righteousness." Guthrie's Trial, p. 89.

3. To seem to be ignorant of, to take no notice of; applied to persons, S.

"In all these things misken me, and all information from this," i. e. "Do not let the source of your information appear." Baillie's Lett. ii. 139.

"Sir William Waller's forces melted quickly to a poor handful; the Londoners, and others, as is their miskent custom, after a piece of service, get home." Ibid. ii. 2.

4. To let alone, to forbear, not to meddle with,

to give no molestation to.

"Carlavrock we did misken. It could not be taken without cannon, which without time and great charges, could not have been transported from the castle of Edinburgh." Baillie's Lett. i. 159.

" Mr. Henderson, and sundry, would have all these things miskent, till we be at a point with England." Ibid. i. 368.

Isl. miskun-a is used in a sense nearly akin. It signifies to pity; misereor, G. Andr.

To refuse to acknowledge, to disown.

"The reasone quhairof Sanct Paule schawis in few wordis, saying: Qui ignorat, ignorabitur. He that miskens sall be miskennit. Meining this, gif we will nocht ken Goddis iustice and his mercy, offerit to vs in Christ, in tyme of this lyfe, God sall misken vs in the day of extreme iugement." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme 1552, Fol. 82. a.

6. To misken one's self, to assume airs which do not belong to one, to forget one's proper station, S.

To MYSKNAW, v. a. To be ignorant of. Biddis thou me be sa nyce, I suld mysknaw This calm salt water, or stabill fludis haw? Doug. Virgil, 156. 50.

"Thairefter he geuis his awin jugement, quhilk is contrarius to al the rest: affirmyng the samyn but older scripture or doctor. And thairfore, is dere of the rehersing, because it was euir misknawin to the kirk of God, and all the ancient fatheris of the samyn." Kennedy (Crossraguell), Compend. Tractiue, p. 92.

MISLEARD, adj. 1. Unmannerly, indiscreet.

Shirr. Gl. S.

Her Nanesel maun be carefu' now, Nor maun she be misleard, Sin baxter lads hae seal'd a vow To skelp an' clout the guard.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 51. 2. It also signifies mischievous, S. V. FUTIE, and KITTLE, adj. Literally, ill-tutored; from mis and lear'd, i. e. learned. V. LERE, v.

To MISLIPPEN, v. a. To disappoint, S. Yorks. To MISLUCK, v. n. To miscarry, not to prosper, S. Belg. misluck-en, id.

MISLUCK, s. Misfortune, S. "Wha can help misluck?" Ramsay's S. Prov.

MISLUSHIOUS, adj. Malicious, rough, Gl.

Hutcheon with a three-lugged cap, His head bizzen wi' bees, Hit Geordy a mislushios rap, And brak the brig o' 's neese Right sair that day.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 279.

It seems to be expl. malicious, merely from the resemblance in sound. The proper idea is that of rough, severe, unguarded; rackless, synon.

To MISMAGGLE, v. a. To spoil, to put in disorder, to put awry, S.B.

"She bad me had aff my hands, for I misgrugled a' her apron, an' mismaggl'd a' her cocker-nony." Journal from London, p. 8.

Mis seems redundant here. V. MAGIL.

MISMAIGHT, part. pa. "Put out of sorts, mismatched," S. Gl. Sibb. from mis and maik,

To MISMARROW, v. a. To put out of sorts, to mismatch; generally applied to things which are sorted in pairs, when one is put for another: S. V. MARROW, v.

MISNURTURED, adj. Ill-bred, unmannerly. "-Therefore that which idle onwaiting cannot do, misnurtured crying and knocking will do." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 27.

MISNOURTOURNESSE, s. Ill breeding, want of due respect.

"This homelines will not be with misnourtour. nesse, and with an opinion of paritie: albeit thou wilt be homely with him as with thy brother; yet thou mayest not make thy selfe as companion to him, and count lightly of him." Rollock on the Passion, p. 343.

To MISPORTION one's self, v. a. To eat to excess, to surfeit ones self, S.B.

To MISSAYE, v. a. To abuse, to rail at.

"Item, of them quha missayes the Baillies, or the Lord's Baillie in court of his office doing, it behoves him right there to cry him mercy, and therefore to make him amends." Baron Courts, c. 72.

This denotes some eruption, perhaps leprosy. For while Germ. masel signifies the measles. maselsucht is used for the leprosy; Su.G. massel for the scall, Lev. xxi. 20, and massling for the smallpox. V. MESALL.

MISSLIE, adj. "Solitary, from some person or thing being amissing or absent." Gl. Sibb.

To MISSWEAR, v. n. To swear falsely, S.

MISTER, MYSTER, s. Craft, art. Ane engynour thair haif thai tane, That wes sleast of that myster, That men wyst ony fer or ner.

Barbour. xvii. 435, MS.

It is also found in O.E.

He asked for his archere,

Walter Tirelle was haten, maister of that mister. R. Brunne, p. 94.

This is immediately from Fr. mestier, id. Menage derives this from Lat. minister-ium; Skinner, E. mystery a trade, from Gr. µusques. Warton, however, contends that L.B. magister-ium is the origin, to which Fr. maistrise exactly corresponds. Hist. E. Poet. v. iii. xxxvii. &c.

2. It sometimes denotes want of food, S.B. And now her heart is like to melt away Wi' heat and mister.

Ross's Helenore, p. 59.

It is used as synon. with Faut. There's been a dowie day to me, my dear; Faint, faint, alas! wi' faut and mister gane, And in a peril just to die my lane. Ibid. p. 66. V. FAUT.

3. Any thing that is necessary.

-Grant eik leif to hew wod, and tak Tymmer to bete airis, and vther misteris. Doug. Virgil, 30. 26.

He ete and drank, with ful gude chere, For tharof had he grete myster.

Ywaine, Ritson's E.M.R. i. 33.

Rudd. views this as the same with the preceding word, supposing that, as Fr. mestier signifies a trade or art, "because by these we may and ought to supply our necessities," the term "came to signify need, lack, necessity, want." Sibb. adopts this ety-

Fr. mestier is indeed used as signifying need, or want. But it seems more natural to deduce mister from Su.G. mist-a, Dan. mist-er, to lose, to sustain the want, loss, or absence of any thing. Allied to these are Isl. misser, a loss, misting, he who is deprived of his property; Alem. mizz-an to want, Belg. miss-en.

To MISTER, v. a. To need, to be in want of, to have occasion for.

All trew Scottis gret fauour till him gaiff, Quhat gude thai had he mysterit nocht to craiff. Wallace, v. 558. MS.

O douchty King, thou askis counsale, said he, Of that matere, quhilk, as semys me, Is nouthir dirk nor doutsum, but full clere, That mysteris not our auisis bene here.

Doug. Virgil, 374. 21.

To MISTER, MYSTRE, v. n. To be necessary.

The King has than to consaill tan, That he wald nocht brek down the wall; Bot castell, and the toun withall, Stuff weill with men, and with wittaill, And alkyn other apparaill That mycht awaile, or ellis mystre To hald castell, or toun off wer.

MISTIRFUL, adj. Needy, necessitous.

" For the misere of mistirful men, and for the vepyng of pure men, the diuyne justice sal exsecut strait punitione." Compl. S. p. 194.

Unkend and mysterfull in the deseirtis of Libie I wander, expellit from Ewrop and Asia.

Barbour, xiii. 412.

In Ed. 1620, it is mastrie: in MS. mercy; which appears to be an error. The most natural sense of the passage is, that, being received within the walls, they were in no strait, or exposed to no danger from the enemy.

To MYSTRAIST, v. n. To mistrust, to sus-

"Myith, mix." Gl. Pink. But there is no evidence that it ever bears this sense. It is radically the same with Isl. mid-a, locum signo. That there is a near affinity between this and the preceding verb, the one signifying to measure, and the other to mark, appears from what has been said in the illustration of Менти, q. v.

Myth, s. A mark. V. Меітн. MITH, MEITH, aux. v. Might, S.B.

It is certainly the same fowl which Dunbar calls Myttaine. V. St. Martynis Fowle.

MITTENS, s. pl. 1. " [Mitaines, Fr.] woollen gloves. Mittens, in England, at present, are understood to be gloves without fingers." Sir J. Sinclair, p. 163

Lancash. id.; also, "a very strong pair to hedge in ;" Gl. Tim Bobbin.

2. To lay up one's mittens, to beat out one's brains; a cant phrase, Aberd.

" For, thinks I, an' the horse tak a brattle now, they may come to lay up my mittens, an' ding me yavil an' as styth as gin I had been elf-shot." Journal from London, p. 4.

To MITTLE, v. a. To hurt or wound, by a fall, bruise, or blow, S.

I have sometimes thought that this might be a corruption of mutilate, a term much used in our old laws in the same sense; as,-" hurt, slaine, mutilate."-Acts Ja. VI. 1594, c. 227.

But as this would only correspond to the part. mittlit, the verb may be from Fr. mutil-er, Lat. mutil-are, id. I am not satisfied, however, that it is not allied to MoesG. mait-an, Isl. meid-a, mutilare, laedere, conscindere.

MIXTIE-MAXTIE, MIXIE-MAXIE, adv. In a state of confusion; suggesting the same idea with the E. s. mishmash, a mingle, S.

It is also used as if an adj.

Could he some commutation broach,-He need na fear their foul reproach

Nor erudition,-You mixtie-maxtie queer hotch-potch, The coalition.

Burns, iii. 25.

Both the S. and E. terms are allied, the latter especially, which Dr. Johnson calls "a low word," to Su.G. miskmask, id.; congeries rerum multarum; Ihre, vo. Fick-fack.

MIZZLED, adj. Having different colours. The legs are said to be mizzled, when partly discoloured by sitting too near the fire, S.

This at first view might seem merely a peculiar use of E. measled, q. like one in the measles. But mizzled is a different term. It may be allied to A.S. mistl, varius, diversus, or rather to Isl. mislitt variegatus; mislitan kyrtil, tunicam variegatam, 2 Sam. 13. V. Let, color, Ihre. This word seems originally to have denoted loss of colour, Isl. miss signifying privation.

Teut. maschelen, however, is synon. Maschelen aen de beenen, maculae subrubrae quae hyeme contrahuntur, dum crura ad ignem propius admoventur; from masche, maschel, macula, a spot or stain. MOBIL, Moble, s. Moveable goods, or such as are not affixed to the soil; S. moveables. Yone berne in the battale will ye noght forbere For all the mobil on the mold merkit to meid. Gawan and Gol. iii. 13.

It is more generally used in pl.

Fra every part that flokking fast about, Bayth with gude will, and there moblis but dout. Doug. Virgil, 65. 25.

Fr. meubles, id.

MOCH, Mochy, adj. 1. Moist, damp. Not [nocht] throw the soyl bot muskane treis

2. Thick, close; misty. This is the sense of mochy. A mochy day, a dark misty day, S.

The E. use the phrase, moky day. But both Skinner and Johnson seem to understand it as if it were the same with murky, gloomy, rendering it dark. It is certainly synon. with S. mochy. Muck, Lincolns. signifies moist, wet.

Isl. mokk-ne, mokk-r, condensatio nubium, are evidently allied to our term, especially in the second sense. Dan. mug denotes mould, muggen mouldy: and in some parts of E. they say, a muggy day. But it most nearly resembles Isl. mugga, aer succidus et nubilo humidus; G. Andr. p. 181.

MOCH, s. A heap. This Sibb. mentions as the same with Mowe, q. v. from A.S. mucg, acer-

To MOCHRE, Mokre, v. n. 1. To heap up, to hoard.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 13. Chaucer uses muckre and mockeren precisely in the same sense.

- Muckre and ketche pens.

Troilus, iii. 1381.

Hence Mukerar, q. v., a covetous person. The verb is certainly allied to A.S. mucg, a heap, as Rudd. observes; but perhaps more immediately to Ital. macchiare, mucchiare, to accumulate. This, as many Ital. words are of Goth. origin, may be traced to Isl. mock-a, id. coacervare.

- 2. It is used to denote the conduct of those who are busy about trifling matters or mean work, S.B. pron. mochre.
- 3. To work in the dark, S.B.

These are merely oblique senses of the verb, borrowed from the keenness manifested by a covetous person.

MOCHT, aux. v. Might.

The awfull King gart twa harraldis be brocht, Gaiff thaim commaund, in all the haist thai mocht, To chargis Wallace, that he suld cum him till, Witht out promyss, and put him in his will. Wallace, vi. 347. MS.

To MODERATE, v. n. Doug. Virgil, 121. 32.

To preside in an ecclesiastical court, whether superior or inferior,

"It is thought expedient that no Minister, moderating his Session, shall usurp a negative voice over the members of his Session." Act Assembly, Dec. 17. 1638.

The prep. in may have been omitted after moderating. It is used in our time.

"The Moderator of the former Assembly opens it with a sermon; but in case of his absence, his predecessor in that chair hath the sermon: and in absence of them both, the eldest Minister of the town where they meet, preacheth, and openeth the Assembly by prayer, and moderates till a new Moderator be chosen." Steuart's Collections, B. i. Tit. 15. § 19.

2. To preside in a congregation, at the election of a Pastor, S.

"When the day is come on which the electors were appointed to meet,-the Minister whom the Presbytery ordered to moderate at the election, having ended sermon, and dismissed the congregation, except these concerned, is to open the meeting of electors with prayer, and thereafter they proceed to vote the person to be their Minister." Steuart's Collections, B. i. Tit. 1. § 6.

Moderator, s. 1. He who presides in an ecclesiastical court, S.

- " Declareth, that the power of Presbyterics and of provincial and general Assemblies, hath been unjustly suppressed, but never lawfully abrogate. And therefore that it hath been most lawful unto them, not withstanding any point unjustly objected by the Prelats to the contrare,—to choose their own Moderatours, and to execute all the parts of ecclesiasticall jurisdiction according to their own limits appointed them by the Kirk." Act Assembly, Dec. 5. 1638. Sess. 13.

The Pastor is constant Moderator of a Session, from the superiority of his office to those of Ruling Elders and Deacons. In a Presbytery, a new Moderator is generally chosen annually; in a Provincial Synod or Assembly, at every meeting.

2. The minister who presides in a congregational meeting, at the election of a Pastor, S.

Thereafter they proceed to vote the person to be their Minister.—Which vote being taken and carefully marked, the Moderator is to pronounce the mind of the meeting, viz. that a call be given to the person named; which the clerk is to have ready drawn up to be read and signed by them in presence of the Moderator." Dan. muldwarp, Germ. maulwurf, Alem. muluuerf, A. Bor. mouldwarp. This is generally derived from A.S. molde, earth, and weorp-an, to throw or cast. Ray says, that to wort is to cast forth as a mole or hog doth. Hence it is probable that there may have been a Goth. v. of a similar form, entering into the composition of our name for the mole. A.S. wrot-an, Belg. vroet-en, wroet-en, Su.G. rot-a, are indeed used in a sense nearly allied, versare rostro, to root as a sow with its snout

MOGGANS, s. pl. 1. Long sleeves for a woman's arms, wrought like stockings, S.B.

Had I won the length but of ae pair of sleeves,-This I wad have washen and bleech'd like the snaw,

And on my twa gardies like moggans wad draw; And then fouk wad say, that auld Girzy was braw. Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 134.

2. Hose without feet, Aberd. Hairy moggans, Fife; synon. with hoggars, Clydes., hoeshins, Avrs., longs, Stirlings.

"The lads wis nae very driech o drawin, but lap in amo' the dubs in a handclap; I'm seer some o' them wat the sma' end o' their moggan." Journal from London, p. 5.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, Shop-bill. Belg. mouw, a sleeve, pl. mouwen; A.S. mogg, longas tibias habens, Gl. MSS. ap. Schilter: but most nearly allied to Teut. mouwken, parva manica. It seems, indeed, the very same word.

MOGH, s. A moth, Ang. O.E. mough. Langland says of a garment;

Shal neuer chest bymolen it, ne mough after P. Ploughman, Fol. 67, b. byte it.

"It shall never be moulded in chest, or eaten by a moth." This word is overlooked both by Skinner and Junius. In Edit. 1561, it is rendered mought, which is also used in the same sense O.E.

"Rust and mought distryith." Wiclif, Matt. 6. Moughte, Chaucer.

MOY, Moye, adj. 1. Gentle, mild, soft.

I wald na langer beir on brydil, bot braid up my heid:

Thair micht na mollat mak me moy, nor hald my mouth in;

I gar the reinyes rak, and ryf into schundyr.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 57.

Venus with this all glad and full of ioye. Amyd the heuinly hald, rycht mylde and moye, Before Jupiter down hir self set.

Doug. Virgil, 478. 44.

2. Affecting great moderation in eating or drinking; mim, synon.

"A bit butt, and bit bend [ben], make a moy maiden at the board end;" S. Prov.; "a jocose reflection upon young maids, when they eat almost nothing at dinner; intimating, that if they had not eaten a little in the pantry or kitchen, they would eat better at the table;" Kelly, p. 31.

Moy is used in the sense of demure, A. Bor. Gl.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. mol or mou, id. Lat. moll-is; Sibb. from Teut. moy, comptus, ornatus. I suspect that it is radically the same with meck. For Su.G. miuk seems to be formed from Isl. mygia humiliare. Verel. indeed gives ob-miuka as the Sw. synon. In like manner, Schilter deduces Teut. muyck, mollis, lenis, debilis, from muoh-en, mu-en, muw-en, vexare, affligere. What is a meek person, but one who is tamed and softened by affliction? Thus, our moy is evidently used, in the first passage, in allusion to a horse that is tamed by restraint and correction. Gael. modh, however, signifies modest.

MOYLIE, adv. Mildly.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 8.

MOYAN, s. A species of artillery.

- "Two great canons thrown-mouthed, Mow and her marrow, with two great Botcards, and two Moyans." Pitscottie, p. 143. V. Botcard.

These have been called moyans, as being of a middle size, to distinguish them from those designed great; Fr. moyen, moderate. The term is still used, in this sense, in the artillery-service. Anciently all the great guns were christened, as it was called, and had particular names given them. As these two, Mow and her marrow, i. e. fellow or mate, are said to have been thrown-mouthed, what is now denominated spring-bored, or unequal in the bore, they seem to be the same that are afterwards called Crook Mow and Deaf Meg, ibid. p. 191. Mons Meg received her name, as having been made

V. Moy.

2. According to Rudd., the boss or ornament of a bridle.

Thare harnessing of gold richt derely dicht,
Thay rang the goldin mollettis burnist brycht.
Doug. Virgil, 215. 27.

Rudd. refers to Fr. moulette, the rowel of a spur; or mullet, a term in heraldry for a star of five points. V. next word.

Mollet-Brydyl, s. A bridle having a curb. "Sone efter Makbeth come to vesy hys castell, & becaus he fand not Makduf present at the werk, he said; This man wyl not obey my chargis, quhill he be riddin with ane mollet brydyl." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 6. Nisi lupato in os injecto, Boeth.

Perhaps mollet may have been formed from Teut. muyl, Germ. maul, Su.G. mul, the mouth; especially as Teut. muyl-band signifies a headstall for a horse, a muzzle, and Sw. munde-stycke, q. something that pricks the mouth, has precisely the same meaning with the S. term. Seren. uses the very word employed by Boece, lupatum. Isl. mel, Sa.G. myl, however, denote a bridle, a curb; fraenum, Verch. To MOLLET, v. n.

Gif thay thair spirituall office gydit, Ilk man micht say, thay did thair partis: Bot gif thay can play at the cartis, And mollet moylie on ane mule, Thocht thay had neuer sene the scule; Yit at this day, als weill as than, Will be maid sic ane spirituall man.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 270. This verb, evidently used for the alliteration, refers to the management of a mule in riding. But the precise signification is doubtful. It is most probably formed from Mollat, s.

MOLLIGRANT, s. The act of whining, complaining, or murmuring, Ang.

Isl. mogl-a, to murmur, mogl-a, murmur, and graun, os et nasus, q. such whining as distorts the countenance; or, as including two ideas nearly connected, grunnia, murmuring, and grunting. Teut. muyl-en, mutire, mussitare; muyl-er, mussitator.

MOLLIGRUB, MULLYGRUB, s. The same with molligrant, S.

"Sick of the mulligrubs; low-spirited, having an imaginary sickness;" Grose's Class. Dict.

Germ. grob, signifying great; this might denote a great complaint or murmuring.

The force of this verb is well expressed in the following lines:

"You maun gang wi' me, fair maid."

"To marry you, Sir, I'se warrand; "But maun belongs to the king himsel,

"But no to a country clown;
"Ye might have said, 'Wi' your leave, fair maid,

Minot's Poems, p. 3.

Maun, S.; mun, Cumb. Yorks. Isl. mun, id. Eg mun giora, facturus sum; Fra quinno ok barn the ganga mona; Uxores et liberos relinquent; Fra wives and bairns they mun gang, S. Runolph. Jonas observes, in his Isl. Grammar, that eg skal and eg mun are auxiliary verbs, which signify nothing by themselves; but, added to other verbs, correspond to Gr. μελλειν. It may be remarked, however, that mun S. and A. Bor. is more forcible than the Isl. term. The latter respects the certainty of something future; the former denotes not only its futurition, but its necessity.

Ihre traces this word to Moes.G. And thata munaida thairhgangan; He was to pass that way, Luk. xix. 4. Di' excivns nuchas diegxerbai; Gr. Munaida, however, is from mun-an, mun-jan, to think, to mean.

I have sometimes been inclined to view mon, man, maun, as an oblique use of A.S. magon, possunt; for we frequently urge the necessity of doing a thing, because it is in one's power. But, although MoesG. magun, from mag-an, posse, corresponds to A.S. magon, we have no evidence of its being used to denote necessity. We may, therefore, either suppose that the MoesG. verb, primarily signifying to intend, admitted of a secondary sense; or that there was another verb of the same form corresponding to Gr. μελλειν.

A.S. mona, Germ. mon. In the other Northern dialects, a or e is used, instead of o. Isl. mana, Alem. mano, Su.G. Dan. maane, Belg. maen, MoesG. mena. The latter approaches most nearly to a word used by the prophet Isaiah, which has been understood by the most learned interpreters as denoting the moon. "Ye are they that prepare a table for Gad, and that furnish the offering unto Meni." Isa. lxv. 11. As Gad is understood of the Sun, we learn from Diodor. Sicul. that Meni is to be viewed as a designation of the moon. This name coming from a root which signifies to number, it has been supposed that it was given to the moon, because the nations in general numbered their months from her revolutions. The moon was anciently called Mays, Menc, before she received the name of Σεληνη, Selene. This name of the moon, according to Eusebius, occurs in the Poems of Orpheus. The Latins had their goddess Mana. Some nations made the moon a masculine deity, calling him Mnv, as the Roman writers spoke of Deus Lunus; for the moon, it has been said, was viewed as of the masculine gender in respect of the Earth, whose husband he was supposed to be; but as a female in relation to the Sun, as being his spouse. Vide Vitring. in Isa. lxv. 11. El. Sched. de Dis Germ. p. 136.

As nothing could be more absurd than to ascribe sex to Deity, the folly of the system of the heathen appears, in a striking light, from the great confusion of their mythology in this respect. The Sun himself was sometimes considered as a Goddess. In A.S. the name of this luminary is feminine, as Spelman, Hickes, and Lye have observed; for the Germans viewed the sun as the wife of Tuisco. On the other hand, Mona, the word used to denote the Moon, is masculine. Ulphilas, in his version, sometimes gives the sun a masculine name, Uil; although Sunno, a word of the feminine gender, is most commonly used.

It had occurred to me, that A.S. mona bears strong marks of affinity to the v. mon-ian, monere, to admonish, to instruct; and that the name might originate from some Goth. v. of this signification, as Heb. [7], jarchk, the moon, is from [7], jarch, in hiphil, docuit, monstravit; q. that which admonishes the husbandman as to times and seasons. Upon looking into Wachter, I find that he derives the Goth. name of this luminary from man-a monere, as the ancient Germans would undertake nothing of importance without examining the state of the moon. The ancient Goths, says Rudbeck, paid such regard to the moon, that some have thought that they worshipped her more than the sun. Atalantis, ii. 609.

Prognostications concerning the weather, during the course of the month, are generally formed by the country people in S. from the appearance of the new moon. It is considered as an almost infallible presage of bad weather, if she lies sair on her back, or when her horns are pointed towards the zenith. It is a similar prognostic, when the new moon appears with the auld moon in her arms, or, in other words, when that part of the moon which is covered with the shadow of the earth is seen through it.

A brugh or hazy circle round the moon is accounted a certain prognostic of rain. If the circle be wide, and at some distance from the body of that luminary, it is believed that the rain will be delayed for some time; if it be close, and as it were adhering to the disk of the moon, rain is expected very soon. V. Brugh.

There is the same superstition with regard to the first mention of the term Moon, after this planet has made her first appearance, that prevails with respect to that day of the week to which she gives her name. V. MONONDAY. Some to prevent the dangerous consequences of the loquacity of a female tongue, will anxiously inquire at any male, "What is that which shines so clearly?" or, "What light is that?" that he may pronounce the portentous term. In this case, the charm is happily broken.

Another superstition, equally ridiculous and unaccountable, is still regarded by some. They deem it very unlucky to see the new moon for the first time, without having silver in one's pocket. Copper is of no avail.

Both Celts and Goths retain a superstitious regard for this planet, as having great influence on the lot of man.

"The moon, in her increase, full growth, and wane, are with them the emblems of a rising, flourishing, and declining fortune. At the last period of her revolution, they carefully avoid to engage in any business of importance; but the first and the middle they seize with avidity, presaging the most auspicious issue to their undertakings. Poor Martinus Scriblerus never more anxiously watched the blowing of the west wind to secure an heir to his genius, than the love-sick swain and his nymph for the coming of the new moon to be noosed together in matrimony. Should the planet happen to be at the height of her splendour when the ceremony is performed, their future life will be a scene of festivity, and all its paths strewed over with rose-buds of delight. But when her tapering horns are turuded towards the N., passion becomes frost-bound, and seldom thaws till the genial season again approaches." P. Kirkmichael, Banffs. Statist. Acc. xii. 457.

"They do not marry but in the waxing of the moon. They would think the meat spoiled, were they to kill the cattle when that luminary is wanting [l. waning]." P. Kirkwall, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 560.

This superstition, with respect to the fatal influence of a waning moon, seems to have been general in S. In Angus, it is believed, that, if a child be put from the breast during the waning of the moon, it will decay all the time that the moon continues to wane. As it is now discovered that the moon has an influence in various diseases, some suppose that it may have been really observed, that the waning moon had been less favourable to children in this situation.

In Sweden, great influence is ascribed to the Moon, not only as regulating the weather, but as influencing the affairs of human life in general.

I am informed by a respectable Gentleman, who has resided many years in that country, that they have a sort of Lunar Calendar, said to have been handed down from the Monks, to which considerable regard is still paid. According to this, no stress is laid on the state of the weather on the first and second days of the moon. The third is of some account. But it is believed, that the weather, during the rest of the month, will correspond to that of the fourth and fifth days. It is thus expressed:

Prima, secunda, nihil; Tertia, aliquid; Quarta, quinta, qualis, Tota Luna talis.

He justly remarks, that, as the Moon's influence on the waters of our earth has been long admitted, by a parity of reason, she may be supposed to affect our atmosphere, a less dense fluid; although it cannot be determined on any satisfactory ground, at what particular period of her age, the days of prognostication should be selected; or if it were supposed, that her influence would be greater at any one period, that of the full moon might seem to have the best claim.

As in the dark ages, the belief of the influence of the Moon regulated every operation of agriculture, of economy, and even of medicine; at this day, the lower orders in Sweden, and even a number of the better sort, will not fell a tree for agricultural purposes in the wanc of the moon; else, it is believed, it will shrink and not be durable. A good housewife will not slaughter for her family, else the meat will shrivel and melt away in the pot. Many nostrums are reckoned effectual, only when taken during the first days of the moon. Annual bleeding must by no means be performed in the wane. Gardeners, in planting and sowing their crops, pay particular attention to the state of the moon. V. St. Martin's Day.

The superstitions of our own countrymen, and of the Swedes, on this head, equally confirm the account given by Cesar concerning the ancient Germans, the forefathers of both. "As it was the custom with them," he says, " that their matrons, by the use of lots and prophecies, should declare, whether they should join in battle, or not, they said, that the Germans could not be victorious, if they should engage before the new moon." Bell. Gall. L.i. c. 50. They reckoned new, or full moon, the most auspicious season for entering on any business. The Swedes do not carry this farther than they did. Coeunt, says Tacitus, certis diebus, quum aut inchoatur Luna, aut impletur. Nam agendis rebus hoc auspicatissimum initium credunt.

From a passage in one of Dunbar's Poems, it would appear to have been customary, in former times, to swear by the Moon.

Fra Symon saw it ferd upon this wyse, He had greit wounder; and sueiris by the Mone, Freyr Robert has richt weil his devoir done. Maitland's Poems, p. 79.

It is strange that, in a land so long favoured with clear gospel-light, some should still be so much under the influence of the grossest superstition, that they not only to venture on divination, but in their unhallowed eagerness to dive into the secrets of futurity, even dare directly to give homage to "the Queen of heaven." We have the following account of this heathenish act.

"As soon as you see the first new moon of the new year, go to a place where you can set your feet upon a stone naturally fixed in the earth, and lean your back against a tree; and in that posture hail, or address, the moon in the words of the poem which are marked; if ever you are to be married, you will then see an apparition, exactly resembling the future partner of your joys and sorrows."

The words referred to are;

'O, new Moon! I hail thee!

· And gif I'm ere to marry man,

Or man to marry me,

' His face turn'd this way fast's ye can,

Let me my true love see,

'This blessed night!'

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 31. 32.

V. YERD-FAST.

It is well known, that, among the ancient Greeks and Romans, the Moon was supposed to preside over magic. According to this attribute she was known by the name of Hecate. Hence Jason, when about to engage in magical ceremonies, has this invocation put in his mouth by Ovid.

- Modo Diva triformis

Adjuvet, et praesens ingentibus annuat ausis. Metamorph. Lib. vii.

But he waits three nights, till the moon was full.

Tres aberant noctes, ut cornua tota coirent, Efficerentque orbem.

She was called triformis, because she appeared as the Moon or Luna in heaven, as Diana on earth, and as Proserpine in hell.

She was also acknowledged as the goddess who presided over love. Hence, notwithstanding the great difference of character between Venus and the chaste Diana, it is asserted, that according to the heathen mythology, they were in fact the same.

That the Moon, or Isis, was the guardian of love, is testified by Eudoxus, ap. Plutarch. Lib. de Osiride et Iside. She is exhibited in the same light by Seneca the Tragedian, in Hippolyt.

Hecate triformis, en ades coeptis favens, Animum rigentem tristis Hippolyti doma:

Amare discat, mutuos ignes ferat.

The same thing appears from Theocritus, in Pharmaceutr. V. El. Sched. de Dis German. p. 158-

A.S. monath, id. from mona, the moon, as denoting a revolution of that luminary. According to Mr. Tooke, "it means the period in which that planet moneth, or compleateth its orbit." Divers. Purley, ii. 417. The observation is very ingenious, although there are no vestiges of a verb of this form in the A.S. or any of the Gothic languages. The termination at, to which A.S. ath seems equivalent, is, according to Wachter, the medium of the formation of substantives from verbs, and of abstracts from substantives.

The Anglo-Saxons, counting by lunar months, reckoned thirteen in the year. The ancient northern nations were more happy in the names they gave to their months, than we who have borrowed from the Romans. For the particular designations were expressive of something peculiar to the season. The Anglo Saxons, as Bede informs us, called January Giuli, as would seem, from the feast celebrated about this time; February, they called Sol-monath, because the sun, Dan. soel, began to extend his influence. Rhed-monath was their March, either from Rheda, a goddess to whom they sacrificed at this time; or, according to Wormius, from red-en, to prepare, because this was the season of preparation for nautical expeditions. April was named Eosturmonath, from the heathen goddess Eostre; May, Trimilchi, because in this month they began to milch their cattle thrice a day. June and July were called Lida, as being mild; A.S. lith, mollis, mitis. August was Weide-monath, q. the month of weeds, because they abound then. Haleg-monath corresponded to our September, so called, because it was much devoted to religion; q. holy month. Wynterfyllit was the name of October, q. full of winter. November was called Blot-monath, or the month of sacrifices, because the cattle, that were slaughtered during this month, were devoted to the gods. December, as well as January, was denominated Giuli. V. Bed. de Tempor. Ratione, c. 13.

The names which, according to Verstegan, were given to the months by the Pagan Saxons, or ancient Germans, differ considerably from those mentioned by Bede. January, he says, was called Wolf-monat, because at this time people are most in danger of being devoured by wolves, which, by reason of the severity of the season, finding it more difficult to obtain their usual prey, draw near to the haunts of men. February was called Sprout-Kele, because then the cole-wort begins to send forth its tender sprouts. March, Lenct-monat, because the days then begin, in length, to exceed the nights.—Hence the fast of Lent, as being observed at this time, April, May, June, and July, were designed Ostermonat, Tri-milki, Weyd-monat, and Hey-monat. But he views Weyd-monat as receiving its name, because the beasts did weyd, or go to feed, in the meadows; whence Teut. weyd, a meadow. August was called Arn or rather Barn-monat, because the barns were then filled with corn. September, Gerst-monat, from gerst, barley, as being yielded in this month; and October, Wyn-monat, because although the ancient Germans had not wines of their own produce, they got them at this season from other countries. November they denominated Wint-monat, because of the prevalence of the winds. For, from this season, the Northern mariners confined themselves to their harbours till Fare-maen, or March, invited them to renew their expeditions. December was called Winter-monat. V. Verstegan's Restitut. c.

. The Danes still use distinctive names for the lunar months, by which they reckon their festivals. The first is Diur-Rey, or Renden; so called, because the wild beasts are then rutting. The second is Thormaen, being consecrated to the god Thor. The third is Fare-maen, because at this time men begin to fare, or set out on different expeditions. Wormius, however, derives it from Faar, sheep, as they are then put upon the tender grass. The fourth is May-maen, not from the Latin name, but from Dan. at maye, which signifies to adorn with verdant leaves and with flowers; as denoting the pleasantness of this month. The fifth is Sommer-maen, or summer month. The sixth Orme-maen, because of the abundance of worms and insects; or, according to Loccenius, because then worms are copiously bred from putrefaction; Antiq. Suco-G. p. 20. The seventh is Hoe-maen or Hay-month, because about this time hay is made. The eight is Korn-maen, because the corns are brought home. The ninth is Fiske-maen, as being accounted a month favourable for fishing. The tenth is Saede-maen, being the season for sowing. The eleventh is Polse-maen, as being the time when puddings are made, because the cattle are slaughtered during this month. The twelfth is Julemaen, or Yule-month. It must be observed, however, that these months, as well as those of the Anglo-Saxons formerly mentioned, do not exactly correspond to ours. The thirteenth month, when it occurs, is inserted in summer, and called overlobsmaen, or intercalary month.

The following are the names given by the Danes to the solar months. January they call Glug-manet from glugge, a window, vent, or opening; either, according to Wormius, because the windows are then shut, or because this month is, as it were, the window of the new year. February is Blide-manet or cheerful mouth; March, Tor-manet; April, Fare-manet; May, May-manet; June, Sker-Sommer, (Wolff's Dict. skiersommer, probably from skier, clear, bright;) July, Orme-manet; August, Hoest-manet, or harvest-month; September, Fiske-manet; Vol. II.

October, Sede-manet, or seed-month; November, Slacte-manet, or slaughter-month; and December, Christ-manet, because the season of Christmas.

The Swedes call January Thor, asserting that the worship of this heathen deity was appropriated to this season. February is named Goe, from Goe, the daughter of Thor, according to G. Andr. a very ancient king of Finland, whose son Norus is said to have given name to the Norwegians, of which nation he was the founder. This Thor, it has been said, was the son of Fornioter, the descendant of the elder Odin in the fifth generation. Some represent Goia or Goe as the same with Freija; Loccen. Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 19. Others indentify her with Ceres, or the Earth, Gr. Faia: urging the probability of this idea, from its being pretended that Goe was carried off, from a search being annually made for her, and from the observation of a festival of nine days, in the month of February, which are consecrated to her memory. V. Ihre, vo. Goeja. March they call Blida; April, Varant, probably from Su.G. var, the spring; May, Maj; June, Hovilt, (Ihre, ha-fall, corr. hofwill,) the season of grass, from ha, gramen, and falla, nasci; July, Hoant, Ihre Hoand, literally, the hay-cutting; August, Skortant, from Skord, harvest, which is derived from skaer-a, to cut; September, Ost-monat, as being the time of gathering in what has been cut down; October, November, and December, are Slaete-monat, Winter-monat, Jola-monat, or Yule-

In Islandic, January is designed Midsvetrar manadur, or mid-winter; February, Fostugangs; March, Janffudegra, [Ol. Worm.] evidently, by an error of the press, for Jaffndegra, the equinox (Jaffndaegre, G. Andr.); April is called Sumar, or summer; May, Fardaga, probably from Su.G. Fardag, the time appointed by law, in which old farmers remove to give place to the new, Ihre; from far-a, proficisci, and dag, dies; June, Noettleysu man, perhaps from Su.G. noet, Isl. naut, and leys-a, to loose, q. when the nout or cattle are let loose on the pastures; July, Madka man, or worm month; August, Heyanna, Heyanna-man, or hay-cutting month, from hey, hay, and aunn, labour; September, Addraata man; October, Slatrunar man, from slatrun, mactatio, the killing of cattle; November, Rydtidar man; December, Skamdeigis man, because of the shortness of the day, from skam, short, and deig, a day. V. Worm. Fast. Dan. p. 39-48. V. Also Von Troil's Letters on Iceland, p. 117. 118. where the names of the months occur with very little variation.

genit. of mona, the moon.

The name of the second day of the week affects some feeble minds with terror. If Monanday, or Monday, be first mentioned in company by a female, of what age or rank soever, they account it a most unlucky omen. But it gives relief to such minds, if the fatal term be first mentioned by a male. I know not, if this strange superstition be peculiar to the North of S.

This is evidently a ramification of the system of superstition, which in former ages was so generally extended, with respect to the supposed influence of the Moon. For a similar idea is entertained as to the mention of her name. Why the power of dissolving the charm is ascribed to the male sex, it is not easy to imagine. It cannot well be ascribed to the belief, that the Moon was herself of the weaker sex, and therefore controuled by the other. For the Gothic nations seem generally to have viewed the Moon as masculine. V. Mone.

This general sense of the term was not unknown to O.E. writers. Hence Hardyng, in his advice directed to K. Edward IV. as to the most proper plan for conquering Scotland, says;

> Betwixt the mounthes and the water of Tay, Which some do call mountaignesin our language, Pass eastward, with your armie daie by daie, From place to place with small cariage.

This orthography is wrong. For the term has no affinity to the mouse.

Sibb. refers to Fr. mousche a fly, q. a fly-net. But mousse, moss, mossy down, would have been a more natural origin; Teut. mos moisture. For the term seems properly to respect those webs, which fly in the field, generated from moisture.

MORNING GIFT, s. The gift conferred by a husband on his wife, on the morning after marriage.

King Ja. VI. "immediately after the marriage, contracted, and solempnized between" him and Anne of Denmark, " for the singular love and affection. borne toward her, gave, granted, and confirmed to her, in forme of morning gift, all and haill, the Lordschippe of Dunfermeline." Acts Ja. VI. Parl. 13. c. 191.

This lordship was given to the Queen to be possessed by her as her own property during life. She was not to enter upon it in consequence of the King's decease. For his Majesty's grant gave her immediate possession. Both the nature of the gift, and its designation, refer to a very ancient custom. Morgongofwa was the name given, in the Gothic laws, to the donation which the husband made to his wife on the day after marriage. This was also called kindradags gaef, or the gift on the succeeding day. Ihre informs us, that it appears from the laws of the Visigoths, that the gift called tillgewaer, and also wingaef, was different from the hindradags giaef; the former being a pledge given after the espousals, and the latter a gift bestowed the day after the consummation of the marriage; tanquam servatae pudicitiae praemium. In explaining hindradags giaef, this writer assigns a different reason for the gift; Usurpatur de munere sponsi quo virginitatis damnum pensabat, vo. Hin.

A.S. morgen-gife was used in the same sense; "The gift," says Lye, "which, under the name of dowry, was given to the young wife by her husband on the day after marriage." This the ancient Germans called morgan-geba, and morgan-giba; terms which frequently occur in their ancient laws. Hence Germ. morgen-gabe, a dowry. Wachter observes, however, that among the ancient Germans, this designation was not given to the whole dowry, but only to that part of it which the husband gave to his newly-married wife; post primam noctem, tanquam pretium virginitatis, ut apud Graecos Διαπαεθνία. This gift, he adds, was among the Longobards a fourth part of the husband's goods; and is every where distinguished from other dowries. A specimen of this kind of donation, written in A.S., about the year 1000, is given in Hickes's Diss. Epist. p. 76.

Morghen-gave, morghen-gifte, id. Kilian. But this learned writer erroneously observes, that the husband conferred this gift ou the marriage day, before the nuptial feast. The various terms morgongofwa, morgan-gife, &c. all literally mean, either a morning-gift, or a gift conferred on the morrow; Alem. morgon, and A.S. morgen, &c. signifying both the morning, and to-morrow. Thus, when this donation is in our law called morning-gift, it is not by corruption, but in consequence of a translation of the original phrase. I have not heard that it is customary anywhere in S. for the husband to make any gift of this kind. But perhaps we have a vestige of this ancient custom, in the practice which still prevails in some parts of S., of relations and neighbours making presents to the young wife on the morning after her marriage.

As I have not observed that this phrase occurs any where else in our laws, perhaps the use of it in this single instance may scarcely be deemed sufficient evidence of its having been common. It may be supposed that James might have borrowed it from the Danes. For when he made this gift to his Queen, he was at Upslo, in Norway, as the act declares. It is evident, however, from Reg. Maj. that every freeman was bound to endow his wife with a dowry at the kirk door on the day of marriage; B. ii. c. 16. s. 1. 2. 33. Skene also speaks of morning gift, as a term commonly used to denote "the gift of gudes moveable or immoveable, quhilk the husband gives to his wife, the day or morning after the marriage." De Verb. Sign. vo. Dos.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 66.

MoesG. maurgins, A.S. Isl. morgen, Su.G. morgon, id.

Mr. Tooke ingeniously traces the A.S. term, also written mergen, merien, merne, to MoesG. mer-jan, A.S. merr-an, myrr-an, to dissipate, to disperse, to spread abroad, as suggesting the idea of the dispersion of the clouds or darkness. Divers. Purley, ii. 213. 214. One might suppose that MoesG. maurgins were allied to the v. maurg-jan, to shorten, used by Ulph. Mark xiii. 20.; as the dawn of morning shortens the reign of darkness, or cuts off the night. The term is used by Ulph. expressly with respect to time. Ga-maurgida thans dagans; He hath shortened the days." The days referred to, are those of darkness in a figurative sense.
MORT; A MORT.

He tellis thame ilk ane caik by caik;—
And eitis thame in the buith, that smaik;
— that he mort into ane rokkett.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 172. st. 7. "Would that he died;" Fr. meurt, 3. p. s. ind. improperly used.

We will nocht ga with the but to the port, That is to say, unto the Kings yet; With the farder to go is nocht our det. Quhilk is the yet that we call now the port, Nocht but our graif to pas in as a mort.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. p. 47.
A phrase of this kind is still occasionally used. One is said to be all a mort, when he is stupified by a stroke or fall. It is also vulgar E. "Struck dumb, confounded." Grose's Class. Dict.

Perhaps from the Fr. phrase a mort, used in a variety of forms; blessé á mort, jugé á mort, &c.

The term is used precisely in the same sense, A. Bor. "Mortar, soil beaten up with water, formerly used in building ordinary walls, in contradiction to lime and sand, or cement." Gl. Grose.

It seems to have been denominated from its use in building, instead of what is properly called mortar in E.

MORTERSHEEN, s. That species of glanders, a disease in horses, which proves most fatal, S. To MORTIFY, v. a. To dispone lands or money to any corporation, for certain uses, from which there can be no alienation of the property; to give in mortmain, S.

Feudal subjects granted in donation to churches, monasteries, or other corporations, for religious, charitable, or public uses, are said—to be mortified." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. Tit. 4. s. 10.

"Mrs. Carmichael—mortified £70 Sterling for educating and providing books for poor children." P. Dirleton, Loth. Statist. Acc. iii. 197.

The phrase in our old laws is not only, mortificare terras, but dimittere terras ad manum mortuam. Skene thinks that it is meant to signify the very reverse of what it expresses, the disposition of lands to a society, that is, to such heirs as never die. De Verb. Sign. vo. Manus. The most natural idea as to the use of this phraseology seems to be, that property, thus disponed, cannot be recovered or alienated; the hand, to which it is given, being the same as if it were dead, incapable of giving it away to any other.

Amortise is used by Langland in the same sense.

If lewdemen knew this laten, they wold lok whom they geue,

And aduise them afore a fyue dayes or syxe, Er they amortised to monkes or chanons theyr rentes.

Alas, lordes and ladies, lewde councell haue ye, To giue from your heyres that your ayles you lefte,

And give it to bid for you to such as bene ryche.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 82. 1st Edit.

In that of 1561 we find elders used for ayles; perhaps as being better understood, for the meaning is nearly the same, ayles being undoubtedly from Fr. ayeul, a grandfather. Bid, i. e. pray.

A fancied moss-trooper, the boy The truncheon of a spear bestrode, And round the hall, right merrily, In mimic foray rode.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 1. st. 19. "This was the usual appellation of the marauders upon the Border .- 'They are called Moss-troopers, because dwelling in the mosses, and riding in troops together. They dwell in the bounds, or meeting, of two kingdoms, but obey the laws of neither. They come to church as seldom as the 29th of February comes into the kalendar." Fuller's Worthies. Ibid. N.

This is ridiculously defined, in Bailey's Dict., "A sort of robbers which were in the northern parts of Scotland."

MOT, v. aux. May. V. MAT.

MOTE, s. 1. A little hill or eminence, a barrow or tumulus.

" Efter this victory the Scottis and Pichtis with displayit banner convenit on ane lytyll mote." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 8. b.

The reuthfull than and denote prince Enee Performyt dewly thy funerall seruyce Apoun the sepulture, as custome was and gyse, Ane hepe of erd and litill mote gart vprayis. Doug. Virgil, 204. 29.

Rudd. gives various derivations of this word; but he seems to have overlooked the true one, which is certainly A.S. mot, Isl. mote, conventus hominum, a meeting; applied to a little hill, because anciently conventions were held on eminences: hence Folkmote, A.S. Thus Spenser, as quoted by Johns.

"Those hills were appointed for two special uses, and built by two several nations. The one is that which you call folkmotes, and signifies in the Saxon a meeting of folk."

A.S. mote, gemote, not only denoted a meeting, but also the place where it was held. V. Lye. Hence our Mote-hill of Scone derived its name. It is also called Omnis Terra, which is supposed to refer to its being formed by earth brought thither by the Barons and other subjects, which they laid before the king. V. Skene, Not. in Leg. Malc. c. 1. s. 2. But this is evidently a fable. Our Scotch kings anciently held their courts of justice on this tumulus; whence it was called Mons Placiti de Scona. It is indeed most probable, that it was formed artificially; as there is ground to suppose, the most of these hills were. Mounts are often called Laws, for the same reason for which these are called Motes, because the people met here, for the dispensation of justice. The phrase Mons Placiti is merely a version of Mote-hill, or Mute-hill, Leg. Malc. ut sup. For anciently the convention of the different orders of a state was called Placitum.

Placita vocabant, conventus publicos totius regni ordinum, quibus reges ipsi præerunt, et in quibus de arduis regni negotiis et imminentibus bellis tractabatur. Annalis Francor. Bertinian. An. 763. Pipinus Moss-Troopers, s. One of those "banditti who Rex habuit placitum suum Nivernis. Du Cange. Mota was used in the same sense with Placitum, curia, conventus; apparently formed from the A.S. word.

Du Cange shews that Malbergium has the same meaning, in the Salic Law, with Mons Placiti, or Mute-hill in ours; from L.B. mall-um, placitum, a place of public convention, where judgment was given: Dan. male, maal, a cause or action, and berg mons. Hence many places are still called Malls, because in ancient times these assemblies were held there. It has been supposed that A.S. mot, gemot, may be traced to Goth. motastada used Luk. vii. 27. to denote the place of custom, q. the mootstadt, or place of meeting. However, a very ancient scholiast on Mat. xxii. 19. Shew me a penny, renders the A.S. word as signifying, mot thacs cyning. Now it has been observed by Junius, that if this mean numisma census, it would be in vain to look for another origin of motastada. But there is still a strong presumption, that this word is allied to A.S. gemot, especially as in MoesG. we find the verb, mot-jan to meet.

- 2. Mote is sometimes improperly used for a high hill, as for that on which the Castle of Stirling
- "The Castell was not only strang be wallis, bot richt strenthy be nature of the crag, standing on ane hye mote, quhare na passage was, bot at ane part.'2 Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 10.

3. A rising ground, a knoll, S.B. When he was full within their hearing got, With dreadful voice from off a rising mot, He call'd to stop.

MOTHER, s. The mother on beer, &c. the lees working up, S. Germ. moder, id.

MOTHER-NAKED. V. Modyr-nakyd.

MOTHER-WIT, s. Common sense, sagacity, discretion, S. q. that wisdom which one has by birth, as distinguished from that which may be viewed as the fruit of instruction.

" No mother-wit, naturall philosophie, or carnall wisdom, is a sufficient rule to walk by in a way acceptable to God." Ferguson on Ephesians, p.

"An ounce of mother-wit is worth a pound of clergy;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 7.

MOTTIE, adj. Full of motes or atoms. Syne in a clap, as thick's the motty sin, They hamphis'd her with unco fike and din. Ross's Helenore, p. 63. Sin, i. e. sun.

MOVIR, MOUIR, MURE, adj. Mild, gentle. The Kyng than mad hym this awnswere On movir and on fayre manere.

Wallace, ii. 209, MS.

Perhaps from Belg. morwe, murw, Su.G. moer, A.S. mearw, mollis, Alem. muruvi, teneritudine; Schilter. Hence, MOVIRLY, adv. Mildly.

The Kyng than herd hym movyrly, And awnsweryd hym all gudlykly.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 243.

MOULY HEELS. V. Mules.

MOUNTAIN DULSE, Mountain Laver, S. Ulva Montana, Linn.

MOUNTH, s. A mountain. V. MONTH.

To MOUP, v. a. 1. To nibble, to mump; "generally used of children, or of old people, who have but few teeth, and make their lips move fast, though they eat but slow;" Gl. Ramsay. S. pron. moop.

> For fault of fude constrenyt so thay war The vthir metis all consumyt and done, The paringis of thare brede to moup vp sone.

Doug. Virgil, 208. 48. My sheep and kye neglect to moup their food, And seem to think as in a dumpish mood.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 15.

O, may thou ne'er forgather up Wi' ony blastit, moorland toop; But ay keep mind to moop an' mell Wi' sheep o' credit like thysel!

Burns, iii. 79. In the same sense a mouse is said "to moup at cheese," Rudd.

2. Used metaph., to impair by degrees.

"Ye have been bred about a mill, ye have mouped a' your manners;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p.

Probably corrupted from E. mump, which Seren. derives from Sw. mums-a, and this from mun, the mouth, q. muns-a, to labour with the mouth.

MOUSE, s. The outermost fleshy part of a leg of mutton, when dressed; the bulb of flesh on the extremity of the shank, S. pron. moose. When roasted, it formerly used to be prepared with salt and pepper.

Teut. muys, carnosa pars in corpore; Belg. muys van de hand, the muscle of the hand, or the fleshy part between the thumb and middle finger; Alem. musi, lacerti; Raban. de part. corp. ap. Schilter.

MOUSE-WEB, s. V. Moose-web.

To MOUT, v. n. To moult, to throw the feathers, S.

" Anentis birdis and wylde foulis,—that na man distroy thair nestis, nor thair eggis, nor yit slay wylde foulis in mouting tyme." Acts Ja. II. 1457. c. 94. Edit. 1566. c. 85. Murray.

Teut. muyt-en, plumas amittere sive mutare. To MOUT awa', (pron. moot) v. a. To take away piecemeal, S. nearly allied in signification to E. fritter. Hence,

MOUTIT, part. pa. Diminished, from whatever cause; scanty, bare.

This is applied both to things and to persons. Bread is said to be moutit awa', when gradually lessened. It especially respects the conduct of children in carrying it away piecemcal in a clandestine manner. A person is said to be moutit, or moutitlike, when he waxes lean from a decline, or decreases in size from any other cause.

It is the same word which Doug. uses to express the stunted appearance of declining trees:

Not [nocht] throw the soil bot muskane treis šprowtit :-

Auld rottin runtis quhairen na sap was leifit; Moch, all waist, widderit with granis moutit. Palice of Honour, x. 3. Edin. Edit. 1579.

i. e. naked boughs, or branches. Quhairen is evidently an errat. for quhairin. V. Мосн.

It is probably, as Sibb. conjectures, a metaph. sense of S. mout, E. moult, to cast the feathers; Teut. muyt-en, id. Lat. mut-o, -are, to change. is viewed as the radical word. Nor can any resemblance more fitly express the idea of decrease or diminution, than that borrowed from the appearance of a bird when moulting. It must be observed, however, that Germ. muss-en simply signifies to lop, to curtail; also, mutz-en, Belg. moets-en, Ital. mozz-are, id. Hence, according to Wachter, E. moot, to pluck up by the roots; and, Fr. mouton, aries castratus; and a phrase used by the Swiss, mutschly brots, frustrum panis.

To MOUTER, v. a. To take multure, or the fee in kind, for grinding corn, S.

It is good to be merry and wise, Quoth the miller, when he mouter'd twice.

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 45. V. MULTURE. To MOUTER, (pron. mooter) v. a. The same with mout awa', S.

This is probably derived from the verb Mout; or synon. with it, as Teut. muyter-en is used in the same sense with muyt-en, to moult. It might, however, be viewed as an oblique sense of the verb immediately preceding, because of the great diminution of the quantity of grain sent to a mill, in consequence of the various dues exacted in kind.

MOUTON, s. A French gold coin brought into

S. in the reign of David II.

"This gold coin had the impression of the Agnus Dei, which the vulgar mistook for a sheep; hence it got the ridiculous name of mouton." Lord Hailes, Annals, ii. 231.

The meaning undoubtedly is, that this name was imposed by the vulgar in France.

MOW, Moue, s. A heap, a pile. S. bing, sy-

He tuk a cultir hate glowand, That yeit wis in a fyr brynnand, ·And went him to the mekill hall, That then with corn wes fyllyt all; And heych wp in a mow it did; Bot it full lang wes nocht thar hid.

Barbour, iv. 117, MS.

A mow off corn he gyhyt thaim about, And closyt weill, nane mycht persaive without. Wallace, xi. 338, MS.

- Quhen the grete bing was vpbeildit hale,-Aboue the mowe the foresaid bed was maid, Quharin the figure of Enee scho layd.

Doug. Virgil, 117. 48.

The S. word retains the sense of A.S. mowe, acervus. This, I suspect, is also the proper sense of the E. word, although explained by Johnson, as denoting the '' loft or chamber where any corn or hay is laid up."

MOW, (pron. moo) s. 1. The mouth, S. In cairful bed full oft, in myne intent,

To tuitche I do appear

Now syde nor [now] breist, now sueit mow redolent,

Of that sueit bodye deir.

Maitland Poems, p. 216.

Fr. moue is used for the mouth, but rather as expressing an ungraceful projection of the lips. Mow may be from Su.G. mun, os, oris; but perhaps rather from Teut. muyl, id.; I being generally sunk, at the end of a word, according to the S. pronunciation. I can scarcely think, that it is E. mouth, A.S. muth, softened in pronunciation, although generally printed in our time, mou', as if this were the case. For I recollect no instance of th being quiescent in S.

2. A distorted mouth, an antic gesture.

— And Browny als, that can play kow, Behind the claith with mony a mow.

Roull's Cursing, MS. Gl. Compl. p. 330.

3. Used in pl. in the sense of jest. Is it mows or earnest; Is it in jest or seriously? Nae mows, no jest, S.

The millar was of manly mak,

To meit him was nae mowis.

Chr. Kirk, st. 19.

Thair was nae mowis thair them amang; Naithing was hard but heavy knocks.

Battle Harlaw, Evergreen, i. 86. st. 19. Callender observes that Su.G. mopa signifies illudere. But mys-a, subridere, has more resemblance. It seems, however, borrowed from Fr. faire le mouë, to make mouths at one.

To Mow, v. n. To jest, to speak in mockery. Now trittill trattill, trow low,

Ross's Helenore, p. 41.

It is sometimes applied to cramp terms; at other times to those which are so indelicate that they ought

Not to be expressed, S.

And gossips, and het pints, and clashin',
Mony a lie was there;
And mony an ill-far'd tale, too,

That I to mow-band wad blush.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 295.

This may be from Fr. moue and band-er, q. to bind the mouth. But I suspect that it is rather an oblique sense of Teut. muyl-band-en capistrare, capistrum imponere, fiscellam ori appendere; Kilian, to muzzle. V. Mow.

Mow-Bit, s. A morsel of food, S.

Wi' skelps like this fock sit but seenil down
To wether-gammon or how-towdy brown;
Sair dung wi' dule, and fley'd for coming debt,
They gar their mou'-bits wi' their incomes met.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 75.

q. a bit for the mouth.

MOW-FRACHTY, adj. Agreeable to the taste, palatable, S.B.

From mou, mow, the mouth, and frauchty. This, as signifying desireable, might be traced to MoesG. friks, avidus, cupidus; pl. frikai, used in composition. But perhaps it is rather from fraucht, a freight or lading; q. an agreeable freight for the mouth.

MOWCH, s. A spy, an eavedropper.

Auld berdit mowch! gude day! gude day!

Lyndsay, S. P. Repr. ii. 126.

MOWE, s. A motion.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 54.

Move is sometimes used as a s. in the same sense,

MOWENCE, s. Motion, progress; or perhaps the dependance of one event on another; Fr. mouvance, dependance.

Bot God, that is off maist powesté, Reserwyt till his maiesté, For to knaw, in his prescience, Off allryn tyme the mowence.

Barbour, i. 134, MS.
MOWSTER, s. Muster, exhibition of forces.

"In the mene tyme the erle of Ros come with mony folkis to Perth, & maid his mowster to the Kyng." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 13.

MOZY, adj. Dark in complexion; a black mozy body, one who is swarthy, S. Isl. mos-a, musco tingere?

To MUCK, v. a. To carry out dung, to cleanse the stable or cow-house, S.

Hence the name of the Jacobite song, The mucking of Geordie's byre.

Although the verb, as well as the substantive, is used in E., this is a sense apparently peculiar to S. Su.G. mock-a, stabula purgare, fimum auferre; from mock, fimus, which Ihre seems to view as allied to Isl. mock-a coacervare.

MUCK-FAIL, s. The sward mixed with dung, used for manure, S.B.

"The practice of cutting up sward for manure or muck-fail, was prohibited by an Act of Parliament, made for the county of Aberdeen, as long ago as 1685, under a penalty of 100l. Scots bolls, toties quoties, to the masters of the ground." P. Alford, Aberd. Stat. Acc. xv. 456, N. There is some mistake here as to the penalty. V. FAIL.

MUCK-MIDDING. V. MIDDEN.
MUCKLE, adj. Great. V. MEKIL.

MUD, s. A small nail or tack, commonly used in the heels of shoes in the country, Loth.

It differs from what is called a tacket, as having a very small head.

To MUDDLE, v. a. "To drive, beat, or throw," Gl. Sibb.; perhaps rather to overthrow; used to express the ease and expedition with which a strong man overthrows a group of inferior combatants, and at the same time continuance in his work.

Heich Hutchoun with ane hissil ryss, To red can throw thame rummil; He muddlit thame down lyk ony myss; He was na baty-bummil.

Chr. Kirk, st. 16.

Allied perhaps to A.S. midl-an, to tame; or Su.G. midl-a, to divide, to make peace between those at variance.

To MUDDLE, v. n. To be busy at work, while making little progress, S. Pingle, synon. Niddle is also nearly allied in signification.

Teut. moedelick, molestus, laboriosus; moed, Su.G.

moeda, molestia.

MUDY. V. Mody. MWDE. V. Mode.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 21. This, if it does not simply signify, motions, from Mudge, v. may denote laborious and troublesome operations, although of a trifling kind; Teut. moed, Germ. mude, labor; Su.G. moeda, molestia. Usurpatur, says Ihre, tum de animi aerumnis, quam de corporis fatigatione.

be the origin of the term.

"In the lower part of the parish, there is the long legged English Mug, with wool, long, fine, and fit for combing." P. Twyneholm, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. xv. 86.

MUIR, s. A heath, &c. V. Mure.

Muir-burn. V. Mure-burn.

MUIR-ILL, s. A disease to which black cattle are subject; as some affirm, in consequence of eating a particular kind of grass, which makes them stale blood, S.

"It is infested with that distemper, so pernicious to cattle, called the Wood ill or Muir-ill; the effects of which may, however, be certainly prevented by castor oil, or any other laxative." P. Humbie, Haddingt. Statist. Acc. vi. 160.

"Muir-ill.—This disorder is frequently confounded with the murrain or gargle, though the symptoms seem to be different.

"The muir-ill is supposed to be caused by eating a poisonous vegetable, or a small insect common on muir grounds. This produces a blister near the root of the tongue, the fluid of which, if swallowed, generally proves fatal to the animal. The disorder is indicated by a swelling of the head and eyes, attended with a running at the mouth, or discharge of saliva. The animal exhibits symptoms of severe sickness, and difficulty of breathing, which are soon followed by a shivering of the whole body, when the animal may be reckoned in imminent danger. On the first appearance of these symptoms, take the animal home, draw forth its tongue, and remove the blister completely with a piece of harn or coarse linen cloth. The part affected must then be rubbed with a mixture of salt and oatmeal.—I have saved a score of cattle by this simple process alone." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 217. V. ILL.

MUIS, s. pl. Bushels.

"Annibal send to Cartage thre muis of gold ryngis, quhilkis he hed gottin on the fingaris of the maist nobil Romans that var slane, for ane testimonial of his grit victorie." Compl. S. p. 175.

Doug. Virgil, 114. 46.

Rudd. renders this "the ground which is thrown on the dead in their graves." But it is the translation of cincres, used by Virg.

"O wherein is your bonny arms That wont to embrace me?"

66 By worms they're eaten; in mools they're rotten;
"Behold, Margaret, and see;

"And mind, for a' your mickle pride,

To MULE, Mool, v. a. 1. To crumble, S.

Isl. mol-a, id. confringere, comminuere, mola a crumb. The v. smol-a is used in Su.G., contracted, as would seem, from smaa, little, and mola a fragment. Isl. smaa mole, in Dan. smule, minuta mica; G. Andr. vo. Mola.

2. To mule in, to crumble bread into a vessel, that it may be soaked with some liquid, S.

"Ye ken nathing but milk and bread, when it is mool'd in to you;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 82.

Su.G. moelia, bread, or any thing else bruised and steeped; Mod. Sax. mulia.

3. To mule in with one, to have intimacy with one, as those who crumble their bread into one vessel; q. to eat out of the same dish, S.

I wadna mule in with him, I would have no intimate fellowship with him.

I am at a loss to know whether this was used as a nickname for the Professors of a University, who were employed to examine candidates for graduation, or if there had been any ancient custom of putting a pair of slippers on the feet of him who was graduated; as a badge of his new honour. V. Mullis. MULL, MAOIL, s. A promontory, S.

" Near the very top of the Mull, (which signifies a promontory), and the boundary of the mainland to the north-east, a chapel had been reared in the dark ages;" Barry's Orkney, p. 25.

" Maol, adj. signifies bare or bald, as ceann maol, baldhead. Hence it is applied to exposed points of land or promontories, and then becomes a substantive noun, and is written maoil, e. g. maoil of Kintyre, maoil of Galloway, maoil of Cara," &c. P. Gigha, Argyles. Statist. Acc. viii. 57. N.

Sibb. mentions Isl. muli, a steep bold cape, Gl. But I have not met with this word elsewhere. Mule. however, denotes a beak; os procerum ac eminens rostrum; G. Andr. p. 181. Alem. mula rostrum, Schilter. Now as naes, ness, a nose, is used to denote a promontory, from its resemblance to the prominence of the nose in the face; for the same reason, mule might have been used by the ancient Goths in a similar sense.

It confirms this idea that Mule is, in Orkney and Shetland, used in composition, or in the names of places, in a similar sense.

"The aera of this fortification, and of others of the same kind, I leave it to be judged upon, as such places are quite frequent, both in Shetland, such as the Mule of Unst, and in the other end of the mainland of Orkney, called the Mule-head of Deerness, the Burgh of Murray, and indeed in all other places denominated Burghs, that is to say, insulated headlands projecting to the sea." P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 324, N.

MULL, s. A virgin, a young woman. Silver and gold that I micht get, Beisands, brotches, robes and rings, Frelie to gife, I wald nocht let, To pleise the mulls attour all things.

This is explained by what follows. Bettir it were a man to serve With honour brave beneath a sheild, Nor her to pleis, thocht thou sould sterve,

That will not luke on the in eild.

Kennedy, Evergreen, i. 116. A.S. meoule, meoula, a virgin, Hickes. Gramm. A.S. p. 128. MoesG. mawilo, a damsel, Mar. v. 41. a dimin. from mawi id.; as barnilo, a child, Luk. i. 76. is formed from barn.

It is not improbable that Alem. mal, desponsatio, maheldag, dies desponsationis, gemahela, mahela sponsa, gemul conjux, and mahulen desponsare, are to be traced to mawilo as their root.

MULL, s. A mule.

"Thou may considder that thay pretend nathing ellis, bot onlie the manteinance and uphald of thair bairdit mulls, augmenting of thair unsatiable avarice, and continuall doun thringing and swallouing upe thy puir lieges." Knox's Hist. p. 19.

To MULLER, v. a. To crumble, S. either corr. from E. moulder, or a dimin. from Mule, v. q. v.

MULLIS, s. pl. A kind of slippers, without quarters, usually made of fine cloth or velvet, and adorned with embroidery, anciently worn by persons of rank in their chambers.

A satyrical poet describes the more general use of them as a proof of the increase of pride and luxury.

Et tout est a la mode de France.

MULTIPLE', MULTIPLIE, s. Number, quantity. Dicson, he said, wait thow thair multiplé? iii thousand men thair power mycht nocht be. Wallace, ix. 1704, MS.

i. e. "Knowest thou their number?"

Quhilk suld be ane gryt exempil till al princis, that thai gyf nocht there trest in ane particular pouer of multiplie of men, bot rathere to set there trest in God." Compl. S. p. 123.

Fr. multiple, manifold; multiplié, the multiplicand. The term is evidently used improperly.

MULTURE, MOUTER, s. The fee for grinding grain; properly that paid to the master of the mill, S.

The myllare mettis the multure wyth ane mete

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238. a 48.

"The multure is a quantity of grain, sometimes in kind, as wheat, oats, pease, &c.; and sometimes manufactured, as flour, meal, sheeling, &c. due to the proprietor of the mill, or his tacksman the multurer, for manufacturing the corn." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. tit. 9. s. 19.

Fr. mouture, (as the S. word is pron.) L.B. molitura, from Lat. mol-o. Hence, MULTURER, s. The tacksman of a mill, S.

MUM, s. A mutter, S.B.

Mumme is used for mutter by Langland. Speaking of lawyers he says;

Thou mightest better mete the mist on Malverne

Than get a mumme of her mouth, til money be shewed.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 3, b.

The word might originally signify to intimate any thing by gestures, rather than by words; from Teut. momm-en, larvam agere; whence, as would seem, mommel-en, Su.G. muml-a, to mutter.

MUM CHAIRTIS, s. pl.

Use not to skift athort the gait, in Nor na mum chairtis, air nor lait. Be na dainser, for this daingeir Of yow be tane an ill consait That ye ar habill to waist geir.

Maitland Poems, p. 329.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this as not understood. From its connexion with dancer it certainly respects some amusement. Chairtis are undoubtedly cards, and refer to the amusement which bears this name. Cairts is to this day the vulgar pron. Teut. momme signifies a mask; larva, persona; Kilian. Perhaps mum chairtis may simply signify cards with figures on them, as the figures impressed may justly enough, from their grotesque appearance, be called larvae. Mention is made, however, in the account of an entertainment given by Cardinal Wolsey, of playing at mum-chance, which, Warton says, is a game of hazard with dice. Hist. iii. 155. It may therefore be an error of some transcriber. What confirms this conjecture is, that mum-chance is mentioned as a game at cards in an old English Poem on the Death of the Mass by William Roy, written in Wolsey's time. In describing the Bishops,

To play at the cards and the dice, Some of them are nothing nice;

Both at hazard and mum-chance. They drink in gay golden bowls, The blood of poor simple souls Perishing for laik of sustenance.

Ellis's Spec. ii. 15.

MUMMING, s. Perhaps muttering. With mumming and humming,

The Bee now seiks his byke.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 26.

V. CALICRAT, and MUM.

To MUMP, v. n. To hint, to aim at, S.

"I know your meaning by your mumping;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 183. addressed to those who either cannot, or do not express themselves distinctly.

Ye may speak plainer, lass, gin ye incline, As, by your mumping, I maist guess your mind. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 94.

Sibb. explains mumping, " using significant gestures, mumming; Teut. mumm-en, mommium sive larvam agere; to frolic in disguise; momme, larva, persona."

MUMT-LIKE, adj. Having the appearance of stupor, Loth. q. mummed, mummit, resembling one who assumes a fictitious character. V. MUMP.

MUN, v. aux. Must. V. Mon. MUNDIE, s. "Expl. pitiful son of the earth; dimin. of man." Sibb.

Auld guckis, the mundie, sho is a gillie, Scho is a colt-foill, not a fillie.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 37.

Perhaps it is rather allied to Teut. mondigh, pubes, major annis; puer, quatuor decem annorum, Kilian. Mondigh also signifies loquacious.

MUNDS, s. The mouth. I'll gie ye i' the munds, I will give you a stroke on the mouth;

a phrase used by boys, Loth.

This is undoubtedly a very ancient word, Alem. Germ. mund, id. os, hiatus inter duo labra; MoesG. munths, whence A.S. muth, E. mouth, Isl. Sw. mun. Wachter mentions a variety of names into the composition of which this word enters.

MUNKS, s. A halter for a horse, Fife.

This seems formed from some one of the Goth. terms denoting the mouth, by means of the letter k, used in the formation of diminutives. V. Munds. MUNN, s. A short-hafted spoon, Galloway, cuttie synon.

"Each person of the family had a short hafted spoon made of horn, which they called a munn, with which they supped, and carried it in their pocket, or hung it by their side." P. Tungland, Statist. Acc. ix. 326.

"Sup with your head, the Horner is dead, he's dead that made the munns;" S. Prov. Kelly, p.

Can this be allied to Isl. mund, mun, the mouth? MUNSIE, s. A designation expressive of contempt or ridicule; a bonny munsie, a pretty figure indeed, ironically, S. perhaps a corr. of Fr. monsieur, which the vulgar pron. monsie and monshie.

MUR, adj. V. Movir.

MURALYEIS, s. pl. Walls, fortifications. Lo, within the vet, Amid the clois muralyeis and pail, And doubyl dykis how thay thame assail! Doug. Virgil, 313. 14.

Fr. muraille, a wall; L.B. murale, muralha, murayllia; from Lat. murus.

To MURDRES, Murthreys, v. a. To murder; part. pa. murdrest.

"Mony other kingis of Northumberland in the samyn maner war ay fynaly murdrist be thair successouris." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 3.

In Murrawe syne he murtheysyd was In-til the towne, is cald Foras.

Wyntown, vi. 9. 63.

MoesG. maurthr-jan. This Goth. term has assumed a great variety of forms in L.B., although not one precisely the same with this. V. Du Cange. MURDRESAR, s. 1. A murderer.

"On the morrow Bassianus arraved his folkis & exhortit thaym to remembir how thay war to fecht for defence of equite aganis certane fals conspiratouris, specially aganis the treasonabill murdresar Carance." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 8.

2. A large cannon.

"Mak reddy your cannons,-quarter slangis, hede stikkis, murdresaris." Compl. S. p. 64.

The ingenious editor of this work quotes Coriat. when describing the cannon in the arsenal at Zurich, as saying; "Among them I saw one passing great murdering piece; both ends thereof were so exceeding wide, that a very corpulent man might easily enter the same."

Yet it seems doubtful, whether this term be not a corr. of Germ. morser, originally a mortar for beating drugs, but transferred, says Wachter, from the resemblance in form, to instruments of destruction; E. mortars.

MURE, Muir, Moor, anc. More, s. A heath, a flat covered with heath, S. Moor E. seems always to imply the idea of water, or marshiness, as denoting a fen. Then we use the term

And the gud King held forth his way, Betwix him and his man, quhill thai Passyt owt throw the forest war: Syne in the more that entryt thar. Barbour, vii. 108. MS.

In describing the rapid diffusion of opinion, or influence of example, an allusion is often made to the progress of fire through dry heath; It spreads like mure-burn, S.

2. Metaph. strife, contention, S. q. a flame like that of moor-burning.

MURELAND, MOORLAND, adj. Of or belonging to heathy ground, S.

-Muirland Willie came to woo.

Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, p. 7.

To MURGEON, v. a. 1. To mock one by making mouths or wry faces.

Scho skornit Jok, and skrippit at him; Aud murgeonit him with mokkis.

Chr. Kirk, st. 4.

Sibb. deduces it from Teut. morkelen grunnire; morre, os cum prominentibus labris; Callander, from A.S. murcnung, murmuratio, querela; Goth. Isl. mogla, murmurare. But it has more affinity to Fr. morguer, to make a sour face; morgueur, a maker of strange mouths; morgue, a sour face, Arm. morg, id.

2. To murmur, to grumble, to complain, used as a neut. v.

In this sense it has more relation to A.S. murcnung mentioned above; or Germ. murrisch, murmuring, from murr-en to murmur.

2. Apparently as signifying muttering, in reference to the Mass.

"Vther things againe are not so necessare, as the consecration of the place, quhere the Messe is said, the altare stane, the blessing of the chalice, the water, the murgeons, singing, he that suld help to say Messe, and the rest." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. Sign. K. 4, b.

Dunbar writes morgeounis, Maitl. P. p. 95. To MURGULLIE. V. MARGULYIE.

Murlie, s. 1. Any small object, as a small bit of bread, Ang.

2. A fondling term for an infant, Ang.; either from the smallness of its size, or from the pleasing murmur it makes, when in good humour. V. Murr.

Sometimes murlie-fikes is used in the same sense, from the additional idea of a child being still in motion.

MURLING, MORTHLING, MURT, s. " The skirr of a young lamb, or of a sheep soon after it has been shorn," Sibb.

He derives the term from murth, murder. It is merely E. morling, mortling.

MURLOCH, s. Supposed to be the young piked dog-fish, Squalus acanthias, Linn.

"There is a very delicate fish that may be had through the whole year, called by the country people murloch. It is very long in proportion to its thickness, and, in shape, resembles the dog-fish: it is covered with a very rough skin, like shagreen, of which it must be stripped." P. Jura, Argyles. Statist. Acc. xii. 322.

The term seems Gael. Perhaps the first syllable is from muir, the sea. Lochag, loth, signify a Teut. murmul-en, murmurillare, submurmurare. This term seems formed from two verbs nearly synon., murr-en murmurare, and muyl-en mutire, mussitare, cum indignatione et stomacho. It occurs in Franc. Murmulo thie menigi; Marmurabit multitudo; Otfrid. ap. Schilter.

MURRIOW, MURRIOWN, MURREON, s. A helmet or headpiece.

-It is the riches that evir sall indure; Quhilk motht [mocht] nor must may nocht rust nor ket;

And to mannis sawll it is eternall met.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 125. Johnson derives the verb from C.B. mws, stinking. Teut. mos, mosch, mosse, mucor, situs.

MUST, s. Musk. V. Muist.

MUST, s. An old term, applied by the vulgar to hair-powder, or flour used for this purpose,

Perhaps it might anciently receive this name as being scented with musk, S. must.

MUSTARDE-STONE, s. " A mortar stone, a large stone mortar used to bruise barley in,

He was so fers he fell attour ane fek, And brak his heid upon the mustarde stone.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 84. This, however, is not the mortar itself, but a large round stone, used in some parts of the country, by way of pestle, for bruising mustard seed in a stone or wooden vessel. It is still called the mustard stane.

To MUSTUR, v. n. To make a great shew or parade.

Or like ane anciant aik tre, mony yeris That grew apoun sum montane toppis hycht,--Siclike Mezentius musturis in the feild, Wyth huge armour, baith spere, helme and scheild.

To MUT, v. n. To meet, to have intercourse

Yeit mony fled and durst nocht bid Eduuard, Sum in to Ross, and in the Ilis past part. The Byschop Synclar agayn fled in to But; With that fals King he had no will to mut. Wallace, x. 994, MS.

MoesG. mot-jan, Su.G. mot-a, moct-a, Belg. moet-en, occurrere, obviam ire. According to Skinner, in many places in E., the council-chamber is called the Moot-house, from A.S. mot, gemot, meeting, and house. In the same sense, moot-hall is used. MoesG. mota, motastad, the place of the receipt of custom.

Moot halle, hall of judgment, Wiclif.

"Thanne knyghtes of the justice [i. e. soldiers of Pilate token Jhesus in the moot halle, and gaderiden to hem all the company of knyghtes." Matt. xxvii. V. Mote.

Ihre and Seren, deduce the Goth, verb, signifying to meet, from the prep. mot, contra, adversus. The derivation, however, may be inverted.

MUTCH, s. A cap or coif, a head-dress for a woman, S.

Their toys and mutches were sae clean,

They glanced in our ladses een.

MUTCHKIN, s. A measure equal to an English pint, S.

"Swa weyis the Boll new maid, mair than the auld boll xli. pund, quhilk makis twa gallounis and a half, and a chopin of the auld met, and of the new met ordanit ix. pyntis and thre mutchkinnis." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 80. Edit. 1566.

"Qu. mett-kan, from Teut. met-en metiri, and kan vas;" Gl. Sibb. The Dutch use mutsic for a quart; Sw. maatt, a pint.

MUTE, s. 1. Meeting, interview.

Wallang fled our, and durst nocht bid that mute; In Pykardte als till him was na bute.

Wallace, viii. 1525, MS.

2. The meeting of the ancient English, a parliament, an assembly.

Throw Ingland theive, and tak thee to thy fute,-Ane horsmanshell thou call thee at the Mute, And with that craft convoy thee throw the land. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 72.

V. Mut, v.

To MUTE, v. n. 1. To plead, to answer to a challenge in a court of law, to appear in court in behalf of any one who is accused.

- " Ilke soyter of Baron, in the Schiref-court, may there, for his Lord, mute and answere without impediment." Baron Courts, c. 35. s. 1.

And thus thy freind, sa mekil of the mais, Is countit ane of thy maist felloun fais; And now with the he will nocht gang ane fute Befoir this King, for the to count or mute. Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 46.

The E. verb moot is used only with respect to mock pleading. But most probably it anciently denoted serious pleading; from A.S. mot-ian tractare, disputare; gemot-man, concionator, an orator, an assembly-man; Somner. Du Cange observes, that, as, with E. lawyers to mote signifies placiture, the Scots use mute in the same sense; whence, he says, with them the Mute-hill, i. e. mons placiti; vo. Mo. ta, 2.

2. To speak, to treat of, to discourse concerning; sometimes with the prep. of.

This marschell that Ik off mute,

That Schyr Robert of Keyth was cauld,—

In hy apon thaim gan he rid.

Barbour, xiii. 60, MS. Wyntown, id.

Mr. MacPherson refers to Sw. be-mot-a, to declare, Fr. mot, a word. But the Sw. verb is used merely in an oblique sense. It is formed from mota, to meet. In the same manner A.S. mot-ian, to meet, signifies tractare, discutere; because the Goth. nations were wont to meet for the purpose of discussing public concerns.

MUTE, MOTE, s. 1. A plea, an action at law.

"In this mute or pley of treason, anie frie man, major and of perfect age, is admitted to persew and accuse." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 2. s. 1.

" Mote, mute, pley, action, quarrell.-Mute in the lawes of this realme is called Placitum." Skene,

A.S. mot, ge-mot, L.B. mot-a, conventus; or immediately from mot-ian tractare, disputare.

2. Used metaph, with respect to what causes grief; properly, a quarrel.

"Sound comfort, and conviction of an eye to an idol, may as well dwell together as tears and joy; but let this do you no ill, I speak it for your encouragement, that ye may make the best out of your joys ye can, albeit ye find them mixed with mutes." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 50.

To MUTE, MWTE, v. n. 1. To articulate. The first sillabis that thow did mute, Was pa da lyn vpon the Lute; Than playit I twenty springis perqueir, Quhilk was greit pietie for to heir. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 263.

2. To mutter, or to mention any thing that ought to be kept secret, S.

"Shall we receive the plaine aspiring tyrant and enemie,-to give him the command of the watch, the centinels; to command, controll, that they mute not, stirr not; doe what hee list, yea, euen binde vp all the dogs, and mussell their mouthes, that they bite not, barke not, but at his pleasure?" D. Hume's Paralogie. V. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 95.
3. To complain, to mutter in the way of discontent, S.

Bot Inglissmen, that Scotland gryppit all,
Off benefyce thai leit him bruk bot small.
Quhen he saw weill tharfor he mycht nocht mxte,
To saiff his lyf thre yer he duelt in But.
Wallace, vii. 935. MS.

"Mr. Harry Guthrie made no din. His letter was a wand over his head to discipline him, if he should mute." Baillie's Lett. i. 382.

"This was read openly in the face of the Assembly, and in the ears of the Independents, who durst not mute against it." Ibid. i. 438.

It is used also as a v. a.

For thou sic malice of thy master mutes, It is weil set that thou sic barret brace.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 67.

The verb, in these senses, may be from the same origin with the preceding verb. Teut. muyt-en, however, signifies to mutter, to murmur.

Mote is used nearly in the same sense in Sir Peni.
In kinges court es it no bote,
Ogaines Sir Peni for to mote;

So mekill es he of myght, He es so witty and so strang, *, **

That be it never so mekill wrang, He will mak it right.

Warton renders this dispute, Hist. Poet. iii. 93. He reckons the poem coeval with Chaucer; and justly observes, that the Scots Poem, printed in Lord Hailes' Collection, has been formed from this.

But indeed it is most probable, that the one printed by Warton had the same origin. For many words and phrases occur in it, which are properly Scottish; as trail syde, gase for goes, fase for foes, &c.

MUTH, adj. Exhausted with fatigue.
Thare thai laid on that tyme sa fast;
Quha had the ware thare at the last,
I wil noucht say; bot quha best had,
He wes but dout bathe muth and mad.

Wyntown, ix. 17. 22.

This seems to have been a proverbial phrase. For it is equivalent to that used elsewhere.

Of a gude rede all mate and made.

Ibid. vii. 2. 30. V. MAIT.

It is perhaps tautological; for muth and mad seem to have nearly the same sense, q. completely exhausted with fatigue. Or the one may denote fatigue of body, the other that exhausture of animal spirits, or dejection of mind, which is the effect of great fatigue.

Ne, Barbour, ix. 454. V. Na, conj. A.S. na, ne, MoesG. ne, Dan. Isl. Su.G. nei, anc. ne, Gr. 11, 12.

As the A.S. often drops the ae, e, in nae, ne, joining it with verbs and nouns, so as to form one word, this idiom is retained in the S.B.; as naes for nae is, is not, A.S. id. MoesG. and Alem. nist for ni ist; naell for nae will, will not, A.S. nille, used interrogatively; as well as yaes for yea is, yaell for yea will?

As the A.S. uses two negatives for expressing a negation, the same form of speech is retained by the vulgar in S.; as, I never get nane, I never get any. Chaucer uses this idiom; I ne said none ill.

Dunhan Runnetum Rome n. 44 et 14

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 14. In the same poem, nackets, Evergreen, i. 105. "A nacquet, in French, is a lad that marks at Tennis. It is now used for an insignificant person;" Lord Hailes, Note. A little nacket, a person who is small in size, S. q. a boy for assisting at play.

Bullet observes, that "nacques is the same as lacques," whence our modern lacques. He adds, that the President Fauchet says, that, a century before his time, they had begun to call footmen laquets and naquets.

NACKET, s. 1. A bit of wood, stone, or bone, which boys use at the game of Shinty, S.

Perhaps it should rather be written knacket; as being evidently allied to Su.G. kneck, globulus lapideus, quo ludunt pueri; Ihre. Perhaps this is the sense of knakat, as used by Stewart.

Amang the wyves it sall be written, Thou was ane knakat in the way.

Evergreen, i. 121.

q. something in the road that made one stumble.

2. A quantity of snuff made up in a cylindrical form, or a small roll of tobacco, S.

NACKETY, adj. Conceited, S. V. under KNACK.

NACKIE, adj. Active, clever. V. KNACKY. NAES, is not, interrog. V. NA, adv. Vol. II.

NAGUS, s. One of the abusive designations used by Dunbar in his Flyting.

Nyse Nagus, nipcaik, with thy schulders narrow. Evergreen, ii. 57.

It is uncertain, whether he gives Kennedy this name, from his attachment to the drink called Negus, or as equivalent to Old Nick; Su.G. Necken, Neccus, a name given to the Neptune of the Northern nations, as Wachter thinks, from Dan. nock-a to drown; Germ. nicks, Belg. necker, Isl. nikr, hippopotamus, monstrum vel daemon aquaticus.

NAIG, s. 1. A riding horse, S.; not used as nag in E. for "a small horse," but often applied to one of blood.

She tauld thee weel thou was a skellum;—
That ev'ry naig was ca'd a shoe on,
The smith and thee gat roaring fou on.
Burns, iii. 328.

2. A stallion, S.

NAIL. Aff at the nail, or, Gane aff at the nail, a phrase used with respect to persons who, in their conduct, have laid aside all regard to propriety or decency; who transgress all ordinary rules; or no longer have any regard to appearances, S.

Lat. clavus is used frequently to denote rule or government. Dum clavum rectum teneam; As long as I do my part. Quintil. Also, as denoting a course of life; Vixit inaequalis, clavum ut mutaret in horas. Hor. In a similar sense, one may be said to have gone off at the nail, as denoting that one has lost the proper hinge of conduct; like any thing that is hung, when it loses the hold. Thus Kelly, explaining the Prov. "He is gone off at the nail," says; "Taken from scissars when the two sides go asunder." P. 173. 174.

The expression, however, may be understood metaph. in another sense; according to which nail refers to the human body. For nagel, unguis, was a term used by the ancient Goths and Germans, in computing relations. They reckoned seven degrees; the first was represented by the head, as denoting husband and wife; the second by the arm-pit, and referred to children, brothers and sisters; the third, by the elbow, signifying the children of brothers and sisters; the fourth, by the wrist, denoting the grand-children of brothers and sisters; the fifth, by the joint by which the middle finger is inserted into the hand, respecting the grand-children of cousins, or what are called third cousins; the sixth, by the next joint; the seventh, or last, by the nail of the middle finger. This mode of computation was called in Alem. sipzal, Su.G. nagel-fare. A relation in the seventh degree was hence denominated, Teut. nagel.mage, q. a nail-kinsman, one at the extreme of computation. V. Wachter, vo. Nagel-mage, and Sipzal; Ihre, Nagel.

It is conceivable, that the S. phrase in question might originate in those ages in which family and feudal connexion had the greatest influence. When one acted as an alien, relinquishing the society, or disregarding the interests of his own tribe, he might be said to go off at the nail; as denoting that he in effect renounced all the ties of blood. But this is offered merely as a conjecture.

NAIP, s. The summit of a house, or something resembling a chimney-top, S.B.

Far in a how they spy a little sheald: Some peep of reck out at the naip appears. Ross's Helenore, p. 75.

This seems allied to Isl. hnappr globus, nap-ar prominet, nauf, prominentia, rupium crepido; Su.G. knaepp vertex, summitas montis; E. the knap of a hill.

NAYSAY, NA-SAY, s. A refusal, a nayword, S. The v. is also sometimes used, S.

NAIPRIE, s. Table linen, S.

Therestude ane dirk, and profound caue fast by, --All ful of cragis, and thir scharp flynt stanys. Quhilk was weil dykit and closit for the nanys. Doug. Virgil, 171. 26.

This word has been viewed as of ecclesiastical origin. It may, indeed, be allied to L.B. nona, the prayers said at noon. Isl. non sometimes signifies the mass. Geck tha kongur til kyrkio, oc for til nono; The King entered into the church, that he might attend the service performed at noon. Heims Kring, ap. Ihre.

In the convents, during summer, the monks used to have a repast after the nones or service at midday, called $\hat{B}iberes$ nonales, or Refectio nonae. Du Cange quotes a variety of statutes on this subject, vo. Nona, Biberis. If we may suppose that the good fathers occasionally looked forward with some degree of anxiety to this hour, the phrase, for the nones or nanis, might become proverbial for denoting any thing on which the mind was ardently set. This is probably the origin of Dan. none, a beverage, a collation.

Tyrwhitt supposes it to have been "originally a corruption of Lat.; that from pro-nunc came for the nunc, and so, for the nonce; just as from ad-nunc came anon." Note, v. 381. But this idea is very whimsical, and receives no support from anon, which has an origin totally different. V. ONANE.

It has occurred to me, however, that it may with fully as much plausibility be deduced from Su.G. naenn-as, anc. naenn-a, to prevail with one's self to do a thing, to have a mind to do it; Isl. nenn-a, id. Nonne, a me impetrare possum, Gunnlaug. S. Gl.

Since writing this, I have observed that Seren. has adopted the same idea. "Nonce, Isl. nenna, nenning, arbitrium. Su.G. nenna, nennas, a se impetrare, posse."

ignis sacrilegus. In a council held in the time of Charlemagne A. 742., it was ordained that every Bishop should take care that the people of God should not observe Pagan rites,—sive illos sacrilegos ignes, quos Notfyres vocant;—" or make those sacrilegious fires, which are called Notfyres." Capitular. Karlomann. c. 5. In the Indiculus of Superstitions and Pagan Rites made by the Synod Liptinens., the following title is found; De igne fricato de ligno, id est, Nodfyr. V. Schilter, p. 641. It is also written Nedfres, and Nedfri.

Lindenbrog, in his G1., thus explains the remains of this superstition: "The peasants in many places of Germany, at the feast of St. John, bind a rope around a stake drawn from a hedge, and drive it hither and thither, till it catches fire. This they carefully feed with stubble and dry wood heaped together, and they spread the collected ashes over their potherbs, confiding in vain superstition, that by this means they can drive away canker-worms. They therefore call this Nodfeur, q. necessary fire."

Spelman thinks that the first syllable is from A.S. neod, obsequium; and thus that nodfyres were those made for doing homage to the heathen deities.

It is the opinion of Wachter, that this received its name from some kind of calamity, for averting which the superstitious kindled such a fire. For not signifies calamity.

But the most natural, as well as the best authenticated, origin of the word, is that found in the Indiculus referred to above. It seems properly to signify forced fire. Before observing that our term had any cognates, it had occurred to me, that it must be from A.S. nyd force, and fyr fire; and that this idea was confirmed from the circumstance of a similar composition appearing in a variety of A.S. words. Thus, nyd-name signifies taking by violence, rapine; nyd-haemed, a rape; nyd-gild, one who pays against his will.

Fires of the same kind, Du Cange says, are still kindled in France, on the eve of St. John's day; vo. Nedfri.

These fires were condemned as sacrilegious, not as if it had been thought that there was any thing unlawful in kindling a fire in this manner, but because it was kindled with a superstitious design.

2. Spontaneous ignition, S.

"Quhen the bischop of Camelon wes doand diuyne service in his pontifical, his staf tuk neid fyre, and mycht nocht be slokynnit quhil it wes resoluit to nocht." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 12. Lituus—repente igne correptus, Boeth.

"In Louthiane, Fiffe & Angus, grene treis & cornis tuk neid fyre." Ibid. B. xii. c. 12. Sponte incensae, Boeth.

This is obviously an oblique use of the word; as denoting fire not kindled by ordinary means. Both senses refer to wood as taking fire of itself; although the one supposes friction, the other does not.

- 3. "Neidfire is used to express—also the phosphoric light of rotten wood," Gl. Compl. p. 357. 358.
- 4. It is likewise used as signifying beacon, S.

The ready page, with hurried hand,
Awak'd the need-fire's slumbering brand,
And ruddy blushed the heaven:
For a sheet of flame, from the turret high,

Waved like a blood-flag on the sky,

All flaring and uneven.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. iii. st. 29. "Neid-fire, beacon," N. This is an improper and very oblique sense.

NEIDFORSE, s. Necessity. On neidforse, of necessity.

"Bot Morpheus, that sleppe gode, assailyeit al my membris, ande oppressit my dul melancolius nature, quhilk gart al my spreitis vital ande animal be cum impotent & paralitic: quhar for on neid forse, I vas constrenyeit to be his sodiour." Compl. S. p. 105.

"For emphasis, two words are united which have the same meaning, though one of them is derived from the Saxon, and the other from the French. A.S. neud and neod vis. Fr. force, vis." Gl. Compl.

The A.S. word, however, in its various forms, nead, neod, nid, nyd, primarily signifies necessity. The term therefore properly denotes one species of necessity, that arising from force.

NEIDLINGIS, adv. Of necessity.

Your joly wo neidling is moist I endite.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 93. 9.

A.S. neadling, nedling, nydling, denotes one who serves from necessity; also a violent person, one who uses compulsion. But the term is apparently formed from the s. and termination lingis, q. v.

To NEIDNAIL, v. a. 1. To fasten securely by nails which are clinched, S.

2. A window is said to be neidnail'd, when it is so fixed with nails in the inside, that the sash cannot be lifted up, S. This is an improper sense.

This term might seem literally to signify, nailed from necessity. But it appears to have been originally synon. with roove, E. rivet. Sw. nct-nagla still signifies to clinch or rivet. The first part of the word may therefore be the same with naed-a, id. clavi cuspidem retundere, i. e. to roove a nail.

NEIGRE, s. A term of reproach, S. borrowed from Fr. negre, a negre.

NEIPCE, NECE, s. A grand-daughter.

"The like is to be vnderstood of ane Neipce, or Neipces, and or maa, begotten be the eldest sonne alreadie deceased, quha suld be preferred to their father brother, anent the succession of their Gudschirs heritage; except special provision of tailyie be made in favours of the aires maill." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Eneya, Sign. L. 3.

For I the nece of mychty Dardanus, And gude dochtir vnto the blissit Venus, Of Mirmidones the realme sal neuer behald. Doug. Virgil, 64. 53.

As far as I have observed, Skene still uses niece for grand-daughter, thus translating neptis in the Lat. V. Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 23. s. 3. c. 32. by mistake numbered as 33, also c. 33.

The origin is undoubtedly neptis, which was used by the Romans to denote a grand-daughter only, while the language remained in its purity. Spartian seems to have been among the first who applied the term to a brother's daughter. Adrian. p. 2. B. On this word the learned Casaubon says; Juris auctoribus et vetustioribus Latinis nepos est tantum, • exposes, filii aut filiae untus. Posterior actas produxit vocis usum ad adex ados, natos fratre aut sorore; quam solam vocis ejus notionem, vernaculus sermo noster et Italicus agnoscunt. Not. in Spart. p. 6.

NEI

There seems to be no term, in the Goth. dialects, denoting a grand-daughter, which resembles the Lat. A.S. nift, however, a niece, is evidently from neptis. For by Aelfric it is written neptis, which he explains, brother dochter vel suster dohter, Gl. p. 75. Germ. nift, nicht, a niece. A.S. and Alem. nift also signifies a step-daughter. MoesG. nithjio, a relation; C.B. nith, a niece. Both these Wachter, (vo. Nicht), derives from Goth. nid genus, propago; observing that hence the term not only bore the sense of neptis, but denoted relations of every kind. To this origin he refers Isl. nidur, filius, nidiungar, posteri, nidin cognatio nepotum, nidiar arf, haereditas quae transit ad proximos adscendentes et collaterales. Seren. views nidur, deorsum, as the origin of the terms last mentioned, as referring to property which descends.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 134.

Isl. neft, knefe, knefwe, Su.G. knaef, now naefwe, Dan. naeve, nefve, id. Ihre seems to think that the word may be derived from knae, which anciently denoted any knot or folding of a joint, in the human body, or otherwise. Thus knefve is defined by G. Andr., pugnus, manus complicata. This idea is much confirmed by the use of Isl. hnue, which not only signifies the space between two joints, internodium digitorum a tergo palmae, but also, a knot, a clue, a globe, nodus, glomus, globus, G. Andr. p. 118.

This word does not appear in A.S. or in any of the Germ. dialects of the Gothic. Fyste or faust was the term they used in the same sense, whence E. fist.

NIEVEFU', s. A handful, as much as can be held in the fist; often neffow, as a neffow of meal; ncifefull, id. A. Bor.

À nievefu' o' meal, or a gowpen o' aits,— Wad hae made him as blythe as a beggar could be.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 301.
Tho' here they scrape, an' squeeze, an' growl,
Their worthless nievefu' of a soul
May in some future carcase howl,
The forest's fright.

Burns, iii. 246.

The S. phrase, a neffou o' meal, is perfectly analogous to Su.G. naefwe miol, tantum farinae, quantum manu continere possis. But Ihre observes that the ancients always said, naefwe full. This evidently corresponds to the origin of our word; neif and fow or full. Wideg. gives Sw. en naefwe, and en naefwe ful, as synon., for "a handful."

"Nawpe and Nevill, is to beat and strike;" Gl. ibid. Both terms seem to have the common origin given under Neive. But nawpe is immediately allied to Isl. kneppe, pello, violenter propulso; G. Andr. p. 116. 117. Neyve is used for the fist, Lancash. Nevel, Nevvel, s. A blow with the fist, S.

This term may denote territories, confines in general; from A.S. nesse, nuesse, a promontory, used obliquely. But it seems rather to signify vallies, low grounds, according to another signification of the same A.S. werd; nessas, profunda, locus depressa; Lye, vo. Nesse.

This sense corresponds with the description given of the site of Wallace's camp, when, as it is fabled, the Queen of England came to visit him.

*NICE, adj. Simple.

Quha that dois deidis of petie, And leivis in pece and cheretie, Is haldin a fule, and that full nice.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 169.

" Nice is from Fr. niais, simple. Thus Chaucer, Cukow and Nightingale.

Thus also Dunbar;

Lord Hailes, Note. V. the following word. It is rendered foolish, as used in O.E. So tikelid me that nyce reverence, That it ma-de larger of despence.

Hoccleve's Poems, p. 41.

NICETE', NYCETE', s. Folly, simplicity. Thaim thocht it was a nyceté, For to mak thar langer duelling, Sen thai mycht nocht anoy the King. Barbour, vii. 379. MS.

It seems to have had the same sense in O.E. The kyng it was herd, & chastised his meyne, & other afterward left of ther nycete.

R. Brunne, p. 123. Hoccleve, id. Mr. Pinkerton derives this word immediately, as Lord Hailes does the adj., from Fr. niais, which primarily signifies a young bird taken out of the nest, and hence a novice, a ninny, a gull. But neither of these learned writers has observed, that Fr. nice signifies slothful, dull, simple. It is probable, however, that niais is the origin; niez-er, to deal simply or sillily, being derived from niez, as synon. with niais. The Fr. word is probably from the Goth.; MoesG. hnasquia mollis, A.S. hnesc, nesc, tener, effeminatus, from hnesc-ian mollire; Germ. nasch-en, Su.G. nask-a, to love delicacies.

To NICH, NYGH, v. a. To approach. V. NEYCH. NYCHBOUR, NYCHTBOUR, s. A neighbour.

A.S. neah-ge-bure, Alem. nahgibur, Germ. nachbauer, from neah, nah, nach, near, nigh, and gebure, gibur, bauer, an inhabitant,-vicinus, colonus; literally, one who dwells near.

In O.E. ner seems occasionally to have been used for neighbour.

 My frend & my nexte ner stondeth agen me. R. Glouc. p. 328.

"Next neighbour," Gl. Hearne; from A.S. adj. neah vicinus; compar. near propior, nigher, whence E. near.

The term near, indeed, whether used as an adj., a prep., or an adv., seems originally to have been a comparative. As A.S. near is from neah, Su.G. naer seems to have the same relation to naa prope. It confirms this idea, that next, whether used as an adj., a prep., or an adv., is evidently, in its original use, the superlative of A.S. neah; neahst, nehst, i. e. the person or thing nighest or most near to another. Su.G. nachst, proxime, is formed in the same manner from naa prope; Alem. nahist from nah; Germ. nechst from nahe.

To NICK, v. n. A cant word signifying, " to drink heartily; as, he nicks fine." Shirr. Gl.

It is probable, however, that this word is of high antiquity; for, in Su.G. we find a synon. term, one indeed radically the same. Singulare est, quod de ebrio dicimus, Hafwa naagot paa nocka. This seems literally to signify, To have some thing notched against him. Thus, the phrase, he nicks fine, may properly signify, he drinks so hard, that he causes many nicks to be cut, as to the quantity of liquor he has called for. V. Nickstick.
To NICKER, v. n. To neigh. V. Nicher.

NICKSTICK, s. A piece of wood, corresponding to another, on which notches are made; a tally, S.

"You are to advert to keep an exact nickstick between you and the coalvier, of the number of deals of coals received in, and pay him for every half score of deals come in."—" A deal of coals is 23 hundred lib. weight. N." D. of Queensberrie's Instructions, &c. Trans. Antiq. Soc. Scot. p. 558.

This custom is still used by bakers.

The word is evidently from S. nick, Su.G. nocka, a notch, and stick. The simple mode of reckoning, by marking units on a rod, seems to have been the only one known to the Northern nations. This rod is in Sw. denominated karfstocke. Thus E. and S. score is used both for a tally, and for the notch made on it; from Su.G. skaer-a, incidere.

The Scandinavians, in like manner, formed their Almanacks by cutting marks on a piece of wood. V. Wormii, Fast. Dan. lib. 1. c. 2. also, Museum Worm. p. 367. An almanack of this kind was in Denmark called Primstaff; in Sweden Runstaf, i. e. a stick containing Runic characters. A similar custom prevailed among the peasants in some parts of France. V. Ihre, vo. Runstaf. NICKET, s. A small notch, Sibb. Gl.

NICK-NACK, s. 1. A gim-crack, a trifling curiosity, S.

Grose expl. nicknacks, "toys, baubles, or curiosities," Class. Dict.

2. Small wares, S.B.

Blankets and sheets a fouth I hae o' baith, And in the kist, twa webs of wholesome claith; Some ither nick nacks, sic as pot and pan, Cogues, caps, and spoons, I at a raffle wan. Morison's Poems, p. 458.

Su.G. snicksnak is composed in the same alliterative manner; but differs in sense, signifying a taunt, a sarcasm. S. a knack. Nicknack is probably formed in allusion to the curious incisions anciently made on bits of wood, by the Goth. nations, which serve ed the purpose of Almanacks, for regulating their festivals. V. Worm. Fast. Dan. Lib. 2. c. 2.-5. NICNEVEN, s. A name given to the Scottish Hecate or mother-witch; also called the Gyre-

Fra the sisters had seen the shape of that shit, Little luck be thy lot there where thou lyes, Thy fumard face, quoth the first, to flyt shall

Nicneven, quoth the next, shall nourish thee twyse,

To ride post to Elphine nane abler nor it.— Then a clear companie came soon after closs, Nicneven with her Nymphs, in number anew, With charms from Caitness and Chanrie in Ross, Whose cunning consists in casting a clew.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 16. There is no evidence that the first syllable of this name has any reference to Nick. For this is the Northern name given to "the angry spirit of the waters;" whereas Nicneven's operations seem to be confined to the earth and the air. Neven may be from Isl. nafn a name, which seems sometimes to signify, celebrated, illustrious. Whether this designation has any affinity to the Nehae or nymphs, worshipped by the ancient Northern nations, it is impossible to say. Wachter views these as the same personages called Mairae, or Matrons, vo. Neha. But Keysler distinguishes between them; Antiq. Septent. 263. 371.

Some peculiar necromancy must lie in casting a clew; as it is said of Nicneven and her nymphs, Whose cunning consists in casting a clew. This is one of the heathenish and detestable rites used on Hallow-even, by those who wish to know their future lot in the connubial state. The following is the account given of this ceremony in a note to Burns's Poems.

"Whoever would, with success, try this spell, must strictly observe these directions: Steal out, all alone, to the kiln, and, darkling, throw into the pot, a clue of blue yearn; wind it in a new clue off the old one; and towards the latter end, something will hold the thread; demand, wha hauds? i. e. who holds; and answer will be returned from the kiln-pot, by naming the christian and sirname of your future spouse." Burns, iii. 139.

Some particular virtue must be supposed to be in the colour: and there is reason to apprehend that this idea has been of long standing. It is referred to by Montgomerie, in the invocation he puts in the mouths of his witches, in order to the accomplish. ment of their spells on a child represented as the brood of an Incubus. The Poet introduces Hecate. improperly printed Hecatus, as distinct from his Nicneven; although he has previously given the latter the honours ascribed to the former. He thought, perhaps, that the mother-witch of his own country owed some peculiar respect to the great enchantress of the classical writers.

On three headed Hecatus to hear them, 'they

As we have found in the field this fundling forfairn,

First, his father he forsakes in thee to confyde, Be vertue of thir words, and this raw yearn.

And while this thrise thretty knots on this blue threed,

And of thir mens members well sowed to a shoe, Which we have tane from top to tae, Even of a hundred men and mae;

Now grant us, goddesse, or we gae,

Our duties to doe. Ibid. p. 17. 18. It is not improbable, that this charm, of the clue, contains an allusion to the Greek and Roman fable of one of the Fates holding the distaff, another spinning, and a third cutting the thread of human life.

Nicneven displays her power, not only by making a sieve, notwithstanding all the leaks, as secure as the tightest boat, but by withdrawing the milk from cows. Of the pretended brood of the Incubus, it is further said;

Nicneven, as nourish, to teach it, gart take it, To sail sure in a seif, but compass or cart;

And milk of a hair tedder, though wives should be wrackt, [l. wrackit,]

And a cow give a chopin, was wont to give a quart.

Many babes and bairns shall bless thy bair bains, When they have neither milk nor meil, Compell'd for hunger for to steil.

Ibid, p. 20.

In the Malleus Maleficarum, we have a particular account of the manner of conducting this process.

Quaedam enim nocturnis temporibus et sacratioribus utique ex inductione Diaboli, ob majorem offensam divinae majestatis, in quocunque angulo domus suae se collocant, urceum inter crura habentes, et dum cultrum vel aliquod instrumentum in parietem aut columnam infigunt, et manus ad mulgendum apponunt, tunc suum Diabolum, qui semper eis ad omnia cooperatur, invocant, et quòd de tali vacca ei tali domo, quae sanior, et quae magis in lacte abundat, mulgere affectat, proponit, tunc subitò diabolus ex mamillis illius vaccae lac recipit, et ad locum ubi Malefica residet, et quasi de illo instrumento fluat reponit. P. 354.

But the author seems to have been ignorant of the importance of the hair tedder; although it is not yet entirely forgotten by the vulgar in this country. To NIDDER, NITHER, v. a. 1. To depress, to constrain, to keep under, S. This seems to be the primary sense.

What think ye, man, will yon frank lassie please? Will ye our freedom purchase at this price?—Sair are we nidder'd, that is what ye ken; And but for her, we had been bare the ben.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Bat why a thief, like Sisyphus, 'That's nidder'd sae in hell, Sud here tak' fittininment, Is mair nar I can tell.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 4.

2. To press hard upon, to straiten; applied to bounds.

We have bot sobir pussance, and no wounder,— On this half closit with the Tuskane flude; On yonder syde ar the Rutulianis rude, Nidderis our houndis, as ful oft befallis, With there harnes elattering about our wallis. Doug. Virgil, 259. 17.

3. Niddered, pinched with cold; constrictus frigore, Ang. Loth. "Nithered, starved with cold." Gl. Grose

4. Pinched with hunger; used both in the N. and S. of S. "Hungered, half-starved." Shirr. Gl. "Marred or stunted in growth," Sibb.

5. The part is also used, in a loose sense, as equivalent to "plagued, warmly handled," Shirr.

Sibb. renders niddering, "niggardly, sparing;" Chron. S. P. i. 143, N.

Rudd. mentions A.S. nid-an urgere, nyd-ed coactus; but more properly refers to nyther deorsum. For our v. is perfectly synon. with Su.G. nedr-as, anciently nidr-as, deprimi; whence foer-nedr-a, to humble, Teut. ver-neder-en, id. Ihre, certainly with propriety, views ned infra, as the root. Hence nedrig, low in place, also, humble. A.S. nitherian, ge-nither-an, dejicere, humiliare, to bring or pull down, to humble, (Somner), has a similar origin, from nyther.

R. Glouc. uses anethered for diminished.

To NIFNAFF, v. n. To trifle, to speak, or act in a silly way, S. synon. kiow-ow, S.B.

O my dear lassie, it is but daffin To had thy wooer up ay niff-naffin.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 263. "Niffynaffy fellow, a trifler;" Grose's Class.

Dict.

From the sense of the v., it might seem allied to Isl. hnefe, the fist, q. to play with one's hands or fingers, like an idle aukward person.

NIGNAYES, NIGNYES, s. pl. 1. Gim-cracks, trinkets, trifles, Shirr. Gl. pron. nignies, S.

Fr. niquet signifies a trifle, a bauble.

He was not for the French nig nayes,
But briskly to his brethren says;
Good gentlemen, we may not doubt,
Wherefore the Duke of York's left out,

And is exempted from the Test, Wherewith he doth turmoyl the rest;-He thinks not fit to flench and flatter, But to prove gallant in the matter: And when he his designs commences, Rears up Rome's kennels, yairds & fences. Cleland's Poems, p. 92.

Perhaps flench should be fleech. Poor Pousies now the daffin saw, Of gawn for nignyes to the law, And bill'd the judge, that he wad please, To give them the remaining cheese.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 479. 480.

2. Whims, trifling scruples, peculiarities of temper or conduct, S.

I will not stay to clash and quibble About your nignayes, I'll not nibble: I'll with a bare word you redargue, Tho' till your wind pipes burst you argue. -Consider who's the churche's Head, And at your leisure, pray you read Your oath, and explicating act; And all you say's not worth a plack.

Cleland's Poems, p. 98.

From the contempt which the vulgar affect to pour on the forms of courtesy, acquired in civilized life, we might almost suppose that this term, in the latter sense, had originated from Su.G. nig-a, A.S. hnig-an, Isl. hneig-a, Germ. neig-en, to bow, to court'sy.

NYKIS, 3. p. pres. v.

The renk restles he raid to Arthour the king. Said, "Lord wendis on your way: Yone berne nykis you with nay. To prise hym forthir to pray It helpis na thing.

Gawan and Gol. i. 9. Edit. 1508.

This may merely signify nicks or hits you with nay, i. e. gives you a denial. It may, however, be a tautology, such as is common with our old writers; allied to Su.G. nek-a, to deny, from nei, no; q. he flatly denies.

NILD, "expl. Outwitted." Gl. Sibb.

This refers to Mr. Pinkerton's query, Gl. Maitl. with respect to the following passage.

I semit sobir, and sueit, and sempil without fraude.

Bot I nild sextie desane that subtillar war halding. Maitland's Poems, p. 54.

But, as has been observed since by the editor, (S.P. Repr. i. xxvi.), in Edit. 1508, it is, NYMNES, s. Neatness.

Thy cumly corps from end to end So clenlie wes inclos'd, That Momus nocht culd discommend, So weill thou wes compos'd: Thy trymnes and nymnes, Is turn'd to vyld estait, Thy grace to, and face to, Is alter'd of the lait.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 50. The term may perhaps originally include the idea of smallness of size, often connected with that of neatness: as allied to Isl. naum-r arctus, exiguus; A.S. naemingce, contractio. Fr. nimbot denotes a dwarf.

To NIP, NIP up, or awa, v. a. To carry off any thing by theft; as implying the idea of alertness and expedition, S.

"Ye was set aff frae the oon for nipping the pyes;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 87.

Ross's Helenore, p. 126. Either immediately from the v. as used in the ordinary sense; or as allied to Su.G. napp-a carpere, vellere, cito arripere; Isl. knippe, raptim moto, knupla furtim derogito, paululum furari.

NIPCAIK, s. A name given to one who eats delicate food clandestinely, S. from nip and cake.

Nyse Nagus, nipcaik, with thy schulders nar-Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57. row.

Perhaps it may here be equivalent to parasite. NIPPIT, adj. 1. Niggardly, parsimonious, S.

This term bears a striking analogy to Su.G. napp, knapp, Isl. naufr, knepp-er, arctus, exiguus; naeppeligen, anc. naept, aegre, vix, Dan. neppe, Isl. knept, scarcely, with difficulty, narrowly. Ihre views knipa, to compress, as probably the origin. Kilian seems to be of the same opinion; giving Teut. knijper, homo praeparcus, sordidus, in immediate connexion with knyp-en, arctare, premere, E.

nip. "A nip. A neat, thrifty, or rather penurious

2. A small knot, S.B. perhaps the same with A. Bor. narle, "a knot in a tangled skein of silk or thread," Grose.

In the last sense, it is certainly allied to Teut. knorre, tuber, nodus; E. knur, knurle.

NIRLES, s. pl. The designation given in S. to a species of Measles, which has no appropriate name in E. It is said to be the Rubeola variolodes of Dr. Cullen. In the Nirles, the pimples are distinct and elevated, although smaller; in the common measles, they are confluent and Sir Penny, Ellis, Spec. E. Poetry, i. 271. The ingenious Éditor, after Warton, (Hist. Poet.

iii. 94.) renders it careless. But the meaning is quite the reverse; - parsimonious. Somner refers to Medull. Grammat., where tenax is explained in E. nything. This he mentions under A.S. nithing; which, if the origin, has considerably changed its meaning. This is the same with Su.G. niding, a worthless person, one on whom any abuse may be poured; which Ihre derives from nid contumelia. A. Bor. nithing, sparing; as, nithing of his pains, unwilling to take any trouble. Sibb. views this as My neb is nytherit as a nob. I am bot ane oule. Houlate, i. 5.

The k used in the E. word is left out. NOBLAY, s. 1. Nobleness of mind; as respecting one faithful to his engagements.

As a man of gret noblay, He held toward his trist his way, Quhen the set day cummyn was: He sped him fast towart the place That he nemmyt for to fycht.

Barbour, viii. 211. MS. Nobley, Chaucer, nobility; noblay, Gower, id. In R. Glouc. description of King Leir, it is said; He thought on the noblei, that he had in y be.

Sibb. mentions Fr. noblesse. But it is from O.Fr. noblois, of the same meaning, nobilitas.

Si quiert les mondaines delices,

Dict. Trev. L'envoiserie, et le noblois.

NOBLES, s. The Pogge, or Armed Bullhead, a fish; Cottus cataphractus, Linn. This is the name at Newhaven.

NOCHT, adv. Not.

Yheyt has he nocht sa mekill fre As fre wyll to leyve, or do That at hys hart hym drawis to.

Barbour, i. 246. MS.

In The Bruce, nocht is almost uniformly the MS. reading, where we find not in the printed copies. This error in orthography has been owing to the carelessness of transcribers, who have not observed that nocht is often written not, as a contr.

Nogt is used in the same sense by R. Glouc., and noght by R. Brunne.

MoesG. niwaiht, nihil, from ni no, and waiht, Isl. waett, Su.G. waetta, the smallest thing that can be supposed; hence E. whit, S. hait. A.S. naht, noht, nihil; also, non.

Nocht for thi, conj. Nevertheless.

And nocht for thi his hand wes yeit Wndyr the sterap, magre his.

Barbour, iii. 123. MS. V. FOR THI. NOCK, NOK, NOKK, s. 1. The nick or notch of a bow or arrow. - The bowand nokkis met almaist, And now hir handis raxit it euery stede, Hard on the left neif was the scharp stele hede. Doug. Virgil, 396. 35.

2. The corner or extremity of the sailyard. Now the lescheyt, and now the luf thay slayk, Set in ane fang, and threw the ra abake; Bayth to and fra, al dyd thare nokkys wry: Prosper blastys furth caryis the nauy. Doug. Virgil, 156. 17.

3. The notch of a spindle, Shirr. Gl. S.B. — Ane spindle wantand ane nok.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 160. st. 7.

Teut. nocke, crena, incisura; incisura sagittae. E. nock is synon. with notch. Sw. nockor, denticuli incisi, Seren. Ital. nocchia. Isl. knocke is used in relation to a spindle, apparently as in sense 3. Unciolus, qualis est in fuso; G. Andr. p. 118. Nockit, Nokkit, part. adj. Notched. With arrow reddy nokkit than Eurytione Plukkit vp in hy his bow.

Doug. Virgil, 144. 50.

NOCKIT, NOKKET, s. A luncheon, a slight repast taken between breakfast and dinner, S. Aust. (eleven-hours, synon.) " perhaps nooncate, or cake," Sibb.

To NODGE, v. a. To strike with the knuckles,

This is nearly allied to Gnidge, although used in a different sense. V. GNIDGE and KNUSE.

To NOY, v. a. To annoy, to vex, to trouble. The godly pepill he sall noy Be cruell deith, and them distroy: The King of Kingis he sall ganestand, Syne be distroyit withouttin hand.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 150. Teut. noy-en, noey-en, id. Sw. nog-a, laedere. Ihre derives it from noga parcus, accuratus, as properly applied to those who hurt or injure others by confinement, or by treating them with too much strictness. Hence, Novit, part. pa. 1. Vexed, troubled, S.

2. Wrathful, raised to violent rage, S.B. hite, heyrd, synon. The term implies that there is at the same time a discovery of pride.

It may, in both senses, be from the v. But it seems doubtful, if, in the second, it be not rather allied to Isl. kny-a, knude, movere; whence ahnian, instigatio, commotio.

Nov, s. Trouble, annoyance.

The King thar at had gret pité: And tauld thaim petwisly agayne The noy, the trawaill, and the payne, That he had tholyt, sen he thaim saw.

Barbour, iii. 554. MS. Novis, s. "Annoyance, damage," Gl. Wynt. For constance, wyth a stedfast thought To thole ay noyis, qwha sa mowcht, May oftsys of wnlikly thyng Men rycht welle to thare purpos bryng. Wyntown, viii. 36. 108.

This, however, I suspect, is the pl. of noy.

Novous, adj. Noisome, disgusting.

I am deformit, quoth the foul, with faltis full fele,

Be nature nytherit, ane oule noyous in nest. Houlate, i. 20.

This is the reading in MS. instead of, I am descernit of the foul, &c.

Be nature nicherit ane oule noy quhar in nest. S. P. Repr. iii. 157.

" Mony a ane kisses the bairn for love of the nurice;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 55.

Norm. Sax. norice, Fr. nourisse, id.

Sibb. has ingeniously remarked the apparent affinity of this term to Su.G. naer-a, salvare; also, alere; whence Nerigend, the name of the Saviour, analogous to A.S. haelend, from hael-an salvare. V. Neren, Gl. Schilter.

To NOIT, NYTE, v. a. To strike smartly, to give a smart rap or stroke, S. V. KNOIT.

NOK, s. A notch, &c. V. Nock.

NOLD, would not.

occurs without the contr.

I nold ye traist I said thys for dyspite, For me lyst wyth no man nor bukis flyite.

Doug. Virgil, 7. 55. N'olde, id. is often used by Chaucer, according to Tyrwhitt, for ne wolde. But A.S. nolde frequently occurs in the sense of noluit, as the pret. of nell-an, nill-an, nolle, which is indeed contr. from ne and will-an, not to will. Ne willan sometimes NOLDER, conj. Neither. V. Nouther.

To NOLL, v. a. To press, beat or strike with the knuckles, S.B. sometimes null.

"To Null, to beat; as, He nulled him heartily;" Grose's Class. Dict.

Alem. knouel, Dan. knogle, Germ. knochel, a joint, a knuckle. V. Nevell, under NEIVE.

Noll, s. A strong push or blow with the knuckles, S.B.

NOLL, s. A large piece of any thing, as of bread, cheese, meat, &c. S.B.

It is equivalent to S. knot, Su.G. knoel tuber, a bump. This seems the primary sense of E. knoll, q. a knot or bump on the surface of the earth. Knot and noll seem to have the same origin, Isl. hnue, as denoting the form of the knuckles. V. Knot.

NOLT, Nowr, s. Black cattle, as distinguished from horses, and sheep. It properly denotes

"All persons clemand the office of keiping of the Kings forests and parks, sall suffer na maner of gudes, horse, meiris, nolt, sheip or vther cattell, to be pastured within the Kings forests." Skene, Crimes, Tit. 4. c. 36. s. 7. V. also Pitscottie, p. 21.

Als bestial, as horse and nowt, within, Amang the fyr thai maid a hidwyss din.

Wallace, viii. 1058. MS.

Although a collective n. it is used in composition for an individual of the kind, as a nowt-beast, S.

Isl. naut, Dan. nod, Sw. nood, not, an ox, not, oxen; Isl. nauta madr, a herdman. These are radically the same with A.S. neut, jumentum, a labouring beast; niten, nitenu, pecora, Somner; E. neut.

But it is evident, that our term more nearly resembles those used in the Scandinavian dialects.

The description given of Bos by Linn. contains a striking proof of the great affinity between the S. and Sw.

Suecis Noet [nout, S.]; mas, Tiur; castratus Oxe; junior Stut, [S. Stot, id.]; foemin. Ko, donec prima vice peperit, Quigu, [before her first calf, a quoy, S.] Faun. Suec. p. 46. Ed. 1800.

NOLTHIRD, s. A neatherd, a keeper of cattle, S.

Wallace, i. 124. MS.

In all the edit. which I have seen, it is erroneously printed won or wone.

This is an O.E. word, which I do not recollect to have met with in this form in any other S. work. Doug. writes nummyn. Both num and nom are used in the same sense by R. Glouc. and R. Brunne; Chaucer, nome, id.; from the O.E. v. nime, to take; A.S. Alem. nim-un, MoesG. nim-un, Su.G. num-a, nuem-a, Isl. nim-a, nem-a, Germ. nehm-en. V. Nummyn.

NONE, s. 1. Noon.

And, als sone as the none wes past,
Him thought weill he saw a fyr,
Be Turnberry bymand weill schyr.

Burbour, iv. 617. MS.

The word formerly signified three o'clock afternoon, or the ninth hour, when the nones, a name hence given to certain prayers, were said. This term being used by Chaucer, Tyrwhitt expl. it, "the ninth hour of the natural day; nine o'clock in the morning; the hour of dinner." According to Sibb., "perhaps the prayers, called the nones, were, in Chaucer's time, recited three hours before, instead of three hours after, mid-day." But it is more natural to suppose that Tyrwhitt was mistaken in his definition. For there is no evidence that, in Chaucer's time, the nones were celebrated so early, A.S. non uniformly signifies "the ninth houre of the day, which was at three of the clock afternoon;" Somner.

2. Dinner.

Gif seruandis of ane familie
Had daylie meit sufficientlie
Provydit for thame, and na mair;
Than gif the Stewart sa wald spair
And on this sort thair meit dispone,
Of ane dayis meit mak four dayis none,
Wald not thay seruandis houngerit be,
And leif in greit penuritie?

Diall. Clerk & Courteour, p. 21. Fr. none, id. A.S. non-mete, "refectio, vel prandium, a meale or bever at that time," Somner; so called, because the priests used to take a repast after the celebration of the nones.

NON-FIANCE, s.

"Essex much suspected, at least of non-fiance and misfortune; his army, through sickness and runaways, brought to 4000 or 5000 men, and these much malcontented that their general and they should be misprised." Baillie's Lett. i. 391.

It seems to signify discredit, want of confidence; from Fr. non the negative, and fiance trust, confidence.

NON-SOUNT, s. A term denoting a base coin. "Now thay spair not planelie to brek down and convert gud and stark mony, cunyit in our cunyehouse in our Soveranes les aige, into this thair corrupted scruef and baggages of Hard heidis and Nonsounts." Knox's Hist. p. 164.

This is not to be viewed as the designation of any particular coin, but of base money in general. It is of Fr. origin. Messieurs de non sont, is a phrase mentioned by Cotgr. as applied to men who are supposed to be imperfect in a physical sense; perhaps from non the negative particle, and sonte, the use or profit of rents that have been mortgaged, or detained by judicial authority, q. no return; or from L.B. sont-ius, verax, q. not genuine; or still more simply, from the 3. p. pl. of the v. subst. q. they are not.

NOR, conj. Than, S.

The gudwyf said, I reid yow lat thame ly, Thay had lever sleip, nor be in laudery. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 75.

"Sum thair be also that under cullour of seiking the Quenis authoritie, thinkis to eschaip the punishment of auld faultis, and haue licence in tyme to cum to oppres thair nichtbouris, that be febiller nor thai." Buchanan's Admon. to Trew Lordis, p. 6.

It is used in the same sense, A. Bor. V. Gl. Grose.

This, as far as I have observed, is not very ancient. Na, q. v. is used in the same sense by our earliest writers.

NORIE, s. The Puffin, Orkn. Alca arctica, Linn.; the Tam Norie of the Bass.

"Among these we may reckon—the pickternie, the norie, and culterneb." P. Kirkwall, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 546. This in Orkn. is also called Tommy Noddle, q. v.

Norw. noere signifies puellus, homuncio, G. Andr. p. 186. q. the boy, or mannikin. Hence perhaps the reason of his being otherwise called by the diminutive of a man's name.

NORIES, s. pl. Whims, reveries, Perths.

Sw. narr-as, to trifle with one, illudere; narr, a fool?

NORYSS, s. Nurse. V. Noyris.

NORLAN, NORLIN, NORLAND, adj. Of or belonging to the North country, S.B.

Four and twanty siller bells
Wer a' tyed till his mane;
And yae tift o' the norland wind,
They tinkled ane by ane.

Percy's Reliques, ii. 235.

Quhan words he found, their elritch sound Was like the norlan blast,

Frae yon deep glack at Catla's back, That skeegs the dark-brown waste.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 359.

As the orthography of this word is various, I am at a loss whether it has been originally q. northland, or allied to Isl. nordlingr, norling-r, aquilonarius. Perhaps norlin is the proper form. Dan. nordlaend-r, however, signifies a northern man. Norlins, adv. Northward, S.B.

They rub their een, and spy them round about, Thinking what gate the day to hadd their rout. Nae meiths they had, but norlins still to gae, Kenning that gate that Flaviana lay.

Ross's Helenore, p. 75.

NORLICK, KNURLICK, s. A lump, a tumor, a hard swelling occasioned by a blow, S.B.

"I wat she rais'd a nortick on my crown that wis nae well for twa days." Journal from London, p. 3.

A dimin. from E. knur, knurl, a knot; or immediately from Teut. knorre, a knot, a knob, a small swelling. Su.G. knorrlig is applied to the hair, when knotted or matted. These, perhaps, are all originally from Isl. hnue, internodius digitorum.

NORTHIN, NORTHYN, adj. Northerly.

"The thrid cardinal vynd is callit septemtrional or borial, quhilk vulgaris callis northen vynd." Compl. S. p. 95. Northyn, Barbour.

Sw. nord, norden, North; nordan-waeder, a north-wind, Seren.

NOSE WISE, (pron. nosewyss,) adj. 1. Having, or pretending to have, an acute smell, S.

2. Used metaph. in relation to the mind, to denote one, who either is, or pretends to be, quick of perception.

"Your calumnies,—that the shew of worldly glorie hath turned me out of the path-way of Christ, Vol. II.

that a man nose-wise (like you) might smell in my speeches the sauour of a vaine-glorious, and selfe-pleasing humour,—are but words of winde." Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 173.

Germ. naseweis, self-witted, presumptuous, critical; Sw. naeswis, saucy, malapert.

For Turnus slauchter

NOST, s. Noise, talking, speculation about any subject, S.B.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. knyst-a, Dan. knyst-er, to mutter, to make a low noise, from Su.G. kny, id.; or Isl. hnys-a, scrutari, sciscitare.

A.S. not-ian, nytt-ian, MoesG. niut-an, Su.G. niut-a, anc. nyt-a, Isl. niot-a, to use, to enjoy.

2. To take victuals, to use in the way of sustenance.

He notes very little, he takes little food, S.B. Teut. nutt-en, uti; vesci, sobrie degustare; Isl. nautin, eating, from neitte, vescor; Su.G. noet-a, usu conficere, deterere, Ihre.

3. To need, to have occasion for, Ang. Mearns. "He would note it, i. e. needs it, or has use for it." Rudd. vo. Nate. Nott, needed, Buchan.

As used in this sense, it might seem a different v., formed from MoesG. naud, Su.G. noed, Belg. nood, necessity. But indeed the idea of necessity is very nearly allied to that of use.

Note, Note, s. 1. Use, purpose, office.

Sum sleuit knyffis in the beistis throttis,

2. Necessity, occasion for, S.B.

Alem. not, Su.G. noed, id. Belg. nut, use, nutt-elyk, useful.

NOTELESS, adj. Unnoticed, unknown, Gl. Shirr. NOTOUR, NOTTOUR, adj. 1. Well known, notorious, S.

"Of things nottour, there are some which cannot be proven, and yet are true, as such a man is another's son.—Again, there are things nottour, which need no probation, which are facti transeuntis, as that a person did publickly commit murder." Steuart's Collections, B. iv. Tit. 3. § 18.

2. What is openly avowed and persisted in, notwithstanding all warnings to the contrary, S.

"We distinguish between simple and notour adultery. Notorious or open adulterers, who continue incorrigible, notwithstanding the censures of the church, were punished by 1551. c. 20. with the escheat of their moveables: but soon after, the punishment of notorious adultery was declared capital, by 1563. c. 74." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. T. 4. s. 53.

Fr. notoire, notorious, open.

NOURISKAP, s. 1. The place or situation of being a nurse, S.

2. The fee given to a nurse, S.

From A.S. norice, a nurse, and scipe, Belg. schap, Su.G. skap, a termination denoting a certain state. V. Noyris.

NOUT. s. Black cattle. V. Nolt.

Kelly, p. 133.

Kelly, p. 133.

Ibid. N. He mistakes it, as if it were the same with E. knoll. But Ferguson gives it thus:

He would need a heal pow,

That calls his neighbour nitty now.

A.S. hnol, id. vertex; whence E. jobbernol; Germ. nol, nal, id. Nal occurs in this sense in the Salic law. For in Franc. it was equivalent to sinciput. Like Lat. vertex, it not only denoted the head, but a mountain. Thus in Otfrid, Berga sculun suinan, Ther nol then dal rinan. Montes debent tabescere, Collis vallem contingere. Lib. i. c. 23.

"Both," as Wachter observes, "denote something that is lofty and towering,—the head in the human frame, a hill in a plain." He is at a loss to determine which of these is the original sense. V. Wachter, vo. Nal. It seems, however, most likely that the metaph. was borrowed from the human body, as in other instances. The term swyre, signifying the neck, is transferred to the hollow or defile near the summit of a hill. A ridge of mountains undoubtedly derives its name from Isl. hryggr, Su.G. rygg dorsum, S. rigging; as Lat. dorsum, which primarily signifies the back of an animal, is transferred to a ridge; Germ. rucken, id. The same is the origin of S. rig, E. ridge of land, because all ridges in ancient times were much raised towards the crown. It is probable, from analogy, that Su.G. backe, a hill, has the same origin, although it differs in orthography from bak tergum, and is traced to a different source by Northern etymologists. Of the same description are, the brow of a hill, and ness, a promontory, from Isl. nes, the nose; the shoulder, i. e. the slope of a hill, the side, the hip, the shank, the foot, &c. of a hill, S. What is called the shank, is otherwise denominated the shin, denoting that part of a hill by which it is conjoined with the plain. V. GRUNE.

The term coast, Doug. coist, seems applied to land bordering on the sea, from coist, the side in the human body, q. the side of the sea. We may also mention Lat. os, ostium, Germ. munde, E. mouth, transferred from the human body, to the place where a river empties itself into a larger one, or into the sea. An isthmus is called S. a tongue of land, Lat. lingula, Fr. langue, as langue de terre; also, E. a neck of land.

NUB BERRY, s. This, I am informed, is the Cloud-berry or Knoutberry, Rubus chamaemo-

"Upon the top of this hill, grows a small berry, commonly called the Nub Berry. It bears some resemblance to the bramble berry, and is pleasant enough to the taste. It is not improbable, that the hill might derive its name from this berry, which perhaps might be called the Queen of Berrys, or Queensberry, as being thought the most delicious of wild berries." P. Closeburn, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. xiii. 243.

Would it not have been worth while, to have brought some queen or other to this spot, who had left her designation to this berry, as being her favourite?

NUCE, NESS, s. Destitute, in very necessitous circumstances, Aberd.

"A nuce or ness family, means a destitute family." P. Peterculter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 385. From Su.G. noed, necessity; or an oblique sense of nisk, parsimonious.

NUCKLE, adj. A nuckle cow, expl., a cow which has had one calf, and will calve soon again, Buchan.

Both this, and Neucheld, seem therefore to be originally the same with Newcal, q. v.

NULE-KNEED, adj. Having the knees so close as to strike against each other in walking; knockkneed, S. perhaps q. knuckle-kneed, from cnouel. V. Noll, v.

Both Rudd. and Sibb. render this word as if it were the infin. of the verb, whereas it is the part. pa. V. Nome.

NUNREIS, s. A nunnery.

"He foundit the colleige of Bothwell and the nunreis of Lynclowden, quhilk wes eftir changit in ane colleige of preistis." Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 12.

NURIS, s. A nurse. V. Noyris.
To NUSE, v. a. To press down; to knead. V. Knuse.

O.

It has appeared, from a great variety of examples, that instead of o in E. we use a. It is singular, that, on the other hand, as if it had been the effect of design, in several words, in which a occurs in E., we substitute o. Thus, instead of cave, lane, rave, &c. we say, cove, lone, rove, &c.

O, art. One, for a.

Mine hors the water upbrought
Of o pow in the way.

Sir Tristrem, p. 168.

O, s. Grandson. V. OE.

OAM, s. Steam, vapour, arising from any thing hot. Oam of the kettle, the vapour issuing from it when it boils, S.

This is probably the source of A. Bor. omy, mellow, applied to land. V. Ray. Su.G. em, im, imme, Isl. im, imma, vapor, fumus tenuis. Verel. derives the Isl. word from MoesG. ahma spiritus. A.S. aethm, "vapour, breath," Somner, is undoubtedly allied; and perhaps Isl. hiomi, foam.

OAT-FOWL, s. The name of a small bird, Orkn.

"A small bird, rather less than a sparrow, resorts here in winter, supposed to be the same with what is by some called the Empress's bird in Russia, and is called by the people here oat-fowls, because they prey on the oats. Some who have eat both kinds say, this bird is equally delicate eating with the ortolan." P. Cross, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 461.

To OBFUSQUE, v. a. To darken.

Fr. obfusquer, Lat. ob and fusc-are, id.

OBIT, s. The name of a particular length of slate, Ang.

To OBLEIS, OBLYSE, v. a. To bind, to oblige, corrupted from the Fr. word. This term is used, indeed, with the same latitude as E. oblige.

Hence oblist, part. pa. stipulated, engaged to.

Or quhat aualis now, I pray the, say, For til haue brokin, violate or schent The haly promyssis and the bandis gent, Of peace and concord oblist and sworne?

OBLIUE, s. Forgetfulness, oblivion; Lat. obliv-io.

"Item, the marchet of the dochter of ane Thane or Ochiern, twa kye, or twelve schillings." Reg.

Maj. B. iv. c. 31.

This passage, however, would rather prove that the Ochiern was equal to a Thane; for their daughters are subjected to the same fine.

L.B. ogetharius. Sibb. rather fancifully supposes that "the title might originally signify lord of an island, from Sax. aege, Heb. oghe insula; and Scand. & Teut. herre, vel Sax. hearra, dominus."

"The word is undoubtedly Gaelic, contracted from Oge-Thierna, that is, the young lord, or heir apparent of a landed gentleman." MacPherson's Crit. Diss. D. 13.

the young gentleman." Ibid. N.

According to the same writer, "the Greeks derived their Treams, from Tierna," which he deduces from Ti, the one, and Ferran, lord, in the oblique case, Eran.

Su.G. ockr, okr, primarily increase of any kind, in a secondary sense, usury. Teut. oecker, Isl. okur, A.S. ocer, wocer, Belg. woeker, Germ. wucher, Dan. aager, are used in the latter sense. Teut. woecker-en, to lend on usury. Ihre, certainly with propriety, derives okr from oek-a augere, analogous to cik. Junius, in like manner, observes that Franc. uuachar and uuocher denote fruit of any kind, as that of the ground, and also usury, q. the fruit or increase arising from money; from auch-on, MoesG. auk-an, augere, as A.S. ocer is from eac-an, and Teut. oecker from oeck-en. ODAL LANDS. V. UDAL.

ODIN. Promise of Odin, a promise of marriage, or particular sort of contract, accounted very sacred by some of the inhabitants of Orkney.

"At some distance from the Semicircle, to the right, stands a stone by itself, eight feet high, three broad, nine inches thick, with a round hole on the side next the lake. The original design of this hole was unknown, till about twenty years ago it was discovered by the following circumstance. A young man had seduced a girl under promise of marriage, and she proving with child, was deserted by him. The young man was called before the Session; the elders were particularly severe. Being asked by the minister the cause of so much rigour, they answered, You do not know what a bad man this is; he has broke the promise of Odin. Being further asked what they meant by the promise of Odin, they put him in mind of the stone at Stenhouse with the round hole in it, and added, that it was customary, when promises were made, for the contracting parties to join hands through this hole; and the promises so made were called the promises of Odin." Remarks in a Journey to Orkney, by Principal Gordon, Transact. Soc. Antiq. Scot. i. 263.

This remarkable stone is connected with several others.

"The largest [stones] stand between the kirk of Stenness and a causeway over a narrow and shallow place of the loch of Stenness. Four of these form a segment of a circle; and it is probable there has been a complete semicircle, as some stones broken down seem to have stood in the same line. The highest of those now standing is about eighteen feet above the level of the ground. At a little distance from these is a stone with a hole of an oval form in it, large enough to admit a man's head; from which to the outside of the stone, on one side, it is slender, and has the appearance of being worn with a chain." P. Firth, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 134. 135.

The common tradition is, that this was a place consecrated to heathen worship, and that the sacrifices were bound to this stone; whence it is supposed to have derived that sanctity still ascribed to it by superstition.

We find a remarkable coincidence with that already mentioned, in a custom which existed among the Highlanders, at the western extremity of Scotland, and which might probably have been borrowed by their Saint from the Goths.

"Couslan—inculcated in the strongest manner the indissolubility of the marriage tie, (a point probably as necessary to be inculcated in his time, as in our own); and if lovers did not yet find it convenient to marry, their joining hands through a hole in a rude pillar near his church, was held, as it continued to be till almost the present day, an interim tie of mutual fidelity, so strong and sacred, that, it is generally believed, in the country, none ever broke it, who did not soon after break his neck, or meet with some other fatal accident." P. Campbelton, Argyles. Statist. Acc. x. 537.

The custom mentioned above is evidently a relique of the worship of Odin, or Woden, whence our Wednesday. It had been established there, by some colony that left Scandinavia, before the introduction of Christianity; or which, although bearing the Christian name, retained, as was frequently the case, many of the rites of heathenism.

Nor is this the only memorial of this Northern deity, in the islands of Orkney. Those in the isle of Shapinshay shew that his worship has not been confined to one place; as well as that the ceremony above described has not received its designation incidentally.

"Towards the north side of the island, and by the sea side, is another large stone, called the Black Stone of Odin. Instead of standing erect, like the one above mentioned, it rests its huge side on the sand, and raises its back high above the surrounding stones, from which it seems to be altogether different in quality. How it has come there, for what purpose, and what relation it has borne to the Scandinaviau god with whose name it has been honoured, not only history or record, but even tradition, is totally silent. As the bay in a neighbouring island is distinguished by the name of Guuden, or the Bay or Guo of Odin, in which there is found dulce that is supposed to prevent disease and prolong life; so this stone might have had sanctity formerly which is now forgotten, when the only office that is assigned it is to serve as a march stone between the ware strands or kelp shores of two conterminous heritors." P. Shapinshay, Statist. Acc. xvii. 235.

The place referred to is undoubtedly that in the island of Stronsav.

"There is a place called Guiyidn, on the rocks of which that species of sea-weed called dulse is to be found in abundance; which weed is considered by many to be a delicious and wholesome morsel." Statist. Acc. xv. 417. N.

"Such confidence do the people place in these springs, (which, together, go under the name of Kildinguie,) and at the same time in that sea-weed named Dulse, produced in Guiydin, (perhaps the bay of Odin,) as to have given rise to a proverb, "That the well of Kildinguie and the dulse of Guiydin will cure all maladies but Black Death." Barry's Orkney, p. 50.

"The resemblance in sound which two of these [nesses], Tor ness and Od ness, have to Thor and Woden, the Teutonic deities, leaves room to conjecture their origin." Statist. Acc. xv. 388.

Besides what has been mentioned concerning Thor and Odin, there seem to be some vestiges of the worship of Saturn in the Orkney islands.

"In passing across the island [Eda], we saw at some distance the great stone of Seter,—a huge flag, rising about sixteen feet upright in the midst of a moor." Neill's Tour, p. 38.

I have not observed, indeed, that the Scandinavians had any deity of this name. But we know that he was worshipped by the Saxons, who were from the same steck. By them he was called Seater, and also Crodo. Verstegan thinks that he had no connexion with the Roman Saturn. V. Restitution, p. 85-87. Junius holds the contrary opimion.

We have no evidence, that the Saxons ever had any settlement in the Orkneys. But if we can give any faith to ancient history, the Picts had. Now, were we assured of what seems highly probable, that this stone, like that of Odin, had been consecrated to Seater; it would form no inconsiderable presumption of near affinity between the Saxons and Picts.

Wallace, i. 30. MS.

This passage is obscure. But Malcom, the father of the Deliverer of his country, seems to be represented as the second grandson, i. c. not the heir, or, perhaps, the great-grandson of a former Wallace, who had been famous in his time.

This is part of the reply of Wallace to Stewart of Bute, who had claimed the right of leading the van. and compared Wallace to the Houlate dressed in borrowed feathers. If the sense given above be the proper one, the term may be allied to Sw. hogfard, Alem. hohfart, Germ. hoffart, pride, which Wach. ter derives from hog, high, and far-a, to tend; Ihre, the last part of the word, from A.S. ferth, mind, soul. As ogertful, however, signifies nice, squeamish, the s. may be applied to the mind, by a figure borrowed from the reluctance manifested by one who has a squeamish stomach. V. next word.

Ihre seems to view MoesG. agis, or Su.G. aga, fear, as the radical term. Hence S. ugsum, frightful, ugsumnes, horror; and E. ugly, what causes horror, or disgust. The words originally used to denote terror of mind, seem to have been transferred to loathing or abhorrence; because we shudder at, and endeavour to avoid what we fear. V. Scunner, v. Sibb. unaccountably prefers "okyr, used for wealth, q. purseproud," as the origin of ogertful.

OHON, interj. Alas, S. Gael.

OI, Ov. As oi or oy occurs in many of our old words now prenounced as if spelled with an u; it appears that this diphthong had been used by our ancestors as equivalent to Sw. ŏ, or o inflected, which is sounded as Gr. v, the very sound retained in S. V. Oyss, Oyhlé, Oint, Poind.

ON is often used in composition as a negative particle; as onmakin, without making; ondoin, not doing, S.B.

It occurs also in writing.

This exactly corresponds to the sense of Germ. ohn. Ohn schamroth, without shame or blushing, like S. Bor. onblushin. This is radically the same with A.S. Alem. un, which Junius deduces from Gr. avev, sine, as if the Goths had been strangers to a negative particle, till they learned the use of it from the Greeks.

This designation is given to the owl.

The howlet shriek'd, and that was worst of a'; For ilka time the on-beast gae the yell, In spite of grief, it gae her heart a knell.

Belg. ondier, a monster, a monstrous creature, is formed in the same manner, being compounded of on, denoting a fault in the subject, and dier a beast, a living creature; Germ. unthier, a noxious beast. Su.G. o has a similar use; as, soid a beast, osoid, a noxious animal.

3. The tooth-ache, S.B.

This is its common name, Ang. most probably from the idea that it is caused by a noxious creature. For the vulgar believe that the pain proceeds from the gnawing of a worm in the tooth.

4. The term is metaph. applied to a noxious member of human society, A.g.

To ONTER, v. n. To rear; a term used concerning horses.

"Sir Patrick's horse ontered with him, and would no wise encounter his marrow, that it was force to the said Sir Patrick Hamilton to light on foot, and give this Dutch-man battle." Pitscottie, p. 104.

There may have been an O.Fr. v. of a similar form, from Arm. ont, aont, high.

ON-WAITER, s. One who waits patiently for any thing future.

"I know, submissive on-waiting for the Lord, shall at length ripen the joy and deliverance of his own, who are truly blessed on-waiters." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 134.

ONWAITING, s. 1. Attendance, S.

" After presenting his petition, and long and expensive onwaiting, he [Mr. H. Erskine] was told for answer, That he could have no warrant for bygones, unless he would for time to come conform to the established church." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 256. 2. Patient expectation of what is delayed.

"On-waiting had ever yet a blessed issue, and to keep the word of God's patience, keepeth still the saints dry in the water, cold in the fire, and breathing and blood-hot in the grave." Rutherford's Lett.

P. i., ep. 127.

To ONTRAY, v. a. To betray.

This seems formed, but in an anomalous way, from on and Fr. trah-ir to betray. Germ. un is often used intensively.

To OOP, Oup, Wup, v. a. To bind with a thread or cord, to splice, S. Gl. Sibb.

Sibb. views it as the same with E. hoop, which is from Teut. hoep, id. It seems rather allied to MoesG. waib-jan (whence waip, a crown, what is circular,) Su.G. wef-wa, Isl. waf-a, wef-a, to sur-Gulli wafdur medalkafle; Manubrium filo auri circumductum, Ol.S. ap. Verel. i. e. the handle wupit with gold thread, S.

I hesitate as to its being synon. with hoop, especially because this E. term is not used in its primary sense in S. We use gir, gird.

OORIE, OURIE, OWRIE, adj. 1. Chill, cold, bleak; primarily applied to that which produces coldness in the body: as, an oory day, S.

2. Having the sensation of cold, shivering, S. Listning, the doors an' winnocks rattle; I thought me on the owrie cattle, Or silly sheep, wha bide this brattle O' winter war.

Burns, iii. 150.

Whare'er alang the swaird thou treads, The owrie cattle hang their heads.

Rev. J. Nicol's Pocms, i. 50.

Ourlach, id. Buchan; "shivering with cold and wet."

3. " Having the hair on end, like a horse overcome with cold," Sibb.

As the term properly denotes that chillness which proceeds from the dampness of the air, it may be from Isl. ur rain, Su.G. ur, yr, stormy weather. As viewed more generally, it may however be allied to Belg. guur, cold, guur weer, cold weather; g being often sunk, or softened, in pronunciation.

Ooriness, s. Chillness, a tendency to shiver-OPINIOUN, s. Party, faction, any particular side of the question in a state of warfare.

"The Murrayis gaderit to thair opinioun the inhabitantis of Ros, Caithnes, with sindry othir pepill thairabout." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 11.

"At last guhen he had inuadit the cuntre with gret trubill, he was slane with v. m. men of his opinioun be the erle of Merche & Walter Stewart." Ibid. B. xiii. c. 15.

"He followis the tyme the opinioun of Inglismen." Ibid, B. xiv. c. 10. Anglorum sequutus partes; Boeth.

Lat. opinio was used in the same sense in the dark ages. Thus a vassal was said, quaerere opi-Vol. II.

nionem facere domino suo, when he engaged with his lord in a hostile expedition, and behaved gallantly in battle. Leg. Bajwar. Tit. 2. c. 7. ap. Du Cange

To OPPONE, v. a. To oppose.

"It wes concludit that faythefull rehersall sould be maid of suche personages as God had maid instruments of his glorie, by opponing of thameselfis to manifest abusses, superstitioun and idolatrie." Knox's Hist. Auth. Pref.

This is immediately from Lat. oppon-ere; whereas the E. v. is formed from the Fr.

To OPTENE, v. a. To obtain.

Quhare may we sua optene felicité; Neuer bot in heuin, empire aboue the skye? Doug. Virgil, 160. 29. Wyntown, id.

Optineo, as Rudd. has observed, frequently occurs, for obtineo, " in MSS. of less antiquity, and old charters."

Suld nocht weill feyrd part get away. Tharfor in awentur to dey

He wald him put, or he wald fley.

Barbour, ix. 595. MS.

This is nearly connected with the former sense; q. " he would fight, before that he would flee." There is this difference, however, that fighting is not meant as the antecedent to fleeing, but as the adversative.

This, instead of being allied to E. or conj., seems radically the same with ar, before. Or, ar, ur, according to Wachter, in all the Goth. dialects, convey the idea of beginning; vo. Orlog. A.S. or, ord, principium; Lye. V. Air.

OR, conj. 1. Lest.

Nor is more generally used in this sense.

ORAGIUS, adj. Stormy, tempestuous.

The storme wes so outragius, And with rumlings oragius, That I for fear did gruge.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 19.

Fr. orageux, id. orag-er, to be tempestuous, orage a storm. Some derive the Fr. s. from Gr. eventos, coelum; Du Cange, from L.B. orago used as the Fr. term, which he deduces from Lat. aura the air. Perhaps it is of Goth. origin; from Su.G. Isl. ur tempestas.

ORATOUR, s. An ambassadour.

"Because we are nere equale to other in power, thairfore it is best to send oratouris to Caratak kyng of Scottis, quhilk is maist cruell ennyme to Romanis, & desyre hym concur with ws to reuenge the oppressioun done to his sister Uoada." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 32. b.

Lat. orator, id.

ORATOURE, ORATORY, s. An oracle, a place from which responses were supposed to be given.

Bot than the King-gan to seik beliue His fader Faunus oratoure and ansuare, Quhilk conth the fatis for to cum declare.

Doug. Virgil, 207. 32.

Oratory, is used in the same sense, 215. 3. The word, as Rudd. observes, properly signifies a chapel, or place of worship; Fr. oratoire, from Lat. or-are to pray.

ORCHLE, s. A porch, Mearns.

Germ. erker, projectura aedificii, a balcony; 1.B. arcora. Frischius views this as derived from arcula. V. Wachter.

ORD, s. This word seems to signify, a steep hill or mountain.

"The country is-confined on the East by the sea, on the West by lofty black mountains, which approach nearer and nearer to the water, till at length they project into it at the great promontory, the Ord of Caithness, the boundary between that country and Sutherland." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 192.

"The hill of the Ord is that which divides Sutherland and Caithness. The march is a small rivulet, called The Burn of the Ord of Caithness."

Statist. Acc. xvii. 629.

This is perhaps from Gael. ard, a hill. Isl. aardug-ur, however, signifies, arduus, acclivis, G. Andr. p. 15. and urd, montes impervii; Verel. Ind. He explains it by Sw. holgryte and stenaklippor, as synon. terms; apparently calling them impervious because of the multitude of rocks.

ORE, s. "Grace, favour, protection," Tyrwhitt.

Now hath Rohand in ore Tristrem, and is ful blithe; The child he set to lore. And lernd him al so swithc.

Sir Tristrem, p. 22.

This word frequently occurs in O.E.

The maister fel adoun on kne, and criede mercy and ore.

> R. Glouc. p. 39. V. Ritson's Note, E. M. R. iii. 263.

According to Tyrwhitt, it is of A.S. origin. But it has been justly observed, that "this is a word of uncertain derivation, and various application," Gl. Tristrem. It might perhaps be viewed as the same with Fr. heur, equivalent to bonheur felicity, good fortune. But I suspect that it is rather Gothic. The only word to which it seems allied is Isl. oor, aur, largus, munificus; aur oc blidr, largus et affabilis, Verel. Ind.; Liberalis, Gl. Kristnis.; oorleike, largitas, G. Andr. p. 14.

Lye, however, says that this term, as used by Chaucer, has flowed from A.S. are, honor, reverentia, misericordia; Belg. eere, Alem. eera, honor;

ORFEVERIE, ORPHRAY, s. Work in gold, embroidery.

ORLEGE, ORLAGER, ORLIGER, s. 1. " A clock, a dial, any machine that shews the hours,"

Speaking of the rising Sun, Doug. says, - By his hew, but orliger or dyal, I knew it was past four houris of day.

Virg. Prol. 404. 8. E. horologe, Fr. horloge, Lat. horolog-ium, id. 2. Metaph. applied to the cock.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 9. 20.

4. It is now used to denote the dial-plate of a church or town-clock, S.

ORLANG, s. A complete year, the whole year round, Ang.

This very ancient and almost obsolete word is certainly of Scandinavian origin, as composed of Su.G. aar, annus, and lange diu. Now aar is pron. q. E. oar.

ORNTREN, s. The repast taken between dinner and supper, Galloway; fourhours, synon. This must be merely a corr. and misapplication of A.S. undern, tempus antemeridianum; wheuce undernmete, breakfast. O.E. ondron, (Chaucer, undern,) has been expl. afternoon, although improperly. The term, however, was understood in this sense in Hen. VIII's time. V. Gl. Brunne in vo. and Understude. Verstegan and Underntyde, Verstegan.

To ORP, v. n. To fret, to repine. It more generally denotes an habitual practice of repining.

or of chiding, S.

This, in signification, nearly corresponds to the v. harp, as denoting a querulous reiteration on the same subject; although the latter is evidently a metaph. use of the E. v., which is formed from the musical instrument that bears this name.

But ye'll repent ye, if his love grow cauld; Wha likes a dorty maiden, when she's auld? Like dawted wean that tarries at its meat, That for some feckless whim will orp and greet: The lave laugh at it till the dinner's past, And syne the fool thing is oblig'd to fast, Or scart anither's leavings at the last.

Ransay's Poems, ii. 76.

For tarries 1. tarrows, as in former editions, Orp is expl. "to weep with a convulsive pant;" Gi. But if ever used in this sense, it is obliquely. Hence, Orpit, part. adj. "Proud, haughty;" Rudd.

And how orpit and proudly ruschis he Amyd the Troianis by favour of Mars, quod sche. Doug. Virgil, 313. 10.

Tumidus is the only word in the original. But, I apprehend, that orpit here occurs in the common sense, as denoting ill humour conjoined with pride.

Rudd. has quoted Gower, as using orped in the sense of proud, haughty.

They acorden at the laste With such wyles, as they caste, That they woll gette of their accorde Some orped knyght to sley this lorde And with this sleyght they begynne Howe they Helmege myght wynne, Which was the kynges botyler, A proude and a lusty bachyler.

Conf. Am. Fol. 22, p. 1. col. 2.

Orpede is used by R. Glouc. for fine, good. It also signifies, courageous, manful.

"They foughten orpedlyche with the Walvsse men.—They that wer ynne defendid the toun orpedly." Addit. to R. Glouc.

2. Fretful, discontented, habitually chiding, S. It seems rather to imply the idea of childish fretfulness or discontentment, when one cannot well say what is wished for.

"You seeme to be very earnest here, but all men may see it is but your orpit or ironic conceit: so like as M. Dauid will be taught of Bishops, a sort of profane men without either learning or grace, in your account." Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 143.

As used in this, which is its only mod. sense, it might seem allied to A.S. earfoth, eorfath, earfethe, difficult, troublesome; q. difficult to manage, of a troublesome temper. E. difficult is indeed used as synon. with orpit; "hard to please, prevish," Johns. The A.S. term seems radically allied to Franc. arbeit, great pain, tribulation; from MoesG. arbaid-jan, to toil, to labour. But the origin is uncertain.

ORPHANY, s.

I saw all claith of gold men micht deuise,— Damesslure, tere, pyle quhairon thair lyis Peirle, Orphany quhilk euerie stait renewis. Palice of Honour, i. 46. Edin. Ed. 1579.

Cotgr. defines oripeau, as signifying "orpine, painters gold, such gold as is laid on hangings," &c. Fr. or gold, and peau, (from Lat. pellis) a skin. ORPHELING, s. An orphan. Fr. orphelin.

"The Blind, Crooked, Bedralis, Widowis, Orphelingis, and all uther Pure, sa visit be the hand of God as may not worke, To the Flockis of all Freiris within this realme, we wische Restitutioun of wrangis bypast, and Reformatioun in tymes cuming, for Salvation." Knox's Hist. p. 109.

ORPHIR, s.

This is mentioned by Burel, as a precious stone; but, as would seem, by mistake for orfraye, embroidery. V. Orfeverie.

ORPIE, ORPIE-LEAF, s. Orpine or Livelong, S.

ORROW, ORA, adj. 1. Not matched. Ane orrow thing is one that has not a match, where there should properly be a pair. Thus ane orrow buckle is one that wants its match.

2. Applied to any thing that may be viewed as an overplus, or more than what is needed, what may be wanted, S.

Baith lads and lasses busked brawly,

3. Not appropriated, not employed. Ane orrow day, a day on which one has no particular work, a day or time distinguished from others by some peculiar circumstance.

It's wearin' on now to the tail o' May, An' just between the beer-seed and the hay; As lang's an orrow morning may be spar'd, Stap your wa's east the haugh, an' tell the laird. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 4. 5.

When my whistle's out of use,
And casting orrow through the house,
Gin she be sae for ony while,
She never plays till she get oil.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 334.

4. Not engaged. A person is said to be orrow, when he has no particular engagement, when he does not know well what to make of himself, S. "An orrow man, a day-labourer," Sibb. i. e. one who has not stated work.

5. Occasional, accidental, transient. Ane orrow body, an occasional visitor, one who comes transiently, or without being expected, S.

There are two Su.G. words, to either of which this may perhaps claim affinity, especially as the s. is sometimes pron. orrels. These are urwal, rejectanea, any thing thrown away, offals, and urfiall. The first is from ur, a particle, denoting separation, and wal-ia to choose; quae post selectum supersunt; Ihre. Isl. aur, and Norw. or, also signify any thing small, a unit, the beginning of a series. Su.G. urfiall is a strip of a field separated from the rest; lacinia agri separata, separata pars terrae. It is properly a portion of a field, which is possessed by a different person from him who has the rest of the ground; or which is situated beyond the limits of the farm. The term frequently occurs in the Sw. laws; and, according to Ihre, is formed from ur already mentioned, and fiall, asser, tabula, from its resemblance to a piece of wood, in the same manner as the inhabitants of Upland call a very small portion of a field spiall, i. e. a chip, S. a spail. V.

Orrows, Orrels, s. pl. Things that are supernumerary; such as fragments of cloth that remain after any piece of work is finished. Orrels is used in Ang.

Perhaps the word has a more simple etymon than that given above, q. over alls. What attention this may deserve, I leave to the learned reader to determine. The l not being retained in the pronunciation of all, in any provincial dialect, renders it very doubtful.

To ORT, v. a. 1. Applied to a cow that refuses, or throws aside its provender, S.

2. To crumble. A child is said to ort his bread, when he breaks it down into crumbs, S.B.

3. Metaph. used to denote rejection in whatever sense, S.O. The lasses nowadays ort nane of God's creatures; the reflection of an old woman, as signifying that in our times young women are by no means nice in their choice of husbands.

It seems radically the same with E. orts refuse, remains, what is left or thrown away; which Junius derives from Ir. orda, a fragment. But although orts is used in this sense S.B., worts is the pron. S.A., as in the Prov. "E'enings worts are gude morning's foddering."

This orthography suggests a different origin. A.S. wyrt, weort, E. wort, MoesG. aurt, Isl. Dan. urt, Su.G. oert, herba; the provender of cattle consisting of herbs. The term may have originally denoted the provender itself.

OSNABURGH, s. The name given to a coarse linen cloth manufactured in Angus, from its resemblance to that made at Osnaburgh in Germany, S.

"A weaver in or near Arbroath (about the year 1738 or 1739) having got a small quantity of flax unfit for the kind of cloth then usually brought to market, made it into a web, and offered it to his merchant as a piece on which he thought he should, and was willing to, lose. The merchant, who had been in Germany, immediately remarked the similarity between this piece of cloth and the fabric of Osnaburgh, and urged the weaver to attempt other pieces of the same kind, which he reluctantly undertook. The experiment however succeeded to a wish." P. Forfar, Statist. Acc. vi. 514.

OSZIL, OSILL, s. "The merle or thrush; also the blackbird;" Gl. Compl.

"The lyntquhit sang contirpoint, quhen the oszil yelpit." Compl. S. p. 60.

In Gl. it is added; "Sometimes the ouzel, merle and mavis, are all distinguished from each other;

Syne, at the middis of the meit, in come the menstrallis,

The Maviss and the Merle singis, Osillis, and Stirlingis;
The blyth Lark that begynis,
And the Nychtingallis."

Houlate, iii. 6. MS.

The ingenious Editor has not observed that they are also distinguished in the very passage which he quotes, Compl. S. For a few lines before the author had said;

"Than the maueis maid myrtht, for to mok the merle."

Burel also distinguishes them.

The Merle, and the Mauice trig,
Flew from the bush quher thay did big,
Syne tuke thame to the flicht;
The Osill and the Rosignell, &c.

Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 28.

Sibb. also defines the oszil, "the thrush or blackbird." But it appears that this bird is mentioned by our writers, as different from both. It seems to be the Ring-ouzel of Pennant, which, he says, is "superior in size to the blackbird;" the Turdus torquatus of Linn. In Angus, the ouzel, or as it is called the oswald or oswit, is viewed as different both from the blackbird and thrush. From its similarity, however, osle, the A.S. name of the blackbird, seems to have been given to it, in common with the other.

OSTYNG, s. Encampment; or, the appearance of an army in camp.

Madem, he said, rycht welcum mot ye be, How plessis yow our ostyng for to se?

Wallace, viii. 1235. MS.

Edit. 1648, hoasting. V. OIST.

OSTLEIR. s.

So wunnit thair ane wundir gay ostleir Without the toun, intil ane fair maneir; And Symon Lawder he was callit be name. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 67.

Mr. Pinkerton says that this simply signifies householder. But, from the connexion, it appears that he is mistaken. Besides, in our old laws, Hostillare, q. v. seems invariably to signify an innkeeper. OSTRYE, OSTRE', s. An inn.

" Draco sive Araneus minor; I take it to be the same our fishers call the Otter-pike or sea-stranger." Sibb. Fife, p. 127.

It is also called the Otter-pike, A. Bor. V. Penn. $oldsymbol{Z}$ ool. p. 136.

OUER, Ouir, Ovir, adj. 1. Upper, as to situation, uvir, S.B.

-Thay sall vnder thare senyeory Subdew all hale in thirldome Italy, And occupy thay boundis orientale, Quhare as the ouir se flowis alhale.

Doug. Virgil, 245. 39. It is often used as a distinctive designation of a place, S. "Here stands-an herd's house called Blair-bog, and then Romanno, Grange Over and Nether."

Pennecuik's Tweeddale, p. 13. 2. Superior, with respect to power. The uvir hand, the upper hand, S.B.

The samyn wyse enragit throw the feildis Went Eneas, as victor with ouer hand.

Doug. Virgil, 338. 20,

I sall the send as victor with ouir hand.

Ibid. 456. 40.

It is sometimes written as a s... And Ramsay wyth the ovyrhand Come hame agayne in his awyne land. Wyntown, viii. 38. 165.

Sw. oefre, oefwer, id. used both as to place and power; oefwerhand, the upper-hand or advantage, Seren. (pron. as our uvir) from oefwer, prep. super, Gr. vare, MoesG. ufar, A.S. ofer, Alem. ubar, upar, Germ. uber, Belg. over. Whether this be a derivative, is doubtful. Ihre, explaining the inseparable particle oefwer, as denoting superiority, and also excess, remarks its affinity, both in sound and sense, to Su.G. of. V. Uver. Hence, OUERANCE, s. Superiority, dominion.

"And I trow surely that he sched his precious blude,—to mak peace betuix his father and vs, to slay syn and dede quhilk had ouerance apon vs." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme 1552, Fol. 104, b. OUFR, prep. Over. V. Our.

OUER ANE, adv. In common, together. Al ouer ane, all together, q. in a heap above one.

Freyndis, certane duelling nane In thys cuntre haue we, bot al ouer ane Walkis and lugeis in thir schene wod schawis. Doug. Virgil, 188. 41.

All samyn lay thare armoure, wyne, and metis, Baith men and cartis mydlit al ouer une. Ibid. 287. 9. V. also 303. 37.

To OVERBY, v. a. To procure indemnity from justice by money.

Thay luke to nocht bot gif ane man have gude; And it I trow man pay the Justice fude: The theif ful weill he wil himself overby;

Quhen the leill man into the lack wil ly. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 12.

A.S. ofwer and byg-an, to buy. To OUERFLETE, v. n. To overflow, to over-

-With how large wepyng, dule and wa Ouerflete sal al the cieté of Ardea.

Doug. Virgil, 460. 53. Tent. over-fleit-en, superfluere. V. Fleit. OUERFRETT, part. pa. "Decked over, embellished or beautified over; from A.S. over super, and fraet-wan ornare, exornare," Rudd.

The varyant vesture of the venust vale Schrewdis the scherand fur, and every fale Overfrett with fulyeis, and fyguris ful dyuers-Doug. Virgil, 400. 39.

"Embroidered," Ellis, Spec. E. P. i. 389. OUERHEDE, adv. Wholly, without distinction;

S. ourhead or overhead, in the gross.

The sevis mixt ouer ane, and al ouer hede, Blak slike and sand vp poplit in the stede.

Doug. Virgil, 303. 37. Quhil that he sang and playit, as him behuffit,— In quhite canois soft plumes joyus, Become ouerhede in liknes of ane swan.

Ibid. 321. 9.

Rudd. by mistake views it as a v. rendering it " covered over."

One is said to buy a parcel of cattle ourhead, when he gives the same price for every one of them, without selection.

Su.G. oefwer hufud is used in the same sense; upon an average, one with another, Wideg. I am doubtful, however, whether in the last quotation it may not signify, metamorphosed; A.S. ofer-hiuad, transfiguratus.

To OUERHEILD, v. a. To cover over.

That riche branche the ground ouerheildis. Doug. Virgil, 169. 45. V. Heild. To OUERHIP, v. a. To skip over, to pass by or

The thre first bukis he has ouerhippit quite. Doug. Virgil, 5. 48. Also, 6. 14. It occurs in O.E.

And right as mayster Wace says. I telle myn Inglis the same way. For mayster Wace the Latyn alle rymes, That Pers ouerhippis many tymes.

R. Brunne, Prol. xcviii.

Pers is Peter Langtoft; R. Brunne having followed Wace, and not Langtoft, in the first part of the Chronicle, because Wace renders Geoffrey of Monmouth more fully. V. HIP, v.

OVERLY, adj. Careless, superficial, remiss in the performance of any action, S.

A.S. overlice, incuriose, negligenter. This adj., it appears, must have been formerly used in E., as Somner mentions overly in rendering the A.S. word. OUERLYAR, s. One who oppresses others, by taking free quarters, synon. sornar.

"It is statute and ordanit, for the away putting of Sornaris, ouerlyaris, & maisterfull beggaris, that all officiaris-tak ane inquisitioun at ilk court, that thay hald, of the foirsaid thingis." Acts Ja. II. 1449. c. 21. Edit. 1566.

A.S. ofer-ligg-an, to overlay.

OUERLOFT, s. The upper deck of a ship. Thare hetchis and thare ouerloftis syne thay Plankis and geistis grete square and mete Into thair schippis joynand with mony ane dint. Doug. Virgil, 153. 2.

This, however, may signify the sparedeck or orlope, as Sw. oefwerlopp does.

OUERMEST, adj. The highest.

And of thare top, betwix thare hornes tuay, The ouermest haris has sche pullit away.

Doug. Virgil, 171. 40.

A.S. ofer-maest is used differently. For it signifies, "very or over great, superfluous," Somner. OVER-RAGGIT, part. pa.

And I cum thair my tail it will be taggit; For I am red that my count be over-raggit. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 38.

This is overlooked in Gl. It is used in the same sense, I suspect, with E. overhale, as denoting the re-examination of an account; either from Dan. over and rag-er, synon. with E. hale; or as allied to overregn-er to calculate, to cast up an account, q. over-reckon.

OUER-RAUCHT, pret. Overtook.

- Quhat gift condigne Will thou gyf Nisus, ran swift in ane ling? And wourthy was the fyrst croun to have caucht, War not the samyn mysfortoun me ouer raucht, Quhilk Salius betid.

Doug. Virgil, 139. 28. It is evidently the pret. of Ouer-reik, used in a figurative sense.

To OUER-REIK, v. a. To reach or stretch over. Ane hidduous gripe, with bustuous bowland beik,

His mawe immortall doith pik and ouer reik. Doug. Virgil, 185. 20.

To OUERSET, v. a. 1. To overcome, in whatever way.

Thy grete pieté and kyndnes weile expert Vnto thy fader causit the and gert This hard viage vincus and ouer set.

Doug. Virgil, 189. 23. 2. To overpower; as the effect of weight, sorrow, age, &c. - He was ouerset, And of the heuv byrdin sa mait and het,

That his micht failyeit. Doug. Virgil, 417. 16.

- Dido had caucht thys frenessy, Ouerset with sorow and syc fantasy.

Ibid. 116. 35.

In form it most nearly resembles A.S. ofer-settan, superponere. But in sense it corresponds to ofer-swith-an vincere, praevalere, from ofer and swith-ian, from swith, nimis, as denoting too much force, more than one can resist. Su.G. saett-ia, cum impetu ferri, is perhaps allied. Forset, S. its synonyme, q. v. seems formed from A.S. forswith-

Aukwardly formed from over and Lat. volv-o.

OUGHTLINS, OUGHTLINGS, adv. In the least

Had I been thowless, vext, or oughtlins sour, He wad have made me blyth in half an hour.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 6. From A.S. auht, awiht, ought, and lingis term.

It is also used as a s., but improperly.

Wow! that's braw news, quoth he, to make fools fain;

But gin ye be nae warlock, how d'ye ken? Does Tam the Rhymer spae oughtlings of this? Or do ye prophesy just as ye wish?

Ramsay's Poems, i. 53.

O.Fr. oultrage, Ital. oltraggio, L.B. ultrag-ium. ence oultrageus, ibid. p. 124, outrageous. This Hence oultrageus, ibid. p. 124, outrageous. word has been traced to Lat. ultra beyond, as denoting excess in conduct.

OUR, OURE, OUER, OWRE, prep. 1. Over, across, beyond, &c. S.

The thrid wes ane That rowyt thaim our deliverly, And set thaim on the land all dry.--Thai brocht thaim our, and all thair thing. Barbour, iii. 428. 434. MS.

Doug. generally writes ouer, which is merely A.S. ofer, E. over, pron. soft.

Wenis thou vnerdit now, and thus vnabil, Ouer Styx the hellis pule sic wise to fare? Doug. Virgil, 176. 32.

2. Denoting excess, too much, S. Sometimes used as a s. " A (i. e. all) owres spills, Proverb. Scot. i. e. omne nimium vertitur in vitium;" Rudd.

OURBELD, part. pa. Covered over.

Than to ane worthé lith wane went thay thair

Allied perhaps to Su.G. byl-ia, aedificare. V. Beld.

To OURCOME, v. n. To revive, to recover from a swoon, or any malady, S.

We stert till him, and went he had bene doid, And claucht him up, withouttin wourdis mair, And to the dure delyverly him bayr. And, for the wynd was blawand in his face, He sone ourcome, intill ane lytill space. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 84. Sick, sick she grows, syn after that a wee, When she o'ercame, the tear fell in her eye.

Ross's Helenore, p. 26. OURCOME, O'ERCOME, s. The overplus, S. He that has just enough can soundly sleep; The o'ercome only fashes fowk to keep.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 67.

OURE-MAN, s. Supreme ruler. V. OUERS-

To OURGAE, Ourgang, v. a. 1. To overrun. He's ourgane with the scrubbie, S. overrun with scurvy.

2. To exceed, to surpass, S.

"The pains o'ergangs the profit;" Ramsay's S.

3. To obtain the superiority, to master. Let na your bairns ourgang ye; Suffer not your children to get the mastery over you, S.

And Vanity got in among them, To give them comfort for their care,

For fear that Truth should clean ourgang them. Many's Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's 'Poems, p. 94.

"The shots o'ergae the auld swine;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 32. Does shots signify pigs?

"Your gear will ne'er o'er-gang you;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 88.

In this sense A.S. ofer-gan is used; superare, vin-

4. To pass, to elapse, in a neut. sense. The ourgane year, the past year, S. A.S. ofer-gan, Sw. oefwer-gaa, excedere; A.S.

ofer-gan, praeteritus.

To OURHARL, v. a. To "overcome;" Pink. literally, to drag over.

Quha wait bot syne ourselfs thai will assaill? Auld fayis ar sindill faythful freyndis found: First helpe the halfe, and syne ourharl the haill, Will be ane weful weirfair to our wound.

Maitland Poems, p. 162.

This refers to a violent seizure of property, in consequence of the inability of the owner to defend it. V. HARL.

To OURHYE, v. a. To overtake. The sowmer man be followed wondyr fast, Be est Cathcart he our hyede thaim agayne. Wallace, iv. 81.

From A.S. ofer and hig-an, to make haste, q. to make haste beyond that of him whom one pursues.

In the following passage it seems doubtful, whether the sense be not, master, obtain the superiority

He gaiff ane schout, his wyff came out, Scantlie scho micht ourhye him: He held, scho drew; for dust that day Mycht na man se ane styme

To red thame. Peblis to the Play, st. 15,

It may be from A.S. ofer-hycg-an, superare, praccellere.

OURIE, adj. Chill; also, shivering. V. Oorie. OURLAY, OWRELAY, s. A cravat, S. It formerly signified a neckcloth worn by men, which hung down before, and was tied behind.

He falds his owrelay down his breast with care, And few gangs trigger to the kirk or fair. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

OURLORD, OURE-LARD, s. An over-lord, a superior.

Full sutailly he chargit thaim in bandoune, As thar our lord, till hald of him the toun. Byschope Robert, in his tyme full worthi, Off Glaskow lord, he said, that we deny Ony our lord, bot the gret God abuff. Wallace, i. 64. 67. MS.

Thare is nane dedlyke Kyng wyth crowne, That oure-lard til oure Kyng suld be In-til supervorytè.

Wyntown, viii. 5. 75.

V. LAIRD.

OUR-LOUP, OURLOP, s. An occasional trespass of cattle on a neighbouring pasture.

"In Scotland, an occasional trespass of cattle on a neighbouring pasture is still termed ourlop." Lord Hailes, Annals, i. 319.

A.S. ofer-leop-an transire; whence O.E. ourlop, a transgression; sometimes the mulct paid for it.

OURNOWNE, s. Afternoon.

In a dern woode thai stellit thaim full law; Set skouriouris furth the contrè to aspye: Be ane our nowne thre for rydaris went bye. Wallace, iv. 432. MS.

OUR QUHARE, adv. V. Quhare, and AL-QUHARE

OURRAD, leg. OURRAD. Too hasty, rash. To byd our King castellys I wald we had; Cast we down all, we mycht be demyt our rad. Wallace, vii. 526. MS.

A.S. ofer, nimis, and hraed, celer, velox; to hraede, praeceps. Hraede has sometimes this sense by itself.

Early editors, not understanding the expression, have substituted a solecism used by the vulgar in modern times, too bad.

OUR-RYCHT, OURYCHT, adv. Awry. Schir John Sinclair begowthe to dance, For he wes new cum out of France. For ony thing that he do micht, His ay futt yeid ay ourycht, And to the tother would not gree.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 94. As signifying, beyond what is right or proper; Fland. over-recht, praeposterus, praeter rectum;.

To OURRID, v. a. To traverse. Bot Schyr Edduard, his brodyr, then Wes in Galloway, weill ner him by, With him ane other cumpany, That held the strenthis off the land. For thai durst nocht yeit tak on hand

Till our rid the land planly.

Barbour. v. 471. MS.

A.S. ofer-ryd-an, equo aut curru transire, to ride over; Somner.

To OURSYLE, OUERSYLE, OVERSILE, v. a. 1. To cover, to conceal.

Tisiphone that furious monstoure wilde In bludy cape revestit and ouer sylde, Sittis kepand but slepe bayth nycht and day That sory entré and this porche alway.

Doug. Virgil, 183. 40.

Yea, rather righteous Heav'n let firy blast Light on my head that thou on Sodom cast, Ere I my malice cloke or oversile, In giving Izac such a counsell vile.

Hudson's Judith, p. 10. V. SILE.

2. This word has also been rendered to beguile, to circumvent.

I have not met with any satisfying proof of its being used in this sense. This, however, may be from oversight. If really thus used, it should perhaps be viewed as radically different, and be deduced from A.S. ofer, and syll-an, to purchase.

OURTANE, part. pa. Overtaken; used metaph. to denote that one is overtaken by justice, or brought to trial by an assize for a crime.

Schir Gilbert Maleherbe, and Logy, And Richard Broune, thir thre planly War with a syis than ourtane; Tharfor thai drawyn war ilkane, And hangyt, and hedyt tharto; As men had demyt thaim for to do.

Barbour, xix. 55. MS.

To tak one in our, is still a vulgar phrase, signifying to call one to account, to bring one to a trial, to bring to the bar, S.

OURTHORT, OWRTHORT, OUERTHWERT, OURTHOURTH, OUERTHORTOURE, prep. Athwart, across; overthwart, E. athort, S. ourter, Dumfr. Lying ourter, lying in an oblique position; a corr. of ouerthortore.

A loklate bar was drawyn ourthourth the dur. Wallace, iv. 234. MS.

The Scottis men held the tothir way; Syne owrthort to that way held thai.

Wyntown, viii. 31. 50:

Rycht ouer thwert the chamber was there drawe A trevesse thin and quhite, all of plesance.

King's Quair, iii. 9.

Foryettis he not Eurialus luf perfay, Bot kest him euin ouerthortoure Salius way. Doug. Virgil, 138. 45.

A.S. thwyres signifies obliquely, transversely, from thweor, thwar, perverse, distorted; Belg. dweers, id., whence overdwars, overdweers, athwart, cross. The S. word, however, in all its ancient forms, has most affinity to the Sw., being merely twert oefwer, id. inverted. Overthortoure is redundant; the prep. being used both in the beginning and end of the word, q. oefwer twert oefwer. V. Thortour.

OURTILL, prep. Above, or beyond.

He hes so weill done me obey,

Ourtill all thing thairfoir I pray

That nevir dolour mak him dram.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 93.

It seems formed, although ankwardly, from A.S. ofer, above, and till, to.

To OUR-TYRVE, OWR-TYRWE, v. a. To turn upside down.

Reprowyd scho suld noucht be for-thi Of falshede, or of trychery, For til owrtyrwe that is abowe.—
Bot qwhen thai trayst hyr all thair best, All that is gywyn be that Lady, Scho owrtyrwys it suddanly.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 39. 46.

"Isl. tyrv-a, overwhelm; so we say now, topsy-turvy," Gl.

To OURWEILL, v. a. To exceed, to go be-

Abbotis by rewll, and lordis but ressone, Sic senyeoris tymis our weill this sessone, V poun thair vyce war lang to waik.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 187.

It is printed owerweil. Sibb. has taken an undue liberty with this passage. Not understanding the term ourweill, he has thus aftered the line;

Sic senyeoris types our weill this sessone. Chron. S. P. iii. 161.

I have given it according to the Bannatyne MS., which, if my memory does not deceive me, he also consulted. Our term seems to be from A.S. oferwyll-an, superfluere, ebullire, effervescere, (" to boyle over," Somn.), used figuratively. V. Abbot of Vnressone.

OURWORD, OWRWORD, OWERWORD, s. 1.
Any word frequently repeated, in conversation or otherwise, S.

Her een sae bonie blue betray, How she repays my passion; But prudence is her o'erword ay, She talks of rank and fashion.

Burns, iv. 30.

2. The burden (of a song), the words which are frequently repeated.

Ay is the owrword of the gest,

Giff thame the pelf to part among thame.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 104.

The starling flew to his mother's window stane, It whistled and it sang;

And aye the ower word of the tune Was--" Johnie tarries lang."

Minstrelsy Border, i. 80.

OUSEL, s. V. OUZEL.

OUSEN, Owsen, pl. Oxen, S. A. Bor. He has gowd in his coffers, he has owsen and kine; And ae bonie lassie, his darling and mine. Burns, iv. 25.

hos.

MoesG. auhsne, id. auhs, bos.

Ousen MILK, sowens, or flummery not boiled; used in various parts of S. by the common people, instead of milk, alongst with their pottage; Dumfr.

This designation is of the ludicrous kind; q. the milk of oxen, because they give none; this being used only as a substitute for milk, when nothing better can be had.

OUT, Owt, adv. "Fully, completely." Gl. Wynt.

Vol. II.

He wantyd na mare than a schowt. For til hawe made hym brayne-wode owt.

Wyntown, viii. 17. 6.

He also uses all owte.

Severyus sone he wes but dowte, Bot he wes were than he all owte.

Ibid. v. 8. 172.

V. ALL OUT.

To OUT, v. a. To lay out, to expend; or, to find vent for.

"But alas! I can scarce get leave to ware my love on him: I can find no ways to out my heart upon Christ; and my love, that I with my soul bestow on him, is like to die in my hand." Rutherford's Lett. P. 1. ep. 135.

Isl. yt-a is nearly allied in sense, as signifying to cheapen; liceor, G. Andr. Its proper sense, I suspect, is to vend. Both it and our v. are from the prep. ut, out, q. to make a commodity find its way without. Hence, OUTING, s. A vent for commodities.

" My peace is, that Christ may find sale and outing of his wares in the like of me, I mean, for saving grace." Ibid. ep. 178.

OUT-ABOUT, adv. Abroad, out of doors, in the open air. S.

But ae night as I'm spying out-about, With heart unsettled aye, ye needna doubt, Wha coming gatewards to me do I see, But this snell lass, that came the day with me? Ross's Helenore, p. 88.

OUT-BY, adv. 1. Abroad, without, not in the house, S.

2. Out from, at some distance, S.

She met my lad hauf gates and mair I trow, And gar'd her lips on his gee sic a smack, That well out-by ye wad have heard the crack. Ross's Helenore, p. 108.

Perhaps from A.S. ut ex, extra, and by juxta; as the term implies that one, although not immediately at hand, is not far distant.

To OUT-BRADE, v. a. To draw out; also, as v. n. to start out. V. BRADE.

OUTBREAKING, s. 1. An eruption on the skin, S.

2. Used in a moral sense, to denote the transgression of the law of God, S.

" If I could keep good quarters in time to come with Christ, I would fear nothing; but oh! I complain of my woful outbreakings." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 162.

It is generally applied to open sins, and those especially of a more gross kind.

To OUTBULLER, v. n. To gush out with a gurgling noise, S.

The blude, outbullerand on the nakit sword, Hir handis furth sprent.

Dou g. Virgil, 123. 28. V. Buller.

OUTCAST, s. A quarrel, a contention, S.

"I tremble at the remembrance of a new out-cast betwixt him and me; and I have cause, when I consider what sick and sad days I have had for his absence." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 162.

OUTCOME, OUTCOME, OUTCUM, s. 1. Egress, the act of coming out.

> And we sall ner enbuschyt be, Quhar we thar outecome may se.

Barbour, iv. 361. MS.

2. Termination, issue, S.

And for the outcome o' the story, Just leave it to your ni'bour tory.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 13.

3. Increase, product, S.

Belg. uytkomst is used in all these senses; a coming forth, exit; event, issue; product; from uytkomen, to come out.

That season in which the day begins to lengthen.

Yet, quoth this beast, with heavy chear, I pray you, Duncan, thole me here, Until the outcum of the year, And then if I grow better, I shall remove, I you assure, Tho' I were nere so weak and poor, And seek my meat in Curry moor, As fast as I can swatter.

Mare of Collingtoun, Watson's Coll. i. 43.

OUTFALL, s. A quarrel, a contention, S. out-

"The feuds at that tyme betwixt the familys of Gordone and Forbes wer not extinguished, therfor they rysed a cry, as if it hade been upon some outfull among these people, crying Help a Gordon, a Gordon, which is the gathering word of the friends of that familie." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 330. Append.

Teut. wtvall signifies a hostile excursion, a sally; Sw. utfall, id. To fall out, E. to quarrel.

OUTFIELD, adj. and s. A term applied to arable land, which is not manured, but cropped till it is worn out, so as to be unfit for bearing corn for some years, S. V. INFIELD.

OUTFORNE, pret. v.

O happy star at evening and at morne,

Quhais bright aspect my maistres first outforne!

O happy credle, and O happy hand,

Quhich rockit her the hour that scho wes borne! Montgomery, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 494.

It seems to signify, brought forth, or caused to come forth; from A.S. utfuer-an egredi, exire, used obliquely. Thu utfore; tu egressus est.
OUTGAIT, OUTGATE, s. 1. A way for egress; used in a literal sense.

Baith here and thare sone vmbeset haue thay The outgatis all, thay suld not wyn away. Doug. Virgil, 289. 50.

2. A way of deliverance or escape; used with respect to adversity or difficulty of any kind.

He falleth in the hands of ane terrible pest: and death is so present to him, that he seeth no out-Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. F. 6, b.

- "It bringis contempt to our Soveraine Lordis authoritie, and castis the parties, havand their causes in proces-in great doubt, quhen they finde not ane out-gait, to have their causes decided quhair they are intented." Acts Ja. VI. 1579. c. 92, Murray. OUTGANE, part. pa. Elapsed, expired, S.

"It is ordanit, that na hors be sauld out of the realme, quhill at the leist thay be thre yeir auld outgane, vnder the pane of escheit of thame to the king." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 34. Edit. 1566.

OUT-HAUAR, OUT-HAUER, s. One who carries or exports goods from a country.

"That of ilk pundis worth of wollin claith had out of the realme, the King sall haue of the out-hauar for custume ii. s." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 44. Edit. 1566. Out-hauer, Skene. V. HAVE.

OUTHIR, conj. Either. V. OTHIR.

OUTHORNE, s. 1. The horn blown for summoning the lieges to attend the king in feir of "That all maner of men, that hes land or gudis, be reddy horsit and geirit, and efter the faculte of his landis and gudis, for the defence of the realme, at the commandement of the Kingis letters be bailis or outhornis." Acts Ja. II. 1456. c. 62. Edit. 1566. c. 57. Murray.

Perhaps the blowing of a horn, by a post who carries the mail, is to be viewed as a relique of this ancient custom.

2. The horn blown by the king's mair or messenger, to summon the lieges to assist in pursuing a fugitive.

- "Gif it happinnis the Schiref to persew fugitouris with the Kingis Horne as is foirsaid, and the countrie ryse not in his supporte, thay all or parte herand the Kingis Horne, or beand warnit be the Mairis, and followis not the outhorne,-ilk gentilman sall pay to the King vnforgeuin xl. s. and ilk yeman xx. s." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 109. Edit. 1566. c. 98. Edit. Murray.
- 3. The "horn of a sentinel or watchman to sound alarm," Gl. Sibb.

Fra I be semblit on my feit, The outhorne is cryde. Thay rais me all with ane rout, And chasis me the toun about; And cryis all with ane schout, 'O traytor full tryde!'

Maitland Poems, p. 198.

i. e. the alarm is sounded; unless there be an allusion to the practice of proclaiming a man to be a rebel, and making him an outlaw, by putting him to the horn. V. Horn.

OUTHOUSE, s. An office-house of any kind, attached to a dwelling house; as a stable, cowhouse, cellar, &c. S. Sw. uthus, id. OUTLAY, s. Expenditure, S.

"It is one which accumulates yearly in value, without an yearly outlay of expence." P. Dunkeld, Perths. Statist. Acc. xx. 437.

Sw. utlagg-a, to expend; whence utlaga, tax; utlagor, expenditure.

OUTLAK, prep.

Reuth have I none, outlak fortoun and chance, That mane I ay persew both day and nicht.

King Hart. ii. 52.

Left by Mr. Pinkerton as not understood. But if not an error of some copyist for out-tak, except, it may be synon.; from out and lack, or Belg. uyt and lack-en. There seems to have been an old redundant word of this formation, especially as inlaik is still commonly used both as a v. and s. V. next word.

This agrees with the rest of the passage. "I have no sorrow, or cause for repentance, except what may arise from the common accidents of life."

For reuth here does not signify compassion. OUT-LAIK, OUT-LACK, s. "The superabundant quantity in weight or measure;" Gl. Sibb. OUTLER, adj. Not housed; a term applied to cattle which lie without during winter, S.

The deil, or else an outler quey

Gat up an' gae a croon.

Ross's Helenore, p. 43.

OUTLYER, OUTLAIR, s. A stone not taken from a quarry, but lying out in the field in a detached state, S.

Teut. wt-leggher is used in a sense somewhat analogous. It denotes a stationary ship, one fixed to a particular place for watching the enemy, as opposed to those which lie in a harbour.

OUT-THE-GAIT, adj. Honest, fair, not double, either in words or actions; q. one who keeps the straight road, without any circuitous course,

OUT OUR, OUT-OWRE, adv. 1. Over, across,

S. from out and ower, over.

And thai had, on the tothyr party, Bannok burne, that sua cumbyrsum was, For slyk and depnes for to pas, That thar mycht nane out our it rid. Barbour, xiii. 353. MS.

2. Out from any place; Stand outour, stand back, S. OUTOUTH, prep. Out from. V. OUTWITH. OUTQUENT, part. pa. Extinguished, spent. .

To OUT-RED, v. a. 1. To disentangle, to extricate.

2. To finish any business, S.B.

And what the former times could not outred, In walls and fowsies; these accomplished.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 94.

Isl. utrett-a, id. perficere negotium. V. Red. Outred, s. 1. Rubbish, what is cleared out, S. 2. Clearance, finishing, S.B.

Had of the bargain we made an outred, We'se no be heard upon the midden head, That he's gueed natured ony ane may see.

Ross's Helenore, p. 85.

OUTREYNG, s. Extremity, irremediable calamity.

For had thair owtrageouss bounte Bene led with wyt, and with mesur, Bot giff the mar mysawentur Bene fallyn thaim, it suld rycht hard thing Be to lede thaim till owtreyng.

Barbour, xviii. 182. MS.

Fr. oultrer, outrer, to carry things to an extremity; from Lat. ultra.

OUTSCHETT, part. pa. Shut out, excluded. That Garritoure my nimphe unto me tald, Was cleipit Lawtie keipar of that hald, Of hie honour: and thay pepil outschett.

Palice of Honour, iii. 56.

OUTSHOT, s. A projection, in a building, S. Sw. utskiutande, id. skiut-a ut, to project, Belg. uytschiet-en, id.

OUTSIGHT, s. Goods, furniture or utensils, out of doors; as insight denotes what is within the house, S. V. INSIGHT.

OUTSPECKLE, s. "A laughing-stock."
"Whae drives thir kye?" can Willie say,

"To mak an outspeckle o' me?"

Minstrelsy Border, i. 103.

The something to be spoken out or abroad. For I question if speckle here has the same origin as in Kenspeckle, q. v.

OUTSPOKEN, adj. Given to freedom of speech, not accustomed to conceal ones sentiments, S.

OUTSTRIKING, s. An eruption on the skin, S.

OUTSUCKEN, s. 1. The freedom of a tenant from bondage to a mill; or the liberty which he enjoys, by his lease, of taking his grain to be ground where he pleases. It is opposed to the state of being thirled to a mill, S.

2. The duties payable by those who are not astricted to a mill, S.

"The duties payable by those who come voluntarily to a mill are called outsucken, or outtown multures." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. Tit. 9. s. 20.

It is also used as an adj.

The rate of outsucken multure, though it is not the same every where, is more justly proportion.

ed to the value of the labour than that of the insucken; Ibid. V. Sucken, Insucken.

OUT TAK, OWTAKYN, OWTANE, prep. 1. Except.

Bot off thair noble gret affer, Thar service, na thair realté, Ye sall her na thing now for me; Owtane that he off the barnage That thiddir come tok homage.

Barbour, ii. 185. MS.

Here it is used elliptically, as if an adv.

And schortlye every thyng that doith repare,
In firth or feild, flude, forest, erth or are,
Astablit lyggis styl to sleip and restis—
Out tak the mery nychtyngale Philomene,
That on the thorne sat syngand fro the splene.

Doug. Virgil, 450. 10.

This seems literally tane or taken out, as out tak, take out. V. Divers. Purley, i. 433.

"Every man that leveth his wyf, out teke cause of fornicaciown, makith hir to do lecherie." Wiclif, Matt. 5.

In alle Bretayn was nouht, sithen Criste was born,
A fest so noble wrouht aftere no biforn,
Out tak Carleon, that was in Arthure tyme,
Thare he bare the coroune, thereof yit men ryme,
R. Brunne, p. 332.

Gower uses out-takyn in the same sense, Conf. Am. Fol. 25. a.

2. Besides, in addition.

The Erle off Murreff with his men,
Arayit weile, come alsua then,
In to gud cowyne for to fycht,
And gret will for to manteyme thair mycht.
Owtakyn thair mony barownys,
And knychtis that of gret renowne is Come with thair men, full stalwartly.

Barbour, xi. 232. MS.

This word is evidently formed in the same manner with Belg. uytgenomen, Germ. ausgenomen, except, from uyt, aus, out, and neem-en, nehm-en, to take. I need scarcely mention E. except as an example of the same kind; Lat. ex from, and capere to take.

OUTTERIT, pret.

Bot Talbartis hors, with ane mischance, He outterit, and to rin was laith.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, †594, B. i. a. Utterit, Edit. Pink. "Reared?" Gl. Perhaps literally, "would not keep the course," from Fraultrer. V. Outreyng. Outré, however, was a term used in chivalry, denoting any atrocious injury. V. Dict. Trev.

OUTWAILE, OUTWYLE, s. Refuse, a person or thing that is rejected; properly, what is left after selection, S.

He gave me once a divine responsaile,
That I should be the floure of loue in Troy;
Now am I made an vnworthy outwaile,
And ail in care translated is my joy.

Henrysone's Test. Creseide, Chaucer, p. 182. Fol. ii. c. 1.

To OUTWAIR, v. a. To expend.

To get sum geir yet maun I haif grit cair,
In vanitie syn I man it outwair—

Woun be ane wretche, and into waistrie spent.

Arbuthnot, Maitland Poems, p. 151.

V. WARE, v.

OUTWITH, OWTOUTH, WTOUTH, prep. 1. Without, on the outer side, denoting situation. So written, says Rudd., to distinguish it from without, sine.

"The Carmelite freris come at this tyme in Scotland, and ereckit ane chapell of our lady outwith the wallis of Perth to be thair kirk." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 16.

It occurs in the same sense in our old Acts. V. Peile, v.

2. Outwards, out from.

And off his men xiiii, or ma, He gert as thai war sekkis ta Fyllyt with gress; and syne thaim lay Apon thair horss, and hald thair way, Rycht as thai wald to Lanark far, Octouth quhar thai enbuschyt war.

Barbour, viii. 448. MS.

3. Separate from.

"This mentioun of David placed here, is to let the King see, that the readines of his comfort flowed from the Messias, to wit, Jesus Christ, from whom al true comfort flowed, and out-with whome there is nather comfort nor consolation." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. D. 5. a.

This word is not, as Rudd. conjectures, from out and with. The oldest orthography is that of Barbour, wtouth, (V. the adv.) which both in form and signification agrees to Sw. utaat, pron. utot; outwards, exteriora versus; Seren. Aat is a prep. signifying, towards; as aut hoeger, towards the right hand; aut oester, towards the East, eastward. Verel. writes the Sw. prep. aath, uthi. V. At, Ind. Scytho-Scand.

I have observed no word in A.S. formed like outwith or utouth. It may be merely without, A.S. withutan, inverted. As written outouth, however, the last syllable resembles the A.S. prep. oth, respecting place, and used as synon. with Su.G. aat. "Thou shalt spread abroad, from eastdaele oth westdaele, and from suthdaele oth northdaele; from the east quarter towards the west, and from the south quarter towards the north;" Gen. xxviii. 15. It occurs likewise in the composition of some A.S. verbs, in which its meaning seems to have been overlooked; as ut-oth-berstan, clam aufugere, perhaps rather fugere ad extra, S. to flee outwith; ut-oth-fleon, id. Oth, in the examples given, is synon. with the prep. with, versus. V. Dounwith, and Withoutyn.

OUTWITH, adv. 1. Out of doors, abroad, S.
Colin her father, who had outwith gane,
But heard at last, and sae came in him lane,
As he come in, him glegly Bydby spy'd;
And, Welcome Colin, mair nor welcome, cry'd.

Ross's Helenore, p. 83. 84.

2. Outwards.

As he awisyt now have that done; And till thaim wtouth send that sone, And bad thaim herbery that nycht, And on the morn cum to the fycht.

Barbour, ii. 299. MS. S. '' Yet we say, farthir outwith, or inwith, for more to the outward or inward," Rudd.

OUZEL, OUSEL, s. A term still used in some places for the Sacrament of the Supper, Peebles.

This has evidently been retained from the days of Popery, being the same with E. housel, A.S. husl, id. the term anciently used to denote the sacrifice of the Mass; Isl. husl oblatio, from MoesG. hunsl a sacrifice. Armahairtida wiljau, jah ni hunsl; I desire mercy and not sacrifice; Matt. ix. 10. This term, as Ihre has observed, began to be applied to the Sacrament of the Supper, when men began to view it as a sacrifice for the quick and the dead. He deduces hunsl from hand, hond, the hand, and saljan to offer; which word, according to Junius, is properly applied to sacrifices, and corresponds to Gr. ou, as in Joh. xvi. 2. Hunsla saljan Gotha, to offer sacrifice to God. A.S. hunsl is sometimes used in the same sense, particularly by Aelfric. V. Mareschall. Observ. in Vers. A.S. p. 480. According to Seren., E. handsel, hansel, is radically the same with MoesG. hunsl, as denoting the act of offering the hand, for the confirmation of a contract. From hunsl is formed hunslastaths, an altar, i. e. the stead or place of sacrifice.

OWE, prep. Above.

Thar mycht men se rycht weill assaile, And men defend with stout bataill; And harnys fley in gret foysoun; And thai, shat owe war, tumbill down Stanys apon thaim fra the hycht.

Ibid. vii. 10. 273.

Mr. MacPherson mentions umast uppermost, as if he viewed it as coming from the same root. This is evidently from ufe, A.S. ufemest. He refers also to A.S. oth-hebban to extol or raise up; uthwita, a philosopher, f. as knowing above others, and Sw. utmer upper, vo. Mer, Ihre. It is not improbable that owth is a corr. of owe, or of its root ufe. V. Owe.

OWTING, s. An expedition.

2. Used in a looser sense for the arm. To leid by the oxtar, to walk arm in arm; in which sense the vulgar still say, to oxtar ane, or, to oxtar ane anither, S.

Sum with his fallow rownis him to pleis, That wald for envy byt aff his neis, His fa him by the oxtar leidis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 40. st. 3. Four inch aneath his oxter is the mark, Scarce ever seen since he first wore a sark. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 120.

The words used in this sense, in the Northern languages, differ considerably in form, yet evidently acknowledge the same origin. A.S. oxtan, Teut. oxel, Isl. oxlum, Belg. oksel, Germ. achselgrube. Whether these have been borrowed from Lat. axilla, id. seems doubtful.

OZELLY, adj. Dark of complexion; resembling an ousel, Loth. V. Oszil.

This letter was unknown in the ancient Scandinavian dialects, B alone being used. Later Runic writers have therefore distinguished it from B, merely by the insertion of a point; and have reckoned by far the greatest part of the words, written with P, as exotics. In Alem. and Franc. B and P are used in common. This accounts for the frequent interchange of these letters in S. and other dialects derived from the Gothic.

Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. ii. 10. V. Pob. PACE, s. 1. The weight of a clock; generally used in pl. S.

2. Used metaph.

"I am sure, the wheels, paces, and motions of this poor church, are tempered and ruled not as men would, but according to the good pleasure and infinite wisdom of our only wise Lord." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 130.

PACK, adj. Intimate, familiar, S. Nae doubt but they were fain o' ither; An' unco pack an' thick thegither.

Burns, iii. 3.

Twa tods forgathert on a brae, Whar Leithen spouts, wi' dashin din; At Huthope owre a craggy lin. They war auld comrades, frank an' free, An' pack an' thick as tods cou'd be.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 89.

Probably a cant word from E. pack, "a number of people confederated in any bad design," Johns. Su.G. pack, faex hominum, proletariorum turba; which Ihre traces to Isl. piaeckir, circumforanei, from piökur fasciculus. Its connexion with thick, however, would suggest that it properly signifies closeness or contiguity, from Germ. Su.G. packe, sarcina, pack-en, pack-a, constringere, to pack, E. PACKALD, s. A pack, a burden.

"O how loth are we to forego our packalds and burdens, that hinder us to run our race with patience." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 131.

Belg. pakkaadie, luggage. L is often inserted in S. words; as in fagald, a faggot.

PACKHOUSE, s. A warehouse for receiving goods imported, or meant for exportation, S. Teut. packhuys, promptuarium mercium.

PACKMAN, s. A pedlar, a hawker; properly, one who carries his pack or bundle of goods onhis back, S.

Hence the title of a poem satyrising the Romish religion, supposed to be wrote by Robert Semple, towards the beginning of the reign of James VI.;-The Packman's Paternoster.

Mr. Tooke gives a different etymon. "Pack, patch, and page," he says, " are the past participle pac, (differently pronounced, and therefore differently written with k, ch, or ge,) of the Anglo-Saxon verb Paecan, Paeccean, to deceive by false appearances—As servants were contemptuously called Harlot, Varlet, Valet, and Knave; so were they called Pack, Patch, and Page. It is now used in pl. S., as A. Bor. " pays, strokes; threshing, beating." Gl. Grose.

The v. pay being used, E. as signifying to beat, it seems uncertain whether it be an oblique sense of Fr. pay-er, or from C.B. puyo, pulso, verbero; Lhuyd. Mr. MacPherson mentions Gr. mai-a, id.

Thus the Roy, and his rout, restles thai raid Ithandly ilk day, Our the mountains pay. To Rome tuke the reddy way Withoutin mare abaid.

But both here and in st. 18. he has altered pay to gay, without any intimation. The Alps, here referred to, could scarcely be denominated the mountains gay. The phrase seems to signify, "the mountainous region," or "the country of the mountain;" from Fr. pais a region or country.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 156.

It seems uncertain whether Isl. piaeck-a, to beat by a repetition of small strokes, minutim tundere, be a cognate term. This may perhaps be retained in E. peck, pick, as Seren. thinks; although Jun. traces the latter to Teut. beck, the beak.

It can scarcely be doubted that our term is allied to Isl. pak, Su.G. paak, fustis, baculus; especially as it more generally suggests the idea of being beaten with a cudgel.

Fr. payen, from Lat. pagan-us. It is generally known, that, after the Christian religion was embraced by the Roman emperors, those, who were most warmly attached to the heathen worship, retired from the cities to the more remote villages, that they might be more secure from disturbance in the celebration of their rites. Hence the name Pagani came generally to be given to the heathen, from Lat. pag-us, a village.

PAYNTIT, Bannatyne Poems, p. 149. st. 4.

The poet, having warned James V. against covetousness, under the metaph. of a cramp in his hands, adds:

Bot quhen thyn handis ar bundin in with bandis, Na surrigiane may cure thame, nor confort: Bot thow thame oppin payntit as a port, And frely gife sic guds as God thé send.

The allusion to an harbour plainly shews that Sibb. is right in viewing this, to which he undoubtedly refers, as " printed erroneously for paytent."

Play with thy peir, or I'll pull thee like a paip; Go ride in a rape for this noble new-year.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 5.

Is there an allusion here to the artificial papingay, which is often shot to pieces by the archers, one wing after another? Or, to the play of paips among children? V. next word.

PAIP, s. A cherry-stone picked clean, and used in a game of children, S. Three of these are placed together, and another above them. These are called a castle. The player takes aim with a cherry-stone, and when he overturns this castle, he claims the spoil.

The term pip is used in E., for the seed of apples, and perhaps of other fruit; probably from Fr. pepin, the seed of fruit.

This game is played with nuts in Germany. Teut. hoopkens setten, hoopkens schieten, castellatim nuces constituere; Kilian.

It was probably borrowed from the Romans. Ovid seems to allude to a game of this kind, as played with nuts. Et condis lectas, parca colona, nuces. Has puer aut certo rectas diverberat ictu, Aut pronus digito bisve semelve petit. Quatuor in nucibus, non amplius, alea tota est; Cum sibi suppositis additur una tribus.

Nux Elegia, ver. 72.

Other copies read dilaminat, dilaniat, &c. for diverberat.

Playing with nuts, in a variety of ways, was common with boys among the Romans. Hence the phrase, nuces relinquere, to become a man, to be engaged in manly employment. Isaac Casaubon mentions playing with nuts, by erecting castles or pyramids, as used in his time. His language scems to apply to England, where he resided during the latter part of his life. "Ludebant pueri nucibus variis modis, quorum nonulli hodieque pueris in usu: ut cum in pyramidem quatuor nuces extruuntur." Comment. ad Persii Satyr. p. 51. It is remarkable, that the same game prevailed among the Jews, so early at least as the time of Philo. He accordingly says; "Id qui parum intelligit, è lusu quodam vulgato cognoscet. Qui nucibus ludunt, solent positis prius in plano tribus quartam super imponere, in formam pyramidis." De Mundi Opific. p. 8.

Off his awin deid ilk man sal beir the pais, As pyne for syn, reward for werkis rycht. Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 117. st. 8.

Lord Hailes renders this "strokes, chastisement." This is indeed the sense in which the term is still generally used, S. pays. But here it seems to have greater latitude, including both punishment and reward, according to the distribution in the line immediately following; as Fr. pay-er signifies to requite, in whatever way.

To PAIS, PASE, v. a. 1. To poise, to weigh. Bot full of magnanymyte Eneas Pasis there weekt als lichtlie as an fas, Thare hidduous braseris swakkand to and fro. Doug. Virgil, 141. 16.

2. To raise, to lift up.

Chr. Kirk, st. 13.

It is evidently synon, with E. poise, as denoting the caution requisite in attempting to raise any heavy and inert body.

Part. pr. paysand, pasand, and part. pa. paysit, pusit, are both used in the sense of ponderous, weighty, loaded.

PAYS-EGGS. Eggs dyed of various colours, given to children, and used as toys, at the time of Easter, S.; Dan. paaske-egg, coloured eggs; Wolff.

The same custom prevails A. Bor.

" Eggs, stained with various colours in boiling, sometimes covered with leaf-gold, are at Easter presented to children at Newcastle, and other places in the North. They ask for their Paste Eggs, as for a fairing, at this season.—Paste is plainly a corruption of Pasche, Easter." Brand's Popul. Antiq.

Su.G. paskegg has the same signification. The learned Ihre, when defining this term, gives the following account of its origin. "These eggs," he says, " are so called, which being variously ornamented, and stained with different colours, were anciently sent as presents at the time of Easter, in memory of the returning liberty of eating eggs, which, during the continuance of Popery, were prohibited during Lent." He adds, that, according to the accounts of travellers, the Russians present eggs to whomsoever they meet, and even to the Czar himself, in token of honour.

Brand, speaking of this custom, says; "Thisis a relique of Popish superstition, which, for whatever cause, had made eggs emblematic of the Resurrection, as may be gathered from the subsequent prayer, which the reader will find in an "Extract from the Ritual of Pope Paul the Vth, made for the use of England, Ireland, and Scotland."—

"Bless, O Lord, we beseech thee, this thy creature of Eggs, that it may become a wholesome sustenance to thy faithful servants, eating it in thankfulness to thee, on account of the Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ."

"In the Romish Bee-hive, Fol. 15. I find the following catalogue of Popish superstitions, in which the reader will find our Paste Eggs very properly included:—'Many traditions of idle heads, which the holy Church of Rome hath received for a perfit serving of God: as fasting Dayes, Yeares of Grace, Differences and Diversities of Dayes, of Meates, of Clothing, of Candles, Holy Ashes, Holy Pace Egges and Flames, Palmes and Palme Boughes, Staves, Fooles Hoods, Shells, and Bells, (relating to Pilgrimages), licking of rotten Bones, (Reliques), &c. &c."

"The ancient Egyptians," Brand adds, "if the resurrection of the body had been a tenet of their faith, would perhaps have thought an egg no improper hieroglyphical representation of it. The exclusion of a living creature by incubation, after the vital principle has lain a long while dormant or extinct, is a process so truly marvellous, that if it could be disbelieved, would be thought by some a thing as incredible, as that the Author of Life should be able to reanimate the dead."

Dr. Chandler, in his Travels in Asia Minor, describing the celebration of Easter in the Greek Church, says; "They made us presents of coloured eggs, and cakes of Easter bread." This accounts for the custom in Russia mentioned above; as the Christian inhabitants of that empire adhere to the ritual of the Greek Church.

Brand thinks that the Romanists borrowed this custom from the Jews, who, among other rites, in celebrating their Passover, set on the table a hard egg, because of the bird Ziz. Popul. Antiq. p. 310—312.

But it is probable that this custom had its origin in the times of heathenism. The egg, it is well known, was a sacred symbol in the pagan worship. Eggs are still used at the feast of Beltein, which had undoubtedly a heathen origin, and which is yet commemorated within a few weeks of Easter. V. Beltein.

Teut. pasch-eyeren, ova paschalia; Kilian; Germ. oster-ey, ovum paschale. Wachter (vo. Ey,) assigus the same origin as Ihre; only he adds, that the Oriental Christians are wont to abstain from eggs during Lent, as well as the Catholics. "The play of eggs," he says, "among children, puerorum oviludium, in Sweden at this time, is well known."

PAYSYAD, s. A contemptuous designation conferred on a female, who has nothing new to appear in at Easter; originating from the custom which prevails with those adhering to the Episcopal forms, of having a new dress for this festival, S.B.

From Pays, Easter, and probably yad, an old mare, q. one who appears in old or worn-out garments.

Although the term Paske is used by R. Brunne and some other O.E. writers, this feast has been generally known in England by the name of EASTER, a word which, as far as I have observed, was never used in S. till towards the close of the reign of James VI., when he attempted to enforce the observation of holidays. But although it is to us a foreign word, it may be acceptable to the reader to know somewhat of its origin; especially, as it will appear that this, like Yule, Beltane, and most of the names of our feasts, may be traced to heathenism.

By the Anglo-Saxons, after they had embraced Christianity, the festival observed at the time of the Passover was called Easter, whence this term is retained in our translation, Acts xii. 4, although Wiclif uses Pask. The ancient Germans called it Oostrun; and their posterity have changed the term to Ostern, Osterdag; also written Ooster, Oosteren, and Oosterdagh. Thence, the Pascal-lamb is, in their version, often rendered Oster lamb. The month of April was called, by Charlemagne, Ostermonat, i. e. the month of the Passover; and some still retain the term. "Eosturmonath," says Bede. "which is now rendered the Paschal month, formerly received its name from a goddess (worshipped by the Saxons and other ancient nations of the North) called Eostre, in whose honour they observed a festival in this month." "From the name of this goddess," he adds, "they now design the Paschal season, giving a name to the joys of a new solemnity, from a term familiarized by the use of former ages." De Temporum Ratione, ap. Hickes' Thesaur. p. 211.

It is surprising that Wachter should hesitate as to the justness of Beda's testimony in this instance. But the national pride of this learned writer seems hurt at the idea of the Germans, after they had embraced Christianity, retaining the name of a heathen deity for denominating one of their principal feasts. He wishes, therefore, to derive the term, by transposition of the letters, from urstend, resurrection. He is so zealous in the cause, as to produce a variety of arguments against the testimony of Bede.

"Before the Christian aera," he says, "all the months were anonymous, being only numbered." He refers, in proof of this, to what he elsewhere says on Weinmonat, the name of October: and there he quotes the testimony of Somner, that October was called Teothamonath, or the tenth month, as being the tenth from January. From this single instance, perhaps conjoined with what he has not mentioned, that January was by the Anglo-Saxons called Forma monath, or the First month, he concludes that all the rest must once have been designed in a similar manner. "This name," he says, "well deserves to be marked by antiquaries, as affording a manifest indication that the most ancient Germans did not name, but only numbered, the months."

This reasoning is very far from being logical. From particular premises he deduces an universal conclusion. It is certainly strange to infer, from a list of names, in which only two can be found favourable to his hypothesis, that all the rest were originally of this description. Besides, he does evident injustice to the venerable Anglo-Saxon. For in the passage Bede evidently gives the names of the months that were in use with his forefathers. He is here speaking of the Antiqui Anglorum populi; and in the period referred to, the name of October was not Teothamonath, but Winter-fullith.

not Teothamonath, but Winter-fyllith.

His next argument is, that "it evidently was not customary with the Saxons to give the names of their deities to the months." But this argument has as little weight as the former. For although it should be found that the name of no other month contained any reference to their religious rites, it would not follow that therefore the name of this month did not. In the account, however, given by Bede, we find that February was denominated Sol-monath, or the month of the Sun. As the Sun was worshipped by the ancient Goths, being the same false deity called Freij and Odin, it might seem probable at least that this worship was retained by the Anglo-Saxons, and that the month of February was therefore consecrated to him. V. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 157. It has indeed been inferred from the language of Bede that this was the case; Ibid. p. 168. But from the laws of Canute, in reference to England, it would appear that this idolatry was not extinct in his time. For in one of them we find these words. "Adorationem barbaram plenissime vetamus. Barbara est autem adoratio, sive quis idola (puta gentium divos) Solem, Lunam, Ignem, Profluentem, Fontes, Saxa, cujuscunque generis arbores lignave coluerit." V. Keysler, ibid. p. 18. Wachter himself, in another place, quotes this as a proof that the Sun was worshipped by the ancient Saxons; vo. Sonne, p. 1542. Several of the other months were named from their idolatrous worship. September was called Haleg-monath, or the holy month, because of the religious rites performed at this season; and November received the name of Bloth-monath, because of the sacrifices then offered, as Keysler observes, ibid. p. 368.

Wachter further argues: " It is not probable that the first converts to Christianity among the Saxons would borrow a name for a sacred festival from an idol, or that the first preachers of the gospel would incline to permit it." He indeed admits that the Saxon divines, by what indulgence he cannot say, permitted the use of the pagan names of the days of the week: but argues very oddly, that it may reasonably he denied that they granted the same indulgence with respect to this Festival, until there be better proof that they had such a deity as Eostre. The reasoning here is so flimsy as scarcely to require any answer. It is a fact universally admitted, that, among the various nations of the North, the first Christians, however erroneously, thought it necessary to please the heathen so far as to retain the ancient names of their festivals.

His only remaining argument is, that " concerning this imaginary goddess the whole of antiquity is silent." Let us inquire whether this assertion be well-founded.

Bochart observes that the name Aestar or Easter alludes to Astarte, the goddess of the Phenicians. Geograph, Sacr. Lib. i. c. 42. p. 751. The similarity of the name, if not of the worship, might be the reason why Tacitus says that part of the Suevisacrificed to Isis. Pars Suevorum et Isidi sacrificat. De Mor. German. In the island of Cyprus, Isis was worshipped as Venus; Apul. Metam. ap. Banier Mythol. l. vi. c. 1. There seems to be no good reason, indeed, to doubt that Astarte was the Isis or Venus of the Egyptians. Plutarch and Lucian, among the ancients, held this opinion: and it has been espoused by many learned moderns, as Selden, Marsham, Le Clerc, &c.

A festival, of the same kind with that of Osiris and Isis in Egypt, was celebrated by the Phenicians in honour of Adonis and Venus, or Tammuz and Astarte; and at the very same season. Both first mourned for the dead, and rejoiced as if there had been a resurrection. But, as Banier observes, the most decisive circumstance is, that the Egyptians, during the celebration of their festival, used to set down upon the Nile an osier basket, containing a letter, which, by the course of the waves, was carried to Phenicia, near Byblos; where it no sooner arrived, than the people gave over their mourning for Adonis, and began to rejoice on account of his return to life. Thus, there was a fellowship between Egypt and Phenicia, in the observation of this festival.

The Venus of the Northern nations was called Frea, or Frigga. She was also worshipped as the Earth. Hence some have remarked the similarity between Frea and Rhea, the name by which the Lydians and other people of Asia Minor acknowledged the Earth. As Isis was the wife of Osiris, and Astarte of Adonis, Frea was the wife of Odin, one of the great gods of the Northern nations. The name Odin may be originally allied to Adon, Lord, both in Hebrew and Phenician; whence the name of the Greek Adonis. Baal and Adonis seem to have been originally the same, as both words have the same meaning. Thence Baal and Ashtaroth are joined together, Judg. ii. 13. signifying the deities otherwise called Adonis and Venus.

As there is such similarity between the name of Odin and that of Adonis, there is no less between another by which Frea was known and that of Astarte. For she was called Astargydia, or the goddess of love. Hence an Icelandic writer says; Venus er their, kalla Astargydia; i. e. "Venus, whom they call the goddess of love." And another; Grimm vopn Astargydia sa fa ei lett sar; " The cruel weapons of Venus do not make slight wounds." V. Verel. Ind. vo. Astargydia. Astar is the word still used in Isl. for love. Mallet observes, that "it appears to have been the general opinion, that she was the same with the Venus of the Greeks and Romans, since the sixth day of the week, which was consecrated to her under the name of Freytag, Friday, or Frea's day, was rendered into Latin, Dies Veneris, or Venus's day." Northern Antiq. c. 6.

This idea is confirmed by an observation of Ihre; that April was called Easter monath from Eostra, the Venus of the ancient Saxons, in the same manner as this month is supposed to have been called Aprilis, by the Romans, from Aphrodite, one of the appellations of Venus. The name Astargydia is not petuliar to the Isl. It is used in the same sense in Sw.; in which language Astril denotes Cupid; Astarhita, amor venereus, and Astuin, amasius.

Loccenius asserts that Ostern or Easter, among the ancient Germans, received its name from Venus, who was adored by them under the name Astara; and that they derived this false worship from the Assyrians. "Veneris festum quondam Germani circa ferias Paschales celebrarunt. Unde festum Paschatis adhuc, ut olim in gentilismo Ostern ab Astara Venere, quae Britannis Easter vel Aestar dicitur, appellant. Astara autem olim quoque fuit Assyriorum Venus, cujus idololatria ab illis ad Germanos migravit." Antiquit. Sueo-Goth. p. 24.

It is not improbable that the name Frea may have been originally derived from Heb. parah, fructuosus, fecundus fuit, foetavit; or parahh, germinavit, whence pirhah, puberty; as Heb. Ashtoreth and Goth. Astar may both be traced to Heb. ashtarah, foetus; fecundation being supposed to be peculiarly under her charge. Ihre, however, derives Astargydia and its cognates from Su.G. Ast, love.

Isl. astrad is rendered, consilia ex amore profecta; as would appear from ast, love, and rad, counsel. Olai Lex. Run. Estrid, Wormius observes, is a female name still frequently used among the Danes; Fast. Danic. p. 42. Astrid, the same name, according to a different orthography, occurs very often in Sturleson's Heimskringla, or History of the Norwegian kingdom.

We have already observed, that Isis was undoubtedly the Venus of the Egyptians, as their Osiris corresponded to Adonis, the Odin of the North. Now, it deserves to be mentioned, that Odin was also called As, which in pl. is Asir, the designation given to the principal gods of the Northern nations. The Etruscans called God Aesar, Esar, although some view this also as a pl. noun; the Arabs Usar. The Egyptians denominated the Sun Esar, Eswara, Useri, Oisori, Oisheri. In the Hindostanee, the name of God is Eeshoor; in the language of the Aire Coti, or ancient Irish, Aosar. V. Ihre, vo. As, and Vallancy's Prospect. vo. Ass. " Astoreth," says the latter ingenious writer, " pronounced Astore, is applied to a beautiful female, a Juno, a Venus." Introd. p. 15. PAITHMENT, s. The ground, the soil. In Aperill among the schawis scheyn, Quhen the paithment was clad in tendyr greyn; Plesand war it till ony creatur, In lusty lyff that tym for till endur. Wallace, viii. 935. MS.

This seems to be merely a metaph. use of pavement, E. pron. paidment, S.B.

PAITLATTIS, s. pl.

Sic skaith and scorne, sa mony paitlattis worne, Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 13. Lord Hailes seems to view it as the same with E. partlet, which, he says, is a woman's ruff. According to Skinner, the latter is rather a napkin or neck-kerchief. It might perhaps be some sort of bandeau for the head, as Fr. patellette denotes the broad piece of leather which passes through the top of a headstall, Cotgr. Arm. patelet, however, according to Bullet, is a bib for children. Sibb. explains it ruff, viewing "Fr. poitral (pectorale) a cover for the neck and breast," as the origin.

This surely cannot be a corruption of O.E. pal.

toke, apparently a cloak or mantle.

This word is perhaps from Su.G. palt, a garment; though immediately from Fr. palletoc, "a long and thick pelt, or cassock," Cotgr.

PALAD, s. The head. V. PALLAT. PALAVER, s. Idle talk, unnecessary circumlocution, S.

One might suppose some affinity to Fr. baliverner, "to cog, foist, lie, talk idly, vainly, or to no purpose;" Cotgr. The similarity of MoesG. filuwaird, multiloquium, is also singular. The term has, however, been generally deduced from Hisp. palabra, a word, whence Fr. palabre, used as parole, Cotgr. This, it is supposed, is originally a Moorish term. Fr. palabre is used to denote the disgraceful present, which must be made to the petty Mohammedan princes, on the coast of Africa, on the ground of the slightest umbrage, real or pretended, which is taken at any of the European powers. To PALAYER, v. n. To use a great many unnecessary words, S. "to flatter," Grose's Class. Dict. To PALE (a cheese), v. a. To make an incision into a cheese by a circular instrument, for the purpose of judging of its quality by the part scooped out, S.

Of pall and of pillour that proudly wes picht. Gawan and Gol. ii. 1.

For the banket mony rich claith of pall

Doug. Virgil, 33. 14.

It seems to be the same word that is written peal. "A peal of gold set with precious stones,—was hung about the king's head, when he sat at meat." Pitscottie, p. 155.

He "also commanded her to take what hingers, or tapestry-work, and peals of gold and silk, as she pleased, or any other jewels in his wardrobe." Ibid. p. 159.

Rudd. seems to derive it from Lat. pall-ium; but Sibb. more properly refers to "Scand. pell, panni serici genus; Theot. phelle, pannus pretiosus, pfeller, purpura, Fr. palle, poile." Isl. pell, indeed, denotes cloth of the most precious kind; textum pretiosum; pells kluedi, vestes ex tela ejusmodi, pretio et materia maximi aestimata. It is sometimes distinguished from silk; Klaeddos i pell oc silki, Verel. Ind. Wachter, however, thinks that it properly signifies silk, C.B. pali, id. Hence, he subjoins, L.B. pallium pro panno serico saepissime apud Cangium, et in Glossa Peziana; vo. Pfell.

O.Fr. paile denoted cloth of silk.

PALLALL, PALLALLS, s. A game of children. in which they hop on one foot through different triangular spaces chalked out, driving a bit of slate or broken crokery before them. From the figures made, it is also called the beds, S.

This seems to be originally a game of this country. In E. at least it is called Scotch hop or Hop-Scotch.

" Among the school-boys in my memory there was a pastime called Hop-Scotch, which was played in this manner: A parallelogram about four or five feet wide, and ten or twelve feet in length; was made upon the ground, and divided laterally into eighteen or twenty different compartments which were called beds; some of them being larger than others. The players were each of them provided with a piece of a tile, or any other flat material of the like kind, which they cast by the hand into the different beds in a regular succession, and every time the tile was cast, the players business was to hop upon one leg after it, and drive it out of the boundaries at the end where he stood to throw it; for, if it passed out at the sides, or rested upon any of the marks, it was necessary for the cast to be repeated. The boy who performed the whole of this operation by the fewest casts of the tile was the comqueror." Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 286.

Our word, from its form, may perhaps claim a Fr. origin.

PALLAT, PALAD, s. The head, the crown of the head or scull, S.

Maitland Poems, p. 317.

Mr. Pinkerton oddly renders this, "cut your throat."

His peilet palad and unpleasant pow,
They fulsome flocks of flies doth overflow,
With wames and wounds all blackned full of blains.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 23.

Palet is used in the same sense, O.E. Inglis-men sall yit to-yere Knok thi palet or thou pas, And mak the polled like a frere; And yit es Ingland als it was.

Minot's Poems, p. 31.

Rudd. says; "I very much incline to think that the E. pate, and the S. pallat, are originally the same." Perhaps because of its globular form, from O.E. pellet a ball, (Arm. Fr. pelote,) for which bullet is now used. A round head is called a bullethead, S.

PALLET, s.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 11.

Fr. pelotte, q. a ball of ruby.

PALLET, s. A kin, properly a sheep's skin not dressed, S.B. from the same origin with E. felt, pelt; Lat. pell-is, Belg. relt, id. Su.G. palt a garment.

PALM-SONDAY, s. The sixth Sabbath in Lent, according to the Romish ritual; or that immediately preceding Easter, S.

seem, as hand, when applied to an index.

PAMPHIL, s. A square inclosure made with stakes; also, any small house, Aberd.; apparently the same with Paffle, q. v.

To PAN, v. n. To agree, to correspond.

For say and promeis quhat they can,
Thair wordes and deides will never pan.

Maitland Poems, p. 220.

Perhaps from A.S. pan, a piece of cloth inserted into another.

PAN, s. A hard impenetrable sort of crust below the soil, S. till, ratchel, synon.

"Towards the hills; it is a light black soil, and under it an obstinate pan. Owing to this pan in some places, and the clay bottom in others, the fields retain the rains long." P. Deskford, Banffs. Statist. Acc. iv. 360.

11 In many places a black pan, hard as iron ore, runs in a stratum of two or three inches thick in the bottom of the clay, and about 8 or 9 inches below the surface, which in a rainy season keeps the water floating above, prevents early sowing, and sometimes starves the seed in the ground." P. Kilmuir E. Ross, Statist. Acc. vi. 184.

Perhaps from Teut. panne, calva, q. the skull of the soil.

PANASH, s. A plume of feathers worn in the hat.

Maitland Poems, p. 265,

Here it is used as synon. with gage, that kind of pledge which knights were wont to give, who engaged their honour that they would fight.

Belg. pand, Germ. pfand, Alem. pfant, fant, Su.G. pant, Isl. pant-ur, id. pant-a, pignorare, C.B. pan, also a pledge. Ihre thinks that Lat. pign-us has been diffused through Europe.

Schilter views pfant, arrhabo, as the root of pfennig, a penny; because it was customary to give a piece of money as an earnest.

PANDOOR, s. A large oyster, S.

"These caught nearest to the town are usually the largest and fattest; hence the large ones obtained the name of Pundoors, i. e. oysters caught at the doors of the pans. The sea water, a little freshened, is reckoned the most nourishing to oysters. This may be the reason why those caught near to the town and shore are so large. P. Preston-pans E. Loth. Statist. Acc. xvii. 70. PANE, s. 1. Stuff, cloth.

It may, however, be used in the same sense as by Holland.

A.S. pan, lacinia, pannus; "a jagge, a piece." Fr. panne de soye, stuff made of silk, S. podesoy. Lat. pann-us seems the general origin.
To PANE, v. n. To labour. V. PAYNE.

PANFRAY, s. A small riding horse.

" — Only the beast panfray (or horse) sall perteine to him, quhilk the Burges had (the time of his deceis). Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 4.

This is evidently corr. from Fr. palefroi, id. It should be read "the best panfray," melior palfred-us, Lat.

To PANG, v. a. 1. To throng, to press, S. Be that time it was fair foor days, As fou's the house could pang,
To see the young fouk ere they raise,
Gossips came in ding dang.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 271.

2. To cram, in whatever way, S.
St. Andrews town may look right gawsy,
Nae grass will grow upo' her eawsey;
Sin' Sammy's head, weel pang'd wi' lear,
Has seen the Alma Master there.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 76.
3. To cram, to fill with food to satiety, S.
Whan they had eaten, and were straitly pang'd,
To hear her answer Bydby greatly lang'd.

Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

Sibb. derives it from Sw. pung, MoesG. pugg, crumena. But the possession of a purse by no means necessarily implies that it is crammed. B and p being frequently interchanged, I would prefer O. Teut. bangh-en, in angustum cogere, premere, q. d. be-anghen, be-enghen; banghe, angustus, oppressus, Kilian.

Pang, adj. Crammed, filled with food. Thair avers fyld up all the field,

They were sae fou and pang.

PAN-KAIL, s. Broth made of coleworts hashed very small, thickened with a little oat-meal. There is no animal food, but generally a little butter, in it, S.

Formerly a superstitious rite pretty generally prevailed in making this species of broth, S.B. The meal, which rose as the scum of the pot, was not put in any dish, but thrown among the ashes; from the idea, that it went to the use of the Fairies, who were supposed to feed on it.

This bears a striking resemblance to a religious ceremony of the ancient Romans. In order to consecrate any kind of food, they generally threw a part of it into the fire, as an offering to the Lares, or houshold-gods. They were hence called Dii Patellarii. Plaut. ap. Adam's Rom. Antiq. p. 444. 445.

The Tartars, according to Marco Polo, have some similar customs. Before they eat, they anoint the mouths of their Lares, certain images which they call Natigay, with fat of their sodden flesh; and they cast the broth out of doors, in honour of other spirits, saying, that now their god, with his family, has had his part, and that they may eat and drink at pleasure. V. Harris's Voyages, i. 603.

PANNEL, s. Any person who is brought to the bar of a court for trial, S.

"The defender is, after his appearance, styled the pannel." Erskine's Instit. B. 4. T. 4. c. 90.

The word, although used by us in a peculiar sense, must be viewed as the same with panel, E. which denotes a schedule, containing the names of a jury who are to pass on a trial. Thus the phrase, panel of parchment is used; L.B. panella, probably from panne a skin, because parchment is made of skin, or paneau, a small square, from its form. Spelman unnaturally derives it from pagina, or rather pagella, supposing g to be changed into n.

PANNS, s. pl. Timber for the roofs of houses,

Aberd.

Su.G. takpanna is used in a similar sense, as denoting shingles; tegula. Ihre mentions paann scandula; viewing Su.G. paen-a, to extend, as the general origin.

PANS, PANSE.

"That—vthers simpillar, of x. pund of rent, or fyftic pundis in gudis, haue hat, gorget, and a pesane with wambrasseiris and reirbrasseiris, and gluiffis of plate, breistplate, pans and legsplentis at the leist, or gif him lykis, better." Acts Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566. c. 120. Murray.

—" Gorget or pesane, with splentis, panse of mailyie, with gluvis of plate or mailyie." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 57. Edit. 1566. c. 87. Murray.

It seems to be the pl. of pan, as signifying a cevering for the knee.

PANST, part. pa. Cured, healed.

Gif any patient wald be panst,

Quhy suld he lowp quhen he is lanst?

Cherrie and Slae, st. 36.

Curari infirmus cupiens—Lat. vers. Fr. pans-er, pens-er un malade, Thierry. Panser, pens-er, "to dress, to apply medicines," Cotgr.

PANTENER, adj.

Bot God that maist is off all mycht,
Preserwyt thaim in hys forsycht,
To wenge the harme, and the contrer,

Ibid. ii. 194. MS.

It is changed to oppressours, Edit. 1620. The term is used by R. Brunne.

A boye full pantenere he had a suerd that bote, He sterte vnto the Cofrere, his handes first of smote. Chron. p. 320.

It corresponds to Fr. ribaud. The words in the original are; Le Cofrere vn ribaud maintenant saisist, les mayns ly copayt.

Sir Robert the Brus sent to Sir Eymere, & bad he suld refus that him had forsaken ilk a pantenere.

The traytours of hise that him had forsaken,
Thei suld to the Jewise, whan thei the toun had "Rascal; ilk a pantenere, every scoundrel," Gl. Hearne.

I suspect that it is from O.Fr. pautonnier, Rom. Rose; "a lewd, stubborn, or saucy knave," Cotgr. V. Peltry.

PANTOUN, s. A slipper.

He trippet quhill he tuir his pantoun. A mirrear dance micht na man se.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 95.

Panton, as used in E., denotes a shoe for a horse, contrived to recover a narrow and hoof-bound heel;" Johns. V. Seren.

I know not the origin; but can hardly think, with Sibb., that it is contr. from pantouffel. The latter term, being used in mod. E., does not properly belong to this work. But I may observe by the way, that Schilter seems to give the most natural etymon that I have any where met with. He derives Germ. bantoffel, Alem. bain-tofel, from bain, ban, the foot, and tofel a table. Proprie notat tabulam pedibus suppositam, qualibus utebatur antiquitas.

PAP OF THE HASS, s. The uvula, S. denominated perhaps from its supposed resemblance of the nipple.

PAPE, PAIP, s. The Pope.

In-to the Pape is the honoure, The state, the wyrschype, and the cure Of the grettest governale.

King's Quair, iii. 37.

Of Caxtoun Doug. says;

His buk is na mare like Virgil, dar I lay, Than the nyght oule resemblis the papingay. Virgil, 7. 46.

Belg. papegaai, Fr. papegay, Dan. papegoy, Ital. papagallo. Becan has supposed that it is q. gaia, the jay, or spotted pie, of the pope or priest, (paepe) because of the high estimation in which this bird was held. V. Pape-gaey, Kilian.

2. The name given, in the West of S., to the mark at which archers shoot, when this is erected on a steeple, or any elevated place. Hence, it is applied to the amusement itself.

Kilwinning is the great resort for this amusement. The mark is a bird made of wood. This is called the Papingo. It is fastened on the battlement of the Abbey steeple.

"The one is a perpendicular mark, called a Popingoe. The popingoe is a bird known in heraldry. It is, on this occasion, cut out in wood, fixed in the end of a pole, and placed 120 feet high, on the steeple of the monastery. The archer, who shoots down this mark, is honoured with the title of Captain of the Popingoe. He is master of the ceremonies of the succeeding year, sends cards of invitation to the ladies, gives them a ball and supper, and transmits his honours to posterity by a medal, with suitable devices, appended to a silver arrow." P. Kilwinning, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. xi. 173.

The wings are so lightly fastened, as to be easily carried away from the body. To carry off these, is the first object. Afterwards the archers shoot at the body of the bird, and he who brings this down is pronounced victor. There is, however, another trial of skill for the captaincy during the following year.

That this has a Fr. origin, appears from the explanation given by Cotgr. of the word Papegay. "A Parrot, or popingay; also, a woodden parrot (set up on the top of a steeple, high tree or pole,) whereat there is, in many parts of France, a generall shooting once every yeare, and an exemption for all that yeare, from la taille, (the tax) obtained by him that strikes downe the right wing thereof, who is therefore tearmed le Chevalier; and by him that strikes downe the left wing, who is tearmed le Baron; and by him that strikes downe the whole popingay, who for that dexteritie, or good hap, hath also the title of Roy du Papegay, all the yeare following."

Vol. II.

This custom was formerly used in England. Stow speaks of a large close called the Tazell, let in his time to the cross-bow-makers, wherein, says he, they used to shoot for games at the Popinjay, which, Maitland tells us, was an artificial parrot. History of London, Book ii. p. 482. ap. Strutt's Games and Pastimes, p. 42, N.

''It is by several imagined to be the fry of the salmon; but Mr. Penuant dissents from that opinion.—These fish are very frequent in the rivers of Scotland, where they are called pars." Encycl. Britan. vo. Salmo.

"I mean the samlet of Berkenhout, called upone the Wye a skirling, in Yorkshire a branling, in Northumberland a rack-rider, and in Scotland a par; this singular fish is said, by some, to be a mule, the production of a salmon with a species of trout; its tail, like that of the salmon, is forked, it never exceeds eight inches, and is not to be found but in such rivers, or their branches, where salmon frequent." Prize Essays, Highland Society of S. ii. 406.

i. e. " not impair thy honour." Peyr and paire are used in O.E.

"What profiteth it to a man, if he wynne al the PARLE, s. Speech. world, and suffre peyring of his soul?" Wiclif, Matt. 16.

Your father she felled, through false behest, And hath poysened popes, and peyred holy P. Ploughman, Fol. 13, b.

This is said of Mede, or Reward, an allegorical personage, representing corruption in the different orders of society.

Rudd. views this as the same with pare in the S. phrase, to eik or pare, addere vel demere. But it is certainly from Fr. pire, pejeur, worse; from Lat. pejor. Hence also empir-er, E. impair. V. APPAIR. PARAMUDDLE, s. The red tripe of a cow or bullock, the atomasum, S.B.

To PARBREAK, v. n. To puke.

"I am one of those in whom Satan hath parbreaked, and spewed the spawne of all sorts of sinne." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 165.

V. Braik, v. and Braking. Par is oddly prefixed, as if it were a word of Fr. or Lat. origin.

PAREGALE, PARIGAL, adj. Completely equal. Yone tua saulis, quhilkis thou seis sans fale, Schynand with elike armes paregale, Now at gude concord stand and vnite.

Doug. Virgil, 195. 18. Rudd, mentions O.Fr. peregal, a word which I have not found. More naturally from Fr. par and egal, q. equal throughout. Chaucer, peregal. To PARIFY, v. a. To make equal, to compare;

To PARK, v. n. To perch, to sit down. Fr. perch-er.

Ane on the rolkis pennakil parkit hie, Celeno clepit, ane drery prophetes.

Doug. Virgil, 75. 54.

PARK, s. Improperly used for a wood; as, a fir park, S.

This is evidently from the idea of young trees being inclosed for their protection. A.S. pearroc, Su.G. C.B. park, properly denote an inclosure, whether by means of stone walls or hedges; from Su.G. berg-a, to defend, according to Wachter and Seren. The latter adds Alem. perg-an, tegere, munire. PARK, s. A pole, a perch.

For al the Tuskane menye, as here is sene, Sogrete trophee, and riche spulye hidder bryngis, On parkis richelie cled with there armyngis. Doug. Virgil, 366. 43.

Fr. perche, Hisp. perch-a, Lat. pertic-a.

A tocher's nae word in a true lover's parle, But, gie me my love, and a fig for the warl'. Burns, iv. 55.

Fr parler, speech.

PARLOUR, s. "Conversation, debate," Pink. Uprais the court, and all the parlour ceist. Palice of Honour, ii. 26.

If this be the proper sense, it is from Fr. parloire. prattling, idle discourse. But it rather signifies assembly, public conference, from parlouer, a parliament, or assembly of estates; also a public conference, one held at such an assembly. This exactly corresponds to the idea suggested by the other word, Court. PAROCHIN, s. Parish, S.

"That euery Paroch kirk, and sameikil boundes as sall be found to be a sufficient and competent Parochin theirfoir, sall have their awin Pastour, with a sufficient and reasonable stipend." Acts Ja. VI.

PARPANE, PERPEN, s. A wall in general, or a partition.

I thank yone courtyne, and yone parpane wall, Cf my defenss now fra you crewell beist.

Henrysone, Chron. S.P. i. 113.

"And what doth the multiplicatioun of sinne, bot hindreth our faith and perswasioun, and casteth a balk and a mist betwixt the sight of God & vs; and therefore the Prophet calleth it a purpane, whereby we are deprived of the sight of God quhilk wee haue in the Mediatour Christ." PARSEMENTIS, PASMENTES, PASSMENTS, s. pl. "Livery coats wrought with divers colours, or overlaid with galoons or laces," Rudd.

Twyis sex childer followis ilk ane about, In there parsementis, arrayit in armour bricht; The chiftanis warren equale of ane hicht.

Doug. Virgil, 146. 27.

Rudd. doubts, however, and apparently with reason, whether it does not rather signify partitions or divisions; especially as the phrase used by Virgil is, Agmine partito fulgent. He conjectures that it may be an error of the copier for partiment.

The word denoting livery, i. e. lace, or imitation of it, sewed on clothes, is properly written Pasments, q. v.

PARSENERE, s. A partner, colleague.

"The caus of his absens is the schortnes of tyme: and that he is denyit of his freindis & seruandis guha suld have accompanyit him to his honour and suretie of his lyfe, in respect of the greitnes of his partie." Buchanan's Detect. E. iii, b.

This excuse was offered for the absence of the Earl of Lennox, when Bothwell was tried for the murder of Darnley.

PARTY, PARTIE, adj. Party-coloured, variegated.

Thus sayand, the party popil grane Heildit his hede with skug Herculeane. Doug. Virgil, 250. 50. V. PYK-MAW. " Like Lat. varius," Rudd.

PARTICATE, s. A rood of land.

"One James Blair was taxed with one penny of the kingdom of Scotland, upon the ground of his half purticate of land, for finding or furnishing one lamp, or pot, of burning oil, before the altar of the parish church of Hawick, in time of High Mass and Vespers, all holy days of the year, in honour of our Saviour Jesus Christ, and praying for the souls of the barons of Hawick, the founders of the lamp, and their successors." P. Hawick, Roxb. Statist. Acc. viii. 526, N.

L.B. particata. (V. Skene Verb. Sign. in vo.) from pertica, a road for measuring.

PARTYMENT, s. Division, party-

And eftir that the trumpet blew ane syng. Than every partyment bownis to thare stand, And gan there speris stik doune in the land.

Doug. Virgil, 411. 23.

Fr. partiment, a parting, dividing; L.B. partiment-um, partitio, divisio.

PARTISMAN, s. A partaker, a sharer; q. parts-

2. A single place in a book, a passage.

"Attouir it is to be notit of this pas of scripture abone rehersit the seueir & rigorus sentence of almychtie God, that cumis vpon thaim quhilkis stubournlie, and proudelie dissobeyis the deliberatioun, & jugement of sic as God hes appoyntit to be jugis vpon all materis brocht in debait concerning the law of God." Kennedy of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractine, p. 16.

"Notheles he fortifiit his wickit heresy be thre score of passis of scripture allegit be hym." Ibid.

It is used, as Mr. MacPherson has observed, by R. Brunne.

Mr. MacPherson has also observed, that it has a different meaning, p. 175.

Sithen at Japhet was slayn fanuelle his stede, The romance tellis grete pas ther of his douhty dede.

As used in the two former examples, it is evidently the same with L.B. pass-us, locus, auctoritas, Du Cange; a place or passage in a work. Langland uses the L.B. word passus for dividing his Vision. In the last quotation, it may be from Fr. pas, a step or measure, q. great part.

To PASE, v. a. To poise. V. PAIS.

PASH, s. The head, rather a ludicrous term. A bare pash, a bare or bald head, S. "A mad pash, a mad-brains Chesh." Gl. Grose.

I wily, witty was, and gash, With my auld felni pauky pash.

Watson's Coll. i. 69.

pron. pessments, S.B.

'' That nane of his Hienes subjectes—use or weare—ouy begairies, frenyies, pasments, or broderie of gold, silver, or silk.' Acts Ja. VI. 1581. c. 113. V. Begairies.

2. Metaph. for external decorations of religion.

"Time, custom, and a good opinion of ourselves, our good meaning, and our lazy desires, our fair shews, and the world's glistering lustres, and these broad passments and buskings of religion, that bear bulk in the kirk, is that wherewith most satisfy themselves." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 46.

Fr. passement, lace; Teut. id. limbus intextus, fimbria praetexta;—aurea, argentea, aut serica fila intertexta, Kilian; perhaps from Teut. pass-en, to fit, to adapt; pas, fit.

To PASMENT, v. a. To deck with lace.

—" These, who being clothed in coarse rayment, are ashamed to be seene among these who are pasmented with gold." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 620. PASSINGEOURE, s. A passage-boat, a ferryboat.

It did me much mischief.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 47.

PATH, s. A steep and narrow way, S. V. PETH.

PATHIT, part. pa. Paved.

The fare portis alsua he ferlyt fast,— The large stretis pathit, by and by The bissy Tyrianis laborand ardently.

Doug. Virgil, 26, 12.

Teut. pad, semita, via trita; from pad vestigium, in its primary sense, palma pedis. This word pathit, S. properly refers to a foot-path beaten hard by the feet of passengers.

PATIENT OF DEATH, s. A throe, a struggle, one of the agonies that precede dissolution, S.

Probably corr. from passion, suffering, agony. To denote mortal agony the Fr. say, Il souffre mort et passion.

To PATIFIE, v. a. To make known, to manifest; literally, to lay open, Lat. patefio.

"Beside that commoun light, and supernaturall vnderstanding, hee hath patified him selfe to vs be ane heauenlie light, and supernaturall vnderstanding." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Sign. P. 3. a.

PATRELL, s. "The pointed, or breast leather of a horse, S. the tie," Rudd.

For every Troiane perordour thare the Kyng With purpour houssouris bad ane cursoure bryng, Thare brusit trappouris and patrellis reddy boun.

Doug. Virgil, 215. 24.

Fr. poitrail, L.Br pectorale.

Sibb. conjectures that it probably signifies "also some defensive covering for the neck of a war horse." This seems the sense in the following passage.

- Eurialus with him tursit away. The riall trappouris, and mychty patrellis gay, Quhilkis were Rhamnetes stedis harnessyng. Doug. Virgil, 288. 49.

"The poitrinal, pectoral, or breast plate, was formed of plates of metal rivetted together, which covered the breast and shoulders of the horse; it was commonly adorned with foliage, or other ornaments engraved or embossed." Grose's Milit. Antiq. ii. 260. O.E. poytrelle. V. Note, ibid. PATRON, s. A pattern.

Maistir Jhon Blayr that patron couth rasaiff, In Wallace buk brewyt it with the layff. Wallace, ix. 1940. MS.

i. e. he received the description formerly given, as sent from France. For that is here called patron, which in ver. 1908, is called descriptionne. What the E. call pattern, is in S. invariably, in vulgar language, pronounced patron. This might at first seem to be a corr, of the E. word. But the E. word is itself the corr.; from Fr. patron, id. This is merely the Fr. word, signifying a patron, a protector, as used in its secondary sense. And the transition is exceedingly natural. For nothing is more common than to propose him as a pattern, to whom we look up for patronage.

To PATTER, v. a. To repeat in a muttering sort of way without interruption, to repeat as one who has learned any thing by rote.

Sum patteris with his mowth on beids, That hes his mind all on oppressioun. Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 40, st. 3. Before the people patter and pray.

Chaucer, Rom. Rosc.

In some places of E. they yet say, in derisory language, to patter out prayers. V. PITTER-PATTER. This term has been generally and very naturally deduced from the first word of the Pater-noster: Arm. pater-en, to repeat the Lord's prayer. Seren. however mentions Sw. pactra, Arm. patter-en, as synon.; deriving them from Isl. patte, puer, q. to imitate the language of boys.

PATTERAR, s. One who repeats prayers, who is engaged in the acts of devotion.

Preistis suld be patteraris, and for the pepyl pray,

To be Papis of patrymone and prelatis pretendis. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 8.

i. e. Priests, who should, &c.

PATTERING, PATTRING, s. Vain repetition. Prudent S. Paul dois mak narratioun, Tuitching the divers leid of everie land, Sayand thair bene mair edificatioun, In five wordis that folk dois understand, Nor to pronounce of wordis ten thousand. In strauge langage, sine wait not quhat it menis: I think sic pattring is not worth twa prenis. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 17.

PATTLE, PETTLE, s. A stick with which the ploughman clears away the earth that adheres to the plough, S.

I wad be laith to rin an' chase thee, Wi' murd'ring pattle.

Burns, iii. 146. This seems the same with E. paddle, as used to denote something resembling a shovel; C.B. pattal. To PAUCE, v. n. To prance with rage; or to take long steps, in consequence of that stateliness which one assumes when irritated, S.B. perhaps from Fr. pas, E. pace; or in allusion to the capers made by a mettlesome horse.

PAUCHTIE, PAUGHTY, adj. 1. Proud, haugh-

With hairt and mynd I luif humilitie: And pauchtie pryd rycht sair I do detest; But with the heich yet man I heichlie be: Or with that sort I sall na sit in rest. Maitland Poems, p. 153.

"A boon, a boon, my father deir, A boon I beg of thee!"

"Ask not that paughty Scottish lord, For him you ne'er shall see."

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 10. When trees bear naithing else, they'll carry men, Wha shall like paughty Romans greatly swing Aboon earth's disappointments in a string.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 326.
2. Petulant, saucy, malapert. This is the more general sense, S. It suggests the idea of conduct more contemptible and disgusting than even that which flows from haughtiness; being usually applied to persons of inferior rank who assume ridiculous airs of importance.

Scarce had he shook his paughty crap, When in a customer did pap.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 456. A pauchty answer, a saucy reply. A pauchty dame, a petulant woman, S.

Perhaps Belg. pochg-en, to vaunt, to brag, is allied; ge-poch boasting, pochger a boaster.

PAVEN, PAUUAN, s. "A grave dance, brought from Spain, in which the dancers turned round one after another, as peacocks do with their tails, whence it has received its name;" Dict. Trev. i. e. Fr. parane, from paon Lat. pavo, -onis, a peacock.

We sall leir you to daunce, Within ane bonny littill space, Ane new paven of Fraunce.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 183. -" Pauuans, galyardis, turdions," &c. Compl. S. p. 102.

In Dict. Trev. a more particular account of it may be found. Dr. Johns. seems to have mistaken its nature, when, after Ainsworth, he defines it "a kind of light-tripping dance."

The ingenious Editor of the Compl. observes, that "the words pavie and paw seem to be contractions of this technical name." V. next word.

PAVIE, PAW, s. Lively motion of whatever kind, S. 1. It is used to denote the agile exertions of a rope-dancer.

"The 10 of Julii, ane man, sume callit him a juglar, playit sic sowple tricks upon ane tow, qlk wes festinit betwix the top of St. Geill's Kirk steiple and ane stair beneathe the crosse, callit Josias close heid, the lyke was nevir sene in this countrie, as he raid downe the tow, and playit sa maney pavies on it." Birrell's Diarey, Dalyell's Fragments, p. 47.

"To play sic a pavie, or paw, is a common expression in the south of Scotland;" Gl. Compl. p. 361. In this sense the Editor quotes a passage, in which paw is left by Ritson as not understood.

The durk and door made their last hour, And prov'd their final fa', man; They thought the devil had been there, That play'd them sic a paw than.

Battle of Gillicrankie, Ibid.
For some of such had play'd a pavie,
Though all the cables of the navie
In one, should pass through needles-eye,
Whiggs still would doubt their honesty.
Colvil's Mock Poem, P. i. p. 72.

3. A ridiculous or fantastic air, a mighty flourish; as in bodily motion, or in the mode of doing courtesy, S.

He was well versed in court modes, In French pavies, and new coin'd nods, And finally, in all that can Make up a compleat pretty man.

Cleland's Poems, p. 47.

"He came in with a great pavie," i. e. He entered the apartment with a great many airs. It is used to describe the manners of a fribble. V. Pawis. 3. Transferred to rage; from the violent and ridiculous motions one sometimes makes under its influence, S.

Both paw and pavie may be contr. from paven, according to the conjecture mentioned under that word. But in this case, it must have been from a misapprehension of the proper meaning of paven. I suspect, indeed, that paw is merely Fr. pas a step, and pavie, pas vif, a quick step, a lively motion, a term perhaps borrowed from the change of step in military manoeuvres.

PAUIS, PAVIS, s. 1. A large shield.

Ane balen pauis coveris there left sydis,

Maid of hart skyunis and thik oxin hidis.

Doug. Virgil, 235. 1. Caetra, Virg. Rudd. in his Gl. renders balen, "belonging to a whale." If this be the passage referred to, the only one indeed in which I have observed the epithet, he is certainly mistaken. For the caetra was a target or buckler made of the ounce's or buffaloe's skin; used by the Africans and Spaniards. Scutum loreum, quo utuntur Afri et Hispani; Serv. in Virg. Now, balen seems to signify, belonging to a skin, q. pelliceus, from Su.G. Isl. baelg, Germ. balg, a skin of any kind.

It is this kind of shield which W. Britto is supposed to describe.

Hnnc praecedebat cum parma garcio, sub qua Nil sibi formidans obsessos damnificabat Assidue, poterat nec ab illis damnificari, Asseribus latis dum parma protegit ipsum, Quam nexu taurina tegit septemplice pellis.

Philipp. Lib. 10. V. Du Cange.

2. A testudo, used in assaulting the walls of a fortified city.

The Volscaners assemblit in ane sop,
To fyll the fowsyis, and the wallis to slop:
All samyn haistand with ane pauis of tre
Heissit togiddir, above thare hedis hie
Sa surely knyt, that manere enbuschment
Semyt to be ane clois volt quhare thay went.

Doug. Virgil, 295. 5. also 1. 24.

The term pauis is extended to this, because they Vnder the volt of targis—l. 26.

"The pavais, pavache, or tallevas, was a large shield, or rather a portable mantlet, capable of covering a man from head to foot, and probably of sufficient thickness to resist the missile weapons then in use. These were in sieges carried by servants, whose business it was to cover their masters with them, whilst they with their bows and arrows shot. at the enemy on the ramparts. As this must have been a service of danger, it was that perhaps which made the office of scutifer, or shield-bearer, honourable, as the mere carrying of a helmet or shield on a march, or in a procession, partook more of the duty of a porter than that of a soldier.—Under the protection of the pavaches, workmen also approached to the foot of the wall in order to sap." Grose's Military Antiq. ii. 257.

"Pavashes—were also used at sea to defend the sides of the vessels, like the present netting of our ships of war; this defence was called a pavisade, and may be seen in the representation of antient ships." Ibid.

Hence it is mentioned as one of the means of nautical defence employed by our ancestors.

"Boitis man, bayr stanis & lyme pottis ful of lyme in the craklene pokis to the top, and paucis veil the top vitht paucsis and mantillis." Compl. S. p. 64.

Here paueis is also used as a v. Mantil is the same with Mantlet mentioned by Grose, in his description of the pavais.

Fr. pavois, Ital. pavese, L.B. pavas-ium, paves-ium, paves-is, paves-us, paves-ius, &c. Gr. B. πα-Gετζ-ιοτ. C.B. pafais. Menage, in his usual way, by a very severe distortion, derives the word from Lat. parma. V. Rudd. Gl. Borel more rationally deduces it from Ital. paveso, Sp. pavez, Fr. pave, a covering. According to Boxhorn, C.B. pafais is formed from pwys to strike, and aes a shield, because it receives the strokes. V. Wachter, vo. Puffen.

The soldiers, who carried shields of this kind were called, L.B., pavisarii, pavexarii, pavesiatores, Tho. Walsingham, Edw. III. Fr. pavessiers, pavescheurs, Froissart, iv. 13. sometimes pavoisiers.

PAUK, s. Art, a wile, S.

Prattis are repute policy and perrellus paukis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 37.

Callander refers to Belg. paiken, to coax, to wheedle; Ancient Scot. Poems, p. 19. But I find no vestige of this word in any Lexicon. V. the adj.

PAUKY, PAWKY, adi. 1. Sly, artful, S. "Arch, cunning, artful, North;" Gl. Grose.

The pauky and carle came o'er the lec, Wi' mony gude e'ens and days to me.

Callander's A.S. Poems, p. 1. Pauky, witty, or sly, in word or action, without any harm or bad designs; Gl. Rams. This word does not indeed, in its modern use, properly denote that kind of design which has a hurtful tendency. But it appears to have been softened in its signification. For there seems no reason to doubt that it is from A.S. paec-an, paecc-an, decipere, mentiri; whence paeca, deceptor. Thus it originally denoted that deception which implies falsehood, or lying. The E. terms packing, patcherie, and packe, as they are nearly allied in sense, seem to acknowledge the same origin.

-You hear him cogge, see him dissemble, Know his grosse patchery, loue him, feede him, Keepe in your bosome, yet remaine assur'd That he's a made-up villaine.

Timon of Athens.

-What hath bin seene Either in snuffes, and packings of the dukes, Or the hard reine which both of them hath borne Against the olde king.

King Lear.
On this passage Mr. Steevens observes; "Packings are underhand contrivances. So in Stanihurst's Virgil, 1582.—' With two gods pucking, one silly woman to cozen.' We still speak of packing juries." V. Divers. Purley, ii. 368.

Some have a name for thefte and bribery, Some be called crafty, that can pyke a purse,-Som lidderous, som losels, som naughty puckes, Som facers, som bracers, som make gret cracks. Skelton, p. 15. Edit. 1736.

Mr. Tooke traces these words to the A.S. verb. Had he been acquainted with our S. terms, he might justly have given them in confirmation of his ety-PAUSTIE, s. V. Poustie.

To PAUT, v. n. To paw, to strike the ground with the foot, to stamp, S. "To kick; as to paut off the bed-clothes. Yorks." Gl. Grose. The term is used metaph., in allusion to the prancing of a horse, in the following passage:

Up starts a priest and his hug head claws, Whose conscience was but yet in dead thraws, And did not cease to cave and paut, While clyred back was prickt and gald.

Cleland's Poems, p. 66.

PAUT, s. A stroke on the ground with the foot; He gae a paut with his fit, he stamped on the ground, S.

Pant seems erroneously used for paut by Kelly. "She has an ill pant with her hind foot," S. Prov., " signifying that such a woman is stubborn. Taken from cows who kick when they are milked," p. 297.

Teut. pad, patte, Sw. pota, Fr. patte, the paw of a beast, whence the idea is borrowed. Kilian mentions Gr. nates, calco, as synon.

PAW, s. Quick motion. V. PAVIE.

PAWIS, s. pl. Parts in music. Lord Hailes.

Remane with me, and tarry still, And se quha playis best thair pawis, And lat fillok ga fling her fill.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 204. From the allusion to music, or perhaps rather to dancing, it is here used for the part which one acts, in a general sense; from Fr. pas, a step. V. PAVEN, and PAVIE.

PAWN, s. A narrow curtain fixed to the roof, or to the lower part, of a bed, S. Belg. pand, a lappet, a skirt.

PAWN, PAWNE, PAWNIE, s. The peacock.

The papingo in hew Excedis birdis all; The turtill is maist trew; The pawne but peregal.

PAWNS, s. pl. The timbers, in a thatched roof, which extend from the one gable to the other; being placed under the cabers, and supporting them, Ang. synon. bougars.

Perhaps from Fr. panne, used in panne de bois, the piece of timber that sustains a gutter between the roofs of two houses, Cotgr.

PAWMER, s. A palm tree; Fr. palmier.

Hys handis maid rycht lik till a pawmer, Off manlik mak, with naless gret and cler. Wallace, ix. 1920. MS.

Naless, i. e. nails. This is a strange metaphor. But thus the Minstrel intimates that the hands of Wallace were large and well spread.

PAWMER, s. One who, in going from place to place, makes a shabby appearance, or wears a dress so threadbare as to convey the idea of poverty, S.

This has evidently had its origin from Palmer, a pilgrim who had been in the holy Land, after pilgrimages came into contempt, in consequence of the superior light of the Reformation. According to Dr. Johns., the palmer received his name from the palms which he bore, when he returned from Palestine. Seren. gives the same etymon. But Ihre deduces Isl. palmare (peregrinator. wandringman Sw. Verel.) from Su.G. palm contus, fustis. They received this name, he says, because they set out on their journey with no other provision than a staff; whence Fr. prendre le bourdon, to set out on such a pilgrimage.

Spiut, swerd, oc mangen palm, The af staden med sik baro.

Chron. Rhythm. ap. Ihre.

i. e. "They carried with them, from the city, javelins, swords, and many poles."

"Foreign writers," he adds, "commonly assert, that staves of this kind received their name from the wood of the palm tree, which was brought home [during the crusades] in token of the victory gained over the infidels." If the last assertion be true, both etymons run into one; with this difference, however, that Ihre supplies us with an intermediate link, in the use of the word palm, as transferred from the palm tree to a large staff.

To PAWMER, v. n. To go from place to place, in an idle way, without any determinate object, PAWMIE, PANDIE, s. A stroke on the hand with the ferula; a word well known in schools, S. from Lat. palm-a, the palm of the hand; synon. Luffie, q. v.

To PEAK, PEEK, v. n. 1. To peep, to speak with a small voice resembling that of a chicken, S.

2. To complain of poverty, S. synon. peenge. Hence the prov. phrase; "He's no sae puir as he peaks."

Isl. puk-ru, insusurrare, occulte agitare, is perhaps a cognate term. Hence puk-r mussitatio, oc-culta factio, G. Andr.

PEAK, s. A triangular piece of linen, used for binding the hair below a child's cap or woman's toy, Ang. probably denominated from its form as resembling a peak, or point of a hill.

as resembling a peak, or point of a hill.

PEARIE, s. That instrument of play used by boys, S. in England called a pegtop.

It seems to have been named from its exact resemblance of a pear. The humming-top of E. is in S. denominated a French pearie, probably as having been originally imported from France.

PEARLIN, s. A species of lace, made of thread, S. Then round the ring she dealt them ane by ane, Clean in her pearlin keek and gown alane.

Ross's Helenore, p. 116.

-We maun hae pearlins, and mabbies, and cocks. Song, Ibid. p. 137.

It is most probably the same that is meant in the following statute.

"That no person of whatsoever degree, shall have pearling, or ribbening, upon their ruffes, sarkes, napkins, and sockes: except the persons before priviledged. And the pearling, and ribbening,—to be of those made within the kingdome of Scotland." Acts Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25. Murray.

This is distinguished from "gold-smiths worke, stones, and pearles," in the next paragraph. PEAT-MOW, s. The dross or dust of peats, S.B.

"Our great gilligapous fallow o' a coach-man turned o'er our gallant cart amou' a heap o' shirrels an' peat-mow." Journal from London, p. 3.

Perhaps allied to Su.G. mo, terra sabulosa, et prae ariditate sterilis. V. Mowe.

PEATSTANE, s. The stone at the top of the wall of a house, which projects, and with which the angle towards the chimney begins, S.

PECE, s. A vessel for holding liquids.

And vtheris (quhilk war ordanyt for sic notis)
The warme new blude keppit in coup and pece.

Doug. Virgil, 171. 47.

It occurs in Ywaine and Gawin.

To PECH, PEACH, (gutt.) v. n. To puff, to labour in breathing, to pant, S. hech, synon.

-Quhair sic wer wont brauely to mak thame bowne,

With Lord or Laird to ryde to burrowis towne; Quhair sic wer wont at all games to be reddy, To schuit or loup, for to exerce thair body; Now mon thay work and labour, pech and pant, To pay thair Maisters maillis exorbitant.

L. Scotland's Lament. Fol. 5, b.

This term expresses the sound emitted from the breast, which indicates oppression or great exertion.

-Straight a grumbletonian appears,

Peching fou sair beneath a laid of fears:—
"Wow! that's braw news," quoth he, "to make fools fain."

Ramsay's Poems, i. 53.

He peching on the cawsey lay, O' kicks and cuffs weel sair'd.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 29.

"He will tye the burthen of them on their owne backes, whilest they grone and peach." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 188.

Sibb. views this as formed from the sound. But it is radically the same with Sw. pick-a, to pant, Seren. Dan. pikk-er. These verbs properly denote the palpitation of the heart; Germ. poch-en, id.

PECH, s. The act of breathing hard.

He gaif ane greit pech lyk ane weill fed stirk, L. Scotl. Lament. Concl.

PECHAN, s. The crop, the stomach, Ayrs.
An' tho' the gentry first are stechin,
Yet ev'n the ha' folk fill their pechan
Wi' sauce, ragouts, and sicklike trashtrie,
That's little short o' downright wastrie.

before priviledged. And the pearling, and ribbening,—to be of those made within the kingdome of Scotland." Acts Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25. Murray.

Most probably a dimin. from the same origin with E. pack, Su.G. packa, Isl. piack-ur, sarcina. Germ. packlin fasciculus.

PEDDIR, PEDDER, s. A pedlar, a travelling merchant.

The pirate preissis to peil the peddir his pak.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238. b. 9.

"Ane pedder is called an marchand, or creamer, quha bearis ane pack or creame vpon his back, quha are called beirares of the puddill be the Scottesmen of the realme of Polonia, quhairof I saw ane great multitude in the towne of Cracowia, anno Dom. 1569." Skene Verb. Sign. vo. Pede-pulverosus.

Rudd. deduces it from Fr. pied, Lat. pes, the foot; because they commonly travel about on foot. Perhaps rather immediately from L.B. ped-are, pedibus metiri, or pedar-ius, nudis ambulans pedibus. To PEEL, Peil, v. a. To equal, to match, to produce any thing exactly like another, Loth. S.O.

Allied perhaps to Teut. peyl-en to measure, because in barter one quantity is given as an equivalent for another.

PEEL, PEIL, s. A match, an equal, Loth. S.O. "Shew me the peil of that," Gl. Sibb. In time of peace, he never had a peel, So courteous he was, and so genteel.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 158.

PEEL, s. A pool, the pron. of S.B.

Sae she escapes by favour of her heels,
And made nae stop for scrabs, or stanes, or peels.

Ross's Helenore, p. 58.

PEEL, s. A place of strength. V. Pele.

PEELÍE, adj. Thin, meagre, S.

Perhaps q. having the flesh peeled off the bones, Fr. pelé. I am not certain, however, that it does not also include the idea of paleness.

To PEENGE, PINGE, v. n. 1. To complain, to speak in a querulous tone, to whine, S. pron. peenge.

A bytand Ballad on warlo wives, That gar thair men live pinging lives.

Flemyng, Evergreen, 2. 51. Rubr.

2. To pretend poverty, S. to mak a puir mouth, synon.

In the first sense, it might seem allied to Su.G. weng-a, id. S. whinge, v or w being often used for p in Goth.; in the latter, to Teut. pynigh-en, cruciare, affligere. It seems doubtful if the term, in the passage quoted above, does not denote a state of thraldom or oppression, including also the idea of murmuring under it.

To PEEP, v. n. To complain, to pule. V. PEPE,

To PEER, v. a. To equal, S.

O that's the queen o' woman kind, And neer a ane to peer her. Burns, iv. 395 Fr. pair, a match.

PEERIE, adj. Little, small. A peerie foal, a small bannock or cake, Orkn. Shetl.

PEESWEIP, PEEWEIP, s. A lapwing, S. "Tringa vanellus, Linn. Lapwing, Teuchit, Peesweep." P. Luss, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 251.

Perhaps corr. from E. pewet, or formed, as this may originally have been in Teut. piewit, from the cry. This bird, however, is in Sw. called wipa, kowipa, Dan. vibe, kivit.

To PEG off, or away, v. n. To go off quickly, Loth. Dumfr. perhaps corr. from cant E. pike off, to run away; Grose's Class. Dict.

PEG, s. A stroke, Loth. Dumfr. Isl. piack-a, frequenter pungo.

PEGIL, s. The dirty work of a house. Working the pegil, Ang. is synon. with acting the scodgie, S.

As scodgie seems to be a corr. of Su.G. sko-swen Vol. II.

a servant who puts on the shoes of his master, pegil may denote the employment of a young person, to whom the dirtiest part of the work is commonly allotted; from Isl. pijke, juvencula, puella, Su.G. poike puellus; either from Isl. peige juvencus bos et parvus, G. Andr.; or Pers. peik a lacquey.

PEGRALL, PYGRALL, s. Petty, paltry.
Ane pegrall thief, that steilis a cow,
Is hangit; bot he that steilis a bow
With als mekill geir as he may turss,
That theiff is hangit be the purss.

Lyndsay's S.P.R. ii. 164.

And cheiflie Mortoun, and Lochlevin be name,
That of his bluide resavit the pygrall pryce,
So with the silver sall ye have the schame.

Maitland Poems, p. 233.

This refers to the money received for treacherously delivering up the Earl of Northumberland.

"Corr. from beggar, q. beggral;" Gl. Sibb. But this is quite improbable. Isl. pekill evidently signifies what is little; pekillhufa, a small coif or cap, capitium parvum; G. Andr.

PEIL, s. A place of strength. V. Pele. To PEILE, Pele, v. a. To packe or peile fish.

—" Fra twa houris efter nune, to sax houris at euin, it sall not be lesum to by, pak or pele fische, bot that all our Souerane Lordis liegis, at the saidis tymes of day, may be seruit of all maner of fische, and by the samin for thair siluer, for sustentatiounis of thair house, and seruing of the cuntrie about." Acts Ja. V. 1540, c. 78. Edit. 1566. Peile, Skene, c. 98.

More than a century ago, the sense of this term seems to have been lost.

"By the 84th act Parl. 1503, and 24th act 1633, the merchants must only pack and peil at free burghs: Now, loading and unloading is the same thing with packing and peiling. This was denied by the Dukes Advocates, who called "packing," the stowing of goods in packs, and "peiling," they did not agree what it meant; some thought it was the furring of goods like a pile of wood." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 81.

We might view peil as allied to Teut. peghel, Belg. peyl, the capacity or measure of a vessel; peghel-en, peyl-en, to measure; metiri vasis capacitatem; and thus consider the phrase as probably of Belg. origin. For haering-pakkery is a place where herrings are packed up in barrels and salted anew. But I am inclined to think that it is the same with the E. v. pile, "to heap, to coacervate." I prefer this sense, because peling is not confined to fish, but extended to other goods, as wool, hides, &c.

"That na persoun vse pakking nor peling of woll, hydis, nor skinnis, lose nor laid, outwith fre burgh and privilege thairof." Ibid. c. 88. Edit. 1566.

I am not certain, however, whether peling, peiling, may not signify, pairing, adjusting to one size; which is generally attended to in packing fish in barrels. V. Peel, v. and s. Peild, adj. Bald.

"Q. peeled, from peil, to rob. Fr. piller;" Gl. Sibb. Here two etymons seem conjoined, neither of which is the true one. For Fr. pelé is presently used in the sense of bald; pieled, Shaksp. id.

PEILOUR, s. A theif. V. Pelour.

To PEYNE, v. a. To forge. V. PENE.

To PEYR, v. a. To impair. V. PARE.

PEIRS, adj. "A sky colour, or a colour between green and blue," Rudd.

- Behaldand thame sa mony divers hew, Sum peirs, sum pale, sum burnet, and sum blew. Doug. Virgil, 401. 1.

O.Fr. pers, perse, caesius, glaucus; c'est un azur couvert et obscur qu'on pretend etre venu de Perse, ou de coleur de pêche Persienne. Dict. Trev.

To PEIS, Peiss, Pese, v. a. To assuage, to appease; according to Rudd.

- And quhen he spak all ceissit, The heuinlie hie hous of goddis was peissit.

Doug. Virgil, 317. 4.

Rudd. mentions O.Fr. paise as the origin, a word I cannot find in any dictionary. But as silescit is the term used by Virg., peissit properly signifies, was made, or became silent; corresponding to Fr. s'appaiser, as used by R. Stephens. Terent. Dum hae silescunt turbae, S'appaisent et cessent. Dict. Latinogallic. A. 1538. vo. Silesco.

PEYSIE-WHIN, s. The E. Greenstone; Sw. groensten, Germ. grunstein, Ang.; called peasiewhin in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh.

It has received its name from the resemblance of the spots in it to pease, Ang. pron. peyse.

PELE, PEYLL, PEILL, PEEL, PAILE, s. A place of strength, a fortification.

At Lythkow was then a pele, Mekill, and stark, and stuffyt wele With Inglis men; and wes reset To thaim that, with armuris or met, Fra Edynburgh wald to Strewelyn ga.

Barbour, x, 137. MS.

The site of this fortification at Linlithgow is still called the Peel.

This name is given to a Roman castellum at Kirk. intilloch.

"At this town there is another fort upon the wall, called the Peel." Gordon's Itin. Septent. p. 54.

The term occurs in O.E., and is written pele, pell,

The Romancer it sais, Richarde did mak a pele On kastelle wise, all wais wrouht of tre fulle R. Brunne, p. 157.

Here it is described as a wooden building. Chaucer uses the term pell.

God saue the Lady of this pell, Our owne gentill Ladie Fame.

House of Fame, iii. 220. Urry has this note. "A house, a cell. Sp. and Sk. f. a pallace." But it is evidently used as equivalent to castell, the designation previously given to this house.

- It astonieth yet my thought, And maketh all my witte to swinke, On this Castell for to thinke. - All was of stone of berile, Both the Castell and the Toure.

Ibid. ver. 88. 97.

Where piles be pulled down apace, And stately buildings brought to ground: The Scots, like loons, void of all grace, Religious precepts sore did wound.

Battle of Floddon, ver. 144.

Lambe has the following note on this passage. "In Lancashire, there is an old fort called the Pile of Fouldery. Peel, as it is called in Scotland, is a small castle, Bastillon, or Bastle; in French, Bicocque, which Cotgrave calls a little paltry town, hold, or fort, not strong enough to hold out a siege, nor so weak as to be given up for words." P. 34.

Bower uses municipium as corresponding to Pele. Hoc in anno municipium de Linlithgw, quod Anglicè Pele vocatur, per regem Angliae constructum est.

Scotichr. Lib. xii. c. 1.

Municipium, in the dark ages, was generally thus understood. The only sense given of it by Du Cange is, castrum, castellum muris cinctum.

A Pele, according to the proper sense of the term, was distinguished from a Castle, the former being wholly of earth. Such is the account given by Les-ly, when describing the manners of the Scots Borderers. "They give themselves little concern," he says, "though their buildings, which are but huts and cottages, be burnt. For they construct for themselves stronger towers, of a pyramidal form, which they call Pailes, entirely of earth, which can neither be burnt nor overthrown, without great exertion on the part of the assailants." De Orig. Scot. p. 57-58. Aedificia, &c.

L.B. Pela is used in ancient MSS. for a tower or castle. Thus, in a charter of Henry IV. of England, A. 1399, it is said. "De gratia nostra speciali et ex certa scientia nostra, dedimus et concessimus eidem Comiti Northumbriae insulam, Castrum, Pelam et dominium de Man.—Castrum, Pelam et dominium predicta una cum regaliis." Rymer. Foed.

Tom. viii. p. 95. ap. Du Cange.

Pelum is used in the same sense, in a charter of Edward III. concerning Scotland. "Quod custodes omnium aliorum castrorum, Pelorum et fortalitiorum, in dicta terra Scotiae, et alii in eis ad fidem nostram commorantes, eadem castra, Pela et fortalitia libere et absque perturbatione qualibet exire." Rymer. Foed. Tom. iv. p. 686. Du Cange seems to think that this is originally the E. word pile. If so, we must trace it to A.S. pil, moles, cumulus, acervus. Bullet, however, gives pill as a Celtic word, signifying a castle, a fortress.

PELL, s. A soft, lazy, lumpish person, S.B. often conjoined with an adj.; as lazy pell, nasty pell, Ang.

Perhaps from Teut. pelle, a husk, as the E. word slough is sometimes used S. as a reproachful term in a similar sense.

PELLACK, PELLOCK, s.

"There are likewise a great number of little whales, which sweem through these isles, which they call spout-whales, or pellacks;—and they tell us it is dangerous for boats to fall in among them, lest they be overturned by them." Brand's Descr. Orkn. p. 48.

This seems to be the palach of Sibb., now called pellock, S. the porpoise or sea-hog, Delphinus phocaena, Linn.

"A species of sea animals, most destructive of the salmon, are almost every summer found in numbers, playing in the Clyde off the Castle. These are called buckers, pellocks, or porpoises." P. Dunbarton, Statist. Acc. iv. 22. V. Bucker.

"This firth [of Forth] is rycht plentuus of coclis, osteris, muschellis, selch, pellok, mereswyne, & quhalis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.

Here he does not adhere to the Lat. of Bocce. He distinguishes the pellock from the mereswyne, or what we now call the porpoise, because, in his time, the latter name seems to have been confined to the Dolphin. V. Mereswyne.

Gael. pelog, id.

PELLOCK, s. A ball, a bullet.

Pellokis paisand to pase, Gapand gunnys of brase, Grundin ganyeis thair wase, That maid ful gret dyn.

i. e. "weighty bullets." It occurs also, Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 73. V. CALMES.

Corrupted from Fr. pelote, pelotte, a ball, C.B.

PELLOTIS, s. pl.

This must mean skins; E. pelt, a skin; Fr. pellet-ier, a skinner.

PELOUR, PEILOUR, s. A thief. Be I ane Lord, and not lord-lyk,

Than every pelour and purs-pyk Sayis, Land war bettir warit on me.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 62. st. 3.

Pylore, Pillour, O.E.

Without pitie, pylore, pore men thou robbedst, And bar hyr bras at thy backe, to Calleis to selle. P. Ploughman, Fol. 14. b.

i. e. Carried their money to Calais, to dispose of it there.

Chaucer pillour, id. and pille, to rob; pylle, Gower, Conf. Fol. 60. b.; Fr. pilleur, a ravager, pill-er, to rob, to plunder. Hence E. pillage. Lat. pil-are, expil-are, compil-are, id. Pilare et compilare, qui Graece originis.... Graeci enim fu-res piletas. This, from Du Cange, in Dict. Trev. is ascribed to Festus. But it is given as the language of Paulus Diaconus, Auctor. Lat. Ling. p. 367.51.

PELT, s. A term of reproach.

The cuff is well wared that twa hame brings; This proverb, foul Pelt, to thee is applyit: First spyder of spite, thou spews out springs.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12.

This may be equivalent to "foul skin." It may, however, be traced to Su.G. pilt, Isl. pillt-ur, a boy; whence pilt-skapr, loose morals, nequities; because, according to Ihre, youth is more prone to wickedness.

PELTIN-POCK, s. V. Paikie, s. I.

PELTRY, PALTRIE, s. Vile trash; a term of contempt applied to any thing, S.

Sic peltrie was nevir sene.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 7.

"Away with these fantasticke reuelations of the Anabaptistes.—The Spirite of Jesus shall abhorre that trashe and peltrie." Rollocke on the Passion,

p. 418

Su.G. paltor, old rags. This Ihre derives from palt, a shirt or smock. But Teut. palt, a fragment, is preferable. Hence Su.G. palt-byke, a beggar, Ital. paltone, paltonniere, Fr. pautonnier, id. and perhaps palleteaux, pieces of cloth for mending an old garment; Rom de la Rose. This, or Teut. pelterije, pelles, is a more natural origin for E. paltry, mean, than poltron, from which Dr. Johns. derives it.

PELURE, PILLOUR, s. Costly fur.
This Jhon the Ballyol dyspoylyd he
Of all hys robys of ryaltê.
The pelure thai tuk off hys tabart,
(Twme Tabart he wes callyt eftyrwart)

Langland uses pelure, evidently in the same sense. I loked on my lefte halfe, as the lady me taught, And was ware of a woman, worthelich clothed, Purfiled with pelure, the finest vpon erthe.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 8. a.

Ne no Pelure in his cloke, for pleadynge at the barre.

Ibid. Fol. 16. a.

"Fr. pelure, peeling, paring," Gl. Wynt. This can scarcely be the origin. Pelurae occurs, Fleta, L. 2. c. 14. rendered pelles by Du Cange. The word may be from L.B. pelipar-ius, peliper-ius, a currier, a preparer of skins, p being changed to v, as in the O.E. v. ipelvred.

It must be observed, however, that Teut. palure, which so nearly resembles our word, is used with greater latitude; insigne gestamen. Kilian mentions liureye, livery, nota centurialis, as synon. Alem. pellele, by some rendered pelliculae, is by others expl. texta pretiosa, from Goth. pell, id. our pall. Schilter says; Dicitur etiam pfeler, pfeller. In Voc. Lat. Germ. eoccinus, rot pfellor.

2. Penches, pl. the common name for tripe, S. PEND, s. 1. An arch, any kind of vault; as the arch of a bridge, a covered gateway, S.

Aboon the pend quhilk I defend.——
Minstrelsy Border, iii. 360.

2. It is used to denote the arch of heaven.

Begaried is the sapphire pend
With spraings of skarlet hew,
And preciously from end to end,
Damasked white and blew.

Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 387.

The word has no affinity with Gael. pen, a high mountain. It is evidently borrowed from the manner in which arches are built, the stones being in a pendent form; Lat. pend-ere; Fr. pend-re. PENDE, s. A pendant.

The fey girdil hie sette did appere,

With stuthis knaw and pendes schinand clere.

Doug. Virgil, 447. 37.

Bulla, Virg. The term used by Doug. refers to the convex or arched form of the Roman bulla. Speaking of pendants, Rudd. says, "S. we call them pendles." The latter is merely Fr. pendille, "a thing that hangs danglingly," Cotgr.

PENDICE of a buckle, that part of it which receives and fastens the one latchet, before the shoe be straitened by means of the other, S. q. something that hangs from the buckle.

PENDICLE, s. A pendant; L.B. pendiclum.

"But that which is the great remora to all matters is the head of Strafford: as for poor Canterbury, he is so contemptible that all casts him out of their thoughts, as a pendicle at the Lieutenant's ear." Baillie's Lett. i. 251.

PENDICLE, s. 1. A small piece of ground, either depending on a larger farm, or let separately by the owner, S.

"Most of the farms have cottages, whence they obtain assistance in hay-time and harvest. Besides these, there are many pendicles (praediola) partly let off the farms, and partly let immediately by the proprietor." P. Kettle, Fife, Statist. Acc. i. 379.

2. Applied to one church dependent on another.

"It was called in ancient times the parsonage of Stobo.—It was a parsonage, having four churches belonging to it, which were called the Pendicles of Stobo, viz. the church of Dawick," &c. P. Stobo, Tweedd. Statist. Acc. iii. 330.

The word evidently denotes any thing depending on another. L.B. pendicularis is used in the latter sense. "Intra Ecclesiam S. Francisci in editiori loco fabricata est Pendicularis capella." V. S. Stanisl. ap. Du Cange.

PENDICLER, s. An inferior tenant, S.

"The parish also abounded with pendiclers, or inferior tenants. These, therefore, with the cottagers, together with a considerable number of families employed in the coal-mines,—contributed much to the multiplication of the inhabitants." P. Denino, Fife, Statist. Acc. xi. 357. N.

To PENE, PEYNE, POYNE, PYNE, v. a. To beat out, to forge.

Ibid. 230. 21.

The hidduous Ciclopes forgit furth and draue,— The glowand irne to wel and poyne anone. Ibid. 257. 25.

Sum pynis furth ane pan boddum to prent fals plakkis.

Rudd. derives this word from Fr. pen-er, to toil, or poinconn-er, to prick or stamp with puncheons, &c. But it is undoubtedly allied to Su.G. paen-a, to extend, paena ut on ting, rem aliquam in latum deducere; Ihre. This learned writer observes, that some view this as the root of panna, a term used to denote a variety of things which are concave in their form. Verelius mentions Isl. paen-a, as signifying to strike with a hammer; paen-at, that which is thus struck; pentar-ar, those who beat metals into thin plates, as coppersmiths, those who work in the mint, &c. Lundius very naturally derives Germ. paening, pfenn-ig, a penny, from Isl. paen-a, cudere, signare; to strike. Not. ad Verel. Ind. p. 1.

PENHEAD, s. The upper part of a mill-lead, where the water is carried off from the dam to the mill, S.

"Depones, That they take in water from the river Don, at the intake or penhead of the meal-mill, for their whole operations of bleaching and driving their machinery." State, Fraser of Fraserfield, &c. 1805, p. 229.

1805, p. 229.

"That the mill-lead of said field may be about four feet broad near to the penhead, and about a foot of water deep at that place in general." Ibid.

A.S. penn-an, pynd-an, includere, to inclose. Hence E. pen, pin-fold, according to Seren. from Su.G. pinne, clavus ligneus; q. to hedge in with pins of wood.

To PENNY, v. n. To fare, S.B.

And there she gets them black as ony slae.

On them she penny'd well, and starker grew,
And gather'd strength her journey to pursue.

Ross's Helenore, p. 58.

This v. seems formed from the idea of the necessity of money in purchasing provisions, which are q. the return for one's penny.

PENNIE-BRYDAL, PENNY-WEDDING, s. A wedding at which the guests contribute money for their entertainment, S.

"The General Assemblie, considering the great profanitie and severall abuses which usually fal forth at Pennie-Brydals, proving fruitful seminaries of all lasciviousnesse and debausherie, as well by the excessive number of people conveened thereto, as by the extortion of them therein, and licentiousnesse thereat,—ordain every Presbyterie in this kingdom, to take such speciall care for restraining these abuses—as they shall think fit in their severall bounds respective." Act Gen. Assembly, 13. Feb. 1645.

"A penny-wedding is when the expence of the

"A penny-wedding is when the expence of the marriage entertainment is not defrayed by the young couple, or their relations, but by a club among the guests. Two hundred people, of both sexes, will sometimes be convened on an occasion of this kind." P. Drainy, Elgin, Statist. Acc. iv. 86. N.

"One, two, and even three hundred would have convened on these occasions, to make merry at their own expence for two or more days. This scene of feasting, drinking, dancing, wooing, fighting, &c. was always enjoyed with the highest relish." P. Montquhitter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xxi. 146.

One great absurdity, and natural source of disorder at such meetings, is the welcome given, in various quarters at least, to every one who chooses to attend the wedding, if willing to pay his share, although not invited, and a stranger to the whole com-

We learn from Loccenius, that penny-bridals are common in Sweden. The custom has probably existed from an early period. "In nonnullis locis sumtus nuptialis ab invitatis hospitibus in cranio vel collectis solent adjuvari ac sublevari: quem plures unum facilius, quam unus et solus seipsum impensis majori instruere possit." Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 109.

It is probably a relique of the ancient custom of friends conferring gifts on the married pair on the morning after marriage. Some, by the savings of such a wedding, avowedly gain as much as to form a small stock; others scorn the idea of a wedding of this kind, because, as they say, "they will not begin the world with begging."

PENNY-DOG, s. A dog that constantly follows his master, S.

His wink to me hath been a law;
He haunts me like a penny-dog;
Of him I stand far greater awe,
Than pupil does of pedagogue.

Watson's Coll. i. 11.

It might be supposed that this term denoted a dog of the meanest species, q. one that might be bought for a penny, as the metaph. borrowed from it is always used in relation to a contemptible character, one who implicitly follows another. But this, although the general pronunciation, is not universal. In Ang. paradog is used in the same sense.

PENNY-MAILL, s. 1. Rent paid in money, as distinguished from what is paid in kind.

"The uther nine parts thereof sall perteine to our Soveraine Lorde: and this to be nocht onelie of the penny-maill, but of all uther dewties, that suld be payed for teind and stock." Acts Ja. VI. 1587. c. 29. Murray.

2. A small sum paid to a proprietor of land, as an acknowledgement of superiority, rather than as an equivalent.

It is accordingly contrasted with deir ferme, or high rent.

Sum with deir ferme ar hirreit haill, That wount to pay bot penny mailt.

Maitland Poems, p. 321.

From Penny, used in the sense of money, and Mail. q. v.

PENNYSTANE, PENNY-STONE, s. A quoit made of stone, or a flat stone used instead of a quoit. To play at the pennystane, to play with quoits of this kind, a common game in the country, S.

"Most of the antient sports of the Highlanders, such as archery, hunting, fowling, and fishing, are now disused; those retained are;—throwing the penny-stone, which answer [s] to our coits: the shinty, or the striking of a ball of wood," &c. Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 214.

Hence a penny-stane cast, the distance to which a stone quoit may be thrown.

Mycht nane behind his falowis be A pennystane cast, na he in hy Wes dede, or tane deliuerly.

Barbour, xiii. 581. MS.

Wes not a pennystane cast of breid.

Ibid. xvi. 383. MS.

Qu. because it was usual to play for money? Or, as allied to Sw. pen-a, utpen-a, to flatten, because only flat stones can be used?

PENNYWHEEP, s. Small beer, Aberd. Gl. Shirr. perhaps from its briskness, or flying off quickly. V. Whip.

PENNY-WIDDIE, s. V. PIN-THE-WIDDIE.

PENNON, s. A pendant, a small banner. Thar speris, pennonys, and thair scheldis, Off lycht enlumynyt all the feldis.

Barbour, viii. 227. MS.

"The pennon was the proper ensign of a bachelor or simple knight. Du Fresne shews that even the esquires might bear pennons, provided they could bring a sufficient suite of vassals into the field." Grose's Milit. Antiq. i. 179. N.

"The pennon was in figure and size like a banner, with the addition of a triangular point.—By the cutting off of this point, on the performance of any gallant action by the knight and his followers, the pennon was converted into a banner; whereby the knight was raised to the degree of a banneret."

Ibid. ii. 52.

This I cannot view as a corr. of pendant, although pennant E. is also used, but as the same with O.Fr. pennon. This word was used in the first age of Fr. poetry to denote a feather, or any thing similar, fixed to the end of an arrow. Gl. Romm. de la Rose. It seems to be from Alem. fan, fanen, fanden, fanon, vexillum, whence Fr. gonfanon, Alem. chundfanon, from chund, kund, a public indication, and fanon, the instrument by which it is made. V. Schilter, p. 77. Banner has, according to this learned writer, the same origin with fanon; ban, fan, van, being promiscuously used in the sense of fascia. To PENS, v. n. To think. V. PANCE.

PENSEIL, PINSEL, s. A small streamer, borne in battle.

Baneris rycht fayrly flawmand, And penselys to the wynd wawand, Swa fele thar war off ser quentiss, That it war gret slycht to diuise.

Barbour, xi. 193. MS. Pinsel, Doug. Mr. Pinkerton describes these as "small pennons with which the spears of knights were ornamented." But we learn from Grose, that "the pensil was a small streamer fixed to the end of a lance, and was adorned with the coat armour of the esquire by whom it was carried, and served to point him out in the day of battle." Milit. Antiq. ii. 53. The pennon was worn by a knight bachelor. V. Pennon.

This word is also used in O.E.

Mekill pride was thare in prese, Both on pencell and on plate.

Minot's Poems, p. 28.

Rudd. deduces it from Fr. pennonceau, penoncel, a flag, a streamer. Some write pignonciel. Du Cange mentions L.B. penicell-us, penuncell-us, penonsellus, as dimin. from pennon.

PENSY, Pensie, adj. 1. Having a mixture of self-conceit and affectation in one's appearance, S.

Furth started neist a pensy blade, And out a maiden took;

They said that he was Faikland bred,

And danced by the book. Ramsay's Poems, i. 263.

A pensy ant, right trig and clean, Came ae day whidding o'er the green.

Ibid. ii. 476.

2. Expl. "spruce, clean and neat in one's dress and appearance, as rich people in low life are expected to be.

There, couthie, and pensie, and sicker, Wonn'd honest young Hab o' the Heuch.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 292.

Probably from Fr. pens-er, to think, pensif, thinking of," Cotgr., because a person of this description seems to think much of himself. As, however, the term is applied to one who walks in a stiff, crect, or stately manner, it may be from Fr. pançu, gorbellied, great-paunched, used obliquely.

Pensylle, adv. In a self-important manner, S. He kames his hair indeed, and gaes right snug, With ribbon-knots at his blue bonnet lug, Whilk pensylie he wears a thought a-jee.

Ramsay's Poems, ii, 76. PENTHLAND, s. The name given to the middle part of Scotland, especially to that now called Lothian.

"The secound and myd part (becaus it was inhabit be Pichtis) wes namit Penthland." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 3. Elsewhere he says, that Forth is " ane arme of the see diuyding Pentland fra Fiffe." Cron. B. iv. c. 5.

This is undoubtedly a corr. of Pichtland, or Petland, in the same manner as the designation of Pichtland Firth has been changed to Pentland. For the oldest Norwegian writers call this Petlandz-fiaerd; Heimskringla, II. 50, Ed. Peringskiold. To PENTY, v. a. To fillip, S.

Or shall I douk the deepest sea And coral pou for beads to thee: Penty the pope upon the nose?

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 550. As Fr. poincte, point, denotes the tip of any thing, whence the phrase, poinct du nez, the tip of the nose; the v. poinct-er, pointer, is expl. blesser, porter des coupes de la pointe; Dict. Trev. I have observed nothing else that has any resemblance.

PENTY, PENTIE, s. A fillip, (talitrum), S. PEPE, s. 1. The chirp of a bird, S.

Now, swete bird, say ones to me pepe, I dee for wo; me think thou gynis slepe.

King's Quair, ii. 38. He dares na play peep, a S. prov. phrase; He dares not mutter. 2. The act of speaking with a shrill small voice,

S. peep.

The tothir ansueris with ane pitcous pepe.

Doug. Virgil, 175. 30.

This implies the idea of a plaintive voice. Thus the v. peep, although properly an E. one, is used, in a proverbial phrase, in a peculiar sense; Ye're no sae puir as ye peep, Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 85. You complain more of poverty than your situation warrants.

Teut. piep-en, Su.G. pip-a, Fr. pep-ier, Lat.

PEPPER-DULSE, s. Jagged fucus, S. Fucus pinnatifidus, Linn. V. Dulse. To PER, v. n. To appear.

Wallace, vi. 541. MS. Pere, Chaucer, id. E. peer is used as signifying, just to come in sight, contr. from appear.

PERANTER, adv. Peradventure, contr. from Fr. par aventure.

Howbeid ane hundreth standis heirby,

Peranter ar as gauckit fulis as I. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 93.

To PERBRAIK, PERBREK, v. a. To break, to shatter.

Perbrekit schyppis bot cabillis thare mychtryde, Nane anker nedis make thame arreist nor bide Doug. Virgil, 18, 22.

Rudd. views it as perhaps from Fr. pour, or Hisp. para, q. profractis, or semifracta. It is more natural to view this term as formed directly in imital tion of Lat, perfractus, thoroughly broken. PAR-BREAK, q. v. is used in a different sense.

PERCONNON, PERCUNNANCE, s. Expl. condition, proviso, S.B.

But upon this perconnon I agree, To lat you gae, that Lindy marry me.

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.

Sibb. strangely views these terms as connected with park, to perch. But they seem compounded of Fr. par, by, and convine, convenance, both used in the sense of condition. V. CONUYNE.

PERCUDO, s. Some kind of precious stone.

Vpon thair brest bravest of all, Were precious pearls of the Eist;— Thair micht ye se, mangs moné mo, The Topaz and the Percudo.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 11.

I find no similar word. The first syllable may be from Fr. pierre, a stone. Cueut signifies a whetstone.

PERDE', adv. Verily, truly.

The samyn wise did grete Elymus perdé, Richt so himself King Acestes the auld.

Doug. Virgil, I29. 48.

" From the Fr. pardieu, pardieux, per Deum, per Deos. Though this be the true etymon of the word, yet it is not to be thought that our religious Prelate, by using it, swears or prophanes the name of God: For the word had been long before received by the common people, who either not knowing, or not adverting to the primary signification of it, meant no more by it but truly, surely, or such like," &c. Rudd.

But the "religious Prelate" certainly was better instructed in the meaning of words than the common people. Tyrwhitt, without ceremony, calls it an oath. PERDEWS, s. pl. Soldiers appointed to the forlorn hope.

"The king presented him battle, waiting in vain a whole day, to see if he might be provoked to come forth: and for that effect sent a number of infantry perdews to his trenches to bring on the skirmish." Melvil's Mem. p. 15.

Fr. enfans perdus, " the forlorn hope of a camp, commonly gentlemen of companies," Cotgr.

PERDURABIL, adv. Lasting.

-" And als it var verray necessair that Kyng Darius furnest the Atheniens vitht sa mekil money as may resist the Lacedemoniens, and that sal gar al the cuntrey of Greice hef perdurabil veyr amang them selvis." Compl. S. p. 137.

Fr. perdurable, from Lat. perdur-o. To PERE, v. a. To pour.

The fat olye did he yet and pere

Apoun the entrellis to mak thaym birne clere. Doug. Virgil, 172. 2.

"But pour, and pere, S., differ in this, that we commonly use pour, when greater quantities issue forth; and pere, when the liquor trickles down by drops, or as it were small threads, when there is little remaining in the vessel." Rudd.

Pere, I suspect however, is merely a provinc. pron. of the E. word, although used in a peculiar PERFAY, adv. Verily; an asseveration common both with S. and O.E. writers; properly, an oath, although Rudd. thinks that it admits of the same apology with perdé.

I persaif, Syr Persoun, thy purpois perfay, Quod he, and drew me down derne in delf by ane dyke.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 11.

Fr. par foy, Lat. per fidem. PERFITE, adj. 1. Perfect.

For vertew is a thing sa precious,— It makis folk perfite and glorious.

Palice of Honour, iii. 80.

2. The term is still used to denote one who is exact in doing any work, or who does it neatly, S. The accent is on the last syllable.

PERFYTLIE, adv. Perfectly.

- My sonne, I hartlie the exhort: Perfytelie print in thy remembrance Of this inconstant warld the variance .--

2. Trim, so as to appear finical, S.

Qu. parjoinct, from Fr. par and joinct, or Lat. per and junct-us, accurately joined? In the latter sense, it would seem more allied to Fr. accoinct, neat, spruce, tricked up.

PERLASY, s. The palsy.

Heidwerk, Hoist, and Perlasy, maid grit pay; And murmours me with mony speir and targe. King Hart, ii. 57.

Fr. paralysie, Lat. paralysis, Alem. perlin, perli, Schilter.

PERLIE, s. The little finger, Loth. q. peerie, little, Orkn. (probably an old Pictish word) and lith, joint.

PERMUSTED, part. adj. Scented, perfumed. No sweet permusted shambo leathers.

Watson's Coll. i. 28. V. DRAP-DE-BERRY. Fr. par, through, and musqué, scented with musk. V. Muist.

PERNICKITIE, adj. Precise in trifles; applied also to dress, denoting trimness, S. perjink sy-

Perhaps from Fr. par, through, in composition often signifying, thoroughly, and niquet, a trifle, or nigaud-er to trifle; whence nigaud, a fop, a trifling fellow.

PERPEN, s. A partition. V. PARPANE.

PEROUER, PERQUEIR, PERQUIRE, adv. 1. Exactly, accurately. "He said his lesson perqueir." S.

Na he, that ay hass levyt fre, May nocht knaw weill the propyrté, The augyr, na the wrechyt dome, That is complyt to foule thyrldome. Bot gyff he had assayit it, Than all perquer he suld it wyt.

Barbour, i. 238. MS.

Had I levit bot half an yeir, I sould haif leird yow craftis perqueir, To begyle wyffe and man.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 190.

"A number thir passages I had perquire: so I was heard with very great applause, and ere even was to be as famous a man as was in all the town." Baillie's Lett. i. 17.

2. Also used in an improper sense, as signifying, distinctly in respect of place, or separately.

" " Mr. Guthrie is still in contest with the people of Stirling, but in more vexation than formerly; for his colleague Mr. Matthias Simpson is as heady and bold a man as himself, and has good hearing with the English, so that he is like to get the stipend, and Mr. Rule to live perquire." Baillie's Lett. ii. 408.

Mr. Ellis derives it from Fr. par coeur. Spec. i. 235. We indeed say that one has a thing by heart, when he can repeat it from memory. But it is doubtful whether we should not view it as signifying by book, q. per quair. The following passage, quoted by Mr. Pinkerton, seems to confirm this etymon.

The blak bybill pronounce I sall perqueir. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 207.

i. e. repeat verbatim, or as it is found in the book. V. QUAIR.

PERQUEIR, PERQUIRE, adj. Accurate, exact, S.B.

At threeps I am na sae perquire, Nor auld-farren as he, But at banes-braken, it's well kent He has na maughts like me.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 2. PERRE, s. Precious stones. Sibb. views this as signifying apparel, and formed from it by abbreviation.

Her hode of a herde huwe, that her hede hedes, Of pillour, of palwerk, of perre to pay.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2.

Her perre was praysed, with prise men of might. Ibid. ii. 3.

Bullet says that Fr. per was anciently used for pierre. This sense is confirmed by the mention afterwards made of saffres and scladynes, or sapphires and chalcedonies. Chaucer, pierrie, jewels.

"She—had on a ryche coller of pyerrery.—His churte [shirt] was bordered of fyne pierrery and pearles." Marriage of Ja. IV. and Margaret of England, Leland's Collect. iv. 300.

PERSHITTIE, adj. Precise, prim; stiff in trifling

The only word I have met with, which has any resemblance, either in form or signification, is O.E. pergitted, signifying, perhaps, tricked up.

"The court which was seeled, pergitted, sumptuouslye decked and prepared for dauncing, leaping, and other pastyme, to make a pleasant and joyful mariage, was nowe converted to another vse; namely, to keepe the kinges deade bodie." Ramus's Commentaries Civil Warres of France, i. 35.

Can it be corr. from Fr. projecté, also pourjecté, drawn, delineated, pourtrayed, as denoting a person who adheres rigidly to his own plan?

PERSIL, s. Parsley, an herb, S. Apium petroselinum, Linn. Fr. id.

PERTRIK, s. A partridge. V. PARTRIK. To PERTROUBIL, v. a. To trouble or vex very much; Fr. partroubler.

-Wod wraith sche suld pertroubil al the toun. Doug. Virgil, 218. 42.

PERTRUBLANCE, s. Great vexation, perturbation. At first the schaddois of the pertrublance Was dryue away, and his remembrance The licht of ressoun has recouerit agane.

Doug. Virgil, 435. 32.

PESANE, PISSAND, PYSSEN, s. A gorget, or armour for the neck.

"And vtheris simpillar of x. pund of rent,—hane hat, gorget, and a pesane with wambrasseiris and reirbrasseiris." Acts Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566. c. 120, Murray.

The thrid he straik through his pissand of maile, The crag in twa, no weidis mycht him waill.

Wallace, ii. 112. MS.

Peasant, Edit. 1648. It occurs in O.E.

Lybaeus hytte Lambard yn the launcer Of hys helm so bryght; That pysane, aventagle, and gorgere Fell ynto the feld fer.

Lybaeus, E. M. Rom. ii. 69. As this piece of armour in part defended the breast, it might seem to be derived from O.Fr. peis, pis, id. corr. from Lat. pectus. But from all the traces we can observe of this word, it will scarcely admit of this derivation.

In an inventory of the armour of Louis the Great of France, A. 1316, mention is made of 3 coleretes Pizaines de Jazeran, i. e. three pesane collars of the kind of mail called jazerant. Grose, Milit. Hist. ii. 246, N.

L.B. pisanum occurs in the letters of Edw. III. of England, A. 1343. ap. Rymer. Foed. Tom. 5. p. 384. Cum triginta paribus platarum, basinettorum Pisanorum cum eorum adventalibus pretii 30 librarum.

Du Cange thinks that the word is probably corr., unless it be a proper name. And indeed, as it is here applied to the bassinet or head-piece, it might seem to refer to some armour then in great estimation made at Pisa in Italy; as a broadsword of a particular kind has in latter times been called a Ferrara, as being made by an Italian of that name. But there is scarcely room for this supposition. For the term appears elsewhere in another form.

PESSMENTS, s. pl. V. PASMENTS.

To PET, PETTLE, v. a. To fondle, to indulge, to treat as a pet, S.

"The tenth command—requireth such a puritie into the heart of man, that it will not onelie haue it to be cleane of grosse enill thoughts fedde and petted with yeelding and consent, but also it requireth that it be free of the least impression of anie euill thought." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 324.

Sae roos'd by ane of well-kend mettle, Nae sma' did my ambition pettle, My canker'd critics it will nettle.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 329.

As pet, E. denotes "a lamb taken into the house, and brought up by hand," and S. more generally, any creature that is fondled and much indulged; it is not improbable that it is from Teut. pete a little god-daughter, also a god-mother; attachments of this kind being often very strong, and productive of great indulgence.

Pet, E. " a slight fit of anger," is by Johns. deduced from Fr. despit. What if it be from Ital. petto the breast? Aver male al petto, to have a sore breast; tenere una cosa in petto, to keep a thing in one's breast; isfogáre il petto, to ease one's mind. To be in the pet, S. may thus signify, to retain something in one's breast; for as we use the phrase, it properly includes the idea of taciturnity and sullenness.

PETE-POT, s. A hole out of which peats have been dug, S.

A gredy carle swne eftyr wes Byrnand in swylk gredynes, That his plwyrnys hym-self stall, And hyd thame in a pete-pot all.

Wyntown, viii. 24. 46.

Pot is from Teut. put lacus, locus palustris; or, as the same with E. pit, from Teut. put, putte, puteus, lacuna, L.B. putt-a. Du Cange indeed derives L.B. pet-a, a peat, from Teut. pet vel put lacus, &c. Sw. paat-a, pron. pot-a, fodere.

Doug. Virgil, 382. 9. This seems merely an oblique sense of A.S. paeth semita, callis, Teut. pad, Germ. pfad, which Wachter deduces from pedd-en, pedibus calcare, a term, he says, of the highest antiquity.

PEW, s. "An imitative word, expressing the plaintive cry of birds,"

Dd

Birdis with mony pieteous pew, Effeirtlie in the air they flew.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 40. V. the v. He canna play pew, is a phrase still used to dcnote a great degree of inability, or incapacity for any business, S.; also, He ne'er play'd pew, he did not make the slightest exertion.

Wi' that he never mair play'd pew, But with a rair, Away his wretched spirit flew,

It maksnae where.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 311. To PEW, PEU, v. n. 1. To emit a mournful sound; a term applied to birds.

"The chekyns began to peu, quhen the gled quhissillit." Compl. S. p. 60.

2. It is sometimes used as equivalent to peep, or mutter.

I may not pew, my panis bin sa fell.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 210.

The v. pew might seem allied to Fr. piaill-er, "to cheepe, or cry like a chicke;" Cotgr.

" Phinocs are taken here [Fort William] in great numbers, 1500 having been taken at a draught. They come in August, and disappear in November. They are about a foot long, their colour grey, spotted with black, their flesh red; rise eagerly to a fly. The fishermen suppose them to be the young of what they call a great Trout, weighing 30 lb., which I suppose is the Grey." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 229. V. FINNACK.

PHIOLL, s. "A cupola," Rudd. V. FYELL. PHITONES, s. A woman who pretends to foretel future events, a Pythoness, a witch.

This name is given to the witch of Endor both by Barbour and Douglas.

For Phetanissa hes he send,

With sorcerie and incantationes

Reising the devill with invocationes. Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 318.

Lat. Pythonissa, Gr. Indaniora. Hence, as Rudd. has observed, the woman mentioned Acts xvi. 16. is said to have had πτευμα πυθωνος, a spirit of Python. The name mular was given to a daemon, by whose afflatus predictions were supposed to be uttered; and this from Pytho, the city of Delphos, where the oracle of Apollo was. He was designed the Pythian Apollo, from the fable of his having killed the serpent Python. The name of this serpent has been derived from $\pi\nu\theta\omega$, putrefaction, from the idea of its being generated from putridity. Bochart, however, asserts that Apollo Pythius, the son of Jupiter, was no other than Phut the son of Hum, worshipped as Jupiter Hammon. Geograph. Sac. L. 1. c. 2.

PHIZ, s. Expl. "image," in reference to the Palladium.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 33. This is merely a peculiar sense of the abbreviated term as used in E.

To PHRASE, Fraise, v. a. To talk much about, to talk of with some degree of boasting.

"And for that present tumult, that the children of this world fraise, anent the planting of your town with a pastor, believe and stay upon God; and the Lord shall either let you see what you long to see, or then fulfil your joy more abundantly another way." Rutherford's Lett. P. ii. ep. 8.

Phraser, s. 1. One whose actions are not so powerful as his words, a sort of braggadocio.

76 Through grace we both doe and dare doe to the glorie of our God, when you, if you continue in this Pharisaicall boasting, will proue but a phantasticall phraser." Bp. Galloway's Dikaiologie, p. 75. 2. It is now used to signify a wheedling person,

To Phraise, v. n. To use coaxing or wheedling language, S.

Were it not that the E.s. is used in a similar sense, one might suppose that this were allied to MoesG. frais-an, to tempt. V. the s. PHRAISE, FRAISE, s. To mak a phrase, 1.

To pretend great regard, concern or sympathy, S. When used in this sense, it conveys the idea of a suspicion of the person's sincerity.

"To make a phrase about one; to make a great work about one." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 21.

He may indeed for ten or fifteen days Mak meikle o' ye, with an unco fraise, And daut ye baith afore fowk and your lane. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 78.

2. To use the language of flattery. Thus fraise denotes flattery, S.

Some little fraise ane might excuse, But ha'f of you I maun refuse.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 156.

3. To pretend to do a thing, to exhibit an appearance without real design, S.

"The Treasurer, and some of the Lords came, and made a phrase to set down the Session in the palace of Linlithgow." Baillie's Lett. i. 26.

4. To use many words about a thing, as expressive of reluctance, when one is really inclined, or perhaps desirous, to do what is propos-

A-well, an't like your honour, Colin says, Gin that's the gate, we needna mak great phrase, The credit's ours, and we may bless the day, That ever keest her in your honour's way.

Ross's Helenore, p. 110. 5. To talk more of a matter than it deserves, S. I sometimes thought that he made o'er great fraze,

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 138.
6. To mak a phrase about one's self, to make much ado about a slight ailment, to pretend to suffer more than one does in reality, S.

PYAT, Pyot, s. The Magpie; Corvus pica, Linn.

"Thair wes pyattis, and pertrekis, and plevaris anew." Houlate, i. 14. MS.

The pyot furth his pennis did rug.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21. st. 11.

"All, both men and women will be, for-sooth, of a partie; -no more vnderstanding what they speake of, than doe Pyots, or Parockets, those words which they are taught to prattle." Forbes's Eubulus, Pref. p. 5.

Fr. pie, Lat. pica. But from the termination of our word, its proper origin seems to be Gael. pig-haidi; In C.B. pioden. This by the vulgar in our times, as also by our ancestors, has still been accounted an ominous bird. During sickness in a family, it is reckoned a very fatal sign, if the pyat take his seat on the roof of the house. The same opinion has been formed by other Northern nations.

Ihre testifies, that." the vulgar in Sweden suspend this bird to the doors of their stables, with the wings expanded, that he may, as Apuleius says, in his own body expiate that ill fortune that he portends to others." A similar idea may have given rise to the custom of nailing up hawks, the heads of foxes, &c. on the doors or walls of stables, still preserved in S. Wachter imagines that in Germ. it is called specht, from Alem. spach-en augurare, q. avis auguralis, i. e. the spay-bird. V. SPAE. Ihre thinks that it has the name skata, from skad-a to burt, to skaith. But this superstitious idea of the magpie was not confined to the Northern nations.

Among the Romans, he was much used in augury, and was always reckoned among the unlucky birds. V. Plin. Hist. Nat. L. x.ºc. 18.

PIBROCH, s. A Highland air, suited to the particular passion which the musician would either excite or assuage; generally applied to those airs that are played on the bagpipe, before the Highlanders, when they go out to battle.

Thou only saw'st their tartans wave, As down Benvoirlich's side they wound, Heard'st but the pibroch, answering brave To many a target clanking round.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 415, " Pibroch—a piece of martial music adapted to the Highland bagpipe." N. Ibid.

Gael. piobaireachd, "the pipe music, a march tune, piping," Shaw. Piob, a pipe.

PICHT, PYCHT, PIGHT, part. pa. 1. Pitched,

Gawayn, grathest of all, Ledes him oute of the halle, Into a pavilon of pall, That prodly was pight.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 8.

2. In the same sense, it seems to be metaph. transferred to a person.

Thocht subtill Sardanapulus, A prince were picht to rule and reigne, Yet, were his factes so lecherous, That euerie man might se them plaine. Poems Sixteenth Century, p. 203.

Expl. "strong," Gl. It certainly denotes establishment in empire.

3. Studded with gold, silver, or precious stones. Lyke as an gem wyth his brycht hew schinyng, Departis the gold set amydwart the ryng, Or in the crownell picht, or riche hingare.

Doug. Virgil, 318. 24. Tyrwhitt mentions O.E. pike as signifying to pitch. Skinner derives the latter from Ital. appicciar castra metari. V. Pight.

sand." Ibid. ep. 6. "What if the pickles of dust and ashes of the burnt and dissolved body were musicians to sing his praises." Ibid. ep. 28.

1. A small quantity, consisting of different parts, or articles, conjoined, S.

Your doghter wad na say me na ;-Say, what'll ye gi' me wi' her? Now, wooer, quo' he, I ha'e no meikle, But sic's I hae ye's get a pickle.— A kilnfu of corn I'll gi'e to thee, Three soums of sheep, twa good milk ky. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 199.

There was an old wife and a wee pickle tow, And she wad try the spinning o't.

Ross's Helenore, Song, p. 123. The term is never used of liquids, any more than its synon. curn.

5. A few, relating to number; A pickle fock, a few people, S.

Ere Simois' stream rin up the hill, Ida wi' pears not clad, He'll gar a little pickle Greeks Ding a' the Trojans dead.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 31. I know not the origin, unless it be Su.G. pik, spik, which seem to have been both used to denote grain when it begins to germinate, Lat. spic-u; or Su.G. pick, Dan. pik, a prick, a point, q. the small impression left by a sharp-pointed instrument.

This might seem allied to Ital. piccolo, (from Lat. pauculi,) little, small, un piccolo numero, a few. But this corresponds only to the secondary senses of the term.

PI-COW, pron. pee-cow, also pi-ox, s. The name given to the game of Hide and Seek, Ang. When the hiding party have concealed themselves, one of them cries pi-cow, as a sign that the one who is to seek may set to work.

From the last syllable in each of these designations, they have an evident affinity to the Germ. name of Blind man's buff, die blinde kuh, i. e. the blind cow. V. Belly-blind.

Perhaps the first syllable is from A.S. Su.G. piga, Dan. pige, pie, a girl, q. the girl who mimics a cow. If the masculine gender be supposed to correspond most to the ox, Su.G. Isl. poike, a boy, is not very dissimular, Dan. pog, id. whence PICTARNIE, s. The Great Tern or sea swallow; Sterna hirundo, Linn. S.

"Hirundo Marina, Sterna Turneri; our people call it the Picturné;" Sibb. Fife, p. 108.

"The birds that breed on the isles [of Lochleven] are Herring gulls, Pewit gulls, and great Terns, called here Pictarnés." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769,

In Orkn. and Caithn. this bird is called Picke-

"The name Picketarnie," it has been said, is a close imitation of the call of the bird." Neill's Tour, p. 42.

The last part of the word, however, corresponds to its name in other countries; Sw. tarna, Dan. tuerne, Norv. Sand-tuerne. Penn. Zool. p. 545.

PIEGE, s. A trap, as one for catching rats or mice; a snare of any kind, Perths. puge, Border; Fr. piege, id.

PIE-HOLE, s. A small hole for receiving a lace, an eye-hole, S.

Perhaps allied to Dan. pig, pyg, Su.G. pigg, a prick, a point, q. a hole made by a sharp-pointed instrument, as a bodkin.

PIEL, s. An iron wedge for boring stones, S.B.

A.S. pil, stylus; Teut. pyle, spiculum, telum. PIER, s. "A key, quay, wharf or harbour; as Leith pier;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 125. S.

PIETE', PIETIE, s. Pity, compassion, clemency. Haue reuth and pietie on sa feill harmes smert, And tak compassion in thy gentile hart.

Doug. Virgil, 43. 22. Fr. pieté, Ital. pieta, id. from Lat. pietas. This word deserves attention. For, as Rudd. has justly observed, where Virg. uses pius, the distinguishing character of his hero, Doug. renders it pitiful, compacient (compassionate); whence, he says, it is " plain, that originally the E. pity and piety are the same."

PIG, Pyg, s. 1. An earthen vessel, S. Doug.

uses it for a pitcher.

The kepare eik of thys maide Argus Was porturit thare, and fader Inachus, Furth of ane payntit pyg, quhare as he stude, Ane grete ryuere defoundand or ane flude.

Doug. Virgil, 237, a. 39. Caelata urna, Virg. Pigg, V. LAME. She that gangs to the well with ill will, Either the pig breaks, or the water will spill. Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 61.

It is also a proverbial phrase, applied to death, as expressive of indifference with respect to the place where the body may be interred; "Where the pig's broken let the sherds lie," S. Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 34.

2. Any piece of earthen ware, a potsherd, S.

Gael. pigadh, pigin, an earthen pitcher, Shaw. But as I can perceive no vestige of this word in any of the other Celt. dialects, I suspect that it has been borrowed from the language of the Lowlanders. PIG-MAN, s. A seller of crokery, S.

PIKARY, PICKERY, s. 1. Rapine. "Quhen he was cumyn to mannis age, he conquest his leuyng on thift and pikary." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 21. In MS. penes auct. it is "thift and roborie." Latrocinium, Boeth.

2. Petty theft, pilfering, S.

"The stealing of trifles, which in our law-language is styled pickery, has never been punished by the usage of Seotland, but by imprisonment, scourging, or other corporal punishments, unless where it was attended with aggravating circumstances." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. s. 59.

The first sense is most correspondent to Fr. picorée, plundering, from picor-er, to forage, to rifle, to rob; Ital. picar-e; hence E. pickeer, id. It is highly probable that the Fr. have borrowed this word from the Ital., and that the latter have retained it since the time of the Gothic irruptions; as Su.G. puck-a seems to convey the radical idea of extorting any thing by means of threatening; imperiose et minaciter aliquid efflagitare. Germ. pock-en, poch-en, signifies both to threaten and to strike.

To PIKE, v. a. To cull, to select, Doug. E.

Ihre observes that E. pick out, seligere, is of the same origin with Su.G. pek-a, indice vel digito monstrare, "to point out by the finger, or by any other instrument, the thing that we choose from among many."

To PIKE, v. a. To sail close by. -Sone the ciete's of Corcyra tyne we, And vp we pike the coist of Epirus, And landit there at port Chaonius.

Doug. Virgil, 77. 36.

Rudd. views this as a metaph. sense of pike to choose; but without any apparent relation. It might seem rather allied to Su.G. pek-a, to point towards the land. V. preceding word.

Teut. pyl, Fr. poil, Lat. pil-us, a hair.

PYLE, s. A small javelin; or perhaps a quarrel, an arrow with a square head, used in a cross-bow.

"And all others guha may have armour: sall haue ane bow, and arrowes out with the forrest: and within the forrest, ane bow, ane pyle." Stat. Will. c. 23. s. 5.

Du Cange is at a loss as to the determinate meaning of this term, as well as of L.B. pilatus, which occurs in a mandate of Hen, III. of England, containing the same injunction with that of William. Teut. pyl signifies an arrow; Su.G. pil, any weapon that may be thrown with the hand; Lat. pil-um, a kind of small spear, a javelin.

PYLEFAT, s.

He observes, that the high mountain, among the Alps, which the Fr. inhabitants called Mont Jou, and the Ital. Monte Jove, was anciently denominated Summum Penninum; concluding that Jupiter was by the ancient Germans called Pen or Pin, and that this name was given to him as being the supreme God. He adds, in confirmation, that the dies Jovis of the Romans is in Germ. still called Pendag, Pindag, and Pfindag. He seems, indeed, to view this name as originally given to the true God.

It appears to be allied to C.B. Arm. penn, head. According to Bullet, pin signifies the top or head of any thing.

To PINGE. V. PEENGE.

To PINGIL, PINGLE, v. n. 1. To strive, to endeavour to the utmost. S. it generally signifies, to labour assiduously without making much progress. The term involves the idea of difficulty.

With al there force than at the vterance, Thay pingil airis vp to bend and hale, With sa strang rouchis apoun athir wale; The mychty caruel schudderit at euery straike.

Doug. Virgil, 134. 12.

2. To contend, to vie with.

To se the hewis on athir hand is wounder, For hicht that semes pingill with heuin, and vnder In ane braid sand, souir fra all wyndys blawis.

Doug. Virgil, 18. 11.

3. To procure a scanty sustenance, although at the expence of much toil.

Bettir thou gains to leid a dog to skomer, Pynd pyck-purse pelour, than with thy Maister pingle;

Thou lay richt prydles in the peis this sommer, And fain at euin for to bring hame a single. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53.

4. v. a. To reduce to difficulty.

Thare restis na ma bot Cloanthus than, Quham finalie to persew he addrest, And pingillis hir vnto the vttermest.

Rudd. derives it from "Belg. pyn-en, to take great pains, to toil extremely." It has more resemblance of Germ. peinig-en, to pain, to trouble, a frequentative from pein-en, id. However, Su.G. pyng denotes labour, care, anxiety.

PINGIL, PINGLE, s. 1. A strife, a contention,

Tho' Ben and Dryden of renown.

Were yet alive in London town,

Like kings contending for a crown,

'Twad be a pingle,

Whilk o' you three wad gar words sound

And best to gingle.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 324.

2. Difficulty, S. "With a pingle, with a difficulty, with much ado," Rudd.

"Syne we laid our heads together, an' at it wi' virr; at last, wi' great pechin an' granin, we gat it up wi' a pingle." Journal from London, p. 6.

3. Apparently used to denote hesitation, q. difficulty in the mind.

His bairuly smiles and looks gave joy, He seem'd sae innocent a boy. I led him ben but any pingle,

And beckt [beekt] him brawly at my ingle.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 145.

PINGLING, s. Difficulty.

"They were all Borderers, and could ride and prick well, and held the Scottish men in pingling by their pricking and skirmishing, till the night came down on them." Pitscottie, p. 175.

I was na ca'd, says Lindy, but was knit, And in that seet three langsome days did sit; Till wi' my teeth I gnew the raips in twa, And wi' sair pingling wan at last awa.

To PINK, v. n. To contract the eye in looking at an object, to glimmer, S.

Teut. pinck-ooghen, oculos contrahere, et aliquo modo claudere. E. pink is used in a different sense; as properly signifying to wink, to shut the eyes entirely, or in a greater degree than is suggested by pink as used in S. Hence, PINKIE, adj. A term applied to small eyes, or to one who is accustomed to contract his eyes, S.

Meg Wallet wi' her pinky een Gart Lawrie's heart-strings dirle.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

To PINK, v. n. To trickle, to drop; applied to tears, S.B.

And a' the time the tears ran down her cheek, And pinked o'er her chin upon her keek.

Ross's Helenore, p. 29.

This is perhaps merely a metaph. sense of the v. explained above; a tear being said to steal over a woman's cheek to the lower part of her cap, in allusion to the stolen glance which the eye often takes when it seems to be nearly shut.

PINKIE, s. The little finger; a term mostly used by children, or in talking to them, Loth. Belg. pink, id. pinck, digitus minimus, Kilian.

PINKIE, s. The weakest kind of beer brewed for the table, S. perhaps from pink, as expressing the general idea of smallness.

PINKIE, s. The smallest candle that is made, S. O.Teut. pincke, id. cubicularis lucerna simplex; also, a glow-worm.

PINNER, s. 1. A head-dress or cap formerly worn by women of rank, having lappets pinned to the temples reaching down to the breast, and fastened there. It is now almost entirely disused, S.

And I man hae pinners.
With pearling set round,
A skirt of puddy,
And a wastcoat of broun.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 312.

2. A fleeing pinner, such a head-dress, having the ends of the lappets hanging loose, Ang.

It has been supposed that the name has originated from its being pinned. Johnson defines E. pinner, "the lappet of a head which flies loose;" deriving it from pinna or pinion. It is more probably a Fr. word. In the celebrated History of Prince Erastus, the term pignoirs occurs in such connexion, as to indicate that some kind of night-dress for the head is meant, such as might anciently be used even by males. "Outre cela elle y mit plusieurs autres besongnes de nuict, comme Coiffes, Couurchefs, Pignoirs, Oreilliers, et Mouchoirs fort subtilement ouurez." Histoire Pitoyable du Prince Erastus, Lyon, 1564, p. 12. 13. I have not met with this word in any Fr. Dict. L.B. pinna is used in the sense of ora, limbus, as denoting the border of a garment.

PINNER-PIG, s. V. PIRLIE-PIG.

PINNING, s. A small stone for filling up a crevice in a wall, S.

"They are found in various shapes and sizes, from that of the smallest pinnings, to the most solid binding masses employed in building." P. Falkland, Fifes. Statist. Acc. iv. 438.

Q. a stone employed as a pin.

PINSEL, s. A streamer. V. Pensel.

PIN-THE-WIDDIE, s. A small dried haddock not split, Aberd. corruptly pron. penny-widdie, Loth.

PINTILL-FISH, s.

"In this ile (Eriskeray) ther is daylie gottin aboundance of verey grate pintill-fishe at ebbe seas, and als verey guid for uther fishing, perteining to M'Neill of Barray." Monroe's Isles, p. 34.

This seems either a species of the Pipe fish; or the Launce, or Sand-eel.

PYOT, s. A magpie. V. PYAT.

PIPES. To tune one's pipes, a metaph. phrase, signifying to cry, S.

To PYRL, v. n. To prick, to stimulate.
On athir side his eyne he gan to cast;

Wallace, vi. 470. MS.

In Edit. 1648,-Some pricked at his ee.

Dan. pirr-er, to prick, to irritate, to stimulate; Sax. purr-en, id.; Su.G. purrig, irascible. Or it may be allied to Su.G. pryl, a long needle, an awl, pryl-a, stylo pungere.

To PIRL, v. n. To whirl, S.A.
An' cauld December's pirlin drift
Maks Winter fierce an' snell come.
Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 25.

This seems originally the same with Birle. V. under Birr.

PIRL-GRASS, s. Creeping wheat-grass, S. V. Felt. 1.

PIRLIE-PIG, PURLIE-PIG, s. A circular vessel of crockery, resembling what is called a Christmas box, which has no opening save a slit at top, only so large as to receive a halfpenny; used by children for keeping their money, S.B. Pinner-pig, S.O.

The box receives this form, that the owner may be under less temptation to waste his hoard, as, without breaking it, he can get out none of the money.

The same kind of box is used in Sweden, and called sparbossa; Testacea pyxis, in quam nummi conjiciuntur per adeo angustum foramen, ut inde, nisi fracto vase, depromi nequeant; Ihre.

This learned writer is at a loss, whether the name may be from spar-a, to spare, to preserve with caution, or sparr-a, to shut, and byssa, a box. In Su.G. it is also denominated girigbuk, literally greedy belly, because it keeps all that it receives; a term also metaph. applied to a covetous person. The Fr. name is Tirelire.

Pirlie-pig may be allied to Su.G. perla, union, and pig, a piece of crockery; because the design is to preserve small portions of money till they form a considerable sum. Or shall we suppose, that it was originally birlie-pig, from A.S. birl-ian, to drink, as thus those who wished to carouse together, at some particular time, might form a common stock?

Pinner, as it is pron. in the West, may be allied to Teut. penne-waere, merx, or Dan. penger, pl. money, literally, pennies; q. a vessel for holding money.

PIRN, s. 1. A quill, or reed on which yarn is wound, S.

"In this manufacturing country, such as are able to go about and beg, are generally fit, unless they have infant children, to earn their bread at home, the women by spinning, and the men by filling pirns, (rolling up yarn upon lake reeds, cut in small pieces for the shuttle)." P. Kirkden, Forfars. Statist. Acc. ii. 510.

- 2. The name is transferred to the yarn itself, in the state of being thus rolled up, S. A certain quantity of yarn, ready for the shuttle, is said to consist of so many pirns.
- "The women and weavers Scot. call a small parcel of yarn put on a broach (as they name it), or as much as is put into the shuttle at once, a pyrn." Rudd. vo. Pyrnit.
- 3. It is often used metaph. One, who threatens evil to another, says; I'll wind you a pirn, S.

Whisht, ladren, for gin ye say ought Mair, I'se wind ye a pirn,

To reel some day.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 277.

To redd a ravell'd pirn, to clear up something that is difficult, or to get free of some entanglement, S.

Ance let a hissy get you in the girn, Ere ye get loose, ye'll redd a ravell'd pirn.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 52.

As a pirn is sometimes called a broach, the yarn being as it were spitted on it, shall we view Su.G. pren, any thing sharp-pointed, as the radical word? Vol. II.

Pinn, s. The wheel of a fishing-rod, S. " A pirn (for angling), a wheel." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 159.

This seems to be merely an oblique use of the preceding word; from the circumstance of a weaver's pirn being turned round, both when the yarn is put on it, and when taken off.

PIRNYT, PYRNIT, part. pa. "Striped, woven with different colours," Rudd.

Ane garment he me gaif, or knychtly wede, Pirnyt and wouyn ful of fyne gold threde. Doug. Virgil, 246. 30.

The term, however, respects the woof that is used, corresponding to subtemine, Virg., especially as the woof is immediately supplied from pirns.

PIRNIE, adj. Used to denote cloth that has very narrow stripes, S. "Pirny cloth, a web of unequal threads or colours, striped," Gl. Rams.

The famous fiddler of Kinghorn

— Gart the lieges gawff and girn ay,
Aft till the cock proclaim'd the morn;
Tho' both his weeds and mirth were pirny.
Ramsay's Poems, i. 232.

Those who were their chief commanders, As such who bore the pirnie standarts, Who led the van, and drove the rear, Were right well mounted of their gear; With brogues, and trews, and pirnie plaids, With good blew bonnets on their heads.

Cleland's Poems, p. 12.

PIRR, s. A gentle breeze. It is commonly used in this connexion; There's a fine pirr of wind, S.

Isl. byr, bir, ventus secundus.

PYSAN, Pyssen, s. A gorget. V. Pesane. PISMIRE, s. A steelyard, Orkn.

"Their measure is not the same with ours, they not using peck and firlot, but instead thereof, weigh their corns on Pismires or Pundlers." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 28.

This is the same with BISMAR, q. v.

PISSANCE, s. Power.

Syne the pissance come of Ausonia, And the pepil Sicany hait alsua.

Doug. Virgil, 253. 20.

Bellend. uniformly uses the same word. Fr. puissance, from puis, Lat. poss-um.

Pissant, adj. Powerful; Fr. puissant.
Lord, our protectour to al traistis in the
But quham na thing is worthy nor pissant,
To vs thy grace and als grete mercy grant.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 126. 22.

PIT and GALLOWS, a privilege conferred on a baron, according to our old laws, of having on his ground a pit for drowning women, and gallows for hanging men, convicted of theft.

This is mentioned by Bellend. as one of the privileges granted to barons by Malcolm Canmore.

"It was ordanit als be the said counsal, that fre baronis sall mak jebattis, & draw wellis, for punition of criminabyl personis." Cron. B. xii. c. 9.

This, however, very imperfectly expresses the meaning of the original passage in Boeth.

"Constitutum quoque est eodem consilio a rege, uti Barones omnes puteos faciendi ad condemnatas plectendas foeminas, ac patibulum ad viros suspendendos noxios potestatem haberent." In this sense are we to understand furca et fossa, as privileges pertaining to barons. Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 4. s. 2. Quon. Attach. c. 77. In some old deeds, written in our language, these terms are rendered furc and fos.

This mode of punishment, by immersion, was also known in England. Spelman gives an account of a remarkable instance of it, in the reign of Rich. I., A. 1200. Two women, accused of theft, were subjected to the ordeal by fire, or by burning ploughshares. The one escaped; but the other, having touched the shares, was drowned in the Bike-pool. V. Spelm. vo. Furca.

It was one of the ancient customs of Burgundy, that women found guilty of theft, were condemned to be cast into a river. V. Chess. Consuetud. Burgund. ap. Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Fossa.

Mr. Pink. observes, that the punishment of drowning, now unknown, was formerly practised among the Gothic nations. The Swedes boasted of drowning five of their kings. He considers the pit as a relict of this practice; Enquiry, i. 30. This conjecture seems highly probable. Various writers have asserted, that the ancient Goths were wont to sacrifice men to their false deities, by precipitating them into a well, preserved for this purpose in the vicinity of their temples, or altars. V. Keysler. Antiq. Septentr. p. 47.

In the great solemnities of the heathen at Upsal in Sweden, the one whose lot it was to be immolated to the gods, was plunged headlong into a fountain adjoining to the place of sacrifice. If he died easily, it was viewed as a good omen, and his body was immediately taken out of the fountain, and hung up in a consecrated grove. For it was believed that he was translated to a place among the gods. Worm.

Monum. p. 23. 24.

It was one of the attributes of Odin, the great god of the Scandian nations, and doubtless a singular one, that he presided over the gallows. Hence he was called Hango; as being the god of those who were hanged. For the same reason, he was also designed Galgavalldr, i. e. the Lord of the Gallows; q. he who rules over, or wields, it. Landnamabok, p. 176. 361. 412. 417.

This phrase is known in Germany. Teut. Put ende Galghe; put, a well or pit, galghe, the gallows. Kilian, however, does not translate this phrase literally. "The right or power of the sword," he says, " supreme right, absolute power."

It deserves observation, that in the account which Tacitus gives of the punishments used by the ancient Germans, we may distinctly trace the origin of Pit and Gallows. " Proditiones transfugas arboribus suspendunt; ignavos et imbelles, et corpore infames, coeno ac palude, injecta insuper crate, mergunt." De Mor. German.

PITALL, s. The rabble. V. PETTAIL. PYTANE, s. A young child; generally used as a term of endearment, S.

It has been supposed that this is from Fr. petit, little, and ane, one. But it is more probably Fr. peton, properly, "a little foot; also, the slender stalk of a leaf, or of a fruit. Mon peton, my little springall, my gentle impe; any such flattering, or dandling phrase, bestowed by nurses on their suckling boyes," Cotgr.
To PITY, v. n. To regret.

"I pitied much to see men take the advantage of the time to cast their own conclusions in assemblyacts, though with the extreme disgrace or danger of many of their brethren." Baillie's Lett. i. 133.

PITIFUL, adi. Mournful, what may be regretted or lamented, S.

"God grant I may prove a false prognosticator. I look for the most pitiful schism that ever our poor church has felt." Baillie's Lett. i. 2. PITILL, s.

The Pitill and the Pipe gled cryand pewé, Befoir thir princes ay past, as pairt of purveyoris; For thay culd cheires chikkynis, and purchase poultré,

To cleik fra the commonis, as Kingis katouris.

Houlate, iii. 1. MS.

These, from their employment, seem to be both birds of prey. The latter is evidently some kind of hawk, denominated from its cry, perhaps the kestrel, or Falco tinnunculus, Linn. The former in name resembles A.S. bleripittel, in Gl. Aelfr. translated storicarius, by Lye scoricarius. Qu. the henharrier, le Lanier cendré of Brisson?

To PITTER-PATTER, v. n. 1. To repeat prayers after the Romish manner.

- The Cleck geese leave off to clatter,-And priests, Marias to pitter-patter.

Watson's Coll. i. 48. V. CLAIK, CLAKE.

2. To move up and down inconstantly, making a clattering noise with the feet, S.

" Pitter patter is an expression still used by the vulgar; it is in allusion to the custom of muttering pater-nosters." Bannatyne Poems, N. p. 247.

It is, I believe, also used as a s. V. PATTER. PLACAD, PLACKET, s. A placard, S.

"Some explorators were sent to the town of Edinburgh, to spy the form and fashion of all their proceedings; who, at their masters commands, affixed plackets upon the kirk-doors, sealed with the Earl's own hand and signet." Pitscottie, p. 44.

Teut. plackaet decretum, Su.G. placat, Germ. plakat; from plack-en, figere, because a placard, as Wachter observes, is affixed to some place for general inspection.

PLACE, s. The mansion house on an estate is called the Place, S.

"In the month of December 1636, William carl of Errol departed this life in the Place of Errol." Spalding's Troubles in Scotland, i. 54.

"In the middle of the moor-land appears an old tower or castle.—It is called the old Place of Mochrum. P. Mochrum, Wigtons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 570.

It may appear that this is an E. sense of the word, as Johnson explains it " a seat, a residence, a mansion." In support of this sense he quotes 1 Sam. xv. 12. "Saul set him up a place, and is gone down to Gilgal." But place here is to be understood of a monument or trophy of his victory over the Amalekites; according to the sense of the same term, in the Hebrew, 2 Sam. xviii. 18., where it is rendered a pillar.

The idiom is evidently Fr.; place being used for a castle or strong-hold. It was most probably restricted in the same manner, in its primary use in S., although now vulgarly applied to the seat of any one who is the proprietor of the estate on which it is built. Ihre views the Fr. term as allied to A.S. plaece a street, Su.G. plats, Teut. plaetse, an area. PLACEBOE, s. A parasite, one who fawns on "The Bischope of Brechine, having his Placeboes and Jackmen in the toun, buffetit the Freir, and callit him Heretyck." Knox's Hist. p. 14.; rendered Parasites and Jackmen," Lond. Edit. p. 14.

As denoting one who virtually takes for his motto the Lat. word Placebo; or as referring to the promise which he makes, that he will please his superior at all events. That this was viewed as the origin two centuries ago, appears from the following passage.

For no rewarde they work but wardlie gloir,

Playing placebo into princes faces;

With leyis and letteris doing thair devoir.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 306. PLACK, PLAK, s. 1. A billon coin, struck in the reign of James III.

"Our Souerane Lord-hes ordanit to ceis the cours and passage of all the new plakis last cuinyeit and gar put the samin to the fyre. And of the substance, that may be fynit of the samin to gar mak ane new penny of fyne siluer." Acts Ja. III. 1483. c. 114. Edit. 1566. c. 97, Murray.

This passage clearly proves that the placks referred to were of copper mixed with silver.

2. A small copper coin, formerly current in Scotland, equal to four pennies Scots, or the third part of an English penny. Although the word is still occasionally used in reckoning, it is now only a nominal coin, S.

" Of these some are called—placks, which were worth four pennies." Morysone's Itin. ap. Rudd.

Pref. to Diplom. p. 137.

"The plack is an ideal coin at this present time in Scotland." Cardonnel's Numism. Pref. p. 33. 34.

The word is often used to denote that the thing spoken of is of no value; It's no worth a plack, S. It has been early used in this sense.

Ye're nue a prophet worth a plak.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 83.

When one adopts any plan supposed to be unprofitable, or pursues a course offensive to a superior, it is frequently said; You'll no mak your plack a bawbee by that, S.

Teut. placke, plecke, according to Kilian, a coin of various value in different countries; in Louvain, the third part of a stiver, or the same with a groat; in Flanders, a stiver; Ital. piaccha, Hisp. placca. L.B. placa, a coin mentioned in a statute of Henry VI. of England, made at Paris 20th November A. 1426, equal to four greater Blancs. The blanc is half a sol, or about a farthing English. Du Cange also mentions plaque as a Fr. denomination of money; and indeed it seems to have been from the Fr. that the unfortunate Henry borrowed it. He afterwards observes, that the Placa weighed 68 or 69

As, in Louvain, placke was equivalent to a groat; this denomination might be adopted in S., because our plack contained the same number of pennies Scots, as there were English pence in a groat.

PLACKLESS, adj. Moneyless, having no money,

PLAGE, s. Quarter, point.

Ane dyn I hard approaching fast me by, Quhilk mouit fra the plage septentrionall. Palice of Honour, i. 8.

Lat. plag-a.

PLAID, s. Plea. V. PLEDE. PLAID, s. "A striped or variegated cloth; an outer loose weed worn much by the highlanders in Scotland," Johns.

"Their brechan, or plaid, consists of twelve or thirteen yards of a narrow stuff, wrapt round the middle, and reaches to the knees: is often fastened round the middle with a belt, and is then called brechanfeill; but in cold weather is large enough to wrap round the whole body from head to feet; and this often is their only cover, not only within doors, but on the open hills during the whole night. It is frequently fastened on the shoulders with a pin, often of silver, and before with a brotche, (like the fibula of the Romans) which is sometimes of silver, and both large and extensive; the old ones have very frequently mottos." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p.

The women also wear a plaid, but it is so narrow as seldom to come below the waist.

"The tonnag, or plaid, hangs over their shoulders, and is fastened before with a brotche; but in bad weather is drawn over their heads." Ibid. p. 212.

The plaid, however, is not confined to the High. lands. It is generally worn, by herds and others, in the South and West of S. It is in some places called a Rawchan, in others a Maud. The female plaid is also worn in Ang. and many other counties in the Lowlands.

"The women still retain the plaid, but among the better sort it is now sometimes of silk, or lined with silk." P. Tealing, Forfars. Statist. Acc. iv. 103.

Gael. plaide, id. Shaw. It seems doubtful, if this be properly a Gael. word; as it does not occur in the other Celt. dialects; unless we view it as the same with C.B. pleth, plica, a fold. V. Ihre, vo. Faall. Teut. plets signifies a coarse kind of cloth, panni vilioris genus. The same word also denotes, a patch or piece of cloth, segmentum, commissura panni, Kilian. MoesG. plat, assumentum, Alem. blezz, id. flezzi vestimentum. The ingenious editor of Popular Ballads says, in Gl.; "The word in the Gaelic, and in every other language of which I have any knowledge, means any thing broad and flat; and when applied to a plaid or blanket, signifies simply a broad, plain, unformed piece of cloth,' V. PLAIK.

PLAIDEN, PLAIDING, s. A coarse woollen cloth, not the same with flannel, as Sibb. says, but differing from it in being tweeled, S.

"A good many weavers are constantly employed in making coarse cloth, commonly called ptaiden, from the produce of their sheep, which, in the summer markets, is sold for from 9d. to 1s. the Scotch ell." P. Dallas, Elgin, Statist. Acc. iv. 109.

Either from plaid, as being cloth of the same quality with that worn in plaids; or Tent. plets, q. v. under Plaid.

Wyntown, ix. 6. 146. Mr. MacPherson thinks this probably corrupted. In another MS. pheralis occurs. This word is commonly used in the West of S. for toys or playthings. We can scarcely suppose that Wyntown should so remarkably depreciate the Bishop's donations, as to give them so mean a designation. Such language would have been natural enough for Lyndsay or some of his contemporaries.

PLAITINGS. V. Soleshoe.

PLANE, adj. Apparently as signifying, full, consisting of its different constituent branches.

"The haill thre Estatis of the Realme sittand in plane Parliament, that is to say, the Clergy, Barronis, and Commissionaris of Burrowis be ane assent, nane discreipand, weill auisit and deliuerit, hes reuokit all alienatiounis," &c. Acts Ja. II. 1437. c. 2. Edit. 1566.

PLASMATOR, PLASMATOUR, s. The former, the maker; Gr. πλασματωρ.

"The supreme plasmator of hauyn ande eird hes permittit them to be boreaus, to puneis vs for the mysknaulage of his magestie." Compl. S. p. 41.

Thir monarcheis, I understand, Preordinat war be the command Of God, the Plasmatour of all, For to dounthring, and to mak thrall.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 106.

PLASTROUN, s.

A plastroun on her knee she laid, And there on love justly she plaid. There to her neighbours sweetly sang; This lady sighed oft amang.

Sir Egeir, p. 11.

A musical instrument is certainly meant. The writer may have mistaken the name. Gr. πλαστζον, Lat. plectrum, denote the instrument with which the strings of an harp are struck. Hence, perhaps, the term is here applied to the harp itself.

To PLAT, PLET, v. a. To plait, to fold; used to denote the act of embracing.

Wyth blyth chere there he hym plet, In [his] armis so thankfully, That held his ward so worthely.

Wyntown, ix. 27. 430.

PLAT, adj. 1. Flat, level.

The quiet closettys opnyt wyth ane reird, And we lay plat grufelyngis on the erd.

Doug. Virgil, 70. 26.

2. Low, as opposed to what is high.

Thair litil bonet, or bred hat,

Sumtyme heiche, and sumtyme plat,

Waites not how on thair hede to stand.

Maitland Poems, p. 184.

3. Close, near.

The stede bekend held to his schoulder plat, And he at eis apoun his bak down sat.

Doug. Virgil, 351. 46.

Plat is often used by Chaucer and Gower in the sense of flat.

He leyth down his one eare all plat.

Conf. Am. Fol. 10.

Su.G. platt, Teut. plat, Arm. Fr. plat, Ital. platto, piatto, planus, PLAT, adv. Flatly.

Teut. plat, planè et aperte; Su.G. platt penitus. Chaucer and Gower also use plat as an adv.

But notheles of one assent They myghte not accorde plat.

i. e. they could not entirely agree. Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 16. a.

PLAT, PLATT, s. A model, a plan.

Doug. Virgit, 245. 13.

"By an act of Platt, dated at Edinburgh the 22d of November [1615] the several Dignit[ar]ies and Ministers, both in the Bishoprick and Earldom, were provided to particular maintenances—payable by the King and Bishop to the Ministers in their several bounds respective." Wallace's Orkney, p. 90.

In the same sense must we understand the legal

In the same sense must we understand the legal phrase, "Decrees of plat—and valuation of Teinds." V. Jurid. Stiles, Vol. iii. Stile of Summons of Adjudication.

Teut. plat, exemplar. Hence E. plat-form. Plot, as signifying a plan, seems radically the same. The parent-term is plat planus, aequalis; also, latus. Hence the word denoting a plan; q. something laid out plainly, or in all its extent; also Germ. plat, a table, a plate of metal, a plate for holding food; all from their being plain or level.

PLAT, PLATT, PLATE, s. 1. A dash, a stroke to the ground.

i. e. with many or repeated dashings of themselves on the ground, in consequence of the pain of the mortal blow they have received.

2. A blow with the fist.

Sapience, thow servis to beir a platt;

Me think thow schawis the not weill wittit.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 117.

Speid hame, or I sall paik thy cote.

And to begin, fals Cairle, tak thair ane plate.

Ibid. p. 9.

Rudd. views this as the same with plat flat, q. beating flat to the ground. But Teut. plets-en signifies, palma quatere; depsere, subigere; plett-en, conculcare, contundere; Germ. pletz-en, cum strepitu et impetu cadere. Perhaps it is still more nearly allied to A.S. plaett-as; "alapae, cuffs, blows, buffets," Somner. Su.G. plaett, ictus levis, (plaett-a, to tap, Wideg.) A.S. plaet-an ferire; whence Fr. playe, Bremens. pliete, a wound.

To PLAT UP, v. a. To erect; perhaps including the idea of expedition.

"Leith fortifications went on speedily; above 1000 hands, daily employed, plat up towards the sea sundry perfect and strong bastions, well garnished with a number of double cannon, that we feared not much any landing of ships on that quarter." Baillie's Lett. i. 160.

Can this signify, plaited up, from the ancient custom of wattling? Hence, perhaps, A.S. plett, pletta, a sheepfold.

PLATFUTE, s. A term anciently used in music.

This propir Bird he gave in gouerning To me, quhilk was his simpill seruiture; On guhome I did my diligence and cure, To leirn hir language artificial,

To play platfute, and quhissil fute befoir. Papingo, Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 187.

Platfute seems to have been a term of reproach, originally applied to one who was plain-soled, and thence ludicrously to some dance. Teut. plat-voet, planipes; plancus. As corresponding to plancus, it was, therefore, also synon. with splay-foot. PLEDE, PLEID, PLEYD, s. 1. Controversy, de--Quhare thar is in plede twa men Askand the crowne of a kynrike,-But dowt, the nest male in the gre Preferryd to the rewme suld be.

-Bot gif the fatis, but pleid, At my plesure sufferit me life to leid,-The cieté of Troy than first agane suld I Restore .-Doug. Virgil, 111. 34. Plaide is used, Baron Lawes.

2. A quarrel, a broil.

He gart his feit defend his heid,-Quhile he was past out of all pleid.

Chr. Kirk, st. 17.

3. Care, sorrow; metaph. used.

Sche fild ane stoip, and brought in cheis and Thay eit and drank; and levit all thair pleud. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 68. The transition is natural enough, as strife or debate generally produces sorrow.

Belg. Hisp. pleyte, lis, litigium; Fr. plaid. Killian thinks that it is perhaps from plactse, area, forum. It may be radically allied to Plat, a dash; a blow, q. v.; or rather to A.S. pleo. V. PLEY. To PLEDE, PLEID, v. n. To contend, to quarrel, Doug. Virgil. V. the s.

To PLEDGE, v. a. "To invite to drink, by accepting the cup or health after another," Johns.

This term is not peculiar to S., but used by Shakspeare and other E. writers. I mention it, therefore, merely to take notice of the traditionary account given of its origin. It is said that in this country, in times of general distrust in consequence of family feuds, or the violence of factions, when a man was about to drink, it was customary for some friend in the company to say, I pledge you; at the same time drawing his dirk, and resting the pommel of it on the table at which they sat. The meaning was, that he pledged his life for that of his friend, while he was drinking, that no man in company should take advantage of his defenceless situa-

Shakspeare would seem to allude to this custom, when he says;

-The fellow, that

Parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught, Is the readiest man to kill him.

Tim. of Athens. The absurd and immoral custom of pledging one's self to drink the same quantity after another, must have been very ancient. "Alexander, the Macedonian, is reported to have drunk a cup containing two Congii, which contained more than one pottle, tho' less than our gallon, to Proteas, who commend. ing the King's ability, pledg'd him, then called for another cup of the same dimensions, and drank it off to him. The King, as the laws of good fellow-ship required, pledg'd Proteas in the same cup, but being immediately overcome, fell back upon his pillow, letting the cup fall out of his hands, and by that means was brought into the disease whereof he shortly after died, as we are informed by Athenaeus." Potter's Antiq. Greece, ii. 396. Such was the end of Alexander the Great!

PLEY, PLEYE, s. 1. A debate, a quarrel, a broil, S.

O worthy Greeks, thought ye like me, This pley sud seen be deen; The wearing o' Achilles graith Wad be decided seen.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 14.

2. A complaint or action at law, whether of a criminal or civil nature; a juridical term, S.

plea, E.
"The pley of Barons perteins to the Schiref of the countrie." Reg. Maj. 1. c. 3. s. 1.

"Criminall pleyes, touches life or lim, or capitall peines." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Mote.

Placitum is the correspondent term, L.B.

Skene derives this word from Fr. plaider to plead, to sue at law. But its origin is certainly A.S. pleo, pleoh, danger, debate.
To PLEY, v. n. To plead, to answer in a court

"Gif ane Burges is persewed for any complaint, he sall not be compelled to pley without his awin burgh, bot in default of Court, not halden." Burrow Lawes, c. 7. s. 1. V. the s.

PLEINYEOUR, s. A complainer. Acts Ja. II. To PLENYE, v. n. To complain, Barbour. V. PLAINY1E.

- To PLENYS, PLENYSS, PLENISH, v. a. 1. To furnish; most generally to provide furniture for a house. V. the s. It also signifies to stock a farm, S.
- 2. To supply with inhabitants, to occupy. Quhen Scottis hard thir fyne tythingis off new, Out off all part to Wallace fast thai drew, Plenyst the toun quhilk was thair heretage. Wallace, vi. 264. MS.

Ibid. xi. 46. MS. PLENNISSING, PLENISING, s. Household furniture.

"His heire sall have to his house this vtensell or insicht (plennissing)." Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 1.

"Ye ar uncertaine in what moment ye wil be warned, it becommeth vs to send our plenising, substance and riches befoir us." Bruce's Eleven Serm. H. 6. b.

"S. plenishing, houshold furniture, supellex; to plenish a house, to provide such furniture;" Rudd.

To PLENT, v. n. To complain. V. PLAINT.

PLENTEOUS, adj. Complaining.

"Attachments ar to be called ane lawful binding, be the quhilk ane party is constrained against his wil to stand to the law, and to doc sic right and reason as he aught of law to ane other partie, that is plenteous to him." Baron Courts, c. 2. s. 3.

From Fr. plaintif, plaintive, complaining; or formed like those Fr. words ending in eux.

PLEP, s. Any thing weak or feeble, S.B. Hence, PLEPPIT, adj. Feeble, not stiff; creased. A pleppit dud, a worn out rag; weffil, synon. Perhaps q. belappit, a thing that has been creased and worn in consequence of being wrapped round something else.

PLESANCE, s. Pleasure, delight. Fr. plais-ance.

Quhen other lyvit in joye and plesance, Thaire lyfe was nought bot care and repentance. King's Quair, iii. 18.

To PLESK, v. n. V. PLASH.
To PLET, v. a. To quarrel, to reprehend. First with sic bustuous wourdis he thame gret, And but offence gan thame chiding thus plet.

Doug. Virgil, 177. 10.

Rudd. views this as corr. for the sake of the rhyme, from plede or plead. There is, however, no occasion for this supposition. The term exactly corresponds to Teut. pleyt-en, litigare. PLEVAR, s. A plover.

Thair was Pyattis, and Pertrekis, and Plevaris Houlate, 1. 14. MS.

PLEUCH, PLEUGII, s. 1. A plough.

In the meyn tyme Eneas with ane pleuch The cieté circulit, and markit be ane seuch.

Doug. Virgil, 153. 10. A.S. Su.G. plog, Alem. pluog, phluog, Germ. pflug, Belg. ploeg, Pol. plug, Bohem. pluh. Some derive this term from Syr. pelak, aravit.

2. That constellation called Ursa Major, denominated from its form, which resembles a plough, fully as much as it does a wain, S.

The Pleuch, and the poles, and the planettis

The Son, the seuin sternes, and the Charle wane. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. b. 1.

There is an evident impropriety here; as the good Bishop mentions the same constellation under two different names.

Our forefathers may have adopted this name from the Romans. For they not only called it plaustrum, from its resemblance to a waggon, but Triones, i. e. ploughing oxen, q. teriones, enim propriè sunt boves aratorii dicti eo quòd terram terant; Isidor. p. 910. This name was properly given to the stars composing this constellation, in number seven; therefore called septem triones, whence septentrio, as signifying the North, or quarter in which they appear.

Another constellation, because of its vicinity to this, is called Bootes, i. e. the ex-driver. Bootem dixerunt eo quòd plaustro haeret. Isidor. ut sup.

PLEUCH-GANG, PLOUGH GANG, s. As much land as can be properly tilled by one plough, S.

"The number of plough-gangs, in the hands of tenants, is about $141\frac{1}{2}$,—reckoning 13 acres of arable land to each plough-gang." P. Moulin, Perths. Statist. Acc. v. 56.

This corresponds to plogland, a measure of land known among the most ancient Scythians, and all the inhabitants of Sweden and Germany. We also use the phrase a pleuch of land, S. in the same "Hida terrae, ane pleuch of land," Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Hilda.

PLEUCH-GATE, PLOUGH-GATE, v. The same with plough-gang, S. "There are 56 plough-gates and a half in the parish." P. Innerwick, Haddington, Statist. Acc. i. 121. 122.

Gate is evidently used in the same sense with gang. q. as much land as a plough can go over. Gate seems to be most naturally deduced from Su.G. gaa to go, as Lat. iter from eo.

PLEUCHGEIRE, v. The furniture belonging to a plough, as coulter, &c., S. Pleuch-irnes, synon.

Quhat-sum-ever persone-destroyis pleuch and pleuchgeire, in time of teeling,—sall be—punished therefore to the death, as thieves." Acts Ja. VI. 1587, c. 82. Murray. V. Ger.

Pleuchgraith, s. The same with pleuchgeire, S.

"Destroyers of—pleuchgraith—suld be punish.

ed as thieues." Ind. Skene's Acts. V. Sowme, SOYME.

PLEUCH-IRNES, PLWYRNYS, s. pl. The iron instruments belonging to a plough, S.

He pleyhnyd to the Schyrrawe sare, That stollyn his plwyrnys ware.

Wyntown, viii. 24. 48. Isl. plogiarn signifies the ploughshare. Thus in the account given of the trial by ordeal, which Harold Gilli was to undergo, in proving his affinity to the royal family of Norway, it is said; ix plog-iarn gloandi voro nidrlogd, oc geck Haralldr thar eptir, berom fotom: Nine burning ploughshares were laid on the ground, through which Harold walked barefoot. Heimskringla, ap. Johnst. Antiq. C. Scand. p. 246.

PLY, s. Plight, condition, S.

Thy pure pynd throple peilt, and out of ply,-Gars men dispyt thair flesch, thou spreit of Gy. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 56.

Fr. pli, habit, state.

PLY, s. A fold, a plait, S.

This is given by Johns., on the authority of Arbuthnot, as an E. word. But it will be found, in various instances, that the words quoted from Arbuthnot as E. are in fact S.

PLYCHT, s.

For my trespass quhy suld my sone haif plycht? Quha did the myss, lat thame susteine the paine. Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 117. st 8. Lord Hailes gives this among words not understood. Mr. Pinkerton, when explaining some of these, says; "Plycht is injury; literally, sad case; a man is in a sad plight. See King Hart." But this word needs no adj. to express its meaning. This is to make it merely the common E. word. It may signify either obligation or punishment, although the latter seems preferable.

Teut. plicht, obligatio; Holland. judicium. Su.G. plicht, pligt, denotes both obligation, and the punishment due in consequence of the neglect of it; kirkoplicht, poena ecclesiastica. The word in the first sense, is from A.S. plihtan, Su.G. pligta, spondere. But Ihre thinks that, as used in the second, it may be from Su.G. plaaga cruciatus.

To PLISH-PLASH, v. n. A term denoting the dashing of liquids in successive shocks, caused by the operation of the wind or of any other body, S.

Now tup-horn spoons, wi' muckle mou, Plish-plash'd; nae chiel was hoolie.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 144.

This is a reduplicative word, formed, like many others in our language, from the v. Plash, q. v.

PLISH-PLASH, adv. A thing is said to play plishplash, S. in the sense given of the v.

PLISKIE, s. Properly, a mischievous trick; although sometimes used to denote an action, which is productive of bad consequences, although without any such intention, S.

Their hearts the same, they daur'd to risk aye
Their lugs in onie rackless pliskie;
For, now, inur'd to loupin dykes,

They nouther dreaded men nor tykes.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 90. V. SNACKIE.

This is perhaps formed from A.S. plaega, plega, play, sport, by means of the termination isc, Goth. isk, expressive of increment, q. plegisc, sport degenerating into mischief. V. Wachter, Prolog. Sect. 6. vo. Isch. It confirms this etymon, that it is commonly said, He has play'd me a bonny pliskie, S.

This refers to Black Agnes of Dunbar.

"O.Fr. plaud-er, bang, maul, &c." Gl. Perhaps from the same origin with Plat, s. q. v.

PLOY, s. 1. A harmless frolic, a piece of entertainment, S.

"A ploy, a little sport or merriment; a merry meeting." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 125.

It properly denotes that sort of amusement in which a party is engaged; and frequently includes the idea of a short excursion to the country.

2. It sometimes denotes a frolic, which, although begun in jest, has a serious issue, S.

----Ralph unto Colin says;
You hobbleshow is like some stour to raise.—

Says Colin, for he was a sicker boy, Neiper, I fear, this is a kittle ploy.

Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

It is even used with respect to a state of warfare. John was a clever and auldfarrand boy,
As you shall hear by the ensuing ploy.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 263.

To PLOT, v. a. 1. To scald, to burn by means of boiling water, S.

E'en while the tea's fill'd reeking round, Rather than plot a tender tongue, Treat a' the circling lugs wi' sound, Syne safely sip when ye have sung.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 199.

To make any liquid scalding hot, S.
 To burn, in a general sense; but improperly used.

I never sooner money got, But all my poutches it would plot, And scorch them sore, it was sae hot.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 26. PLOTCOCK, s. A name given to the devil.

"In this mean time, when they were taking forth their artillery, and the King [James IV.] being in the Abbay for the time, there was a cry heard at the market-cross of Edinburgh, at the hour of midnight, proclaiming as it had been a summons, which was named and called by the proclaimer thereof, The Summons of Plotcock; which desired all men, to compear, both Earl and Lord, and Baron and Gentleman, and all honest Gentlemen within the town (every man specified by his own name) to compear, within the space of forty days, before his master, where it should happen him to appoint, and be for the time, under the pain of disobedience." Pitscottie, p. 112.

This is said to have taken place before the fatal battle of Flodden.

This name seems to have been retained in Ramsay's time.

At midnight hours o'er the kirkyard she raves, And seven times does her prayers backward pray,

Till Plotcock comes with lumps of Lapland clay,
Mixt with the venom of black taids and snakes:
Of this unsonsy pictures aft she makes
Of ony ane she hates, and gars expire
With slow and racking pains afore a fire,

Stuck fou of prines; the devilish pictures melt; The pain by fowk they represent is felt.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 95.

This has been supposed to be a corr. of Pluto, the name of that heathen deity who was believed to reign in the infernal regions. It does not appear that this name was commonly given to the devil. It may be observed, however, that the use of it in S. may have originated from some Northern fable; as our forefathers seem to have been well acquainted with the magical operations of Sweden and Lapland; and according to the last passage, Plotcock brings Lapland clay, which, doubtless, would have some peculiar virtue. B may have been changed to P; for according to Rudbeck, the Sw. name of Pluto was Blut-mader; Atalant. i. 724. In Isl. he is denominated Blotgod, i. e. the god of sacrifices, from Su.G. blot-a, MoesG. blot-an, to sacrifice, and this from bloth, blood.

PLOUD, s. A green sod, Aberd.

"They are supplied with turf and heather from the muirs, and a sort of green sods, called plouds, which they cast in the exhausted mosses." P. Leochel, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vi. 218.

Fland. plot-en, membranam sive corium exuere. A piece of green sward is called S. flag, for the same reason, from flag-a, deglubere, because the ground is as it were flayed.

PLOUT, s. A heavy shower of rain, S.

Belg. plots-en, to fall down suddenly, to fall down plump, Sewel.

To PLOUTER, v. n. To make a noise among water, to work with the hands or feet in agitating any liquid, to be engaged in any wet and dirty work, S. nearly synon. with paddle, E.

Sibb. writes plowster, which he resolves into poolstir. But it may more naturally be traced to Germ. plader-n, humida et sordida tractare; plader, sordes; Wachter. This is evidently from the same root with Teut. plots-en, plotsen int water, in aquam irruere. Plash, q. v. is certainly from the same common stock. This observation applies perhaps to E. splutter.

PLOUTER, s. The act of floundering through water or mire. S. He'd spent mair in brogues gaun about her,

Nor hardly was weel worth to waur; For mony a foul weary plouter

She'd cost him through gutters and glaur. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 294.

A. Bor. plowding, wading through thick and thin, is evidently from the same fountain. V. Grose. PLUCK, s. The Pogge, a fish; small and ugly, supposed by the fishers to be poisonous, S. Cottus cataphractus, Linn.

PLUCKUP, PLUKUP, s.

-Na expensis did he spair to spend, Quhill pece was brocht vnto ane finall end. Quhar as he fand vs at the plukup fair, God knawis in Scotland quhat he had ado With baith the sydis, or he could bring vs to.

Poems Sixteenth Century, p. 299. This is left without expl. in Gl. But at the plukup fair certainly signifies, completely in a state of dissension, ready to pull each others ears.

Pluck, v. S.B. signifies to spar; They pluckit ane anither like cocks. The E. phrase, to pluck a crow, is allied; also, Belg. plukhaair-en, to fall together by the ears. The word in form, however, most nearly resembles the E. v. to pluck up, as signifying to pull up by the roots.

POCK-SHAKINGS, s. pl. A vulgar term, used to denote the youngest child of a family, S.

It often implies the idea of something puny in appearance. Hence it is usual to say of a puny child, that he scems to be the pockshakings. This probably alludes to the meal which adheres to a pock or bag, and is shaken out of it, which is always of a smaller grain than the rest.

It is remarkable that the very same unpolished idea occurs in Isl. Belguskaka, vocatur a vulgo ultimus parentum natus vel nata, from belg-ur a bag or pock, and skak-a to shake. V. G. Andr. p. 211.

PÓD, ś.

Montgomery, Watson's Coll. iii. 4. This is probably a term denoting smallness of size; as the poem abounds with words of this description. A plump or lusty child is called a pud, often a fat pud, S. Or it may be the same with pade a toad, q. v. as implying the idea of pollution; Teut. podde, bufo. V. Poid.

PODLE, s. A tadpole, S. synon. pow-head, q. v. This seems a dimin. from Teut. podde, a frog. PODLIE, PODLEY, s. A term used to denote fish of different kinds, in different counties of S.

1. The fry of the coal fish; Gadus carbonarius, Linn. This is most commonly known by the name of podly, Loth. It is the silluk or cuth of Orkn.

Fish of every kind have become scarce, in so much that there is not a haddock in the bay. All that remain are a few small cod, podlies, and flounders." P. Largo, Fifes. Statist. Acc. iv. 537.

"The fish most generally caught, and the most useful, is a grey fish here called cuths, of the size of small haddocks, and is the same with what on the south coast is called podley, only the cuth is of a larger size." P. Cross, Orkney, Statist. Acc. vi. 453.

These seem to be the fish called padles, Ross-shire. "Prawns, small rock and ware cod, gurnet, turbot, and padles are found; but for the last 3 years all the small fish have decreased very much, except flounders." Statist. Acc. iii. 309.

2. This name is frequently given to the Green-backed Pollack or Gadus Virens, Loth.

"Asellus virescens Schonfeldii; our fishers cail it a Podly." Sibb. Fife, p. 123.

"Podley, a small fish, (Gadus virens, Linn.") Sibb. Gl.

A.S. pynd-an to shut up; whence E. pound, a pinfold, or prison in which beasts are inclosed; and the v. pound, "to shut up, to imprison as in a pound," Johns. Mr. MacPherson mentions Belg. poyntinge, exaction, as allied. We may add Isl. pynding, career, a prison, Verel.

The original idea is still retained in S. He, who finds cattle trespassing on his ground, is said to poind them, when he shuts them up, till such time as he receives a sufficient compensation from the owners.

for the damage done.

Germ. pfand-en also signifies to distrain. Sw. ut-panta is used in the same sense, as quoted by Verel. Ind. vo. Atfor, p. 19.; and pant-a, to take in pledge. These are from Germ. pfand, Su.G. pant, a pledge.

This seems to lead us to the true origin of poind. For this in the L.B. of our law is called Namare, namos capere, which Skene expl. pignorare, sive pignus auferre, and derives from Naman, a Saxon word. Name is mentioned by Lye, as denoting what is now called distress, E. (poinding, S.) and deduced from A.S. nim-an capere. Su.G. nam-a, naem-a, signifies to seize any thing as a pledge. What is thus seized is called nam. Namfae denotes cattle seized in pledge; Akernam, the poinding of cattle that have trespassed, till the damage be paid, from aker a field, and nam. What confirms this derivation is, that whereas Belg. pand is a pledge, a pawn, and panden, to pawn, pander signifies a distrainer. Thus, to poind properly signifies, to take something as a pledge of indemnification.

POYND, POWND, s. 1. That which is distrained, S.

"The sergents sall cause the poynds to be delivered to the creditour, vntill the debt be fullie payared to him." Sec. Stat. Rob. I. c. 20. s. 6.

2. The prey taken in an inroad.

POLDACH, s. Marshy ground lying on the side of a body of water; a term used in the higher parts of Ang.

Belg. polder, a marsh, a meadow on the shore; or, a low spot of ground inclosed with banks.

POLICY, POLLECE, s. The pleasure-ground, or improvements about a gentleman's seat, especially in planting, S.

" For policie to be had within the realme, in planting of woddis, making of hedgeis, orchardis, yairdis, and sawing of brome, it is statute—that euerie man, spirituall and temporall within this realme, hauand ane hundreth pund land of new extent be yeir, and may expend samekill, quhair thair is na woddis nor forestis, plant wod and forest, and mak hedgeis and haning for him self, extending to thre akers." Acts Ja. V. 1535, c. 10. Edit.

In the reign of Ja. VI. we find that an act was passed against "the destroyers of planting, haning, and policie." A. 1579. c. 84.

"His lordship's policy surrounds the house.— The word here signifies improvements or demesne: when used by a merchant, or tradesman, signifies their warehouses, shops, and the like." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 94.

I have not remarked the use of the term in the latter sense.

It has undoubtedly been formed from Fr. police. Droict de police, " power to make particular orders for the government of all the inhabitants of a town or territory, extending to-streets or highways." Hence, policier, -ere, "belonging to the government of a town or territory," Cotgr.

POLIST, adj. Artful, designing, generally as including the idea of fawning; as, a polist loun, a crafty knave, S.

It is evidently from the v. polish, Fr. polir, to sleek; and used in the same metaph. sense as S. sleekit.

POLKE, POCK, s. A kind of net.

-" Ordainis the saidis actes to-have effectagainst the slayers of the saidis reid fish, in forbidden time, be biesis, casting of wandes or utherwise: or that destroyes the smoltes and frye of salmound in mil-dammes, or be polkes, creilles, trammel-nets, and herrie-waters." Acts Ja. VI. 1579. c. 89.

The same term is used for a pock or bag, Bannatyne Poems, p. 160.

-Ane pepper-polk maid of a padell.

As used in the Act, it evidently denotes a net made in form of a bag.

POLLAC, s. The name of a fish.

POORTITH, s. Poverty. V. PURTYE.

POPE'S KNIGHTS, s. A designation formerly given to priests of the church of Rome, who were at the same time distinguished by the title of Sir.

"Sir Andrew Oliphant, one of the Archbishops Priests, commanded him to arise (for he was upon his knees) and answer to the articles, said | saying], Sir Walter Mill, get up and answer, for you keep my Lord here too long; he notthelesse continued in his devotion, and that done he arose, and said, he ought to obey God more then men; I serve a mightier Lord than your Lord is. And where you call me Sir Walter, they call me Walter, and not-Sir Walter; I have been too long one of the Popes Knights: now say what you have to say." Spotswood's Hist. p. 95.

Tyrwhitt says, that "the title of Sire was usually given by courtesy to Priests, both secular and regular;" Canterbury Tales, iii. 287, Note; and that "it was so usually given to Priests, that it has crept even into acts of Parliament." Of this he gives different examples, in the reigns of Edw. IV. and Henry VII. Gl. vo. Sire.

"An instance of the title Sir being applied to our clergy, occurs in Froissart; who, in speaking of some of the earl of Douglas's knights, that kept by him after he fell at Otterburn, mentions also one of his chaplains, that fought valiantly, Sir William of Norberrych [probably North-Berwick]. The clerical application of the title became common with us, whether derived from the custom of France, from some pontifical grant, or from the establishment which the eastern monastic knights, particularly those of St. John, had acquired in this country." Brydson's View of Heraldry, p. 174. 175.

It was used in the same manner by O.E. writers.

It occurs also in R. Brunne's Chronicle, p. 257.

Although it appears that in Scotland this title was more generally conferred on priests, it was occasionally given to the regular clergy. "The proprietor of Cross-Ragwell abbey, Sir Adam Fergusson, has a copy of a testamentary deed, dated M.D.XXX.; wherein a number of monks, to whom it relates, have each the title sir [dominus] prefixed to his name. Some more recent instances of this title being applied to the clergy, occur in Malone's notes on Shakspeare [character of Sir Hugh Evans,"]. Brydson, p. 176.

My ingenious friend, Mr. Brydson, andering to W. Mill's reply, when arraigned before the A 😘 bishop, observes that "a title thus judicially employed, and disclaimed as characterising the pope's knights, appears to have had some other foundation than mere courtesy." Ibid. p. 175.

I have met with no evidence, however, that it had any other foundation. During the reign of James V. this title seems to have been commonly given to priests. The persons who apprehended W. Mill, are designed, "Sir George Strachen, and Sir Hugh Torry, two of the Archbishop of St. Andrews Priests;" Spotswood ubi sup. The priest, who interrogated him, is, as has been seen, designed Sir Andrew Oliphant. Spotswood elsewhere mentions Sir William Kirk Priest, Sir Duncane Simpson Priest, p. 66. "a priest called Sir John Weighton," p. 77. &c.

Sir David Lyndsay evidently views it as merely complimentary.

The sillie Nun will thinke greit schame, Without scho callit be Madame. The pure priest thinkis he gettis na richt, Be he nocht stilit like ane knicht, And callit Schir, befoir his name; As Schir Thomas, and Schir Williame. All Monkis, ye may heir and sie, Ar callit Denis, for dignitie: Howbeit his mother milk the kow, He mon be callit Dene Androw, Dene Peter, Dene Paull, and Dene Robart. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 133.

Dene is undoubtedly the same with Dan, used by Doug. O.Fr. dam. V. DAN.

In an early period, in England priests were denominated God's knights. Langland, having described temporal knights, gives the following account of the spiritual ones.

For made neuer king a knight, but he had catel to spend,

As befell for a knight, or founde him for his strenght .-The bishop shal be blamed before God, as I

That crowneth such gods knightes that can not sapienter

Synge ne psalme read, ne say a masse of the

And neuer nether is blamles, the bishop or the chaplen,

For here ether is indited, & that is ignorantia. P. Ploughman, Fol. 57, b.

This was most probably the designation that the clergy took to themselves, in allusion to the injunction given to Timothy, to "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." I need scarcely observe that miles, the word which occurs in the Vulgate, is often used as equivalent to eques, a knight, Fr. chevalier. Hence the Knights Templars adopted this honourable designation; and had this inscription on the seal of their order, Sigillum Militum Christi. V. Monastic. Anglican. ii. 997. Du Cange, vo. Miles. Monks, in general, were also occasionally designed Christ's Knights, Equites Christi; Du Cange, vo. Eques. The phrase, Pope's Knights. seems to have been used only in contempt.

Some of the Prebendaries, in cathedral churches in France, especially in Vienne, were distinguished by the title of Milites Ecclesiastici. This distinction was conferred, however, by a royal charter, A. 1307. Du Cange, ubi sup. p. 749.

But, in general, the title referred to has been given merely in compliment. This custom has reached even to Iceland. G. Andr. informs us that Isl. saera, sira, is a praenomen expressive of dignity, as Sira Canzeler, Dominus Cancellarius. "In like manner," he says, "the Pastors of the church are denominated Saera Jon, Suera Petur." This corresponds to Sir John, Sir Peter, &c. as the ancient mode of addressing a priest in S.

There is no term resembling Sir in Sw. But herre, dominus, the synon., is used in the same manner. "Among our ancestors," Ihre says, "none but Kings and Princes were called Herre: afterwards it was transferred to Knights;-then to Bishops, Abbots, and clergy of the first rank; -- for even Rural Deans did not receive this title. But as titles are never permanent, this became at length so common, that it was given, by right, not only to Deans, but to ordinary Pastors. Thus in Sweden, and Alsace, when the peasants mention der Herr, they intend their Parish Minister." Vo. Herre.

This title, although claimed by the clergy, and at first conferred as honorary, towards the time of the Reformation came to bear a ludicrous sense. Thus it is used by the famous Heury Stephen, or his translator, who appropriates it to Priests.

"But how comes it to passe (may some say) that these poore Franciscans are more commonly flouted and played upon than the other fry of Friers? Verily it is not for want of examples as well of other Monks as of simple Sir Johns.—I will alleadge some rare examples of simple Sir Johns, that is, of such as are not Monks, but single soled Priests." World of Wonders, p. 179.

Even so early as Chaucer's time, this title had been used ludicrously; connected with the name John, which, as Tyrwhitt has observed, "in the principal modern languages, -is a name of contempt, or at least of slight;" Notes to Third Vol. p. 287.

Than spake our Hoste with rude speche and

And sayd unto the Nonnes Preest anon,

Come nere thou preest, come hither thou Sire

Telle us swiche thing, as may our hertes glade. Nonnes Preestes Prol. ver. 14816.

I shall only add, that James Tyrie, a Jesuit, entitles his work in reply to Knox, printed at Paris 1573, "The Refutation of ane Answer made be Schir Johne Knox, to ane letter send be James Tyrie, to his vmquhyle brother." He continues this title through the whole work.

This, indeed, has been viewed as done in derision.

Thus Forbes of Corse says:

"If they were not blindlie miscarried, they might perceave, that what they speake and write of our men in derision and contumelie, (calling them Sir John Knox, and Frere Johne Craig, &c.) it verifyeth their ordinarie vocation." Calling of Ministers of Reformed Churches, p. 5.

Whatever force this argument may have as to Craig, who had been a Friar, it certainly fails as to Knox, who never received any orders in the Church of Rome. V. Schir.

POPIL, s. A poplar.

"Sic lyik, throught the operatione of the sternis, the eliue, the popil, & the oszer tree, changis the cullour, and ther leyuis, at ilk tyme quhen the soune entris in the tropic of Cancer." Compl. S. p. 88.

Fr. peuple, Lat. popul-us, Teut. pappel-boom.

POPIL, adj.

"Within ane schort tyme eftir the considerate kyngis with capitane Gyldo went to Forfair, in quhilk sumtyme was ane strang castel within ane loch, quhare sindry kingis of Scottis maid residence efter the proscription of the Pichtis, thocht it is now but ane popil town." Bellend. Cron. B. iv. c. 14. In vicum redactum, Boeth.

Perhaps mean, plebeian; Teut. popel, plebs. POPINGOE, s. A mark for shooting at. V.

PAPEJAY, sense 2.

To POPLE, PAPLE, v. n. 1. To bubble or boil up, like water; implying an allusion to the noise of ebullition, S.

The veschel may no more the broith contene, Bot furth it poplis in the fyre here and thare, Quhil vp fleis the blak stew in the are.

Boug. Virgil, 223. 30.

Populand, part. pr., is used in the same sense in the description of Acheron.

- Skaldand as it war wode, Populand and boukand furth of athir hand, Vnto Cocytus al his slike and sand.

Ibid. 173. 39.

2. To boil with indignation. I was aw paplin, S.B.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. bullio. But he has not observed that Teut. popel-en conveys the same idea, that, at least, which seems the primary one, the noise made by a vessel in boiling; murmur edere, murmurare; whence popelinghe, murmur humiles-que susurri, Kilian. Belg. popel-en, to quiver, to throb; which respects the motion, although not the sound; and, if I mistake not, the word as used S.B. expresses the tremulous and spasmodic motions of the body, when agitated with rage.

POPLESY, s. Apoplexy.

"Utheris of thaym ar sa swollyn, and growin full of humouris, that thay ar strikin haistely deid in the poplesy." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 16.

Teut. pappel is used in a different sense, signify. ing the herb mallow. However, C.B. popple is given as synon. with our word.

POPULAND, part. pr. V. Pople.

PORRIDGE, s. That which in E. is called hastypudding; oatmeal, sometimes barley-meal, mixed in boiling water, and stirred on the fire till it be considerably thickened, S.

"The diet of the labouring people here, and in general all through the Lowlands of the North of Scotland, is porridge made of oat meal, with milk or beer, to breakfast." P. Speymouth, Moray, Sta-tist. Acc. xiv. 401.

PORT, s. A catch, S. expl., the "generic name for a lively tune, as The horseman's port, Gael." Sibb. Gl.

"What the English call a catch, the Scottish call a Port; as Carnegie's Port, Port Arlington, Port Athol, &c.": Kelly, p. 397.

Fr. portage, Ital. portaggio; from Lat. portare.

PORTATIBIS, Houlate, iii. 10.

Clarions loud knellis

Portatibis and bellis, &c.

The latter part of this word has been altered in MS., so that it is impossible to distinguish its form with any degree of certainty. It may be read Portatives.

PORTEOUS, Portuous, Portowis, or Por-TUISROLL, s. A list of the persons indicted to appear before the Justiciary Aire, given by the Justice clerk to the Coroner that he might attach them in order to their appearance.

"It is ordanit, that all Crounaris sall arreist all tyme, als weill befoir the cry of the Air, as efter, all thame that sall be geuin to him in portowis be the Justice Clerk, & nane vthers." Acts Ja. I. 1436. c. 156. Edit. 1566. Portuous, c. 139. Mur-

"This method of taking up of dittay or indict. ments is substituted by 8. Ann. c. 16. § 3. 4. in place of the old one by the stress (traistis) and porteous rolls in 1487. c. 99." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. § 86.

Skene says that this word is a portando, which signifies to carry, or bear. In Fr. Portes-vous. Skinner observes, that Skene passes this word, as he does the most of those that are difficult, superficially; and conjectures that it is from Fr. portez, or apportez, as containing an order that those thus indicted present themselves personally; and that the form begins in words to this purpose.

Chaucer uses Portos for a Breviary or Mass-Book. For on my Portos here I make an oth.

Shipmannes Tale, v. 13061.

Porthose, Speght's Edit.

Tyrwhitt observes that Portuasses are mentioned among other prohibited books. Stat. 3 and 4 Edw. IV. c. 10. And in the Parliament roll of 7th Edw. IV. n. 40, there is a petition that the robbing of Porteous should be made felony without clergy. The word was used in the same sense in S. For in the most ancient specimen of Scottish typography known, the collection printed at Edinburgh 1508, at the end of The twelve virtues of ane nobleman, it is said, "Heir ends the Porteous of Noblenes." The meaning of the title is explained by this line, Nobles report your matynis in this buke. As a Breviary might be viewed as a roll of prayers, it had at length come to signify a roll of indictments.

The form of the Portuous roll anciently was this. On one column was the Indictment, &c. and in the opposite column were the names of the Assisers, or Jurymen and the witnesses.—This was not used in the stationary Justiciary court, which sits at Edinburgh, but only in the circuits. The name Porteous, as originally applied to a breviary or portable book of prayers might easily be transferred to a portable roll of indictments.

It occurs also in a curious account, given by Spotswood, of the extent of the learning and piety of the Bishop of Dunkeld, A. 1538. Having cited Dean Forrest, Vicar of Dolour, to appear before him, for the heinous crime of " preaching every Sunday to his parishioners upon the Epistles and Gospels of the day," he desired him to forbear, " seeing his diligence that way brought him in suspicion of heresie." If he could find a good Gospel, or a good Epistle, that made for the liberty of the holy Church, the Bishop willed him to preach that to his people, and let the rest be. The honest man replying, That he had read both the new Testament and the old, and that he had never found an ill Epistle or an ill Gospel in any of them; the Bishop said, I thank God I have lived well these many years, and never knew either the old or new. I content me with my Portuise and Pontificall, and if you dean Thomas leave not these fantasies, you will repent, when you cannot mend it. Spotswood's Hist. 1655, p.

It is written Portas, by Bale, and used in the same sense for a Breviary, "None ende is there of their babiling prayers, theyr portases, bedes, temples, aulters, songes," &c. Image of both Churches, Pref. B. 4.

It occurs so early as the time of Langland.

--- If mani prists beare for hir bastards & her brochis

A payre of bedes in their hands, & a book under their arme,

Sir John & Sir Jeffery hath a girdle of silver, A baselard or a ballocke knife, with bottons

And a Portus that shuld be his plow, Placebo to synge.

P. Ploughman, F. 79. a.

In L.B. this was called Portiforium. We find this term used by Ingulphus, Abbot of Croyland, who flourished A. 1076.

"Restituit Monasterio nostro calicem quondam capellae suae, unum Portiforium de usu nostrae Ecclesiae et unum Missale." P. 907.

The Breviary for the use of Sarum, published at London A. 1555, has this title, Portiforium seu Breviarium ad insignes Ecclesiae Sarisbur. usum accuratissime castigatum, &c. Junius defines Porthose to be "a book of prayers which the priests carried with them in their journeys, that they might have it always at hand:" and imagines that it is probably from Fr. port-er, to carry, and hose, the stockings or rather trousers worn by our ancestors. In confirmation of this etymon, he refers to that passage in Chaucer.

A Shefield thwitel bare he in his hose.

Reves T. ver. 3931.

Du Cange in like manner thinks that the breviary received this name, ab eo quod forus facile porturi possit, because it might be easily carried abroad. But it seems more probable that this was a Fr. or Alem. word, and that according to the customs of the dark ages, it had been latinized.

PORTIONER, s. One who possesses part of a property, which has been originally divided among co-heirs, S.

"There are sixteen greater, and a considerable number (about a hundred) smaller proprietors called here Portioners, from their having a small portion of land belonging to them." P. Jedburgh, Statist. Acc. i. 9.

For the reason of the designation, V. PARSENERE. PORTURIT, adj. Pourtrayed.

He saw porturit, quhare in sic ane place The Grekis fled, and Troianis followis the chace. Doug. Virgil, 27. 35.

"Fr. pourtraire, Lat. protrahere, i. e. delineare, as we say, to draw;" Rudd.

PORTUS, s. A skeleton, Ang.

POSE, Pois, Poise, s. A secret hoard of money, S.

"Thir said princis gat, in the spulye of the France men, the kyng of Francis pose, quhilk vas al in engel noblis." Compl. S. p. 138.

"The King maid inventoris of his pois, of all his jewells and uther substance." Knox's Hist. p.

"He came to the castle of Edinburgh, and furnished it in like manner, and put his whole poise of gold and silver in the said castle." Pitscottie, p. 87.

Thus, to find a pose, is to find a treasure that hath been hid.

Sibb. derives it from Fr. pos-er seponere. But in Gl. Compl. it is traced, undoubtedly with greater propriety, to A.S. pusa, posa, a pouch, a purse. Dan. pose corresponds to Lat. pera, denoting a bag; a pocket, a pouch; hence pengepose a purse; Su.G. posse, puse, Fenn. pusa, a purse.

POSNETT, s. A bag in which money is put. "His heire sall haue—ane brander, ane posenett, (ane bag to put money in), ane enlcruik." Burrow Lawes, c. 125. s. 1.

It seems evident that the words inclosed as above, and in Italics, should have been printed in this manner, as is the custom observed by Skene clsewhere. For they undoubtedly contain his note for explaining posnett; to which Fiscina is the only correspondent term in the Lat. copy, q. a net used as a purse; or, a net for holding a pose. V. Pose.

To POSS, v. a. To push; S. pouss, as to pouss one in the breast, to pouss one's fortune, V. Rudd.

-To the erth ouerthrawin he has his fere, And possand at him wyth his stalwart spere, Apoun him set his fute.

Doug. Virgil, 345. 49. Syne with his kne him possit with sic ane plat, That on the erde he speldit hym al flat.

V. Pow-sowdie.

To POSTULE, v. a. "To elect a person for bishop who is not in all points duly eligible," Gl. Wynt.

And eftyre that this Willame wes dede, There postulyd [wes] in-til his sted Of Dunkeldyn the Byschape Joffray. Bot til hym the Pape Be na way grant wald hys gud will. Wyntown, vii. 9. 426.

"One is said to be Postulate Bishop, who could not be canonically elected, but may through favour, and a dispensation of his superior, be admitted." Rudd. Life of G. Doug. p. 5. N.

This was indeed the restricted sense of the term. But, in a more general sense, he was said to be postulate, who was elected to a Bishopric by the voice of the clergy. V. Postulari, Du Cange. Fr. postul-er, to sue, to demand; postulé, elected.

POSTROME, s. A postern gate.

- " Syne stall away be a private postrome." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 2. Posticum, Boeth. Corr. from L.B. posturium, id.

To POT, v. a. To stew in a pot; potted meat, stewed meat, S.

POT, Pott, s. 1. A pit, a dungeon.

The paill saulis he cauchis out of helle, And vthir sum thare with gan schete ful hot Deip in the soroufull grislé hellis pot.

Doug. Virgil, 108. 16.

2. A pond full of water; a pool or deep place in a river, S. Rudd.

The deepest pot in a' the linn, They fand Erl Richard in; A grene turf tyed across his breast, To keep that gude lord down.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 48. "The deep holes scooped in the rock, by the eddies of a river, are called pots; the motion of the water having there some resemblance to a boiling cauldron." Ibid. N. p. 51.

3. A moss-hole from whence peats have been dug. V. Pete-pot.

POTARDS, s. pl. More's True Crucifixe, p. 96. Whatever superstitious potards dreame.

Forbidden meanes he hates, and these by name. In another copy, dotards is the word, which seems the true reading.

POTENT, adj. Rich, wealthy, q. powerful in money; a peculiar sense of the E. word, S.

And efter that sone saylit he the sey; Than come he hame a verie potent man; And spousit syne a michtie wife richt than.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 10.

POTENT, s. 1. A gibbet.

"He gart his flaschar lay ther craggis on ane stok, and gart heyde them, and syne he gart hyng ther quartars on potentis at diverse comont passagis on the feildis." Compl. S. p. 254.

2. A crutch, " a walking staff with a hand in a cross form," Sibb. Gl.

Chaucer uses potent for a crutch. So old she was that she ne went A foot, but it were by potent.

Rom. Rose, Fol. 110, b. col. 2. Fr. potence, a gibbet; also a crutch, i. e. a staff resembling a gibbet in its form. L.B. potent-ia, scipio, fulcrum subalare.

POTTINGAR, s. An apothecary. For harms of body, hands or heid, The pottingars will purge the pains. Evergreen, i. 109. st. 2.

" All Pottingareis quhilk takis siluer for euil & rottin stufe and droggaris can nocht be excusit fra committing of thift." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 61. a.

Fr. potagerie, herbs or any other stuff whereof pottage is made, Cotgr. Apothecaries might anciently receive this name, because they dealt chiefly in simples. L.B. Potagiar-ius, coquus pulmentarius. It might, however, be traced to Ital. botteghiére, one who keeps shop; as the modern designation is from Gr. another, repositorium. Hence, POTTINGRY, s. The work of an apothecary.

In pottingry he wrocht grit pyne, He murdreist mony in medecyne.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 19. st. 4. POUDER, Powder, s. Dust; Fr. poudre. - Sic a stew raiss out off thaim then,

"Suppose the bodies die & be resolued in powder be reasoun of sin: yit the soule liueth be reasoun of righteousnes." Bruce's Serm. 1591. Sign.

Johnson gives one example of E. powder, as signifying dust; but it differs from this. It is used, however, in the same sense by Wiclif.

"And whoever resseyve you not ne here you go ye out fro thennis and schake awey the powdir fro youre feet into witnessyng to hem." Mark vi.

POUERALL, Purell, s. The lowest class of people, the rabble.

Sa hewyly he tuk on hand, That the King in to set bataill, With a quhone, lik to pouerall, Wencusyt him with a gret menye.

Barbour, viii. 368. MS.

It is used for the mixed rabble attending an army. Behind thaim set thai thair poweraill,

It is written pouraille, Ritson's Anc. Songs, p. 15.

Skinner explains poraile base, beggarly, from O.Fr. povrail, paurail, paupertinus, vilis, sordidus. I have not met with the word elsewhere in either of these forms.

POUNCE, s. Long meadow-grasses, of which ropes are made; Orkn.

"Tethers and bridle-reins were wrought of long meadow grasses, such as Holcus lanatus, which grasses here receive the name of pounce, or puns." Neill's Tour, p. 17.

POUNE, Powne, s. A peacock; S. pownie. The payntit powne paysand with plumys gym, Kest vp his tele ane proud plesand quhile rym. Doug. Virgil, 402. 1.

Pownie seems immediately from paonneau, a young peacock. V. Pawn and Powin.

To POUSS, v. n. 1. To push, S.

"Now, herewithall, the earnest petition of Saintes poussing thereto; -nothing so much carried me to the publike reading thereof as a holy indignation at the dealings of Romanists in our quarters too carelessly exposed to their seduction." Forbes on the Revelation, Pref. C. 1. a.

2. Applied to the washing of clothes. It does not however denote washing in general, but that branch of it, in which the person employed drives the clothes hastily backwards and forwards in the water, S.

This may be merely a peculiar sense of the v. as signifying to push. But it may be observed, that the meaning of Sw. puts-a is, to rub, to scour; Wideg. For the active sense, V. Poss.

Pouss, s. A push, S. Fr. pousse.

POUST, s. Power, ability, bodily strength, S. "S.B. corruptly pron. pousture. Thus they say that he has lost the pousture of his side or arm, when he has lost the use of" either. Rudd.

O.Fr. poesté, id. V. Rom. de Rose. This is evidently corrupted from Lat. potest-as, or posse, in barbarous Latinity often used for potestas.

Pouste', Powste', s. Power, strength. O ye (quod he) Goddis, quhilkis haldis in pousté Woddir and stormes, the land eik and the see,

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 103.

- 2. In vulgar language applied to the chicken of any domesticated fowl, S.
- 3. Metaph, for a young girl, a sweetheart. The Squire--returning, mist his pout, And was in unco rage, ye needna doubt, And for her was just like to burn the town. Ross's Helenore, p. 93.

Fr. poulet, a chicken, a pullet; from Lat. pullus. Hence the phrase, to go a pouting, to go to shoot pouts.

To POUT, POUTER, v. n. To poke, to stir or search any thing with a long instrument, S. "To powt. To stir up, North." Gl. Grose. also written pote, to poke.

Su.G. pott-a, digito vel baculo explorare; Belg. poter-en, peuter-en, fodicare, Kilian.

Pout, s. A poker, S.A.

Pour-net, s. This seems to be a net fastened to poles, by means of which the fishers pokethe banks of rivers, to force out the fish, S.

"Their Association—have in the present season, for protecting the fry, given particular instructions to their Water Bailiffs, to prevent, by every lawful means, their shameful destruction at Mill-dams and Mill-leads, with Pocks or Pout Nets." Edin. Even. Courant, April 16. 1804.

Poutstaff, s. A staff or pole used in fishing with a small net; employed for the purpose of poking under the banks, in order to drive the fish into the net.

Till Erewyn wattir fysche to tak he went.-To leide his net a child furth with him yeid.— Willyham was wa he had na wappynis thar, Bot the poutstaff, the quhilk in hand he bar. Wallace with it fast on the cheik him tuk, With so gud will, quhill of his feit he schuk. Wallace, i. 401. MS.

In Edit. 1648 improperly printed pault-stafe. To POUZLE, v. n. To search about with uncertainty for any thing; to bewilder one's self, as on a strange road, S.B.

This seems to have the same origin with E. puzzle, which Skinner derives, q. posle, from pose, to confound by questions. But the origin of both is more probably Su.G. puss, a slight trick, Isl. puss-a, Su.G. puts-a, imponere, illudere; Germ. possen, ineptiae. Perhaps it may be allied to Isl. pias.a. aduitor, q. to make all possible exertion.

POW, s. The poll, the head, S. "the head or skull," A. Bor. Gl. Grose.

Abiet my pow was bald and bare. I wore nae frizzl'd limmer's hair, Which taks of flour to keep it fair

Frae reesting free,

As meikle as wad dine, and mair,

The like of me. Ramsay's Poems, i. 306.

The word was thus written at least as early as the time of Henrysone, who inscribes one of his poems, The thré Deid Powis.

As we ly thus, so sall ye ly ilk ane, With peilit powis, and holkit thus your heid. Bannatyne Poems, p. 140.

To POW, v. a. To pluck, to pull, S. Quhen Sampsone powed to grond the gret piller, Saturn was than in till the heast sper.

Wallace, vii. 189. MS. But quha war yon three ye forbad Your company richt now? Quod Will, Three prechours to perswad

The poysond slae to pow.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 45. POW, s. A pool; l being changed to w, as commonly occurs in S.

Her hors a pow stap in, The water her wat ay whare .-Mine hors the water upbrought,

Of o pow in the way.

Sir Tristrem, p. 167. 168. V. next word.

POW, Pou, pron. poo, s. 1. A slow-moving rivulet, generally in carse lands, S.

"The country is intersected in different places by small tracts of water, called pows, which move slowly from the N. to the S. side of the carse, and which are collected mostly from the trenches opened for draining the ground." P. Errol, Perths. Statist. Acc. iv. 490.

2. It is sometimes used to denote a watery or marshy place, Stirlings.

"Powmilne and Polmaise appear to be derived from pou, a provincial word, signifying a watery place." P. St. Ninians, Statist. Acc. xviii. 386.

"This confluence takes place near the church, where a small river, called, in Gaelic, the Poll, i. e. the stagnating water, falls into the Forth at right angles." P. Aberfoyle, Perths. Statist. Acc. x. 113.

3. A small creek, that affords a landing-place for boats. The term bears this sense in the counties of Perth, Stirling, and Clackmannan.

- "The quay is built of rough hewn stone, in a substantial manner; and runs within the land, and forms a pow, or small creek, where the rivulet that runs through the N.E. end of the town falls into the river." P. Alloa, Clackmann. Statist. Acc. viii.
- 4. The term seems hence transferred to the wharf or quay itself; as the Pow of Alloa,—of Clackmannan, &c.

Hence the males and females, employed in driving coals to the quay, are humorously called the Powlords and Pow-ladies.

This term seems radically the same with E. pool, Belg. Su.G. poel, Germ. pful, Isl. paala, stagnum; C.B. pulh, Arm. pull, lacuna; Ir. Gael. poll, a hole or pit. It may have been transferred to water moving with a very gentle fall, because to the eye it differs little from a pool, its motion being scarcely discernible. Hence, in common language, a very slow-running water is tautologically called a dead pow, Perths. This, it would appear, is a Gael. idiom.

Its application, in sense 2. is also from the Gael. Shaw mentions poll-marcachd as signifying a creek; and poll-accairaidh, a bay to anchor ships.

Were it not that the fourth seems merely an oblique sense, the term might be viewed as akin to Belg. puy, podium, suggestus, (Kilian,) used to denote scaffolding; especially as the most of the wharfs, thus denominated, are constructed with wood.

POWAN, POAN, s. The Gwiniad, a fish; Sal-mo Lavaretus, Linn.

⁴⁶ The Albula nobilis of Schonevelde is the Salmo Lavaretus of Linnè, the Gwyniad of Pennant, and the Vengis and Juvengis of the Lake of Lochmaben." Note, Sibb. Fife, p. 125.

"Besides the fish common to the Loch, are Guiniads, called here [at Lochlomond] Poans." Pen-mant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 245.

The people in the neighbourhood imagine that this fish is peculiar to that lake; and several writers have fallen into the same mistake. But it is the Vangis or Juvangis of Lochmaben. V. Vendace.

This name is probably of Celt. origin. For Pennant says, that "it is the same with—the Pollen of Lough Neagh." Zool. iii. 268. In Gael. it is called Pollag. P. Luss, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 253.

POWART, s. Apparently the same with Powhead, q. v., unless it mean the very small brood of some kind of fish.

"When he strak her, she said that she should cause him rue it; and she hoped to see the powarts bigg in his hair; and within half a year, he was casten away, and his boat, and perished." Trial for Witchcraft, Statist. Acc. xviii. 655.

POW-EE, s. The name given to a small had-dock, in the fresh state, Montrose.

POW-HEAD, s. A tadpole; generally pron. powet, S. powie, Porths. synon. A. Bor. pohead, Grose; synon. podle, q. v.

"In Scotland, tadpoles are called pow-heads, from their round shape, and their being found in pools." Gl. Tristrem, vo. Pow.

It seems rather from Mod. Sax. Sicambr. pogghe, a frog, q. pogghe-hoofd, the head of a frog. POWIN, s. The peacock.

William his vow plicht to the Powin,

For favour or for feid.

Scott's Justing, Evergreen, ii. 179. This refers to an ancient rite in chivalry, the reason of which is not understood. Lord Hailes, in reference to a vow made by Edward III., has the following remarks. "The circumstances attending this vow, as related by M. Westm. p. 454. are singular. Tunc allati sunt in pompatica gloria duo cygni vel olores ante Regem, phalerati retibus aureis vel fistulis deauratis, desiderabile spectaculum intuentibus. Quibus visis, Rex votum vovit Deo coeli et cygnis,' &c. This is a most extraordinary passage, for the interpretation of which I have consulted antiquaries, but all in vain. The same ceremony is mentioned in Le livre des trois filz de Roys, f. 91. Apres parolles on fist apporter ung paon par deux damoiselles, et jura le Roy premier de deffendre tout son dit royaume à son pouvoir,' &c.

"Sir Henry Spelman, Aspilogia, p. 132. observes, that the ancient heralds gave a swan as an imprese to musicians and singing men. He adds, 'sed gloriae studium ex eodem hoc symbolo indicari multi asserunt.' He then quotes the passage from M. Westm.; but he neither remarks its singularity, nor attempts to explain it.

"Ashmole, History of the Garter, c. v. sect. 2. p. 185. observes, that Edward III. had these words wrought upon his 'surcoat and shield, provided to be used at a tournament,

' Hay, Hay, the wythe swan, ' By ———, I am thy man.'

"This shews that a white swan was the imprese of Edward III. and perhaps it was also used by his grandfather, Edward I. How far this circumstance may serve to illustrate the passage in M. Westm. I will not pretend to determine." Annals, ii. 4.

In the Additions to his Annals, he gives the following account of it, as communicated by a learned friend. "One of the most solemn vows of knights was what is termed the vow of the Peacock. The bird was accounted noble. It was, in a particular manner, the food of the amorous and the valiant, if we can believe what is said in the old romances of France; St. Palaye, Memoirs sur L'ancienne Chevalerie, T. i. p. 185. and its plumage served as the proper ornaments of the crowns of the Troubadours, or Provençal Poets, who consecrated their compositions to the charms of gallantry, and the acts of valour.

"When the hour of making the vow was come, the peacock, roasted, and decked out in its most beautiful feathers, made its appearance. It was placed on a bason of gold, or silver, and supported by ladies, who, magnificently dressed, carried it about to the knights assembled for the ceremony. To each knight they presented it with formality; and the vow he had to make, which was some promise of gallantry, or prowess, was pronounced over it.

"Other birds besides the peacock were beheld with respect, and honoured as noble. Of this sort was the pheasant. St. Pulaye, T. i. p. 186. Vows and engagements, accordingly, were made and addressed to the pheasant. A vow of this sort, of which the express purpose was to declare war against the infidels, was conceived in these words: "Je voue à Dieu mon Createur tout premierement, et à la glorieuse Vierge sa mere, et apres aux dames et au faisan," &c. Ibid. T. i. p. 191.

'' This serves to prove that vows were made to Peacocks and Pheasants, and that, by analogy, they might have been made to swans likewise. But the origin of a custom seemingly so profane and ridiculous still remains unknown."

POWLINGS, s. pl. Some kind of disease.

— The Powlings, the Palsey, &c.
Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 14.

V. FEYK.

This may denote a swelling of the body or limbs; Teut. puyl-en, to swell, puyl, a tumor. Or it may be the poll-evil, a disease of horses behind the ears, where a large abscess is formed.

POWSOWDIE, s. 1. "Sheephead broth, q. poll-sodden," Sibb. Gl.

There will be tartan, dragen, and brochan,—

There will be tartan, dragen, and brochan,— Pow-sodic, and drammock, and crowdie, And callour nout feet in a plate.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211.

"Ram-head soup," Gl.

2. Milk and meal boiled together, S.B.

Sw. saad, pron. sod, signifies broth; from siuda, Isl. siod-a, A.S. seod-an, Germ. sied-en, (E. seethe) to boil.

PRAÉLOQUUTOUR, s. An advocate. V. Pro-LOCUTOR.

PRAY, s. A meadow.

The varyant vesture of the venust vale
Schrowdis the scherand fur, and enery fale
Ouerfrett wyth fulyeis, and fyguris ful dyners,
The pray bysprent wyth spryngand sproutis dyspers.

Doug. Virgil, 400. 40.

Rudd. renders this shrubs, viewing it as a mistake of the transcriber for spray. But Warton derives it from Fr. pré, which is corr. from Lat. prat-um, a meadow; Hist. Poet. ii. 284. In one MS. Libr. Univ. Edin., it is pray; in another, ibid., once the property of William Lord Ruthven, which Rudd. had not seen, it is spray. The latter is considered as the most ancient of the two.

PRAP, s. A mark, S. V. Prop.

To PRAP, v. a. 1. To set up any thing as a mark, S. 2. To prap stanes at any thing, to throw stones, by taking aim at some object, S.B.

PRAT, PRATT, s. 1. A trick, a piece of roguishness.

"Thus Scot. we say, He played me a prat, S.Bor. prot, i. e. tricked me, or served me an ill turn;" Rudd.

Prattis are repute policy and perellus paukis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238. b. 37.

2. A wicked action, S.

The Kirk then pardons no such prots.

—— Your prats, she says, are now found out, The Kirk and you maun hae a bout.

Dominie Depos'd, p. 31. 33.

Rudd. derives this word from Fr. pratique, which signifies the course of pleading in a civil court, and is also used for an intrigue or underhand dealing. But its origin is Goth.; for we find it in different forms in various Northern dialects. A.S. praett, craft, praettig, crafty, Isl. prett-ur, guile, prett-vis, guileful, prett-a, to deceive; Teut. praette, fallacia, argutia. PRATTY, adj. Tricky, mischievous, S.; pretty, S.B. often ill-pratty, ill-pretty.

"Roguish or waggish boys are called ill-pratty;" Rudd. vo. Prattis.

PRATTIK, PRETTIK, PRACTIK, PRACTIQUE,

s. 1. Practice, experience.

To speik to me thow suld have feir;

For I have sic practik in weir.

For I have sic practik in weir, That I wald not effeirit be To mak debait aganis sic thre.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594. A. VI. a.

2. An exploit in war, but such a one as especially depends on stratagem; protick, S.B. In this sense Doug. always uses it.

Tharfor ane prattik of were decryse wyl I, And ly at wate in quyet enbuschment.

Virgil, 382. 7.

Orodes was of prettik mare al out,

Bot the tothir in dedis of arms mare stout. Ibid. 345. 46. See also 389. 46.

My prottiks an' my doughty deeds, O Greeks! I need na tell,

For there's nane here bat kens them well: Lat him tell his himsell.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 2.

3. A form of proceeding in a court of law; a forensic term. Fr. practique.

"This Argyle and Wariston made clear by law and sundry palpable practiques, even since King James's going to England, where the estates have been called before the King was acquainted." Bail-lie's Lett. i. 361.

4. A stratagem, an artful mean.
Sum gevis in prattik for supplé,
Sum gevis for twyis als gud agane.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 48.
i. e. Some pretend to give, as an artful mean for receiving supply.

It sometimes denotes tricks of legerdemain, Sibb.

5. A necromantic exploit, S.

— I have mony sundry practiks feyr,
Beyond the sey in Paris cuth I leyr.—
"Brother, my hart will neir be haill,
Bot gif ye preif that practik, or we part,
Be quhatkin science, nigromansy, or airt."

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 76. 77.

V. FREIT.

6. A trick, such as that played by a mischievous boy; or any wicked act, S. synon. with E. prank.

prank.
"It is eith learning ill praticks;" Ramsay's S.
Prov. p. 45.

She blew me here before the wind.

Dominie Depos'd, p. 29.

As Su.G. praktik signifies craft. Thre views it as immediately formed from Fr. pratique, science de Palais, because of the guile practised at court. The word, as used in sense 3, nearly corresponds to Mod. Sax. Sicambr. practycke, astrology.

To PRECELL, v. n. To excel.

That prudent Prince, as I heir tell,

Did in Astronomie precell.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 78.

Lat. praecell-ere.

PRECLAIR, adj. Super-eminent, illustrious.

Consider weill thow bene bot officiair, And vassal to that King incomparabill, Preis thow to pleis that puissant prince preclair. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 194.

Fr. preclare, Lat. praeclar-us, id.

To PREFFER, v. a. To exceed, to excel; Lat.

praefer-o.
''Nor Orpheus that playit sa sueit quhen he socht his vyf in hel, his playing prefferrit nocht thir foir said scheiphirdis." Compl. S. p. 102.

To PREIF, PRIEVE, PREVE, PREE, v. a. 1. to prove, to try.

And quhen thay by war runnyng, thare horse thay stere,

And turnis agane incontinent at commandis, To preif there hors, with jauillingis in there handis.

Doug. Virgil, 147. 7.

In this sense, it is also used as v. n.

Ye'll say, that I've ridden but into the wood, To prieve gin my horse and hounds are good. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 221.

2. To taste; as, " to preif meat, is to taste it;" Rudd. corr. prie.

Temperance is cuik his meit to taist and preif. Palice of Honour, iii. 58.

Dare she nane of her herrings sell or prive, Afore she say, "Dear Matkie, wi' ye'r leave?" Ramsay's Poems, i. 55.

Nae honey beik that I did ever pree, Did taste so sweet and smervy unto me. Ross's Helenore, p. 108.

Teut. proev-en, gustare, labris primoribus attingere, Kilian.

3. To discover, to find by examination.

Thai haiff him tane, put him in presone sor, Quhat gestis he had, to tell that mak raquest. He said it was bot till a kyrkyn fest. Yeit thai preiff sone the cumyng off Wallace, Knawlage to get that kest a sutell cace. Wallace, xi. 353. MS.

O.E. preve, preeve.

What riot is, thow taastid haast and preeved. Hoccleve's Poems, p. 53.

PREYNE, PRENE, PREIN, PRINE, PRIN, s. 1. A pin made of wire, used by women for fastening their clothes, S. Prin, A. Bor. id. Gl. Grose.

For spleen indulg'd will banish rest Far frae the bosoms of the best: Thousand's a year's no worth a prin, Whene'er this fashious guest gets in.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 385.

"Begin with needles and prines, and leave off with horse and horn'd nout;" S. Prov.; "intimating that they who begin with pilfering and picking, will not stop there, but proceed to greater crimes. Kelly, p. 68.

2. This term is often used to denote a thing of no value, S.

Quhat gentill man had nocht with Ramsay beyne; Off courtlynes that cownt him nocht a preyne. Wallace, vii. 910. MS.

Thocht I ane servand lang hes bene, My purchess is nocht worth ane prene.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 29. This word is not, as might be supposed, a corr. of E. pin, but immediately allied to Su.G. Dan. pren, the point of a graving-tool, or any sharp instrument; Isl. prionn, a needle, bodkin, or large pin; A.S. preon, fibula, spinther; Dan. preen, fibula, G. Andr. p. 192.; Gael. prine, a pin; Isl. prion-a connectere, consuere. Belg. priem, a bodkin, an awl, and Germ. pfriem-en, to prick, are evidently allied.

To Prein, Prene, Prin, v. a. To pin. I wald me prein plesandlie in precious wedis.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 58. Mr. Pinkerton renders this pin. But although the v. is used in this sense, S. yet it seems questionable, if here it does not rather signify, deck, trim, as the same with proyne, q. v.

My collar of trew Nichtbour lufe it was, Weill prenit on with Kyndnes and Solas. Lament. L. Scotland, Sign. A. 2. b. Prin up your aprons baith, and come away.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 178.

PREIN-COD, s. A pin-cushion, S. Prin-cod, id. A. Bor.

PREIS, PRES, s. Heat of battle.

The self stound amyd the preis fute hote Lucagus enteris into his chariote.

Doug. Virgil, 338. 32. He come rynnand in gret hast, As owt of pres he had bene chast,

And fenyheyd hym a sympil knycht, That eschapyd fra that fycht.

Wyntown, vi. 11. 26. To PREK, PRYK, v. n. To gallop, to ride at full career. Wyth that word at his fa ane darte lete fle,-And syne ane wthir has he fixit fast,

About him prekand in ane cumpas large. Doug. Virgil, 352. 31.

Makbeth turnyd hym agayne,

And sayd, " Lurdane, thow prykys in wayne, For thow may nowcht be he, I trowe, That to dede sall sla me nowe."

Wyntown, vi. 18. 390.

This is by a metonymy of the cause for the effect; from the pricking or spurring of a horse. It is also common in O.E.

His hakeney, which that was al pomelee gris, So swatte, that it wonder was to see, It semed as he had priked miles three.

Chauc. Chan. Yem. Prol. v. 16029. "Scot. they say that cattle prick, when they run to and fro in hot weather, being sting'd with gad-flees or such insects."—Also, " in a prick haste, i. e. as if he were spurred," Rudd.

A.S. price-ian, Belg. prick-en, pungere; Su.G. prick, punctum. Although this is not a Fr. word, it is a Fr. idiom, verbally accommodated to our own language; Piquer au travers des champs, to gallop across the fields.

To PRENE, v. a. To fix with a small pin. V. PREIN, v.

To PRENT, v. a. 1. Used as print and imprint, E. "That na prentar presume, attempt or tak vp. one hand, to prent ony bukis, ballattis, sangis, blasphematiounis, rymes or Tragedeis, outher in Latine or Inglis toung in ony tymes tocum, vnto the tyme the samin be sene, vewit and examit be sum wyse and discreit persounis depute thairto." Acts Marie, 1561, c. 35. Edit. 1566.

Isl. prent-a typis excudo.

2. To coin, i. e. to impress a piece of metal with a figure or image.

Sum pynis furth ane pan boddum to prent fals plakkis.

Doug. Virgil, 238. b. 50.

"It is declared—that our Soveraine Lorde, with advise of his Regent, may cause prent and cuinyie golde and silver of sik fynesse as uthers countreis does, to passe within this realme to the lieges of the samin." Acts Ja. VI. 1567. c. 17.

Su.G. prent-a imprimere, from pren a gravingtool; as properly denoting the cutting of figures on plates of brass.

PRENT, s. 1. Print, impression made by types, S. "All vthir faultis, other committit be negligens, -or be imperfection of the prent, -ane gentil reider may esely persaif, and thairfor suld reid thame as well as he can in the best maner." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Errata.

2. Impression of a die.

-" The said penny of golde to have sic prent and circumscriptioun as salbe auysit be the Kingis Hienesse." Acts Ja. III. 1483. c. 108. Edit. 1566.

3. Metaph. to a deep impression made on the mind, as with a sharp instrument.

Wallace hyr saw, as he his eyne can cast, The prent off luff him punyeit at the last, So asprely, through bewte off that brycht, With gret wness in presence bid he mycht. Wallace, v. 606. MS.

"The judgementes of God make sik a prent in the soule, it is lang or sin can blot it out." Bruce's Eleven Serm. L. 5. a.

4. Likeness.

Troyanis resauis thaim, and rycht gladlie Thare uisage gan behald, and did espy The prent of faderis facis in childer ying. Doug. Virgil, 146. 51.

PRENTAR, s. A printer. V. the v. PRES, s. Throng, heat of battle. V. PREIS. PRESERVES, s. pl. Spectacles, which magnify little or nothing; used for preserving the sight, S.

PRESOWNE, s. A prisoner, Fr. prisonnier. And wyth hym than all his men

As presowneis war takyn then.

Wyntown, viii. 28. 59.

PRESSYT, part. pa. Praised. Read prissyt. Thir war the worthie poyntis thre, That I trow euirmar sall be Prissyt, quhile men may on thaim mene. Barbour, xvi. 525. MS. Praised, Ed. 1620, p. 307.

PREST, PRETE, part. pa. Ready. Fr. Chaucer, id. Lat. praest-o.

As the diuyne furie gan fyrst ceissing, And eik hir rageand mouth begouth to rest; Deuote Eneas beginnis als prest.

Doug. Virgil, 166. 25.

The term is used in O.E.

Roberd mad him all preste, the wynde gan him drive.

R. Brunne, p. 96.

Thow art our prete to spill the process of our play.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 63.

PRESTABLE, adj. Payable, or what may be made good.

"After discussing of the first suspensioun for liquid soumes or deeds presentlie prestable, the Lords ordaines no suspensioun to be past againis the samyne decreittis respective, but upon consignation." Act Sederunt 29. Jan. 1650.

Fr. prest-er, Lat. praest-are.

PRETTY, adj. 1. Small in size; pron. e as ai in fair, a pretty man, a little man; S.B.

This seems to be merely an oblique sense of the E. word, or of A.S. praete ornatus; especially as pretty, S.B. often includes the idea of neatness conjoined with smallness of size.

2. Mean, in a moral sense; contemptible, insignificant.

Freynd ferly not, na cause is to compleyne, Albeit thy wit grete God may not atteyne: For mycht thou comprehend be thine engyne The maist excellent maiesté dyuine,

He mycht be repute ane pretty God and meyne. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 310.-2.

i. e. so mean, as to be unworthy of the character of deity. I am surprised that Rudd. should conjecture that it should perhaps be read petty; as pretty is commonly used in Ang. in this very sense. A pretty affair! a paltry business, what is unworthy of attention.

3. " A pretty man; a polite, sensible man.— In Scotland, it is often used in the sense of graceful, beautiful with dignity, or well accomplished." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 52.

PRETTY-DANCERS, s. pl. A name given by the vulgar to the Aurora Borealis; S.B. also, Merry-dancers, q. v.

To PREVADE, v. n. To neglect.

"My man, James Lawrie, gave him letters with him to the General, Major Baillie, to Meldrum and Durie; prevade not to obtain his pay." Baillie's Lett. i. 298.

Perhaps from Lat. pervad-o, to go through, to escape; q. let it not escape from your recollection. To PREVENE, PREVEEN, v. a. To prevent, to preoccupy; immediately from Lat. praeven-

Bot he remembring on his moderis commaund, The mind of Sichyus her first husband, Furth of hir thocht pece and pece begouth drife, And with scharp amouris of the man alife

Gan hir dolf sprete for to preuene and stere. Doug. Virgil, 36. 14. PREVEN'TATIVE, s. Preventive, S. To PREVERT, v. a. To anticipate; Lat. praevert-o.

To suffare bargane doure, and hard debate, Bot vit this maide was wele accustumate And throw the spede of fute in hir rynnyng The swift wyndis preuert and bakwart dyng. Doug. Virgil, 237. b, 23.

PREVES, pl. Literally, proofs; used in a personal sense, as synon. with witnesses.

"That the disobedient, obstinat, and relapse persones, -- sall not be admitted as preves, witnesses, or assisoures, against ony professing the trew religion." Acts Ja. VI. 1572. c. 45. Murray.

PRYCE, PRICE, PRYS, PREIS, s. 1. Praise. Quhat pryce or lowding, quhen the battle ends, Is sayd of him that overcomes a man; Him to deffend that nowther dow nor can? Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 192.

It bears the same sense in O.E.

Pris than has the sonne, the fadere maistrie. R. Brunne, p. 222.

Su.G. prisa, Isl. prysa, Dan. prise, Belg. prijs, id. Belg. prys-en, Fr. pris-er, to praise.

Chaucer uses prys in the same sense, and Gower; Or it be prys, or it be blame.

Conf. Am. Fol. 165...

2. Prize.

The thre formest sall ber the price and gre-Thare hedis crounit with grene olyue tre. Doug. Virgil, 138. 4.

Rudd has observed that price and prize are originally the same, as Fr. prix, from which they come, signifies both. Junius views praise as derived from Teut. prijs, pretium, because we praise those things only on which we set a value.

PRICK, s. A wooden skewer, used for securing the end of a gut containing a pudding, S.

"If ever you make a good pudding, I'll eat the prick;" S. Prov. i. e. "I am much mistaken if ever you do good;" Kelly, p. 198. Hence,

To Prick, v. a. To fasten by a wooden skewer.
"Better fill'd than prick'd;" S. Prov. "taken from blood puddings, apply'd jocoselie to them who have often evacuations;" Kelly, p. 67.

PRICKSWORTH, s. A term used to denote any thing of the lowest imaginable value. He did na leave me a pricksworth; he left me nothing PRICKED HAT, a part of the dress required. of those who bore arms in this country.

"That ilk man, that his guds extendis to twentie markes, be bodin at the least with a jack, with sleeves to the hand, or splents, and ane pricked hat, a sword and a buckler," &c. Acts Ja. II. 1456. c. 56. Murray. Prikit, c. 62. Ed. 1566.

The meaning of this term is uncertain; perhaps q. a dress-hat, Teut. prijck-en ornare. Or, the morion may be meant, which, as Grose observes, somewhat resembled a hat. Military Ant. ii. 244.

It might be called pricked, as being pointed at the PRICKER, s. A name given to the Basking shark, S.B. the Cairban of the Western islands. "When before Peterhead, we saw the fins of a great fish, about a yard above the water, which they call a Pricker." Brand's Descr. Orkney, p. 4. PRICKERS, s. pl. Light-horsemen.

"Johnston, not equalling his forces, kept aloof, and after the Border fashion, sent forth some prickers to ride, and make provocation." Spotswood, p. 401. V. Prek.

PRICKMEDAINTY, s. One who dresses in a finical manner, or is ridiculously exact in dress or carriage, S. q. I prick myself nicely; Teut. pryck-en ornare, E. prick, id.

PRICKSANG, s. Pricksong, E. song set to

In modulation hard I play and sing Faburdoun, pricksang, discant, countering. Palice of Honour, i. 42.

PRIDEFOW, adj. Proud, S. q. full of pride. PRIDYEAND, part. pr.

And for to lende by that lak thocht me levare,.. Becauss that thir hertis in herdis coud hove; Pransand and pridyeand, be pair and be pare. Houlate, i. 2. MS.

Q. setting themselves off; Su.G. pryd-a, id. PRIEST. To be one's priest, to kill him; probably from the idea of a priest being sent for, in the time of Popery, in articulo mortis, to administer extreme unction, as the patient's. passport to the other world, S.B.

To PRIEVE, v. a. To prove, &c. V. PREIF. To PRIG, v. n. 1. To haggle about the price of any commodity, S.

Sum treitcheoure crynis the cunye, and kepis corne stakkis;

Sum prig penny, sum pyke thank with preuy promit.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238. b, 55. In comes a customer, looks big, Looks generous, and scorns to prig. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 439.

2. To importune, to entreat.

Fat gars you then, mischievous tyke! For this propine to prig?

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 12. But they're mair modest in their minds Than prig o' sic a pley; Yet gin they did, I'm sure they wad Be sure to won the day.

According to Shaw, Gael. prigin-am is used in the same sense. But this word, not being mentioned by Lhuyd or Obrien, is probably of S. origin.

Sibb. derives it from Teut. prek-en, orationem habere; q. d. to preach over the bargain. But it has more resemblance to prach-en, parcere sumptui; Belg. prachg-en, to beg, to go begging. Probably Su.G. prut-a, to haggle, is radically allied, q. prygt-a.

PRIGGING, s. 1. The act of haggling, S.

"The frank buyer-cometh near to what the seller seeketh, useth at last to refer the difference to his will, and so cutteth off the course of mutual prigging." Rutherford's Lett. P. 11. ep. 11.

2. Intreaty, S. V. the v. To PRYK, v.n. To gallop. V. PREK. To PRYME, v. a. To stuff, to fill.

Our caruellis howis ladnis and prymys he, Wyth huge charge of siluer in quantitè.

Doug. Virgil, 83. 46. "Isl. prym signifies sub onere duro, which very much alludes to the word;" Rudd. But this term does not occur in any Isl. Lexicon I have seen. PRIMSIE, s. Demure, precise, S., from E. prim.

Poor Willie, wi' his bow-kail runt, Was brunt wi' primsie Mallie.

Burns, iii. 129.

To PRIMP, v. a. To deck one's self in a stiff and affected manner. Primpit, striffly dressed; also ridiculously stiff in demeanour, S.

Probably allied to to Su.G. pramper-a, to be proud, to walk loftily.

To PRIN, v. a. To fasten by a pin. V. PREIN, v. PRYNES, s. pl. V. Cowpes.

To PRINK. To deck, to prick, S. " Prinked. Well-dressed, fine, neat, Exmore," Gl. Grose. The term occurs in a poem undoubtedly written by Ramsay.

Quhais rufe-treis wer of rainbows all, And paist with starrie gleims, Quhilk prinked and twinkled Brichtly beyont compair.

Vision, Evergreen, i. 122.

If this be the true reading, it may be the same with E. prink, prank, as respecting the adorning of the sky; Teut. pronck-en, ornare; Sw. prunka, to cut a figure, Wideg. But I suspect that it is an error of the press for prinkled, which the rhyme requires, as perhaps synon. with twinkle.

To PRINKLE, v. n. The flesh is said to prinkle, when one feels that thrilling or tingling which is the consequence of a temporary suspension of circulation, S.

This word occurs in the explanation given by Kelly of the term dirle; " Prinkle, smart;" p.

Belg. prekel-en, prickel-en, to prick or stimulate. The same analogy may be observed in Sw. For stick-a, to prick, signifies also to tingle, Seren. PRINTS, s. pl. The vulgar name for Newspapers, S. The term had been used in this sense in E. so late as the age of Addison. V. Johns.

PRYS, s. Praise. V. PRYCE.

PRIVY SAUGH, Common Privet, a plant, S. Ligustrum vulgare, Linn. V. Lightfoot, p. 1131.

To PRIZE UP, v. a. To force open, to press up a lock or door, S.

Perhaps obliquely from Fr. prise, " a laying hold on, a lock or hold in wrastling; Estre aux prises, to be closed, locked or grapled together;" Cotgr. Or, from press-er, to force.

PROBATIONER, s. A person, who, after he has gone through his theological studies, and been tried by a Presbytery, is licensed to preach in public, as preparatory to his being called by any congregation, to whom he may be acceptable, and ordained to the office of the ministry, S.

"The Assembly appoints, that when such persons are first licensed to be Probationers, they shall oblige themselves to preach only within the bounds. or by the direction of that Presbytery which did license them. "Tis provided and declared, that the foresaid Probationers are not to be esteemed, by themselves or others, to preach by virtue of any pastoral office, but only to make way for their being called to a pastoral charge." Act 10. Assembly 1694.

The reason of the designation is obvious. For the same reason they were formerly called Expectants, q. v.

To PROCESS, v. a. To proceed against one in a legal manner, S.

"The next week he [Strafford] may be processed.—There is a committee for processing the judges, and my Lord Keeper Finch, for their unjust decreet." Baillie's Lett. i. 226, 227.
To PROCH, v. a. To approach.

The day was downe, and prochand wes the nycht. Wallace, v. 987. MS.

Fr. proche near, nigh. This Menage derives from Lat. prope. But it is certainly corr. from proximus, id. Prochain is still more evidently so.

PROCHANE, PROCHENE, adj. Neighbouring. "Your foir grandscheir Godefroid of Billon kyng of Jherusalem, hes-kepit ande deffendit his pepil ande subiectis of Loran, fra his prochane enemeis that lyis contigue about his cuntre."-Compl. S. p. 5.

Fr. prochain. V. Proch.

PROCURATOR, s. Properly, an advocate in a court of law; corr. Procutor, S. commonly used to denote a solicitor, or one who is allowed to speak before an inferior court, although not an advocate.

"That all and quhat-sum-ever heges,-accused of treason, or for quhat-sum-ever crime, sall have their Advocates and Procuratoures, to use all the lauchfull defenses." Acts Ja. VI. 1587. c. 90. Murray.

I have not observed, that this word occurs in our Acts before this reign.

The Procutars bad him be stout, Care not for Conscience a leek Faint not, my friend, nor flee for doubt, Ye shall get men enough to speak .-Poor Procutors then cry'd Alace!-Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's Poems, 1715. p. 106. 108.

L.B. procurator. For he, who is commonly called Procutor Fiscal, S. is designed Procurator Fiscalis; Du Cange. It literally denotes one who acts instead of another, from pro and curo, -are; as taking charge of his business. V. PROLOCUTOR.

PROD, s. A pin of wood, a wooden skewer, Ang. "Prod. An awl. Also a goad for driving oxen. North." Gl. Grose.

Su.G. brodd, Dan. brod, cuspis, aculeus.

Prod, Craw-prod, s. A pin fixed in the top of a gable, to which the ropes, fastening the roof of a cottage, were tied, S.B.

It was also used as a prognostic of the weather. If, on Candlemas day, this pin was so covered with drift, that it could not be seen, it was believed that the ensuing spring would be good; if not, the reverse.

The last syllable is undoubtedly from the same origin with Prod, mentioned above. The first may be from Su.G. and Isl. krake, contus, stipes hamatus, q. a pointed piece of wood, hooked at the top, for keeping hold of the ropes. It is probable, however, that the word is properly crap-prod, or the pin at the top of the roof; the crap of the wa, being a phrase commonly used for the highest part of it.

PROG, PROGUE, s. 1. A sharp point, S. 2. An arrow.

> And sin the Fates hae orders gi'en To bring the progues to Troy, Send me no for them, better far Is Ajax for the ploy.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 31.

V. Brog, s.

PROG-STAFF. s. A staff with a sharp iron point in its extremity, S.B. V. Brog, v.

To PROYNE, PRUNYIE. v. a. 1. To deck, to trim; used with respect to birds trimming their feathers.

And, efter this, the birdis everichone Take up ane other sang full loud and clere;-We proune and play without dout and dangere, All clothit in a soyte full fresch and newe. King's Quair, ii. 45.

And in the calm or loune weddir is sene, Aboue the fludis hie, ane fare plane grene, Ane standyng place, quhar skartis with thare bekkis

Forgane the son gladly thaym prunyeis and bekis.

Doug Virgil, 131. 46.

2. Used to denote the effeminate care of a silly man to deck his person.

And now that secund Paris, of ane accord With his vnworthy sort, skant half men bene, Aboue his hede and halffettis wele besene Set like ane myter the foly Troyane hatt, His hare anountit wel prunyet vnder that. Doug. Virgil, 107. 23.

Chaucer uses proin in both senses. Rudd. derives prunyie from Fr. brunir, to polish; which Lye inclines to approve; Add. Jun. Et. Tyrwhitt, vo. Proine, refers to Fr. provign-er, to take cuttings from vines, in order to plant them out. But perhaps it may be rather traced to Germ. prang-en, to make a shew or parade, from which Belg. pronk-en, id. seems to be a frequentative: or, to Su.G. pryda, ornare, whence prydn-ad, and prydn-ing, trimming, ornament.

PROKET, s. Proket of wax, apparently a small taper.

"The Prince was carried by the French Ambassadour, walking betwixt two ranks of Barons and Gentlemen that stood in the way from the cham-Vol. II.

ber to the chappel, holding every one a proket of wax in their hands." Spotswood, p. 197.

Fr. brochette, a prick or p.g; as, brochette de bois, a prick or peg of wood, brochette d'argent, a little wedge of silver; Cotgr. Skinner, however, gives priket as expl. a small wax candle, perhaps from Belg. pricke orbis.

PROLOCUTOR, s. A barrister, an advocate; a term formerly used in our Courts of Law.

"It sall be neidfull to all the personis warnit, and their prolocutors, to propone all the defences peremptors with that allegiance that ony evidence producit, for pursuit of the action, is fals, and fainzeit:—and the said Lords declarit the sam to all the prolocutors at the bar." Act Sed. 15. June 1564. This is corruptly pronounced procutor, V. Quon. Att. c. 35. s. 1.

The term is used by Matth. Par. An. 1254. " Prolocutor domini Řegis, qui nostris Advocatus Regius."

From pro and loqui, to speak for, or in behalf of another, although some view it as the same with praelocutor, one who speaks before another; Fr. avant parlier.

Praeloquutour occurs in the same sense.

"That na Advocate, nor Praeloquutour, be nawaies stopped, to compeir, defend, and reason for onie person, accused in Parliament for treason, or utherwaies." Acts Ja. VI. 1581. c. 38. Murray.

As this is synon. with Prolocutor, it might be supposed that the common term Procutor were a contraction of the latter. But Procuratour, from which Procutor is formed, although used as synon. with Praeloquutour, is given as a distinct term. For the title of the act above-quoted is; " Procuratours may compeir for all persons accused." This therefore confirms the derivation given of Procutor, vo. PROCURATOUR, q. v.

PROLONG, s. Delay, procrastination.

But mar prolong through Lammer-mur thai raid. Wallace, viii. 179. MS.

Fr. prolong-er, to protract.
To PROMIT, v. a. To promise; Lat. promitt-o. "King Edward promittit be general edict syndry landis with gret sowmes of money to thame that wald delyuer the said Wallace in his handis." Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 8.

PROMIT, s. A promise.

In thair promittis thay stude ever firme and plane. Palice of Honour, iii. 76.

To PROMOVE, v. a. To promote, Acts Parl. pass.; immediately from Lat. promov-eo.

PRON, s. The name given to flummery in some parts of the N. of S.

PRON'D, PRAN'D, part. pa. Bruised, wounded, Buchan.

PRONEVW, PRONEPUOY, s. A great grandson; Lat. pronepos.

Bot fra the stok down ewynlykly Discendand persownys lynealy In the tothir, or the thryd gre, Newu, or Pronevw suld be.

Wyntown, viii, 3, 116.

"The son in the first degree, excludis the nepuoy in the second, & the nepuoy excludis the pronepuoy in the thrid degree." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Eneva.

PROP, s. A mark, an object at which aim is taken, S. prap.

The only instance I have met with of this word being used in this sense is by Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 53. He uses it, however, metaph.

A mark, or butt, seems to receive this name, as being something raised up, or supported, above the level of the ground, that persons may take aim at it. PROPYNE, PROPINE, s. 1. A gift, a present, S.

-Bot my propyne come fra the pres fute hate,-Unforlatit, not jawyn fra tun to tun.

In fresche sapoure new from the bery tun.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 126. 7. V. JAW, v. Here the word is used in a very close allusion to its original sense, as denoting the act of handing drink to another, especially in the way of previously drinking to him and expressing a wish for his health. This custom prevailed among the Greeks, from whom the term has been transmitted to us.

"It was customary for the Master of the Feast to drink to his guests in order, according to their quality, as we learn from Plutarch. The manner of doing this was, by drinking part of the cup, and sending the remainder to the person whom they nam'd, which they term'd meomissis: but this was only the modern way, for anciently they drank piers τον σκυφον, the whole cup, and not a part of it, as was usual in Athenaeus's time." Potter's Antiq. ii. 393.

Provines like this I'll get nae mair again, Frae my dear Lindy; mony a time hast thou Of these to me thy pouches feshen fu.' Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

2. Drink-money.

"But certainly, I could wish such spiritual wisdom, as to love the Bridegroom better than his gifts, his propine or drink-money." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 120.

3. The power of giving.

"And if I were thine, and in thy propine, O what wad ye do to me?"

" 'Tis I wad clead thee in silk and gowd, And nourice thee on my knee."

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 262. "Usually gift, but here the power of giving or bestowing." N. From the Gr. v. comes Lat. propin-o, id. Hence

Fr. propine, drink-money.

It is most probable that this formerly signified the beverageitself, as we learn from Du Cange that O.Fr. propine denotes a feast.

To PROPINE, v. a. I. To present a cup to another, the prep. with being sometimes added; used metaph. with respect to adversity.

"The Father hath propined vnto mee a bitter cuppe of affliction.—If the Lord propine thee with a cup of affliction, if thou drinke it not willingly (heere is the danger) thou shalt be compelled to drinke the dregs thereof."—Rollock on the Passion, p. 21. 22. O.E. id.

2. To present, to give; in a general sense. -Garlands made of summer flowers, Propin'd him by his paramours.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 4. To PROPONE, v. a. To propose; Lat. propon-o. The Poete first proponying his entent, Declaris Junois wrath, and matelent.

Doug. Virgil, Rubr. 13. 3.

" Man propones, but God dispones;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25.

To PROPORTE, v. n. To mean, to shew, E.

purport.

Virgill is full of sentence ouer al quhare, Bot here intil, as Seruius can proporte, His hie knawlege he schawes, that every sorte Of his clausis comprehend sic sentence.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 158. 37.

L.B. proport-are.

PROSPECT, s. The vulgar name for a perspective glass, S.

"The King himself beholding us through a prospect, conjectured us to be about 16, or 18,000 men." Baillie's Lett. i. 174.

From Fr. prospective, synon. with perspective, the optic art, or Lat. prospicio.

PROT, s. A trick, S.B. V. PRATT. PROTEIR. In the description of the Lion, Thistle and Rose, st. 17. Bannatyne Poems, it is said;

Quhois noble yre is Proteir Prostratis. Proteir is certainly a blunder of some transcriber for protegere, i. e. to protect the fallen.

PROTY, PROTTY, adj. 1. Handsome, elegant, S.B.

Tho' she had clad him like a lass, Amo' bra' ladies fair ; I shortly kend the proty lad,

As I was selling ware. Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 17. Perhaps here it signifies small, like Pretty, q. v. There's mony a protty lad amon's

As guid's you, i' their kind.

Ibid. p. 36.

2. Honourable, possessing mettle or spirit, S.B. [I] never heard that e'er they steal'd a cow; Sic dirty things they wad hae scorn'd to do. But tooming faulds or scouring of a glen, Was ever deem'd the deed of protty men.

Ross's Helenore, p. 122. This is nearly allied to E. pretty; Su.G. prud magnificus, Isl. prud-r, decorus, modestus, Goth. prydis, A.S. praete ornatus.

PROTICK, s. An achievement. V. PRATTICK. PROTTY, adj. Mischievous. V. PRATTY. PROVENTIS, s. pl. Profits, emoluments.

"The saids Deputtes offered thair labours to mak meditatiouns to the King and Quene, for menteining pensiouns and expenses of the saids Counsaillours, and ordinary officiars of the said counsaill, to be provyded of the rents and proventis of the Crown." Knox's Hist. p. 231.

"That her Majestie is likewise infeft in life-rent, in-all proventes, rentes and emolumentes of the same propertie, perteining to his Hienesse." Acts Ja. VI. 1593. c. 191.

Lat. provent-us, increase, profit. PROVOST, s. The mayor of a royal burgh, S. Prouest seems to have been used in the same sense in E. in R. Brunne's time.

The provest of the toun, a wik traytour & cherle, He thouht to do tresoun vnto his lord the erle. Chron. p. 294.

PROW, s. Profit, advantage.

Scho luikis doun oft, lyk ane sow, And will nocht speik guhen I cum in: I spak ane wourde, nocht for my prow, To ding her weill it war na syn.

Maitland Poems, p. 201.

This word, in the silly Envoy, Bannatyne Poems, p. 201, is rendered by Lord Hailes, honour. But it seems rather to mean profit.

This now, for prow, that yow, sweit dow, may brace.

Chaucer uses it in the same sense. We find it as early as the time of R. Glouc.

Ac notheles, ys conseil hym gan ther to rede, And saide, that it was to hym gret prow and honour

To be in such mariage alied to the Emperour.

Cron. p. 65.

Sibb. derives it from Fr. preux faithful. But it is merely prou, profit. V. Cotgr.

PROWAN, s. Provender; Fr. provende.

"He's a proud horse that will not bear his own prowan;" S. Prov. "An excuse for doing our own business ourselves." Kelly, p. 131.

PROWDE, adj. "Powerful," Gl. Wynt. Downald-Brec, Sonn [of] Hecgedbwd, Kyng wes fourtene wynter prowde.

Wyntown, iv. 8. 49.

Mr. MacPherson adopts the sense given by Innes, in his Crit. Essay, p. 825. Perhaps we may rather understand it in the original sense, to be found in Su.G. prud magnificent.

PROWDE, s.

Ane fair sweit may of mony one Scho went on feild to gather flouris:

By come ane gymp man, thay calt him Johne, He luifit that prowde in paramouris.

Maitland Poems, p. 190.

Mr. Pinkerton inquires, if this may be prude? Certainly, it is not. For it corresponds to a fair sweit may. Prowde seems therefore to signify a beautiful or elegant woman.

Su.G. prud ornatus, pryd-a ornare, Isl. fryd-a; from frid pulcher, pryd-a and frid-a being original-PTARMIGAN, s. The white game, S. Tetrao Lagopus, Linn.

" Lagopus Avis, Aldrov. Perdix alba, Sabaudis, Francolinus Italis, nostratibus the Ptarmigan." Sibb. Scot. p. 16.

"Ptarmigans are found in these kingdoms only on the summits of the highest hills of the highlands of Scotland and of the Hebrides; and a few still inhabit the lofty hills near Keswick in Cumberland.— Erroneously called the white partridge." Penn. Zool. p. 271. 273.

Shaw renders Gael. tarmochan, "the bird termagant."

PUBLIC-HOUSE, s. "An inn, a tavern, or hotel," S. Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 170.

PUCK HARY, s. The designation anciently given to some sprite or hobgoblin, S.

He doth so punctually tell The whole oeconomy of hell, That some affirm he is Puck Hary Some, he hath walked with the Fairy.

Colvil's Mock Poem, i. 61.

Johns. defines Puck, "some spirit among the fairies, common in romances," observing that it is " perhaps the same with pug."

But in O.E. the term has been used rather with respect to a spirit supposed to possess more malignity than that ascribed to the Fairies. Helle-powke occurs in P. Ploughman, in the sense of demon, in a passage misquoted by Skinner. Elsewhere the devil is called the pouke.

He should take the acquitaunce as quycke. And to the queed shew it, Pateat, &c. per passionem Domini,

And put of so the pouke, and preuen vs vnder borow.

Fol. 74, b. Sign. T. ii.

The queed seems synon. V. QUAID. Skinner gives the same account as Johns., q. "pug of hell." Lye has justly observed that it is purely Isl. puke, daemon; Add. Jun. Et. Su.G. puke, satanas, spectrum. Ser han at puki kemr; Videt diabolum venire; Ihre.

PUD. Inkpud, s. An inkholder, Loth.; perhaps corr. from pot; Teut. enck pot, atramentarium. PUD, s. A fondling designation for a child. V. Pop.

PUDDIE, Puddy, s. "Expl. a kind of cloth.

And I maun hae pinners, With pearling set round, A skirt of puddy,

And a wastecoat of broun. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 172.

Perhaps originally denominated from Teut. poote, pooten-vel, pellis cervaria, hart's skin; also, the skin (or wool) of sheep drawn off by their feet. V. Ki-

PUDDILL, s. "A pedlar's pack; or rather perhaps a bag or wallet for containing his ware;" Gl. Sibb. V. PEDDIR.

Teut. buydel, sacculus, loculus, crumena; with a change of one labial letter into another; as in Fris. puyl is used in the same sense. V. Kilian.

PUDDINGFILLAR, s. A reproachful term, apparen:ly equivalent to glutton,

Sic pudding-fillaris, descending down from mil-

Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44. st. 14. q. one who crams his guts.

To PUDDLE, Pudle, v. n. 1. To work in a laborious way, on a low scale, S.

"Jean Adamson deponed, that she heard Alison Dick say to her husband William Coke; 'Thief! Thief! what is this that I have been doing? keeping thee thretty years from meikle evil doing? Many pretty men has thou putten down both in ships and boats.—Let honest men puddle and work as they like, if they please not thee well, they shall not have meikle to the fore when they die." Trial for Witchcraft, Statist. Acc. xviii. 654.

2. It is applied, in contempt, to laborious and frivolous engagement in the Popish ceremonies.

"For as to the multitude, ye see that they have alreadic preferred the leaven of the Pharises, and gone to mum-chances, mumries, and vuknawin language, wherein they pudled of befoir." Bruce's Eleven Serm. M. 8, a.

The allusion is to toiling in the mire. The E. s. puddle has been generally derived from Teut. poel, a pool. Certainly, a more natural origin is put, given by Kilian as synon. with poel, lacuna, palus; Germ. putte, properly a pit, or place dug, from which water is drawn; Lat. put-eus, whence puteal-is.

PUDGE, s. Any very small house, a hut, Perths. synon. crue.

This, by a common interchange of letters, seems derived from Isl. bud taberna, Teut. boede, bode, domuncula, casa. V. the letter P.

PULLAINE GREIS, s. Greaves worn in war.

"Ilisschenandschoys, that burnyst was full beyn,
His leg harnes he clappyt on so clene,
Pullane greis he braissit on full fast,
A closs byrny with mony sekyr clasp,

Wallace, viii. 1200. MS. L.B. polena; which is defined by Du Cange, pars vestis militaris, qua genua muniuntur. Lobinell. Hist. Brit. Tom. 2. p. 566. Fecit sibi per Oliverium auferri a genibus Polenas, et antebrachia a brachiis.

But Du Cange restricts the meaning of the term too much, misled by the use of genibus, in his authority. Although they might reach to the knees, they were certainly meant especially for the defence of the legs. The name seems to have been borrowed from Fr. poulaine; L.B. poulainia, the beaks or crooked points of shoes. Hence souliers de poulaine, which Cotgr. describes as 40 old fashioned shooes, held on the feet by single latchets running overthwart th' instup, which otherwise were all open; also, those that had a fashion of long hookes, sticking out at th' end of their toes. The part of military dress here meant might be called pullane greaves as being laced, or fastened somewhat like the shoes of the description given above.

Pundelayn, Edit. Pink.

This word might perhaps be viewed as a corr. of Fr. Pantalon, a stage-dancer; used improperly, in allusion to the quick motions and violent exertions of people of this description; as the speaker refers to the King's great activity, in so often turning his steed. But I am rather inclined to think that it is from Fr. Pantaleon, the proper name of a man, by corruption, as it is said, from Pantaléémon, as expressed by the Greeks. A saint, called Pantaléémon, being worshipped, not only in the East, but in the countries of Europe, his name was changed to Pantaleon; according to the account given in the Dict. de Trevoux. Pantaléémon signifying entirely merciful, the other term means entirely cruel, or cruel as a lion. It is probable, however, that as cruelty is not the characteristic of the lion, this name might be formed intentionally, as expressive of intrepidity resembling that of this noble animal. PUNDIE, s. A small white iron mug, used for heating liquids on the fire, Perths.

Denominated, perhaps, as originally containing a pound weight of water. I find this conjecture confirmed by what Somner says concerning A.S. pynt, pinta. "A pint or measure so called of a pound; for that a pint contained twelve ounces, even as a pound weighed twelve."

PUNDLAR, PUNDLER, s. An instrument for weighing, resembling a steelyard, Orkn.

"The instruments they have for the purpose of weighing, are a kind of staterae or steelyards; they are two in number, and the one of them is called a pundlar, and the other a bismar." P. Kirkwall, Statist. Acc. vii. 563.

The pundlar is used for weighing malt, bear, &c. "The bismar is a smaller weight, -- used for weighing butter, and other things of less bulk." P. Cross,

ibid. p. 477.

"The pundler is a beam about seven feet long, and between three and four inches in diameter, somewhat of a cylindrical form, or rather approaching to that of a square, with the corners taken off; and is so exactly similar to the statera Romana, or steelyard, as to supersede the necessity of any further description." This Prov., in its literal sense at least, has been borrowed from Fr. Ses pourchas lui valent mieux que ses rentes. We still say, He lives on his purchase, of one who has no visible or fixed means of sustenance, S. The idea is evidently borrowed from one living in the woods by the chace, Fr. pourchasse; hence applied to any thing that is acquired by industry or eager pursuit.

PURLICUE, PARLICUE, s. 1. A dash or flourish at the end of a word in writing; a school-term, Aberd.

This seems the primary sense; perhaps from Fr. parler to speak, or parole a word, and queue the tail, q. the termination of a word; or, from pour le queue, q. for the tail, by way of termination. A phrase of this kind may have been introduced by some French writing-master, or by one who had been taught in France.

changed.

PURRY, s. A kind of porridge, Aberd.

V. TARTAN-PURRY.

PURRING-IRNE, s. A poker, an iron for stirring the fire, Ang. This word is now nearly obsolete; synon. pout.

Purr is used in the same sense, Norfolk; Gl. Grose.

Teut. poyer-en fodicare; porr-en, urgere; Mod. Sax. purr-eu irritare.

PURSY, s. Short-breathed and fat.

Sibb. has given this as a S. word, although indeed E. I mention it merely to refer to the proper etymon. Both Johns. and Sibb. derive it from Fr. poussif, suspiriosus. But its origin undoubtedly is Teut. borstigh asthmaticus; either from borste the breast, the seat of the lungs, or borst-en rumpi, q. broken-winded, a term used with respect to a horse,

PURSILL, s. As much money as fills a purse;

a pursill of silver, S.B.

A number of words have the same termination; as a cappil, cogill, cartill, sackill, the fill of a cap, cog, cart, and sack. The same peculiarity is "observable on the banks of Dee and Don, and the interjacent district,—Cartful, cartill, potfull, pottle, &c." P. Peterculter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 385.

The only difficulty as to this etymon is, that it is a deviation from the usual pron., as l final is scarcely ever sounded.

Doug. Virgil, 300. 14. "He looks like a putting stott, i. é. frowns or

He derives it from Fr. bout-er, to thrust or push forward. E. butt is used in the same sense; Teut. bott-en, id. Kilian gives it as synon. with stoot-en, Germ. stoss-en, arietare. C.B. pwt-iaw, however, signifies, to butt.

To Put at, v. a. To push, to exert power against. "The fourth Artickle puttis me in remembrance how dangerous it is gif the authoritic wald put at me and my hous, according to the Civili and Canone Lawis, and our awin Municipall Lawis of this realme, and how it appearethe to the decay of our hous." Putte was anciently used in E. in the same sense. It occurs in the legendary account of the removal of Stonehenge.

Merlyn said, "Now makes assay, oars.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 218.

Sibb. derives it from Germ. kelch, Dan. kalk, Franc. kelih, Lat. calix. A.S. calic, cealc, and Alem. cholih, have also a considerable resemblance. But perhaps the true etymon is Ir. Gael. cuach, a cap or bowl. I observe that this is the very term, occurring in the Poems of Ossian, rendered shells. Whether this be used in that phrase, the feast of shells, I cannot say. But Fingal is designed from this term.

QUAID, adj. Evil, bad.

Yit first agane the Judge quhilk heer I se, This inordinat court, and proces quaid, I will object for causes twa or three.

Palice of Honour, i. 62.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this word unexplained. But there can be no doubt as to its signification. Chaucer and Gower use quad, quade, in the same sense; and R. Glouc. qued.

Wyllam the rede kyng, of wan we abbeth y sed, Byleuede here in Engelond luther euere & qued. Cron. p. 414.

Alem. quad, quat, quot, Belg. quaad, malus; Teut. quaed, malum, res mala, infortunium, Kilian. C.B. gwaeth, worse. Wachter views Germ. at malum, from Gr. 27-2, noceo, as the root. He mentions a curious observation of Grotius relating to this word, and to the two ancient nations called Gothi and Quadi. "The Goths, that is, the good, received this name from their neighbours, because of their hospitality; as the Quadi were thus denominated, because of their manuers being the reverse.

Hearne renders qued, "Devil, evil," Gl. R. Glouc.; and it is evident that the queed is used for the Devil in P. Ploughman, as synon. with Pouke. V. Puck Hary. This is analogous to Gr. • πονηςος, the evil one; or, as sometimes expressed by the vulgar S., the ill man. Isl. kwid-u, invidere, also expl., malum metuere, is perhaps allied.

Teut. koyffe, capillare, reticulum, Kilian. Isl. hufa, caputium; Fr. coeffe. It is radically the same word which is now pron. Quich, q. v.

QUAIK, s. The wheezing, or inarticulate s und emitted by one engaged in any hard labour, in consequence of great exertion; as in cleaving wood, beating iron, &c.

Doug. Virgil, 225. 28.

The word seems still retained in the v. quhawck (pron. gutt.) Aw quhawchin, breathing very hard, Ang. Hauchis and quaikis are nearly allied. But the first signifies the act of panting; the second seems rather to denote a wheezing sound. Quhawch and wheeze are most probably from one root.

Teut. quack-en, queken, Lat. coax-are, L.B. quax-are, mentioned by Rudd., all express the same idea with quaik and quhawek.

Lyndsay.

The word Quair, in this acceptation, is rendered immortal by the King's Quair of James I." Maitland Poems, Note, p. 423.

Warton, speaking of the MS. from which the King's Quair was published, says, "It is entitled The King's COMPLAINT." Hist. Poet.

This might seem to suggest that it received its name from Lat. quer-i, to complain. Tanner, in his Biblioth. Britan-Hibern., referring to the same MS. in the Bodleian Library, mentions it under the following description; Lamentatio facta dum in Anglia fuit Rex. Tytler's Poetical Remains, p. 46. We are informed, however, by Mr. Tytler, ib. p. 45. that "the title which this manuscript bears is, The QUAIR, maid be King James of Scotland the First, callit THE KING'S QUAIR. Maid on his Ma. was in England."

Tanner probably misunderstanding the term, meant to translate it; and one might suppose that Warton had again translated his language.

Isl. kwer has the same meaning. Libellus, codicillus, unico pergamento conscriptus; a ku et ver; G. Andr. p. 156. But he does not say, in what sense he understands these terms. In O.Fr. quayer signifies a book; or, as mod. cahier, a few leaves slightly stitched together, that may be transposed at pleasure. V. Dict. Trev.

QUARTER-ILL, s. A disease among cattle, affecting them only in one limb or quarter, S.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 363.

"A very gross superstition is observed by some people in Angus, as an antidote against this ill. A piece is cut out of the thigh of one of the cattle that has died of it. This they hang up within the chimney, in order to preserve the rest of the cattle from being infected. It is believed that as long as it hangs there, it will prevent the disease from approaching the place. It is therefore carefully preserved; and in case of the family removing, transported to the new farm, as one of their valuable effects. It is handed down from one generation to another.

"Whee, whi, or whey. An heifer; the only word used in the East Riding of Yorkshire in this sense." Gl. Grosc.

Rudd. (vo. Ky) derives the term from Teut. koeye. vacca. But it is more immediately allied to Dan. quie, Su.G. quiga, id. juvenca quae nondum peperit; Ihre. This learned writer indeed derives it from ko a cow, as brigga a bridge, from bro, id. sugga a sow, from so, id.

QUEYN, QUEAN, s. A young woman, S.

Sibb. has justly observed that this word is "not always" used, "as Junius would have it, with an implication of vice," Gl.

It is never a respectful designation; but it is often used, in familiar language, without any intentional disrespect; as, a sturdy queyne, a thriving queyne. It is generally accompanied by some epithet, determining its application; as, when it bears a bad sense, a loun queyne, a worthless queyne; and as denoting a loose woman, S.B. a hure-queyne, pron. q. koyn.

Vol. II.

When applied to a girl, the dimin. queynie is frequently used.

It occurs in almost all the Goth. dialects; MoesG. queins, quens, (the most natural origin of E. wench,) quin-0, Alem. quen-a, A.S. cwen, Su.G. qwinna, kona, Isl. kwinna, mulier, uxor. This is nearly allied to Gr. yvv-1, id. Those who wish to see the various conjectures with respect to the root, may consult Jun. Et. vo. Quean, Goth. Gl. vo. Queins, Quino, and Ihre, vo. Kona, Quinna.

QUEINT, QUENT, adj. 1. Curious, elegant, E.

quaint.

For so the Poetis, be thare craftye curys, In similitudis, and vthir quent figuris, The soithfast mater to hide and to constrene. Doug. Virgil, 6. 35.

2. Strange, wonderful.

The byisning beist the serpent Lerna, Horribill quhissilland, and queynt Chimera With fire enarmyt on hir toppis hie.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 16.

3. Cunning, crafty.

Or gif ye traist ony Grekis giftis be Without dissait, falset or subtelite, Knaw ye not bettir the quent Ulixes slycht? Doug. Virgil, 40. 6.

It is used by Chaucer in the two last senses, and in one nearly connected with the first, trim, neat.

Fr. coint, elegant, from Lat. compt-us; or, as some think, from Arm. coam, beau et joli, Dict. Trev. Par cointise, d'une façon propre et adjustée; Gl. Rom. Rose.

To QUEINTH, v. a. "To compose, to pacify," according to Rudd.

Quharfor Enee begouth again renew His faderis hie saul queinth: for he not knew Quhidder this was Genius, the god of that stede, Or than the seruand of his fader dede.

Doug. Virgil, 130. 31.

Na licence grantit was, nor tyme, ne space,—As for to tak my leif for euer and ay,
The last regrait and quenthing words to say.

Ibid. 294. 11.

"Our author uses it for the solemn valediction given to the dead, when they were a burying, which was essentially necessary (according to their superstition) in order to compose them, and give them rest in their graves, and to procure them passage over the Stygian Lake into the Elysian Fields. The word originally is the same with Quench, and is used for it by Chaucer." Thus he expl. queinthing words, composing, pacifying. Chaucer indeed uses queinte as the pret. and part. of quench; but in a sense strictly literal. It would be more natural to understand this term as signifying to bewail, from Isl. kuein-a, to complain, MoesG. quain-on, to mourn. Matt. xi. 17. Ni quaino-deduth, ye have not lamented. Alem. Uuein-on, id. This signification corresponds to the language used by Virg. "Coelum questibus implet;" and, "Adfari extremum miserae matri."

Jun. thinks that it ought to be quething, notwithstanding the authority of the MS. to the contrary; in opposition to which Rudd. acknowledges that he rashly wrote quething, according to the printed copy A. 1553, in the following passage.

So, so, hald on, leif this dede body allane, Say the last quething word, adew, to me. I sall my deith purches thus, quod he.

Virg. 60. 21.

Jun. renders it, valedictory; Lye derives it from Isl. kwedia salutatio, valedictio. V. Jun. Etym.

The Su.G. Isl. v. qwaed-ia, to salute, was used by ancient writers, to denote a solemn address to God.

Since this article was sent to press, I find that, in the MS. which Rudd. used, the word (p. 130.) is quheith; in the other, (Univ. Libr.) queith. That, in passage second, is quenthing, MS. I. quething, MS. II. which corresponds to the conjecture of Junius. In the third passage, quenthing occurs in both MSS Ihre derives the Su.G. word from MoesG. quiman, to come, as Lat. conveniens a veniendo. Schilter, in like manner, gives biquam under Teut. quheman venire.

QUEMIT, part. pa. Exactly fitted.

Yit round about full mony ane beriall stone, And thame conjunctlie jonit fast and quemit.

Palice of Honour, iii. 67.

Gower uses queme in the sense of fit, or become.

And loke how well it shuld hem queme,

To hyndre a man that loueth sore.

Conf. Am. Fol. 51. a.

This use of the term confirms the derivation given under Queme. E. become is formed indeed in the same manner with Lat. convenire, and the Teut. terms.

QUENRY, s. Illicit amours; from queyn, as used in a bad sense.

Quhair hurdome ay unhappis With quenry, cannis and coppis, Ye pryd yow at thair proppis, Till hair and berd grow dapill.

QUENT, adj. Familiar, acquainted.

Fr. accoint, id. Lat. cognit-us.

QUERRELL, QUAREL, s. A quarry.

"Aboue thir cruelteis infinite nowmer of thame wer condampnyt to the Galionis, wynnyng of querrellis & mynis." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 9. Lapidibus excidendis, Boeth.

This might indeed be rendered square stones, from Fr. quarrel-er, to pave with flat stones. It is used, however, for quarries by Doug.

Virgil, 249. 53.

In this sense quarrel is still used, S.B.; from the Fr. v., which is formed from quarré, square; because the proper work of quarriers is to raise stones of such a shape, that they may be hewn for pavement or for building.

QUERT, s. In quert, in good spirits, in a state of hilarity.

And ever quhill scho wes in quert That wass hir a lessoun. So weill the lady luvit the Knycht, That no man wald scho tak.

Bludy Serk, S. P. R. iii. 193.

Sibb. renders quert "prison, any place of confinement; perhaps also, sanctuary; abbrev. from Sax. cwertur, carcer."

He has been misled, either by its resemblance to the A.S. word, or from mention being made of a deip dungeoun in the preceding line; and has not observed that the Lady had been delivered from this at the expence of her lover's life. He had bequeathed to her his bloody shirt, and desired her to hang it up in her sight, as an antidote to any future attachment.

'First think on it, and syne on me, 'Quhen men cumis yow to wow.' The Lady said, "Be Mary fre, Thairto I mak a wow."

Thus she kept the bludy serk still in her view; and it was a memorial of his love, and of her vow, when at any time she felt an inclination, from the liveliness of her spirits, to listen to any other lover.

In this sense it occurs in Gawan and Gol. ii. 22.

Quhill this querrell be quyt I cover never in quert. i. e. "Till this quarrel be settled, I can never recover my spirits." V. Cower.

This agrees with the sense given of it by Ritson, Gl. E. M. Rom., as it occurs in a variety of instances in these remains of antiquity. All the examples, indeed, except one, are from what is undoubtedly a Scottish poem. This is Ywaine and Gawin. Here it has evidently the signification given above.

Madame, and he war now in quert,
And al hale of will and hert,
Ogayns yowr fa he wald yow wer.

Swilk joy tharof sho had in hert,
Hir thoght that sho was al in quert.

Ibid. p. 141.

It occurs in Sir Eglamore, an O.E. Romance, printed with the S. poems, Edin. 1508.

All bot the Erll thai war full feyn, In quert that he was cumyn hame, Hym welcumyt les and mare.

The knight here referred to returned victorious, and was entitled to marry the Earl's daughter.

I have met with it once in R. Brunne, p. 123.

He turned his bridelle with querte, he wend away haf gone,

The dede him smote to the herte, word spak he neuer none.

Hearne thinks that it is for thuerte, as if it signified, athwart, obliquely. But it undoubtedly means, briskly, in a lively manner.

This sense is much confirmed by the use of the adj. quierty. This is still retained, as signifying, lively, possessing a flow of animal spirits, S.

In one passage, the sense seems more obscure. It contains the advice given to Waynour, Arthur's Queen, by the ghost of her mother.

"Als thou art Quene in thi quert, Hold thes wordes in hert. Thou shal leve but a stert:

Hethen shal thou fare."

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 20.

It seems, however, to denote her present state of health, prosperity, and joy, as contrasted with its brevity, and the certainty of death.

Ritson thinks that it is "possibly from quert, cuer, or coeur, Fr." But there seems to be no evidence that coeur was ever written quert. The only word that seems to have any connexion in sense, is Gael. cuairt, a visit; whence cuairtachas, a visiting, gossiping; unless we should suppose it to be corr. from Fr. guer-ir, to heal; to recover; also, to assuage; as originally denoting a state of convalescence. QUESTES, s. pl. Noise of hounds, Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 4. V. QUELLES.

of Wh, or Hw, is a curious circumstance in Scottish orthography, and seems to be borrowed immediately, or at first hand, from the Gothic, as written by Ulphilas in the fourth century. In his Gothic Gospels, commonly called The Silver Book, we find about thirty words beginning with a character (O with a point in the centre) the power of which has never been exactly ascertained. Junius, in his Glossary to these Gospels, assigned to it the power and place of Qu: Stiernhielm and others have considered it as equivalent to the German, Scandinavian, and Anglo-Saxon Hw; and lastly, the learned Ihre, in his Suio-Gothic Glossary, conjectures that this character did not agree in sound with either of these, but " sonum inter hu et qu medium habuisse videtur." Unluckily he pursues the subject no farther, otherwise he could scarcely have failed to suggest the Scottish Quh; particularly as a great proportion of these thirty Gothic words can be translated into Scottish by no other words but such as begin with these three letters." Gl.

This writer has discovered considerable ingenuity in his reflexions on this singularity in our language. But he could not mean, that Quh, in our orthography, could be borrowed immediately from the Gothic, as written by Ulphilas. For it had been in use in S. for several centuries before the Codex Argenteus was known to exist, or at least known in this country. It was probably invented by some very early writer, in order to express the strong guttural sound of which it is the sign. This perhaps seemed necessary; for as the E. pronounce their wh much softer than we do quh, they probably gave a similar sound to A.S. hw, ever after the intermixture of Norman.

Sibb. has partly mistaken Junius, who, after observing that the Goths, by the letter referred to, expressed Q, in the place of which the A.S. used cw, adds; "But whether the Goth. letter in every respect corresponds to Q, does not sufficiently appear to me, because there are not a few words in the Codex Argenteus, which do not seem so much to have the hard sound which belongs to Q, as that softer aspiration which is found in A.S. hw, or E. wh."

Notwithstanding the idea at first thrown out by Sibb., that our quh has been "immediately borrowed from the Gothic," he afterwards, although not very consistently, "to avoid any charge of hypothetical partiality," assumes "a different element or combination of letters,—viz. Gw,—a sound—which," he says, "occurs not unfrequently in the antient language of Germany; ex. gr. gwaire, verus, gwallichi, potentia, gloria.—When this harsh sound," he adds, "gave way almost every where to the hw,—the character, which Ulphilas had invented to express it, fell of course to be laid aside. In Scotland alone the sound was preserved, and appears to this day under the form of Quh."

This assumption, which he retains in his Gl., is totally groundless. In what way soever we received our quh, there seems no reason to doubt that it expresses the sound of the letter employed by Ulphilas. This appears incontestable from the very examples brought by Sibb.

This letter could not be meant to express the sound of A.S. cw, because the words in which this occurs in A.S. are denoted by another Goth. character, resembling our vowel u; as quairn mola, A.S. cwearn; queins uxor, A.S. cwen, quithan dicere, A.S. cwethan, &c. To the latter the learned Verel. gives the sound of qu; but to the former, of hw or qhw; Runograph. Scandic. p. 69.

It has been observed, that "this Goth. character appears to be the antient Aeolic Digamma asperated in pronunciation." This supposition is founded on the probability, that "the Gothic tongue was from the same stem as the antient Pelasgic, the root of the Greek." I am not, however, disposed to venture so far into the regions of conjecture; especially as some learned writers have contended that, as Ulphilas used several Roman characters, as F, G, H, R, he also borrowed the form of this from their Q. V. Michaelis' Introd. Lect. N. T. sect. 70.

As little can be said with respect to its resemblance to the Hebrew Ain; it being generally admitted that the sound of this letter is lost. It is, however, a pretty common opinion among the learned, that it denoted a very strong guttural sound.

I shall only add, that where there is no difference between the E. and S. words, except what arises from this peculiar orthography, it is unnecessary to give examples. There is no occasion for this in most cases, even where there is a change of the vowel.

Mr. Macpherson has so distinctly marked the relation of the different dialects to each other, and also to the Lat., as to the pron. who, that I shall make no apology for inserting his short table.

MoesG. A.S. O.Sw. Lat. Quha, huo, quhas, hwa; who: hua, qui, Quhay, quho, quae, hue, hwaes; huars, cujus; whose: Quhays, guhis, Quham, quhamma, hwam; huem, quem; quam; whom.

I have not observed, however, that quhay occurs in a different sense from quha. They are used in common for E. who.

"Quhay sall have the curage or spreit to punis thaym for feir of this insolent prince?" Bellend. Cron. Fol. 11. a.

Anone Eneas induce gan to the play

Doug. Virgil, 144. 8.

The use of quhay is now become provincial, being almost peculiar to Loth.

QUHAYE, s. Whey. Flot quhaye, whey, after being pressed from the cheese curds, boiled with a little meal and milk, in consequence of which a delicate sort of curd floats at top, S.

QUHAYNG, WHANG, s. 1. A thong, a strap of leather, S.

"Sum auctouris writtis, quhen Hengist had gottin the grant of sa mekill land (as he mycht circle about with ane bull hyde) he schure it in maist crafty and subtell quhayngis. In witnes heirof they say Towquhan in the language of Saxonis is callit ane quhayng." Bellend. Cron. B. viii. c. 12. Twhan, Boeth.

This seems to have been borrowed by Boece, from Geoffrey of Monmouth, lib. 6. c. 11. who says, that this in British was called Caer correi, and in Saxon, Thwang-castre, which in Lat. signifies the Castle of the Thong, from A.S. thwang, id. Boece says this castle was in Yorkshire. But according to Verstegan, c. 5. it was "situated near unto Sydingborn in Kent." Junius approves of this derivation of the name of the castle.

"A country gentleman, from the west of Scotland,—being occasionally in England for a few weeks, was, one delightful summer evening, asked out to hear the nightingale: his friend informing him, at the same time, that this bird was a native of England, and never to be heard in his own country. After he had listened with attention, for some time, upon being asked, if he was not much delighted with the nightingale: "It's a' very gude," replied the other in the dialect of his own country; "but I wad na gie the wheeple of a whaup for a' the nightingales that ever sang." P. Muirkirk, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. vii. 601. N.

Sibb. thinks that it is named ex sono. Perhaps it is from the same origin with the v. Wheep, q. v.

Its name, however, resembles that of the Lapwing in Sw. and Dan. V. Peeweip. In Dan. the curlew is called Regn-spaer, apparently as being supposed to spae or predict rain.

QUHAIP, QUHAUP, s. A goblin or evil spirit, supposed to go about under the eaves of houses after the fall of night, having a long beak resembling a pair of tongs for the purpose of carrying off evil doers, Ayrs.

This goblin appears to have borrowed its name from the curlew.

Isl. hwamm-r, convallicula seu semivallis; a hwome vorago, gula, G. Andr. It is elsewhere defined; Vallicula, locus depressior inter duos colliculos. QUHARE, adv. Where. All our quhare, every where.

And suth it is and sene, in all our quhare, No erdly thing bot for a tyme may lest. Ballad, Edin. 1508. S.P.R. iii. 127.

This is perhaps the passage referred to by Mr. Pinkerton, when he renders quhare, "place," in Gl. But although it is probable that the term was used in this sense, here it is certainly adverbial. It is merely an inversion of the more common phraseology our al quhare, q. over every place. V. Alquhare. Quhairintil, adv. In which, wherein.

OUHAUP, WHAAP. There's a whaap in the raip, S. Prov. There is something wrong; properly, as denoting some kind of fraud or deception. V. Kelly, p. 305.

I have observed no other example of the use of the term, except in a silly performance, which exhibits Presbyterians in so ridiculous a light, that he must be credulous indeed, who can believe that many of the ludicrous sayings, there ascribed to them, were ever really uttered.

"I'll hazard twa and a plack,—there is a whap in the rape, Ede, has thou been at barn-breaking, Ede? Come out of thy holes, and thy bores here, Ede," &c. Presbyterian Eloquence, p. 139.

The inhabitants of the county of Mearns ascribe the origin of the proverb to a circumstance respecting the fowl that bears this name. Their traditionary account of it, indeed, has much the air of fable. It is customary to suspend a man by a rope round his middle from a rock called Fowls-heugh near Dunnottar, for the purpose of catching kittieweaks and other sea-fowls, by means of a gin at the end of a pole. V. Statist. Acc. xi. 216. On one occasion, he, who was suspended in this manner, called out to one of his fellows who were holding the rope above; "There's a faut [fault] in the raip." It being supposed that he said, "There's a whaup in the raip," one of those above cried, "Grup till her, man, she's better than twa gow-maus." consequence of this mistake, it is said, no exertion was made to pull up the rope, and the poor man fell to the bottom, and was dashed to pieces.

The word may originally have denoted some entanglement in a rope; as when it is said to be fankit. It may thus be allied to Isl. hapt vinculum; or rather to Su.G. wefw-a implicare, MoesG. waib-an, id. QUHAUP, s. A pod in the earliest state, S. synon. shaup. OUHEW, LE QUHEW, s. A disease of the febrile kind, which proved extremely fatal in Scotland, A. 1420. It appears to have been a sort of influenza, occasioned by the unnatural temperature of the weather.

Infirmitas ista, quâ non solum magnates, sed et innumerabiles de plebe extincti sunt, Le Quhew à vulgaribus dicebatur, quae, ut physici ferunt, causabatur ex inaequalitate vel intemperantia hiemis, veris et aestatis precedentium: quia hiems fuit multum sicca et borealis, ver pluviosum, et similiter autumnus; et tunc necesse est in aestate fieri febres acutas, et opthalmias, et dysenterias, maximè in humidis. Fordun. Lib. xv. c. 32.

The origin is uncertain. From le being prefixed, one would think that it must have had a Fr. origin. But in the Scotichronicon, le is often prefixed to names where there is no connexion with Fr. A tower, in the Castle of Edinburgh, is called le Turnipyk, Lib. xiii. c. 47. The county of Kincardine is designed le Mernis, ibid. c. 39. Besides, the word both in form and signification is pretty nearly allied to Su.G. queisa, Isl. kweisa, also hweisa, a fever, morbi in Hyperboreis frequentis species; G. Andr. Ihre has mentioned A.S. hweos as having the sense of, febricitare. But he has not attended to the passage quoted by Somner, in which it means, expectorated; He hrithod and egeslic hweos; febricitavit et terribiliter exspumavit.

evidently the origin of A.S. hwother-an, hweotherung. V. Quhiddir, v. To the same fountain may we probably trace A.S. hweos-an, Su.G. Isl. hwaesa, E. whiz, as all originally expressing the sound made by the air.

Moes G. quheleiks, the most ancient, is evidently a compound word, from quha and leiks, like. This indeed expresses the idea conveyed by qualis, cujusmodi, of what kind, of what manner, i. e. like to what. With respect to the affinity between the Latterm lis and Goth. leiks, V. Lyk, adj.

A.S. hwile, donec, untill, Somner. Or more fully, tha hwile the, which seems to signify, the time that. For this conj. is evidently formed from the s., as marking the time that elapses between one act or event and another. I prefer deriving it from the s., as the v. does not occur in MoesG. or A.S.; although some might be inclined to view it as the imperat. of Su.G. Isl. hwil-a quiescere. Thus these words might be resolved, "Wait for me till gloamin;" i. e. "wait for me; the Time, that which intervenes between and twilight."

Upon looking into the Diversions of Purley, i. 363, I find that I have given materially the same explanation of this particle with that of Mr. H. Tooke. But he seems to give too much scope to fancy, when he says of the synon. Till, that it is a word composed of to and while, i. e. Time."

It is scarcely supposable, that there would be such a change of form, without some vestige of it in A.S. or O.E. If there ever was such a change, it must have been previous to the existence of the language which we now call English. For in A.S. til signified donec or until, at the same time that the phrase tha hwile, (not to while) was used in the very same sense. Although they occur as synon., there is not the least evidence that the one assumed the form of the other.

Besides, one great objection to the whole plan of this very ingenious work, forcibly strikes the mind here. Mr. Tooke scarcely pays any regard to the cognate languages. In Su.G. not only is hwila used, as denoting rest, cessation; being radically the same word with A.S. hwile, and expressing substantially the same idea: but til is a prep. respecting both time and place. In MocsG., as hweila signifies time, til denotes occasion, opportunity. Now, it would be far more natural to view our till as originally the MoesG. term, used in the same manner as A.S. hwile, to mark the time, season, or opportunity for doing any thing.

But it appears to me still more simple and natural, to view till as merely the prop. primarily used in the sense of ad, to. The A.S. word til, or tille, is rendered both ad, and donec. Su.G. till also admits of both senses. It is thus defined by Ihre; Till, praepositio, notans motum ad locum, et id diverso modo; dum enim genitivum regit, indicat durationem, secus si accusativo jungatur. Thus all the difference between till, ad, and till, donec, is that the former denotes progress with respect to place, the other, progress as to time. As till and to are used promiscuously in old writing, in the sense of ad; till, donec, may be often resolved into to. Thus, "I must work from twelve till six," i. e. from the hour of twelve to that of six; marking progressive labour. In one of the examples given by Dr. Johns. under until, which he properly designs a prep., the substitution of to would express the sense equally well: " His sons were priests of the tribe of Dan until the day of the captivity."

It is no inconsiderable confirmation of this hypothesis, that although til does not occur in the Teut. dialects, tot, to, is used in this sense; the same prep. denoting progress both with respect to place and time. Tot huys gaen, to go home, to go to one's house; Tot den nacht to, till night. I might add, as analogical confirmations, Fr. jusque à, Lat. usque ad, &c. used in the same sense.

I did not observe, till I had written this article, that Lye throws out the same idea; Add Jun.

Su.G. waexl-a, id. waexel vicissitude, the state of changing; Isl. vixl, vices, vygse, vyxe, per vices. Ihre observes, that the most ancient vestige of the word is in MoesG. wik, which he understands as equivalent to Lat. vice; alleging that the terms are allied, and that the Goth. word has the greatest appearance of antiquity, because the Lat. one stands singly, without any cognates, whereas Goth. wik-a signifies cedere, to give way, to leave one's place, which is the true idea of vicissitude.

The learned Lord Hailes, mentioning A.S. gislas, hostages, says; "It may be considered whether this be not the same with wissles, i. c. exchanges; wisselen, to exchange, is still used in Low Dutch. The Scots used it in the reign of James V." Annals, i. 17. N.

The worthy Judge had not heard of the term, although still used in some counties. His idea as to gislas, notwithstanding the apparent analogy of idea, is not supported by fact. For they appear as words radically different in all the languages in which both are preserved. Franc. gezal, kisal, obses; unehsal, permutatio; Germ. gisel,—wechsel; Su.G. gissel, gislan,—waexel; A.S. wrixl-an, permutare. Sibb. mentions the s. as occurring in our Acts of

To QUHYTE, WHEAT, v. a. To cut with a knife; whittle, E. It is almost invariably applied to wood.

"Scot. to wheat sticks, i. e. to whittle or cut them," Rudd. more generally pron. white. A.Bor. "white, to cut sticks with a knife." Gl. Grose.

Johnson derives the v. whittle from the s. as signifying a knife; Seren. from white, probably as referring to the effect of cutting wood, which is to make it appear white, especially when the bark is cut off. For, in proof of his meaning, he refers to Isl. hwitmylingur, an arrow, thus denominated from the white feathers fixed to it.

It is possible, however, that this term might be originally applied to the act of cutting wood with a view to bring it to a point, or to sharpen it, by giving it the form of a dart or arrow; from A.S. hwettan, Isl. hwet-ia, Su.G. hwaet-ia, acuere, exacuere, E. whet; from A.S. hwaet, Isl. Su.G. hwass, acutus. There is no ground to doubt that this is the origin of whittle, A.S. hwitel, a knife, q. a sharp instrument. Teut. wette, waete, acies cultri; from wett-en, acuere.

QUHYTE, adj. Hypocritical, dissembling, under the appearance of candour.

Thay meruellit the ryche gyftis of Eneas, Apon Ascaneus feil wounder was, The schining vissage of the god Cupide, And his dissimillit slekit wourdes quhyte. Doug. Virgil, 35. 48.

It is used in a similar sense by Chaucer.

Trowe I (quod she) for all your wordes white,
O who so seeth you, knoweth you full lite.

Troilus, iii. 1573.

There is an evident allusion to the wearing of white garments, as an emblem of innocence, especially by the clergy in times of Popery, during the celebration of the offices of religion.

This term occurs in the S. Prov., "You are as white as a loan soup," Kelly, p. 371. i. e. milk given to passengers at the place of milking. Kelly, in expl. another proverb, "He gave me whitings, but bones," i. e. fair words, says; "The Scots call flatteries whitings, and flatterers white people," p. 158. The latter phrase, I apprehend, is now obsolete. Whether flatterics were ever called whitings,

I question much. As this writer is not very accurate, he might have some recollection of a proverbial phrase, still used to denote flattery; " He kens how to butter a whiting." The play on the word whiting, which signifies a fish, seems to refer to the metaph. sense in which white was formerly used, as denoting a hypocritical person.

QUHITE MONEY. Silver. V. Ouhissel, v. This is a Scandinavian idiom. Su.G. hwita penningar, silver money.

QUHITHER, s. A transient indisposition. V. Quhidder.

QUHYTYSS, s. pl.

" Armys and quhytyss, that thai bar, With blud wes sa defoulyt thar, That they mycht nocht descroyit be."

Barbour, xiii. 183. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton says; "Quhytys are coats: the word is disfigured by an odd orthography." In Edit. 1620, it is coats.

I cannot think, however, that quhytyss simply signifies coats. The same word is used as an adj. in our old laws.

"Quhite harnes" (harness) is connected with " steel bonnets" and " uther munition bellical." Acts Mar. c. 75. Murray.

From still more ancient laws it appears that this kind of military dress was restricted to those of the first rank.

"It is ordained—that everie noble-man, sik as Earle, Lorde, Knichte and Barronne, and everie greate landed-man, havand ane hundreth pounde of yeirlie rente, bee an-armed in quhite harnesse, licht or heavie as they please, and weaponed effeir and to his honour." Acts Ja. V. c. 87. 88. Murray.

The only word, that seems to have any affinity, is Fr. hoqueton, a military garment. A.S. hwitel, however, denotes a mantle, a soldier's cloak.

By comparing Bellend. with the Lat. of Boece, it appears that the term quhytis was used, originally at least, to denote very fine and pure cloths made of wool. They seem to have been so called from their whiteness, and to have been an article of luxury. "In Niddisdail is the toun of Dunfreis, quhair mony small and deligat quhytis ar maid, haldin in gret daynte to marchandis of vncouth realmes." Descr. Albion, c. 5.

" In ea oppidum est Dumfries, insigne laneis pannis candidissimis, subtilissimoque contextis filo, Anglis, Gallis, Flandris, Germanisque, ad quos ferunt, in deliciis." Boeth.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 226.

"To whitter, i. e. to warble in a low voice, as singing birds always do at first, when they set about imitating any sweet music, which particularly attracts their attention." N. ibid.

2. It is applied, with a slight variation, to the quick motion of the tongue; as of that of a serpent, which, as Rudd. observes, moves so quickly, that it was "thought to have three tongues.'

QUHITRED, QUHITTRET, s. The Common Weasel, S. Mustela vulgaris, Linn. V. Statist. Acc. P. Luss, Dunbartons. xvii. 247. whitrack, Moray.

"Mustela vulgaris ea est, quae Whitred nostratibus dicitur. Sylvestris (ea quae Wcesel) altera major et saevior." Sibb. Scot. p. 11.

"Amang thame ar mony martrikis, beuers, quhitredis and toddis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 8.

Out cume the Quhittret furwith, Ane littill beist of lim and lith, And of ane sobir schaip.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 22. The writer distinguishes this animal from the Fittret, which he introduces in the stanza immediatelypreceding.

The Fumart and the Fittret straue, The deip and howest hole to haue, That wes in all the wood.

But there is certainly no difference, except in the orthography. He seems to have adopted the pron. of Aberd., merely for the sake of alliteration.

Her minnie had hain'd the warl, And the whitrack-skin had routh.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 294.

i. e. there was money enough in the purse made of the weasel's skin.

Quhittret has been derived from Tent. wittern odorare, odorem spargere; Gl. Sibb. This indeed expresses one quality of the animal, as when pursued it emits an offensive smell. But I would rather deduce its name from another, which would be more readily fixed on, as being peculiarly characteristic, and more generally obvious. This is the swiftness of its motion; Isl. hwatur, Su.G. hwat, quick, clever, fleet. Thus we proverbially say, As clever's a quhittret, S. V. Quhid, v.

QUHOYNE, adj. Few. V. QUHEYNE.

To QUHOMMEL, v. a. To turn upside down. V. Quhemle.

QUHONNAR, adj. Fewer; the comparative of Quheyne, quhone.

Barbour, xi. 605. MS.

Fewer is substituted in all the Edit. I have seen, Pinkerton's not excepted.

QUHOW, adv. How.

"Heir it is expedient to schaw quhat is sweiring, & quhow mony verteous conditionis ar requirit to flauchful sweiring." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551. Fol. 30. b.

This orthography frequently occurs in his work; and, if I recollect right, in a few instances, in the MS. of Bl. Harry's Life of Wallace. But it is without any proper authority.

To QUHRYNE, v. n. 1. To squeak, to squeal. "Than the suyne began to quhryne, quhen thai herd the asse tair, quhilk gart the hennis kekkyl quhen the cokis creu." Compl. S. p. 59.

They maid it like a scraped swyne;

2. To murmur, to emit a querulous sound, to whine.

Doug. Virgil, 14. 49. Tharon aucht na man irk, complene norquhryne. Ibid. 125. 41.

It is called "an imitative word," Gl. Compl. But it is evidently derived from with A.S. hrin-an, Isl. hrin-a, ejulare, mugire; hrina, a stentorian voice. It seems radically the same with Croyn, q. v. Quhryne, s A wild roar, a yell.

The birsit baris and beris in there styis Raring all wod furth quhrynis and wyld cryis.

Doug. Virgil, 204. 52.

QUICKEN, s. Couch-grass, Dogs-grass, S. Triticum repens, Linn. "The Quicken. Scot. aust." Lightfoot, p. 1131. This is also the name S.B. Quicks, A. Bor. E. quick-grass, Skinner.

Denominated perhaps because of its lively nature; as every joint of the root, which is left in the ground, springs up anew.

In Loth. it is also called ae-pointed grass, as springing up with a single shoot.

"The most troublesome weed to farmers, and which it is the object of fallow chiefly to destroy, is that sort of grass called Quicken, which propagates by shoots from its roots, which spread under ground." I'. Bendothy, Perths. Statist. Acc. xix. 351. 352. N.

The Sw. names, qwick-hwete, qwick-rot, and qwicka, are evidently allied.

QUINTER, s. "A ewe in her third year; quasi, twinter, because her second year is completed." Sibb. Gl.

In this case it must be formed from twa winter, as our forefathers denominated the year from this dreary season. Rudd. has observed that, "to the West and South, whole counties turn W, when a T preceeds, into Qu, as que, qual, quanty, bequeen, for two, twelve, twenty, between, &cc." Gl. lett. Q. QUIRIE, s. QUISQUOUS, adj. Nice, perplexing, difficult of discussin, S.

"Besides, the truths delivered by Ministers in the fields upon quisquous subjects, with no small caution by some, and pretty safely, were heard and taken up by the hearers, according to their humours and opinions, many times far different from, and altogether without the cautions given by the Preacher, which either could not [be], or were not understood by them." Wodrow's Hist. i. 533.

Can this be viewed as a reduplication of Lat. quis, of what kind; or formed from quisquis, whose-ever? It may be borrowed from the scholastic jargon, like E. quiddity.

QUYTE, part pa. Requited, repaid.

Thi kyndnes sal be quyt, as I am trew knight. Gawan and Gologras, i. 16.

common, and inclosed, Orkn.

"The said Quoy of land, called Quoy-dandie, is to be exposed to sale, &c .- What is called a quoy in Orkney, is a piece of ground taken in from a common, and inclosed with a wall or other fence; and its boundaries being thus precisely fixed and ascertained, no doubt can arise as to its extent." Answers for A. Watt, to Condescendence D. Erskine, Kirkwall, Nov. 27. 1804.

The term sheep-quoy is also used as synon. with bucht, Orkn.

Isl. kwi conveys the same idea, for it denotes a fold or bucht for milking ewes. Claustrum longum et angustum, quale paratur, ubi oves ordine mulgendo includuntur; G. Andr. p. 156. Septum quo pecudes per noctem in agro includuntur. Vestro-Gothi dicunt, kya; Verel. It is certainly the same word which is transferred to a long and narrow way inclosed. Kui, qui, Via porrecta, hominibus utrinque clausa; Su.G. qwia. Teut. koye, locus in quo greges quiescunt stabulanturque; koue van schaepen, ovile, Kilian.

The primary idea conveyed by this word is that of an inclosure. Perhaps the Gothic inhabitants of Orkney originally used it to denote a fold, as in Isl.; and it has been afterwards transferred to a piece of ground inclosed for culture; from its resemblance to a fold. The word seems radically to have been common both to Goths and Celts. Wachter, vo. Koie, refers to C.B. cau, claudere; kay, Lhuyd.

A ringit quoy is one which has at least originally been of a circular form. Ring-fences, I am inform. ed, are used in England.

QUOTT, QUOTE, QUOITT, s. The portion of the goods of one deceased appointed by law to be paid for the confirmation of his testament, or for the right of intromitting with his property.

From this fund the salaries of the lords of Session were to be paid, by order of Queen Mary. In a precept addressed 66 to the collectoris and ressaveris of the quotts for confirmation of the testaments of the personis decessand within oure realme," she enjoins "the soume of ane thousand six hundreth punds, usuale money of our said realm, to be upliftit and uptaken yeirlie-off the fyrst and reddiest fruits, and profits, that hereafter sall happen to be obtaint of the said quotts, for the confirmation of the said testaments of the persons decessand." Acts Sederunt, 13th April 1564. It is afterwards ordain. ed, that " twelve pennies of every pound of the deads part shall be the quote of all testaments, both great and small, which shall be confirmed." Ibid. 28th Feb. 1666. p. 101.

Fr. quote, the several portion or share belonging or falling to every one. La quote des tailles, the assessing of taxes. L.B. quota, share, portion.

Su.G. refband, robbings, Seren. This seems differently formed from our term, ref signifying the side, q. the side-bands. But Wideg, gives raaband, as signifying rope-band.

RABBLE, s. A rhapsody, idle incoherent discourse; as a mere rabble of nonsense, S.

- "That unexampled manifesto, which, at Canterbury's direction, Balcanqual, Ross, and St. Audrews, had penned, was now printed in the King's name, and sent abroad, not only through all England, but over sea, as we heard, in divers languages, heaping up a rabble of the falsest calumnies that ever was put into any one discourse that I had read."

Here it is conjoined with ordoure, in translating Lat. ordo, so as rather to convey the idea of some regularity.

His bannerman in that place Wallace slew. And then to ground the banner soon it flew.

RACE, s. 1. A strong current in the sea, S. V. RAISS.

2. The current of water which turns a mill, S.B. "He remembers the waulk-mill at Kettock's Mill, which stood in the same place where the present waulk-mill is, upon a small island, lying between the meal-mill race, and the north grain of the river." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1793. p. 67.

The current, in its passage from a mill, is called the tail-race, q. from behind.

Teut. brache, used in the same sense, is probably from the same root. Verel. derives Isl. rakke, rakka, from rakka, prakka, circumcursitare. Another, says Wachter, might possibly deduce it from Germ. riechen, vestigia odorari, and brack from be-riechen, odoratu investigare. Fr. braque, Ital. brace-o, L.B. brace-us, brace-o, E. brache, id. It denotes haste or rashness both in speech, and in action.

This is evidently the same with Rakel, in O.E. hasty, rash; Tyrwhitt.

O rakel hond, to do so foule a mis. O troubled wit, o ire reccheles, That unavised smitest giltèles.

Chauc. Manciples T. ver. 17227.

He also uses rakelnesse for rashness.

Su.G. rocke, A.S. roce, Alem. rakk, Germ. rock, Belg. roch, L.B. rocc-us, roch-us, Arm. roket, Fr. rochet, toga. Ihre traces E. frock to this source. RACKET, s. A blow, a smart stroke, S.

"Scot. we use Racket; as, He gave him a racket on the lug, i. e. a box on the ear," Rudd. vo. Rak, 2.

Perhaps from the instrument with which balls are struck at tennis, called a racket, Fr. raquette. V. Ketche-pillaris. Or, both may be from Isl. rek-a, hreck-ia, propellere; Belg. rack-en, to hit. Of racket, as used at tennis, Johns. says;—"whence perhaps all the other senses." But racket, common to S. and E., as denoting a bustle, or confused noise, caused by a multitude, seems rather allied to Su.G. ragat-a tumultuari, grassari. Hence, according to Ihre, Ital. ragatta, altercation, strife.

RACKLE, s. A chain, S.B.

Rakyl occurs in the same sense in an O.E. poem, published from Harl. MS. 78.

I have not met with this word, or one derived from it, in any O.E. work; unless redde should be thus expl. in the following passage.

The abbas be the honde hur toke, And ladd her forthe, so seyth the boke, She was redd for roune.

Le Bone Florence, ibid. iii. 80. Su.G. rone signifies a young boar. But the sense of this term is uncertain.

It is evidently an old participle. For the v., I red, is used both in the South and West of S. i. e. I am afraid.

Rudd. oddly deduces this, per aphaeresin, from fraid, afraid, or dread, in Spenser drad. The obvious origin is Su.G. raed-as, radd-a, to fear, Alem. red-en, id. Isl. hraede terreo; timeo. Hence Su.G. raedd, Dan. raed, red, afraid; raedde fear, reddelig terrible, of raedd, greatly affrighted, from of intensive, and raedde. From the last word the learned Ihre derives E. afraid. This, however, is perhaps more directly from Fr. affray-er to frighten; though the origin of the Fr. word is most probably Goth.

RADDOUR, s. Fear, timidity.

Off Wallace com the Scottis sic comfort tuk, Quhen thai him saw, all raddowr thai forsuk.

Wallace, x. 94. MS.

Mr. Pink. to the expl. of the term, adds, "rubor, pudor," Gl. S. P. R.; as if it were derived from the terms denoting redness. But it is evidently from the same origin with the adj. Rad. V. Redundour.

RADNESS, s. Fear, timidity.

²⁴ The conspirators, without regarding his tears or indignation, dismissed such of his followers as they suspected;—and though they treated him with great respect, guarded his person with the utmost care. This enterprise is usually called the Raid of Ruthven." Robertson's Hist. Scotl. p. 365. Ed. 1791.

O.E. rode, road, is used precisely in the same sense. "Whither make ye a rode to-day?" 1 Sam. xxvii. 10.

A.S. rad, rade, equitatio, iter equestre;—item, invasio, incursio,—an invasion,—inrode or irruption, Somner; from A.S. rid-an to ride, as Germ. reite id. from reit-en; herireita, a military invasion, from her an army and reiten. Ihre views Su.G. rid, Isl. hrid, an attack, a combat, as a cognate. Hence skothrid, a battle in which men fight with weapons; griothrid, one in which they fight with stones. But it seems doubtful, if these terms be from the same root. The analogy of derivation from reid-a to ride, is lost in Isl. hrid. This also seems primarily to signify a storm.

RADE, RAID, s. A road for ships.

Now is it bot ane firth in the sey flude; Ane rade vnsikkir for schip and ballingere.

The word was used so late as the reign of Charles I. For in a charter granted by him to the city of Edinburgh, he gives "the port-customs, harbour, soil, and raid of Leith." Maitland's Hist. Edin. p. 264.

Fr. rade, Belg. rede, Su.G. redd, id. which Ihre derives from red-a, parare, because ships are there prepared for sailing. Rudd. after Skinner, perhaps more naturally, from the v. ride, as we say, to ride at anchor; and as the v. is used in the following passage:

Furth of the foreschip lete thay ankirris glide, The nauy rade endland the schoris side.

Doug. Virgil, 198. 35.

It seems to have been a figure of considerable antiquity, to call a ship, a rider of the main.

The only difficulty I have as to this etymon, is that Isl. brimreid occurs in Hervar. S. c. 15. as denoting an aestuary or firth. V. Verel. Ind. vo. Brimsamt. But the learned writer, neither here, nor in his Notes on Hervar. S., gives any light as to the proper meaning of reid in this connexion.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 55.

Ragman occurs in O.E. apparently as synon. with breuet, i. e. a brief, in the account given of a preacher and vender of Indulgences.

There preached a pardoner, as he a priest were, Brought forth a bul with many bishops seales; And said that himselfe might absoyle hem all Of falsehode, of fasting and of vowes broken. Lewde men leued him wel, and liked his wordes, Commen up kneling, to kisse his bulles.

He bouched hem with his breuet, and blered her eies,

And raughte, with his ragman, both ringes & broches.

Thus thei given her gold, glotons to kepe. P. Ploughman's Vision, A. 2, a. Ed. 1561.

Skinner derives bouched from Fr. boucher, obturare. But here it evidently signifies, hoodwinked, which is one of the senses of the Fr. word. V. Bouscher, Cotgr.

Rudd., with considerable plausibility, derives this term from Ital. ragionamento, a discourse, ragionare, to reason, from Lat. ratiocinari, ratio. But he is certainly mistaken in connecting this with the famous Ragman's Row, or Roll," q. v.

It would appear, that the term Rageman anciently signified some office allied to that of a herald, or rather of a recorder.

Ther is non heraud hath half swich a rolle Right as a rageman hath rekned hem newe. Tombes vpon Tabernacles, tylde vpon lofte. P. Ploughman's Crede.

This word may perhaps be derived from Teut. reghe, ordo, series; or Germ. rache, a cause, a narration, an explanation of any thing by its causes; also, in a forensic sense, a cause under litigation. A history, which related a series of events, was denominated, by the ancient Franks, katatrahha, and an historian, katatrahhari; from katat, res gesta, and rachi. Among the Salii, and Ripuarii, there were judges and assessors with the Counts, whose business it was to enquire into causes, and of consequence to protect the innocent, to whom the name of Rachimburgii was given; from rache, a cause, and bergan, to protect; Wachter, vo. Rache.

RAGMAN'S ROW, or ROLL, "a collection of those deeds by which the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland were tyrannically constrained to subscribe allegiance to Edward I. of England, A. 1296; and which were more particularly recorded in four large rolls of parchment, consisting of thirty-five pieces bound together, kept in the tower of London, and for the most part extant in Prynne's 3d vol. from p. 648. to 665." Rudd.

This learned writer views the phrase as having the same origin with Ragmen, ragment, a rhapsody, q. v. The editors of the Encycl. Britan. say that it is more rightly Ragimund's roll, so called from one Ragimund a legate in Scotland, who calling before him all the beneficed clergymen in that kingdom, caused them upon oath to give in the true value of their benefices; according to which they were afterwards taxed by the court of Rome; and that this roll, among other records, being taken from the Scots by Edward I, was redelivered to them, in the beginning of the reign of Edward III."

But this derivation evidently rests on a misnomer. No legate of the name of Ragimund ever came into this country. The name of the legate referred to was Bagimund. In our old laws this assessment is called "the auld taxatioun of Bagimont," and "the auld taxatioun, as is contenit in the buik of Bagimontis taxt." Acts Ja. III. 1471. c. 54. Ed. 1566. c. 43. Murray. Ja. IV. 1493. c. 70. Ed. 1566. c. 39. Murray. V. Aw, v.

According to Spotswood, the lists taken at this time were afterwards called Bagiment's Rolls. "The same year," (1274) he says, "was one Bagimund a Legate directed hither, who calling before him all the beneficed persons within this kingdom, caused them upon their oath give up the worth and value of their benefices; according to which they were taxed. The table (commonly called Bagiment's rolls) served for the present collection, and was a rule in aftertimes for the prizes taken of those that came to sue for benefices in the court of Rome." Hist. p. 46.

This legate is called by Fordun, Bajamondus. Lib. x. c. 36. p. 122.

But although there had been a legate of the name of Ragimund, who had done what is here ascribed to him, still there would have been reason to doubt whether this was the origin of the phrase. For it appears to have been early used in England; and it is not probable that it would be adopted in the laws of that country, as a phrase of general use, merely from the circumstance of its having been given in Scotland to a particular roll. Rageman is defined by Spelman, "a statute concerning justices appointed by Edward I. and his council to make a circuit through England, and to hear and determine all complaints of injuries done for five years preceding Michaelmas in the fourth year of his reign;" Gl. vo. Rageman. V. also Cowel.

We find, indeed, the phrase "Ragman's Roll," used by E. writers, in particular reference to Scotland. Baker, in his Chronicle, says, that Edward III. surrendered, by his charter, all his title of sowereignty to the kingdom of Scotland, restored dis vers deeds and instruments of their former homages and fealties, with the famous evidence called Ragman's Roll;" Fol. 127.

Otterbourne also speaks of the restitution of these deeds, and of "the letter which is called Ragman, with the seal of homage made to the noble king Edward I;" Chron. Angl. ap. Du Cange.

It does not appear, however, that we are therefore to conclude that the phrase originated from this deed. It seems to have been of general acceptation in E., as signifying those letters patent which were delivered by individuals into the hands of government, in which they confessed themselves guilty of treasonable acts, misprisions, or other crimes, and submitted themselves to the will of their sovereign. In the letters of Henry, A. 1399, de Ragemannis comburendis, Rymer, Tom. 8. p. 109, we have the following passage; Licet nuper, tempore D. Ricardi nuper regis Angliae-quamplurimi subditi-regni nostri Angliae per diversa scripta, cartas, sive literas patentes, vocata Raggemans sive Blank Chartres, sigillis eorundem subditorum separatim consignata et in cancellaria ipsius nuper regis postmodum missa, se reos et culpabiles de diversis proditionibus, ac misprisionibus et aliis malefactis, per ipsos contra ipsum nuper Regem et regaliam suam factis, fore cognoverint--ordinavimus, quod omnia singula scripta, cartae, seu literae, praedictae—comburantur et destruantur. Ap. Du Cange.

Thus we find that Rageman is expl. as denoting a statute which respected complaints of injuries, and also such letters as contained self-accusations of certain crimes committed against the State. It is probable, therefore, that the word, according to its original meaning, necessarily included the idea of accusation or crimination. This sense, indeed, even its structure seems to require. Isl. raega signifies. to accuse, to criminate; whence raegd-r, an accused person, rogur a calumny, raege, raetr, and raekall, an accuser. MoesG. wrah-jan, A.S. wreg-an, Alem. ruag-en, ruog-en, Germ. rug-en, Belg. wroegh-en, Su.G. roj-a, accusare. To this origin Junius traces E. rogue. A.S. wregere, as well as wregend, signifies an accuser. V. Wachter, vo. Rugen. According to Schilter, Alem. ruagstab, ruogstab, properly signifies letters of accusation, from ruag-en to accuse, and stab, A.S. stuef, a letter.— Proprieque adeo ruogstab literas actoris ad judicem directas sive libellum accusatorium designat. It seems thus in some degree to correspond to the Porteous-roll of later times.

This etymon is not a little confirmed by the use of the term Rageman, in P. Ploughman, as applied to the Devil, in allusion perhaps to his being called "the accuser of the brethren," Rev. ii. 10.—When describing an allegorical tree, Langland says that when it was shaken, the devil gathered all the fruit both great and small: by which he seems to mean that he held even the saints in Limbo Patrum. Then Pierce is introduced as trying to hit him with an apple, that if possible he might make him quit his prev.

Adam, and Abraham, and Esay the prophete, Sampson, Samuell, and Saynct John the Baptist, Bare hem forth boldly, no body him let; And made of holy men his horde, in limbo inferni.

There is darckenes, and drede, and the deuell mayster,

And Pyers of pure tene of that apple he caught. He hit oft at him, hit if it might,

Filius, by the Faders will and frenes of, Spiritus Sancti,

To go rob that rageman and reue the fruit from him,

And speke, Spiritus Sanctus, in Gabriels mouth.

Fol. 88, a.

It would appear, that the word had been sometimes used in Scotland as expressive of the strongest obligation. Thus in the account given in Fordun, of a conspiracy against David Bruce, it is said that the conspirators having formed their plan, lest any of them should flinch from it, Editae sunt indenturae ragmannicae hinc inde firmiter roboratae; or as it is expressed in the MS. of Coupar, Literae ragmannicae sigillis firmiter roboratae. Scotichron. L. xiv. c. 25.

This passage shews, that the vulgar still view ragewort as one of these herbs which have been subjected to magical influence; especially as being employed by witches as a steed in their nocturnal expeditions. It also confirms the explanation given of Bunewand, q. v.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 9.

The meaning of this word is very uncertain. It is most probably, however, a term of reproach, corresponding to a variety of the same kind in this curious Prologue; and may be allied to Su.G. ra, genius, daemon; Isl. raege, id. Raege watter, mali genii; or to Isl. raeg-a, raeg-ia, Su.G. roej-a, accusare, q. an accuser.

Mr. Tooke, I find, views it as the same with rogue, g being softened to y; deducing it from A.S. wrig-an, to cover, to cloak. He quotes the term as used in P. Ploughman, Fol. 23. p. 2.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 50.

 \mathbf{V} . the s. sense 5.

Su.G. rek-a, Isl. reik-a, to roam, to wander abroad, reikun travelling; Vel til reika, able to range. The second sense is correspondent to Su.G. rak-a to run, to go swiftly. In illustrating this v. Ihre refers to our S. term. Su.G. rack-a, Isl. rakka, to run hither and thither; hrakningar, cursitationes. Ir. rach-a, ire.

RAIK, RAYK, RAKE, s. 1. The extent of a course, walk, or journey, S. A lang raik, a long extent of way; also a long excursion; a sheep raik, a walk or pasture for sheep, S. also cattle-raik, q. v.

That land, thai oysyd all The Barys rayk all tyme to call, Wes gyvyn on that condytyowne To found there a relygyowne.

Wyntown, vii. 6. 104. Cursum Apri beato Andreae contulit. Fordun.

Lib. v. c. 36. "A sheep-raik, and a sheep-walk, are synonymous." Bannatyne Poems, Note, p. 277.

2. A swift pace. Thus it is said of a horse, that takes a long step, or moves actively, that he has a great raik of the road, S.

Of well-drest footmen five or sax or more, At a gueed rake were rinning on afore.

Ross's Helenore, p. 96.

The verbs mentioned above perhaps primarily imply the idea of extension; from Su.G. raeck-a, Isl. reik-ia, &c. extendere. What is a lang raik, but a great extent of ground? Or, a great raik, but the capacity of reaching far, as including a considerable space in each step? Ihre mentions Scot. a long raik, rendering it, longa viae series, longum iter. For he improperly traces it to Su.G. raecka, ordo, series.

3. The act of carrying from one place to another, whether by personal labour or otherwise, S.

He brings twa, thrie, &c. raik a day; applied to dung, coals, &c. in which carts and horses are employed, as equivalent to draught. It is also applied to the carriage of water in buckets. In this sense, a raik, S.A. is synon. with a gang, S.B. I need scarcely add, that both these terms primarily respect motion, or the extent of ground passed over.

Suppois that he, and his houshold, suld dé For falt of fude; thair of thay gif no rak, Bot our his heid his maling thay will tak.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 119. 4. A term used with respect to salmon-fishings; probably denoting the extent to which the boats are rowed, or of the fishing ground itself.

- Et specialiter salmonum piscarias super dicta aqua de Dee vulgo nuncupat. lie raik et stellis, midchingle, pott et fuirdis;——Chart. Jac. VI. 1617. State, Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 298.

5. It is transferred to discourse. Tongue-raik, elocution, flow of language, S.B. either as originally implying the idea of prolixity, i. e. extension in speaking, or of fluency, q. quick motion of the tongue. V. the v. sense 4. RAIK, RAK, RACK, s. Care, account, reckoning. Quhat raik? what avails it? what account is to be made? what do I care for it? The phrase is still used in vulgar language, S.

Dunbar, Evergreen, i. 255.

Rax seems to be used either as the pl., or instead of raik is.

Falsat, I wald we maid ane band; Now quhill the King is sound sleipand, Quhat rax to stell his box?

Lyndsay, S. P. Repr. p. 145.

Mr. Pinkerton renders rak fault. But it is certainly from A.S. recce, cura, O.E. reck. The v. is still used. Isl. raegt, cura; raek-ia curare, Verel. RAIL, s. "A woman's jacket, or some such part of a woman's dress; called also a collar-body." Sibb. Gl.

This is mentioned by Rudd. as S.B. vo. Ralis, Belg. ryglyf, a boddice stays; from ryg-en to lace, and lyf the body, q. laced close to the body. To RAILL, v. n. To jest.

V. RANE.

RAIN GOOSE, the Red-throated Diver, Colymbus Septentrionalis, Linn. thus denominated, because its crying is thought to prognosticate rain. Shetl. Caithn.

"The birds are, eagles, -marrots or auks, kings fishers, rain geese, muir fowls, &c. P. Reay, Caithn.

Statist. Acc. vii. 573.

"The raingoose of this place-in flying,-utters a howling or croaking noise, which the country people consider as an indication of rain, and from this circumstance, it has got the name which it bears, with the addition of goose, an appellation bestowed on almost every swimming bird in this country." Barry's Orkney, p. 304. RAYNE, s. A continued repetition. V. RANE.

RAING, RANG, s. Row, line, S. V. RANG. To RAING, v. n. 1. To rank up, to be arranged in a line, S.

To town-guard drum, of clangour clear, Baith men and steeds are raingit. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 53.

2. To go successively in a line, to follow in succession. The folk are raingin to the kirk, S.B.

RAIP, s. 1. A rope, S.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 197. MoesG. raip, A.S. rape, Precop. Su.G. rep, Isl.

O.Dan. reip, Belg. reep.

2. A measure of six ells in length, a rood; so called, as being measured by a rope, as rood is from the use of a rod, and line E. metaph. used for an inheritance.

"Ane rod, ane raip, ane lineall fall of measure, are all ane; -for ilk ane of them conteinis sex elnes in length, albeit ane rod is ane staffe, or gade of tymmer, quhair with land is measured, in Latine Pertica. Ane raip is maid of towe, sik as hempe, or vther stuffe, and sa meikle lande, as in measuring, falles vnder the rod or raip, in length is called ane fall of measure, or ane lineall fall, because it is the measure of the line, and length allanerly." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Particata.

It is a striking coincidence, that Su.G. rep also denotes a measure of length. Notat funem mensorium, vel certum spatium longitudinis; Ihre. The length seems to be lost among the inhabitants of Scandinavia. For Ihre mentions it as the conjecture of Du Cange, that it denoted a fathom, observing, however, that it must be larger; as, from the quotation referred to, the author mentions eighty-six reep, and three ells.

Su.G. rep-a, to measure by a line. It does not certainly appear, that A.S. rap has been used in this sense. The only circumstance that would seem to indicate this, is that E. rape denotes a portion of a county; the land of Sussex being divided into six rapes of this description. Somner derives the word from A.S. rap, a rope, q. meted out and divided by ropes; as of old were the fields and inheritances of certain nations." He refers to Kilian, vo. Kavel. Spelm., vo. Rapa, views it as a larger division of a country, equivalent to Lathe, including several Hundreds.

Measuring by line seems to have been the most ancient custom, as it was undoubtedly the most simple; Job xxxviii. 5. 2 Sam. viii. 2.

RAIR, s. A roar. V. RARE. To RAISE, RAIZE, v. a. To madden, to inflame; applied to a horse of mettle, S.

He should been tight that daur't to raize thee, Ance in a day.

Burns, iii. 141.

Rais'd, delirious, in a state of insanity, applied to man, S. It sometimes also signifies to provoke to violent passion; as Alem. raiz-en, irritare. Ihre mentions S. rees as signifying furor, and res-en furere. But these terms are used by Chaucer.

-He fill sodenlich into a wood rese, -She sterith about this house in a wood rese. Pardonere and Tapstere, 498.-548. Urry. For ther nas knyght, ne squyer, in his fathir's

That did, or seyd, eny thing Berinus to displese, That he n'old spetously anoon oppon him rese. Hist. Beryn, Urry, p. 601.

The Northern Etymologist traces these terms to Su.G. ras-a, Germ. ras-en, insanire. Su.G. raseri, RAISE-NET FISHING.

"The fourth method is called raise-net fishing. -It is so called from the lower part of the net rising and floating upon the water with the flowing tide, and setting down with the ebb. This is also called lake-fishing, from the nets being always set in lakes, or hollow parts of the tide-way, and never either in the channel of the river, or on the plain sand." P. Dornock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. ii. 16. 17.

RAISS, RASSE, RASE, RACE, s. A strong current in the sea, S.

-Als gret stremys ar rynnand. And als peralous, and mar, Till our saile thaim into schipfair. As is the raiss of Bretangye. Thai raysyt saile, and furth thai far, And by the mole that passyt var. Barbour, iii. 687. 697. MS. Within three or four miles of the Irish shore. when the flood returns, there is a regular current which sets off strongly for the Mull of Galloway. It runs at the rate of seven knots an hour, and is so forcible, that when the wind opposes it, it exhibits, for a great way, the appearance of breakers. It is called the Race of Strangers, and is a very curious spectacle." P. Port-Patrick, Wigt. Statist. Acc. i. 40.

It seems to be a current of this kind, between Alderney and France, which is called the Race of Alderney. Edin. Even. Courant, p. 2. Sep. 14. 1805.

Su.G. ras, alveus amnis, ubi aqua decurrit, from ras-a, currere, praecipiti lapsu ferri; Isl. watsraser, torrentes; Teut. raes, aestuarium.

RAITH, REATH, s. The fourth part of a year,

-Little mair than half a reath, Than, gin we a' be spared frae death We'll gladly prie

Fresh noggans o' your reaming graith.——
Fergusson's Poems, ii. 47.

"Perhaps corr. of feird or feirth, fourth," Sibb. But it is more probably allied to Su.G. ret, Isl. reitr, any thing that is quadrangular; quadratum quodvis; ruta, Germ. raute, id. As this is applied only to space, some might prefer rid, Isl. hrid, spatium temporis.

RATH, adj. 1. Sudden, quick.

The Tuquheit gird to the Gowk, and gaif him a fall,

Raiff his taill fra his heid, with a rathe pleid. Houlate, iii. 16. MS.

Thus the term ought to be read, instead of rache in the printed copy.

A.S. rath, raethe, hraeth, citò, are certainly to be viewed as originally the same with hrad, hraed, hraeth, celer, velox; and both as corresponding to Belg. rad, radde, reede, expeditus, rapidus, celer; Su.G. rad, citus, velox, whence radt, cito; Isl. hradr, hrad-ur, promtus.

"Mr. Tooke says; In English we have Rath, Rather, Rathest; which are simply the Anglo-Saxon Rath, Rathor, Rathost, celer, velox." But this acute writer does not seem to have observed, that celer is not the only sense of A.S. rath. Hrath, hraed, radically the same with rath, signify both citus and promptus, paratus, Lye; hraedlice, adv. quickly, readily, Somner; as, when used as an adj., It has the sense of, maturus. It is most probable that the signification, prepared, is the primary one; and that A.S. rath, kraeth, is the part. raed, geraed, from ge-raed-ian, parare, whence E. ready. Thus Teut. reed, in like manner, has both senses. Reed, ghe-reed, paratus, promtus; et, expeditus, celer, Kilian; from reed-en, ghe-reed-en, parare. Isl. reid-a, rad-ast, Su.G. red-a, parare, praeparare. Ihre, however, derives red-a from rad celer.
2. Ready, prepared. This seems at least the sense of the term in the following passage.

The princis tho, quhylk suld this peace making, Turnis towart the bricht sonnys vprisyng, Wyth the salt melder in there handis raith.

Doug. Virgil, 413. 19.

RAITH, adv. Quickly, hastily.

His feris has this pray ressauit raith, And to there meit addressis it for to graith.

Doug. Virgil, 19. 31. Rathe is used as an adv. by Chaucer, in the sense of soon, early.

What aileth you so rathe for to arise? Shipmanne's Tale, ver. 13029.

It also signifies, speedily.

A.S. rath, raethe, hraethe, id. But although it occurs, in these forms, only as an adv., it seems to have been originally an adj. There are various proofs of this use both in O.E. and in provincial language. V. Diversions of Purley, i. 506-513., also in S.

E. rath fruit, i. e. early fruit, or what is soon ripe. Rather is the compar. of rath, and rathest the superl. The latter is used by Chaucer, soonest; and also by our Hume of Godscroft.

It occurs as signifying, first, soonest.

"King Robert in his flight, or retreat, divided his men into three companies, that went severall wayes, that so the enemie being uncertaine in what company he himself were, and not knowing which to pursue rathest, he might the better escape." Hist. Doug. p. 28.

He also uses it as signifying, most readily, i. e.

most probably.

"He means rathest (as I think) George now Lord Hume, (for he is Lord ever after this) and Sir David of Wedderburn with his brothers," &c. Hist. Doug. p. 248.

RAIVEL, s. A rail, as the raivel of a stair, of a wooden bridge, &c. S. The tops of a cart are also called raivels, S.B.

To RAK, v. a. To reach, to attain.

To sum best sall cum best That hap, Weil rak weil rins.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 68.

This is an old proverbial phrase signifying that " he runs well, who is successful in attaining the end he had in view." MocsG. rak-jan, A.S. raccan, Su.G. raeck-a, id. Heb. רקה, rakah, extendit. To RAK, REK, v. a. To regard, to care for.

O haitful deith !-To all pepill elyke and commoun ay Thou haldis euin and beris the scepture wand, Eternally observand thy cunnand, Quhilk grete and small down thringis, and nane rakkis. Doug. Virgil, 465. 1.

What raks the feud, where the friendship dow not?" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 76.

From the same origin with E. reck; A.S. rec-an, Isl. raek-ia, Su.G. rykt-a, curare; MoesG. rahnan, aestimare.

RAK, s. Care, regard. V. RAIK.

RAK, RAWK, ROIK, ROOK, s. A thick mist or fog, a vapour. Rak seems confined to S.B.

The day was dawing wele I knew; Persauyt the morning bla, wan and har, Wyth cloudy gum and rak ouerquhelmyt the are. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 202. 26.

The rane and roik reft from vs sycht of heuin. Ibid. 74. 12. J

-The laithly odoure rais on hicht From the fyre blesis, dirk as ony roik, That to the ruffis toppis went the smoik. Ibid. 432. 19.

"Scot. and Ang. Bor. rack or rawk, Rudd."

Isl. rak-ur, humidus, Verel.; rakr, subhumidus, udus, rek-ia irrigare, unde rekia, raekia, pluvia, pluvia irrigua, humor, G. Andr. p. 194. 197. He traces the Isl. terms to Heb. רות, ravah, riah, rigatus, irrigatus, humectatus fuit. Teut. roock. vapor, Dan. Sax. racu, pluvia, unda, humor; Isl. roka, unda vento dispersa. We may perhaps also view Isl. rok-r, the twilight, and rokv-a (vesperascere), to draw towards evening, as allied; especially as we say that it is a rooky day, when the air is thick and the light of consequence feeble. We may add MoesG. riquis, darkness, riquis-an, to grow dark.

Rudd. thinks that reek has the same origin with rak and roik. The idea is extremely probable. For Teut. roock denotes smoke, as well as vapour. Although Isl. reik-r, fumus, be deduced from rijk, riuk-a fumare, it may be radically the same with rek-ia mentioned above. The Su.G. for smoke is rock, pron. ruk, as Gr. v.; and A.S. rocc is used in the same sense. Ihre observes, concerning the Su.G. term, that it denotes any thing which resembles darkness in colour, or otherwise.

Mr. Tooke, Divers. Purley, i. 390. justly censures Dr. Johns. for defining E. rack, 't the clouds as they are driven by the wind.' For some of the passages, which the Doctor himself has quoted, disown this interpretation. Mr. Tooke might justly have referred to one of these, as clearly contradicting the definition. It is from the learned Bacon.

"The winds in the upper region, which move the clouds above, which we call the rack, and are not perceived below, pass without noise."

The Doctor seems to have understood this passage, as if these words, "which we call the rack," were expletive of all the preceding part of the sentence. But they evidently refer only to "the clouds above." Thus, according to Bacon, the rack denotes the thin vapours in the higher region of the air, which may either be moved by the winds, or stand still.

But Mr. Tooke, although he has quoted all the passages in Doug. Virgil that seemed to bear on his explanation of the term, and corrected the reading in several passages that cannot be brought to apply to it, (V. WRAITH), has overlooked one material passage, in which the term is undoubtedly used in another sense, nearly allied to that adopted by Dr. Johns.

And trumpettis blast rasyt within the toun Sic manere brute, as thocht men hard the soun Of crannis crowping fleing in the are With spedy fard in randoun here and thare; As from the flude of Trace, hate Strymonye, Under the dirk cloudis oft we se:

Thay fle the wedderis blast and rak of wynd, Thare gladsum sownes followand thaym behynd. P. 324. 36.

Mr. Tooke has quoted a passage from Shakspeare, which would seem to convey a similar idea.

Dazzle mine eyes, or doe I see three sunnes? Three glorious sunnes, each one a perfect sunne, Not seperated with the racking clouds, But seuer'd in a pale cleare shining skye.

Rak of wind certainly signifies the wind opening or extending the clouds. In the same sense they are said to be racked. Rak, S.B. denotes both the thin white clouds, which are scarcely visible, and their motion. Rack of the weather, A. Bor., "the track in which the clouds move;" Gl. Grose.

Isl. rakin conveys the same idea; ventus nubes serenans et pellens; G. Andr. But perhaps the origin is A.S. recc-an, Su.G. raeck-a, to extend. Isl. rakin may be from rek-a pellere, to drive.

RAK, RAWK, s. The rheum which distils from the eyes, during sleep, or when they are in any degree inflamed, S.B. gar, synon.

"We call—the viscous humor in sore eyes, or in one not well awak'd, a rawk. Hence the common expression among us, Before ye have rauk'd your ene, i. e. before ye be awak'd;" Rudd. vo. Rak, 1.

It seems, doubtful, however, if rawk'd, as a v., does not rather signify, opened, q. stretched.

This is probably from the same source with the preceding, as having the general sense of humour or moisture. It may, however, be allied to Isl. hrak rejectaneum quid, from hrek-ia, rek-a, pellere, reka ut, ejicere; hence rek, Su.G. wrak, whatever is thrown out by the sea on the shore.

RAK, RAWK, s. The greenish scum which covers water in a state of stagnation, S.B.

We call the moss that grows over spring-wells, when neglected,—a rawk; Rudd. ubi sup. V. RAK, s. 3.

RAK, s. "A stroak, a blow," Rudd.

The stedis stakerit in the stour, for streking on stray.

The bernys bowit abak, Sa woundir rude wes the rak.

Gawan and Gol. iii, 21.

It seems to be the word, as here used, which Mr. Pinkerton renders vengeance.

Thay met in melle with ane felloun rak,

Quhill schaftis al to schudderis with ane crak.

Doug. Virgil, 386. 14.

From the rutis he it lousit and rent

And tumblit down fra thyne or he wald stent:

The large are did reirding with the rusche, The brayis dynlit and all down can dusche: The river wox affrayit with the rak, And demmyt with the rolkis ran abak.

Ibid. 249. 31.

Rudd. observes, that S. we more frequently use racket: But rak, I suspect, here signifies shock, as equivalent to rusche, v. 29. and included in impetus, the term used by Virg.

Thus it may be allied to Isl. rek-a, hreck-ia, propellere, quatere. Hence perhaps Su.G. raak, ruptura glaciei.

RAK-SAUCH, s. A reproachful term applied to Kennedy by Dunbar.

Filling of tauch, Rak sauch, cry Crauch, thou art owreset.

Evergreen, ii. 60.

Equivalent to S. widdifow; as being one who deserves to rack, or stretch, a withy, or twig of willow, the instrument of execution anciently used, i. e. to be hanged. V. SAUCH, and WIDDIE. RAKE.

"Tristrem, for thi sake,
For sothe wived hath he;
This wil the torn tow rake;
Of Breteyne douke schal he be."

Sir Tristrem, p. 175.

This is certainly an error, instead of torn to wrake, i. e. turn or bring thee to wreck or ruin. The connexion evidently requires this sense; although the passage is rendered in Gl., "Matters will take this turn."

A.S. wrace, wrace, ultio; To wrace sendan, in ultionem mittere, Lye.

RAKE, s. A swift pace. V. RAIK, s.

RAKYNG, part. pr.

Schir, I complaine of injure;
A resing storie of rakyng Mure
Hes mangillit my making, throw his malise.

Dunbar, Mailland Poems, p. 107.

Mr. Pinkerton views it as signifying, acting the part of a calumniator and sycophant, from Isl. raekall, delator. This is corr. from rae-karl. The v. is raeg-a accusare. It perhaps rather signifies, wandering, from the v. Raik, q. v.

RAKKET, s.

He tellis thame ilk ane caik by caik; Syne lokkes thame up, and takis a faik, Betwixt his dowblett and his jackett, And eites thame in the buith that smaik; —that he mort into ane rakket.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 171. 172.

"Blow, box on the ear." L. Hailes. This does not correspond. It is an evil wish, either that the person might die in a hurry or bustle, as racket is used in this sense; or, it may denote a vile termination of life, from Fr. raque, filth, ordure, Teut. rack-en, purgare latrinas, racker, cloacarius.

RAKLESS, adj. Careless, rash, S. the same with E. reckless; A.S. recceleas.

RAKLESLIE, adv. Unwittingly.

—— Blind Lamech rakleslie

Did slay Cayn unhappelie.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 32.

Junius derives rayled, as used by Chaucer in the same sense, from Isl. ryll, rivus tacitè labens; vo.

Rill. To RALEIFF, v. n.

Ye se the Scottis puttis feill to confusioun, Wald ye wyth men agayn on him raleiff, And mer thaim anys, I sall, quhill I may leiff, Low you fer mar than ony othir knycht. Wallace, x. 723. MS.

Him in MS. is certainly a mistake for thaim. Raleiff seems to signify Rally, as relewyt is elsewhere used, q. v.

RALIS, s. pl. Nets.

- Quhen that he is betrappit fra hys feris, Amyd the hunting ralis and the nettys, Standis at the bay, and vp the birsis settis. Doug. Virgil, 344. 45.

- Fast to the vettis thringis The chois gallandis, and huntmen thaym besyde, With ralis, and with nettis strang and wyde.

Ibid. 104. 20.

It properly denotes nets of a close texture, retia rara, Virg.

Vol. II.

Rudd. gives as the reason of the name, that, by means of these nets, the wild beasts are inclosed as with rails. I do not see any more probable etymon; unless we should suppose it derived from Franc. rigil-on custodire, praeservare, defendere; Schilter.

RALLION, s. Clattering, noise, S.B. His shoon wi' tackets weel were shod,

Which made a fearfu' rallion.

"They were quickly rambarred, and beaten back by those that had been left of purpose in the court by Morton." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 290.

To RAME, v. n. To shout, to cry aloud, to roar, S.B. Reem, to cry aloud, or bewail one's self, A. Bor.

Furth fleis sche wyth mony schout and cry,-Takand nane hede, nor yit na maner schame, Sa amang men to ryn, roup and rame.

Ibid. 432. 38. A.S. kream-an clamare, whence the E. rame or ream, "loud weeping," Rudd. We may add, Su.G. raam-a, Isl. hrym-a, boare, Germ. ram-en, rammen, clamorem edere quocunque modo, Alem. ruom clamor; Su.G. rom, Isl. rom-ur, clamor applaudentium; rom-a, Su.G. be-roem-a, applaudere, Germ. ruhm-en, rum-en, laudare; Franc. ruom-an, gloriari. Wachter refers to Gr. wetouus, lamentor, intense clamo.

RAMMASCHE, adj. Collected; Fr, ramassé. "There eftir I herd the rumour of rammasche foulis ande of beystis that maid grite beir." Compl. S. p. 59.

RAMMEKINS, s. "A dish made of eggs, cheese, and crumbs of bread, mixed in the manner of a pudding;" Gl. Sibb.

It seems to be the same dish which the Fr. call ramolles; " past-meats fashioned like sausages, and made of the juyce of herbes, the yolkes of eggcs, cheese, and meale seasoned with salt, and boiled in water; when they are taken out of it, and served up hot;" Cotgr.

Kilian gives Flandr. rammeken as synon. with roosteye, roosteyken; panis escharites, panis super-craticula tostus, i. e. S. girdle-bannocks. It seems, however, to be the origin of the term.

2. Rank, applied to straw; rammel strae, straw that is strong and rank, S.B. q. branched out. A. Bor. rammely, tall, and rank; as beans; Gl. Grose.

RAMMEL, RAMBLE, s. Mixed or blended grain, S. "Blanded bear, or rammel, as the country people here call it, is the produce of barley and common bear sown in a mixed state." P. Markinch, Fife, Statist. Acc. xii. 531.

" Many farmers in this and the neighbouring parishes, still prefer for seed a mixture of bear or big and barley, in different proportions, which they call Ramble." P. Crail, Fife, Statist. Acc. ix. 441.

Perhaps from Teut. rammel-en tumultuari, q. in a confused state, as being blended.

RAMMER, s. A ramrod, S.

To RAMMIS, v. n. To go about in a state approaching to frenzy; to be driven about under the impulse of any powerful appetite, S.B.

Thus one is said to rammis about like a cat, in allusion to a female cat seeking the male. One is also said to be rammissing with hunger.

Alem. romisch pfaerd, equus salax; Su.G. roensk, used in the same sense. O. Teut. ramm-en, salire, inire more arietum; from ramme, a ram, because of the liquorish disposition of this animal. Hence, RAMMIST, part. adj. Furious, raging.

Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 133. a. Chaucer uses rampe in the same sense.

Whan she cometh home she rampeth in my face, And cryeth, False coward, wreke thy wif. Monkes Prol. ver. 13910.

A.S. rempend, praeceps; Isl. ramb-a, superbire; Ital. ramp-are, to paw like a lion.

RAMP, adj. 1. Riotous, disorderly.

"It was urged for him, the confession provenwas merely extrajudicial, and he was not presumed to be the aggressor, he being but a tradesman, and old, near the age of fifty, the other a gentleman, and young, and known to be ramp." Fountain. hall's Decisions, i. 2.

2. Vehement, violent, S.

To RAMP, v. n. Milk is said to ramp, when, from some disease in the cow, it becomes ropy, and is drawn out into threads, like any glutinous substance, S.B.

Perhaps from Fr. ramp-er, to climb, because of the appearance the milk makes, when poured out. Or, as the vulgar view this as the effect of witchcraft, from O.Flandr. ramp-en, dira imprecari, from Teut. ramp, infortunium, malum; Kilian.

"These spotted eels are called rampar eels. It is said, they will attack men, or even black cattle, when in the water." P. Johnston, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. iv. 217. N.

This is evidently a corr. of lamprey. It is also called a nine-ee'd eel. V. Eel.

RAM-RAIS, RAM-RACE, s. The act of running in a precipitous manner, with the head inclined downward, as if one meant to butt with it, S.

Sum haisty and vnwarly at the flicht Slakis there brydillis, spurrandin all there mycht, Can with ane ram rais to the portis dusche, Like with there hedis the hard barris to frusche. Doug. Virgil, 397. 47.

This term, which is overlooked by Rudd., may have been formed from the name of the ram; as it literally expresses the sense of the word, arieto, used by Virg. from aries, id.; like Teut. ramey-en.

It is evident that Doug., in using this term, in the translation of arieto, has viewed it as derived from ram, aries. But it is doubtful, whether it may not be allied to Su.G. ram, Isl. ramm-ur, robustus. The Icelanders have a similar phrase, Ham ramr, violentia ac viribus Cyclopicis grassatus; from ham-ast, delirare, giganteo modo grassari. V. G. Andr. p. 105. Ramleike, cyclopicae vires. RAMSH, adj. 1. Strong, robust. A woman of unusual strength, or masculine in her manners, is called a ramsh queyn, S.B.

Su.G. ram, Isl. ramm-ur, robust; also, deformaed, quum qui robusti sunt, non semper formam delicatissimam habeant, Ihre.

As, however, the term sometimes implies the idea of salacious, it may be the same with E. rammish, used by Chaucer as signifying, "rank, like a rum;" Tyrwhitt. V. RAMMIS.

2. Harsh to the taste, S.B.

As animals, or vegetables, that have a strong growth, are generally unsavoury, it may, in this sense, be from the origin already mentioned. Accordingly ram, strong, is also rendered rank, olidus; En ram lukt, odor graveolens; Norw. romms, rank. Isl. rammr, however, signifies bitter; Fland. wransch, Belg. rinsch, sour.

RAM-STAM, adj. Forward, thoughtless; used also adv., precipitately, headlong. To come on ram-stam, to advance without regard to the course one takes, or to any object in the way,

Nae ferly tho' ye do despise

The hairum-scairum, ramstam boys,

The rattlin squad.

Burns, iii. 91.

As this word conveys a similar idea to that of ram-rais, the first syllable may allude to the ram; or it may be from Su.G. ram, strong. The second may be formed, either, as in many cases, for the metrical alliteration; or from Su.G. staemm-a, tendere, cursum dirigere, q. to direct one's course, or rush forward like a ram; or to do it forcibly, like the action of a strong man. Isl. stame, careless, remiss, may have a superior claim; as denoting the carelessness, with which the force referred to, is exerted. V. RAM-RAIS.

RAMUKLOCH. To sing ramukloch, to cry, to change one's tune from mirth to sadness; synon. with Bamullo.

It hes bene sene, that wyse wemen, Eftir thair husbands deid, Hes gottin men,-With ane grene sling, hes gart thame bring The geir quhilk won wes be ane dring; And syne gart all the bairnis sing

RANCE, s. 1. A prop, a wooden stake employed for the purpose of supporting a building, S.

2. The cross bar which joins the lower part of the frame of a chair together, Ang.

3. The fore-part of the roof of a bed, or the cornice of a wooden bed. Fore-rance, the slip of timber which secures the lids of a wooden bed, and forms a mortice for them, in which they run backwards and forwards, S.

Su.G. ren, a stake, C.B. rhaein, a pole.

RANDAN, s. V. RANDOUN.

RANDER, s. Order, strict conformity to rule, S.B.

The Squire ordain'd nae runder to be kept, And rous'd him always best that lightest leapt: Lest Norv, seeing dancing by a rule, Should blush, as having never been at school. Ross's Helenore, p. 116.

Perhaps from Isl. raund, Su.G. rand, margo, linea, pl. rander; q. to keep no determinate line. as a line is often the mark by which one is directed in any work or amusement.

RANDERS, s. pl. Idle rumours; also, idle conversation, S.

RANDY, RANDIE-BEGGAR, s. 1. A sturdy beggar; one who exacts alms by threatenings and abusive language, especially when there are none but females at home, S.

" Many Randies (sturdy vagrants) infest this country from the neighbouring towns and the Highlands." P. Kirkden, Statist. Acc. ii. 515.

I'm sure the chief of a' his kin Was Rab the beggar randy.

Ritson's S. Poems, i. 183.

"The place is oppressed with gangs of gypsies, commonly called Randy-beggars, because there is nobody to take the smallest account of them." P. Eaglesham, Renfrews. Statist. Acc. ii. 124.

2. A scold, S.

This might appear at first view to be the primary sense. But it is certainly only a secondary one; although the more common use of the term in towns. It seems merely a general application, borrowed from the abusive language used by the vagrant tribes; in the same manner as S. tinkler, properly the name of a profession, has come to signify a scold, and also a sturdy mendicant, because of the rude manners and wandering life of tinkers.

A.S. regn-theof, dominans fur. But it seems properly to denote the spoiler of a kingdom. Su.G. runtiuf fur fugiens, one who steals and runs away. This might agree pretty well with the character of our vagrants. As, however, randie-beggar is exactly analogous to what our law calls maisterful beggar or sornare; the term may probably be traced to ran, which, in almost all the Goth. dialects, signifies the act of spoiling. If we shall suppose that the A.S. term theof, Su.G. tiuf, Germ. dieb, a thief, has been conjoined, the compound word would denote one who not only takes what is not his own, but does so forcibly; as resembling Stouthrie, q. v. It might easily be softened to Randie.

Some might prefer A.S. rand-wiga, clypcatus bellator, miles; because soldiers have too often acted as freebooters; or Gacl. ranntaich, a songster, because bairds, when their consequence had declined, were classed with maisterful beggars, Acts Ja. VI.

Randy is used as an adj. A. Bor.; "riotous, obstreperous, disorderly;" Grose's Prov. Gl.

RANDOUN, s. The swift course, flight, or motion of any thing.

It is used to denote the swift motion of a horse, a

It denotes the swift motion of birds.

Doug. Virgil, 324. 33.

Also, the flight of a javelin or arrow.

Bot throw his gardy sone

The grundin hede and bludy schaft are done, Furth haldand the self randoun as it went.

Doug. Virgil, 327. 45.

Fr. randon, the swiftness or force of a violent stream. This is the primary sense, as found in the v. V. RANDONIT. Norm. Sax. randun, a rennan fluere, and dun deorsum; Franc. rentdun, a torrent, a cataract; Hickes' Thes. i. 232. Rennun, id. Schilter, vo. Rinnan. Hence E. random. Randan is used in a similar sense, S.B. A thing is said to come at a randan, when it comes by surprise.

Apone that riche river, randonit full evin, The side wallis war set, sad to the see.

Gawan and Gol. i. 20.

This is evidently meant to ridicule the profession of Bards.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238. b. 21.

At nicht is some gayne,——
This is our auld a rayne;——
I am maist wilsum of wane,

Within this warld wyde.

Maitland Poems, p. 198.

The author, in the first verse, seems to quote the beginning of some old song.

The word, as used by Wyntown, may admit of the same sense. Rainie still denotes any metrical jargon, or idle repetition, used by children, S.B. tronie, synon.

3. A frequent and irksome repetition of the same sound or cry.

I herd a petcous appeill, with a pure mane, Sowlpit in sorrow, that sadly could say, "Woes me wrechein this warld, wilsum of wane!" With mair murnyng in mynd than I mene may; Rowpit rewchfully rolk in a rud rane.

Houlate, i. 4. MS.

"You're like the gowk (cuckow), you have not a rain but one," S. Prov. applied to those who often repeat the same thing; Rudd.

He supposes it may be the same with rame, m being changed into n, or rather from Isl. hryn exclamo. The latter is certainly preferable. We may add hrin vociferatio.

But perhaps it is allied to MoesG. runa, consilium, Su.G. runa, incantatio, as those, who pretended to magical power, used a certain rhythmical sort of gibberish, which they frequently repeated. Germ. raun, a mystery, an incantation, A.S. ge-ryne, mysterium, C.B. rhin, id. Isl. reyn-a eptir, to inquire after things secret, is traced to runir, literae; Landnam. Gl. Gael. rann denotes a song, a genealogy; rannach, a songster; ranaighe, a romancer, a story-teller; Shaw. It is a singular coincidence, that Heb. The ranah, signifies sonuit, 197, ranan, cecinit, clamavit; ranah, clamor, cantus, and 17, ron, also, a song.

It seems to be radically the same word that Warton refers to, as used in a MS. in the Harleian Coll.

Herkne to my ron.

V. RING, v.

RANGALE, RANGALD, RINGALD, RANGAT, s. 1. The rabble. This is the primary and most ancient sense.

On this wyss him ordanys he. And syne assemblit his mengne, That war vi hunder fechtand men, But rangale, that was with him then, That war as fele as that, or ma.

Barbour, viii. 198. MS.

Sibb. is mistaken when he renders "of smal rangale," Barbour, of low rank. It literally signifies, the low rabble.

For thai war on the lest party
Ane hundreth armyd jolyly
Of Knychtis and Sqwyeris, bot Rangale.
Wyntown, viii. 36. 35.

2. A crowd, a multitude, a mob, S.B.

His son and eik the prophetes Sibylla,

Amyddis of that sorte flokkis to the bra,

And grete routis with rangald in ledis he.

Doug. Virgil, 192. 10.

—— Syne all the ringald persewis With grunden arrowis, among the thik wod bewis. Ibid. 18. 54. V. Repair.

This properly denotes a crowd composed of the vulgar.

A rangel o' the common fouk In bourachs a' stood roun'.

3. Anarchy, disorder.

Gud rewl is banist our the bordour, And rangat rings, bot ony ordour, With reird of rebalds, and of swane.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 116.

Here the word is metonymically used, the cause being put for the effect; as anarchy and tumult are the consequences of the rabble, or swains, getting uppermost.

Rudd. mentions ran and gild, sodalitium, q. the running together or concourse of people. Ran, spoliatio, would have been more natural; q. a society for spoil. As the word is sometimes written ringald, he also mentions ring, because such crowds stand in a ring or circle. He might rather have referred to Su.G. ring, as signifying a circle of men, especially of those convened for judging in public concerns. Our ancestors, says the learned Ihre, held their public conventions in the open air, and a circle was formed, generally marked out by stones, where the judges and their assessors had their stations, within which the litigants, or those who consulted about public affairs, were admitted. Hence the phrase, A thing oc a ring, i. e. in the judgment and circle.

It would be stretching etymology too far, to suppose that this term had any connexion with Franc. rungall, L.B. roncalia, concilium, curia Gallorum. V. Jun. Goth. Gl. vo. Runa. Wachter, however, renders Galle convocatio.

But I have met with nothing that can be viewed as a satisfactory etymon of our term.

According to this definition, it may rather be from Isl. raund, Su.G. rand, extremity, and tilia, A.S. thil, a board, a plank, a joist. It is not improbable, that anciently it was a continuation, or the extremity, of the roof-tree; especially as Su.G. roeste, which seems to enter into the composition of the synon. term, roost-tree, denotes the upper part of a building which sustains the roof, the gable-end.

The folk that ascaped on Malcolme side,

To Scotland tham raped, & puplised it fulle wide. R. Brunne, p. 90.

To RAP forth, or out, v. a. To throw out with noise and vehemence, S.

The brokin skyis rappis furth thunderis leuin.

Doug. Virgil, 74. 13.

In a similar sense it is said, He rappit out a volley of oaths, S.

This may be also from Su.G. rapp citus, velox. RAPE, adv. Quickly, hastily.

Then Will as angrie as an ape, Ran ramping sweiring rude and rape Saw he none uther schift.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 64.

Chaucer uses rape, id. V. RAP, s. 3.

RAPEGYRNE, s. The name anciently given to the little figure made of the last handful of grain cut on the harvest field, now called the Maiden.

Statuit etiam primipilum unum reliquos praecedentem, in palo autumnalem nymphulam, quam Rapegyrne vulgus soleat appellare, ad altum gerentem, et ante cameram regis de lecto surgentis classicum subito fecit insonari, &c. Fordun. Scotichron. ii. 418.

Reaps, A. Bor. denotes "parcels of corn laid by the reapers to be gathered into sheaves by the binders;" Gl. Grose. V. Rip.

It might be deduced from A.S. raep-an, to lead captive, and girn-an, to strive, q. to strive to carry off the prize; as the gaining of the Maiden is generally the result of a contest among the reapers. This handful of corn, as well as the feast at the end of harvest, is called the Kirn. A.S. rip, however, signifies harvest, and ripa, ripe, a handful of corn, hripe-man, a reaper; Su.G. rcpa, MoesG. raupjan, to pluck, applied to ears of corn, Mark ii. 23. The last syllable may have originally been kirn, or of the same meaning. But I can find nothing certain as to the etymon of this word.

A superstitious idea is attached to the winning of the Maiden. If got by a young person, it is considered as a happy omen, that he or she shall be married before another harvest. For this reason perhaps, as well as because it is viewed as a sort of triumphal badge, there is a strife among the reapers as to the gaining of it. Various stratagems are employed for this purpose. A handful of corn is often left by one uncut, and covered with a little earth to conceal it from the other reapers, till such time as all the rest of the field is cut down. The person who is most cool generally obtains the prize, waiting till the other competitors have exhibited their pretensions, and then calling them back to the handful which had been concealed. V. Maiden.

RAPLACH, RAPLACK, RAPLOCK, REPLOCH, s. "Coarse woollen cloth, made from the worst kind of wool, homespun, and not dyed," Sibb. Gl. S.

Hence rapplack gray, reploch gray.

The udir cow he cleikis away,
With hir peur coit of rapplack gray.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 168.

Thair * * * clais, quhilk wes of reploch gray,
The vicar gart his clark cleik thame away.

Ibid. p. 65.

Sibb. observes, concerning Su.G. rapp, Indicat colorem qui inter flavum et caesium medius est, Lat. ravus. But the colour does not correspond. Perhaps rather from lock cirrus, and rep-a vellere, q. the lock of wool, as plucked from the animal, without any selection. Hence, RAPLOCH, adj. Coarse.

The Muse, poor hizzie! Tho' rough an' raploch be her measure, She's seldom lazy.

Burns, iii. 376.

To RAPPLE up, v. a. To do work in a hurried and imperfect manner. One who spins fast and coarse, is said to rapple up the lint, S.B. This is probably a dimin. from RAP aff, v. q. v.

To RARE, RAIR, v. n. To roar.

-Be the novis, and the cry Of men, that slayne and stekyd ware, That thai herd heyly cry and rare, Thai wyst, there fays war by theme past. Wyntown, viii. 26. 124.

Vnder thy feit the erd rair and trymbil Thou moist se throw hir incantatioun. Doug. Virgil, 117. 15.

A.S. rar-an, Belg. reer-en.

RARE, RAIR, s. 1. A roar, a cry. Than with ane rair the eirth sall ryue, And swallow them baith man & wyue: Than sall those creatures forlorne Warie the hour that thay war borne. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 173.

2. A loud report of any kind; as, a violent eructation, S.

To RAS, v. a. To raise.

The Kyng of Frawns set hym to ras And set a sege befor Calays.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 3.

To RASCH, v. a. To dash, to beat; to drive or throw with violence; synon. dusch.

"Suddanly rais ane north wynd, & raschit all thair schippis sa violently on the see bankis and sandis, that few of thaym eschapit." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 14. Illisa ad scopulos classe, Boeth.

The lion, wounded by a shaft sticking in his breast, is described as Begynnyng to rais his sterne mude, Reiosit of the batal, feirs, and wod Unabasitlie raschand the schaft in sounder.

Doug. Virgil, 405. 35. Frangit, Virg. The thrid with full gret hy with this Rycht till the bra syd he yeid, And stert be hynd hym on hys sted. -- And syne hyme that behynd hym wass, All magre his will him gan he rass Fra be hynd hym, thocht he had sworn, He laid hym ewyn hym beforn.

Barbour, iii. 134. MS.

i. e. he dashed, or violently threw down, the man before him, who had leaped on behind him on his horse.

Race is used in the same sense by Henry the Minstrel. V. RACE.

"Than the bel veddir for blythtnes bleyttit rycht fast, and the rammis raschit there heydis to gyddir." Compl. S. p. 103.

Rudd. views the word as formed from the sound, in which he is followed by Sibb. With far greater propriety Lye derives raschand, as used by Doug., corresponding to frangit, Virg., from Isl. rask-a, frangere, perdere, corrumpere; Add. Jun. Etym. To this Germ. reiss-en, rumpere, is undoubtedly al. RASHY, adj. Covered with rushes, S.

lied; riss, ruptura. As, however, rasch admits of a more general sense, it may perhaps be viewed as an active use of Su.G. ras-a, praecipiti lapsu ferri. Isl. ras, precipitancy in words, counsels, or actions. RASCH, RASCHE, s. 1. Dash, collision.

Sa felloun sound or clap made this grete clasche, That of his huge wecht, fell with ane rasche, The erd dynlit, and al the cieté schuke, So large feild his gousty body tuke.

Doug. Virgil, 305. 9. 2. Used to denote the clashing of arms. Nane vthir wise Enee the Troyane here

And Daunus son Turnus samyn in fere Hurllis togiddir with thare scheildis strang, That for grete raschis al the heuinnis rang.

Ibid. 438. 12. Fragor, Virg. Rasch is still used for a sudden fall, Loth.

A.S. hraes, impetus. As the s. implies the idea of noise, perhaps Germ. rausch-en stridere, crepitare, is allied.

To RASCH, RASHE, v. n. To make any forcible exertion, to rush, S.A.

"Incontinent rais ane terribyll clamour amang the Britonis fast raschand to harnes to resist this haisty affray." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 8. b.

"I am maid ane slaue of my body to ryn and rashe in arrage & carraige." Compl. S. p. 193.

"Young men-haue health, habilitie & strength. of body to run and ride, rash here and there," &c. Rollocke on the Passion, p. 517.

" To rashe through a darg, to perform a day's work hastily," Gl. Compl.

This is deduced from "Fr. arracher, Teut. erhaschen;" ibid. But it is evidently synon. with A.S. raes-an, to rush, and may be viewed as of the same stock with Su.G. rasa mentioned above, which also signifies to run, to make haste; rask, Belg. ras, quick, expeditious.

RASCH, RASH, adj. Agile, active. A rasch carle, a man vigorous beyond his years, Loth. Tweedd.

This and the E. word are both from Su.G. rask, celer, promtus; praeceps. But ours has the primary sense of the Goth. term, whereas the E. adj. retains only its oblique signification. V. Ihre in vo. Isl. hress, vegetus, robustus; Ol. Lex. Run. Raskinn, virilis, et vegetae aetatis, is probably from the same root.

RASCH, RASH, s. A rush, S.

"Than the scheiphyrdis vyuis cuttit raschis and seggis, and gadrit mony fragrant grene meduart." Compl. S. p. 65.

Lyndsay uses a very expressive emblem of security, of a proverbial kind, in which this term occurs. .

Johne voonland bene ful blyith I trow, Becaus the rasche bus keipis his kow.

Warkis, 1592, p. 272.

A.S. resc, juncus; MoesG. raus arundo. RASCHEN, RASHEN, adj. Made of rushes; as, a raschen cap, a cap of rushes, a raschen sword,

"The straw brechem is now supplanted by the leather collar, the rashen theats by the iron traces." P. Alvah, Banffs. Statist. Acc. iv. 393.

I mind it well, when thou could'st hardly gang, Or lisp out words, I choos'd thee frae the thrang

Of a' the bairns, and led thee by the hand, Aft to the tansy know or rashy strand.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 104.

To RASE out, v. a. To pull, to pluck. Tak thir dartis, and sone out of my case That ilk reuengeable arrow thou out rase.

Doug. Virgil, 385. 10. Rudd. deduces it from Fr. arrach-er, id. But it has more immediate affinity to Germ. reiss-en trahere, rapere, Alem. raz-en. As it implies the idea of celerity, it may be traced to Isl. ras, Su.G. rask, celer, manu promtus.

RASIT, part. pa. Abashed, confounded, thrown into confusion.

Than Schir Gawyne the gay, gude and gracius, -Melis of the message to Schir Golagrus, (Before the riale on raw the renk was noght rasit.)

Gawan and Gol. ii. 7.

i. e. "He was not abashed before the nobles that formed a line."

This word, which is not in Mr. Pinkerton's Gl., may be from A.S. reas-an, to beat down violently; Su.G. ras-a, Isl. hras-a, to fall; q. cast down, as radically the same with the v. Rasch, q. v. Verel. renders Isl. rask-a disturbare.

RASPS, s. pl. Raspberries, S. A. Bor.

RASSE, s. A strong current. V. RAISS.

RAT, s. 1. A scratch; as, a rat with a prein, a scratch with a pin, S.

2. Metaph. a wrinkle.

Alecto hir thrawin vissage did away -And hir in schape transformyt of ane trat, Hir forrett skorit with runkillis and mony rat. Doug. Virgil, 221. 35.

3. The track of a wheel in a road; cart-rat, S.B. rut, E.

Teut. reete, rete, rijte, rima, incisura, ruptura; canalis; rijt-en findere, rumpere, lacerare. In sense 3. it might seem allied to Su.G. ratta, a path. But perhaps the root is rad, a line.

To RAT, RATT, v. a. 1. To scratch, S.

2. "To make deep draughts, scores or impressions, as of any sharp thing dragged along the ground," S. Rudd. V. the s.

RAT, s. A wart on any part of the body, S. more properly wrat, q. v.

RATCH, s. Apparently the lock of a musket. Some had guns with rousty ratches,

Some had fiery peats for matches. Colvil's Mock Poem, P. 1. p. 6.

RATCHEL, s. A hard rocky crust below the soil, S. synon. pan, till.

Fr. rochaille, rocks, rockiness.

RATH, adj. and adv. Quick; quickly. V. RAITH.

RATH, adj. Strange, savage in appearance; a term applied to the owl when decked in borrowed feathers.

Than rewit thir ryallis of that rath man, Bayth Spirituale and Temporale, that kennit the cas. Houlate, iii. 18. MS.

Erroneously printed rach. A.S. rethe, "savage, fell, rude," Somner. RATIHABÍTION, s. Confirmation; a forensic term, used in the form of Lawborrows.

L.B. ratihabitio, confirmatio; ratihabere, pro ratum habere, confirmare; Du Cange.

RATT, RATTE, s. A line, a file of soldiers.

"I advanced myself, where there stood a number of gentlemen on horseback, where I found five ratt musketeers." Gen. Baillie's Acc. Battle of Kilsyth; Baillie's Lett. ii. 273.

"When our general assembly was set in the ordinary time and place, Lieutenant-Colonel Cottrell beset the church with some rattes of musqueteers and a troop of horse." Ibid. p. 369.

Germ. rat series, Su.G. rad, linea, ordo, Dan. rad af soldater, a rank or file of soldiers. Alem. rutte, rotte, turma militaris, L.B. rut-a; Schilter. Hence, I suppose, the soldiers of the City Guard of Edinburgh are to this day called The Town Ratts: although it would seem, that the phrase is now understood as if it had been ludicrously imposed. However low the term may have fallen in its acceptation, these gentlemen were certainly embodied at first for clearing the town of vermin. The word might be introduced from the Swedish discipline; as many of our bravest officers in the seventeenth century had served under the great Gustavus Adolphus.

RATTLESCULL, s. One who talks much without thinking, S. q. who has a rattle in his scull.

Gin Geordy be the rattle-scull I'm taul', I may expect to find him stiff and baul'. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 49.

The E. adj. rattle-headed is formed in the same

RATT RIME, s. Any thing repeated by rote, especially if of the doggrel kind, S.

With that he raucht me ane roll; to rede I begane

The royetest ane ragment with mony ratt rime. Of all the mowis in this mold, sen God merkit

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, a. 53.

This seems the same with E. rote; probably connected with Isl. roedd vox, raeda sermo, whence raedin loquax, dicaculus, G. Andr.; or perhaps rot-a circumagere, because of the constant repetition of the same thing.

RATTS, s. pl. A term used both by Dunbar and Kennedy, which from the connexion, evidently signifies some such treatment of a malefactor, as when, according to our custom, his dead body is hung in chains.

Ill-fart and dryit, as Densman on the ratts. Evergreen, ii. 50.

Quhen thou wryts Densman dryd upon the ratts, Ibid. 66. st. 1. The ravins sall ryve out baith thy ein,

And on the rattis sall be thy residence. Ibid. 69. st. 22.

Germ. Belg. rad signifies a wheel. Arm. rat, Ir. rit, rhotha, Alem. rad, Lat. rota, id. Germ. rad brechen, to break on the wheel. But the custom, to which the passages above quoted undoubtedly allude, is thus expressed in Belg. Op een rad gezet, " set upon a wheel, as murderers or incendiaries, after they are put to death;" Sewel. Alem. ruet, rota, crux, furca. V. Meruet, Schilter. Dunbar most probably alludes to this custom, in consequence of having seen it on the continent; especially as he speaks of a Densman, or Dane on the ratts. For it does not appear that it was known in Britain. Sw. raadbraka, to break on the wheel.

From the reply that Kennedy gives to Dunbar's accusation, it is unquestionable that the person, represented as on the ratts, is a malefactor. For Kennedy endeavours to ridicule the allusion, by shewing that Densman is an honourable appellation. He plays upon the word, as it not only signifies a Dane, but is a term of respect generally used in Scandinavia. V. DENSMAN.

RATTON, s. A rat, S. A. Bor. rottan, S.B.

" Na rattonis ar sene in this cuntre; and als sone as thay ar brocht thair, thay de." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.

Thocht rattonis ouer thame rin, thay tak na

Howbeit thai brek thair nek thai feil na pane. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1572, p. 72.

This is also used in O.E.

With that ranne there a route of rattons at

And smal mise with hem, mo than a thousande.

P. Ploughman, A. iii, a. Gael. radan, rodan, Hisp. raton, id. Teut. ratte, pl. ratten; hence ratten-kruyd, arsenic.

RAUCHAN, s. A plaid, such as is worn by men, S. mawd, synon.

Perhaps a corr. of Gael. breacan, id. "The Highland plaid," says Lhuyd, "is still called Brekan, and is denominated from its being of various colours." Lett. to the Welch, Transl. p. 20. In Shirr. Gl. however riach plaidie is expl. "dun, illcoloured plaid." The name may thus originate from the peculiar colour. Gael. riach, grey, brindled; riachan, any thing grey. Su.G. rya, however, signifies a rug, a garment of shag; gaunace, vestis stragula villosa; Ihre. This is evidently synon. with A.S. reowe, "loena, sagum; an Irish mantle or rugge, a soldier's cloak;" Somner.

RAUCHT, pret. v. Reached.

For hunger wod he gapis with throttis thre, Swyth swelleand that morsel raught had sche.

Doug. Virgil, 178. 27.

O.E. rauht, id.

RAUCHTIR, RAWCHTIR, s. An instrument of

His yrins was rude as ony rawchtir, Quhaire he leit blude it was no lawchtir. Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20.

Sibb. derives it from rauchtis, which he gives as synon. with rattis, rendering it the gallows. Dan. rakker signifies an executioner, Sw. skarp-raettare,

To RAVE, v. a. To take by violence.

"The Duke of York, thinking that he had better occasion to recover the crown, than Henry IV. had to rave the same from Richard II. and Leonell's posterity, joyned himself in this conspiracy of thir noblemen, by whose moven and assistance he purposed to recover his right and heritage, withholden from him and his forbeers." Pitscottie, p. 59. Su.G. raff-a, A.S. ref-an, id. V. Reife.

RAVE, s. A vague report, an uncertain rumour, a story which is not very credible, S.B.

Fr. reve a dream, which seems derived from Germ. raf-en to rant; or Teut. rev-en delirare, ineptire. RAVELLED. A ravell'd hesp, a troublesome or intricate business, S. "You have got a revel'd hesp in hand;" Kelly's S. Prov. p. 375.

To red a ravell'd hesp, to perform any work that is attended with difficulty, S.

Gin ye hae promis'd what but now perform? Amang us all a ravell'd hesp ye've made; Sae now pit tee your hand, and help to red. Ross's Helenore, p. 91.

RAVERY, s. Delirium; Fr. resverie.

"They will endeavour first to distemper this good man, and then, if he shall fall into ravery and loss his judgment, they will write down what he says." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 387.

RAUGHT, s. The act of reaching, S.B.

"Thinks I, an' I sou'd be sae gnib as middle wi' the thing that did nae brak my taes, some o' the chiels might lat a raught at me, an' gi' me a clamihewit to snib me frae comin that gate agen." Journal from London, p. 8.

It seems properly to denote the act of reaching out one's hand to strike; from A.S. raec-an to reach. V. RAUCHT. RAUCLE, adj. Rash, stout, fearless. V. RACKEL. RAVIN, adj. Ravenous.

The lesty beuer, and the ravin bare.— King's Quair, C. v. 6. Fr. ravineux, id. RAUISANT, part. pr. Ravenous, violent.

"Ande nou sen the deceis of oure nobyl illustir prince Kying James the fyift,—tha said rauisant volfis of Ingland hes intendit ane oniust veyr be ane sinister inuentit false titil contrar our realme." Compl. S. p. 3.

Fr. ravissant, id. from ravir to ravish. RAUN, RAWN, s. The roe of fish, S.

From fountains small greit Nilus flude doith flow, Even so of rawnis do michty fisches breid. K. James VI. Chron. S. P. iii. 489.

Johns. says that roe is properly roan or rone. Thus indeed the E. word is given by Skinner; but \mathbf{N} n be expl. it as pl., and equivalent to roes, ova piscium.

Dan. raun, Teut. rogen eines fisches, Isl. hrogn, ova piscium. V. Roun. Hence, RAUNER, s. A name given to the female salmon, i. e. the one which has the roe. The male is called a kipper, Loth. Tweedd.

RAUNS, s. pl. The beard of barley, S.B. synon. awns, q. v.

To RAUNG, v. n. To range, especially in a military form.

And that within, quhen that that saw That mengne raung thaim sua on raw, Till thair wardis that went in hy.

Barbour, xvii. 348. MS.

Edit. 1620, raying, i. e. arraying. Fr. rang-er, id. Sw. rang, ordo, series.

RAW, adj. 1. Damp, and at the same time chill.

A raw day, a day on which the air is of this temperature, S.

The word is used in this sense, E. But although Johns. quotes several passages in which this is the obvious meaning, he merely expl. it, "bleak, chill;" whereas the predominant idea is that of moistness.

It corresponds to Su.G. raadt waeder, coelum humidum, from raa madidus.

2. Unmixed, as applied to ardent spirits. Raw spirits, ardent spirits not diluted with water, S. Su.G. raa, A.S. hreauw, crudus.

RAW, s. 1. A row, a rank, S. On raw, in order; also, in line of battle. V. SEILDYN.

2. A kind of street, a row. V. REW.

3. Apparently used to denote parallel ridges, or the ground of different proprietors lying in run-ridge, a. in rows.

q. in rows.
"Wha wad misca' a Gordon on the raws of Strathbogie?" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 75.

RAWMOUD, adj. Expl. "beardless, simple."

Rawmoud rehald, and ranegald rehator.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 68.

q. having a raw mouth.

To RAX, v. n. 1. To reach, to extend the bodily members, as one when fatigued or awaking, S.

He raise, and raxed him where he stood,

And bade him match him with his marrows;
Than Tindaill heard them reason rude.

Then Tindaill heard them reason rude, And they loot off a flight of arrows.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 132.

A.S. ream, Isl. riome, Germ. rahm, id. The E., as in many other instances, has adopted Fr. creme, and laid aside the A.S. term. Even this, however, seems originally Gothic. Isl. krieme, flos, cremor, from krem-ia macerare, liquefacere. Skinner derives Fr. creme from Lat. cremor. But it is most probable, that even the latter is of Scythian origin; as the more radical term is found in different Northern dialects.

To REAM, v. a. To cream, to take the cream from milk, S. Germ. rahm-en, id.

To REAM, REME, v. n. 1. Ready to ream, to be in a state of readiness for being creamed, S.

On skelfs around the sheal the cogs were set, Ready to ream, and for the cheese be het.

Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

2. To froth, to foam. "Reaming liquor, frothing liquor," Gl. Shirr. A reaming bicker, &c. S.

REAVEL-RAVEL, s. A confused harangue, a rhapsody.

He making hands, and gown, and sleives wavel,

Half singing, vents this reavel ravel.

Cleland's Poems, p. 107. V. WAVEL.

Belg. revel-en, "to rave, to talk idly, by reason of being light-headed; reveluar, a raver; reveling, a raving;" Sewel. Teut. ravel-en, delirare, incptire; Kilian. The word is the same, in both forms; being a dimin. from Belg. rev-en, id. I am much disposed to think that reavel-ravel is originally the same reduplicated term which we now pronounce Reel-rall, q. v.; with this difference that the latter is used as an adv.

REAVER, s. A robber. V. REYFFAR.

Fr. ribauld, Ital. ribaldo. These might at first seem derived from Lat. rebell-is. As the Fr. has borrowed a great deal from the Ital., and the Ital. retains many Goth. terms, perhaps ribaldo ought to be immediately traced to Isl. rifballdi, tyrannus, G. Andr. p. 197.; perhaps from rifa, rif, rapina, and balldr potens, q. powerful by means of violence or robbery. Thre deduces Su.G. ribalder, nebulo, from hrid pugna, and bulldr audax, as originally denoting soldiers who could be kept under no proper discipline.

TO RED, REDD, REDE, REID. The v., written in one or other of these forms, is used in a variety of senses, which cannot all be easily referred to one origin; although some of them are intimately connected. I shall subjoin these different senses in that order which seems most natural; adding to each v. its derivatives.

To RED, v. n. "To suppose, to guess," Gl. Shirr. S.B.

Although I have met with no other written example of this sense, it is undoubtedly very ancient. A.S. raed-an, araed-an, "to conjecture, to divine, to guess, to reed; a word which to this day we use for explaining of riddles;" Somner. This sense is retained in Glouc. "At what price do you read this horse?" Gl. Grose, i. e. what, do you conjecture, was the price of it? Hence araed, a prophecy; raedels, a riddle, as such predictions were delivered in dark and enigmatical language; Alem. reda, an oracle; Teut. ghe-raeden a prophet; vaticinator, expositor aenigmatis; raed-en, Germ. raten, conjicere, divinare, hariolari. This term, in times of heathenism, was most probably used to denote the oracles delivered by priests.

To RED, REDE, v. a. To counsel, to advise, S. read, A. Bor.

O rede, O rede, mither, he says, A gude rede gie to me;

O sall I tak the nut-browne bride

And let faire Annet bee?

Ise rede ye tak fair Annet, Thomas,

And let the browne bride alane.

Lord Thomas, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 188. 189. The word is common in O.E.

Of help I haf grete nede, my werre is not alle ent, To wite what ye me rede, I set this parlement. R. Brunne, p. 283.

A.S. raed-an, Isl. rad-a, Su.G. raad-a, Teut. raed-en, Alem. rat-an, Germ. rat-en, rath-en, id. MoesG. ga-raginoda, gave counsel, ragineis, a counsellor. Ihre supposes that g is used for d.

As the v. in A.S. Teut. and Germ., which signifies to counsel, is written in the same manner with that denoting conjecture and divination, it is probable that it was originally used to signify counsel, from the respect paid to the oracular declarations of the priests. Hence,

REDE, REIDE, RAD, s. Counsel, advice, S. The King, eftre the gret journé, Throw rede off his consaill priué In ser townys gert cry on hycht, That quha sa clemyt till haf rycht To hald in Scotland land, or fe, That in thai xii moneth suld he Cum, and clam yt.———

Wyll of rede, Doug. Virgil, 61. 41.

A.S. Teut. raed, Isl. rad, Su.G. raad, Alem. rath, Germ. rat, id. Will of rede is purely Gothic. Su.G. willradig, inops consilii; a will-a, errare, quasi dicas, cujus incerta vagantur consilia; Ihre.

REDLES, adj. Destitute of counsel; as denoting the disorderly situation of an army surprised during sleep.

Wallace, viii. 361. MS.

In Edit. 1648 and 1673, reklesse; but not according to the MS.

A.S. raed-leas, rede-leas, consilii expers; also, praeceps, "headlong, unadvised;" Somner. Su.G.

raadloes, Isl. radlaus, id. To REDE, v. a. To judge, to determine one's Off comoun natur the courss be kynd to fulfill, The gud King gaif the gest to God for to rede.

Houlate, ii. 12. MS. i. e. " rendered up his spirit to God, that it might be judged by him."

A.S. raed-an, decernere, statuere, Germ. rat-en, constituere, ordinare; MoesG. ga-raid, stipendium constitutum, A.S. raede, red, lex, decretum, statutum. Su.G. red-a is used in a judicial sense; cau-sam suam agere; Ihre.

This sense is closely connected with that of giving counsel; because men; who act rationally, ask counsel, that they may form a judgment, and actually determine according to the propriety of the counsel which is given. Hence, probably, REID, s. Used as synon. with weird, fate, lot.

Quhy hes thow thus my fatall end compassit? Allace, allace, sall I thus sone be deid In this desert, and wait nane other reid?

Palice of Honour, i. 5.
It may, however, signify, "know no other counsel."

To RED, REDE, READ, v. a. To explain, to unfold; especially used with respect to an enigmatical saying. Red my riddle, is a phrase which occurs in old S. Songs.

In an Eng. copy of Lord Thomas, we find Come riddle my riddle, dear mother, he said.

Percy's Reliques, iii. 69.

This the learned editor supposes to be "a corruption of reade, advise."

"But ye maun read my riddle," she said;

"And answer my questions three;

" And but ye read them right," she said,

"Gae stretch ye out and die."

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 276.

Su.G. raad-a, red-a, explicare, interpretari; Germ. rat-en, exponere, docere.

To red a dream, has a similar sense.

Last ouk I dream'd my tup that bears the bell, And paths the snaw, out o'er a high craig fell, And brak his leg.—I started frae my bed, Awak'd, and leugh. - Ah! now my dream is red.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 9.

This sense, although nearly allied to that of giving counsel, may be directly traced to the primary one, of divining; as it was the business of him, who was supposed to possess a prophetic spirit, to expound what was obscure. Thre accordingly views Su.G. red-a as synon. with A.S. araed-an, to prophesy. Somner, when explaining A.S. raed-an, to conjecture, says; "Hence our reading, i. e. expounding of riddles." In the same sense, S. we speak of reading dreams, A.S. raedan swaefan, somnia interpretari; of reading cups, reading for-

It would seem indeed, that A.S. raed-an, legere, (whence the E. v. to read, in its common acceptation), primarily denoted what was considered as a supernatural power; and is therefore, as commonly used both in A.S. and E., to be viewed as bearing only a secondary sense. For its Isl. synon. rada has this signification. Rada runer, Magiae secretas literas exponere. It was transferred to what must have been viewed by the unlearned as very difficult, the explanation of the poems of the Scalds, which were not only written in Runic characters, but generally in language highly figurative and enigmatical: Rada risur, Scaldorum carmina explicare. Hence radning disciplina. V. Verel. Ind.

To REDE, REID, v. n. To discourse, to speak at large.

Mekill off him may spokyn be. And for I think off him to rede. And to schaw part off his gude dede, I will discryve now his fassoun, And part off his conditioun.

Barbour, x. 276. MS.

Sa did this King, that Ik off reid.

Ibid. ix. 101. V. RADNESS.

It seems to be used in the same sense by Wyntown.

Or I forthire nowe procede, Of the genealogi will I rede.

Cronykil, ii. 10. Rubr.

Arbace als the kyng of Mede, Of qwham before yhe herd me rede, Ryflyd Babylon that yhere,

That Procas in Rome begowth to stere.

Ibid. V. Prol. 22.

Isl. raed-a, loqui. Menn raeddu um tha er vaener; Men speak of those who are graceful; Kristnisag. p. 140. This word is used in the same connexion with that in The Bruce. For it is also rendered sermocinari, Gunnlaug. S. Gl. Raeda um vid einn, in sermone cum aliquo tangere; Sw. raed-a, red-a, Germ. red-en, to speak, to discourse; be-red-en, to persuade. The most ancient form of the v. is MoesG. rod-jan loqui.

This sense is nearly allied to that of explaining or unfolding. It might also seem to be radically the same term with that used to denote counsel. For, to speak, to discourse, is merely to bring forth the counsels of the mind.

REDE, s. 1. Voice.

The cler rede among the rocks rang, Through greyn branchis quhar byrdis blythly.

With joyus woice in hewynly armony. Wallace, viii. 1188. MS.

Editors, not understanding this word, have used. such liberties with the verse, as not only to change the meaning, but to make nonsense of it; as in Edit. 1648, 1763, &c.

The fresh river among the rocks rang.

2. Perhaps religious service.

Syne all the Lentren but les, and the lang Rede, And als in the Advent.

The Soland stewart was sent: For he coud fra the firmament

Fang the fische deid. Houlate, iii. 5. MS.

From the mention of Lent and Advent in connexion, one might at first suppose that the month of March were meant; A.S. Hraed-, Hraeth-monath, id. so called, either from Rheda a goddess of the Saxons, to whom they sacrificed in this month; or from hraed, paratus, because by this time they made preparation for agriculture, navigation, and warlike expeditions, from which they rested during winter. Bede, who calls this Rhed-monath, suggests another derivation; from A.S. hreth, ferus, saevus, because of the storms that generally prevail during March. For this reason, it might seem that Holland might call it the lung rede; as its severe weather often retards the spring, and checks the ardour of the husbandman.

The term, however, appears rather to denote the multitude of religious services used in the church of Rome during Lent.

Both these senses are supported by ancient authorities. Isl. roedd, raud, vox, loquela; raeda, sermo, a speech, a discourse; Fogur raeda, pulchra et placida oratio; Verel. Ind. Su.G. raede, Franc. reda, Germ. rede, id. A.S. raed is also rendered sermo. Lye quotes one example from Lib. Constit. p. 148. Raed weametta, sermonis iracundia.

To RED, v. a. To loose, to disentangle, to unravel, S. redd, South E. id.

This being said, commandis he enery fere, Do red thare takillis, and stand hard by there gere. Doug. Virgil, 127. 44. This is the sense given by Rudd. It may, however, signify, to put their tacklings in order. "Fools ravel, and wise men redd;" Ramsay's

S. Prov. p. 26.

To red a ravell'd hesp, to unravel yarn that is disordered, S.; used also metaph. V. RAVELLED. This corresponds to Sw. reda en haerfwa, to disentangle a skain. To red the head, or hair, to comb out the hair, S. This also is quite a Goth. idiom. Su.G. reda ut sit haar, crines pectine explicare; 1sl. greida har sitt, id. For both Su.G. red-a and Isl. greid-a signify, explicare, extricare. V. Ihre in vo. p. 409. Hence a redding-kaim. V. KAIM.

Terms, when used figuratively, are generally transferred from the body to the mind. The contrary seems to be the case here. The v., which properly denotes the act of expounding, i. e. unravelling, what is hard to be understood, is transferred to any thing implicated in a literal sense. To RED, REDD, REDE, RID, v. a. 1. To clear, to make way, to put in order, S.

And oure the wattyr, of purpos, Of Forth he passyd til Culros: Thare he begowth to red a grownd, Quhare that he thowcht a kyrk to found.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1180. Wyth swerdis dynt behuffis vs perfay Throw amyddis our inemyis red our way.

Doug. Virgil, 329. 20

In this sense Rudd. expl. the following passage. Thys Dardane prynce as vyctour thus in were Sa mony douchty corpis has brocht on bere. Amyd the planis ryddand a large gate, As dois ane routand ryuere rede on spate. Ibid. 339. 44.

But rede here seems not to be a v. but the adi. red, i. e. in such a state of inundation as to be highly discoloured.

The large wod makis placis to thare went, Buskis withdrawis, and branchis al to rent, Gan ratling and resound of thare deray, To red there renk, and rownes thaym the way. Doug. Virgil, 232. 25.

i. e. to clear their course; as we still say, to red the road.

Thus quhan thay had reddit the raggis, To roume thay wer inspyrit;

Tuk up thair taipis, and all thair taggis,

Furth fure as thay war fyrit.

Symmye & His Bruder, Chron. S. P. i. 360. To red, or red up a house, to put it in order, to remove any thing out of the way which might be a blemish or incumbrance, S.

-Anither forward unto Bonny-ha,

"Your father's house,-I knew it full well, a but, and a ben, and that but ill red up." Statist. Acc. xxi. 141. N.

To red up, also signifies, to put one's person in order, to dress.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 273.

She's ay sae clean red up and braw, She kills whene'er she glances. Ibid. ii. 205. "To rede marches betwixt two contending parties, i. e. to fix the true boundaries of their possessions; and figuratively, to compose differences, to procure peace." Rudd. V. Mere, s. 2. 2. By a slight obliquity, to separate, to part com-

Raid of Reidswire, Minstrelsy Bord. i. 118. "Red the cumber,—quell the tumult." Ibid. N. Rid is used in the same sense; as, to rid a plea.

"This, I fear, be a proclamation of red war among the clergy of that town; but the plea, I think, shall be shortly rid." Baillie's Lett. i. 46. Hence, Ridder, one who endeavours to settle a dispute, or to bring parties at variance to agreement.

"One night all were bent to go [to England] as ridders, and friends to both, without riding altogether with the parliament." Ibid. p. 381.

The v., as here used, may be immediately allied to A.S. ge-raed-ian, Su.G. red-a, Isl. reid-a, Belg. reed-en, Germ. be-reit-an, to prepare; Isl. rad-a, ordinare, in ordinem cogerc. As E. rid, however, also signifies, to clear, it is questionable whether our red, in this sense, should not rather be traced to A.S. hredd-an. V. next v. Notwithstanding of the difference of form between hreddan, ahraeddan, and geraedian, as in many other Goth. and A.S. verbs, it is highly probable that they are not radically different.

But it merits observation, that there is an obvious affinity between red, as signifying to disentangle, and red, to clear. For A.S. geraedian, parare, is used with respect to the hair; Geraedde hire feax; Composuit crines suos; Bed. 3. 9. Hence it appears, from analogy, that g in Isl. greid-a, extricare, mentioned above, as used in the same sense, corresponds to A.S. ge, being merely the mark of the prefix, like MoesG. ga. This intimate connexion between the verbs, as signifying to clear, and to disentangle, might induce a suspicion, that red, in all its senses, should be traced to that prolific root A.S. ge-raedian, parare, and its cognates; were it not that, in some of its significations, it retains a relation to the ideas of divination, prophecy, &c. which cannot well be referred to this as the root.

With their snouts they form a hollow in the bed of the river, generally so deep, that, when lying in it, their backs are rather below the level of the bed. This is called the redd. When they have deposited their spawn, they cover it with sand or gravel. Some suppose that this is the reason of their being called Reid fische. But this is a mistake. V. Reid FISCHE, and RUDE, s. 2.

To RED, v. n. To spawn, S. To REDACT, v. a. To reduce.

"That the Queen therefore was now returned, and they delivered of the fears of redacting the kingdom into a province, they did justly esteem it one of the greatest benefits that could happen unto them." Spotswood's Hist. p. 179. The word is also used by Wyntown.

Formed from the Lat. part. redact-us.

RED-BELLY, RED-WAME, s. The charr, a fish,

S.B. Salmo Alpinus, Linn.

"Loch-Borley affords, in great abundance, a species of trouts called Red Bellies, and in Gaelic, Tarragan." P. Durness, Sutherl. Statist. Acc. iii. 579.

The Gael. name of the charr is written tar deargan, Ibid. p. 522. tarr dhiargan, or "the fish with the red belly;" Ibid. xiii. 513. Its C.B. name torgoch, as we learn from Pennant, signifies Red Belly. Zool. iii. 260.

"This lake abounds with charr, commonly called red wames." P. Moy, Invern. Statist. Acc. viii.

For the same reason, the redness of its belly, in Sw. it is called roeding, and in Lapland raud. Faun. Suec. No. 124.

REDCAP, s. A name given by the vulgar to a domestic spirit, S.A.

Lord Soulis he sat in Hermitage castle, And beside him old Redcap sly;

"Now, tell me, thou sprite, who art meikle of might,

"The death that I must die."

" Redcap is a popular appellation of that class of spirits which haunt old castles. Every ruined tower in the South of Scotland is supposed to have an inhabitant of this species." Minstrelsy Bord. ii. 360.

REDE, adj. Apparently, fierce, furious, in the following passages.

Wallace commaund till all his men about, Na Sotheron man at thai suld lat brek out; Quhat euir he be reskewis off that kyn Fra the rede fyr, him selff sall pass tharin. Wallace, vii. 428. MS.

- The rede fyr had that fals blud ourgayne. Ibid. ver. 470. MS.

I found this idea on the use of the synon. phrases bryme fyr, and woode fyr.

The bryme fyr brynt rycht braithly apon loft.

Ibid. ver. 439. MS. - Nocht was lewyt mar,

Bot the woode fyr, and beyldis brynt full bar. Ibid. ver. 512. MS.

A.S. reth, rethe, ferox, ferus, saevus; retha regn, a cruel rain, rethe stormas, violent storms. V. RADDOWRE.

REDE, s. The name given to some being, apparently of the fairy kind, S.A.

The editor recollects to have heard the following [rude burlesque verses], which he will not attempt to explain:

The mouse and the louse, and little Rede,

'Were a' to mak a gruel in a lead.'

"The two first associates desire little Rede to go to the door, and ' see what he could se.' He declares that he saw the gay carlin (as the phrase is pronounced) coming,

'With spade, shool, and trowel,

'To lick up the gruel.' "When the party disperse;

'The louse to the claith, and the mouse to the wa',

' Little Rede behind the door, and licked up a'." Gl. Compl. p. 318.

This may possibly be allied to Isl. rad, a demon, or genius, a general name given to the genii supposed to preside over certain places; as skogs-rad, the genius of the wood, bergs-rad,—of the mountain, &c. from rad-a imperare.

Or rede may signify counsel: and the verses may be viewed as an apologue intended to show that a little wisdom or prudence, is preferable both to greater power, and to celerity in flying from apparent danger.

To REDY, v. a. To make ready. In a littar the King thai lay

And redyit thaim, and held thair way, That all thair fayis mycht thaim se.

Barbour, ix. 171. MS.

Edit. 1620. graithed. O.E. id.

To Scotland now he fondes, to redy his viage. R. Brunne, p. 315.

A.S. ge-raed-ian, parare.

REDYMYTE, REDEMYTE, adj. Ornate, decked, beautiful; Lat. redimit-us.

Heuinlie lyllyis, with lokkerand toppis quhyte, Opynnit and schew there creistis redemyte.

Doug. Virgil, 401. 23.

RED LAND, ground that is turned up with the plough; as distinguished from ley, or from white land, S.

"There's mair whistling than red land;" a proverbial phrase, borrowed from its being customary for ploughmen to whistle, while engaged at the plough, for keeping both themselves and their cat-tle in good spirits. It is applied to those who make more noise than progress, in any thing in which they are employed; or, who, in discoursing, have more sound than sense.

RED-SHANK, s. Apparently used as a nickname for a Highlander, because of his bare legs.

I answer, with that Red-shank sullen, Once challenged for stealling beef; I stole then [them] from another thief.

Colvil's Mock Poem, P. ii. 52.

RED-WARE, s. Sea-girdles, S.

"On deep shores, as at the sea-holms of Auskerry, near Stronsa, and of Rouskholm, near Westra, great quantities of red-ware, or sea-girdles, (F. digitatus), are collected with long hooks at low water." Neill's Tour, p. 28. 29.

RED-WARE COD, Asellus varius vel striatus Shouf Idii, the redware codling. Sibb. Fife, p.

123.

"The wrasse—frequents such of our shores as have high rocks and deep water, and is very often found in company with what we call the red-ware cod." Barry's Orkney, p. 389.
RED-WARE FISHICK, the Whistle fish, Orkn.

"The Whistle Fish, (gadus mustela, Lin. Syst.) or, as it is here named, the red-ware fishick, is a species very often found under the stones among the sea-weed." Barry's Orkney, p. 292.

RED WATER, the name given to the murrain in cattle, S.

"The Murrain, or Red Water, is not frequent among Highland cattle, except in some of the Western isles. The animal, when seized with it, loaths its food, becomes extremely feverish, while the urine, which it passes, is thick, clammy, and red." Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 209.

REE, s. 1. Half-drunk, tipsy, S. For many a braw balloon we see,-Until their noddle twin them ree,

> And kiss the causey. R. Galloway's Poems, p. 23.

2. Crazv, delirious, S.

Sibb. gives it as the same with ray, which he derives from A.S. reth ferox. Isl. hreifd-r, elatus, ebrius, temulentus. Perhaps the term is merely Fr. reve, softened into ree, from rev-er, to rave. A keen etymologist might trace it, however, to Heb.

רוה, ravah, inebriatus est. REE, s "A small riddle, larger than the sieve;" Gl. Sibb. Belg. rede, id.

Ree, E. is used as a v., to sift, to riddle. To REED. REDE, v. a. To fear, to apprehend. Rank Kettren were they that did us the ill; They toom'd our braes that swarming store did fill: And mair than that, I reed our herds are ta'en. Ross's Helenore, p. 29. V. RAD.

REED, conj. Lest, S.B.

Vol. II.

It sets them weel into our thrang to spy, They'd better whish't, reed I sud raise a fry. Ross's Helenore, p. 18.

This is most probably the imperat. of the v. Reed,

REEFORT, RYFART, s. A radish, S. Raphanus sativus, Linn. Fr. raifort, horse-radish, literally, —Sybows and ryfarts, and carlings.— Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211. V. CARLINGS. REEFU', adj. This seems to be merely the S.B. pron. of rueful.

The herds came hame and made a reefu' rair, And all the braes rang loud with dool and care. Ross's Helenore, p. 99.

REEGH, s. A harbour, Loth.

To REEK FOORTH, v. a. To rigg out, S. to reek out. V. REIK OUT.

REEK HEN, perhaps a hen fed in the house.

"On one estate in the parish, the barony of Alford, the cottars and subtenants pay for their houses and firing, to the landlord only, a reek hen, and one day's shearing in harvest." P. Alford, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xv. 451.

REEKIM, s. A smart stroke, Fife; perhaps from reik him, q. reach him. V. RAUCHT.

REEL, s. A name given to a particular kind of dance, S.

" A threesom reel, where three dance together." Rudd. vo. Rele.

Either from Su.G. rull-a, Arm. ruill-a, in gyrum agi, because the dancers whirl round; or Isl. ryl-a, miscere, because they mix with each other.

REEL-RALL, adv. Topsy-turvy, in a disorderly state, S.

Perhaps from Isl. ryl-a miscere, riall-a, vagatim ferri; or ragl-a, E. reel, reduplicated with the usual change of the vowel. V. REAVEL-RAVEL.

REEL-TREE, s. The piece of wood to which the top of a stake is fixed in an ox's stall, Fife. Revel-tree, Border. q. rail-tree.

To REESE, v. a. To extol.

He lap bawk-hight, and cry'd, " Had aff;" They rees'd him that had skill.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262. V. Ruse. REESIN, adj. A reesin fire, one that burns well, S. perhaps from Teut. raes-en, to burn.

REESK, s. 1. A kind of coarse grass that grows on downs, Fife.

"The E. side of the parish—consists of cornfields, some of a pretty good soil, others very poor, interspersed with heath, and, near the sea, with large tracts of ground producing a coarse kind of grass, called by the country people reesk." P. Aberdour, Fifes. Statist. Acc. xii. 576.

A.S. risc, a rush; Isl. hrys, virgultum.

2. Waste land which yields only benty grasses, such as Agrostis vulgaris, and Nardus stricta,

3. A marshy place, where bulrushes and sprats grow, Ang. V. REYSS and RISE.

To REEVE, v. n. 1. To talk with great vivacity and constancy, S.

O o

It rather conveys the idea of incoherence in discourse, and may therefore have a common origin with E. rove; Teut. rev-en, delirare, ineptire.

2. In the part, it is applied to the wind. A reevin wind, a high wind, S.

REEVE, s. A pen, or small inclosure for confining cattle, Aberd.

"That he has heard there were fishers' houses for white-fishers upon the top of the Ram's Hillock;—but they were all pulled down before the deponent entered to the fishing, and turned into a reeve or pinfold for James Finlay's bestial." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805. p. 113.

This is radically the same with RAE, and perhaps also with WREAD, q. v.

REEZIE, adj. Tipsy, a dimin. from Ree, S.A.

—— The reezie lads set hame,

Wi' friendly chat.-

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 158. V. Ree. To REFE, v. a. To rob. V. Reif.

REFECKIT, part. pa. Repaired, renewed; become plump.

Als bestiall, thair rycht courss till endur, Weyle helpyt ar be wyrkyn off natur, On fute and weynge ascendand to the hycht, Conserwed weill be the makar of mycht; Fischeis in flud refeckit rialye Till mannys fude, the warld suld occupye.

Wallace, iii. 9. MS.

This is the reading, instead of resectit, Perth Ed.; O.Fr. refaict, repaired, renewed; also, made plump; Lat. refect-us.

In Ed. 1648, restorteth; in a later one, resorteth. Some early Editor had substituted restorit for refectit, as being better understood.

REFEIR. To the refeir, adv. In proportion, S. perhaps from O.Fr. raffiert, convient, Gl. Rom. Rose.

REFF, s. Spoil. V. Reif.

REFUT, s. Shift, expedient, means of deliverance.

Sum feblyt fast that had feill hurtis thar, Wallace tharfor sichit with hart full sar. A hat he hynt, to get wattir is gayn, Othir refut as than he wyst off nayn.

Wallace, ix. 971. MS.

In Ed. 1648, changed to refuge, which, indeed, expresses the idea, as it is from the same stock. But it is refut in MS. Fr. refuite, evasion, avoidance, from refuir, to fly, to shun.

REGENT, s. A professor in an university, S. "At first there were three regents in the arts, Alexander Geddes, a Cistertian monk, Duncan Bunch, and William Arthurlie.—Besides teaching and presiding in disputations omni die legibili, they lived within the college, eat at a common table with the students of arts, visited the rooms of the students before nine at night, when the gates were shut, and at five in the morning; and assisted in all examinations for degrees in arts.—There was no salary for this office for many years; and the fees, paid by the hearers, were very small." University of Glasgow, Statist. Acc. xxi. App. p. 10.

L.B. Regens, Professor, qui docet in Academiis, Gall. Regent, Professeur. Occurrit in Litteris ann. 1330, pro Univers. Oxoniense, apud Rymer. Du Cange.

To REHABLE, REABILL, v. a. To restore, to reinstate; a forensic term.

Thus he who has a sentence of attainder taken off is said to be rehabled. The term is also applied to one born in bastardy, who is legitimated.

"Gif ane bastard, legitimat and rehabled in his life-time, makis ane testament lauchfullie: the King thereby is excluded fra all richt and intromission with his moveable gudes." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bastardus.

"King Robert incontinent maryit Elizabeth Mure lemmen afore rehersit for the affection that he had to hir barnis, that thay mycht be lawchful and reabillit be virtew of the matrimony subsequent." Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 1. Ut legitimos redderet; Boeth.

Fr. rehabilit-er, L.B. rehabilit-arc, in integrum restituere.

REHATOURE, REHATOR, s.

Now lat that ilk rehatoure wend in hy, The blak hellis bigging to vesy, Vnder the drery depe flude Acheron.

Doug. Virgil, 467. 53.

Improbus, Maffei.

Rudd. conjectures that it signifies, "mortal enemy," from Fr. rehair, to hate extremely. Dunbar uses the phrase bawd rehator, Evergreen, ii. 60. and Kennedy, in his reply, ranegald rehator, ibid. p. 68.

Conjecture might supply various sources of derivation; as Ital. rihauúta, revenge, regattare, to contend, to put every thing in disorder, reatura, guilt. But both the determinate sense and etymology are uncertain.

To REHETE, v. a. To revive, to cheer.

With kynde contenance the renk couth thame rehete. Gawan and Gol. iv. 13.

Chaucer, id. Fr. rehait-er.

REID, REDE, s. A calf's reid, the fourth stomach of a calf, used for runnet or earning, S. Fr. caillette.

"Caille signifies curdled; and hence the French have given that as a name to the fourth stomach, because any milk that is taken down by young calves is there curdled." Monro's Compar. Anatomy, iii. 388.

It seems to be the same word that occurs in Sir

Tristrem, p. 31.

REID FISCHE, Fish in a spawning state, S.

"It is—forbiddin be the King, that ony Salmound be slaine fra the Feist of the Assumptioun of our Lady, quhill the Feist of Sanctandrow in winter, nouther with nettis na cruvis, na nane vther wayis vnder the pane put vpone slayaris of Reid fische." Acts Ja. I. 1524. c. 38. Edit. 1566. Read fish, Edit. Skene. Reid fische, Ja. VI. 1581. c. 111. Ed. Murray.

"At the time of spawning, the sides of the fish become of a very red colour, and when the spawning is over, the white colour entirely disappears, the belly becomes livid, and the sides are all streaked over with a sooty or black colour. The salmon in these states are termed in our acts of Parliament, Red and Black Fish: and a chief design of these acts is to prevent the destruction of the fish when they are of these colours, which never happens but in the spawning season." Dr. Walker, Prize Essays, Highl. Soc. S. ii. 364.

REID HAND, a phrase used in our laws, denoting the marks of blood found on a murderer.

"He sould not be lattin frie, albeit he offer pledges for him;—gif he is takin with reid or hait hand of slauchter." Quon. Att. c. 39. s. 2.

Tt is ordained, that the manslayer be punished with death, if taken with reid hand, on the very day on which he is arrested. Acts Ja. I. c. 100. Ed. 1566.

The term seems used improperly, with respect to "ane man taken with reid hand, with ane sheip, or muton, or with ane calfe." Skene Cap. Crimes, c. 13. s. 9. i. c. when he is seized in the act of carrying off any beast that he has stolen.

REIDSETT, adj. Placed in order.

Thus Schir Gawayn, the gay, Gaynour he ledes, In a gleterand gide, that glemed full gay, With riche ribaynes reidsett, ho so right redes, Rayled with rybees of rial aray.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 2. Mr. Pinkerton gives this as not understood. But it is an A.S. phrase. Ge-rad sett-en, in ordine ponere; Teut. ge-reyd, Su.G. rad, ordo. V. Ihre, vo. Rad, p. 373. Saetta i rad, to set in a row.

REID-WOD, RED-WOD, adj. 1. In a violent rage, maddened with anger, S.

Will ran reid-wod for haist,
With wringing and flinging,
For madness lyke to mang.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 67.

Furious, distracted; in a general sense.
 My muse sae bonny ye descrive her;
 Gin ony higher up ye drive her,
 She'll rin red-wood.

Hamilton, Ramsay's Poems, ii. 336.
Sibb. derives it from A.S. reth, Isl. reide, ferox, asper, and wod, q. v. The Isl. word, (reid-ur, Verel. iratus, Su.G. wred, Isl. reide, ira,) is the most natural etymon. For our term seems originally to signify, furious with rage.

REIF, REFE, s. 1. An eruption on the skin, S. A.Bor. reefy, scabby; Gl. Grose.

2. In some places the itch is, by way of eminence, called the reif, S.

A.S. hreof, scabies, scabiosus, leprosus; Alem. ruf, riob, the leprosy; Su.G. rufwa, the scurf of a wound; Belg. roof, a scab or scurf; A.S. hcofod hrieftho, capitis scabies, q. the head-reif. The leprosy is sometimes called hwite-hrieftho, the white reif. This denomination may be radically allied to Su.G. rifw-a, Germ. reib-en, to scratch; Su.G. klada, scabies, being formed from kla, to scratch, and Germ. kratza, scabies, from kratz-en, synon. with reib-en and kla.

As A.S. hreof also signifies callosus, whence E. rough; an ill-natured Scot, in return for the many compliments paid to his country on this subject, might feel disposed to say, that the ancient E. had borrowed the very term which denotes roughness from the prevalence of this cutaneous disease among them.

To REIFE, REYFF, v. a. To rob, to take with violence.

Crystyne thai ar, yone is that heretage, To reyff that croune that is a gret owtrage. Wallace, vi. 291. MS.

"Gif anie man—enters within any mans land without his licence; and—reifes meat fra his men & tenants: he sall for that wrang pay aucht kye to the Lord of the ground." Stat. Dav. II. c. 11. s. 4.

Belg. rcyck-en, Teut. reck-en, A.S. recc-an, Su.G. raeck-a, id. Our v. is also used like E. reach, in a neuter sense. V. RAK, v. 1.

To REIK out, v. a. 1. To prepare for an expedition; to fit out, S.

Reek foorth occurs in this sense.

"Notwithstanding of all his great armie, quhilke was so lang in reeking foorth,—hee findeth the wind more nor partie, as the carcages of men and shippes, in al coastes, dois testifie." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Q. 8. b.

2. To dress, to accoutre.

It is radically the same with E. rig, which Johnson fantastically derives from rig or ridge. The common origin seems to be Sw. rikt-a, MoesG. rikt-an, Germ. richt-en, ordinare, instruere; if not A.S. wrig-an velare, to cover.

To REIK, v. n. To smoke, S.

A.S. rec-an, Sw. riuk-a, roek-a, id. Some have traced this word to Heb. 7, reek, emptiness. V. RAK, s. 2.

REIK, REEK, REK, s. I. Smoke, S. A. Bor. reek.

The fyr owt syne in bless brast,

And the rek raiss rycht wondre fast.

Barbour, iv. 130. MS.

Reek is used by Shakspeare in the same sense. But he seems to have borrowed it from the North. of E.

Metaph., a disturbance, a tumult.
 Thair was few lordis in all thir landis,
 Bot till new regentis maid thair bandis.
 Than rais ane reik or euer I wist,
 The quhilk gart all thair bandis brist.
 Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 271.

A reik in the house, is a phrase still used in the same sense, S.

"It is a soure reek, where the good wife dings the good man;" S. Prov. "A man in my country coming out of his house with tears on his cheeks, was ask'd the occasion; he said, There was a soure reek in the house; but, upon farther inquiry, it was found that his wife had beaten him." Kelly, p. 186.

A.S. rec, Isl. reikr, Dan. reuke, Su.G. roek. Reikie, adj. 1. Smoky, S.

2. Vain, empty; metaph. used.

"All the joys which are heere, are but reekie pleasures, purchased with teares, wherewith the eyes of men are made bleared." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 511.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 66. 44.

Bot with the preis we war relit of that stede.

Ibid. 53. 33.

"Ye never saw green cheese, but your een reel'd;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 84.; addressed to those who are supposed to be of a greedy or covetous disposition, still wishing to have a part of what they see.

Rudd. views reel, roll, and rowl, as all originally the same. I know not if reile has any affinity to Isl. roel-a, lentè et vagè ferri. This seems rather the root of E. reel, to stagger. But this is not materially different from the other terms. For what is reeling but rolling, in a certain sense?

reeling but rolling, in a certain sense? REILING, s. 1. Confusion, bustle.

All the wenchis of the west

REIMIS, REEMISH, s. Rumble, roar.

"She tumbled down upo's me wi' sik a reemis, that she gart my head cry knoit upo' the coach door." Journal from London, p. 3.

As she's behading ilka thing that past, With a loud crack the house fell down at last; The reemish put a knell unto her heart.

Ross's Helenore, p. 64.
This seems merely the S.B. pron. of Rummyss, q. v. Isl. rym-ia, however, signifies to bellow or roar, A.S. hrem-an, hrym-an, id. A. Bor. reem, to cry aloud.

To REIOSE, v. a. To possess, to enjoy.

"Thay wer profoundly resoluit to have aliance with the Pichtis, and to gif thair dochteris in mariage, vndir thir condiciounis, ylk ane of thaym sall reiose in tyme cumyng al thay landis quhilkis thay reiosit afore the mariage." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 4. b.

The wod resoundis schil, and euiry schaw Schoutis agane of there clamour and dyn, The hillis reirdis, quhill dynlis roke and quhyn. Ibid. 252. 18.

2. To break wind, S.

3. It seems also used actively, as signifying, to cause to make a crashing noise.

-The feirs wyndes ye se, Zepherus, Notus, and Eurus all thre Contrarius blaw, thar bustuous bubbis with bir The woddis reirdis, baith elme, aik and fir Ouerturnis to ground.

Doug. Virgil, 53. 1.

This use is improper. For the language of Virg.

is, stridunt silvae.

Rudd. deduces this and the s. from A.S. reord, lingua, "as it seems originally to have denoted the clamour of tongues." It is far more natural to derive it from A.S. rar-ian, Teut. reer-en, fremere, rugire, mugire, vociferare.

REIRD, RERDE, s. 1. Clamour, noise, shouting. Syne the reird followit of the younkeris of

Ibid. 300. 29.

2. The act of breaking wind, in whatever way; from the sound emitted, S.

3. A falsehood, a mere fabrication, especially when it proceeds from a principle of ostentation, S.B.

This may be borrowed from the idea of emitting wind, as a lie sometimes receives the latter designation. Or, it may be an oblique use of A.S. reord, sermo, loquela; reord-ian, sermocinari, q. to amplify in narration.

REIRDIT, part. pa. Reared.

Syne war thai war of ane wane, wrocht with Reirdit on ane riche roche, beside ane riveir. Gawan and Gol. i. 19.

REYSS, s. pl. That kind of coarse grass that grows in marshy ground, or on the sea-shore.

Thai trewit that bog mycht mak thaim litill

Growyn our with reyss, and all the sward was haill.

Wallace, vi. 713. MS.

Edit. 1648. rispe. V. Resp, Reesk, and Rise, 2. To REISSIL, v. n. To make a loud clattering noise, as if one were breaking what is handled, Teut. ryssel-en, A.S. hristl-an, crepere, strepere; Su.G. rasl-a, crepitare. Seren. derives the A.S. v. from Su.G. hrist-a, rist-a, to shake, especially used to denote the sound made by the concussion of arms. This is evidently from the same fountain with MoesG. hris-jan, quatere, concutere. E. rustle is nearly allied; but it does not convey the idea of so loud a noise.

To Reissil, Rissle, v. a. To beat soundly.

"S. He risl'd their rigging with rungs, i. e. cudgell'd or bang'd them soundly," Rudd. Addit. to Gl. vo. Hirsill.

It seems doubtful, however, whether this be not rather a dimin. from Su.G. ris-a, virgis caedere. from ris, a rod or twig.

Reissil, s. A loud clattering noise; also, a blow, a stroke, S. V. REMYLLIS.

To REIST, v. a. To dry by the heat of the sun, or in a chimney, S. Reistit bufe, smoked beef, S.B. A reestit haddock, one that is dried. Reistit and crynd, as hangit man on hill.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57. "The said Stewart receives thir dewties in miell and reistit mutton, wyld foullis reistit, and selchis." Monroe's West. Isles, p. 36.

My best beloved brother of the band! I grein to sie thy sillie smiddy smeik. This is no lyfe that I leid up-a-land

On raw rid herring reistit in the reik. Montgomerie, Chron. S. P. iii. 500.

Dan. rist-er, to broil or toast; ristet, broiled or toasted.

To REIST, v. n. 1. To wait for another; with the prep. on added.

And on Volscens alanerly he reistis, Thocht round about with inemyis he preist is. Doug. Virgil, 292. 12. Moror, Virg. Lat. rest-are, id.

2. To become restive. Thus a horse is said to reist on the road, S. Reasted, tired, A. Bor. Gl. Grose.

In cart or car thou never reestit; The steyest brae thou wad hae fac't it. Burns, iii. 144.

3. Applied to the drying up of a well. And there will be plenty o' broo, Sae lang as our wall is na reested. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 313.

REIST, s. Rest.

To Orodes the hard reist dois oppres The cald and irny slepe of deithis stres.

Doug. Virgil, 346. I7. Quies, Virg. REIST, REYST, s. 1. The iron socket in which the bolt of a door rests.

2. Sibb. renders reistis, door hinges.

3. That on which a warlike instrument is supported.

Ane Inglissman saw thair chiftayne wes slayn, A sper in reyst he kest with all his mayne, On Wallace draiff, fra the horss him to ber. Wallace, v. 260. MS.

As muskets, when first used, were supported by what was called a rest, the custom seems to have been borrowed from what was formerly practised in the use of the lance or spear.

"Long spears and lances were used by the Saxons and Normans, both horse and foot, but particularly by the cavalry of the latter, who in charging rested the butt end of the lance against the arcon or bow of their saddle; the mail-armour not admitting the fixture of lance rests, as was afterwards practised on the cuirass.—A lance rest was a kind of moveable iron bracket, fixed to the right side of the cuirass, for the purpose of supporting the lance." Grose's Military Antiq. ii. 275.

REK, s. Smoke. V. Reik. To RELE, v. n. To roll. V. Reile.

To RELEISCH, v. n. To take a wide course, to go at large.

The larkis loude releischand in the skyis Louis thare lege with tonys curious.

Doug. Virgil, 403. 31.

Fr. relasch-er, to let go, to enlarge. Perhaps it is descriptive of their music, as we say S., to let go, or gac, i. e. to raise a tune.

To RELEVE, v. n. To raise, to exalt, to pro-

Flawndrys in hys dayis wes Relevyd till ane Erldwme

Wyntown, vi. 10. 25.

Fr. relev-er, to raise, to lift up.

To RELEVE, v. n. To reassemble, to form anew into one body.

His men relewit, that douchty was in deid, Him to reskew out off that felloune dreid. Wallace, v. 829. MS.

Relewit and releiffit are used in the same sense. The Scottis men than relewit to giddir fast. Ibid. ver. 972. MS.

In Edit. 1648, the passage runs;

The Scottish men they run together fast.

The fleand folk, that off the feild fyrst past, In to thair king agayne releiffit fast. Ibid. vi. 605. MS.

- Thay that dreuin war abak and chaist Releuis agane to the bargane in haist.

Doug. Virgil, 391. 10.

Fr. relev-er is mentioned in Dict. Trev. as synon. with ramasser, colligere, and with assembler, colligere in cumulum, coacervare.

To RELY, v. a. To rally.

Tharfor comfort yow, and rely

Your men about yow rycht starkly.

Barbour, xiii. 371. MS. He releyt to him mony a knycht.

Ibid. ii. 401. MS.

Skinner renders Fr. rallier, q. re-alligare. But it seems merely re-aller, q. to go again, i. e. to unite after being parted.

To REME, v. n. To foam, to froth. V. REAM. To REMEID, v. a. To remedy.

"All makes for the ruin of this isle; and I see yet no mean to remeid it." Baillie's Lett. i. 51. REMEMBRIE, s. Remembrance, recollection.

Sic fautasie on hir I set The fainer I wald hir foryet, Remembrie grew the mair.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 47.

To REMENT, v. a. To remember, to recollect.

My spreit supirs and sichs maist sair Quhen I rement me euer mair How godles men begins, For till associat them sels, With sic as pietie repels.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 48.

Fr. ramentevoir, id. ramentu, remembered.

REMYLLIS, s. pl. Blows.

Quhen thai had remyllis raucht, Thai foirthocht that thai faucht.

Houlate, iii. 16.

Teut. rammel-en, Su.G. raml-a, tumultuari. This word seems formed from the v., in the same manner as reissil, a blow, from the v. Reissil, which is synon, with rammelen. Reissil primarily signifies noise; and, secondarily, a blow, because of the sound emitted by it.

To REMORD, v. a. 1. To have remorse for; Fr. remord-re. Lat. re and mordere.

In sum part than he remordyt his thocht, The Kingis commaund becauss he kepyt nocht. Wallace, x. 9. MS.

2. To disburden the conscience of any thing that may be the cause of remorse.

Wallace to God his conscience fyrst remord, Syne comfort thaim with manly contenance. Wallace, iv. 590.

Edit. 1648—His confidence couth remord.

RENDAL, RENNAL, RENNET, RUN-DALE, s. A term used with respect to the division of land, equivalent to run-rig, S.

"Another great improvement on the state of this country would be a better division of the small farms, which are parcelled out in discontiguous plots and run-rig, termed here rigg and rendal." P. Dunrossness, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 398.

"A pernicious custom still too much prevails in this and other places, of possessing land in what is called rig and rennal, or run-rig; that is to say, each tenant in a particular farm or district, has a ridge alternately with his neighbours." P. Wick, Caithn. Statist. Acc. x. 26.

"There is an old practice, which still prevails in some places, and which is very detrimental to husbandry. It is commonly termed rig and rennet.-Instead of every one having his land in one place, it is scattered here and there, several tenants having different shares in one field, or a rig a piece alternately." P. Latheron, Caithn. Statist. Acc. xvii.

"The tenants originally possessed their lands in run-ridge or run-dale." P. Dudingston, Loth. Statist. Acc. xviii. 363.

This phrase is undoubtedly of Northern origin. Perhaps from Isl. Su.G. ren, palus limitaneus, a stake used for distinguishing the property of neighbours, and del a division, or deld portio agri; or from renn-a, to run, and del, deld, q. to have the portions of ground running parallel to each other. Thus run-rig would be merely the translation of ren-del, or rendal. Rennet is evidently the corr. of rendeld. A.S. Su.G. raa denotes a land mark, being nearly synon. with ren. In the Laws of Upland, delda raa signifies the limits between the portions belonging to neighbours.

To RENDER, v. a. To melt or beat butter, Ayrs.; " to separate the skinny from the fat parts of suet, &c." Gl. Lancash. V. RIND. To RENG, RING, v. n. To rule, to reign.

Thy maist supreme indivisibil substance,— Rengand eterne, ressauis na accidence.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 308. 32.

Do clois the presoun of wyndis, and thar on Ibid. 17. 28.

MoesG. reikin-on, Lat. regn-are. To RENYE, v. a. To rein.

"Than the master cryit and bald renye are bonet, vire the trossis, nou heise." Compl. S. p. 63. RENYE, s. The rein of a bridle; Fr. resne.

-The samyn four foutit beistis eik Bene oft vsit full towarlye and meik To draw the cart, to thole bridill and renye. Doug. Virgil, 86. 37.

Leg. towartlie, as in Elphynstoun's MS. RENYIT, part. pa. Forsworn, abjured, Barbour. Fr. reni-er, to deny, to abjure.

RENK, RYNK, RINK, s. 1. A course, a race, also reik, Gl. Shirr.

A man is said to get out his rink, when he is sow-. ing his wild oats, or going on in a dissipated course; Fife.

Be this thay wan nere to the renkis end, Irkit sum dele before the mark wele kend.

Doug. Virgil, 138. 33. "Sleepy bodies would be at rest, and a breathless horse at the rink's end."--- "Howbeit the runners never get a view of it, till they come to the rink's end." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 166. P. ii. ep. 2. 2. The act of running.

"He commandit als, gyf the haris had forrun the hundis be lang renk, to be na forthir persewit." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 11.

"Agill of thair bodyis;—swift of rynk, and reddy to euery kynd of jeoparde." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 27, a. Corpore agiles—ad cursum; Boeth. V. THORTOUR.

3. The course of a river.

-The schyl riuer hait Ufens, Sekis with narrow passage and discens, Amyd how valis his renk and isché.

Doug. Virgil, 237, b. 10.

4. The particular station allotted to each party at the commencement of a tournament.

Sone fra thai hade thair salus made, Thai tuk thair rynkis, and samyn rade. And at the tothir cours of were The Dowglas hit, and brak his sper. Wyntown, viii. 35. 40.

5. A distinct charge or encounter in a tournament.

" In the thrid rynk Lord Wellis wes doung out of the sadyll with sic violence, that he fell to the ground with gret displeseir of Inglismen." Bellend. Cron. B. xvi. c. 10.

Thus rynnyng renk is used, Gawan and Gol. V.

Trumpetts and schalims, with a schout, Playd or the rink began;

And equal juges sat about To see quha tint or wan The field that day.

Justing, Adamson & Sym, Evergreen, ii. 177. 6. The course, the proper line in the diversion of curling on the ice, S.A.

Perhaps from A.S. hrineg, a ring; as the mark is generally a cross inclosed in a circle.

Rank occurs in Graeme's Poems, by mistake for rink or renk.

-Say, canst thou paint the blush Impurpled deep, that veils the stripling's cheek, When, wand'ring wide, the stone neglects the

And stops midway?-

Anderson's Poets, xi. 447.

Rudd. derives it from Teut. renck-en, flectere; "for," says he, "the word properly signifies a tour, a compass, or winding, and not going straight on." This idea he seems to found on the sense of the v. Rink, q. v. But it is not at all applicable to the uoun, which is undoubtedly most ancient. This suggests an idea directly the reverse; and has been probably formed, after the example of frequentatives, from A.S. rinn-an, or Su.G. raenn-a, to run. Or, as the term is applied to running in the lists, sense 4., if we could suppose that it had been unknown before the use of tournaments, it might have originated from A.S. hrinc, hrincg, Su.G. ring; as this was the most honourable species of running. Hence Su.G. raenna till rings, rida till rings, hastiludium exercere.

RENK, s. A person; properly, a strong man. The renk raikit in the saill, riale and gent, That wondir wisly wes wroght, with wourschip and wele.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

It is evidently the same with Rink, q. v.

RENOMME', s. Renown.

-For syne King was he; And off full mekill renommé.

Barbour, iv. 774. MS.

Chauc. renomee, Fr. renommée. RENTAL, s. A kind of lease, S.

" A rental is a particular species of tack, now seldom used, granted by the landlord, for a low or favourable tack-duty, to those who are either presumed to be the lineal successors to the ancient possessors of the land, or whom the proprietors design to gratify as such; and the lessees are usually styled rentallers or kindly tenants." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. Tit. 6. § 37. V. Kindly.

REPAIR, s. Company, frequency, concourse, S. Thrie Priests went into collatioun,

To REPARELL, v. a. To repair, to refit; Fr. repareill-er.

His nauy loist reparellit I but fale

And his feris fred from the deith alhale.

Doug. Virgil, 112 51.

To REPATER, v. n. To feed, to take refreshment.

In the mene quhyle,—al the beistis war Repaterit wele eftir thare nychtis lare. Doug. Virgil, 248. 29.

Fr. repaitre, Lat. repasci.

REPENDE, part adj. Apparently, scattered, dispersed; or broken loose from the ranks

Reth horss repende rouschede frekis wndir feit; The Scottis on fute gart mony loiss the suete.

Wallace, iii. 193. MS. Fr. repand-re to scatter or cast abroad; repand-u. dispersed. In Edit. 1648, it is ramping. To REPLEDGE, REPLEGE, v. a. To recal a pe son from the jurisdiction of one court to that of another; a forensic term.

" He [Makduff] sall haue fre regalité to mak officeris within hym, & to replege his men (gif neid beis) fra the kingis lawis to his regalité." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 9. Potestatem quoque habet -ad suos revocandi judices; Boeth.

He, who as superior, repledged one, whom he claimed as his vassal, from another court to his own, left a pledge or surety with that court, that he should do justice to the complainer on the person thus recalled, within year and day. The pledge was called Culreach, q. v. Quon. Attach. c. 8. s. 4.

L.B. repleg-iare, to redeem any person or thing, upon pledge; from re and pleg-ium. V. Du Cange.

E. replevin.

To REPLEID, v. a. To resist.

This officer but dout is callit Deid; Is nane his power agane may repleid: Is nane sa wicht, sa wyse, na of sik wit, Agane his summond suithly that may sit. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 45.

L.B. replaud-are, repulsare, Du Cange; unless the idea rather be that of pleading again, or legally replying.

REPLOCH GRAY. V. RAPPLACK.

To REPONE, v. a. To replace, to restore to a situation formerly held; properly, a forensic term. Lat. repon-o.

"It was required, that the ministers of Edinburgh might be reponed to their places." Baillie's Lett. i. 24.

To REPOSE, v. a. The same with Repone.

" Mr. Andrew Logie, who lately had been reposed to his ministry, being cited to answer many slanderous speeches in pulpit, not compearing,was deposed." Baillie's Lett. i. 383.

To REPREME, v. a. To repress; Lat. reprim-ere. "Thir vordis of Salomon beand veil considerit, is ane souerane remeid ande salutair medycyn to re-preme and distroye the arrogant consait of them that glorifeis & pridis them to be discendit of nobilis and gentil men." Compl. S. p. 242.

REPRISE, s. The indentation of stones in build-

Gilt burneist torris—like to Phebus schone, Skarsment, reprise, corbell and battellingis. Palice of Honour, in. 17.

Fr. reprise de pierres, denting pieces of stone; Cotgr.

RERIT, pret. v. Fell back.

The Sotheron ost bak rerit off that place, At that fyrst tuk, v akyr breid and mar.

Wallace, vii. 1191. MS. Edit. 1648, retired. Fr. arrieré, cast or fallen behind, from arriere backward; or immediately from riere, id. corr. from Lat. retro. Bak rerit is an obvious tautology.

To RESCOURS, v. a. To rescue.

"This man that recoursit the Kyng wes callit Turnbull, and wes rewardit with riche landis be the kyng." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 10.

O.Fr. rescourr-er, L.B. rescuere, to assist.

RESCOURS, s. Rescue, relief in a siege. -Gylmyne the Willeris, that than Held the towre, and wes worthy man, Sawe his wictalis war nere gane, And hope of the rescours had he nane.

Wyntown, viii. 34. 30. V. the v. "The gouernour laid ane sege to the castell of Lochindoris, quhare erle Dauid Cumynis wife was for the tyme. This woman knawing her hous mony dayis afore abyll to be segit, send to Kyng Edward, and desirit rescours." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 9.

To RESETT, v. a. 1. "To receive, harbour, or entertain," S. Rudd.

2. To receive stolen goods.

" Quha resets theift stollen fra anie man; he salbe estemed as ane common theif, and salbe punissed with the like paine." Stat. Alex. ii. c. 21. V. the s.

RESET, RESETT, s. 1. Place of residence, abode. Bot qwhethire thai caws had or nane, Ilk man til his reset is gane.

Wyntown, viii. 26. 260. 2. The act of harbouring one who is considered as a public enemy, or exposed to danger.

Than thai gert tak that woman brycht and scheyne,

Accusyt hir sar of resett in that cass: Fell syiss scho suour, that scho knew nocht Wallass.

Wallace, iv. 715. MS.

3. One who affords harbour to another, when exposed to danger from enemies.

Thar duelt a Wallas welcummyt him full weill; Thocht Ingliss men thar of had litill feille. Bathe meite and drynk at his will he had thar. In Laglyne wode, quhen that he maid repayr, This gentill man was full oft his resett; With stuff of houshald strestely he thaim bett. Wallace, ii. 17. MS.

4. One who keeps an inn.

"It is ordanit that in all burrow townis of the realme, and throughfaris quhair commoun passages ar, thair be ordanit hostillaris and resettis, hauand stablis and chalmers." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 26. Edit. 1566.

5. The act of receiving goods which one knows to be stolen; a common law-term. S.

"The crime of reset of theft consists either in harbouring the person of the thief after the goods are stolen, or in receiving or disposing of the goods." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. s. 63.

6. The receiver of stolen goods; improperly used in the vulgar adage, "The resett is as ill as the thief," S. Rudd.

The forensic term is Resetter, q. v.

Mr. Macpherson derives the word, sense 1., from A.S. seta, inhabitant, sactuag occupation, possession. But it seems merely Fr. recepte, recette, receiving. O.Fr. recept, retraite, demeure; Gl. Rom. de Rose. L.B. recept-us denoted the obligation of a vassal to receive his lord into his castle, if this was necessary either in warfare or for business; receptum, the right of going to a particular place for food; jus pastus, droit de giste; recipere, pastum praebere; Du Cange. Hence Belg. receptes, the feasts which are given to a newly married pair by their relations.

The forensic sense seems merely secondary; as being a restricted application of a term which is otherwise used with greater latitude.

Recetted occurs in O.E. as equivalent to harboured.

-Gyf eny wolde

Come as to defense, that ner wounded were, Other wery, as in a castel recetted were there.

R. Glouc. p. 214.
RESETTER, s. 1. "He who entertains," Rudd. 2. A receiver of stolen goods; a forensic term.

"Such as sell goods belonging either to thieves, or to other lawless persons who dare not themselves appear at a public market, may be justly considered, not only as resetters of the goods, if they were stolen, but as concealers of the thieves or other offenders from justice." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. T. 4. s. 63.

RESH, s. A rush.

Mine harness helped me not a resh; It stinted never but in my flesh.

Sir Egeir, p. 7.

To RESILE, v. n. 1. To draw back, to flinch, S. "It has been said of me, that I have, in word at least, resiled from my wonted zeal for the Presbyterian Government." Wodrow's Hist. i. 208.

2. To resist the force of, to start back from; applied to argumentation.

Doug. Virget, 401. 47. Or than the bustous swyne fed welc, that bredis Amang the buskis rank of risp and redis, Beside the laik of Laurent mony yeris.

Ibid. 344. 42.

Rudd. views both these as the part. pr. Sibb. says, that he " mistakes the meaning entirely;" as he thinks that resp, risp is the s. But, in none of the passages, the pl. is used; which would certainly have been the case, as corresponding to redis. The evidence of the MSS, is rather against this being the v. Ruthven MS., in the first passage, has rispy; Elphynstoun MS. resp and; in passage second, Ruthy, MS. risp and, in Elph. MS, rysp and.

This, at any rate, can only be a secondary use of the v. as signifying to rasp. V. RISP.

RESPONSALL, adj. Responsable, Acts Parl.

To RESSOURSS, Resurse, v. n. To rise again; Resourss, rose again.

Fr. resourd-re; whence resource, rising again; from Lat. resurg-ere. In O.Fr. indeed, resurrexi occurs as an adj. synon. with ressuscité; Dict. Trev. RESSUM, s. A small fragment, There's no a ressum to the fore, S.B.

A.S. reasn, a beam, or Su.G. ris, a twig? The phrase may have been borrowed from a ruined house of which there was not a beam or wattle left standing To REST, v. n. To be indebted to one. What am I restand you? How much do I owe you?

Properly, the prep. to is subjoined.

"Our said soverane Lord-ordainis that the said John, now Erle of Gowrie, sall nawayis be callit, persewit, chargit, or burdenit with the payment of quhatsumever his said umquhill father's dettis, quhairof he took allowance in ony of his compts of thesaurarie, for the space of ane yeir next to cum after the dait hereof, that in the meintyme his Hienes may see the said Erle satisfeit of the saidis superexpenses, restane be his Majestie to his said umquhill father." RESTES, s. pl. Arrears; Fr. id.
"The three Estaites of Parliament decernis and ordainis letters to be direct, to require the Ordinares to give their letters upon all Prelates, to cause payment be maid of all restes, awin be them to the seate of the Sessioun, of all termes by-gane," Acts Mar, 1543. c. 2. Murray.

REST. Auld rest, probably old sprain. The painful Poplesie, and Pest,

The Rot, the Roup, and the auld Rest-Watson's Coll. iii. 14. V. Feyk.

A sprain is often called a wrest, wrist, or rest, S. A.S. wraest-an to distort.

To RESTYN, v. a. To refresh.

Thare is na land mare likand to myne entent, Nor quhare me list so weil, and profitabil Our wery folkis to restyn and estabill.

Doug. Virgil, 128. 13.

Rudd. views this as a s. But it is evidently the v., used in that form which seems to have been borrowed from the A.S. Thus sayne occurs for say, sene for see, &c.

RESTING CHAIR, a long chair shaped like a sofa, used in farm-houses, Ang. Perths.

To RETENT, v. a. To cause to resound.

Their Pagans fell, with clamor huge to hear, Made such a dinne as made the heaven resound, Retented hell, and tore the fixed ground.

Hudson's Judith, p. 33.

Fr. retent-ir, to resound, to ring again.

RETH, adj. Fierce, unruly.

The Ingliss men thocht thar chyftayn was slayne; Bauldly thai baid, as men mekill off mayn, Reth horss repende rouschede frekis wndir feit; The Scottis on fute gert mony loiss the suete. Wallace, iii. 193. MS.

A.S. rethe, fierce, savage. Some early Editor, not understanding the language, has rendered it, as in Edit. 1648, Rich horse ramping rushed frekes under feet. In Edit, Perth, by mistake rech. V. REPENDE.

RETHNAS, s. Ferocity, cruelty.

Thir ar no foulis of ref, nor of rethnas, Bot mansuete, but malice, mandrit and meke. Houlate, i. 19. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton renders this prey. But although this idea is necessarily implied, it is previously expressed in ref. A.S. rethnes, rethnesse, ferocitas,

To RETOUR, RETOWNE, v. a. 1. To make a return in writing; a forensic term, used with respect to the service of ane heir, S.

"It is the maist necessar, common & profitable brieve or inquisition that is vsed be the lieges of this realme, quhairby ane desiris to be served and retoured, as narrest & lauchful air to his father or vther predicessour." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Breve de morte antecessoris.

2. To make a legal return as to the value of lands, S. "Thair lands are so high retoured, that a fortymerk land with us will not pay so much rent as a two-merk land elsewhere." Baillie's Lett. i. 370. 3. To return.

-And swa he Wyth honowre and wyth honeste Retowryd syne in his land hame.

Wyntown, ix. 11. 99.

RETOUR, RETOURE, s. 1. Return, in a general sense.

-Nor yit ane victour with prosperité Vnto thy faderis cieté haue retoure.

Doug. Virgil, 361. 7.

2. The legal return that was made to a brief, emitted from chancery.

"There is twa kindes of retoures or aunswers, maid be the persons of inquest, to this brieue, and retoured to the Chancellarie: the ane is generall, and the vther speciall." Skene, Verb. Sign. ut. sup. 3. The legal return made as to the value of lands, S.

" -The common burdens were laid on, not according to the retour or merk-land, but the valuation of the rents." Baillie's Lett. i. 370.

The word is not only retained in courts of law. but in vulgar language. A retour-chaise, is one returning from the stage to which it has been hired, S.

The term is used in the laws of France, with respect to inheritance, although in a different sense. On apelle, retour de partage, ce qu'on ajouté au lot d'un des coheritiers, pour suppléer ce qui lui appartient de droit. Dict. Trev.

To RETREAT, v. a. To recall, to retract.

"And als thair wes mony of the byschoppis quhilkis wer conuenit in this wickit conuentioun, quha retreatit thair awin deliberatioun, quhilk wes neuir done be the generale consalis dewlie conuenit." Kennedy of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 87.

Fr. retract-er, Lat. retract-are.

REVAY, s. Riot, synon. deray. It war teir for to tel treuly in tail To ony wy in this warld wourthy, I wise, With revaling and revay, all the oulk hale. Gawan and Gol. iv. 27.

Fr. rev-er, to rove, to dote, reve a dream. REVE.

His gloves, his gamesons, glowed as a glede; With graynes of reve that graied ben gay. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 5.

Reve seems to denote that middle colour between yellow and grey, which the Latins called rav-us; Su.G. rapp, id. Graynes of reve, are dye-stuffs of this colour. Graied may signify, made grey.

REUER, RYVIR, s. A robber, a pirate. V. REYFFAR.

REUERE', REURY, s. Robbery.

REVERENCE, s. Power, S.

" - Sin hath put you in the courtesy and reverence of justice." Rutherford's Lett. P. ii. ep. 34. REUERY, s. 1. Noise, uproar.

The women routtis baldly to assay, Wyth felloun brute, grete revery, and deray, Furth haldis samyn on the feildis sone.

Doug. Virgil, 388. 13.

2. It is used to denote the crackling noise made by flames.

Than he that set the kendlyng glaid and gay, Behaldis how that the low dois make deray, Blesand and crakand with ane nyse revery. Ibid. 330. 52.

"From Fr. resverie, idle talking, raving, vain fancy;" Rudd. REVERS

-Syne marrowis mix Do schute at buttis, bankis and brais, Sum at the revers, sum at the prikkis.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 189. MS.

"The rovers at which the archers shott;" Ramsay. But at rovers E. signifies, without any particular aim. The expression seems therefore to mean, at random, as opposed to shooting at a mark; from Fr. au revers, backward, cross.

To REVERSE, REUERSE, v. a.

The Rychmound borne down thar was: On him arestyt the Douglas, And him reversyt, and with a knyff Rycht in that place reft him the lyff.

Barbour, xvi. 417.

And him reversit with a knife. Edit. 1620. It may either signify, overturned, overthrew, Fr. renvers-er; or gave a back stroke to, from Fr. revers, which denotes a stroke of this kind.

To REVERT, REUERT, v. n. 1. To revive, after a state of decay.

The knoppit sionis with leuis aggreabill, For till reuert and burgione ar maid abill, Pulice of Honour, Prol. ix. Ed. 1579.

-And every thing in May reverts.

Evergreen, ii. 186.

2. To recover from a swoon, or from sickness, S.B. O.Fr. revert-ir, retourner, revenir, Dict. Trev.

To REUEST, Rewess, RAWESS, v. a. 1. To clothe.

Tisiphone that furious monstoure wilde, In bludy cape reuestit and ouer sylde, Sittis kepand but slepe bayth nycht and day That sory entré and this porche alway. Doug. Virgil, 183. 40.

2. To clothe anew; metaph.

-The cornis croppis, and the bere new brerde Wyth gladesum garmont revesting the erd.

Ibid. 400. 28.

Fr. revest-ir, id. literally, to clothe again, to resume one's clothes. It seems especially to have denoted the throwing off one's ordinary garments, when one was about to appear in the distinctive badges of office, or of ceremony; thus applied to the putting on of the royal, pontifical, or sacerdotal dress. Our good Bishop, in the first passage, seems to have borrowed his phraseology from the ecclesiastical customs in his own time. A cette procession tout le Clergé étoit revètu de chappes. Dict. Trev.

In this very sense the term, a little disguised, is used by Blind Harry.

In to the kyrk he gert a preyst rewess: With humyll mynd, rycht mekly, hard a mess. Wallace, vi. 870. MS.

Maister Jhon Blar was redy to rawess, In gude entent syne bownyt to the mess.

Ibid. viii. 1194. MS.

REVESTRE', s. A chapel or closet. To the also within our realme sall be Mony secrete closet and revestre, Quharin thy workis and fatail destenyis, Thy secrete sawis and thy prophecyis, I sall gar kepe, and observe reverentlye.

Doug. Virgil, 165. 6. The designation is evidently borrowed from Fr. revestiaire, the place where the ecclesiastical vestments are kept; E. vestry.

REUK, se

REW, s. 1. A row, a line.

Cramessie satine, velvot embroude in divers Palice of Honour, i. 46.

Chaucer uses the word in the same sense; on a rew, in a line.

Hence, "the plane reu of a window, the wooden board or level on which it rests, window sole, in the modern phrase." Gl. Compl.

2. A street; S. raw, as "Potter-raw Edinburgh, Ship-raw Aberdeen;" Rudd.

Fr. rue, L.B. ruga. Rudd. views Germ. reihe, ordo, series, as the radical word; eine reihe hauser, continuata aedium series. And the idea is certainly just. Only, he has selected a term as the root,. which, as it is only a derivative, has less resemblance than its primitive. V. RAW.

Doug. Virgil, 233. 2.

This is the word used for translating crudus pero, Virg. vii. 690. From this passage it appears that the inhabitants of ancient Latium, or at least of the district now called Campania, wore shoes of untanned leather, or what we call rullions. Servius observes, that this is a rustic shoe, which they borrowed from the Greeks, from whom they sprung.

"After the Scots were dislodged from Stanhopepark, A. 1327, or 1228, some of the English went to view their camp, partly to see their customes and manner of living, and what provision they had, partly to seck some spoil. When they were come there, they found only five hundreth carcasses of red and fallou deare, a thousand paire of Highland showes called rullions, made of raw and untand leather, three hundreth hides of beasts set on stakes, which served for caldrons to see the their meat." Hume's Hist. Douglas, p. 45.

The term, because of the meanness of the dress, isused as a reproachful designation for a Scottish man, in Minot's Banocburn.

Rughfute riveling, now kindels this care, Bere-bag, with thi boste, thi biging is bare; Fals wretche and forsworn, whider wiltou fare? Poems, p. 7.

This is very near the S. phrase, rouch rullion, applied to this kind of shoe. Warton renders biging clothing. But it certainly means dwelling-house. Minot, that his satire might be more severe, seems to have made himself acquainted with some S. terms. The designation bere-bag refers to a bag for carrying barlev meal, commonly called bear-meal, which constitutes a considerable part of the food of many of our country-men to this day. The idea seems to be, that the Scots had left both their houses and their girnels empty, in order to supply themselves with meal, while they were on the field. Every man, according to our ancient statutes, when summoned to attend the King, was bound to bring forty days provision with him.

It is certainly the same word, which occurs in a very coarse passage, applied to the Scots during the usurpation of Edw. I., although by Hearne, without any respect to the sense, expl. "turning in and out, wriggling."

Thou scabbed Scotte, thi nek thi hotte, the deuelle it breke,

It salle be hard to here Edward, ageyn the speke. He salle the ken, our lond to bren, & werre bigynne,

Thou getes no thing, bot thi rivelyng, to hang ther inne.

R. Brunne, p. 282.

It seems doubtful, if R. Brunne himself understood the term. For he uses it, as if it signified a rope, or something by which one might be hung.

In Dunbar's time, the use of the rilling seems to have been confined to those who were viewed as-Highlanders. Hence he thus addresses Kennedy.

Ersch Katherene with thy polk, breik and Evergreen, ii. 55.

He applies it as a term of reproach, nearly in the same manner as Minot had done before him. For he calls Kennedy, Ruck-rilling, Ibid. p. 60. This is certainly equivalent to ruch rilling, and perhaps should have been thus printed.

Mr. Macpherson gives no conjecture as to the origin. Rudd. views it as perhaps derived from raw, q. rawlings; Sibb., q. rollings, as "originally they might be only broad thongs or stripes of raw hide rolled about the feet; or as possibly a corr. of Fr. poulaines, i. e. souliers a poulaine, a kind of rude sandals made of horse leather, from poulaine a colt."

Mr. Tooke, having quoted the passage in Douglas, derives rilling from A.S. wrig-an, as being "that with which the feet are covered." Divers.

Purley, ii. 232.

But the term is A.S. rifling, obstrigillus; rifelingas, obstrigilli; Aelfric. Gl. Isidore thus defines obstrigilli; Qui per plantas consuti sunt, et ex supe riore parte corrigia trahitur, ut constringantur; p.

In the passages quoted, the various changes of the term may be traced. Minot writes riveling, which is most nearly allied to the A.S.; and a shoe of this kind is to this day called a rivelin in Orkney. Rewelyng is only a different mode of pronunciation; hence rowlyng, rullion. Rilling is rifling softened by the substitution of l for f.

But whence, may it be said, is the A.S. word? This it is not so easy to determine. But probably it has been formed from MoesG. A.S. rih hirsutus, and fel pellis, q. rough, or hairy, skin or hide. The Gael. name, according to Shaw, is cuaroga.

REWELL, s.

The schipman sayis, "Rycht weill ye may him ken,

Throu graith takynnys, full clerly by his men. His cot armour is seyn in mony steid,

Ay battaill boun, and rewell ay off reid.

Wallace, ix. 106. MS.

Fr. rouelle, "a round plate of armour, for defence of the arme-hole, when the arme is lifted up;" Cotgr. Early editors have stupidly rendered this rayment.

REWELLYT, pret. v.

Gud Wallace than that stoutly couth thaim ster, Befor thaim raid in till his armour cler, Rewellyt speris all in a nowmyr round.

Wallace, x. 279. MS.

This is the word in MS., instead of rewllyt, Perth Ed., and seems to signify, "they discovered, shewed, or revealed, their spears at all points, in a circular form,"

REWERS.

Off Kingis fer I dar mak no rahers, My febill mynd, my trublyt spreit rewers. Wallace, ix. 315. MS.

This either signifies, fears, by an improper use of Fr. rever-er, to reverence; or perhaps, shrinks back, from Fr. revers backward, q. my mind recoils at an attempt so arduous as that of describing the appearance of royalty.

To REWESS, v. a. To attire one's self for the discharge of official duty. V. REUEST.

REWID, pret. v. Deprived of, reaved.

Barbour, v. 12. MS.

i. e. To gain that beautiful covering to their heads, of which cruel winter had bereaved them. The sense is totally lost in Edit. 1620, p. 83.

To win the hewing of their head, That wicked winter hath them made.

V. Reife.

To REWM, v. n. To roar.

The pepill beryt lik wyld bestis in that tyd, Within the wallis rampand on athir sid, Rewmyd in reuth with mony grysly grayne.

Wallace, vii. 459. MS.

This is radically the same with Rame; and evidently the origin of Rummyss, q. v. Rewmyd indeed has been changed to rumisht, Edit. 1648 and 1673. V. RAME. Hence, REWMOUR, s. Tumult, clamour.

Rewmour raiss with cairfull cry and keyne.
The bryme fyr brynt rycht braithly apon loft:
Till slepand men that walkand was not soft.

Wallace, vii. 438. MS. This is evidently quite different from E. rumour; as being the same with Germ. rumor, tumult, and nearly allied to Isl. romur, applause, as denoting the noise made in expressing it.

REWME, s. Realm; Ö.Fr. reaume.

He wes nevyr worth, na all hys kyn,

The fredwme fra that rewme to wyn.

Wyntown, viii. 3. 140.

It is used by Wiclif.

"And if a rewne be departed agens it self: thilke rewne may not stonde." Mark iii.

RHIND MART, a whole carcase from the herd, a mart of cow or ox beef.

"I was long puzzled to find the meaning of a word often made use of in the reddendo of charters in the North country, a Rhind Mart. The word Mart I understand to be something payable at Martinmas; but the meaning of rhind I could not find, until it was explained to me by a person conversant in the German language, from whom I learned that this word was made use of in Germany for horned cattle, such as cows or oxen." Russel's Conveyancing, Pref. viii.

But Germ. rind, which must be the word referred to, has no relation to horns. It simply signifies an ox or cow: rinder, pl. "neat, cattle, great cattle." Hence the distinction, rinder und schafe, great and small cattle, or neat and sheep. Kilian says, that Teut. rind properly means, bos in masculino genere; and rind-vleesch, caro bubula. Wachter derives the term from renn-en, coire, as applicable both to male and female. Thus a rind mart seems properly to signify, a mart from the herd, as opposed to one from the flock, beef as distinguished from mutton, &c. Hence most probably E. runt, although now restricted in its signification; being applied to "an animal below the natural growth of the kind;" Johns.

Isl. rind is used in the same sense as the Germ. word; bos, vitula, G. Andr. This author indeed says that it is of Germ. origin; adding, that it is an ancient name of a woman in the Edda, being that of the daughter of a king of Livonia, the concubine of Odin.

RIACH, adj. Dun, ill-coloured, S.B.

—"I had nae mair claise bat a spraing'd faikie, or a riach plaidie." Journal from London, p. 8. V. RAUCHAN.

RIAL, RIALLE, adj. Royal. V. RYBEES.

It is sometimes used substantively.

To RIB, v. a. To rib land, to give it half plowing, S. Belg. gerib, ridged. Hence, RIBBING, s. A slight plowing.

"The dung is then spread, and the ground gets a kind of ribbing, and directly after that the seed furrow." P. Lesly, Fife, Statist. Acc. viii. 513. RIBBALDAILL, RYBBALDY, s. "Vulgarity;"

For oft feyneyng off rybbaldy Awailyeit him, and that gretly. For Catone sayis ws, in his wryt, That to fenye foly quhile is wyt.

Barbour, i. 336. 341. MS.

From the connexion, it might seem synon, with folly. But I suspect that the sense is still stronger; that it signifies debauchery, profligacy of the lowest kind; corresponding to O.Fr. ribaudie, used by J. de Meun in this sense.

Apres garde que tu ne dies Ces laismes et ces ribaudies.

Rom. de Rose.

Scortatio, latrocinium, scelus, libido, luxuria; Dict. Trev.

RIBBAND. St. Johnston's ribband, a halter, a rope for hanging one as a criminal, S.

Hence of St. Johnston's ribband came the word. In such a frequent use, when with a cord They threaten rogues; though now all in contempt

They speak, yet brave and resolute attempt. Muse's Threnodie, p. 119.

This phrase, according to Adamson, had an honourable origin. The inhabitants of Perth, also called St. John's Town, at the beginning of the reformation, finding that the Queen Regent and the Popish Clergy were determined to keep no faith with them, three hundred, whom he compares to the Spartans under Leonidas, devoted themselves for the preservation of their religion and liberty. He thus describes their engagement.

Such were these men who for religion's sake, A cord of hemp about their necks did take, Solemnly sworn, to yield their lives thereby, Or they the gospel's veritie deny: Quitting their houses, goods and pleasures all, Resolv'd for any hazard might befall, Did passe forth of the town in armes to fight, And die, or they their libertie and light Should lose, and whosoever should presume To turn away, that cord should be his doome.

Thus Schir Gawayn, the gay, Gaynour he ledes, In a gleterand gide, that glemed full gay, With riche ribaynes reidsett, ho so right redes, Rayled with rybees of rial aray.

Houlate, iii. 10. MS.

This seems corr. from ribibe or rebekke, both of which denoted a sort of violin. Fr. rebec, Arm. rebet, id. rebet-er, to play on the violin. Both these words came also to be used, although for what reason is unknown, as contemptuous terms for an old woman. In this sense is ribibe used by Chaucer.

To Rich, v. n. To become rich. "As the carle riches, he wretches;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 24.

RICHT, adj. 1. In health; No richt, not in good health, S. Germ. nicht richt, id.

2. In the exercise of reason, possessing soundness of mind. He's quite richt now; he has come to his senses: No richt, insane, S.

" Duplied,-He was of a weak judgment, and not very right, and so it was needless to ask counsel from him." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 85.

In his right mind, is an E. phrase. Our term seems to be used elliptically.

To RICHT, v. a. To put in order, in whatever respect, to put to rights; often, to mend, S.

The word is used in the same sense in Franc. Tatian, describing the calling of two of the disciples, says, that Jesus saw them rihtente iro nezzi, rectificantes retia sua, S. richting their nets.

RICHT NOW, adv. Just now.

"It is the layndar, Schyr," said ane, "That hyr childill rycht now hes tane." Barbour, xvi. 274. MS.

In A.S. it is inverted; Nu rihte, jam, nunc. RYCHTSWA, adv. In the same manner.

Perhaps from A.S. recc, cura, as we use concern for business; or race, story, narration.

RICKLE, RICKILL, s. A heap; as, a rickle of stanes, a heap of stones; a rickle of banes, a phrase used to denote a very meagre person, S.

Ye sall have ay quhill ye cry ho, Rickillis of gould and jewellis to.

Philotus, S. P. Repr. iii. 15.

"Mr. Abercromby, the surveyor, depones, 'That when the water is filtrating through the dike at low water, there is more water filtrates through the damdike, which is the next thing to a rickle of stones, from one end to the other, than the eyes of the two intakes could contain." Petition, Thomas Gillies of Balmakewan, &c. 1806, p. 10.

This is a diminutive, evidently allied to A.S. ricg, Su.G. roek, ruke, Isl. hrauk, cumulus, hreik-a cumulum exstruere, MoesG. rik-jan, congerere. Perhaps Belg. richgel, a ridge, is from this stock; as E. rick undoubtedly is. Su.G. ben-rangel, which properly denotes a skeleton, is also metaph. used in the same sense with our rickle of banes. But most probably the resemblance is merely accidental.

To RICKLE, v. a. To put into a heap; applied to corn, S.

"There is a method of preserving corn, peculiar to this part of the country, called Rickling, thus performed. After the corn has stood some days in uncovered half stooks, from forty to sixty sheaves are gathered together, and put up into a small stack, —and covered with a large sheaf, as a hood, tied down with two small straw ropes." P. Kirkmichael, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. vi. 104. N. V. the s.

RID, RIDE, adj. Severe, sharp. Thar mycht men se a hard bataill, And sum defend, and sum assaile; And mony a reale romble rid Be rought, than apon athir side > Barbour, xii. 557. MS. Yit sall I mak tham unrufe, foroutin resting, And reve thame thair rentis with routis full ride. Gawan and Gol. ii. 15.

Perhaps from A.S. reth, ferox, saevus. It may however, be allied to Isl. reide, ira; or hrid, Su.G. rid, certamen, impetus; Hin hardasti hrid, certamen acerrimum, Verel.

RIDE, adj. Rough, rude, Gawan and Gol. ii. 15. V. Roid.

To RIDE, v. a. In the diversion of curling, to drive one's stone with such force, as to carry before it that stone, belonging to the opposite party, which is nearest the mark, or blocks up the way. To ride full out, to carry it quite away from the possibility of winning, S. V. WICK, v.

RIDE, s. The act of sailing. A rouch ride, a rough passage by water, S.

This seems to be a metaph. of Goth. extract. For Isl. redskap is equally applied to carriage on horseback and on shipboard. Hominis vectura equo vel cymba, Verel. Ind.; from rid-a equitare, to travel on horseback.

To RIFE, RIFFE, RYFFE, v. n. To rive, to be rent.

RIFF-RAFF, s. The rabble, persons of a worthless character, S.; also used as a low E. word. V. Grose's Class. Dict.

It is, however, a very old term in E., applied to vile persons.

The Sarazins ilk man he slouh alle rif & raf.— He sauh tham rif & raf comand ilka taile. R. Brunne, p. 151. 276.

It also denotes things of the basest kind. Ne costom no seruise of thing that he forgaf, That noither he no hise suld chalange rif no raf. Ibid. p. 111.

Johnson mentions the v. But it is rather a provincial word. Skinner gives it as used in Lincolns.; Dan. raev-er, Su.G. rap-a, Alem. rof-an, eructare; Dan. raeven, eructatio. Sibb. derives it from the Lat. v.

RIG, s., A tumult; also, a frolic, Loth. Isl. rig-a, motare, citare in gyrum. I suspect; however, that rig, in this sense, is rather a cant term of modern formation.

RIG, Rigg, s. 1. The back of an animal. Anone is he to the hie mont adew; His tale, that on his rig before tymes lay, Vnder his wame lattis fall abasitly.

Doug. Virgil, 394. 39. "The back, Scot. called the rigging and rig-back;" Rudd. V. REISSIL.

2. A ridge, S.

It seems to receive the name from its resemblance to the back, in relation to the depression of the sides; as the ridge is elevated above the furrow. Chaucer, rigge, id.

Of the, Serranus, quha wald nathing schaw, Quhare thou thy riggis telis for to saw, As thou was chosin capitane of were?

Doug. Virgil, 196. 9.

3. Rig and Fur, a phrase used to denote ribbed stockings, S.

Watson's Coll. i. 14.

Supposed to have originated from one of the billon coins struck during the reign of Queen Mary, which had the words Reg. Maria, as part of the legend.

RIGWIDDIE, s. The rope, or chain, that crosses the back of a horse, when he is yoked in a cart, by which the shafts are supported, S.

From rig, back, and widdie, a twig, or bundle of withes; as this had been used before the use of ropes. This custom is still preserved in some parts of S. The rigwiddie, in the Highlands, is to this day made of twisted twigs of oak.

That, which fastens the harrow to the yoke is called a trodwiddie, also cutwiddie, (Fife,), more commonly, a master-graith. To this are fastened two swingle-trees; and to these the horses are yoked by the theats or traces, S.

Isl. trod denotes a stake or pole.

RYK, RYKE, adj. 1. Potent, Wyntown; according to Mr. Macpherson. But I have overlooked it. 2. Rich.

The land had rest, the folk ware ryke, And foysowne wes of froyt and fude.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 214. Than Eduuarde self was callit a Roy full ryk. Wallace, i. 120. MS.

MoesG. reiks, princeps, praefectus; A.S. rica, princeps, potens; ryc, Su.G. rik, Belg. ryk, Isl.

MoesG. Alem. rinn-an, Su.G. Isl. rinn-a, Germ. Belg. rinn-en, currere.

2. To become curdled, in consequence of being soured by heat; a term used as to milk, S.

Su.G. raenn-a, renn-a, coagulare; miolken ar runnen; the milk is run, or curdled. Hence E. rennet, coagulum, S. earnin.

To rin in one's head, to make giddy, to intoxicate in some degree, S.

RIN, s. 1. A run, the act of running, S.
Ralph mean time from the door comes with a rin,
And pray'd that Jean and Nory wad gang in,
And try gin they you fiery lass cou'd tame.

Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

2. A rin of watter, a water-fall; also, a stream, S. Germ. rinne, fluvius, Su.G. raenna, canalis.

RINNIN DARN, a disease in cows, in which they are severely affected with a flux, S.B. Darn may signify what is secret.

RIN-WAW, s. A partition, a wall that runs or extends from one side of the house to the other, and divides it, S.

Some might prefer Su.G. ren, a stake, as this sort of wall is often made with stakes interlaced with straw and clay.

To RIND, RYNDE, v. a. To dissolve any fat substance by the heat of the fire; as, to rind butter, to rind tallow, i. e. to melt it, S. also, render.

"That na maner of man—tak vpon hand, to rynde, mylt, nor barrell talloun, vnder the pane of tinsall of all thair gudis." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 105. Edit. 1566. c. 123, Murray.

Watson's Coll: i. 60.

From Su.G. Isl. rind-a, pellere, propellere, because it is beaten during the operation; as we say, to beat butter; or from Isl. raenn-a, rinde, lique-facere, to melt. S. and A. Bor. render is evidently from the same source. "To melt down. To render suet. North." Gl. Grose.

To RYND, v. n. To pertain, to belong.

—— "First to considder, geue the genrale consalis had the spreit of God to do that thing quhilk ryndit to the weill of the rest of the congregatioun, as had the Apostolis?—Swa it is necessare, that thay quhilkis occupyis the place of the Apostlis, have the gyft of the haly gaist (conforme to the promeis of oure Salucour), to do in all sortis that ryndis to thair office." Either, kingdom, Fr. regne; or, as this is otherwise written and pron. S., perhaps rather territory. domain; Teut. reyn, limes, confinium. The latter seems supported by another passage.

Now is the Round Tabil rebutit, richest of rent.

Ibid. iv. 11.

To RING, v. a. To reign, S.

Do closs the presoun of wyndis, and thar on ring. Doug. Virgil, 17. 28.

RING, s. 1. Kingdom.

Thair saw we mony wrangous conquerouris, Withouttin richt reiffaris of otheris ringis.

Lundsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 230.

Honour, quod scho, to this heuenlie ring, Differs richt far fra this warldlie governing.

Palice of Honour, iii. 77.

Although this may be viewed as a corr. of the Fr. or Lat. v., yet we have some very ancient Goth. words of a similar form. MoesG. ragin-on, reikinon, to govern, to preside; ragin-eis, a senator.

2. It also signifies reign, S. It seems doubtful to which of these senses the last extract belongs.

But gif thow will thine hart incline,
And keip his blissit law diuine;—
— As did monie faithfull kingis
Of Israell, during thair ringis:—
Quhais riche rewarde was heuinly bliss,
Quhilk sall be thine, thow do nd this.

Lyndsay's IVarkis, 1592. p. 273.

R. Brunne uses it in this sense, p. 85.

To William the rede kyng is gyuen the coroun. At Westmynstere toke he ryng in the abbay of Londoun.

RING, s. The meal which fills up the crevices in the circle around the millstones, Loth.

To fill these with the first grain that is ground, after the stones are picked, is called ringing the mill.

This is different from the definition of the term in Ang. V. MILL-RING. The term, as thus expl. seems merely to respect the circular form of the stones.

RING, s. Used as synon. with rink, a race, if not an erratum.

"It is enough that these who run a race see the gold only at the starting place; and possibly they see little more of it, or nothing at all, till they win to the ring's end, and get the gold in the loof of their hand." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 24. V. Renk.

RING, s. A circular fort, S.

"There are many Pictish and Scotch encampments in this parish and the neighbourhood. All of them are of a round or oval figure, and are called rings by the common people." P. Lauder, Berw. Statist. Acc. i. 77.

"There are in the parish four encampments, all of a circular figure, called rings by the common people." P. Cuiter, Lanark. Statist. Acc. vi. 78. V. also xiii. 390. 391.

This term seems to be used only in the South and South-West of S.; and may have originated merely from the circular form of these inclosures. Among the Northern nations, however, the same word, primarily signifying a ring for the finger, or any thing circular, has been applied to these places where thing, ting, i. e. their comitia, or public conventions, were held. Hence the phrase, in the Sw. laws, A thing oc a ring, in judicio et circulo; Ihre, in vo.

Among the Germans it was extended to encampments. The Huns gave the name of Ring, or Hringe, to that place in the middle of the camp, of a circular form, in which the king, with his nobles, used to lodge, both for the sake of honour and of security. Lambec. Bibl. Vindob. ap. Ihre. Hence the palace of their princes was denominated Rhingus.

V. Du Cange.

It has, with great probability, been supposed by Verel. and other learned writers, that from ring, as denoting such an assembly, the Ital. have formed reng-are, areng-are, aring-are, verba facere in comitiis, foro, senatu; whence, Fr. harang-uer, the word being merely aspirated. Fr. rang-er, to set in order, and rang, the right of precedence in a public meeting, E. rank, have been traced to the same

To RIDE AT THE RING, a phrase denoting an ancient amusement.

A.S. hring-sete, signifies circus, " a roundle or circle, a place in Rome, where the people sat and saw games; Hring-seta, Circenses, games of wrestling, running, and the like exercises;" Somner. Hring seems here used in reference to the circular form of the buildings. But Alem. ring was transferred to the entertainment; lucta, certamen; ringen, certare, luctare; Dan. ring-er, id. In Su.G. it is used to denote a ring, which, as it was anciently suspended at the tournaments, the knights attempted to carry away with their lances. Hence, rida till rings, hastiludium exercere; Ital. arringo, locus certaminis.

It is singular, that this ancient custom of riding at the ring, which was reckoned an amusement worthy of the most celebrated knights, is now observed only by the Fraternity of Chapmen, on the day of the annual election of their president or Lord.

"To prevent that intemperance to which social meetings in such situations are sometimes prone, they spend the evening in some public competition of dexterity or skill. Of these, riding at the ring, (an amusement of ancient and warlike origin), is the chief. Two perpendicular posts are erected on this occasion, with a cross beam, from which is suspended a small ring: the competitors are on horseback, each having a pointed rod in his hand; and he who, at full gallop, passing betwixt the posts, carries away the ring on his rod, gains the prize." P. Dunkeld, Perths. Statist. Acc. xx. 433.

This seems to have been an amusement used in Icc-land. Hence, hringleikur, lusus genus, Verel.; literally, the ring-sport, or play; Sw. ringleek.

RING DANCIS, "S. a kind of dances of many together in a ring or circle, taking one another by the hands, and quitting them again at certain turns of the tune (or Spring, as Scot. we call it), and sometimes the Piper is put in the center;" Rudd.

Like to the goddes Diane with hir rout,-Ledand ring dancis, quham followis ouer all quhare Ane thousand nymphis flokand here and thare. Doug. Virgil, 28. 42.

"The ring means the dance à la ronde." Sir D. D. Annals, i. 259, N.

The learned judge is certainly right. For Kilian gives Teut. ringh-dans as synon. with ronden-dans, orbis saltatorius. V. Hop.

RING SANGIS, songs or tunes adapted to ring dances.

To the sche led ring sangis in karoling.

Doug. Virgil, 220. 31. Sum sang ring sangis, dancis, ledis and roundis, With vocis schil, quhil all the dale resoundis.

Ibid. Prol. 402. 33.

It certainly should have been printed dancis ledis, without the comma. V. preceding word.

RINGALD, s. Crowd. V. RANGALD.

RINGE, s. A whisk or small besom, made of heath, S. corr. from the E. v. rinse.

RINGE-HEATHER, s. Cross-leaved Heath, S.B. Erica tetralix, Linn.

It seems to receive its name from ringes being made of it.

RINGIT QUOY, a phrase used in Orkney, denoting a circular inclosure. V. Quoy.

RINGLE-EYED, RYNGIT, adj. Having a great proportion of white in the eye, S. "Scot. we yet call such horses as have a great deal of white in their eye Ringle-ey'd;" Rudd.

The term seems properly to denote a ring of white as it were encroaching on the ball of the eye. This idea is conveyed by the language of Doug.

His creist on hicht bare he,

With bawsand face, ryngit the forthir E. Doug. Virgil, 146. 36.

A horse, that has this form of the eye, is generally reckoned apt to startle, as seeing objects from behind.

RINK, RYNK, s. A strong man.

Stevin come steppand in with stendis,

Na rynk mycht him arreist.

Chr. Kirk, st. 6. Often written Renk, q. v. A.S. rinc, strenuus miles; but also used, in a general sense, for vir, homo. Su.G. ring, vir praestans, eximius. Thre inclines to derive it from reke, Isl. reck-ur, a hero, n being often inserted in the Northern languages. Reckar, indeed, in pl. is so defined by Verel., as plainly to shew that it is radically one; Viri proceri et robusti; expl. in Sw. Stora och starka karlar, i. e. S. stour and stark carles. Perhaps the Isl. term ought to be traced to MoesG. rciks, a prince.

RINK, s. A course, &c. V. Renk.

To RINK, v. n. "S. To rink up and down, discurrere, circumire," Rudd. vo. Renk.

To ride and rink, to scamper about the country on horseback, S.B. V. Renk.

RINKER, RINKETER, s. A high, thin, and longlegged horse, as opposed to one of a round squat shape, S. It is generally conjoined with the adj. auld.

The phrase, auld rinker, or rinketer seems equivalent to, old, or worn-out race-horse; from rink, a race. V. Renk.

RINKROUME, s. "Place of tournay." That round rinkroume wes at vtterance: Bot Talbartis hors, with ane mischance,

He outterit, and to rin was laith.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594, B. i. a. V. RENK.

RINO, s. Ready money, a cant term, S.B. -That their kindness may continue, Wishes them fouth o' ready rino.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 244. RINS, s. pl. A local term denoting two large promontories, Galloway.

Ir. rinn, a hill, Lhuyd. Gael. rinn, a point,but used in a general sense, Bullet says, that Alem. rain signifies a mountain, and rein a ridge, a promontory. I do not find the terms either in Schilter or Wachter. But Isl. hraun is rendered, saxosa loca, cautibus continuis obsita; G. Andr. p. 121.

RIOLYSE, s. pl. Princely persons, nobles. Twa rynnyng renkis raith the riolyse has tane; Ilk freik to his feir to frestin his fa.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 21.

Formed perhaps, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, from royal, often written rial, ryal; or it may be immediately from Lat. regalis princely, or regales petty kings. V. Frestin.

RIOT, s. Festivity, indecent mirth.
The gild and riot Tyrrianis doublit for joy, Syne the reird followit of the younkeris of Troy. Doug. Virgil, 37. 11.

Thus, as Rudd, has observed, O.Fr. riot-er signifies, to feast and be merry. Isl. hriot-a, subsultare. To RYOT, v. a. • To destroy, to ravage.

All that he fand he makyt his; And ryotyt gretly the land.

Barbour, ix. 500. MS. Roytyt, Ed. Pink.

-Inglis man he come agayne,

Wyntown, viii. 30. 111. 'sl. riod-a, Su.G. rod-ia desolare, vastare; Teut. r t-en, destruere, vastare. Hence the Belg. phrase, uyten and rooven, to pillage and plunder. V. Roisters.

RYOT, s.

Mr. Macpherson views it as perhaps an err. for rowt, q. crowd, army. Or, it may signify destruction, E. rout, from the v.

RIP, RIPP, REIP, s. A handful of corn not thrashed, S. Gl. Shirr.

A guid New-year I wish thee, Maggie, Hae, there's a ripp to thy auld baggie.

Burns, iii. 140.

It properly denotes that which one holds in his hand, as he cuts it down on the field; reap, Northumb. V. RAPEGYRNE.

RIP, s. A basket made of willows, or of willows and straw, for holding eggs, spoons, &c. Ang.

RIP, s. 1. Any thing base or useless; as a counterfeit piece of money; an old horse, S.

It is used in the latter sense in cant E.

2. A cheat, S.

Rap is synon. q. v. I have not, however, heard ran used to denote a worn-out horse. Belg. rappig signifies scabby, scurvy; Alem. hryp-an, to steal. To RIPE, RYPE, v. a. 1. To search, to examine, S.

And eftyre this mony a day

The grafe, quhare this dede Pypyne lay,

Wyntown, vi. 4. 33.

Quho heirtofore hes hard within the bowells of Edinburgh, yettes and dures under silence of nicht brust up, houses ryped, and that with hostility, seaking a woman, as appeareth, to oppresse hir?" Knox's Hist. p. 303.

In this sense, we speak of riping for stolen goods, S.

2. To probe.

-All the hyrnis of his goist He rupit with the swerd amyd his coist. So tyl his hart stoundis the pryk of death. Doug. Virgil, 339. 38.

3. To investigate; transferred to the act of the mind.

Bot ripe the querel, and discus it plane. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 354. 28.

"Be instruction of gods word examine, discus, serche and rype weil thi conscience." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 153. b.

4. To poke, S.

Then fling on coals, and ripe the ribs, And beek the house baith but and ben. Rumsay's Poems, ii. 205.

i. e. poke the grate.

Rudd. deduces it, although used somewhat obliquely, from A.S. rypt, dissutus, rypp-an, spoliare, whence E. rip; Sibb. from Teut. repp-en, movere, agitare. But the most probable origin is A.S. hrypan, dissuere, the proper root of E. rip. It also signifies fodere, to dig, Somner. This may, indeed, be viewed as the literal sense of the v. as used by Wyntown.

We may mention two Isl. words, which are per-

Hrip denotes a sieve, G. Andr. p. 123. and the v. sift is metaph, used with respect to accurate investigation. Rif-ia is rendered, distinguere, explicare, Verel., a sense which has considerable affinity. RIPPET, RIPPAT, s. 1. Tumult, the noise of great mirth, S.

Doug. Virgil, 269. 47.

2. It also signifies uproat, in a bad sense, S. Allace! this is ane fallone rippat!

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 186. Teut. repp-en, movere, agitare, and Su.G. rap-a, to rush headlong, seem to be cognate terms. But it is perhaps rather to be traced to Teut. ravott-en, tumultuari, luxuriari.

RIPPIE, s. A kind of pock-net fixed to a hoop, used for catching crabs, Mearns.

Perhaps allied to Isl. hrip, cribrum; or hrip-a, raptim ago.

To RIPPLE, v. a. To ripple lint, to separate the seed of flax from the stalks, S. A. Bor.

----Syn powing, and ripling, and steeping, and then

Ross's Helenore, p. 135.

Teut. rep-en, stringere semen lini; repe, instrumentum ferreum, quo lini semen stringitur; Germ. riffel, id. The v. riffel-n varies a little in its signification, being rendered to hatchell or pull flax. Isl. ripell denotes an instrument wherewith any thing is scraped; rupl-a, nudare, spoliare. But Su.G. rep-a, to pluck, seems to direct us to the original idea; repa lin, linum vellere; MoesG. raup-jan ahsa, to pluck the ears of corn, Mark ii. 23. Nearly allied to this, if not deduced from it, is A.S. ripan, metere, to reap, E.

RIPPLIN-CAIMB, s. A flax-comb, or instrument for separating the bolls of flax from the stem, S. V. the v.

Ramsay's Works, i. 143.

From the cause, to which this disease is attributed, perhaps the name is corr. from Fr. ribauld, a fornicator. This seems confirmed by the Teut. phrase, Vuyl rabauld, ita rei venereae intentus ut enervetur; Kilian.

2. Used improperly to denote the King's evil, Bord. V. Gl. Compl. ibid.

From the vulgar song quoted, it seems uncertain whether the term be meant in this, or the common signification.

RISE, s. A bulrush; or perhaps a coarse kind of grass.

Unto ane mudy mares in the dirk nycht, Amang the risis and redis out of sycht, Full law I lurkit, quhil vp salis drew thay. Doug. Virgil, 43. 9.

Rudd. is doubtful, whether the term denotes bulrushes, or shrubs. But it is most natural to understand it of some kind of grass, as conjoined with reeds. It is evidently the same with Reyss, q. v.

A.S. risc, juncus, Isl. reis, MoesG. raus, arundo. RISE, Rys, RICE, Ryss, s. 1. A small twig or branch, S.

Although generally rendered as if pl., it most frequently occurs in the sing., when it should be written rise, rys, or rice; and in pl., ryss, as horss for horses.

Welcum oure rubent rois upoun the ryce.

Bannatyne's Poems, p. 194.

Chr. Kirk, st. 16. i. e. a hazel rod. The kowschot croudis and pykkis on the ryse.

Doug. Virgil, 403. 22.

In these passages it seems used in the sing. Rise signifies branch in some early specimens of E. poetry. V. Warton's Hist. E. P. i. 32.

And therupon he had a gay surplise, As white as is the blosme upon the rise. Chaucer Milleres T. ver. 3324.

Chaucer Milleres T. ver. 3324 "Hot peasecods," one began to cry,

"Strawberry ripe, and cherries in the rise." i. e. on the twig.

Lydgate's London Lyckpenny. Ellis, Spec. E. P. i. 325.

2. In the pl. it denotes brushwood, or small twigs, S.

Doun the thruch ryss ane revir ran with stremis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 9.

This passage, not understood by Lord Hailes, is evidently, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, "through the bushes." The words have, from inadvertency, been transposed. They are printed in Evergreen, xi. 24. Down throwch the ryss, &c.

The term is also used in Orkney. The branches of heath, juniper, &c. are called the ryss of such a plant.

Hence the common S. phrase, stake and rice, pales for enclosing ground, formed by stakes driven into the earth, and thin boughs nailed across; in some places, by twigs wattled or intertwined, which is the ancient mode.

"That na man mak hedgis of dry staikis, rise or stikis, or yit of hewin wod, bot allanerly of lyand wod." Acts Ja. II. 1457. c. 94. Edit. 1566.

"At that time, the houses in Rannoch were huts of, what they called, Stake and Rise." P. Fortingal, Perths. Statist. Acc. ii. 458.

The same phrase is applied to the partition-walls in many cottages. These are called walls of stake and rise; "i. e. of stakes, and small twigs, ropes or such like, twisted about them, and then plaistered over." Rudd. vo. Risis.

Isl. hrys virgultum, Su.G. ris, id. whence ris-a, to beat with rods; Isl. hreys-ar, hrisk-ior, a place beset with twigs or brushwood; sometimes a marsh of this description, palus virgultis consita; Verel. Teut. rysk-en, virgulta, rami; Su.G. ruska, congeries virgultorum. This Seren. (vo. Rush) derives from rusk-a, vento agitare. If this etymon be wellfounded, we may view A.S. hrisc-ian, stridere, rispare, as a cognate term. This, again, may be viewed as an oblique use of the old MoesG. v. hris-jan to shake, because of the rustling noise, caused by the shaking of trees, armour, &c.

To RISK, v. n. To make "a noise like the tearing of roots," Gl. Burns.

Thy auld tail thou wad hae whiskit, An' spread abreed thy weel-fill'd brisket,-Till spritty knowes wad rair't and risket .-Burns, iii. 143.

It seems properly to refer to the noise made by bulrushes, and the like, when hastily passed through. V. the preceding etymon.

Su.G. rasp-a, Germ. rasp-en, Fr. rasp-er, Hisp. rasp-ar, Ital. rasp-are, id. Wachter views these terms as formed, by metathesis, from Isl. reps-a, cum aliorum injuria corradere; and this from Germ. reib-en, to rub.

2. To rub any hard bodies together; as to risp the teeth, S.

It is also used in a neut. sense, as denoting the ungrateful sound emitted.

RITMASTER, s. A captain or master of horse. "At present there was very little difference between the King's secret council, and Dalziel's council of war. Duke Hamilton was only Rit-master Hamilton, as the General used to call him, Rothes was Rit-master Lesly, Linlithgow was Colonel Livingstone, and so of the rest." Wodrow, i. 271.

Germ. refier denotes a tract of country; lust-refier, a pleasant region. It is most probable, however, that the term here used signifies "abundance of prey." V. REYFFAR.

To RIZAR, v. a. To dry in the sun. A rizart haddock, one dried in this manner, S.

Fr. ressorè, parched, or dried, by the sun. RIZAR, s. A drying by means of heat, properly that of the sun, S.

ROBIN-HOOD, a play condemned in our old Acts of Parliament.

The nature of it is partly explained in the following verses.

In May quhen men yeid everichone, With Robene Hoid and Littill-Johne. To bring in bowis and birkin bobbynis; Now all sic game is fastlings gone, But gif it be amangs clovin Robbynis.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 187. MS. Birkin bobbynis means, the seed-pods of birch. Robbynis may either be ruffians, or denote bankrupts, q. cloven or broken. Fr. Robin is used as a term of reproach. Robin a trouvé Marion, a notorious knave hath found a notable quean. Robon, a short-gown, is used in composition in a similar sense: La sequele au robon, mean tradesmen, the refuse, &c. Cotgr.

Arnot has thrown together the principal circumstances relating to this ancient custom.

"The celebration of games by the populace, in honour of their Deities and heroes, is of the greatest antiquity, and formed the principal part of the Pagan religion. The Floralia of Rome seems to have been continued with our forefathers, after the introduction of Christianity, under the title of MayROB ROB games. The custom observed at this day in England, of dancing about May poles, and of carrying through the streets of London pyramids of plate adorned with garlands, undoubtedly originated from the same Pagan institution. As the memory of the original heroes of those games had been long lost, it was extremely natural to substitute a recent favourite, in room of an obsolete heathen deity. Robin Hood, a bold and popular outlaw of the twelfth century, by his personal courage, his dextrous management of the bow, and by displaying a species of humanity and generosity in supplying the necessities of the poor with the spoils he had robbed from the wealthy, became the darling of the populace. His atchievements have been celebrated in innumerable songs and stories. As for the game which has been instituted to his honour, it is not so easy to describe what it was, as how strongly it was the object of popular attachment.

"The game of Robin Hood was celebrated in the month of May. The populace assembled previous to the celebration of this festival, and chose some respectable member of the corporation to officiate in the character of Robin Hood, and another in that of Little John, his squire. Council Register, V. i. p. 30. Upon the day appointed, which was a Sunday or holiday, the people assembled in military array, and went to some adjoining field, where, either as actors or spectators, the whole inhabitants of the respective towns were convened. In this field they probably amused themselves with a representation of Robin Hood's predatory exploits, or of his encounters with the officers of justice. A learned prelate preaching before Edward VI. observes, that he once came to a town upon a holy-day, and gave information on the evening before of his design to preach. But next day when he came to church, he found the door locked. He tarried half an hour ere the key could be found; and, instead of a willing audience, some one told him, 'This is a busy day with us; we cannot hear you. It is Robin Hood's day. The parish are gone abroad to gather for Robin Hood. I pray you let (i. e. hinder) them not. I was fain (says the bishop), to give place to Robin Hood. I thought my rochet should have been regarded, though I were not; but it would not serve; it was fain to give place to Ro-bin Hood's men.' Latimer's Sermons, p. 73. A. D.

" As numerous meetings for disorderly mirth are apt to engender tumult, when the minds of the people came to be agitated with religious controversy, it was found necessary to repress the game of Robin Hood by public statute. Acts Mar. 1555. c. 61. The populace were by no means willing to relinquish their favourite amusement. Year after year the magistrates of Edinburgh were obliged to exert their authority in repressing this game, (Council Register, V. iv. p. 4. 30.); often ineffectually. In the year 1561, the mob were so enraged at being disappointed in making a Robin Hood, that they rose in mutiny, seized on the city-gates, committed robberies upon strangers; and one of the ring-leaders being condemned by the magistrates to be hanged, the mob forced open the jail, set at liberty the criminal and all the prisoners, and broke in pieces the gibbet erected at the cross for executing the malefactor. They next assaulted the magistrates, who were sitting in the council-chamber, and who fled to the tolbooth for shelter, where the mob attacked them, battering the doors, and pouring stones thro' the windows. Application was made to the deacons of the corporations to appease the tumult. Remaining, however, unconcerned spectators, they made this answer: "They will be magistrates alone, let them rule the multitude alone." The magistrates were kept in confinement, till they made proclamation be published, offering indemnity to the rioters upon laying down their arms. Still, however, so late as the year 1592, we find the General Assembly complaining of the profanation of the Sabbath, by making of Robin Hood plays .-Book of Universal Kirk, p. 414." Hist. Edinburgh, pp. 77:-79.

The phrase, gathering for Robin Hood, refers to the custom of a number of people going through the country to collect money for defraying the expences of this exhibition; as, for purchasing dresses in which the actors were to appear. Ritson has given some curious extracts, on this subject, from Lyson's Environs of London.

"1 Hen. 8. Recd for Robyn Hod's gaderyng 4 marks.

&c. &c." Ritson's Robin Hood, i. civ. cv.

It might appear, from one expression used by Arnot, that the prohibition of this game was the effect of the Reformation. But the act of Parliament was made against it so early as the year 1551, several years before the general reception of Protestant principles in Scotland. It might give no offence to the court, that this game was celebrated on Sabbath and on holidays. But men of sober minds must have observed, that, however, innocent at first view, it had in fact an immoral tendency; as it consisted in the honourable commemoration of the manners of a notorious robber. It has been said indeed, that "the character of Robin Hood and the outlaws of these early ages, when a proper allowance has been made for the violence of an occupation to which the impolitic severity of the laws compelled them, was not such as to awaken in us much disapprobation;"—that he "robbed the rich only," &c. V. Godwin's Life of Chaucer, i. 197. 198. The laws, with respect to the royal forests, were indeed exceedingly severe. But the individual had, on this account, no right to live in a state of rebellion. In proportion as the memory of Robin Hood was regarded by the vulgar, they must have been alienated from subjection to their rightful rulers, when a law seemed severe; and armed against the rich, at least in their inclinations.

There seems to have been sufficient reason for the exercise of civil authority in the suppression of this game. It is natural enough to suppose that villains, taking advantage of the gathering for Robin Hood, would at times carry the matter so far as to imitate this celebrated character in the very mode of gathering. This, we find, was actually done. Knox accordingly gives the following more particular account of the conduct of "the rascall multitude," who "wer steired up to mak a Robin Huid."

66 Bot yet they ceassit not to molest, alswell the inhabitants of Edinburgh, as divers cuntreymen, taking from thame money, and threatning sum with farder injureis: Quharewith the Magistrates of the toun hiely offendet, tuk more deligent heid to sic as resortet to the toun, and apprehendet ane of the principall of that misordour, named Kyllone, a cordinar, quhome they put to ane assyis; and being convicted, (for he could not be absolved, for he was the cheif man that spoylled Johne Moubry of ten crowns of the Sone) they thocht to have executed jugement upour him, and erectet a gibbet benethe the croce." On Fasten-een we had a rockin,

To ca' the crack and weave our stockin;

And there was muckle fun an' jokin. Burns, iii. 236. V. Append. p. 7.

"There is another custom here, less noted indeed, but seemingly of equal antiquity, commonly known in the language of the country by the name of rocking, that is, when neighbours visit one another in pairs, or three or more in company, during the moon-light of winter or spring, and spend the evening alternately in one another's houses. It is here marked, because the custom seems to have arisen when spinning on the rock or distaff was in use, which therefore was carried along with the visitant to a neighbour's house. The custom still prevails, though the rock is laid aside; and when one neighbour says to another, in the words of former days, " I am coming over with my rock," he means no more than to tell him that he intends soon to spend an evening with him." P. Muirkirk, Statist. Acc. vii. 612. 613.

"They [roes] feed during winter on grass, and are remarkably fond of the Rubus Saxatilis, called in the Highlands, on that account, the Roebuck Berry." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 107.

A similar name is given in Sw. to another species of the Rubus, the chamaemorus. It is called hiortron, or the hart-bramble; Linn. Flor. Suec. No. 449. ROY, s. King.

Than Eduuarde self was callit a Roy full ryk. Wallace, i. 120. MS.

It was used so late as the seventeenth century. "The Bishop in his owne citie, and among his vassals, will thinke himselfe a pettie Roy; who dare deny to lend, to give, to serve them with whatsoever they have?" Course of Conformitie, p. 47. Fr. roi, Gael. re, id. In Gl. Compl. it is said that the latter seems to be of Fr. origin. But this idea is unnatural. The Fr. term is in fact of Celt. origin. C.B. rhuy, rhi, Corn. ruy, Arm. rue, roue, Ir. righ. Lat. rex is probably from the Celt. stock.

To ROY, v. n. To rave.

Rebald, renounce thy ryming, thou but royis; Thy trechour tung has tane a Heland strynd.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 50. Apparently from the same root with Teut. reven, Fr. rev-er, id. We say rove for rave. C.B. rheydh, mirth.

ROID, ROYD, RIDE, adj. 1. Rude, severe. The King, that stout wes and bauld, Wes fechtand on the furd syd, Giffand and takand rowtis roid.

Barbour, vi. 288. MS. also, xv. 54.

Ride has the same meaning.

Yit sal I mak thame unrufe, foroutin resting, And reve thame thair rentis with routis full ride. Gawan and Gol. ii. 15.

Thus eftere a royd harsk begynnyng Happynnyt a soft and gud endyng.

Wyntown, ix. 1. 27.

2. Used metaph. for large; in reference to the roughness of the means employed.

Throu the gret preyss Wallace to him socht, His awful deid he eschewit as he mocht, Wndyr ane ayk, wyth men about him set. Wallace mycht nocht a graith straik on him get; Yeit schede he thaim, a full royd slope was maid. The Scottis went out, no langar thar abaid.

Wallace, v. 77. MS.

A.S. reothe, rethe, rude, rough. Su.G. rodia indeed signifies to cultivate ground by removing trees, shrubs, &c., and metaph. to remove any obstacle. But notwithstanding the apparent connexion between this and the term as used in Wallace, from the allusion to a gap made in a hedge or wall, there seems to be no real affinity.

ROYET, ROYIT, adj. 1. Wild, irregular, unmanageable.

To rede I begane,

The royetest are ragment with mony ratt rime. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. a, 53.

2. In a moral sense, dissipated, S. like E. wild. Ye royit louns, just do as he'd do; For mony braw green shaw an' meadow, He's left to cheer his dowy widow.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 81. " Royet lads may make sober men;" Ferguson's

S. Prov. p. 28. 3. Romping, that cannot be restrained from sport,

"From the same signification [Fr. deroyer], is the Scots word royet, or royit, signifying, romping." Ramsay's Poems, i. 239. N.

According to Sibb., "q. de-royed, from Fr. desroyer, or des-arroyer perturbare." But by the supposed change, the word would have a signification quite contrary. If not allied to Roy, used as a v. q. v., I would refer to Fr. roide, fierce, ungovernable. Une course roid, the course taken by an unmanageable horse. Lysandre et Caliste, p. 158. ROYETNESS, s. Romping, S.

ROIF, ROVE, RUFF, s. Rest, quietness. Robene, thou reivis me roif and rest,

I luve bot the allone.

Robene and Makyne, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99. This is the reading in MS., instead of roiss, as given by Lord Hailes.

This riche rywer down ran, but resting or rove, Throw a forest on fauld, that ferlye was fair.

Houlate, i. 2. MS. Fortoun him schawit hyr fygowrt doubill face, Feyll syss or than he had beyne set abuff: In presoune now delyuerit now throw Grace, Now at vness, now into rest and ruff.

Wallace, vi. 60.

Roif and rest is undoubtedly a mere pleonasm, common with S. writers. For the terms are synon.; Alem. rauua, O.E. row, id. "Row, or ru, also written ro. Rest, repose, quietness;" Verstegan, p. 255. Su.G. ro, Isl. roi, quies.

ROIK, s. A thick mist, fog, or vapour. V. RAK, RAWK.

ROIK, s. A rock.

To ROIP, v. a. To make an outcry, to expose to sale by auction. V. Roup.

ROIS, s. A rose.

-Rois, register, palme, laurere, and glory. Doug. Virgil, 3.9.

ROISE, s.

The blude of thair bodeis Throw breist plait, and birneis, As roise ragit on rise, Our ran thair riche wedis.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 16. "Stream?" Gl. Pink. If this be the meaning, it must be the same with what we call a rush, as a rush of water, S. from A.S. hreos-an, Su.G. rus-a, to rush. It would then signify; "as a stream rages on the twigs or brushwood."

Su.G. rose signifies a clot of any thing, as blod. rose, clotted blood. Did this lead to the sense, ragit might be allied to Su.G. rage, an heap. But the allusion, I suspect, is merely to a red rose, when it is ragged, so that its leaves are shed or scattered on its parent twig. Rose on rise is a common phrase. V. Rise.

ROISS, Bannatyne Poems, p. 99. V. Roif.

ROIST, s. A roost.

Thou raw-moud rebald, fall down at the roist. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 48.

This metaph. phrase, signifying, "Yield to thy superior," has an obvious reference to a fowl dropping from the roost, from weakness or fear.

ROYSTER, s. 1. A vagabond, a freebooter, a plunderer.

"Somerled—gathered a great band of Roysters together, and arriving at the frith or bay of the river Clyde, there made a descent on the left side of it." Buchanan's Hist. Scot. i. p. 311.

It is used for facinorosos, Lib. vii. c. 43. It occurs also in O.E.

"He spared not his spurres, nor fauoured his horse flesh: rode lyke a Royster, and doubted no daunger." Saker's Narbonus, ii. Fol. 63, a.

Elsewhere the writer uses it rather in the sense of spendthrift.

"The spending of my lyuinge, hath prooued me a lewde loyterer, and the losing of my lands a right Abbey lubber:-now shall my owne rod bee the remedy for such a royster: and my owne staffe my stale for so foolish a harbinger." Ibid. i. Fol. 32, b.

Junius renders roister, grassator, a robber; referring to Isl. hrister, concussor, a term which occurs in the Death-song of Regner Lodbrog, st. 15. He also refers to hraustur, robustus, validus, fortis.

This term, at first view, might seem allied to Su.G. rost-u, to prepare; in a secondary sense, to prepare for war, Isl. rosta, combat, warfare; especially as O.Fr. rusterie, rustrerie, rustrie, signify pillage; rustre, a ruffian.

But, according to Bullet, L.B. Rustarii is the same with Rutarii, Rotarii, the designation given to a set of rascals, who committed great devastation in France, in the eleventh century. They embodied themselves in troops, like the regular militia, and in this way pillaged the different provinces of the kingdom. In O.Fr. they were called Routiers.

The name was afterwards transferred to the stipendiary forces, employed by the kings of England. They were raised abroad, and generally in Germany, Such were those, whom King John brought against Berwick, where they were chargeable with great cruelty.

Anno 1216. 18. Cal. Febr. cepit Johannes Rex Angliae villam & castellum de Berwic, ubi cum Rutariis suis feroci supra modum & inhumana usus est tyrannide.—In reditu autem suo Rutarii sui Ministri Diaboli Abbatiam de Coldeingam expoliaverunt. Chron. Mailros. Rer. Angl. Script. i. 190.

Bullet derives the term from Ir. ruathar, pillage; Du Cange, p. 1544. with greater probability, from L.B. rupturarius, a peasant, formed from rumpere, q. one who breaks up the ground, as these depredators chiefly consisted of peasants. Rutarii he views as originating from the Fr. pronunciation, in Routiers. It confirms this etymon, that Matth. Paris, and other writers of that age, use Ruptarii in this sense.

Both Spelman and he derive rout, as denoting a tumultuous crowd, from L.B. rupta, Ruptariorum cohors.

It seems doubtful, however, whether the insertion of p in this word proves it to be from rumpere; as this insertion was very common with writers in the dark ages, as condempno for condemno, alump-nus for alumnus, &c. Perhaps ruptarii, rutarii, may rather be from the same origin with Ryot, v. q. v. or Teut. ruyter miles, which seems properly to denote a soldier of cavalry. Germ. reuter, ritter, Dan. ryttere, a rider, a trooper; rytterie, cavalry, troopers.

2. The term is also applied to a dog, apparently of the bull-dog species.

Some dogs bark best after they byte; Some snatch the heels and taile about, And so get all their harns dung out. A well-train'd Royster fast will close. His jawes upon a mad bull's nose.

Cleland's Poems, p. 112. To ROYT, v. n. To go from place to place without any proper business, to go about idly, S.B. A beast, that runs through the fields, instead of keeping to its pasture, is said to royt. Su.G. rut-a, discurrere, vagari.

ROYT, s. A reproachful appellation. Thy ragged roundels, raveand Royt, Some short, some lang, some out of lyne, &c. Polwart, Wutson's Coll. iii. 2.

It may perhaps denote an unsettled fellow, as allied to the v.

Twenty thowsand, that rollyd war.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 129. ROLLOCHIN, (gutt.) adj. A rollochin queyn, a lively young woman, who speaks freely and with sincerity, S.

Rallack, to romp, A. Bor., (Grose), is evidently from the same origin. These words are perhaps allied to Isl. rialla, vagatim feror, rugl-a effutire, or Sw. rolig, pleasant, merry, diverting, fond of sport.

To ROLP, v. n. To cry. V. Roip.

ROMANYS, ROMANIS, s. 1. A genuine his-

Lordingis, quha likis for till her, The Romanys now begynnys her.

Barbour, i. 446. MS.

"This word Romanys does not mean what we now term a romance, or fiction; but a narration of facts in romance, or the vulgar tongue. This use of the term is the genuine one, while we abuse it. Decrees of councils, and other remains of the ninth and tenth centuries in France, shew that the Francic, or German, was the court language, while the common people spoke the lingua Romana rustica, or romance. When this last language had prevailed, as that of the greater number always does, and began to be written, it was long called romance. but latterly French. Such was also the case in Spain and Italy.—As tales were first written in romance. the name of the language passed to the subject. Barbour begins, ver. 8, &c. with telling us, that his narration is suthfast, or true: and the reader needs only peruse Dalrymple's Annals, to see the veracity of the most, if not all of it." Note by Mr. Pinkerton, ibid.

2. A work of fiction.

Thir romanis ar bot ridlis, quod I to that ray, Lede, lere me an vthir lessoun, this I ne like. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239, b. 9.

Ital. romanze, Fr. roman, id.

ROMBLE, s. A blow, a stroke. Thar mycht men se a hard bataill. And sum defend, and sum assaile; And mony a reale romble rid Be roucht, thar apon athir sid.

Barbour, xii. 557. MS. "i. e. many a royal rude blow;" from Belg.

rommel-en, to rumble, because of the noise made by the stroke.

ROME-RAKARIS, s. pl. "Those who search the streets of Rome for relics," Lord Hailes; or, perhaps, who pretend to come from Rome with relics, which they sell to the superstitious.

And sanis thame with deid mennis banis, Lyk Rome-rakaris with awsterne granis.

That no man go to Calice, but if he go for euer, And all Rome runners, for robbers of beyond, Beare no siluer ouer sea, that signe of kyng sheweth.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 19, a.

RONDELLIS, s. pl. Small round targets, commonly borne by pikemen; Fr. rondelles.

"Ande ye soldartis & conpangyons of veyr, mak reddy your corsbollis,—lancis, pikkis, halbardis, rondellis, tua handit sourdis and tairgis." Compl. S. p. 64.

RONE, s. "Sheep-skin dressed so as to appear like goat-skin;" Gl. Wynt.

A rone skyne tuk he thare-of syne, And schayre a thwayng all at laysere, And wyth that festnyd wp his gere.

Wyntown, viii. 32. 50.

Mr. Macpherson mentions Gael. ron, seal, seacalf, Sw. rone, boar. Perhaps it signifies roe-skin, from A.S. ran, Belg. reyn, a roe.

RONE, Ron, s. 1. A shrub or bush; pl. ronnys.

The rone wes thik that Wallace slepyt in;
About he yeid, and maid bot litill dyn.
So at the last of him he had a sycht,
How prewalye how that his bed was dycht.
Wallace, v. 357. MS.

The roses reid arrayt the rone and ryss.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 186.

It is evidently the pl. of this s. which is used by Doug., and rendered by Rudd. "brambles, briars." He seems to have given this sense, to support his derivation from Fr. ronce, id. According to this supposition, it must be a pl. s. But in all the passages quoted from Virg., it may be understood in the more general sense given above.

Small birdis flokand throw thick ronnys thrang. Virgil, 201. 19.

The wod was large, and full of bushis ronk,— Of breris full, and thik thorn ronnys stent.

Ibid. 289. 53.

---- Kiddis skippand throw ronnys eftir rais.

Ibid. 402. 22.

Thorn ronnys cannot mean, thorn briars or thorn brambles. It evidently denotes thorn bushes.

The weird sisters wandring, as they were wont then,

Saw ravens rugand at that ratton by a ron ruit.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12.

Rudd. also refers to "Isl. runne, saltus sylvae." But the origin is runn, as used by the ancient Goths and Icelanders, to denote a bush or shrub. Brinner up runn en; If one bush be in a blaze; Leg. Suderm. ap. Ihre. That hefur Moses audsynt vid runnen; Moses shewed at the bush; Luke, xx. 37. Glounde ellde loga af einum runne; A flame of are out of a bush; Exod. iii. 3. Slaande hoffuodet med ronne; Striking his head with bushy twigs. V. Roenn, Ihre.

2. Rone would seem at times to denote brushwood, or a collection of bushes.

The lyon fled, and throu the rone rinnand, Fell in the net, and hankit fute and heid.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 194.

Perhaps the passage from Wallace, quoted above, should be understood in this sense.

RONE, s. A coarse substance adhering to flax, which, in hackling, is scraped off with a knife, Perths.

RONE, s. The mountain-ash, or roan-tree.

My rubic cheiks, wes reid as rone, Ar leyn, and lauchtane as the leid.

Maitland Poems, p. 192.

V. ROUN-TREE.

RONE, s. A run of ice, a sheet of ice; properly what is found on a road, in consequence of the congelation of running water, or of melted snow, S.

Ye ar the lamps that sould schaw them the licht; Lo leid them on this sliddrie rone of yee.

Lyndsay, S. P. Repr. ii. 205.

Isl. hraun is used in a sense nearly allied.

"A stretch of lava, or a hraun, of three miles in length, and two and a half in breadth, remains to this day as a monument of it." Von Troil's Lett. p. 225.

Isl. hroenn, sparsa congeries ex nive, aqua et pulvere, G. Andr. p. 121.

RONE, s. The spout affixed to the side of a house, for carrying down the rain-water from the roof, S.O.

Sw. raenna, a spout; takraenna, a spout for the rain on house eaves, Wideg. from tak, the roof, (whence S. thack), and raenna, a derivative from raenna, to run. Germ. rinne, Mod. Sax. ronne, a canal.

RONGED, part. adj. Gnawed, fretted, worn away; Fr. rongé, id.

"Besydis all this, thair clipped and ronged Sollis, quhilk had na passagis thir thre years bygane in the realme of France, ar comanded to have cours in this realme, to gratifie thareby hir new comed in souldiours." Knox's Hist. p. 164.

"Forget not the first essay of their good service in Parliament, to God, the Kirk, and Commonwealth, in giving their votes and suffrages to seventeen erections of the Prelacies and livings of the Kirk in temporal lordships, to attaine thirteen rounged and dilapidate Bishoprickes." Course of Conformities p. 43 tie, p. 43. RONGIN, pret. Reigned.

"The Pychtis had sum tyme the principall and maist plenteus boundis of al the landis, that ar now vnder the empire of Scottis, eftir that thay had rongin in the samyn i. m. i. c. II yeirs." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 5.

RONK, s. "Moisture;" Pinkerton.

For wes he never yit with schouris schot,

Nor yit our run with ronk, or ony rayne.

King Hart, Maitland Poems, p. 3.

I suspect that the word rather signifies deceit; Teut. rancke, fallacia. If moisture be meant, it is probably an erratum for Roik, q. v.

RONKIS, s. pl. Inserted by Mr. Pinkerton in his list of words not understood, seems to signify, folds or cresses in a cloak or veil.

Quhen freyndis of my husbandis beholds me on

I have my waltir sponge for wa, within my wide ronkis,

Than wring I it full wylelie, and weitis my cheikis. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 60.

A cress is still called a runkle, S. Dan. rincke, Su.G. rynka, a wrinkle, a fold; Isl. rauga, rocka, id. In Edit. 1508, clokis, however, is the term RONNACHS, s. pl. Couch-grass, Aberd. Mearns.; qwicken, Ang.

RONNYS. V. Rone, 2.

ROOD-DAY, s. The third day of May, S.B. V. RUDE-DAY.

Rood day is used by Wyntown for the 14th September, or day of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, in the Popish Calendar.

ROOD GOOSE, Rude Goose, apparently the Brent Goose, the Road goose of Willoughby, Anas Bernicla, Linn., Ross.

"During the winter storms, there are shoals of sea-fowls on the coast here, such as wild ducts [ducks], and a species of goese called rood-geese, which are esteemed good eating." P. Kiltearn, Ross, Statist. Acc. i. 265.

"Rude geese and swans sometimes come there in the winter and spring, especially when the frost is intense." P. Kilmuir W., Ross, Ibid. xii. 274.

The Brent goose, in Orkney, is called Raid or Rade Goose; and, like the fowl here described, comes in winter.

Dan. radgaas, Norw. raatgaas; Teut. rotgans, anser minor, sterilis, Kilian.

ROOF-TREE, s. 1. The beam which forms the angle of a roof, to which the couples are joined,

2. A toast, expressive of a wish for prosperity to one's family; because this beam covers the house, and all that is in it.

"Your roof-tree," or, "Idrink your roof-tree;" i. e. I wish health to all your family, S.B.

ROOK, s. A disturbance, a sort of uproar. To raise a rook, to cause disturbance, Loth.

It seems doubtful whether this be a metaph. use of roik, rouk, a mist, like the synon. vulgar phrase, to raise a reek in the house, S. or allied to Su.G. ryck-a, cum impetu ferri, Germ. ruck-en, movere, ruck, impetus, Su.G. ryck, id. Dan. ryk, impetus. If the latter be the etymon, perhaps rig, a tumult, may be viewed as originally the same word.

ROOK, s. Thick mist, S. V. RAK, s. 3. ROOKY, adj. Misty, S. A. Bor.

There Wallace stay'd, no wise alarm'd or fear'd, Until the twinkling morning star appear'd:

A rocky mist fell down at break of day, Then thought he fit to make the best o's way. Hamilton's Wallace, p. 330.

The author has undoubtedly wrote rooky. ROOM, adj. Roomy, spacious. V. ROWME, adj. ROOM, s. A possession. V. ROWME, s.

ROON, s. A shred, a remnant, Gl. Shirr., S.B. also roond. V. Rund.

To ROOSE, v. a. To extol. V. Ruse.

ROOST, s. 1. This word signifies, not only a hen-roost, as in E., but the inner roof of a cottage, composed of spars of wood reaching from the one wall to the other, S.

2. It is also vulgarly used to denote a garret, S.B. Isl. raust, Edda Saemund. is rendered an ascent; Su.G. roste, the highest part of a building, which sustains the roof.

ROOT-HEWN, adj. Perverse, froward, S.B. Ye'll see the town intill a bonny steer;

For they're a thrawn and root-hewn cabbrach pack. Ross's Holenore, p. 90.

The idea seems borrowed from the difficulty of hacking the roots of trees, or of raising them out of the ground. Sw. rothugg-a, to root up; to cut off by the roots; from rot radix, and hugg-a caedere, S. hagg, E. hack, hew.

To ROOVE, Ruve, Ruiff, v. a. 1. To rivet, to clinch, S.

"That there be ane prick of iron, ane inche in roundnesse, with ane shoulder under and abone, rising upright, out of the center or middest of the bottom of the firlot, and passing throw the middest of the said over-croce barre, ruiffed baith under and abone." Acts Ja. VI. 1587. c. 114. Murray.

2. Metaph., to determine any point beyond the probability of alteration.

In the mean time, they are so peremptor, that they may pass a vote, declaring the King, for no scant of fault, incapable to govern while he lives. If this nail be once rooved, we with our teeth will never get it drawn." Baillie's Lett. ii. 236.

Sibb. derives it from E. groove. But Fr. riv-er is used precisely in the same sense. Both terms seem to be radically allied to Isl. roo, summitas clavi; Verel. Ferramentum clavi cuspidi tenaci aptatum; G. Andr. p. 200. Rauf foramen, rauf-a perforare, might also be viewed as having some affinity. V. NEID-NAIL.

ROPEEN, s. Any hoarse cry.

"The ropeen of the rauynis gart the cras crope."

Compl. S. p. 60. V. Roup, v. ROSEIR, s. "A rose-bush, arbour of roses; Fr. rosier;" Gl. Sibb.

ROSET, ROZET, s. Rosin, E.

Full of roset down bet is the fir tre.

Doug. Virgil, 169. 17.

Burns uses rozet metaph. V. DRODDUM.

ROSIGNELL, s. A nightingale. Syne tuke thame to the flicht, The Osill and the Rosignell, The Phoenix and the Nichtingell.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 28.

Rr2

Fr. rosignol, id. although this writer by mistake views them as different birds.

ROST, s. An impetuous current. V. Roust, s. 2.

ROTCOLL, s. Horse-radish, S.B. Cochlearia armoracia, Linn.

Perhaps from Su.G. rot, root, and koll; fire, q. burning root, because of its pungency; as it is now in Sw., for the same reason, called peppar-rot, i. e. pepper-root.

ROTE, s. A musical instrument.

His rote withouten wene,

He raught by the ring.

Sir Tristrem, p. 106. The rote, and the recordour, the ribus, the rist. Houlate, iii. 10.

V. CITHARIST.

Chaucer uses the term. Notker, who lived in the tenth century, as Tyrwhitt observes from Schilter, says that "it was the ancient Psalterium, but altered in its shape, and with an additional number of strings." According to Notker, the Psaltery was in his time in Teut. called rotta a sono vocis. V. Schilter in vo. This seems to intimate that the name has some relation to the voice; and in Isl. rodd is vox. L.B. roecta, rota, rotta, Du Cange. Wachter contends, that its true name is crotta, or chrotta. It is mentioned by Venantius Fortunatus, who flourished about 580, as a British instrument.

Graecus Achilliaca, Crotta Britanna canit. Lib. vii. carm. 8.

The crota, as used by the ancient Britons, and by the Welch in modern times, is a stringed instrument, C.B. crioth, a sort of harp or lyre; crythor, one who plays on a stringed instrument, E. crowder. Ir. cruith, a lyre, a violin; cruitare, a musician.

It seems extremely doubtful, however, if the opinion of Wachter, that rotta is the same with crotta, be well founded. Ritson derives the term "from rota, a wheel, in modern French vielle, and in vulgar English hurdy-gurdy, which is seen so frequently, both in Paris and London, in the hands of Savoyards." Dissert. on Romance, E. M. R. i. clxv, N. V. Sir Tristrem, Note, p. 305.

ROTHOS, s. A tumult, an uproar; a term used in the higher parts of Ang.; synon. ruthar, q. v.

Its resemblance to Gr. $e^{i\theta_0}$, a tumult, noise of waters, (from $e^{i\omega}$, fluo), must be viewed as merely accidental.

ROTTACKS, s. pl. "Old musty corn. Literally, the grubs in a bee-hive;" Gl. Popular Ball.

Aud now a' their gear and ald rottacks
Had faun to young Hab o' the Heuch.

Jamicson's Popular Ball. i. 293.

ROUBBOURIS, s. pl.

—— Sa the King gart eueric day
Befoir Bell and his altar lay
Fourtie fresche wedderis fat and fyne,
And sex greit roubbouris of wicht wyne.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 64.

This seems to denote casks of certain dimensions. But I have observed no similar term. In later editions, rubors.

ROUCH, adj. 1. Rough, S.

- Persauyt the mornyng bla, wan, and har,— The sulve stiche, hasard, rouch and hare.

Doug. Virgil, 202. 27.

2. Hoarse, S. Germ. Ein rauher hass, hoarseness; literally, a rouch hass, or throat.

This, although apparently only a peculiar use of rauh, hirsutus, greatly resembles Lat. rauc. us. V. ROULK.

3. Plentiful. A gude rouch house, an house where there is abundance of provisions, S.

"He has a hole under his nose, that will never let him be rough;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 145. "Plentiful," N.

The term is used, in conjunction with another, in a proverbial phrase; "They do nae keep a genteel house, but they have ay plenty of rouch and round;" Clydes. Perhaps rouch here denotes the plainness of the food; as round undoubtedly conveys the idea of abundance; corresponding to Su.G. rund, bountiful, liberal, Wideg. largus, liberalis, Ihre. The last-mentioned writer views the term as allied to A.S. rum, whence rumedlice liberaliter, rumgifa liberalis. But round, E. is used in the sense of large, as "a good round sum." V. Johnson. The Fr. say, Tenir table ronde, to keep open table. This, however, may be viewed as borrowed from the romantic histories of King Arthur.

4. As denoting immoral conduct. A profane swearer, a drunkard, &c. is called a rouch, or a rouch-living man, S.

ROUCH-RIDER, s. A horse-breaker, S.

ROUCH, s. The act of rowing. V. ROUTH.

ROUCHT, pret. v. Reached.

Bot he, that had his sword on hycht,

Roucht him sic rout, in randoun rycht,

That he the hede till the harnys claiff.

Barbour, v. 632. MS.

V. RAUCHT.

ROUCHT, pret. v. Cared; from RAK, q. v. Fyfteyne he tuk, and to the toun went thai, Conerit his face, that no man mycht him knaw; Nothing him roucht how few ennymyis him saw.

R. Brunne, p. 337.

ROUDES, adj. Expl. "haggard." She has put it to her roudes lip.

Roudes, s. An old, wrinkled, ill-natured woman, Fife; pron. rudes.

Sae grey a gate! mansworn! and a' the rest!-Ye lied, auld roudes.

Auld roudes !- filthy fellow, I shall auld ye. Ramsay's Works, ii. 147. 149

The termination indicates a Fr. origin; perhaps rudesse, harshness, austerity.

To ROVE, v. n. To be in a delirium, S. "To rove (in a fever); to be light-headed, or delirious;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 93.; rave, E.

Roving, s. Delirium, S.

"We run our souls out of breath, and tire them in coursing and galloping after our own night-dreams, (such are the roving of our miscarrying hearts), to get some created good thing in this life."-Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 89.

To ROVE, v. a. To rove cotton, or wool, to bring it into that ropy form which it receives before being spun into thread. Statist. Acc. vi.

ROVE, s. Rest; the same with Roif, q. v. To ROUK, Rowk, v. n. "To lie close, to crouch;" Gl. Sibb.

Thair was na play bot Cartis and Dice, And ay Schir Flatterie bure the price; Roundand and rowkand ane till ane vther; Tak thow my part (quod he) my brother, And mak betuix vs sicker bandis, Quhen ocht sall vaik amangis our handis, That ilk man stand to help his fallow.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 266.

If we could suppose that it signified "to lie close, to crouch," it would be most natural to view it as allied to Isl. hruk-a coarctatio, junctis genu calcibus sedentis; G. Andr. But rowkand and roundand seem to be perfectly synon.; both signifying whispering. V. Rowkar.

ROUK, s. Mist, S.

ROUKY, adj. Misty, S. A. Bor. V. RAK, RAWK. ROULK, Rolk, adj. Hoarse.

ROUN, s. Roe of fish.

"Thir salmond in the tyme of heruist, cumis vp throw the smal watteris, speciallie quhare the watter is maist schauld and loun, and spawnis with thair wamis plet to vthir. The hie fische spawnis his meltis. And the scho fische hir rounis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 11. V. RAUN.

ROUN, ROUNE, s. 1. Letters, characters.

Tristrem was in toun;

In boure Ysonde was don;

Bi water he sent adoun,

Light linden spon;

He wrot hem al with roun,

Ysonde hem knewe wel sone.

Sir Tristrem, p. 115.

Here we find a very ancient Northern word, used, most probably, in its primary sense; A.S. Isl. run, Su.G. runa, litera, character. This term, because the ignorant were filled with admiration at the use of letters, which were thence a powerful mean of imposition in the hands of the designing, was transferred to magical characters. The idea may, however, be inverted. It may be supposed, that, as those, who have pretended to divine, have generally used some mysterious characters, or hieroglyphics, it was eventually used to signify letters in general.

Various etymons have been given of the word, which may be seen in the learned Ihre's Gloss. He derives it from run-a, to whisper. But perhaps the v. was rather derived from the s., as MoesG. run-a, C.B. rhin, Ir. run, denote a secret, a mystery; and, according to Pezron, Celt. rhyn-ia signifies magical secrets. V. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 462.

Obrien, vo. Run, observes, that "if Olaus Wormius had known that run is the common and only word in the old Celtic or Irish, to express the word secret, or mystery, it would have spared him the trouble of the long dissertation in the beginning of his book, de Literatura Runica, to account for the origin of the word Runae, which was a mysterious or hieroglyphic manner of writing used by the Gothic Pagan Priests, as he himself observes in another place."

Although the term occurs in some of the Celtic dialects in one sense, it is most probable that it is originally Gothic; as it is not only found in almost all the Gothic dialects, but found with a variety of cognates or derivatives. V. Roun, v.

2. A tale, a story, a narrative.

Marke schuld yeld, unhold,- Thre hundred pounde al boun,

Sir Tristrem, p. 52. i. e. "The fourth year, he should deliver three hundred noble children; a marvellous story!" In the following passage, roune may signify either characters, writing, or tale, narrative.

I was at [Erceldoune;

With Thomas spak Y thare;

Ther herd Y rede in roune,

Sir Tristrem, p. 17.

I am under a necessity of differing from my friend Mr. Scott, who renders roun in this place, "to summon privately." The idea is indeed the same. But the meaning of the term itself is to whisper. "He began to mingle with his men, to whisper to them; and desired his trusty knights to obey his summons."

ROUN-TREE, ROAN-TREE, ROWAN-TREE, s. The Mountain-ash. Sorbus sylvestris Alpina, Linn. S.

"The Quicken or Mountain Ash, Anglis. The Roan-Tree, Scotis." Lightfoot's Flora Sc. p. 256.
"I meane—by such kinde of charmes as commonly daft wives vse, for healing of forspoken goods, for preserving them from earli eyes, by knitting roun-trees, or sundriest kind of hearbes, to the haire or tailes of the goodes." K. James's Daemonologie, p. 100.

In my plame is seen the holly green,

With the leaves of the rowan tree; And my casque of sand, by a mermaid's hand,

Was formed beneath the sea.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 392.

The term roun-tree seems to have been formerly used in E. For, although not found in modern dictionaries, it is mentioned by Skinner.

Skinner is uncertain whether it may not receive this name from the colour called roan. But it is a Goth. term. Su.G. ronn, runn, sorbus aucuparia, Dan. ronne, id. ronneber, the berries of the mountain-ash.

Ihre observes, that, among the ancient Goths and Icelanders, runn denoted a shrub or bush, and supposes that, as a shrub springs up in a variety of shoots, which is often the case as to the roan-tree, it retained the name from this circumstance. He mentions another conjecture, which is far more probable, that this tree received its name from runa, incantation, because of the use made of it in magical

The superstitious use of the Mountain-ash gives great probability to this etymen. Even in our own country, there are still some so attached to the absurd usages of former times, that, in order to prevent the fatal effects of an evil eye, to which they ascribe any misfortune that befals their cattle, they cut a piece of this troe, peel it, tie a red thread round it, and put it on the lintel of the byre or cow-house. Then, it is supposed, their cattle are proof against skaith. This charm is especially observed in Angus on the evening preceding Rood-day, (May 3d). They often also tie these branches round their cattle with scarlet threads. On this day, for preventing the power of witchcraft, some old women are careful to have their rocks and spindles made of the wood of the roan-tree.

The first of these customs has considerable analogy to one observed by the ancient Romans, in their Palilia, or Feast celebrated in the end of April, for the preservation of their flocks. The shepherd, in order to purify his sheep, was, in the dusk of the evening, to bedew the ground around them with a wet branch, then to adorn the folds with leaves and green branches, and to cover the doors with garlands. He was also to touch his sheep with smoking sulphur, so as to make them bleat, and to burn the male olive, fir, sabine and laurel. V. Ovid. Fast. Lib. iv.

"It is probable that this tree was in high esteem with the Druids; for it may to this day be observed to grow more frequently than any other tree in the neighbourhood of those Druidical circles of stone so often seen in North Britain; and the superstitious continue to retain a great veneration for it, which was undoubtedly handed down to them from early antiquity.—Their cattle,—as well as themselves, are supposed to be preserved by it from cvil; for the dairy-maid will not forget to drive them to the sheal. ings or summer pastures with a rod of the Roantree, which she carefully lays up over the door of the sheul boothy, or summer-house, and drives them home again with the same. In Strathspey, they make for the same purpose, on the first day of May, a hoop of the wood of this tree, and in the evening and morning cause all the sheep and lambs to pass through it." Lightfoot, p. 257.

3. Used as a v. a. To expose to sale by auction,

Acts Ja. VI. 1593. c. 181. "The commoun good of Burrowes suld be roiped." Tit. ibid.

Teut. roep-en, clamare, clamorem edere, tollere vocem, clamitare, Germ. ruff-en. Rudd., having mentioned these verbs, refers also to Isl. raup, jactantia, raupare, jactator, and hroop, clamor. The two former may perhaps be allied; because of the noise often made by a boaster or braggart. He has not, however, observed that Isl. Su.G. rop-a is synon. with roep-en; Alem. ruaf-an, ruof-en. The oldes form of the v. is in MoesG. hrop-jan, uf-hrop-jan, clamare, exclamare.

Hence Belg. uyt-roep, an outcry, Sw. utrop, Germ. aus-rauf, id. Tent. wt-roep-en, Sw. ut-rop-en, to proclaim.

A.S. hreop-an, clamare. I know not, if we should view as a cognate the v. hrop-an, Luke xviii. 5. to vex, to molest; q. by importunate crying. Hickes mentions E. autroeper as signifying a herald. Rope, as used in Ywaine, cannot be viewed as a proof that the v. was O.E. For it is undoubtedly a S. poem.

Some derive this from Isl. hroop, heroop, vociferatio, because this is frequently the cause of hoarseness. V. Ray. The idea has great probability; as rousty, hoarse, seems formed by analogy, from the v. roust, to cry.

2. Sometimes used to denote that disease otherwise called the croup, S.B. This is perhaps meant in the following passage.

Isl. rocst, raust, aestuaria, vortices maris, Verel. Ind. Rost, vortex, Ol. Lex. Run.; allied perhaps to Su.G. rust-a, tumultuari. But the ingenious editor of the Gl. to Orkneyinga S., having expl. the term, cataracta maris, gurges, observes that such whirlpools take their name from raust, sonus, from the great noise which they make. Therefore, he says, the vortex of Malstroem, near the Feroe islands, is denominated from maal, maele, sermo, sonus. He mentions A.S. rase, stridor, impetus fluvii, as synon, with raust.

To ROUST, v. n.. 1. To cry with a rough voice, S.B.

Doug. Virgil, 438. 7. "Either from rust, as if the throat had contract. ed rust, or from the Lat. raucus, raucitas; or from rowt [id.], and all originally from the sound;" Rudd. "Much the same with Roup and Rout;" Sibb. Lye has come nearer to the mark, in referring to Alem. hluzreister, clamosus. V. Jun. Etyme

The origin is Isl. raust, vox canora; hahreist-a, vociferare, from ha, high, and reist, raust, voice. Ihre views Su.G. rust-a, tumultuari, as a cognate term. Hence,

Roust, s. The act of roaring or bellowing, S.B. Rousty, adj. 1. "Hoarse, having a rough voice," S. Rudd. V. Roup, s.

2. Not polished, not refined; in allusion to the harsh music of one who is hoarse, or has a · rough voice.

Burns, iii. 64. V. Cam-nosed.

This is the primary sense. According to Sibb. this word is formed ex sono. But it is evidently the same with Isl. raut-a, rugire belluarum more, frendere; or as G. Andr. expl. it, to roar as a lion or wild boar.

2. To roar, to make a great noise; used in a general sense.

"Whispering," Gl. Pink. I can perceive no reason for this, but that rownnyng is used a little downwards; and substituted in this place, in Edit. 1620. The sense certainly is; "Men might see them assembling in a tumultuous manner. To rout, is used in this sense, E. from Su.G. rut-a, vagari, discurrere; or Isl. rot-ast, circumagere, conglobare. ROWAN, Rowing, s. Wool as it comes from the cards, a flake of wool, S.

According to Sibb. q. rolling. But it seems rather allied to Rove, v. a. q. v. Hence, perhaps, "To cast a rowan, to bear an illegitimate child," Sibb. This resembles the metaph. use of Lagengird. q. v.

ROWAN, s. Auld rowan, "old jade," Pink.; a term given to a bawd, who, by a great deal of coaxing, endeavours to entice a young woman to marry an old man.

——Cum lick that beird auld rowan. Now sie the trottibus and trowane, Sa busilie as scho is wowane, Sie as the carline craks.

Philotus, S. P. Repr. iii. 15.

Sibb. views it as the same term with that mentioned above. But it is certainly equivalent to witch, or sorceress, as allied to Germ. rune, Su.G. runa; more commonly in a compound state, Al-runa, mulier fatidica, or as some render it, omniscia. Others suppose that the word is properly alte-runa, vetula saga, or as here, auld rowan. Keysler. de Mulier. Fatidicis, p. 469. The same writer informs us, that the ancient Finns had a goddess supposed to preside over storms, whom they called Roune. Now we know that it has been generally believed by the Northern nations, that the witches had great power in this respect. Germ. raune, Su.G. runo, denote magical arts. V. Roun, s. 2., also Roun-tree.

ROWAN, s. A name for the turbot, a fish, Fife. "Formerly there was a very plentiful fishing upon the coast here, consisting of cod, ling, haddock, rowan or turbot, skait, &c.—But within these 4 or 5 years past, the fish have in a manner quite deserted these places (particularly the haddock), and none are now caught but a few cod, rowan, and skait." P. St. Monance, Statist. Acc. ix. 337.

ROWAR, s. A wooden bolt or bar, which may be moved backwards or forwards.

ROWKAR, s. A whisperer, a tale-bearer.

"Also the wisman speikis of thame that ar quhysperaris, rowkaris & rounaris on this manner: Susurro inquinabit animam suum, et in omnibus odietur. A rowkar and rownar sall fyle his awin saule, & sall be hettit of all men. Mairouir he sais: Susurro, et bilinguis maledictus erit multos enim turbauit pacem habentes. A man or woman that is ane rowkar and doubil toungit, is cursit and wariit, for siclik ane persone hes put mekil trubil amang men & wemen, quhilk afore was at peace." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 71, a.

Rouk is expl. "to be close, to crouch." But rowkar is here given as synon. with Lat. susurro. It may be allied to Su.G. Isl. rykte, rychte, Germ. rucht, ge-rucht, fama. These terms are frequently used in a bad sense, and have been traced to Alem. ruog-en, Germ. rug-en, Isl. raeg-a, to accuse, to defame.

To ROWME, ROUME, v. n. To roam, to wander.

——He went divers thingis to se, Rowming about the large tempill schene. Doug. Virgil, 27. 11.

This is from the same origin with E. room, as Skinner has observed with respect to roam; because he who wanders in succession occupies much ground, and still seeks a new place.

Scott of Satchell's Hist. Name of Scot, p. 45. Room is still commonly used for a farm, S.

 Local situation, in relation to the ministry of the gospel.

"Such as have not received ordination, should not be permitted to teach in great rooms, except upon urgent necessity, and in the defect of actuall ministers." Spotswood's Hist. p. 444.

4. Official situation.

—" It was not their pleasure he or his colleague Mr. Rankin should bruik their rooms any longer. So programs were affixed for the provision of two vacant places in their college." Baillie's Lett. i. 85.

5. Room is used for ordinal relation, like place in modern language.

"In the thrid roume, it coms in to be considered, how the signe and the thing signified are coupled." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. 1590. Sign. B. 3, b.

"Thus, in the first room, our religious and reformation-rights, and next our lives and civil liberties, are laid at the King's feet, to be trampled upon." Wodrow's Hist. i. 311.

6. A particular place in a literary work.

A.S. Su.G. rum, Isl. rum-r, Teut. ruym, amplus, spatiosus.

2. Clear, empty; used obliquely.

"A fair fire makes a room flet;" Ferguson's Prov. i. e. it makes those who are in it sit far from the fireside.

"Scot. we say, To make a room house, when one drives them out that are in it, and so makes it empty, and consequently much room in it;" Rudd.

Tent. ruym also signifies, laxus, vacuus; ruymhuys, domus laxa; Kilian. Belg. ruum huus maken, vacuas aedes facere, (Ihre); Zyne handen ruym hebben, to have one's hands free, Sewel.

Rowmly, adv. Largely, liberally.
A tendrare hart mycht na man have;
Til lordis rowmly he landis gave;
His swnnys he mad rych and mychty.

Wyntown, ix. 10. 46.

In this adv. we have a vestige of a metaph. sense, in which the adj. has probably been used. A.S. rum not only signifies largus, amplus, but faustus. In Belg., however, we have a phrase more nearly allied; Een ruyme beurs, a well-stuffed purse; also, a liberal hand. The term is used like Lat. largus, which not only signifies large, spacious, but liberal, open-handed.

A.S. rudu, rubor. According to Lye, it also signifies, vultus. Isl. rode, Su.G. rodna, Germ. rote, redness.

To RUDDY, v. n., To make a loud reiterated noise, S.B.

The wind is said to ruddy, when one means to express the loud irregular noise it makes, especially as striking upon any object that conveys the sound, as on a door or window. In like manner, it is said that there is a terrible ruddying at the door, when a person raps with violence and reiterated strokes, as if he meant to break it open.

Ruddying is nearly allied in sense to thud. There is this difference, however, that ruddying includes the superadded idea of repetition or continuance. Ruddying is the reiteration of thuds in uninterrupted succession. It perhaps also denotes rather a sharper sound than that expressed by thud, which, as rulgarly used at least, suggests the idea of a hollow sound. Ruddy is sometimes used as a s.

This is most probably allied to Isl. hrid, a storm, a tempestuous wind; as thud, q. v. has a similar origin. Isl. hrid and Su.G. rid also denote force in general; hence transferred to the rage of battle;—

V. REDD. RUDE, RWD, s. The cross.

Think how the Lord for the on rude was rent. Think and thou fle fra him, than art thou schent. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 356. 16.

A.S. Su.G. rod, Germ. rode. Junius has observed, that as the Cimbr. or old Isl. word roda signifies an image, it appears that "the word rod, in its primary signification, anciently denoted an image of any kind, until from a special reason it was restricted to the cross of Christ, and also to the representation of this." Mr. Macpherson says, that "such explanation is inconsistent with his own quotations, to which hundreds of others might be added, all expressly bearing that Christ died on the rude;" Gl. Wynt. This argument, however, is not conclusive. For, although used by A.S. writers to denote the cross on which our Saviour himself suffered, this will not prove that the term, as first adopted by that people, properly signified the instrument of suffering. That material crosses were used, and probably with an image of Christ upon them, before the conversion of the A. Saxons, cannot be denied. V. Bingham's Orig. Ecclesiast. B. viii. c. 6. s. 20. This people, when they saw the veneration paid to the cross, might naturally apply to it a term formerly appropriated to the images of their false gods. As little can it be doubted, that they had innumerable words in common with the Goths whom they had left on the continent.

RUDE-DAY, s. The third day of May, S.B. i. e. what in the Kalendar is called, the day of the Invention of the Cross.

Some of the superstitions, connected with the first of May, seem to be transferred to this day, most probably as being so near the other. Some old women are careful, on the eve of this day, to have their rocks and spindles made of the Roun-tree, or Mountain ash, to preserve their work from the power of witchcraft. For the same reason, on the evening preceding this day, many hang up bunches of this tree above the doors of their cow-houses, and tie them round the tails of their cattle with scarlet-threads.

On this day, indeed, great attention to their cows is supposed to be necessary; as both witches and fairies are believed to be at work, particularly, in carrying off the milk. V. MILK THE TETHER.

Many, accordingly, milk a little out of each dug of a cow on the ground. It is believed that this will make the cow luck or prosper during the whole summer; but that the reverse will be the case, if this ceremony be neglected. I need scarcely say, that this is evidently a heathenish libation, either to the old Gothic or German deity Hertha, the Earth, or to the Fairies. A similar superstition is mention. ed, vo. PAN-KALE.

Great virtue is ascribed to May-dew. Some, who have tender children, particularly on Rude-day, spread out a cloth to catch the dew, and wet them in it, S.B.

On this day, as well as on Christmas, New-year, and Handsel-Monday, a superstitious person would not allow a bit of kindled coal to be carried out of his own house to a neighbour's, lest it should be employed for the purposes of witchcraft.

A superstitious regard to this season has also prevailed in Germany. There witches are supposed to have peculiar power in the beginning of May. Among the Bructeri, as well as in Ireland, according to Camden, the woman, who, on the first day of May, first applied for fire, was believed to be a witch; Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 90. 91. He also says, that the Bructeri were wont to assemble during the calends of May, and spend their time in dancing and feasting in the open air and among the woods. This he ascribes to the abuse of those public assemblies which they used to hold at this season, when their prince or leader appeared among them. But it is more probable, that the respect paid to it was previous to these assemblies; that the nation, indeed, fixed on this as the time of assembling, because it was formerly consecrated by superstition. V. Keysler, p. 87. 88.

Although the regard attached to Rude-day must be immediately traced to Popery, there can be no doubt that many of the superstitions, observed at this time, existed previously to this. There is a considerable resemblance between some of these and those observed by the heathen Romans. At this time, they celebrated their Floralia, a feast in honour of Flora. Lactantius, (Inst. Lib. i. c. 20) and Minucius Felix, (Octav. p. 233) assert that she was a common prostitute, who engaged to leave a great legacy to the city of Rome, if a feast should be observed in commemoration of her; and that the Senate, thinking that this would be disgraceful, pretended that the feast was in honour of the goddess who presided over flowers.

As this is a time of great gaiety among young people, who generally go out into the fields in parties for their amusement, it was observed in the same manner among the Romans.

Venerat in morem populi depascere saltus. Ovid. Fast. Lib. 5.

The greatest mirth was indulged. Persons appeared in the most fantastic habits. Even shocking indecencies were tolerated. I do not know that the Romans had any custom exactly similar to the Maypole. But they wore garlands of flowers, and clusters of berries, on their heads.

Tempora sutilibus cinguntur tota coronis, &c. Ovid. ibid.

A great similarity may be observed between the superstitions observed on Rude-day, and those of Beltane in other parts of S. V. Beltane.

RUDE-GOOSE. V. ROOD-GOOSE. To RUFE, v. n. To rest, to live in quietness.

This wid fantastyk lust, but lufe, Dois so yung men to madness mufe, That thay may nouthir rest nor rufe, Till thay mischeif thair sellis.

Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 153. V. Roif.

RUFF, s. Rest. V. Roif.

To RUFF, v. n. 1. To beat a drum in that particular mode which is observed when proclamations are made, S.

This seems originally to have been an oblique use of Germ. ruff-er, to cry; Germ. ausgeruff-en, Sw. utrop-a, to proclaim; Germ. ruf-er, a crier.

This is also written ruffle.

"His Testimony is very short, and he got liberty to deliver it, tho' two drums were ready on each hand to ruffle, as Major White should order them." Wodrow's Hist, ii. 261.

"When James Robertson offered to speak upon the scaffold, he was interrupted by the ruffling of the drums; and when complaining of this, Johnstoun the Town Major beat him with his cane, at the foot of the ladder, in a most barbarous manner." Ibid p. 266.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 23.

RUFFE, s. Apparently, fame, celebrity, q. state of applause.

"Sir James being thus rebuked, what could he do against a king, a monarch, a victorious and triumphant king? to whom all had yielded, with whom all went right well, in his ruffe, in his highest pitch, in his grandeur, compassed about with his guards, with his armies." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 21

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 57.

Mr. Pinkerton derives it from Isl. riufa, to rob. V. Note, p. 393. But it seems rather allied to Teut. ruyffel-en, terere, verrere; q. the tear and wear of one's reputation.

Chaucer uses rogge, as signifying to shake. Rog. gyn or Mevyn, Agito, Prompt. Parv. ap. Tyrwhitt

3. To spoil, to plunder.

Teut. ruck-en, trahere, vellere, avellere, rapere; Su.G. ryck-a, (pron. reuck-a) trahere, raptare; Rycka ut taender, dentes evellere, S. to rug out the teeth. Dan. rag-er til sig, to pluck, to take by force. Ihre thinks that the antiquity of the Su.G. term appears from Lat. runco, used to signify the tearing up of herbs; and that Gr. sev-sv, evellere. (Lat. ruo, eruo,) is the common fountain. Perhaps he might have immediately deduced the v. from Isl. ry-a, eruere, vellere; G. Andr. p. 98.

RUG, s. 1. A rough or hasty pull, S.

2. When one purchases any thing under its common price, it is said that he has got a rug of it,

This is evidently from the idea of one's snatching at any object, or seizing it with some degree of violence. He greedily lays hold of the opportunity of an advantageous bargain.

RUGGAIR, s. A depredator, one who seizes the property of others by force.

At the north end of Raarsay, be half myle of sea frae it, layes ane ile callit Ronay, mair then a myle in lengthe, full of wood and heddir, with ane havin for heiland galeys in the middis of it; and the same havein is guyed [good] for fostering of thieves, ruggairs and reivairs, till a nail, upon the peilling and spulyeing of poure pepill." Monroe's Iles, p. 28.

To RUIFF, v. a. To clinch, to rivet. V. Roove. RULLION, s. 1. A shoe made of rough untanned leather. V. REWELYNYS.

2. It seems to be the same word, that is applied, metaph., to a coarse-made masculine woman, Fife.

RUM, adj. Excellent in its kind, Loth. RUMBLING SYVER. V. SYVER.

RUMBLEGARIE, adj. Disorderly, having a forward and confused manner, S.

Jouk and his rumblegarie wife Drive on a drunken gaming life.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 576.

It is also used, Burns iv. 235. V. ILL-DEEDIE. From rumble to make a noise. (V. Rummil); and perhaps gare eager.

RUMGUMPTION, RUMMILGUMTION, s. Understanding, common sense, S.

They need not try thy jokes to fathom,
They want rumgumption.

Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore, p. 8. But sure it wad be gryte presumption, In ane wha has sae sma' rumgumption.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 321.

Rumgumption is used S.B., rummelgumtion elsewhere.

It may have been formed from A.S. rum, rum-well, spatiosus, and geom-ian, curare, q. a large share of sense. Or as used in the latter form, the first part of the word may be from rummil, to make a noise, the term being generally applied to those who are rough and forward in their manner, and at first view might seem destitute of understanding. It is equivalent to the S. phrase, rouch sense. Although gumption has the same meaning S. and A. Bor., the adj. rumgumtious has quite a different signification; "violent, bold, rash. North." Gl. Grose. V. Gumption.

To RUMMIL, RUMLE, v. n. To make a noise, to roar, E. rnmble.

Ane routand burn amydwart therof rynnis, Rumland and soundand on the craggy quhynnis.

Doug. Virgil, 227. 38.

Teut. rommel-en, Su.G. raml-a, Ital. rombol-are, Gr. 6006-800, strepere. Seren. derives the Su.G. v. from Isl. rymb-er, murmur. Perhaps it should be viewed as a dimin. from Su.G. raam a, boare. V. RAME, v.

To RUMMYSS, Rumes, Rummes, Rowmyss, v. n. To bellow, to roar as a wild beast, S. Lyke as ane bull dois rummesing and rare, Quhen he eschapis hurt one the altare.

Doug. Virgil, 46. 13.
Of his E dolpe the flowand blude and atir
He wosche away all with the salt watir,
Grissilland his teith, and rummissand full hie.

Ibid. 90. 47.

A lion, caught in the toils, is described as Roland about with hydious rowmissing.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 195.

Rudd. views this word as probably derived from the sound. But there seems to be no ground for the supposition. It is undoubtedly a deriv. from some one of the verbs mentioned under Rame. Isl. rym-a, rym-ia, is used in a similar sense. Skogdyren rymia ecke, naer than hafu graesed; The beasts of the field roar not, when they have grass, Job. vi. 5. Wachter mentions Fr. ramas as signifying noise, although I have not observed this word in any other dictionary.

RUMPLE, RUMPILL, s. 1. The rump, or rump-bone. S.

"It is a sign of a hale heart to rift at the rum-ple;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 44.

46 Ye ride sae near the rumple, ye'll let nane lowp on behind you;" Ibid. p. 84.

2. The tail, S.

"Otheris alliegis thay dang hym [St. Austine] with skait rumpillis. Nochtheles this derisioun succedit to thair gret displesoure. For God tuke on thaym sic vengeance, that thay and thair posterite had lang talis mony yeris eftir." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 17.

Perhaps a late learned, but whimsical writer, did not know that he had the authority of one of our own historians on his side.

RUNCHES, s. pl. Wild mustard; a term applied both to Sinapis Arvensis, and Raphanus Raphanistrum, S. skellies, synon. skellachs, Loth.

Some define Runches as a larger and whiter flower than Skellachs, Loth.

On ruites and runches in the field,
With nolt, thou nourish'd was a year;
Whill that thou past baith poor and peild,
Into Argyle some lair to leir.

Polwart, Watson's Goll. iii. 8.

RUND, Roon, s. The border of a web, the salvage of broad cloth, S. Roon, expl. "a shred, a remnant," Shirr. Gl., is the same word.

In thae auld times, they thought the moon, Just like a sark, or pair o' shoon, Wore by degrees, till her last roon.

Gaed past their viewing.

Burns, iii. 254.

A.S. Su.G. Teut. rand, Isl. rond, raund, margo, extremitas. The primary sense of the Su.G. and Isl. words is, linea, which Ihre derives from rad, id. with the insertion of n.

To RUNDGE, v. n. "To range and gather,"
Gl. Evergreen.

Quha keip ay, and heip ay Up to themselves grit store, By rundging and spunging The leil laborious pure.

Vision, Evergreen, i. 219. st. 12.

It seems doubtful if this word be not misapplied.

For it may rather signify to gnaw, to consume, being apparently the same with rounge. V. Ronged.

RUNG, s. 1. Any long piece of wood; but most commonly a coarse heavy staff, S.

With bougars of barnis thay left blew cappis, Quhill thay of bernis maid briggis; The reird rais rudelie with the rappis, Quhen rungs wes laid on riggis.

Chr. Kirk, st. 14. Here the word evidently signifies any rough poles, or pretty gross pieces of wood, as the cross spars of barns, called bougars. Perhaps it has the same meaning in the following passage.

The calves and ky met in the lone, The man ran with ane rung to red.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 217. st. 8.

'' I'll take a rung, and rizle your rigging with it;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 396.

2. Used metaph., in relation to the influence of poverty.

An' as for Poortith, girnin carline!—Aft hae I borne her wickit snarlin,

An' felt her rung.
Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 120.

Skinner observes, that those timbers of a ship, which constitute her floors, are called rungs; perhaps q. rings, (from their being bolted to the keels), ringed poles. But we have the very term in MocsG., in the sense still most common in S. Hrugg, supposed to be pron. hrung, virga. "And commanded them, that they should take nothing for their journey, niba hrugga aina, save a staff only;" Mark, vi. 8. Hence Isl. raung, pl. rungor, Su.G. rong, rang, wraeng, Fr. varangues, the ribs of a ship. Isl. rang is also used to denote the perch or pole on which fowls sit while they sleep; which more nearly approaches to the most ancient sense, and to that retained by us. Honan sitter ei sa hogt a rang, Chron. Rhythm. ap. Ihre; i. e. S. "The hen sits na sa heich on the rung." Junius strangely views E. rodde, Belg. roede, as synonymes of MoesG. hrugg, mentioning no other; Goth. Gl. In the Gl. to Landnamabok, Isl. rong, costa navis, is derived from rang-r, Dan. vrang, obliquus. But as we find the same term in MoesG., this derivation. seems inadmissible.

To RUNK, v. a. To deprive one of what he was formerly in possession of, whether by fair or foul means; as, in play, to take all one's money, S.B.

Most probably it has originally been used in a bad sense, from Isl. reinki, crafty, rank-or, fraud; Pers. renc, guile.

RUNK, adj. Wrinkled, Aberd.

"Bat the thing that anger'd me warst awa was, to be sae sair gnidg'd by a chanler-chafted auld runk carlen." Journal from London, p. 4.

This resembles the more simple form of the word, retained in Su.G. rynka, Dan. rincke, a wrinkle.

To RUNKLE, v. a. 1. In part. pa. runkled, runckled, wrinkled, S.

At har'st at the shearing use younkers are jearing.

The bansters are runkled, lyart, and grey.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 3.

Auld Bessie, in her red coat braw, Came wi' her ain oe Nanny,

An odd-like wife, they said, that saw, A moupin runckled granny. Ramsay's Poems, i. 272.

2. To crease, to crumple, S.
A.S. wrincl-ian, Belg. wrinckel-en, Germ. runt-zel-en, Su.G. rynck-a, rugare.

RUNKLE, RUNKILL, s. 1. A wrinkle, S. Alecto hir thrawin vissage did away,—
And hir in schape transformyt of ane trat,
Hir forret skorit with runkillis and mony rat.

Doug. Virgil, 221. 35.

2. A rumple, a crease, S.

"Christ hais luffit the kirk,—to mak it to him self ane glorious congregatioun, haiffand na spot nor runkil, nor ony siclyke thing, bot that it suld be haly & without repreif." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 17, a. b.

This is proverbially applied, in allusion to what are otherwise called the nicks in a cow's horn. "We may ken your eild by the runkles of your horn;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 75.; "spoken to old maids when they pretend to be young;" Kelly, p. 359.

RUNRIG, a term used in two senses; both as an adj. and a s.

1. Applied to land belonging to different owners, S:

"A separate act passed in the same session of parliament 1695, c. 23., for dividing lands belonging to different proprietors, which lie runrig, with the exception of acres belonging to boroughs or incorporations. Lands are said to lie runrig, where the alternate ridges of a field belong to different proprietors." Erskine's Instit. B. III. T. iii. s. 59.

2. Run-rig is also expl., "a common field, in which the different farmers had different ridges allotted to them in different years, according to the nature of their crops." P. Ayton, Berw. Statist. Acc. i. 80, N.

This mode of possession; or of farming, has been accounted for in the following manner.

"This neighbourhood, on both sides of Tweed, was formerly the warlike part of the country, and exposed to the inroads of the English; the lands, therefore, all lay run-rig, that when the enemies came, all the neighbourhood, being equally concerned, might run to oppose them." P. Smallholm, Roxb. Statist. Acc. iii. 217.

The same reason is elsewhere assigned for this mode of farming, Ibid. i. 80. 81. v. 322, N.

The same absurd plan of farming exists in the Hebrides. V. Pennant's Tour, 1772. p. 201. Various estates in S. are still possessed in this manner. In Orkney, this mode remains both among tenants and landholders.

"Many of the lands that belong to the same proprietor, as well as those that are the property of different proprietors, are blended together in what is called runnig." Barry's Orkney, p. 352.

Notwithstanding the plausibleness of the reason assigned for this custom, as securing common exertion during a state of warfare, it would seem that we ought to trace it to an earlier period. It is most probably a remnant of the ancient Gothic or German manners. We learn from Tacitus (De Moribus Germ.) that, " among the Germans, the cultivated lands were not considered as the property of individuals, but of the whole tribe, which they cultivated, and sowed, and reaped, in common." V. Barry, p. 103.

Caesar gives materially the same account of the manners of the Germans. "Negue quisquam agri modum certum, aut fines habet proprios; sed magistratus, ac principes in annos singulos gentibus, cognationibusque hominum, qui una coierunt, quantum, et quo loco visum est, agri adtribuunt, atque anno post alio transire cogunt." De Bell. Gall. Lib. vi. c. 22.

The prevalence of run-rig, in Orkney and Shetland, even among different landholders, affords a strong presumption that it was introduced from Germany or Scandinavia, and gradually found its way, in Scotland, from North to South.

The name seems evidently derived from the circumstance of these lands or ridges running parallel to each other.

RUNT, s. 1. The trunk of a tree. - Muskane treis sproutit, Combust, barrant, unblomit, and unleifit, Auld rottin runtis quharin na sap was leifit. Palice of Honour, i. 3.

2. The hardened stem or stalk of a plant, as of colewort or cabbage. A kail-runt, the stem of colewort, S.

"The stems, or, to give them their ordinary appellation, the runts, are placed somewhere above the head of the door; and the Christian names of the people whom chance brings into the house, are, according to the priority of placing the runts, the names in question." Burns, iii. 126. N. V. Bow-KAIL.

3. An old woman, q. a withered hag, S.

Sibb. derives it, without any probability, from root. It is perhaps radically the same with Germ. rinde, bark; also, crust. For what is a runt, S. but the stalk hardened into a sort of bark?

RUNT, s. 1. An old cow, S.B. a cow that has given over breeding, Caithn.

This is evidently quite different from the sense of the word, as used in England, where it signifies an ox or cow of a small size. It is probably from the same origin, however; Belg. rund, a bullock, Germ. rinde, an ox or cow. V. RHIND MART.

2. A contemptuous designation given to an old woman, S.

RURYK, adj. Rural, rustic, vulgar. Wallace a lord he may be clepyt weyll, Thocht ruryk folk tharoff haff litill feill, Na deyme na lord, bot landis be thair part. Wallace, vii. 398. MS.

S. Prov. Rudd. i. e. commends it more or less. For here the term is meant to bear an ambiguous "Ruse the fair day at night;" S. Prov. "Commend not a thing, or project, till it has its full effect;" Kelly, p. 282.

Ill rused is sometimes used, as in the S. Prov.; "If it be ill, it is as ill rused;" i. e. discommend-

V. Kelly, p. 210.

The term, in its primary sense, has included the idea of boasting. It has still a similar application. One is said to ruse himself; also, to ruse his gudes, when he prefers them to those of others. This corresponds to Isl. raus-a, jactabundè multa effutio.; G. Andr. Ros-a, laudare, extollere; Verel. Ind. Su.G. ros-a, roos-a, Dan. ros-er, Ital. ruzz-are, id. Ihre imagines that it may be derived from ris-a, to elevate. It would be more natural to refer to MoesG. razda, speech; especially as Isl. raus, evidently allied to ruse, denotes prodigality of words, futile talk.

RUSE, Russe, Russ, s. 1. Boast.

I compt na thing al thocht yone fant Troianis Rekin thar fatis that thame hidder brocht. Al sic vane ruse I fere as thing of nocht, In case thay proude be of the Goddis ansueris, And thame awant therof with felloun feris. Doug. Virgil, 279. 10.

Sum spendis on the auld vse, Sum makis ane tume ruse.

Ibid. Prol. 238, b. 3.

To mak a tume ruse, to boast where there is no ground for it, but the reverse; as, to boast of fullness, when one is in poverty. This phrase is still used, Ang.

Quhat gif King David war leivand in thir dayis? The quhilk did found sa mony gay Abayis.—
His successours maks litill ruisse, I ges,

Of his devotioun, or of his holines.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 232.

The proprietor of the small estate of Deuchar, in Angus, had in his possession, till the year 1745, when it was carried off by the Highlanders, in their search for arms, a broad sword, transmitted from one heir to another, with this curious inscription;

At Bannockburn I serv'd the Bruce, Of quhilk the Inglis had na russ.

The account has this collateral proof of authenticity, that the family have in their possession seisins from the time of David Bruce downwards. These I have examined.

2. Commendation, praise; without the idea of boasting being included, S.

Ros is used in this sense O.E.

A morn Lybeaus was boun For to wynne renoun,

RUSKIE, s. 1. A basket for carrying corn, during the operation of sowing, Perths. Loth. It is made of twigs of briar and wheat straw.

2. "A sort of a vessel made of straw to hold meal in."

"You are as small as the twitter of a twin'd rusky;" S. Prov.; "a taunt to a maid, that would gladly be esteemed neat, and small;" Kelly, p. 395.

3. A hive for bees, made of rushes or straw, S.B. skep, synon.

From A.S. risc, a rush, Su.G. rusk, congeries virgultorum; or rather, radically the same with ryssia, Germ. reusche, Fr. ruche, a bee-hive.

RUTE, s. A blow. V. Rout, s. 2.

RUTE, s. A fowl; perhaps the same with the Rood-Goose.

"The wylde guse of the greit bind. ii. s. The claik, quink, and rute, the price of the peice. xviii. d." Acts Mar. 1551. c. 11, Edit. 1566.

Isl. hrotta is the name given to a species of wild goose; anser montanus. It is also called Fialla rota, q. the fell (or mountain) rute; G. Andr. p. 124. V. Roop Goose.

RUTHER, s. A loud noise, a tumultuous cry, an uproar, S.

Ross's Helenore, p. 23.

A.S. hruth, commotion, C.B. rhuthr, impetus, rhuthro, cum impetu ferri, Ir. ruathar, pillage. It may, however, be of the same origin with Ruddy, q. v., especially as Isl. hrid denotes a combat.

RUTHER, RUTHYR, s. Rudder.

A hundreth schippis, that ruthyr bur and ayr, To turss thair gud, in hawyn was lyand thar. Wallace, vii. 1066. MS.

RUTILLAND, part. pr.

I am ane blak monk, said the rutilland Rauin, Sa said the Glaid, I am ane halie Freir; And hes power to bring you quick to heuin.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 207.

This is printed Rutill and Rauin, but evidently by mistake. If rutilland be the original word, it must allude to the glossy appearance of the raven; Fr. rutil-er, Lat. rutil-are, to glitter. In later editions it is ratling, as synon. with rolpand, an epithet used in the description of the raven in the preceding stanza.

RUTOUR, s. A spoiler, an oppressor.

"Than sal thay corruppit rutouris, his mynyons, be salut as kyngis, and haldyn in reuerence amang ws." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 11, a. V. Roysters. To RUVE, v. a. To clinch. V. Roove. RUWITH.

Pight was prodly, with purpour and palle; Birdes branden above, in brend gold bright; Ruwith was a chapell, a chambour, a halle; A chymné with charcole, to chaufe the knight.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 9.

This being a description of a royal pavilion, perhaps ruwith may signify, formed of tapestry, from A.S. reowu, tapestry. It may, however, be an error for outwith, without, or some word of similar meaning.

RWHYS, Wyntown. V. Rusche, s. T t

S.

The letter S., Ihre observes, was a peculiar favourite with the ancient Goths; qua nulla-carior, nulla frequentior.

This letter, as occurring in the beginning of words, in many instances cannot be viewed as a radical. While prefixed in some Goth. dialects, it was thrown away in others. This was especially the case before k. The same term sometimes appears with s, and sometimes without it. Of this we have some vestiges in our own language; as, cry and scry.

Ss is often used by our old writers as the mark of the pl.; as, horse for horses, horses.

His Abbots gat an uncouthe turne, When Shauellinges went to sacke.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 35.

i. e. when monks and friars were obliged to put on sackcloth. The phrase is metaph., expressing their deep sorrow on account of the Reformation.

• The phrase sack gown still denotes a gown made of sackcloth, such as that in which penitents used publicly to appear, according to the former custom of the church of Scotland; although, if I mistake not, this relic of Popish penance is now universally laid aside.

To this custom the following proverbial phrase undoubtedly refers.

Do'in well oursells, we canna help Tho' a friends binna steddy;

Sma' is their kin that canna spare To fill baith sack and widdy.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 15. i. e. both the sack gown and the halter.

SACK, s. One of the privileges of a baron. V.

SACKET, SAKKET, s. A small sack or bag,

"The poict confermis this samyn purpos, sayand, that everye man of this varld baris tua sakkettis vitht hym. Sade, Chaucer, steady; unsad, unsettled, unsteady.

O stormy peple, unsad and ever untrewe, And undiscrete, and changing as a fane; - Thus saiden sade folk in that citee, Whan that the peple gased up and doun. - He so often hadde hire don offence, And she ay sade and constant as a wall. Clerkes T. ver. 8871. 8878. 8923.

4. Close, compact, cohesive, S.

A road, or foot path, is said to be sad, when it is beaten by the feet of passengers.

C.B. sathru signifies calcare, conculcare; syth, solidus; Davies.

It is used by R. Brunne, p. 305., in the sense of close, compact. Strenth suld non haf had, to perte tham thorgh oute.

5. Heavy; as, the bread is very sad, i. e. not well raised, S.

"In some provincial dialects,—sad is used for heavy;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 146.

6. Weighty, solid; applied to proofs.

"Bot quhat auailis this equitie of the caus befoir heireris,—utterly ignorant of the mater how it was done,—quhilk esteme the sclanderis of maist lewd slicht personis, for sad testimoneis." Buchanan's Detect. D. i. b.

7. Flat, close to the ground, S. Thus a thing is said to lie sad, S.

SADLY, SADLYE, adv. 1. Steadily; Chaucer, id. Adam Wallace Barroun off Ricardtoun Full sadly socht till Wallace off renoun.

Wallace, xi. 762. MS. This messager drank sadly ale and wine. Man of Lawes Tale, ver. 5163.

2. It seems also used in the sense of, closely, compactly.

Tharfor comfort yow, and rely Your men about yow rycht starkly; And haldis about the Park your way, Rycht als sadly as ye may; For I trow that nane sall haff mycht, That chassys, with sa fele to fycht.

i. e. to confirm or settle us in the faith. E. sadden is still used in a similar sense, as signifying to make cohesive.

To SAD, v. a. To make sad, to sadden.

"The lamentable losses you have still by the hand of that wicked enemy, -make clear such a measure of the wrath and desertion of God, that oftentimes sads our hearts exceedingly." Baillie's Lett. ii. 100.

Sad, q. d. sæed, ab Isl. sæe perdere; Seren. SAEBIENS, SAEBINS, conj. Since, S. i. e. being sae, or so.

Saebins she be sic a thrawin-gabbit chuck, Yonder's a craig, since ye have tint all hope, Gae till't your ways, and take the lover's lowp. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 69.

SAFER, s. Damages.

"That days be kept every four days once, or within two months at least, and such as shall be found to be robbed of their goods, be redressed to the double, and with safer, according to the law of marches." Spotswood, p. 306.

This word seems properly to signify a premium given for the safety or preservation of goods that have been lost or carried off; E. salvage, salvage money. V. Sefor.

SAFT, adj. Used in the different senses of E. soft, S.

1. As opposed to what is fatiguing. Kind nobles, will ye but alight, In yonder bower to stay; Saft ease shall teach you to forget The hardness of the way.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 36.

2. Pleasant.

To me nae after days nor nichts Will eir be saft and kind; I'll fill the air with heavy sighs, And greet till I am blind.

SAY, SAYE, s. A bucket, or vessel for carrying water, Inverness, Orkn.; a milk-pail, Dumfr.

"Of the samin wyse thair be ordanit thre or foure says to the commonn vse, and vi. or may cleik is of irin, to draw downe timber and ruiffis that ar fyrit." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 83. Edit. 1566. Saye, c. 73, Murray.

Su.G. saa, id. situla, vas, quo aqua portatur; Isl. saa, majusculum quodvis vas, Ol. Lex. Run. The Fr. use seau in the same sense, which is most probably from the Goth. Some have mentioned Heb. IND, seah, a measure, as allied. Wachter observes, that, with the ancient Germans, saw denoted water; hence Ihre supposes that saa, as signifying a vessel for holding water, naturally derives its origin.

SAYARE, s. An author, a poetical writer.

The sayare eik suld wele consider this,
His mater, and quham to it intitillit is.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 271. 34.

He is here speaking of the Heroic stile of writing. Fer ethar is, quha list syt down and mote, Ane vther sayaris faltis to spye and note, Than but offence or falt thame self to wryte.

Ibid. Exclam. 485. 42.

Either immediately from A.S. saeg-an narrare, or from sage, narratio; whence sage-man, delator. V. Saw, s.

Nearly allied both to sayare and sage-man is O.E. segger. R. of Brunne, speaking of his translation of Langtoft's Chronicle, says;

I mad noght for no disours, Ne for no seggers no harpours, Bot for the luf of symple men,

That strange Inglis can not ken. Prol. xcix. Hearne renders the term, "sayers, historians." R. Brunne had undoubtedly the minstrels, the hereditary chroniclers of the nation, especially in his eye. The only sense given of disours, in the Gl., is discourse. But it evidently signifies rehearsers, tale-tellers; Fr. diseur, a speaker. As a poet was called a Makare, because he composed, he might be designed a Sayare, or Segger, because he recited his compositions; unless the name was from saga, sage, as descriptive of the general character of these works, which were merely rhythmical histories or narrations.

SAIKYR, HALFSAIKYR, "a species of cannon, smaller than a demi-culverine, much employed in sieges. Like the faucon, &c. they derived their name from a species of hawk." Gl. Compl. "Mak reddy your cannons,—falcons, saikyrs, half saikyrs, and half falcons." Compl. S. p. 64.

The following passage has been quoted for illustrating the origin of the name.

"And in riding, they cast of haukes, called sukers, to the kytes, which made them greate sport." Hall's Chronicle, Fol. 207. V. Gl. Compl.

Fr. sacre, "a saker, the hawk, and the artillerie so called;" Cotgr.

SAIKLESS, SAYKLES, adj. 1. Guiltless, innocent, S. Sachless, A. Bor.

Thay saykles wichtis sall for my gilt be slane. Doug. Virgil, 43. 17.

For cryme saikles, charged with a crime of which one is not guilty.

id., from sak, lis, culpa, noxa, actio, causa, and lauss liber; i. e. free from accusation, blameless. The s. is from MoesG. sak-an, to reprove, to accuse. V. SAKE, s.

SAIL-FISH, s. The basking shark, S. Squalus maximus, pinna dorsali anteriore majore, Linn.

"The sail-fish, or barking [1. basking] shark, appears on the coasts of the parish early in the month of May, if the season is warm; he is a stupid and torpid kind of fish; he allows the harpooner often to feel him with his hand before he darts at him." P. South Uist, Invern. Statist. Acc. xiii. 290.

"The sun or sail-fish occasionally visits us; this sluggish animal sometimes swims into the salmon nets, and suffers itself to be drawn towards the shore, without any resistance, till it gets so near the land, that for want of a sufficient body of water, it cannot exert its strength," &c. P. Lochgoil-head, Argyles. Statist. Acc. iii. 173.

It is denominated from the large fin which it carries above water. It is also called the Sun-fish, S.; Carbin, Cairban, or Carfin, Hebrides; Hoe-mother or Homer, Orkn.

SAILYE, s. An assault.

SAYNDIS-MAN, s. A messenger.

I rede ane sayndis man ye send to yone senyeour. Gawan and Gol. ii. 2.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves the first part of the word sayndis, as occurring here, for explanation. But it evidently ought to be printed sayndisman, from A.S. sandes-man, nuntius; from sandes the genit. of sand, a message, and man, i. e. one employed to deliver a message, Isl. sendeman, id. ap. Diall. Clerk & Courteour, p. 16. V. SAWR. SAIT, s. An old designation for the Court of Session in S. Lords of the Sait, Lords of the Seat or Session.

Sum sains the Sait, and sum thame cursis. Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 41. Lordes of the seate, Acts Ja. V. 1537. c. 53. SAK, SACK, s. A term used in our old laws, to denote one of the privileges of a baron.

"And some criminal actions perteins to some of the judges foresaids, and to their courts: and chieflie to them quha hes power to hald their courts, with sock, sack, gallous and pit, toll and thame, infang-thief, and outfang-thief," Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 4. s. 2.

Sok undoubtedly denotes the right with which a baron is vested, of holding a court within his own domains. It seems also to signify the extent of the jurisdiction of this court.

A.S. soc is expl. not only curia, but, territorium, sive praecinctus, in qua Saca et cetera privilegia exercebantur. Hickes, Thes. i. 159.

Sack seems properly to signify the right of the baron to prosecute his vassals in this court, and to decide the matter in controversy, by imposing fines or otherwise punishing the guilty.

A.S. sac, saca, lis, actio, causa forensis. Hence E. sake, equivalent to cause; as, for God's sake, propter Dei causam. Sak is expl. by Rastell, as equivalent to placitum et emenda, i. e. as denoting not only the plea, but the pecuniary mulct imposed on the person found guilty: and in the laws of Edward the Confessor, as synon. with forisfactura or forfeiture. V. Spelman, vo. Suc. Su.G. sak signifies not only a cause, and also guilt or crime, but the fine imposed on the criminal.

Skene expl. sock as, according to some, referring to the sock or plough-share; "quhen the tenent is bound and oblished to cum with his pleuch to till and labour ane part of the Lordes landes." De Verb. Sign. vo. Sokmannia; also, Not. in Reg. Maj. Lib. i. c. 4. This idea seems to have been thrown out by Littleton. V. Spelm. vo. Soc. But it is quite fanciful. For sock, as denoting a plough-share, is not of A.S. origin. Besides, soc, jurisdictio, is the same with socn, socna, where the resemblance is lost. A.S. soc, I suspect, is from MoesG. sok-jan, A.S. socc-an, to seek. 1. Because its literal sense is sequela. 2. Because it corresponds to L.B. secta. "Sok,—now wee call soyte, from the French worde suite, h. e. sequela;" Skene, in vo. 3. Because this is confirmed by analogy. Su.G. soek-a signifies, in jus vocare; soeka och swara, actorem et reum esse, Leg. Ostg. ap. Ihre. Hence soekn, citatio in jus, corresponding to A.S. socn; soeknedag, dies, quo in jus vocare licet, exactly analogous to our phrase a lawful day; i. e. a day in which a man might be brought into a court of law, in order to be prosecuted; Isl. yfersokn, suprema jurisdictio. Su.G. soeka is also used, in a secondary sense, as signifying to exact; soekn, an exaction; soeknare, quaestor, one who levies fines.

This analogy renders it highly probable that sac has the same origin; especially as Su.G. sak, equally with soekn, signifies a mulct. The cognate Germ. term, suche, causa, lis, jus cognoscendi de causis controversis, is deduced by Wachter from such-en, quaerere, inquirere.

SAKE, s. Blame, guilt; or accusation.

Swete Ysonde thinare,

Thou preye the king for me;

SALE, SAIL, SAILL, s. 1. A palace. Thare stude ane grete tempill or sait ryall, Of Laurent ciete sete impereall.

Doug. Virgil, 210. 55. sail, MS. The sense requires it, sete being used in the following line.

2. A hall, a chamber, a parlour.

The renk raikit in the saill, riale and gent, That wondir wisly wes wroght, with wourschip and wele.

Gawan and Gol. i. 6.

It seems doubtful whether the term here denotes the palace in general, or one chamber in it.

Within the cheif palice, baith he and he Ar enterit in the sale ryall and hie.

Doug. Virgil, 472. 38.

The term is used in both senses in the Northern languages: A.S. sal, aula, palatium; Su.G. sal, habitaculum, conclave; aula, curia; Isl. sal, domus ampla et magnifica, multorum hospitum et convivarum capax; -- camera in aedium editiori loco, quam adire per scalas necessam est; Verel. Ind. Germ. sal, templum, palatium; also, coenaeulum, pars aedium amplior et ornatior; Fr. sale, Ital. L.B. sala, a hall.

A.S. Alem. sal also denotes a private house. The natural origin of the term, in all its senses, is undoubtedly to be found in MoesG. sal-jan, divertere, manere, hospitari; whence salith-vos, mansiones;

A.S. saelth, Alem. selitha, habitatio.

SALEBROSITY, s. A rough or uneven place. " His Grace here wisely brought the Doctor off salebrosities, whence all his wits could not have delivered him with his credit." Baillie's Lett. i. 114.

" Stall, stole?" Gl. Pinkerton. The conjecture is well-founded. For stall is the word in the Bannatyne MS. i. e. "From a sense of shame stole away from the place."

SALSS, s. Sauce.

And that eyt it with full gud will, That soucht na nother salss than till Bot appetyt, that oft men takys: For rycht weill scowryt war thair stomakys. Barbour, iii. 540. MS.

Instead of takys, used in MS., I suspect that it ought to have been lakys, lacks or wants. For, as the passage stands, it cannot bear any tolerable meaning. Barbour expresses the same idea with that contained in the emphatical S. Prov. Hunger's gude kitchin.

Germ. sulze, Fr. sausse, id. The origin is Germ. salz-en, sale condire; as properly signifying a kind of pickle made of salt. V. Wachter, vo. Salz.

SALT, adj. 1. Troublesome, what produces bitter consequences, S.

Wit he betwixt us twa be onie lufe, He wil be richt weil payit, and the apprufe: And he to me wit thow maid ony falt, To the that wil be ful sowre and salt.

Priests of Peblis, p. 44. Wele, quod the tothir, wald thou mercy cry, And mak amendis, I sall remit this falt: Bot vthir wayis that sate sall be full salt. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 450. 47.

"I shall make it salt to you, i. e. I shall make you pay dear for it. That's the thing that makes the kail salt, Prov. Scot. Bor. i. e. That's the ground of the quarrel." Rudd.

2. Costly, expensive; applied to any article of sale, S.,

I need scarcely observe, that Lat. sales in pl. and E. salt, are both metaph, used to denote wit. Although the sense is different, there may be an analogy. The term, as used S., might originally denote what is poignant to the mind. It may, however, have a reference to some ancient superstition, such as that mentioned by Kilian. Soute ende broode cten, offam judicialem edere. "This," he says, "was a bit of bread, devoted in the way of execration by certain words, which was presented to the guilty person; salt being at the same time offered, perhaps, because it was customary to use it in execrations and imprecations. For the Germans, Saxons, Belgae, and many others, were firmly persuaded, that no one, conscious of evil, could eat bread devoted in this manner;" vo. Sout, sal.

This superstitious idea evidently corresponds to the constant use of salt in the sacred rites of the heathen, from whom it was immediately borrowed by the church of Rome. V. Casal. de Vet. Sacr. Christ. Rit. p. 205. It is well known that the heathen always used salt in their sacrifices. The sacred. nature of this rite would naturally enough induce a persuasion of the efficacy of salt, when devoted in the manner described above; as the person who profaned it would be accounted so daring in his guilt as to call for an immediate intervention of the power of their offended deities.

It is said to have been an ancient custom among some heathen nations, that those who promised faith to kings, eat salt adjured or consecrated in the presence of the kings to whom they bound themselves. Hence it is said in the book of Esdras, that the princes of the Samaritans, when they wrote to the Persian kings, accusing the Jews, thus expressed themselves; "We are mindful of the salt, which we eat in the palace." V. Du Cange, vo. Sal.

But the rite itself, as used in sacrifices, was probably borrowed from the Jewish customs. It was one of the laws delivered by Moses; "Every oblation of thy meat-offering shalt thou season with salt;" Lev. ii. 13. As salt was a symbol to which Pythagoras attached great importance, it has been supposed, on pretty good authority, that he learned the sacred use of it from the Jews. V. Gale's Court, P. ii. 130, 152, 153, 204.

SALT SE, or SEA, a phrase commonly used by our old writers to denote the sea.

Vnder thy gard to schip we vs addres, Ouer spynnand many swelland seyis salt. Doug. Virgil, 72. 46.

But the term salt, as connected with sea, is not to be viewed in the light of a common poetical epithet. It seems evidently to have originated from its being formerly used as a s., denoting the sea itself. We may safely form this conclusion from analogy. For salt was the designation which the ancient Scandinavians gave to the sea. The Baltic sea is by Isl. writers commonly called Eystra salt, i. c. the Eastern sea; Germ. salz, mare, Gr. als, and Lat. sal-um, signify both the sea, and that seasoning which we give to our food, extracted from its waters. According to Ihre, it must remain uncertain, whether salt has its name from the sea, or the sea, as thus denominated, from salt. But Seren. observes, perhaps more justly, that Su.G. salt, as denoting the sea, seems to be the radical term; as it is not likely that men would be acquainted with salt, before they had tasted the waters of the sea.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 27, b.

This is undoubtedly the primary sense of the word. For as Germ. segen signifies a sign, and also blessing, and segn-en, to bless, to consecrate, to sanctify; the terms, as Wachter has observed, seem to be used metonymically, the sign being put for the thing signified. The same word occurs in Alem., Notker, Psa. cxxviii. 8. Gotes segen si uber iuh; The blessing of God be upon you. In Gotes namen segenoen unir iuh; In the name of God we bless you. Wachter conjectures that this mode of speaking had its origin among the Franks, who, he says, from the beginning of Christianity, used the sign of the cross in entering into vows, and consecrating persons and things, as the Catholics do at this day. He quotes the following passage from Alcuin. Hoc enim signo crucis consecratur corpus Dominicum, sanctificatur fons baptismatus, initiantur presbyteri et caeteri gradus ecclesiastici, et omnia quaecunque sanctificantur, hoc signo Dominicae crucis cum invocatione Christi nominis consecrantur.

The S. v. and s. syne, synd, which denote a slight ablution, seem to have had the same origin. We may add Isl. sign-a, consecrare, Verel. Ind. Su.G. id. notare signo crucis. A.S. segnunge, signatio, from segn-ian, signare. Ille nullam salutem neque consolationem thurh heora segnunge onfeng, per eorum ministerium suscepit, Bed. 502. 26. where, says Lye, the Sax. interpreter, by the ministry of the priests wished sealing to be understood, i. e. with SANGLERE, s. A wild boar.

So brym in stoure that stound Mezentius was. Like to the strenthy sanglere, or the bore. Doug. Virgil, 344. 35.

Fr. sangliere, id. L.B. singularis, Gr. monos; according to Du Cange, because it delights in solisude, or because it wanders the two first years singly and alone. Also singlare, senglarius, senglerius, and senglaris, porcus.

SANGUANE, SANGUYNE, adj. Red, or having the colour of blood; sanguin, Chaucer.

-Sum gres, sum gowlis, sum purpoure, sum sanguane. Dong. Virgil, 401. 2.

Fr. sanguin, id. Lat. sanguin-eus, from sanguis. SANOUROUS, adj. Healing, medicinal.

Under the circle solar thir sanourous sedis Were nurist be dame Nature that nobill maistres. Houlate, i. 3. MS.

"Savoury," Gl. But the poet speaks of herbs that were Mendis and medicine for all menis neidis: Help till hert, and till hurt, helefull it was.

He evidently uses sanourous as synon, with helefull. Lat. sano, -are, to heal.

SANRARE, Houlate, i. 17. is an error of the transcriber.

The Bannatyne MS. reads;

Upoun the sand yit I saw as thesaurare tane, &c. i. e. Treasurer

SANS, prep. Without, Fr.

And bot my mycht resistit thame, sans dout Thay had bene brynt or this in flambis rede.

Doug. Virgil, 59. 3.

SAP, s. Liquid of any kind, as milk or small beer, taken with solid aliment, especially with bread, for the purpose of moistening it.

To 'ford him sap, a cow he'll chuse To pick around his borders.

Morison's Poems, p. 45. Belg. sap, id. 'Tis vol sap; It is full of liquor. The Icelanders give the name of saup to drink. It is radically the same with A.S. saep, Su.G. Germ. saft, succus, juice; which Wachter derives from sauf-en to moisten. V. next word.

SAPMONEY, s. Money allowed to servants for purchasing sap, S.

"The skippers, or men who have the charge of the boats,—have for their wages, during the winter season, 6l. with 4 bolls of oatmeal, and 7s. for supmoney, or drink to their meals." P. Ecclesgreig, Kincard. Statist. Acc. xi. 93.

SAPS, s. pl. "Sops, bread soaked in some nourishing liquid," Gl. Sibb. It is more generally boiled.

Ale-saps, wheaten bread boiled in beer; when butter is added, this mess is called butter-saps. This is commonly given as a treat, among the vulgar, at the birth of a child.

Perhaps Gael. sabhs, soup, is allied.

To SAR, v. a. To vex, to gall, to press sore on Through oute the thikest of the press he yeld: And at his horss full fayne he wald haif beyne, Twa sarde him maist that cruell war and keyne. Wallace, ii. 58. MS.

In Edit. 1648, it is rendered, grieved.

"This king was huntand ane wolf in the fellis, and quhen scho was sarit with the houndis, scho ruschit on the king, and bait hym in the syde." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 21. Urgeretur acrius a canibus, Boeth.

A.S. sar-ian, dolere; Su.G. saar-a, laedere, vulnerare; to wound, to hurt, Wideg.

SARBIT, interj. Some kind of exclamation.

O sarbit, says the Ladie Maisery, That ever the like me befa'!

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 272.

To SARD, v. a.

I trow Sanctam Ecclesiam; Bot nocht in thir Bischops nor freirs, Quhilk will, for purging of thir neirs, Sard up the ta raw and down the uther.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 234.

Borrowed perhaps from Fr. surt-re, to stitch, mend, repair.

SARDE, pret. Vexed, galled. V. SAR.

SARE, adj. Sore. V. SAIR. SARE, s. 1. A sore, S. Doug.

2. Pain to the mind, sorrow. Doug: A.S. sar, Sw. saer, dolor; Belg. seer. To SARE, v. n. To soar.

Quham fynaly he clippis at the last, And loukit in his punsis saris fast.

Doug. Virgil, 390. 41. Seren. derives E. soar from Isl. swir-a, swerr-a,

To SARE, v. n. To savour. V. SAWER.

SARELESS, adj. Useless, unsavoury, S.B. Quo' he, Indeed this were a sareless feast, To tak in earnest what ane speaks in jest. Ross's Helenore, p. 104.

q. savourless. V. SAIR, v.

SARGEAND, s.

Sé ye not quha is cum now?-A sargeand out of Soudoun land, A gyane strang for to stand, That with the strenth of my hand Bereis may bind.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 173.

This word is used in the same sense with sergeant, Chaucer, a squire attending a prince or nobleman. Fr. sergeant, Gorm. scherge, a lictor. Seriaunt is a servant, R. Glouc. Wachter derives scherge from Alem. scurgi, averte.

SARY, SAIRY, adj. 1. Sad, sorrowful. Palinurus, quod sche, thou sary syre, Quhiddir is becummyn sic vndantit desire To the?— Doug. Virgil, 176. 28.

A.S. sari, sarig, tristis, moestus, from sar dolor. 2. Sorry, wretched, pitiable.

'That sary Benet,' he sayd, 'am I, That led that state wnworthyly.'

Wyntown, vi. 13. 21.

That sary lyf contenwyd he, Qwhil wast but folk wes the cuntre.

Ibid. viii. 37. 131.

"Sary man, and then he grat;" S. Prov. "an ironical condolence of some trifling misfortune." Kelly, p. 291.

"Ye'll gar me claw a sairy man's haffet;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 83.

SARIOLLY, Barbour, v. 5. MS. sariely.

As turturis and the nychtyngale, Begouth rycht sariely to syng; And for to mak in thair singyng Swete notis, and sownys ser, And melodys plesand to her.

"Loftily," Gl. But it seems to sign y, artfully; from A.S. searolice, mechanice, artificiose; from sear, seara, searuwa, art.

Perhaps sarraly, which Mr. Pinkerton renders boldly, may be viewed as the same word.

The King weile sone in the morning

The King weile sone in the mornyng, Saw fyrst cummand thar fyrst eschele, Arrayit sarraly, and weile.

Barbour, viii. 222. MS.

And thai, that in the woddis sid wer Stud in array rycht sarraly, And thoucht to byd thar hardyly The cummyng of thar enymyss.

Ibid. ix. 140. MS:

i. e. artfully, carefully, cautiously; as taking the benefit of the covert of the wood.

A.S. seare is expl. "stratagema; a subtil contrivance;" Somuer. It is also used to denote war-like engines. V. Lye.

It occurs in a similar sense with respect to the care of the army about the King, when he was sick.

In myddis thaim the King thai bar, And yeid about him sarraly.

Ibid. ver. 176. MS.

—A bidding has he mad, That na man sall be sa hardy To prik at thaim, bot sarraly Rid redy ay in to bataill, To defend gif men wald assail.

Ibid. xvi. 114. MS.

In another place it is written saraly.

Than stud he still a quhill, and saw
That thai war all doune of daw;
Syne went towart him saraly.

Ibid. xviii. 157. MS.

SARIT, pret. Vexed. V. SAR. SARK, s. A shirt, S. A. Bor.

Thair with in haist his weid off castis he,— Held on his sark, and tuk his suerd so gud
Band on his nek, and syn lap in the flud.

Wallace, ik. 1178. MS.

On fute I sprent, into my bare sark, Wilful for to complete my langsum wark.

Doug. Virgil, 403. 54.

"He has been row'd in his mother's sark tail;"
Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 31. It is thus expl. "The Scots have a superstitions custom of receiving a child, when it comes to the world, in its mother's shift, if a male; believing that this usage will make him well beloved among women. And when a man proves unfortunate that way, they will say, He was kep'd in a board-cloth; he has some hap to his meat, but none to his wives." Kelly, p. 139. 140.

A.S. syric, syrc, indusium; Dan. messe sercke, a surplice, Rudd. Su.G. saerk, indusium muliebre; Isl. serk-ur, vestis seu indusium muliebre, ac nobile quidem interulae genus; G. Andr. He derives it from Lat. seric-um, silk. It seems to confirm this etymon, that Fland. sark denotes cloth of silk. I have, however, heard an amateur of the Gr. language, with great gravity, derive our S. word from ones, caro, because the shirt is next to the body. Sarked, part. pa. 1. "Provided with shirts or shifts," Shirr. Gl. S.

2. Covered with thin deals, S.

"The roofs are surked, i. e. covered with inchand-half deal, sawed into three planks, and then nailed to the joists, on which the slates are pinned." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 147.

SARKIN, s. The covering of wood above the rafters, immediately under the slates, q. the shirting.

SARRALY, adv. V. SARIOLLY.

To SASE, v. a. To seize, to lay hold of.
Ane haly iland lyis, that hait Delos,— Quham the cheritabill archere Appollo
Quhen it fletit rollyng from coistis to and fro,
Sasit and band betuix vthir ilis tua.

Doug. Virgil, 69. 44.

Fr. sais-ir, comprehendere; whence L.B. sasire, and sasina, forensic terms. SAT, s. A snare.

Y sain we nought no sat; He douteth me bituene.

Sir Tristrem, p. 117.

"From saetinga, insidiae.—We have not discovered an ambush," Gl. But it more nearly resembles Su.G. saett, sata, id.; saett-a, insidias stuere. SATE, s. "An omission, trespass, miscarriage, slip," Rudd.

Wele, quod the tothir, wald thou mercy cry, And mak amendis, I sall remit this falt, Bot vthir wayis that sate sall be full salt.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 450. 47.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. saut, a leap, jump, skip; saut-er, to skip over. Faire le saute, to become bankrupt, to flee the country for debt.

Satoure, s. A transgressor, a trespasser.

Rycht so the satoure, the false theif, I say, With suete treason oft wynith thus his pray. King's Quair, iv. 12. Tytl. Edit.

According to this reading, it might seem allied to Fr. sauteur, a leaper, q. one who overleaps proper bounds. V. Sate. Tytl. expl. it, "the lustful person." But Sibb. writes feator, Chron. S. P. i. 42. This may be from Fr. fautier, faulty; faut, fault. To SATIFIE, v. a. To satisfy.

"Our pretence is not to satisfie & delite the delicat earis of curius men, but to establische the conscience of sick as ar of mair sobir knawlege, and understanding nor we ar, geue thair be ony." Kennedy of Crosraguell, Compend. Tractiue, p. 7. SATTERDAY, SATERDAY, s. Saturday, the last day of the week.

U u 2

This day, in the calendar of superstition, has been reckoned unlucky.

—" Certane craftis men—will nocht begin thair warke on the Saterday, certane schipmen or marinars will nocht begin to sail on the Satterday, certane trauelars will nocht begin thair iornay on the Satterday, quhilk is plane superstition, because that God Almychty made the Satterday as well as he made all other dayis of the wouke." ²⁴ The water sould be free, that na man sall take fisch in it, fra Saterday after the Euening song, vn-till Munday after the sunne rising." Stat. Alex. II. c. 16. V. Slop.

SAUAGE, SAWAGE, adj. Brave, intrepid.

This term is used by Henry the Minstrel in a milder sense than that attached to it in our times.

Yong Wallace, fulfillit of hie curage, In pryss of armys desirous and sauage; Thi waslage may neuir be forlorn.

Wallace, ii. 2. MS.

Here it may perhaps signify ardent, vehement in spirit. As Wallace was still deservedly a great favourite with the nation, we may perceive somewhat of this attachment in the manner in which the passage has been treated. Early editors, viewing the term savage as disrespectful to the guardian of Scottish liberty, have altered the verse; as in Edit. 1648.

Young Wallace, then fulfilled of hie courage, In prise of arms desirous of vassalage, &c.
This forms part of the character of a worthy clerk.
Maistir Jhone Blayr was offt in that message,
A worthy clerk, bath wyss and rycht sawage.

Ibid. v. 534.

I can scarcely think that the author used it for sage. Thus, however, it is rendered Edit. 1648.

A worthie clerk, both wise and als right sage. SAUCH, SAUGH, s. A willow or sallow tree, S.; as the flowers of willows are here termed palms. 'Salix caprea, Common Sallow, Anglis. Saugh, Scotis.' Lightfoot, p. 607.

"There are still three considerable woods in the parish;—and consist of oak, aller, birch, saugh, and ash." P. Campsie, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xv. 321.

Sw. saelg, salig, A.S. salh, O.Fr. saulx, sahuc, Gael. seilach, Lat. salix. Thwaites views A.S. sal, black, as the root. But this idea must be rejected, unless we can suppose, that this was also the origin of the Lat. name.

SAUCHT, SAUGHT, part. pa. 1. Reconciled. Quhen the King thus was with him saucht, And gret lordschippis had him betaucht, He woux sa wyse, and sa awyse,
That his land fyrst weill stablyst he.
Barbour, x. 300. MS.

Adoun he fel y fold,
That man of michel maught,
And cride;
—" Tristrem be we saught,

And have min londes wide."
Sir Tristrem, p. 163.

A.S. saeht, seht, id. Wurdon saehte, Erant reconciliati, Chron. Sax. A. 1077. This is the part. of seht-ian, reconciliare, componere. Hence saehtlian, id. litem componere, which is far more probably the origin of E. settle, as used to denote the removal of variance or disturbance, than settle, a seat, referred to by Dr. Johns.

A.S. set-an, sett-an, also signifies, componere; sedare, pacare. Both this v. and seht-ian are radically the same with Isl. saett-ast, reconciliari; saett, reconciliatus; Su.G. saett-a, conciliari, amicitians contrahere; whence samsaett, Isl. saettmal, a covenant. Syith and assyith are to be traced to the same fountain; as denoting the atonement made, or fine paid, for procuring reconciliation.

2. At ease, in peace, undisturbed.

Now lat vs change scheildis, sen we bene saucht Grekis ensenycis do we counterfete.

Doug. Virgil, 52. 6.
i. e. Since we are presently without disturbance, our enemies being at a distance.

Perhaps Su.G. sackta, tranquillus, pacificus, may be viewed as rather allied to sactta reconciliari, than to Goth. sef, tranquillity, which Ihre considers as the root. Hence sackta, quietly, gently; sackt-a, to allay, to compose; sacktmodig, pacific. Osackt, inquietude, which nearly resembles S. saucht, is still used. Gael. sioghai, quiet, seems allied.

SAUCHT, SAUGHT, s. Ease, tranquillity, S. "S. Bor. To sit in saucht, to live in peace and quiet; and, to live in unsaucht, i. e. trouble;" Rudd.

For as her mind began to be at saught,
In her fair face ilk sweet and bonny draught
Come to themsells.— Ross's Helenore, p. 32.

"Better saught wi' little aught, nor care wi' peace, with little in one's possession.

A.S. sahte, seht, peace, friendship, reconciliation; Isl. saett, id. V. the part. Teut. saecht, tranquillus, pacificus; saecht-en, saechtigh-en, mitigare, lenire. Gael. sogh, prosperity, ease, pleasure, sioth, peace, quietness.

SAUCHNING, SAUGHTENING, SAWCHNYNG, s. I. Reconciliation, agreement, pacification.

Made was the saughtening, And alle forgeve bidene.

Sir Tristrem, p. 104.

Nor I beleif na freyndschip in thy handis,

Nane sic trety of sauchning nor cunnandis

My son Lausus band vp with the perfay.

Doug. Virgil, 353. 17.

A state of quietness or rest.
 Wpon him selff mekill trawaill he tais;
 The gret battaill compleit apon him gais;

In the forbrevst he retornyt full oft: Quham euir he hyt thair sawchnyng was wnsoft. Wallace, x. 332. MS.

Saughning, Edit. 1648.

Literally, their rest was not soft; a contradictory phrase, meant more emphatically to express that the persons referred to had a hard fall, or a severe fate. SAUDALL, s. A companion, a mate; Lat. so-

- The bird into the breir, Dois cry vpon his saudall deir, With mony schirm and schattir. Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. To SAUF, v. a. To save.

I sall thi kyndnes quyte, And sauf thyn honoure.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 8.

Fr. sauf, safe; Lat. salv-o. SAUF, TO SAUF, prep. Saving, except. In-tyl Albyone be-lywe

He come, quhare nowthire man na wywe To sauf geawntis there he fand.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 59.

SAUFE, s. Salve, ointment.

— Pretius inuntment, saufe, or fragrant pome.— Doug. Virgil, 401. 41.

SAUYN, s.

- Quhiddir fleis thou now, Ence? Leif neuer, for schame, thus desolate and waist Thy new alliance promist the in haist, Of Lauinia the spousing chalmer at hand, And al his ilk regioun and this land,-My richt hand sal the sauyn gif, quod he.

Doug. Virgil, 342. 10. For saving, and that for save;" Rudd. But perhaps this is an error for sasyn, i. e. seizin, corporal possession.

In consequence of examining the MSS., I find, that, although saving is the word in that used by Rudd., in the oldest MS. it is saysin.

SAUL, SAWL, s. The soul, S.

I am commandit, said scho, and I man Vndo this hare to Pluto consecrate. And lous the saul out of this mortall state. Doug. Virgil, 124. 50.

A.S. saul, sawel, Isl. saul, MoesG. saiwala, id. SAULES, adj. Dastardly, mean, S. q. without soul. V. COCKALAN.

SAULL-PROW, s. Spiritual profit, benefit of the soul.

Be the pilgramage compleit, I pas for saull-prow. Gawan and Gol. i. 21. V. Prow.

SAULLIE, SAULIE, s. A hired mourner, one who walks in procession before a funeral company, S. "That no deule weedes be given to Heraulds, Trumpetters, or Saullies, except by the Earls and Lords, and their wives. And the number of the Saullies to be according to the number of the deule weedes, under the paine of ane thousand pounds."

Acts Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25. s. 12. Murray. How come mankind, when lacking woe, In Saulie's face their hearts to show? Fergusson's Poems, p. 98.

The name might seem to have had its rise from the deule weedes appropriated to them, from A.S. sal, black. But if we should suppose, that, in the time of Popery, these mourners, during their procession, chaunted prayers, the name might be supposed to originate from their frequent repetition of Salve Regina.

To SAUR, v. n. To savour. V. SAWER.

*SAVOUR, s. A term used in S., especially with respect to preaching the gospel, equivalent

The E. language has no word exactly corresponding. Hence unction has of late been adopted from the Fr. Savour occurs in 2 Cor. ii. 15., in a sense very nearly the same. What is there said in relation to God, is, in our use of the term, transferred to those who know the power of divine truth. Hence,

*SAVOURY, adj. Possessing onction, S. V. SAIR-LES, which is used in a sense directly opposite.

SAUT, s. Salt, S.

"Before ye chuse a friend, eat a peck of saut" wi' him;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 18.; i. e. be thoroughly acquainted with him.

SAUT-FAT, s. A salt-seller, or vessel for holding salt, S.

In our country, in former times, the saut-fat was invariably placed in the middle of the table. It was a pretty large vessel, of a flat form, that there might be no danger of the salt being spilled. For if this happened, it was universally accounted a bad omen. This is a very ancient superstition. We learn from Festus, that the Romans reckoned it ominous to spill the salt at table. Among them, the idea might originate from the custom of consecrating the table, by setting on it the images of the Lares and salt-holders, salinorum appositu; Arnob. Lib. ii. A family salt-seller (paternum salinum) was kept with great care; Horat. Od. ii. 16. 14. V. Adam's Rom. Antiq. p. 445. V. SALT.

A.S. sealt-fact, id. Teut. sout-vat. A.S. fact, fat, a vessel of any kind, is often conjoined with another s., particularly defining the use of the vessel meant; as leht-fuet, a candlestick, i. e. a vessel for holding a candle.

SAW, SAWE, s. 1. A word, a saying; often applied to a proverb; an old saw, S. O.E. id. In fragil flesche your febill sede is saw ;-

Nurist with sleuth, and mony vnsemly saw. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 93. 15.

Sé that thy saw be sicker as thy seill.

Stewart, Bannatyne Poems, p. 149.

A.S. saga, sage, dictum, dictio, from sag-an dicere.

2. A discourse, an address.

All that consentyt till that saw. And than in till a litill thraw, Thair iiii bataillis ordanyt thai.

Barbour, xi. 302. MS. This term is used to denote a pretty long speech made by Robert Bruce to his army, on the day preceding the battle of Bannockburn,

3. Language in general.

4. A sentence, a legal decision; or perhaps rather a testimony given in a court of law.

Sa meikle tressone, sa mony partial sawis,
Sa littill ressone, to help the common cawis,
That all the lawis ar not set by ane bene;
Sic fenyiet flawis, sa mony wastit wawis,
Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 43.

"So many partial sentences or decrees;" Ibid.
p. 252. N. But it seems doubtful, whether this phrase be not rather meant to denote the testimony given by witnesses before judgment is passed. Thus partial sawis may signify the evidence of witnesses who have sworn falsely; or who have received what our law calls partial counsel, as having been instructed what to say.

The cognates of this word are used in a forensic sense in various Northern languages. Dan. sag, an action, a suit, a process. Foere sag moden, to sue one at law. A.S. sage, a witness, saga, a testimony. Hu fela sagena; How many things they witness; Quam multa testimonia; Matt. xxvii. 13. Germ. sag-en, to give evidence in a court of law, to coofess, to denounce; sage-man, an informer, an accuser; aussage, a judicial confession, the deposition of witnesses; Su.G. saegnarting, the place of judgment, in which sentence is pronounced, or rather where witnesses are heard; Leg. Westro-Goth. ap. Ihre, vo. Suega. Some have viewed Heb.

5. It seems to be sometimes used in a higher sense, as denoting an oracle, a prediction of a deity; or, at least, the forebodings of one, who, although possessed of more than human knowledge, was not certainly acquainted with the mysteries of fate.

Thus Juno says;

Bot now approchis to that innocent knycht Ane fereful end, he sal to dede be dycht; Or than my sawis ar voyde of verité. Doug. Virgil, 341. 16.

And in relation to Venus it is said;

——— All other things thou knawss
Is now conforme vnto thy moders sawis.

Ibid. 31. 28.

A.S. sage, "praesagium, a divining, a foretelling;" Somner. From the resemblance, one might almost suppose that the Romans had borrowed their designation for a wise woman, or witch, saga, from the Goths.

This word, especially as denoting a proverb, an old saying, evidently proves its near relation to Isl. Su.G. Alem. Franc. saga, a narration, a history, whether true or false; the name given by the Icelanders to all the ancient annals of their country, and history of their ancestors, whether transmitted by tradition, or in the rude songs composed in early ages. A.S. sage also signifies a tale; whence sage-man, sag-man, "delator, the tale-teller, the talesman;" Teut. saeghe, fabula, narratio; MoesG. in-saht, id. V. SAYARE.

"It is kindly that the pock sare of the herring;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 20.

Sibb. refers to Isl. saur, sordes, stercus. But it is merely savour, Fr. savour-er, used in a general sense; from Lat. sapor.

SAWR, s. Savour; pl. sawris.

Burns, iii. 144.

MoesG. saihs, id. Sex is commonly used by our old writers.

SAXT, adj. Sixth.

I traist to sé the day ye sall be schent, That for thir faultis K. James the Saxt sall hang you.

Nicol Burne, Chron. S. P. iii. 461.

SAXTE', adj. Sixty, S.

Saxté he led off nobill men in wer.

Wallace, ix. 1719. MS.

MoesG. saihstis, id. SC. Words not found with this orthography, may be looked for under Sk. *SCAB, s. Metaph., any gross offence, synon.

outbreaking. "It is only God's guarde, euen his sauing grace, which hath kept my life from scab & scandale." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 989.

SCAD, s. Any colour slightly or obliquely seen, properly, by reflexion; or the reflexion itself, S. "Your cross is of the colour of heaven;—and that dye and colour dow abide fair weather, and neither be stained nor cast the colour; yea it reflects a scad, like the cross of Christ." Rutherford's Lett. P. il. ep. 28.

Evidently the same with E. shade, as a shade of blue, green, &c.; A.S. scade, Germ. schatte, umbra. Hence, as Wachter observes, schetz, E. sketch of a thing, because it is shadowed out. Johnson derives the E. word from Lat. schedula.

SCADLIPS, s. Broth, containing a very small portion of barley, S.B. and on this account more apt to burn the mouth; q. scald lips.

There will be-sheep-heads, and a haggize, And scadlips to sup till ye're fow.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 211.

SCAFF, SKAFFIN, s. 1. A term used by the vulgar to denote provisions, food of any kind. Fine scaff, excellent provision, S.

We'll ripe the pouch, and see what scaff is there; I wat, when I came out, it wasna bare.

Ross's Helenore, p. 74.

- Scaff and raff ye ay sall ha!

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 363. 2. Expl. "merriment, diversion," Sibb. Gl. Sibb. conjectures that it originally signified feasting. V. next word.

SCAFFAR, s. A parasite.

"He commandit all idill pepil, as juglaris, menstralis, bardis, & scaffaris, other to pas out of the realme, or ellis to fynd sum craft to wyn thair leiffyng." Bellend. Cron. B. ix. c. 18. Mimos, histriones, bardos, parasitos, Boeth.

Elsewhere this is connected with flecheouris or flatterers.

He banist all tauernaris, drunkartis, scaffuris & vane flecheouris out of his hous." Ibid. B. xi.

c. 7. Adulatores parasitosque, Boeth. Su.G. skaffare, Dan. skaffer, Teut. schaffer, one who provides food for others, a steward, a clerk of the kitchen; L.B. skapwardus, from Su.G. skap, provision, and warda, to keep. Alem. scepf-an, Germ. schaff-en, Su.G. skaff-a, procurare; Belg. schaff-en, to dress victuals; whence schaftyd, the time of taking any meal.

The transition, to the sense in which it is here used, is easy, as denoting one who makes court to others for the sake of his belly; corresponding to E. smell-feast, Belg. punlikker, Gr. magaziros, from πωρα and σιτος, frumentum.

SCAFFERIE, s. Extortion. V. SKAFRIE.

SCAIL, s. A sort of tub; or perhaps used for a

Her maidens brought me forth a scail. Of fine main bread and fowls hail; With bottles full of finest wine.

Sir Egeir, p. 13.

Skeel still signifies a tub; q. v. SCALDRICKS, s. pl. Wild mustard, Loth.; skellies, synon.

"The long-continued use of the town dung has filled the soil full of every kind of annual weeds, particularly bird seed, or wild mustard, called here scaldricks." P. Cramond, Loth. Statist. Acc. i. 217. V. SKELLOCH.

To SCALE, v. a. To separate, to part, &c. V. SKAIL, with its derivatives.

SCALKT, pret. v.

He scalkt him fowlar than a fuil; He said he was ane lichelus bul, That croynd even day and nicht.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 360. The term seems to signify, bedaubed; q. he so besmeared him with filth, that he made a more ridiculous appearance than a fool with his motely coat.

Thus it is the same with skaikit, bedaubed, S. V. SKAIK.

SCALP, Scawp, s. 1. Land of which the soil is very thin, generally above gravel or rock, S. scawp, Shirr. Gl.

Plenty shall cultivate ilk scawp and moor, Now lea and bare, because the landlord's poor. Ramsay's Poems, i. 60.

This seems merely a metaph. use of E. scalp, from Teut. schelp, q. a shell.

2. A bed of oysters or muscles, S.

"Around this little island, commonly called Mickery, there are several oyster scalps." Sibb. Fife, N. p. 93.

"On the south side of this part of the Tay, there is a scalp of a small kind of mussels, esteemed good bait for the white fish." P. Ferry-Port-on-Craig, Fife, Statist. Acc. viii. 461.

SCALPY, pron. Scaupy, adj. A term applied to ground, when the soil is thin, S. V. SCALP.

SCAMP, s. A cheat, a swindler; often used asto one who contracts debt, and runs off without paying it, Loth. Perths.

Teut. schamp-en, to slip aside, to fly off; whence. Fr. escampe, a speedy dislodging, a quick retreat, escamp-er, to fly, to retire hastily; E. scamper.

To SCANSE, SKANCE, v. n. 1. To shine; often applied to one who makes a great show. Skancin, shining; also, showy, S.

The cheeks observe, where now cou'd shine

The scansing glories o' carmine!

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 96. This is nearly allied to skoen, pulcher, skoen-a, Germ. schon-en, ornare. The origin is undoubtedly Su.G. skin-a, Germ. schyn-en, lucere, splendere.

Be & Cambre C . . .

2. To make a great blaze on any subject in conversation; to make an ostentatious display, S.B.

3. To embellish, to magnify in narration. When " one is supposed to go beyond the truth, especially in the language of ostentation, it is said, He's skancin, S.B.

This is merely a secondary sense of the same v., q. to cause to shine; exactly corresponding to Su.G. beskoen-a, beskoen-ia, (Germ. beschon-en,) causam suam ornare verbis, Ihre; Beskoenia en sak, to set a gloss upon a thing.

To SCANCE, SKANCE, v. a. 1. To reflect on, to turn over in one's mind, S.

I marvell our records nothing at all Do mention Wallace going into France; How that can be forgote I greatlie scance: For well I know all Gasconie and Guien Do hold that Wallace was a mightie Gian, Even to this day; in Rochel likewise found A towre from Wallace name greatly renown'd. Muse's Threnodie, p. 161.

Perhaps it may here signify, am surprised, am at a loss to account for it.

Full oft this matter did I skance.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii.

Give him your gude advyce, And pance not, nor skance not, The perril nor the pryce.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 97.

The word seems radically allied to Isl. skyn-ia, censeo, agnosco; skyn, ratio, sensus; Su.G. skoenia, intelligere, mentis acie videre; in its literal sense, to see, to behold; skoen, judicium; Dan. skionner, to judge, skionsom, prudent.

2. To reproach; to make taunting or censorious reflections on the character or conduct of others. especially in an oblique manner, S.

But war ye me, your heart wad scance ye, In spite o' Pleasure's necromancy.-

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 182.

Scance, s. 1.3 A hasty survey in the mind; a cursory calculation, S.

I gave it a scance, I run over it hastily; as the word glance is used in E. for the act of the mind.

2. A cursory view of any subject in conversation,

SCANSYTE, part. pa. Having the appearance of, seeming; characterized in any particular

This peess was cryede in August moneth myld; Yhet God of battaill furius and wild, Mars and Juno ay dois thair besynes, Causer of wer, wyrkar of wykitnes; And Venus als the goddess of luff, Wycht ald Saturn his coursis till appruff; Thir iiii, scansyte of diverss complexioun, Battaill, debaite, inwy, and destructionn, I can nocht deyme for thair malancoly.

Wallace, iil. 347. MS. These foure showes of divers complexion. Edit. 1648.

This seems allied to scance, v. to shine; but in sense it most nearly resembles Su.G. skin-a apparere, prae se ferre; Germ. schein-en, manifestare; a secondary sense of the v., as signifying to shine.

SCANT, s. Scarcity. V. SKANT. SCANTLINGS, s. pl. Rafters which support the roof of a to-fall or projection, Ang. Either a peculiar use of E. scantling, because of the comparative smallness of such rafters; or as allied to Teut. schantse, sepimentum muri quod a lapsu tuetur et protegit in muro stantes; Kilian. Scantlins, adv. Scarcely, S.B. Gl. Shirr.

SCAPE, s. A bee-hive. V. SKEPP.

SCAR, SKAIR, SCAUR, s. 1. A bare place on the side of a steep hill, from which the sward has been washed down by rains, so that the red soil appears; "a precipitous bank of earth," Loth. Sibb. writes also skard.

Is it the roar of Teviot's tide, That chafes against the scaur's red side? Is it the wind, that swings the oaks? Is it the echo from the rocks? What may it be, the heavy sound, That moans old Branksome's turrets round?

Lay of the Last Minstrel, C. i. 12. This seems nearly synon. with cleuch, S.B., in one of its senses. 2. A cliff, Ayrs.

Whyles owre a linn the burnie plays, As thro' the glen it wimpl't: Whyles round a rocky scar it strays; Whyles in a wiel it dimpl't.

Burns, iii. 137.

This, I apprehend, is the original sense. Grose defines scarre, A. Bor., "a cliff, or bare rock, on the dry land; from the Saxon carre, cautes. Hence Scar-borough. Pot-scars; pot-sherds, or broken pieces of pots;" Prov. Gl.

This seems to be the same with Su.G. skaer, rupes; from skaer-a, to cut, Alem. scir-an: as its synon., klippa, a rock, is from klipp-a secare. C.B. esgair signifies the ridge of a mountain. V. Schor, adj.

SCARCHT, s. A hermaphrodite, S. Scart.

"In the year preceding, there was a bairn which had both the kinds of male and female, called in our language a scarcht." Pitscottie, p. 65.

E. scrat is mentioned by Skinner, Gen. Etym. But Grose gives it as A, Bor., " used for men and animals;" Prov. Gl.

A.S. scritta, id. This Ihre considers as allied to Isl. skratt, the devil; because a hermaphrodite is tanquam naturae infelix monstrum; vo. Skrutta. But he has not observed that there is another Isl. term which has still greater resemblance; skruede, homo meticulosus, nebulo; G. Andr. p. 214.

SCARF, s. The name given to the corvorant; and also to the shag, Orkney. V. SCARTH.

SCARMUS, s. A skirmish.

" Edward prince of Scotland, eldest son to king Malcolm deceissit, throw and wond that he gatt at ane scarmus nocht far fra Anwik. Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 12.

Fr. escarmouche, Ital. scarramuccia, L.B. scaramutia, scarmutia. As Ital, mucc-ire, as well as Fr. muss-er, signifies to hide, Du Cange thinks that the word is formed from scara and muccia, militaris cohors occultata; observing, that it properly denotes those combats which have their origin from ambuscades. V. SKYRM.

SCARPENIS, s. pl. Thin soled shoes, pumps;

Fr. escarpines.

- Thair dry scarpenis, baythe tryme and meit; Thair mullis glitteran on thair feit.

Maitland Poems, p. 184.

SCARSEMENT, s. The edge of a ditch on which thorns are to be planted, S.

To SCART, v. a. 1. To scratch, to use the nails. S.

Yea, weighty reasons me inclines To think some eminent divines Makes their assertions here to thwart, And one another's cheeks to scart.

Cleland's Poems, p. 89.

"Biting and scarting is Scots folk's wooing;" Ferguson's Prov. p. 9.

"I'll gar you scart where you youk not;" S. Prov. Kelly, p. 397.

2. To scrape, to clean any vessel very nicely with a spoon, S.

" Scart the cogue wad sup mair;" Ramsay's S.

Prov. p. 61.

And syne the fool thing is oblig'd to fast, Or scart anither's leavings at the last.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

3. To gather money in a penurious way, to scrape together money; used rather in a neut. sense.

If loue of money, whence all evill springs, Thee, (prickt with thornie cares) in bondage brings,

Moue thee to scrape, to scart, to pinch, to spare, To rake, to runne, to kill thy selfe with care; Things most secure to doubt, to waite, to watch, Of penny, or of penny-worth to catch Some gnat, by chaunce in spider-web arriv'd, Of bowel-wasting wretched waves contriv'd: Draw neere, heere learne but for the day to care, Uncertaine to suck up to-morrow's ayre.

More's True Crucifixe, p. 191, 192. It seems radically the same with Belg. kratz-en, Dan. kratz-er, id. per metath. Hickes informs us, that the A. Norm. wrote escrat; A. Bor. scraut. SCART, s. 1. A scratch, S.

"They that bourd with cats maun count upo' scarts;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 72.

2. A niggard, S.

This might seem allied to Dan. skort-er, to fail, to come short; Su.G. skard-a, Isl. skierd-a, to diminish. But from the secondary use of the v., as exemplified above, it seems rather from the idea of scraping.

SCART-FREE, adj. Without injury, S. One is said to have come aff scart-free, who has returned safe from a broil, or battle, or any dangerous situation.

All whom the lawyers do advise, Gets not off scart free, but are fain To take some other shift or train.

Cleland's Poems, p. 110.

It seems generally to have been interpreted, free from even a scart or scratch. But I am doubtful whether it be not allied to Isl. skard, Su.G. skaerda, a hurt, injury, or wound; Alem. orskardi, laesio auris, lidscardi, laesio membri. V. HALE-SKARTH. SCART occurs as if an adj.

Riven, raggit ruke, and full of rebaldrie Scart scorpion, scaldit in scurilitie, I se the haltane in thy harlotrie, And into uther science nothing slie.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 51.

He may allude to the puny size of the scorpion, although burning with ill humour. A very small person, especially a puny child, is called a weary scart, S.

SCARTLE, s. An iron instrument, such as scavengers use, for cleaning a stable or cow-house, Tweedd. clatt, synon.

Meg, muckin at Geordie's byre,

Wronght as gin her judgment was wrang; Ilk daud of the scartle struck fire,

While, loud as a lavrock, she sang! Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 156.

From the v., as signifying to scrape. SCART, SKART, SCARTH, SCARF, s. The corvorant, S. Pelecanus carbo, Linn. The Scarth, a fysh-fangar,

And that a perfyte.

Houlate, i. 14. MS.

And in the calm or loune weddir is sene, Aboue the fludis hie, ane fare plane grene, Ane standyng-place, quhar skartis with thare bekkis Forgane the son gladly thaym prunyeis and bekis. Doug. Virgil, 131. 45.

Mergus is the word here used by Virg., which is the name given to the corvorant by Pliny, Lib. x.

"The corvorant, here called the scart, frequents the island in the loch of Chanie." P. Clunie, Perths. Statist. Acc. ix. 235.

"The Shug, (pelecanus graculus, Lin. Syst.), so well known by the name of Scarf, is very frequently seen with us in both fresh and salt water.-The Cormorant, or Corvorant, (pelecanus carbo, Lin. Syst.), our great Scarf, is a species not so numerous as the former, but like it in most respects." Barry's Orkney, p. 300.
"This is called Scart, Frith of Forth." Neill's

Tour, p. 199.

Norw. skarv, Isl. skarf-ur, Germ. scharb, id. Thus it appears that scart is a corruption of the Northern name, which is still retained in Caithness.

"In the summer months, the swarms of scarfs, marrots, faiks, &c. that come to hatch in the rocks of Dungisbay and Stroma, are prodigious." P. Ca.

nisbay, Caithn. Statist. Acc. viii. 159.

Skarv, skarf-ur, and scharb, seem merely abbreviations. For the Sw. name is sioe-korf, and Germ. scharb is given as synon. with see-rabe, i. e. the sea-raven, korf and rabe both signifying corvus. Thus the E. name, properly corvorant, is partially from the same origin with scarf; being comp., as some have supposed, of corv-us, and vorans.

SCAS, s. Small portion?

Vol. II.

Kenely that cruel kenered on hight, And with a scas of care in cautil he strik, And waynes at Schir Wawyn that worthely wight.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 22. Fr. escas signifies the tenth penny of moveables, wherein a foreigner succeeds a freeman: Alem. scaz, a penny; money; substance; originally the same with SCATT.

To SCASHLE, v. a. To use any piece of dress as a thing of no value, to use carelessly, S.B. Isl. skuasl, quisquiliae; or from Skodge, v. q. v.

SCATT, s. The name of a tax paid in Shetland. "The hills and commons are again divided into scattolds, from each of which a certain tax, called scatt, was anciently paid to the Crown of Denmark, when Shetland made a part of the Danish dominions; became payable to the Scottish monarch, when these islands were finally ceded to Scotland; fell at length, by donation from the Crown, to a subject superior, and is at present payable to Sir Thomas Dundas of Kerse, Bart., [now Lord Dundas].—The scatt may amount to 6d. for each merk of land, and is paid chiefly in butter and oil." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 196. N.

Dan. skat, Su.G. Isl. skatt, A.S. sceat, Belg. schot, Mod. Sax. schatten, a tax, E. shot, scot and lot. Ihre expl. the Su.G. term as primarily signifying money. A.S. sceat had the same meaning. In the reign of the Saxon king Ethelbert, it denoted a farthing. The term appears in its oldest form in MoesG. skatts, pecunia. It was also the denomination of one species of coin; Ataugeith mis skatt; Shew me a penny, Luke, xx. 24. Hence skattjanc money-changers, Mar. xi. 15.

SCAUD-MAN'S-HEAD, s. The sea urchin, S. Echinus esculentus, Linn; in Orkney and Shetland called Iregar, a name nearly obsolete.

SCAURIE, SCOREY, s. The young of the herring-gull, Orkney.

"The Brough—is the resort and nursery of hundreds of scauries, or herring-gulls, (larus fuscus). I believe the Orkney name scaurie is applied to this gull only while it is young and speckled; and it loses its speckled appearance after the first year." Neill's Tour, p. 25.

Isl. skioer is given as the name of a bird; pica vel sturnus, G. Andr. p. 213. The bird here referred to is undoubtedly the Sea-pie, or Oyster-catcher, hoematopus ostralegus, Linn., which in Sw. is called Strandskiura, Norw. Strand-skiure. V. Pennant's Zool. p. 482.

SCAWP, s. "A bare dry piece of stony ground;"
Shirr. Gl. V. SCALP.

SCELLERAR, s. One who has the charge of the cellar.

The Goull was a garnitar, The Swerthbak a scellerar, The Scarth a fysh-fangar.

Houlate, i. 14.

L.B. cellarar-ius, cellerar-ius, cellar-ius, cui potus et escae cura est, qui cellae vinariae et escariae præest, promus; Du Cange.

SCHACHT, s.

The yonger wend up-on-land, weil neir Rycht solitair; quhyle under busk and breir, Quhyle in the corn, in uther menys schacht, As outlawis dois that levis on ylin wacht.

Henrysone, Chron. S. P. i. 107.

"' Probably means, ' of others aucht, or property." Ibid. p. 114. N.

Schacht seems indeed to signify property, as referring to land. Fland. schacht lands, a rood of land. V. D'Arsy.

SCHAFTMON, SHAFTMON, SCHATHMONT, s. "A measure of six inches in length; or, as commonly expressed, the fist with the thumb turned up;" Sibb. Gl.

He clef though the cautel, that covered the knight, Though the shinand shelde, a shaftmon, and mare.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 15.

A.S. scaeft-mund, "semipes;—the measure from the top of the thumbe set upright, to the uttermost part of the palme, which is by a tall man's measure half a foot;" Somner. He mentions shaffmet and shaftment as E. words. They are still used, A. Bor. The origin may be scaeft cuspis, and Dan. Sax. mund, manus, q. the point of the hand.

Isl. mun, Su.G. mon, however, signify, summa, quantitas; fotsmon, a foot-breadth, haarsmon, the breadth of a nail. Hence one might almost suppose, that the A.S. word had some affinity, and had originally denoted a measure as long as the head of a spear.

SCHAGHES, s. pl. Groves. V. Schaw.

SCHAIFE, SCHEIF, s. 1. A quiver or bundle of arrows, amounting in number to twenty-four.

"The king commands that ilk man haueand the valour of ane kow in gudes, sall haue ane bow with ane schaife of arrowes, that is, twenty-foure arrowes." 1 Stat. Rob. I. c. 26. s. 4.

The phrase was also used in E., and originated, according to Minsheu, from the circumstance of the arrows being "tied uplike a sheafe of corn." Schilter, however, gives Alem. scaph as equivalent to quiver; Theca, armarium. Fr. Junius in Willeram. p. 220: Hodie, schafft.

2. A certain quantity of iron or steel.

"Ane scheife of irone conteines sexteene gades; ane scheife of stelle conteines fourteene gades." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Schaffa.

SCHAIK, TO-SCHAIK, pret. Shook.

Ouerquhelmyt had Neptunus in his cart,
And all to-schaik the lenys of the treis.

Doug. Virgil, 200. 22. V. To, 2.

To SCHAIP, v. a. V. SCHAPE.

SCHAKERIS, SHAIKERS, s. pl. 1. "Labels, or thin plates of gold, silver, &c. hanging down, bractea, from the E. shake;" Rudd.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 4.

The term seems nearly correspondent to spangles, and may be allied to Teut. schaeckier-en, alternare, variare, because of the change of appearance.

2. The moisture distilling from flowers. - Syluer schakeris gan fra leuys hing,

With crystal sprayngis on the verdure ying. Doug. Virgil, 401. 26.

SCHAKER-STANE, s. The stone-chatter, a bird; now S. stane-chacker, q. v.

The Stainvell and the Schaker-stane, Behind the laue were left alane,

With waiting on thair marrows.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 28. SCHALD, adj. Shallow; shaul, S. schawlde, Wyntown.

Doug. Virgil, 148. 48.

He spyit, and slely gert assay, Quhar the dyk schaldest was.

Barbour, ix. 354. MS.

" Shawl waters make maist din;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 61.

Schald, and E. shallow, as well as shoal, must have all the same origin. This, however, is very obscure. Johnson derives shallow from shoul and low; Speigel, and Seren, from Sw. skallig, calvus, glaber, a term metaph. applied to land that is barren and burnt up; Rudd., with more probability, from A.S. scylf, a shelve.

Schald, Shauld, s. A shallow place.

Now schaw that strenth, now schaw that hie curage,

Quhilk on the schaldis of Affrik in stormes rage Ye dyd exerce .-

Doug. Virgil, 133. 52.

Syrtibus, Virg. V. Schor, adj.

SCHALIM, SHALM, SHALIN, SHAWME, s. According to Rudd., the cornet or crooked trumpet; although he says that Doug, seems to use it simply for tibia, a pipe.

Trumpetts and schalims, with a schout,

Playd or the rink began.

Evergreen, ii. 177. - The Dulsate, and the Dulsacordis, the Schalin of assay .-

Houlate, iii. 10. On Dindyma top go, and walk at hame, Quhare as the quhissil renderis soundis sere, With tympanys, tawbernis, ye war wount to here.

And bois schawmes of torned busch boun tree. Doug. Virgil, 299. 45.

Su.G. skalmeia, Teut. schalmey, Fr. chalemie, a pipe; Belg. schalmey, a hautboy. Some derive the word from Su.G. skall-a, to sound. But it seems rather from Lat. calam-us, a reed, or pipe.

Chaucer uses shalmies, which, according to Tyrwhitt, signifies psalteries.

SCHALK, s. 1. A servant. Out with suerdis thai swang, fra thair schalk side.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 20.

It seems meant for schalkis sides, the sides of their servants or squires; for there is no evidence that schalk was ever used for left, q. left side.

A.S. scalc, Su.G. Isl. skalk, MoesG. skálks, skalkman, Alem. scalch, Germ. Belg. schalck, id. Hence Mareskalk, a marshall, literally, a servant who has the charge of horses; sene-schulck, a steward, from sin, sind, familia, and schulck servus, &c. 2. A knight:

In this sense it is applied to Sir Rigal of Rone, i. e. the river Ronc.

Schaip thé evin to the schalk in thi schroud schene.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 23. compared with st. 22.

As knecht, originally denoting a servant, became a title of honour, we find that schalk, id. underwent a similar change. A knight, indeed, as long as the term retained its military sense, still denoted a servant, as, the Knights of St. John, i. e. the servants consecrated to him. The change was properly with respect to the degree of honour attached to the designation, as arising from the supposed dig-nity of the service. The same observation applies to schalk in its composite state. V. Skallog.

SCHAMON'S DANCE, some particular kind of dance anciently used in S. Blaw up the bagpyp then, -

The schamon's dance I mon begin;

I trow it sall not pane.

Peblis to the Play, Chron. S. P. i. 135. Salmon, Pinkerton; "Probably show-man, shaw man," Sibb. SCHAND, SCHANE, adj. Elegant, beautiful.

V. Scheyne. SCHAND, s. Beauty, elegance.

Than was the schand of his schaip, and his schroud schane,

Off all coloure maist clere, beldit abone.

Houlate, iii. 20. MS.

V. Scheyne. Shand, however, may here signify form, figure; O. Teut. schene, scheene, schema. SCHANK, SHANK, s. 1. The leg; used in a more general sense than E. shank.

Bot his feint schankis gan for eild schaik.

Doug. Virgil, 142. 12.

The term seems to have been formerly used in E. with the same latitude. Hence, the name of Long. shanks given to Edw. I.

2. The trunk of a tree.

The ancient aik tre

Doug. Virgil, 115. 23.

Robur, Virg., as it is used for stipes, ver. 29. With the dynt the master stok schank is smyte.

3. The stalk or stem of an herb, S.

"Scot. The stalk of any herb or plant is called the shank." Rudd.

4. In pl. stockings, Aberd.

The dirtiness of their gowns is ironically represented as meant for a foil to the skin, though often abundantly dun. Clarty expl. the idea conveyed by schant, which is from the same origin with schent, q. v. For Teut. schend-en signifies to pollute. Also, schande maeck-en, vitiare, pollucre.

The term was used in the same sense by O.E. writers.

-" Shifting shavelinges, and nosegay nunnes." Narbonus, Part i. 41.

Sibb. says that schavelingis is expl. vagabonds. He therefore refers to schawaldouris as a synon. term. I need scarcely say, that there is not the slightest connexion. Had he looked into Johns., he would have observed the true sense of it, as used by Spenser.

Su.G. skog, Isl. skog-r, Dan. skow, A.S. scua, Ir. Gael. saeghas, id. The term, as used in Celt., is borrowed, I suspect, from some of the Goth. dialects, (especially as it does not occur in C.B.) in the same manner as Ir. salvaiste, woody, from Lat. sylvest-ris.

2. It seems also used in the sense of shade, covert. The place he tuke, and ful priué vnknaw Liggis at wate vnder the derne wod schaw. Doug. Virgil, 382. 45.

Schaw here must certainly be understood as conveying a different idea from wod, or wood.

Schaw, according to Camden, denotes "many trees near together, or shadow of trees." Remains, Surnames, Lett. S.

This seems indeed to be the primary and proper sense of the word. When applied to trees, the sense is evidently secondary, from A.S. scua, or Su.G.

skugga, a shadow, because of the shelter they afford. V. Skug.

It is evident, at any rate, that it is the same Goth. word which signifies a shadow and a wood. Thus Su.G. skog, sylva, cannot be viewed as radically different from skugga, umbra. Ihre views Gr. 52102, umbra, as the root. V. Skuwes.

" Shavaldres occurs in Knyghton .- Prompt. Parv. expl. it. discursor, vagabundus;" Gl. Wynt. Mr. Macpherson has observed, that schaw and wald both signify wood, forest, &c. " Shields," Gl. But the passage seems to admit of another sense. Scheidis to schew, thay denote the distance of one knight from another; from Germ. scheide, intervallum loci; Su.G. skede, id. It properly denotes a course, and seems to have been applied to the courses made, when the knights attacked each other in combat. This does not signify shepherd, as might seem at first view; for this idea has no connexion with the rest of the stanza. V. Hegeskraper. It might signify shopkeeper, from A.S. seeop, Belg. schap, as mention is made, a little downward, of his buith. I question, however, if shopkeeper was a term then in use. As there is here a description of a penurious wretch who stays at home when bread is to be baked, counts it all caik by caik, and carefully locks it up; scheip-keipar may signify keeper of provisions, from the same origin with Scaff, scaffer, q. v. SCHEL, SHEL, s. "A strumpet," Sibb. Gl.

In the passage referred to, which is rather too coarse for insertion, Lyndsay, with great freedom, warns James V. of the ignominy and evil consequences of his voluptuous life. But Sibb. has evidently mistaken the sense of the word. It is merely a metaph. borrowed from the schelis or sheals in which sheep are sheltered. V. Sheal. He compares the king, in two different stanzas, to a restless ram running from one sheal to another.

SCHELIS, pl. Wynter schelis, Bellend. V. Sheal.

This intelligent writer, in his Note on this Act, inadvertently contradicts the text. For he says; "The famous yew tree of Cruickstone, the inheritance of the family of Darnley in the parish of Paisley, is made the reverse of this new coin."

Belg. schilpad, Teut. schild-padde, testudo; according to Kilian, from its resemblance to a shield. But it seems more natural to think, that it received this name from its being covered with a shell, q. the shell-frog, Su.G. skyllpadda, or as Ihre writes it, skyldpadda, id. Wachter derives schildpadde from schild, not as signifying a shield, but a covering; tectum, operimentum.

Doug. Virgil, 455. 52. As conjoined with tailyeis, this can scarcely signify sides or halves of the animal. Frusta is the word used by Maffei. Caesim in frusta trucidant.

Rudd. derives it from Lat. scidium, Gr. oxidior, from σχιζω, scindo. But whatever relation this word may be supposed radically to have to the Gr., it is immediately allied to A.S. scide, a billet of wood, Lancash. shide; Isl. Su.G. skid, Germ. scheit, lignum fissum, lamina liguea; split-wood.

Ibid. 365. 16.

The s., in its various forms, has evidently originated from the Goth. verbs, signifying to separate, or divide; as Teut. scheyd-en, scheed-en, dividere; Lat. scind-o, scid-i. V. Sched, v. SCHIERE, s.

Of wyt for-thi and gret wertu Sic dowtis and perylys til ethchewe All that Schyltrum thai slw down And sawfyd of Berwyk swa the town.

Wyntown, viii. 11. 35.

According to Mr. Macpherson, this is "a word of which the precise meaning is unknown, if indeed it has not had more meanings than one." Mr. Pinkerton observes, that, "from Hearne's Robert of Gloucester, it appears that a schiltrum is an host ranged in a round form." The Bruce, vol. ii. p. 137. N. It would seem that neither of these gentlemen has observed that the word is immediately derived from A.S. I find it spelled two ways. Sceoltruma, coetus, cohors, turma. According to this orthography, it would appear to be composed of sceol, a multitude, and trum, a troop or band, or trum, firm, secure, fortified, powerful. But this composition of the word indicates nothing as to the form, though it is clear from Barbour's description that this was peculiar; for he describes the vanguard as differently disposed. The true orthography seems to be scyld-truma, which Lye renders, scutum validum, testudo. Thus he has evidently viewed the word as compounded of scyld, a shield, and trum powerful. But perhaps the last word is rather truma q. a troop with shields, or a troop in the form of a shield.

This etymon, as well as the translation of the word by testudo, indicates the form of the Schiltum. I need scarcely say, that properly it must have meant a body of armed men closely joined to each other, and covering their heads with their bucklers, so that the massive weapons of their enemies could not hurt them. In this sense A.S. scyldtruma was certainly used. For Lye quotes a phrase from Aelfric's Gram. which conveys this idea. Under thiccum scyld-truma, subter densa testudine. This term therefore expresses that figure which has been called in Gr. xidon, Lat. testudo, Fr. tortue, E. tortoise, Belg. schild-pad, Germ. schild-krote, a tortoise, schild-duck testudo militaris.

But although this must have been the original meaning, there is no certain evidence that it is used in this sense by Barbour. All that clearly appears, from his description of the battle of Bannockburn, is, that the whole army of the English, except the vanguard, formed one body, instead of being in distinct battalions, like that of the Scots. For having said of the Scots, that they were

In thair bataillis all purwayit
With thair braid baneris all displayit; and that

Thai went all furth in gud aray, And tuk the plane full apertly; he adds, that the English

War nocht arayit on sic maner: For all thair bataillis samyn wer In a schilthrum.

B. xii. 411. 420. 427. &c.

He says, that he knows not whether this was for want of room to extend themselves properly, or from fear. Afterwards he calls this large body a gret scheltrum, v. 443. Wyntown seems to use the term still more generally, as merely denoting a body of armed men, and as equivalent to Hyrsale, q. v. Lye, vo. Hreotha, conjectures, that the military tortoise was also called, by the A. Saxons, Bord-hreotha, and Scyld-hreotha.

The word occurs in Rich. Coeur de Lyon.

Asonder he brake the scheltron.

It is also used by R. Brunne, when describing the Battle of Faukirke [Falkirk], p. 305.

Ther scheltron sone was shad with Inglis that were gode.

Shad signifies, parted, separated. Warton understands scheltron as denoting 's soldiers drawn up in a circle;" Hist. E. P. i. 166. This seems indeed to be the meaning of the term, according to the description given by R. Brunne, p. 304, 305.

Our Inglis men & thei ther togidere mette,
Ther formast conrey, ther bakkis togidere sette,
Ther speres poynt ouer poynt, so sare & so thikke,
& faste togidere joynt, to se it was ferlike.—
Strength suld non haf had, to perte tham thorgh oute,

So wer theiset sad with poyntes rounde aboute. "The Scottes," according to Hollinshed, "were deuided into four schiltrons, as they termed them, or as we may say, round battailes, in forme of a circle, in the whiche stoode theyr people, that caried long staues or speares which they crossed joyntly togither one wythin an other, betwixt which schiltrons or round battails were certain spaces left, the which wer filled wyth theyr archers and bowmen, and behinde all these were theyr horsmen placed." V. Gl. R. Brunne, p. 647.

SCHILL, adj. Shrill, S.

Widequhare with fors so Eolus schoutis schill, In this congelit sesoun scharp and chill.

Doug. Virgil, 201. 35.

This term occurs, although rarely, in O.E. Than blewe the trumpes fulle loud & full schille. R. Brunne, p. 30.

Sibb. oddly refers to Teut. schrey, clamor. It is evidently allied very closely to Alem. scill-en, schellen, skell-en, sonare. Psalterium scillit also ein lira; Psalterium sonat instar lyrae; Notker. Psal. cxli. 1. Din stimma schell in minen oron; Thy voice sounds in my ears; Willeram. cap. ii. 14. ap. Wachter. Sw. skall, skal, sound; Isl. skiall sonorous, skiall hogg, verber sonorum; Germ. schall, schall-en, to sound schellen, tingling; Belg. een schelle stem, a shrill voice. Hence Germ. schelle, a bell; S. skellet, q. v. a sort of rattle; Gael. sgalam, to tinkle, to give a shrill cry, is evidently allied.

Etymologists have offered no rational conjecture as to the origin of E. shrill. It might seem, at first view, from the synon. terms, that its ancient form had been schill. But I am convinced that it is radically different. V. SKIRL, v.

SCHILL, Schil, adj. Chill, S.B. -Full oft in schil wynteris tyde, The gum or glew amyd the woddis wyde, Is wount to schene yallow on the grane new. Doug. Virgil, 170. 10.

Ibid. ix. 12. 98. This title descended at length to ordinary Priests. V. Pope's Knights. Rudd. derives it from Fr. sieur as contracted from seigneur, from Lat. senior. But the etymon given by the learned Hickes is far more probable, from Goth. Sihor, lord. Augustine informs us, that the Gothic Christians, who were captives at Rome, used to say in their own barbarous language, Arme Sihor, i. e. Lord, have mercy. This is from sihor, or sigora, as signifying a victor, one who triumphs; and this from sige victory. Wormius observes, that Sir or Siar was used more anciently than Her, which has the same meaning. We have elsewhere seen, that Isl. saera, sira, is a praenomen expressive of dignity. G. Andr. thinks that it has originated from Heb. אשר, sar, a prince, אשר sur, to have the principality to bear sway; Lex. p. 205.

2. Schir is still used in comp. in the sense of father, S. V. Gudschyr.

SCHIRE, SCHYRE, SHIRE, adj. 1. Clear, bright, E. sheer.

2. Clear, as opposed to what is muddy.

" Clear liquor we call shire," S.B. Gl. Shirr. also improperly applied to what is thin in the texture, as "thin cloth," ibid.

3. Pure, mere, S.

ficer for executing a summons...

"I Gawin Ramsay Messenger, ane of the schireffis in that part within constitute, past at commandment of thir our Soucrane Ladyis letteris, and in hir gracis name and authoritie, warnit the said Matthew Erle of Lennox at his dwelling-places of Glasgow and Dunbertane respective." Buchanan's Detection, F. i. b.

In the Queen's letter, appointing the trial of Bothwell, all the messengers, employed to summon the accuser and witnesses, are called " schireffis in that part conjunctlie and severallie, speciallie constitute." Ibid. E. S. a.

This is evidently an improper, as it is an unusual. sense of the word, instead of maires or schireff's seriands.

SCHLUCHTEN, s. A hollow between two hills. Tweedd.

Su.G. slutt, declivis. En slutte backe, collis declivis; hence, slutt-a to slope, sluttning slope; sluttning af backen, the descent of a hill, Wideg. But it is still more nearly allied to Germ. schluchte, a ravin, or kind of defile.

This, if I mistake not, is universally the reading in MS., where sche occurs in the copies.

It occurs in R. Brunne, p. 95.

This word occurs in the Indicrous account given of Fingal, according to the fabulous legends concerning giants, which have been blended with his history in later times.

To Schoggle, v. a. To shake, S. to joggle, E. Teut, schockel-n and schuckel-n are frequentatives from schock-en and schucken, of the same signification. Schucklend pferd, a horse that shakes the rider much; schauckel, a swing, Wachter. Schonckel-en, and schongel-en, motitari, claim the same origin. To Schoggle, Shogle, v. n. To dangle.

SCHOIR, s. V. Schor, s.

SCHONE, pl. Shoes, S. shoon, Cumb. Syne effyrwart a rade of were He made wyth displayid banere, Qwhare the knychtis, that he had made, Owtwartis to wyn there schone than rade Wyth a rycht sturdy cumpany.

Wyntown, viii. 39. 34.

This phrase of winning shone seems very ancient. As connected with hose, it is often used in old Ballads, with respect to a page, or boy who acts as a servant. It is still vulgarly said of a servant who is a bad worker, that he is not fit to win schone to himself. It seems uncertain whether it originated from the circumstance of stockings and shoes constituting the wages of a boy, as, in many places, a pair of shoes is still one article promised as part of wages; or from the marauding warfare carried on in former times. The language of Wyntown would suggest an idea rather ludicrous, that when Knights were in want of shoes, they were sent to make an inroad in order to carry off cattle, for affording them the necessary supply; as David Bruce is said to employ his knights. The hides might at times be as necessary as the beeves themselves. We certainly know, that the Lady of the Manor used in former times, when her larder was nearly empty, to present a covered dish containing a pair of clean spurs, as a signal to the Laird and his retainers to set off in quest of a supply. V. Minstrelsy of the Border, i. Introd. cviii. But Wyntown most probably uses the phrase, as borrowed from the wages of a hireling, to denote an act of service, and the reward connected with it in the enjoyment of the booty.

"This emprioure causit riche perle and precious stanis to be set in his schone in mair taikin of insolence than ony ornament." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 9.

SCHOR, Schore, Schore, adjabrupt; including the idea of rugged. 1. Steep,

-Twasum samyn mycht nocht rid In sum place off the hillis sid. The nethyr halff wes peralous; For a schor crag, hey and hidwouss, Raucht to the se, down fra the pass.

Barbour, x. 22. MS.

-To the fute sone cummyn ar thai Off the crag; that wes hey and schor.

Ibid. ver. 600. MS.

This is evidently the same with schore, Doug. Virgil, 342. 16.

On cais there stude ane meikle schip that tyde, Hir wail joned til ane schore rolkis syde.

Rudd. views the term as denoting the shore, and the whole phrase as signifying "a rock hard by the shore, or lying flat or low as the shore." But schore undoubtedly corresponds to A.S. scorene; scorene clif, abrupta rupes, a craggy rock or cliff, Somner; from A.S. scyr-an, to separate, Su.G. skoer-a to break; skoer, brittle, easily broken. The Germ. v. schor-en, eminere, is used to denote rocks rising out of the sea. This sense exactly agrees with the phrase used by Virg. Crepidine saxi.

The craig hich, stay and schoir,-Montgomerie, Cherrie and Slae, st. 23.

i. c. high, steep and craggy.

Thus it conveys the idea of a rock that is not only precipitous, but so shattered as to threaten the destruction of those who approach it.

"The enemy, after this long storm, shoring to fall down on Glasgow, turned to Argyle, and went through it all without opposition." Baillie's Lett. ii. 93.

This word is still used in Loth., Clydes., and in the South. It is said of a day that looks very gloomy, that it shores rain.

It is possible that schorand heuchis (V. Schor, v.) may be merely threatening cliffs, the term being used metaph. V. the s.

Sibb. derives the v. from Sw. skorr-a, reprehendere. But it is not used in this sense. It merely signifies, to grate, to make a harsh noise. It may be allied to Su.G. skur-a, primarily to scowr, to clean; in a secondary sense, to chide; skur, reprehension; taga en i skur, to quarrel one; Mod. Sax. schur-en, id. Eenen to degen schuren, to chide one severely. Dan. skurren, discord. In a similar sense it is vulgarly said, S. I gaif him a skour, I scolded him severely. Lat. scurra, a low jest, might thus be viewed as a cognate.

But I am much inclined to think, that this v. has been originally used in relation to objects which, from their external position, threatened to fall. Thus a crag, broken off from, or slightly attached to, a ridge of rocks, might be said, in an oblique sense, to schore a person sitting or passing under it, because being a schor rock, or broken off from the mass, it was likely to tumble down, and thus threatened destruction to passengers. V. Schor, adj. and Scar.

Schoir is used by Dunbar, in one place, where it cannot bear this sense.

Quhan that the nycht dois lenthin houris, With wind, with haill, and havy schouris, My dulé spreit dois lurk for schoir, My hairt for langour dois foirloir.

Maitland Poems, p. 125.

Mr. Pinkerton seems to view it as here meaning terror. Perhaps it may signify grief, vexation, from Germ. schur, id. Or it may mean, lurks for protection, from Fr. essor-er, to shroud one's self from wet, to shun approaching or threatening storms; Cotgr. SCHORE, s.

Stand at defence, and schrink not for ane schore: Think on the haly marthyris that are went.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 356. 13.

Junius renders this pugna, Etym. But Rudd. considers it as simply signifying a shower of rain. It appears that this, metaph. used, was a proverbial phrase in former times.

Thocht all beginnings be maist hard, The end is plesand afterward; Then schrink not for a schoure.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 37.

The sense given by Rudd. is confirmed by the language of the Scottish Translator of this Poem, who wrote so early as 1631, and must have known the use of many words and phrases now unintelligible, or very obscure. He renders it,

——Tenui veniente procella

Illico non paveas.

Cerasum et Silvestre Pomum, p. 19. 20. SCHORE CHIFTANE.

This seems to signify high chieftain; Germ. schor altus, eminens.

To SCHORT, v. n. To grow short, to decrease, to contract.

Yit quhan the nycht begynnis to schort, It dois my spreit sum pairt confort.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 127. Su.G. Isl. skort-a, deesse, to be deficient; A.S. se-scort-en, Germ. Belg. schort-en, id. Mr. Tooke expl. E. short, q. shored, shor'd, as literally signifying, cut off, from A.S. scir-un, to shear, to cut, to divide; as "opposed to long, which means extended, long being also a past participle of leng-ian, to extend, or to stretch out." Divers. Purley, ii. 172.

Ihre views A.S. sceort, brevis, or Lat. curt-us, as the origin. That the letter s was prefixed appears probable from Su.G. kort, which has a more simple form, being used in the same sense.

To Schout, v. a. 1. To curtail.

She was tyred with his speeches.—
But he some patience extorted,
By promissing that he should short it.

Cleland's Poems, p. 32.

Scort is used in O.E. as a v. a., in the sense of shorten.

3. To recreate or amuse one's self; with the pron. prefixed or subjoined, S.

The clerk rejosyis his bukis ouer to seyne, The luffare to behald his lady gay, Young folke thame schortis with gam, solace

Ibid. 187. 29.

Yit fure I furth, lansing ouirthort the landis Towart the sey, to schort me on the sandis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 226.

This is evidently a metaph. use of the v. as signifying to abbreviate. The same transition may be remarked in the formation of Isl. skemt-a, tempus delectamentis fallo, skemtum, temporis quasi decurtatio; from skam short, G. Andr. V. Ihre. Teetscherts-en, Germ. scherz-en, Belg. scherss-en, jocari, nugari, ludere, have a great resemblance. But the analogy between these, and the terms signifying to shorten, is lost, if the assertion of Wachter be well-founded, that the primary sense of scherz-en is ludere, salire, lascivire. He derives it from Gr. oxigt-aa, id. Ital. scherz-are, to joke, is evidently from the same origin, whatever this may be.

There is na sege for na schame that schrynkis at schorte

Schorte.

May he cum to hys cast be clokyng but coist, He rekkys nowthir the richt, nor rekles report. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, a. 25. At schorte seems here to signify, at a taunt or derision; whether as allied to Teut. scherts, jocus, I shall not pretend to determine.

Elsewhere at schort signifies quickly.

Doug. Virgil, 275. 4.

This is expl. by Rudd., "the shutter of a window."

"There was on a scaffold opposite the cross,—read by Mr. Archibald Johnston, a protestation, avowed by Cassils, &c.—Some out of shots [small round or oval windows] cried rebels, on the readers." Baillie's Lett. i. 68. 69.

The words in brackets have evidently been inserted by the editor. But he seems to have mistaken the sense. Wodrow explains it otherwise.

"Her house was upon the East side of the Saltmarket [Glasgow], towards the foot of it, in a timber fore-land, with windows called shots, or shutters of timber, and a few inches of glass above them." Hist. ii. 286.

Chaucer also uses the term.

And forth he goth, jolif and amorous, Til he came to the carpenteres hous, A litel after the cockes had ycrow, And dressed him up by a shot window.

Milleres T. ver. 3358.

"A schot window," according to Mr. Tooke, "means a projected window, thrown out beyond the rest of the front: what we now call a Bow window." Divers. Purley, ii. 132. He derives it from A.S. scit-an, projicere.

SCHOURÉ, s. A part, a division; applied to Quhen thay had sangin, and said, softly a schoure:

Houlate, iii. 11.

Teut. scheur, shore, ruptura; scheur-en to divide, A.S. scyr-an, id. scyr-maelum, divisis partibus. This term seems to have been anciently used in the same sense with O.E. fitt. By the way, the latter may have been adopted to denote a division, as being originally put at the end of a song or poem by the author, in the same manner as explicit. Thus Fit might simply signify, "It is done. This is the end of the work, or part."

SCHOURIS, Schowris, s. pl. Sorrows, afflictions; throes, agonies.

"Swed. sorg, Goth. saurg, aerumna, dolor;

Teut. sorghe, cura," Sibb.

The pangs of childbirth are still called schours, S. That this is from the same root with sorrow, is probable, not only from the use of the latter term in the same sense E., but because the word rendered sorrow, in relation to childbirth, Joh. xvi. 21., is saurga in the version of Ulphilas. Schour, however, might be traced to Germ. schaur-en tremere, schaur tremor.

Schoures is used by R. Brunne in a metaph. sense, for contentions, broils.

Ther after ros hard schoures in Scotland of the clergie,

In the Fr. original, dolours is the term used.

To SCHOW, v. a. 1. To drive backward or forward, to shove, E.

To schowin is used Doug. Virgil, 134. 32., but whether in the infin. or part. pa. is doubtful.

-----And with lang bolmes of tree Pykit with irn, and scharp roddis, he and he, Inforsis oft to schowin the schip to saif.

2. It is also used as a v. n. signifying to glide or fall down.

Thry is schowing down on the erd sche fell.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 33.

"Conarus—gaue braid landis to maist vile and diffamit creaturis, becaus thay louit his corruppit maneris & vice; and be counsall of thir wickit schrewis he gouernit his realme." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 6.

Thai wicked schrowis

Has laid the plowis; That nane, or few, is That ar left ocht.

Maitland Poems, p. 332.

By O.E. writers, as well as by our own, this word was used in a worse sense than in our times. As it now denotes a clamorous woman, a vixen, it has been deduced from be-schrey-en, to make a noise. But this derivation supposes that to be the primary, which we know is only a secondary, sense. We must therefore seek an origin that suggests the worst idea which has been affixed to the word. Seren. derives shrew from Isl. shraveifa [skraveifa,] mulier cyclopica, from skra horrendum quid, and veif mulier. Skinner derives it from Germ. be-schrey-en, incantare, fascinare, ut beshrew you, malum te fascinum corripiat; may you be subjected to the evil effects of witchcraft. Mr. Tooke views it as originating from A.S. syrw-an, syrew-an, to vex, to molest, to cause mischief to. But the v. used in this sense, as far as I can observe, always assumes a different form. It is sorg-ian, sorhg-ian. That written syrw-an, syrew-ian, invariably signifies moliri; insidiari, machinari, conterere; be-syrw-an, "to lay in wait, to deceive, to beguile;" Somner. Syrwa, insidiae. Thus, schrew might originally denote a deceitful person, who still endeavours to deceive others. Schrewit may with propriety be viewed as the part. past, syrwde, insidiatus, or imperf. insidiabatur. The term shrewd, in its modern acceptation, seems to allude to this original signification.

Tyrwhitt renders it, as used by Chaucer, "an ill-tempered curst man or woman." But Chaucer employs the term in a worse sense than what is merely applicable to the temper.

44 The juge that dredeth to do right, maketh men shrewes;" i. e. wicked men.

Applying the words of the apostle Paul, concerning magistrates as bearing the sword, he says;

"They beren it to punish the shrewes and misdoers, and for to defende the goode men." Tale of Melibeus, p. 285. Ed. Tyrwhitt.

My schroud and my schene were schyre to be Houlate, iii. 22, schawin.

A.S. scrud, garments, apparel; Dan. skraut, Su.G. skrud, from A.S. scryd-an, Isl. skryd-a, amicire, vestire. Verelius gives, as the origin, Isl. skraut, pomp, elegance; as skrud always denotes elegant dress, or that used on occasions of ceremony. Hence E. shroud, our last dress, a winding sheet. V. Schurde.

A.S. sceor-ian, tonderc.

This, however, is a term used in E. V. Cowel, vo. Shorling.

To SCHUTE, v. a. To push. Su.G. skiut-a, Teut. schutten, propellere.

This v., as conjoined with the prep. by, or about, signifies;

1. To put off, to delay, S.

And gin ye wad but shoot it by a while. I ken a thing that wad your fears beguile. Ross's Helenore, p. 20.

Su.G. skiut-a is used in the same sense, only with a different prep. Skiuta upp, differre.

2. To pass any particular time that is attended with difficulty. One who has many bills to pay at a certain period, says; I wish I could get such a time shot by, S. To shute about, id.

3. To schute about, a vulgar phrase used to denote that one is in ordinary health; nearly corresponding to Fr. se passer, to make shift, S.

4. In a passive sense, one is said to be no ill to shoot by, or easily shot about, when he can satisfy himself with a slight or homely meal, when he is not hard to be pleased as to victuals, S.

"Oppressed with care or grief-sonyied, cared. Fr. soign-er. Or it may be shun, decline the battle. R. Brunne has schonne." Gl. Wynt.

It seems to be from the same root with E. shun, although different in meaning. A.S. scun-ian signifies not only to avoid, but to fear; timere, revereri, Lye. Thus it is equivalent to S. tak fricht.

SCLADYNE, s. A chalcedony.

L.B. sclata, assula; which Du Cange views as probably formed from Fr. esclat, a splinter of wood; also a shingle. E. slate has been derived from MoesG. slaihts planus, Su.G. slact laevigatus; as having a plain surface. V. Seren.

To SCLANDER, SKLANDER, v. a. To slander, S.B.

"Whosoever sclanders us, as that we affirme or beleve sacraments to be naked and bair signes, do injurie unto us, and speaks against the manifest trueth." Scots Confession, Collect. of Confess. ii. 83. 84.

"Scumfish'd, smothered, suffocated; North." Gl. Grose.

It may perhaps be radically allied to Isl. kafn-a. Su.G. kufw-a, qwafw-a, to suffocate, Isl. kof, suffocation; s being prefixed, which is very common in the Goth. languages, and m inserted.

But, perhaps, it is merely an oblique sense of the ancient word signifying to discomfit, (V. Scum-

"To scone, to beat a child's buttocks with the palms of the hand;" Rudd.; vo. Skonnys.

Isl. skeyn-a, skoyn-a, Su.G. sken-a, leviter vulnerare. Some derive this from skan cutis; others, from ska, accidere; Gl. Kristn. and Landnamabok. Ihre refers to A.S. scaen an frangere. He also observes, that Su.G. skena denotes a wound caused by striking, as distinguished from saar, which signifies one produced by a sharp weapon. SCOPIN, s.

Thai twa, out of ane scopin stowp, Thai drank thre quartis soup and soup. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 114.

This phrase might, at first view, seem to signify, as Mr. Pinkerton conjectures, a chopin stoop, or vessel containing two English pints. But it is probable that the term means drinking, from the v. Scoup, q. v.

SCOREY, s. The Brown and White Gull, Orkn. "The Brown and White Gull (Larus naevius, Linn. Syst.) which the people here call the Scorey, is much more rarely met with than most others." Barry's Orkney, p. 303.

The lasses are lonely, dowie, and wae. Flowers of the Forest, Ritson's S. Songs, i. 3.

This seems merely an oblique sense of the E. v., from Teut. schern-en, ludere, illudere; which Lye derives from A.S. scearn fimus. But, according to Cotgr., Fr. escorn-er signifies, to deprive of horns; hence, to disgrace.

To SCORP, SCROP, SKARP, SKRAP, SKRIP, SCRIP, v. n. To mock, to deride, to gibe.

"The Cardinall skrippit, and said, It is bot the Ysland flote; they ar come to mak us a schow, and to put us in feir." Ibid. p. 41.

Scrape is still used in Fife, and perhaps elsewhere, as a v. denoting the expression of scorn or disdain.

I know not if the term be allied to Isl. skrijpe, obscaenum quid ac tetrum; or Su.G. skrapp-a, jactare se, which is derived from skraf-a nugari, skraf nugae, Isl. ord-skraepi, a perverse and prattling woman. Kilian, however, mentions schrobb-en as synon. with schobb-en, convitiari, cavillari, a secondary sense of the v., as signifying to scrape or scrubb. V. Scribat.

SCOTTE-WATRE, SCOTTIS-WATTRE, a name given by the Saxons to the Frith of Forth.

"Illa aqua optima—Scottice vocata est Forth, Britannice Werid, Romane (lingua vulgari) vero Scotte-wattre, i. e. aqua Scottorum, quae regna Scottorum et Anglorum dividit, et currit juxta oppidum de Strivelin." De Situ Albaniae, ap. Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Norman. p. 136.

"Goodall—[Introd. ad Fordun.] has shewn that Usher, Carte, Innes, and others, have fallen into gross errors, by mistaking Scottiswath for Scottiswatre. The former, as Fordun undesignedly tells us in two places, is Solway frith; the later is perfectly known to be the frith of Forth. Indeed wathe, or wade, implies a ford; while watre means a small sea, or limb of the sea." Pinkerton's Enquiry, ii. 207.

Vol. II.

SCOTTIS SE, the Scottish sea, or Frith of Forth. Towart Anguss syne gan he far, And thought sone to mak all fre That wes on the north half the Scottis Se. Barbour, ix. 309. MS.

Than all thame gaddryd he, That on sowth halfe the Scottis Se He mycht purches of armyd men.

Wyntown, viii. 31. 6.

"The haill thre Estatis hes ordanit, that the Justicis on the south syde of the Scottis' see set thair Justice airis, and hald thame twyis in the yeir, and alswa on the north syde of the Scottis see, as auld vse and custume is." Acts Ja. II. 1440. c. 5. Ed. 1566.

This phrase, I suppose, must have been used by A.S. writers. For what is rendered in the A.S. translation of Orosius, Scottisc sae, is expl. by Lye, Scotticum mare sive fretum. Lye, most probably finding the Frith of Forth thus designed by A.S. writers, understood this as meant; or perhaps Alfred, the A.S. translator, had the same idea, from the use of the expression in his time. It does not appear, however, that this was the meaning of Orosius; for, in the original, he calls it, Mare Scythicum, probably referring to what is now called the German Ocean, and describes it as, a septentrione. so that it would seem that it is the same sea which he mentions frequently after, under the name of Oceanus septentrionalis.

The Frith of Forth is called the Scottish Sea, Acts Malc. II. c. 8. The country " on the north side of the Scottes sea," is distinguished from that " beyond the Scottes sea, as in Lowthian, and these partes betwix the water of Forth and Tine." As Mr. Pinkerton observes, that part of Scotland south of Clyde and Forth was not accounted to be in Scotland proper, till a late period, but only belonging to it.

The reason of Forth having been called the Scottish sea, seems to be, that the Angli of Northumberland held all the south east part of Scotland, from the Forth to the Tweed, for about a century before the year 685. From this date it belonged to the Picts; and even after the union of the Scottish and Pictish kingdoms, the old distinction remained. V. Pinkerton's Enquiry, ii. 205. &c.

Bocce gives a later origin to this designation; for, according to him, it had its rise from the conquest of the southern parts of Scotland, by the Saxons, about the year 859, after the death of Kenneth Mac-Alpine. He gives the following as one of the articles of the humiliating peace granted to the Scots. "The watter of Forth sall be marche betwix Scot. tis & Inglis men in the eist partis, & it sall be namyt ay fra thyne furth, the Scottis see." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 13.

This designation is used by John Hardyng, On the morowe, Sir Robert Erle Umfreuile Of Angeou then the regent was by north The Scottis sea; and Aymer Walence the while Erle of Pembroke, by south the water of Forth Wardeyn was of Scotland forsoth, That day faught with Kyng Robert Bruys, Besyde Jhonstonne, where he fled without res. Chron. Fol. 168. b. cowes.

Angeou is here, by mistake of the transcriber or printer, put for Angos, of which Umfreuile is called erle, Fol. 167, a. This is the same Umfreuile to whom Hardyng ascribes the defeat and capture of William Wallace. V. Gossep.

To SCOUP, or SKOUP AFF, v. a. To quaff, to drink off, S.B.

O.Teut. schoep-en, Germ. schopf-en, to drink. Wachter thinks that the origin may be Franc. schaff, a hollow vessel; or perhaps Heb. scaabh, hausit. Su.G. scopa, a vessel for drawing water, a bucket, or scoop, and Belg. schoep, id. are evidently allied. V. Scopin.

Sibb. views this as the same with E. scope. But Sibb. views this as the same with E. scope. But perhaps it is rather from the same fountain with the v. scoup, q. room to run about.

Scoup, however, is used by Doug. in a sense not easily intelligible.

Decrepitus (his baner schane nocht cleir)
Was at the hand, with mony chiftanis sture.—
Bot smirk or smyle, bot rather for to smure,
Bot scoup, or skist, his craft is all to scayth.

King Hart, ii. 54.

The uncertainty of the meaning of skist leaves the other term in a similar state. O. Fland. schoppe signifies sport. This would correspond with smirk or smyle, and form a contrast with scayth. But there is reason to suspect that skist has been originally skift, a word still commonly used, S.B. Thus the phrase might signify, that without any particular scope or aim, and also without facility of operation, his whole craft lies in doing harm. To SCOUP, Scowp, v. n. To run with violence, to spring, to skip; "to leap or move hastily from one place to another;" Shirr. Gl. S.B.

So lichtly thay did loup.

Ibid. p. 20. V. Dander, v.

Teut. schop-en, incedere cum impetu, IsI. skop-ædiscurrere. Perhaps MoesG. skev-jan ire, is radically connected. Here undoubtedly we have the origin of E. skip, and not in Ital. squitt-ire, as Johnson strangely imagines.

Scoup-hole, s. A subterfuge. Neither's this scoup-hole with [worth] a flee, Or sixteenth part of a Kildee.

Cleland's Poems, p. 86.

Apparently from Scoup, to run; q. a hole for running out by. I know not the meaning of kildee. As this work is very incorrectly printed, it may be an error of the press.

SCOUPPAR, SKOUPER, s. 1. A dancer, q. a "Vertew—in that court was hated, and filthines not onlie menteined, bot also rewarded; witnes the Lordschip of Abircorne, the barony of Achermoutie, [q. Auchtermoutie?] and dyvers uthers perteyning to the patrimony of the Croun, gevin in inheritance to Scoupperis, Daunsers, and Dalliars with Dames." Knox's Hist. p. 345. Skippers, Lond. Edit. p. 374.

2. A light unsettled person. This, at least, seems the signification in the following passage.

Land-louper, light skouper, ragged rouper, like a raven.

Polw. and Montgom. Watson's Coll. iii. 30.

SCOUR, s. A name given to the diarrhoea in cattle, S. V. LASK.

To SCOUR OUT, v. a. To drink off, S. An' ilka blade had fill'd his wame, Wi' monie scour'd-out glasses.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 158.

This is perhaps merely a metaph. use of the E. v. Isl. skyr, however, signifies, sorbillum.

To SCOURGE the ground, or land, to exhaust the strength of the soil, S.

"The principal crops consist of oats, barley, and rye. The last has, of late years, been in no high estimation, from the effect it has in scourging the ground." P. Cromdale, Moray, Statist. Acc. viii. 255.

To SCOUT, v. a. To pour forth any liquid substance forcibly, S.

An' gut an' ga' he scoutit.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 155.

It is also used in a n. sense; to fly off quickly, most commonly applied to liquids.

But as he down upon her louted, Wi' arm raxt out, awa' she scouted.

Ibid. ii. 103.

Su.G. skiut-a jaculare.

SCOUTH, Scowth, s. 1. Room, liberty to range, S. scoup, synon.

"The Doctor, contrair to the opinion of Bedewill have the wall to be built by Severus in stone, and that the last reparation in stone by the Romans, was upon Severus his wall in Northumberland, that the Scots and Picts might have the greater scouth, and so not molest the Brittons, when the Romans had deserted them." Sir James Dalrymple's Collections, p. 19.

2. Freedom to converse without interruption, opportunity for unrestrained communication, S. For when love dwells betweesh twa lovers leel, Nor good nor ill from ither they conceal:

Whate'er betides them, it relieves their heart, When they get scouth their dolor to impart.

Ross's Helenore, p. 18.

3. " Room;" Gl.

An' as we're cousins, there's nae scouth
To be in ony swidders;
I only seek fat is my due,
I mean fat was my brither's.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 4.

4. Abundance; as scouth of silver, abundance of money, scouth of meat, &c.

As Su.G. skott not only signifies cess, public money, but sometimes food; it may have been transferred to denote abundance.

SCOUTHER, s. A flying shower, Loth. synon. skrow, S.B.

SCOUTI-AULIN, s. The Arctic Gull, Orkn. "Arctic Gull, Larus parasiticus. This bird is sometimes simply called the Allan; sometimes the Dirten-allan; and it is also named the Badoch.—They pursue and harass all the small gulls till these disgorge or vomit; they then dexterously catch what is dropped, ere it reach the water. The common names are derived from the vulgar opinion that the small gulls are muting, when they are only disgorging fish newly caught." Neill's Tour, p. 201. V. Skaitbird.

To SCOWDER, SKOLDIR, v. a. To scorch, to burn slightly, S. pron. scowther. A scowthert bannock, a scorched cake.

Fy, skowdert skin, thou art but skyre and skrumple.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54.
Thy skoldirt skin, hewd lyke a saffron bag,
Gars men dispyt thair flesch, thou spreit of Gy.
Ibid. p. 56. V. Ewder, s. 2.

Sibb., with considerable appearance of probability, derives it from Teut. schoude, a chimney, schouden, to warm. But the Teut. v. properly signifies, to warm liquids. It is given by Kilian, as a cognate of Fr. eschauder, Ital. scald-are, whence E. scald, S. scaud. All these terms are also restricted to liquids in a heated state, in which sense scowder is never used. Its origin undoubtedly is Isl. swid-a, Dan. swid-er, Su.G. swed-a, swed-ia, id. adurere, leni igne perstringere. Ital. scott-are, to burn, to scald, is most probably from the same source. Ihre views swi as denoting heat in the ancient Goth.; whence, he says, Isl. swi, aeris mitigatio, swiar til, aura incalescit. A. Bor. scowder'd, overheated with working, (Gl. Grose), has evidently a common origin.

The custom of singing the head and feet of an animal for food has prevailed with the Goths, as well as in S. G. Andr. gives this account of the use of the term swid. "Adusta vel ambusta frusta, veluti culinarii rustici solent caput et pedes pecorum depilare adustione signis, caput pedesque swid vocare solent." Lex. p. 231. i. e. scowdert, S. It seems questionable, if this custom was known in England, as the sage monarch James VI., after his accession, found, to his great mortification, that none of his cooks could grace his table with a black sheep's head, till one of his majesty's countrymen taught them the method of singing it.

Scowder, s. A hasty toasting, so as slightly to burn what is thus prepared, S.

Isl. swide, adustio; swida, ambustio, inflammatio. SCOWMAR, s. A scowmar of the se, a pirate, a corsair.

Thai had bene in gret perell ther; Ne war [a] scowmar of the se, Thomas of Downe hattyn wes he, Hard that the ost sa straytly than Wes stad; and salyt wp the Ban, Quhill he come wele ner quhar thai lay.

Barbour, xiv. 375. MS.

Belg. zee-schuymer, a sea-rover; Fr. escumeur de mer, id. from escumer, to skim, whence the phrase, escumer des mers, to scour or infest the seas.

In the laws of the Lombards, and writings of the middle age, robbers are often denominated Scamari, scamares, Scamatores; whence Fr. escamott-er, to steal. Ipse quantocius Istri fluenta praetermeans latrones properanter insequitur, quos vulgus Scamares appellabat. Eugippius, in Vita S. Severinicap. 10. Et plerisque ab actoribus, Scamarisque et latronibus undique collectis, &c. Jornandes de Reb. Getic. c. 58. V. Du Cange. These terms Ihre views as from the same origin with Su.G. skam, diabolus, cacodaemon, Isl. skiaeman, malefactor. I suspect, however, that scommar, although nearly allied in sense, has no etymological affinity.

SCOWRY, adj. Showery; denoting weather in which intermitting showers are accompanied by blasts of wind, S. A scowry day, one of this description.

May Scotia's simmers ay look gay and green, Her yellow har'st frae scowry blasts decreed! Fergusson's Poems, ii. 59.

MoesG. skura windis, a great storm of wind; Mar. iv. 37. Hence A.S. scur, imber. SCOWRY, Scourle, adj. 1. Shabby in exter-SCOWRY, Scourie, adj. 1. Shabby in external appearance; thread-bare, as applied to clothes; a scoury hat, S.

The Tod was nowthir lein nor scowry, He was a lusty reid-haird Lowry, Ane lang tail'd beist and grit withall.

Dunbar, Evergreen, i. 201. 2. Mean in conduct; used especially in the sense of niggardly, S.O.

3. "Having an appearance as if dried or parched;

also wasted;" Gl. Sibb. In this sense it is sometimes applied to ground.

Sibb. derives it from scowder. But it is undoubtedly nothing but a corruption of E. scurvy, which is commonly used in sense 2.

Scowrie, s. A scurvy fellow, S.O. Young Willie Pitt, o' ready wit,
Did lay this plot for Lowrie;
For a' his grace, and honest face,
Fox thought him but a scowrie.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 208. Z z 2 SCRAB, s. 1. A crab, Pomum sylvestre; pl. scrubbis.

Syne brade trunscheouris did thay fill and charge With wilde scrabbis and vthir frutis large Betid.————

Doug. Virgil, 208. 44.

Skinner derives E. crab from Belg. schrabb-en, mordicare, because of its acid and harsh taste.

2. In pl. "stumps of heath or roots," S.B. Gl. Ross.

A hail hauf mile she had at least to gang, Thro' birns and pikes and scrabs, and heather lang.

Ross's: Helenore, p. 26.

Scrubbe occurs in the same sense; although metaph, used.

"What was hee but a knottie, barren, rotten scrubbe, marring the ground?" Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1200.

A.S. scrob, scrobb, Belg. skrobbe, frutex. SCRABER, s. The Greenland dove, Colymbus

Grille, Linn., in Orkn. called Tyste.

"The Scraber, so called in St. Kilda, in the Farn Islands Puffinet, in Holland the Greenland Dove, has a small bill sharp pointed, a little crooked at the end, and prominent." Martin's St. Kilda, p. 32.

To SCRALL, v. n. To crawl.

This Moses made the froggs in millions creep, From floods and ponds, and scrall from ditches deep.

Hudson's Judith, p. 19. Formed from E. crawl, or, Su.G. kraell-a, by prefixing s. V. the letter S.

To SCRAPE, v. n. To express scorn or disdain, Fife. V. Scorp.

SCRAPIE, s. A mean niggardly person, a miser; from the idea of his scraping money together, S.

To SCREED, SKREED, v. a. 1. To rend, to tear, S.

A ruther raise, tweesh riving hair,

Screeding of kurches, crying dool and care.

Ross's Helenore, p. 23.

2. Used in a moral sense, with respect to defamation.

—Some their neighbours names are screeding.

Morison's Poems, p. 81.

According to Sibb., from Teut. schrooden mutilare, decurtare, praesecare; schroode, segmen. As the term seems necessarily to imply the idea of the sound made in the act of tearing any thing, I suspect that it should be traced to Isl. skrida rupium fissarum lapsus et ruina. Thus sknaeskrida denotes the fall of snow in a conglomerated state from the mountains; Conglobatae nivis ex montibus lapsus; Verel. He mentions, as a cognate, MoesG. disskreit-an, scindere, disscindere. It is used in the very same sense with our skreid. The high priest, disskreitands wastjos seinos; rending his clothes; Mark xiv. 63. Faurhah alhs disskritnoda in twa, gah stainos disskritnodedun; The veil of the temple was rent in twain, and the rocks rent; Matt. xxvii. 51.

Teut. schrood-en may be traced to the same fountain; as well as Germ. schrot-en, to divide, says Wachter, in whatever way this is done, by breaking, cutting, mutilating, &c. Also A.S. scread-an, be-scread-an, disscindere, screadung resectio, screadungus frusta, also screade, whence E. shred; corresponding to Isl. skurd-ur sectio, our skreid of cloth. Su.G. skraed-a secare. This term has probably given origin to Gael. scread, a cry, shout; screadan, the noise of any thing rending. V. the s. Screed, Skreed, s. 1. The act of rending or tearing; a rent, S.

2. The sound made in rending, S.

3. Any loud shrill sound, S.

Their cudgels brandish'd 'boon their heads,—
Their horns emittin martial screeds.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 12.
The ice gae a great screed; a phrase used to denote the noise made by the cracking of ice, exactly analogous to Isl. snaeskrida mentioned above.

4. The thing that is rent or torn off; as a screed of cloth, S. Ihre mentions this as A. Bor. vo. skraeda. V. the v.

With respect to immorality in general.
 Ye, for my sake, hae gi'en the feck
 Of a' the ten commands

A screed some day.

To Screed Aff, v. a. To do any thing quickly,

S.

On the fourth of June,
Our bells screed aff a loyal tune.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 14. SCREG, s. A cant term for a shoe, S.

It has been deduced from Gael. scraw, covering, crust.

To SCREIGH, SKREIGH, v. n. To shrick, S. "It is time enough to skreigh, when ye're strucken;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 47.

Su.G. skrik-a, vociferari, Isl. skraek-a, Dan. skryg-er. Ihre gives the Su.G. v. as a frequentative from skri-a, id. V. Skry.

SCREIK, SCRYKE, s. Shriek, howling, S.B. skreik.

The young children and frayit matronis eik Stude all in raw, with mony pietuous screik, About the tressour quhymperand wourdis sare. Doug. Virgil, 64. 20.

And oft with wylde scryke the nycht oule Hie on the rufe allane was hard youle. Ibid. 116. 9. V. the v.

SCRENOCH, s. A noise made about any trifling matter, Banffs. V. Scroinoch.

SCRY, s. Noise, clamour. V. SKRY.

SCRIBAT, pret. v. Jeered, taunted, made game.

Methocht his wit wes quyt went away with the laif:

And so I did him dispys, I scribat quhen I saw

That superexpendit ewil of speche, spulyeit of all vertew.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 59. This is evidently the same v. with Scorp, q. v.

In Edit. 1508, however, spittit is used instead of scribat.

To SCRIBBLE, SCRABBLE, v. a. To tease wool, S.

"They have erected a teasing or scribbling, and a carding machine, which are driven by a small stream of water." P. Twyneholm, Kirkcudbr. Statist. Acc. xv. 80.

Belg. schravel-en, to scrape; Teut. schraeffel-en, corradere, verrere, apparently from Teut. schrabb-en, to scrub.

SCRIDDAN, s. A mountain torrent, Ross.

"The farms which are bases to high mountains, as in Kintail, suffer great losses from what is called scriddan, or "mountain torrent."—The farm of Auchuirn, in Glenelchaig, once a populous town, was, in 1745, rendered uninhabitable, and is since converted to a grazing, by an awful Scriddan." P. Kintail, Statist. Acc. vi. 249.

Perhaps from Gael. screadan, the noise of any thing rending; Shaw. V., however, Screen, v. and s. To SCRIEVE, v. a. To scratch; to scrape, to peel; Ang. Flandr. schraeff-en radere.

Scrieve, s. A large scratch, Ang.

To SCRIEVE, SKRIEVE, v. n. To move or glide swiftly along.

Scho thro' the whins, an' by the cairn, An' owre the hill gaed scrievin.

Burns, iii. 136.

But, oil'd by thee,
The wheels o' life gae down-hill scrievin,
Wi' rattlin glee.

Ibid. p. 13.

It is used metaph. in the same sense, S. Expl. " glesomely swiftly." Gl Expl. "gleesomely, swiftly," Gl. Sibb. refers to Su.G. skrid-a leni motu provehi. But I would prefer Isl. skref-a gradi, whence skref, gressus, passus; or skrepp-a lubrice dilabor, G. Andr. p. 215.

SCRIEVE, s. Any thing written. A lang scrieve, a long letter or writting, S.

Teut. schrijv-en, Germ. schreyb-en, Lat. scrib-ere, to write.

To SCRIEVE, v. n. To talk familiarly, implying the idea of continuation; skrieve, a conversation of this kind, S.

This may be merely another sense of scrieve, as properly denoting what is written; but perhaps rather allied to Su.G. skraefw-a, to rant, to rattle, to rave; whence skraefla, a rattling, or ranting fellow or woman; Wideg. Isl. skraefa, skrafe, manskraefa, from skraf-a nugari, sermocinari.

SCRIM, s. A very thin coarse cloth, used for making blinds for windows, buckram, &c. S.B.

"There was no cloth made at Forfar, but a few yard-wides called Scrims." P. Forfar, Statist. Acc. vi. 512.

To SCRYM, v. n. To skirmish.

Thar wes ilk day justyn of wer;

And scrymyn maid full apertly;

And men tane on athyr party.

Barbour, xix. 520. MS.

Alem. Germ. schirm-en, more anciently, according to Seren. scrim-en, pugilare, Su.G. skirm-a, to fight, Fr. escrim-er, A.S. scrimbre, a gladiator, which term has been deduced, by Martinius, from West-Goth. scrama, a weapon, a sword. Su.G. skraem-a, a slight wound, is viewed as a cognate. SCRYMMAG:, s. A skirmish.

Ane Inglissman, on the gait saw he play At the scrymmagis a bukler on his hand.

Wallace, iii. 359. MS.

Here it is evidently used to denote a mock fight. To SCRIMP, SKRIMP, v. a. 1. To straiten, to deal sparingly with one; used both as to food and money. He scrimps him in his meat. He does not give him enough of food, S.

For some had scrimpt themsel's o' food To wait that night.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 212.

Ye'se nae be scrimp'd of meal;
And ye hae fouth of milk, I see, yoursel.

Ross's Helenore, p. 95.

Hence scrimpit, parsimonious, niggardly.
—What signifies your gear?

A mind that's scrimpit never wants some care.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 66.

2. To limit, to straiten; in a general sense, S. Was she found out for mending o' their meal? Or was she scrimped of content or heal?

Ross's Helenore, p. 50. He gangs about sornan frae place to place, As scrimpt of manners as of sense and grace.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 136.

Sibb. properly derives it from Teut. krimp-en, contrahere, diminuere, coarctare, extenuare. In some other dialects s is prefixed; hence Germ. schrump-en corrugari, Su.G. skrump-en, corrugatus.

Scrimp, adj. 1. Scanty, narrow, deficient; applied to food or money, S. scrimpit, synon.

Each in their hand a scrimp hauf bannock got,

That scarce for anes wad fill their mouth and throat. Ross's Helenore, p. 49.

2. Contracted, not correspondent to the size; applied to clothes, S.

Plain was her gown, the bue was o' the ewe

Plain was her gown, the hue was o' the ewe, And growing scrimp, as she was i' the grow. Ross's Helenore, p. 28.

Of them wha fa' upon the prey;
They'll scarce row up the wretch's feet,
Sae scrimp they make his winding-sheet.
Ramsay's Poems, ii. 467.

3. Limited, not ample:

"It may be, this scrimp and scanty proclamation of pardon was not so pleasing to them as the former, and their friends spare them." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 74.

4. Deficient, in relation to mind.
How mony do we daily see
Right scrimp of wit and sense.
Who gain their aims aft easily
By well-bred confidence?

Ramsay's Works, i. 114.
Sw. krimpe, little; Belg. bekrompen, narrow, scant. V. the v.

SCRIMPLY, adv. Sparingly, S.

"When Dr. Lighton [Leighton] was Commendator of Glasgow, and he himself Professor of Divinity there,—he allowed and invited all people to accuse their Pastors, and give in what indictments they pleased against them,—this was not done scrimply neither, nor out of mere form; but if there was any partiality, it was against the Minister." Account present Persecution of the [Episcopalian] Church in Scotland, A. 1690, p. 48.

"But the cases are very different, where the

"But the cases are very different, where the mosses are scrimply sufficient, for a length of time, to supply the inhabitants." Dr. Walker, Prize Essays Highl. Soc. S. ii. 117.

SCRYNOCH, s. V. SCROINOCH.

SCRIP, s. A mock; most probably one expressed by a distortion of the face.

Wallace as than was laith to mak a ster,
Ane maid a scrip, and tyt at his lang suorde:
Hald still thi hand, quoth he, and spek thi word.
Wallace, vi. 141. MS. V. Scorp.

I hint ane scripture, and my pen furth tuke; Syne thus began of Virgil the twelt buke. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 404. 35.

Fr. escriptoire, id.

SCROG, s. A stunted bush or shrub, S. A. Bor. Fyue fouliis I chaist out throw ane scrog, Quhairfoir thair motheris did me warie; For thay war drownit all in a bog.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 300.

Every thyng that doith repare
In firth or feild, flude, forest, crth or are,
Or in the scroggis, or the buskis ronk,
Lakis, maressis, or thare poulis donk,
Astablit lyggis styl to sleip and restis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 450. 2.

"Al the grond of the palecis of that tryumphand toune [Troye] and castel, is ouergane vitht gyrse ande vild *croggis." Compl. S. p. 31.

In pl. it is commonly used to denote thorns, briers, &c. and frequently small branches of trees broken off, S.

This word, by Rudd. Sibb. and in Gl. Compl. is viewed as from A.S. scrobb, frutex, whence E. shrub. But perhaps it is rather allied to Teut. schrag, schraeg, pl. schraeghen, spars or slips of wood for supporting vines; ligna transversa, capreoli; canterii. V. Wachter, Kilian. The origin is Germ. schrag, obliquus.

Scroggy, Skroggy, adj. 1. Stunted, S.
The cumpany al sampn held away
Throw scroggy bussis furth the nerrest way.
Doug. Virgil, 264. 19.
In sere placis the herde at hys desyre

In sere placis the herde at hys desyre Amang the scroggy rammell settis the fyre. Ibid. 330. 47.

"The name of the town [Dumfries] is, by some, supposed a compound of Gothic or Celtic, with a Roman word, Drumfriars; by others, it is considered as more entirely Celtic, Drumfresh, a hill or rising ground clad with furze or scroggy bushes." P. Dumfries, Statist. Acc. v. 140.

By the way, I may subjoin an etymon more probable than either.

"John of Wallingford mentions the Castrum Puellarum as at the Northern extremity of Northmentia. This name our writers apply to Edinburgh. It is a mere translation of the name of Dumfries: Dun-Fres; Dun, castellum, urbs; Fru, Fre, virgo nobilis, Icelandic. This was the name given by the Piks, while the Cumri of Cumbria called the same place Abernith, as it stands at the mouth of the Nith." Pinkerton's Enquiry, ii. 208.

2. Abounding with stunted bushes or brushwood, S.

—Quhare now standis the golden Capitole, Vmquhile of wylde buskis rouch skroggy knoll. Doug. Virgil, 254. 12.

On scroggy braes shall akes and ashes grow. Ramsay's Poems, i. 60.

SCROINOCH, SCRYNOCH, s. Noise, tumult, Aberd.

Nae doubt, sma' scroinoch they wad mak, If she in lofty style could crack.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 320.

Sibb. naturally enough refers to Sw. skraen, clamor stridulus; Gl.

SCROOFE, SCRUFE, s. 1. A thin crust or covering of any kind, S.

"The outwarde scroofe, suppose it appeareth to be whole, where the inward is festered, anaileth nothing, bot maketh it to vndercoate again." Bruce's Eleven Serm. T. ii. a, b.

"Striue therefore euer to keep the soule in a sense and feeling, and let not that miserable scroofe to goe ouer thy soule." Rollock on the Passion, p. 12.

——His nose will lose the scruf, Gif he fa' down.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 18.

2. Used to denote money that is both thin and base.

"Now they spair not planelie to brek down and convert gud and stark mony, cunyit in our cunyehouse, in our Soveranes les aige, into this thair corrupted scruef and baggages of Hard heidis and Nonsounts." Knox's Hist. p. 164.

Radically the same with E. scurf, Su.G. skorf, the scurf of a wound, according to Seren. from skorpa crusta.

Scrufan, s. A thin scurf or covering; as, a scrufan of ice, S.B.

Su.G. skrof is used in the latter sense, glacics rara. V. preceding word.

SCROPPIT, adj.

Ane scroppit cofe quhen he begynnis Sornand all and sindry airtis, For to by hennis reid-wod he rynnis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 170.

This is the description of what is now called a cadger. Lord Hailes renders scroppit contemptible, illustrating this sense by the passage in Knox's Hist. quoted under Scorp.

Scroppit, as here used, seems synon. with E. scrubbed, scrubby, mean, sordid; from Belg. schrobb-en to scrub, whence schrobber a mean fellow, a scoundrel; Germ. schrabb-en, to scrape money together, schrobber avaritious.

SCROW, Skrow, s. A scroll, a writing, S. Thy scrows obscure are borrowed fra some buik. Polw. and Montgom. Watson's Coll. iii. 6. Dirten Dunbar, on quhome blaws thou thy boist? Pretendand thee to wryte sic scaldit skrows? Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 48.

SCROW, s. The name given most commonly to the minute cancri observed in pools and springs, Cancer stagnalis and C. pulex, S. It is, however, also occasionally applied to some of the aquatic larvae of flies and beetles, especially to the larva of the Dytiscus marginalis. Squilla, nostratibus the Scrow. Sibb. Scott, p. 34. Su.G. skrof, skeleton, from its appearance?

SCRUBBE, s. V. SCRAB. SCRUBIE, s. The vulgar name of the scurvy, S. Isl. skyrbiug-ur. This term occurs A. 1289; although some understand it of the elephantiasis. V. Von Troil, p. 324. Su.G. skoerbiug. Hence, Scrubie-Grass, s. Scurvy-grass, S. scroobiegrass, A. Bor.

To SCUD, v. a. 1. "To dust with a rod; Scot." Callander's MS. notes on Ihre.

Su.G. skudd-a, excutere.

2. To beat, to chastise; properly, to strike on the buttocks with the palm or open hand, S. synon. skelp, scult, scon.

To SCUD, v. a. To quaff, to drink liberally,

Loth.

-You wha laughing scud brown ale; Leave jinks a wee, and hear a tale.

Ramsays's Poems, ii. 520.

Hence, Scups, s. pl. Brisk beer, foaming ale, S.

"They sent in some smachry or ither to me, an' a pint o' their scuds; as sowr as ony bladoch." Journal from London, p. 9.

It is also used by Ramsay, i. 216.

Teut. schudd-en, Su.G. skudd-a, utskudd-a, fundere. In the same manner jute, bad ale, is formed from A.S. geot-an, to pour out.

SCUDLER, Scudlar, s. A scullion. Thai entryt in, befor thaim fand no ma, Excep wemen, and sympill serwandis twa, In the kyching scudleris lang tyme had beyne. Wallace, v. 1027. MS.

'To SCUFF, v. a. 1. To graze, to touch slightly in passing quickly, to brush along, S.

-A pair of rough rullions to scuff thro' the

Was the fee they sought at the beginning o't. Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 137.

This seems radically the same with Teut. schuyven, Germ. schupf-en, Su.G. skufw-a, skuff-a, E. shove, q. to give a shove in passing.

2. To tarnish by frequent wearing, S. Thus it is said of a piece of dress that has lost the new appearance, that it is much scuffed. Hence,

3. To scuff, or scuff about, to wear as an ordinary dress, for the coarsest work; to wear as a drudge, S.

Perhaps Germ. schuft, a tatterdemalion, is allied.

To SCUG, v. a. To shelter. V. SKUG.

SCULDUDRY, s. A term, now used in a ludicrous manner, to denote those causes that come under the judgment of an ecclesiastical court, which respect some breach of chastity, S.

To fill his post alake there's none, That with sic speed

Could sa'r sculdudry out like John. Ramsay's Poems, i. 222.

The first part of the word is most probably form. ed from Germ. schuld, A.S. scyld, Alem. sculdi, Su.G. skyld, Isl. skulld, a fault, an offence; whence L.B. sculted-um, a great offence, and scultet-us, a bailiff, A.S. sculdeta, an exactor, one who exacted satisfaction from delinquents. V. Spelman. Thus the word might originally be q. sculdet-ry, or an offence of that kind that subjected to a fine.

Callander, I find, in his MS, notes on Ihre, has given the former etymon. He mentions the S. term under Su.G. skoela debitor, MoesG. dulgiskula, id. Ir. sgaldruth, however, denotes a fornicator, Lhuyd. The origin is Alem. sculen, &c. debere, because satisfaction is due to the law; on account of the of. fence. The s. indeed primarily signifies debt, obligation

SCULL, s. A shallow basket; sometimes used as a cradle, S.

"Her father had often told her that he built the first house in Portnockie the same year in which the house of Farskane was built, and that she was brought from Cullen to it, and rocked in a fisher's scull instead of a cradle." P. Ruthven, Banfis. Statist. Acc. xiii. 401. V. Lenno, and Skul.

To SCULT, SKULT, v. a. To beat with the palm of the hand, S. synon. skelp, scud, scon. Isl. skell, skellde, id. diverbero palmis; skell-r a stroke, G. Andr. It might, however, be deduced from A.S. sculd, Germ. schuld, debt, what is due to one; in the same sense as we say S. to pay, or to give one his payment, when he is beaten for a fault. V. AIGHINS.

SCUMFIT, part. pa. Discomfited. Quhat mysteryt ma in a power to pass, All off a will, as I trow set ar we, In playne battaill can nocht weill scumfit be. Wallace, viii. 466. MS.

Altered to discomfist, Edit. 1648.

Ital. sconfigg-ere, id.

SCUNCHEON, s. A stone in the inner side of a door or window, forming the projecting angle,

Perhaps allied to Germ. schantse, E. sconce, as forming the bulwark or strength of the wall. To SCUNNER, Scouner, v. n. 1. To lothe, to Yea, some will spue, and bock, and spit At moats like to a midge's foot. We scunner at most part of meat, Which we're not used for to eat.

Cleland's Poems, p. 104.

2. To surfeit, S.B.

nauseate, S.

3. To shudder at any thing, because of its repugnance to the dictates of the mind.

"This James—procured the Pope's dispensation to marry his eldest son upon his brother's daughter, sister to the said William. By this cause, without doubt, the whole lands should be united in one; yet, notwithstanding, the rest of the Douglasses scunnered, thinking the marriage to be unlawful." Pitscottie, p. 18.

4. To hesitate, to startle at any thing from doubtfulness of mind.

"He explains his not seeing through the King's authority, and says he scunnered to own it, and that such things had been done, as in a well guided commonwealth would annul his right." Wodrow, ii. 301.

5. To shrink back from fear.

Bot that that held on feyt in hy Drew thaim away deliuerly; And scounryt nocht for that thing, Bot went stoutly till assailling.

Barbour, xvii. 651. MS.

According to Sibb., this word is "merely a variety of shudder." But the idea is contrary to evidence. A.S. scunnung signifies abomination; onscun-ian, to lothe; scun-ian, in its simple state, not only vitare, aufugere, but timere, reveriri; whence we discover the reason why its derivative scunner is applied, not only to lothing, but to fear. It appears, indeed, that fear is the primary idea. Thus, in like manner, Germ. scheu-en signifies vitare, fugere, verab-sheu-en, abominare. The radical word may be Isl. sky abhorrere, evitare.

Scunner, Skunner, Skonner, s. 1. Lothing, abhorrence, S.

We might have miss'd a beastly blunner, Had we not spewed out our skunner Against this Test, in every where, As Antichristian hellish ware.

Cleland's Poems, p. 106.

Sae comes of ignorance, I trow;
'Tis this that crooks their ill-far'd mou'

Ross's Helenore, Beattie's Address, st. 12.

"The head o't was as yallow as biest milk; it was enough to gi' a warsh-stamach'd body a scunar." Journal from London, p. 3.

2. A surfeit, S.B.

SCURDY, s. A kind of moorstone, S.

"The greatest part of the parish stands on rock of moorstone, commonly called scurdy: it is of a dark blue colour, and of so close a texture that water cannot penetrate it." P. Lunan, Forfars. Statist. Acc. i. 442.

Isl. skord-a, firmo, colloco firmiter; skorda, ful-

SCURL, SKURL, s. A dry scab after a sore, S. as Sibb. observes, a dimin. from scurf.

SCURLY, adj. Opprobrious. Scurly words, Loth.; corr. from Fr. scurrile, id.

SCURROUR, SKOURIOUR, SKURRIOUR, s. 1.

The spy he send, the entré for to se, Apon the moss a scurrour sone fand he, To scour the land Makfadyane had him send. Wallace, vii. 796. MS.

In a dern woode thai stellit thaim full law; Set skouriouris furth the contré to aspye.

Ibid. iv. 431. MS.

Although Fr. coureur signifies a scout, the term may be from Fr. escur-er, literally to scour, as the v. is metaph. used in military language, to scour the fields, or as above, to scour the land Ital. scorridori signifies a scout. Its form would indicate some affinity to Su.G. skyr-a circumcursitare.

2. An idle vagrant fellow, Rudd.

SCUSHIE, s. A cant term for money, Aberd. perhaps formed by corr. from cash.

Or if, as we have sometimes seen,
Mischance should wear their scushy done,
May some guid friend the want supply.

SCUTARDE, s. "Skulker," Pink.

It seems rather to convey the idea of one in whom nature is so decayed, that he has lost the power of retention; from the v. Scout, q. v.

To SCUTCH, v. a. 1. To beat, to drubb.

"He made a long and pitiful narration of Strafford's oppression: That being at table with Lord Mure and Lord Loftes, discourse falling in concerning the Deputy's scutching of a gentleman with a rode, of his name, and of the gentleman's treading, by accident, on the Deputy's gouty toes, it was alledged he had said, that man had a brother in England who would not be content with such a revenge for such an affront," &c. Baillie's Lett. i. 269.

2. To scutch lint, to separate flax from the rind, S. synon. swingle. These terms are used both in the N. and S. of S.

It is the same with E. scotch, although applied in a peculiar sense. The flax is whipt or beat with a switch. Ital. scutic-are has been given as synon. with E. scotch. Scusso signifies stripped. Perhaps it is radically the same with the E. v. to switch.

To SCUTLE, (pron. as Gr. v) v. a. To pour from one vessel to another backwards and forwards, in a childish way; so as frequently to imply the idea of spilling part of the liquid, S.

synon. jirgle.

This may seem akin to Isl. skutl-a, to toss backwards and forwards, (ultro citroque jactare), Germ. schuttel-n motitare, from Su.G. skudd-a, Germ. schutt-en, to pour out, which have been traced to Chald. Now, shada, fudit. Our term, however, has great resemblance to Isl. gutl-a, liquida moveo, et agito cum sonitu; G. Andr. p. 100.

Scutles, s. pl. Any liquid that has been tossed backwards and forwards from one drinking vessel to another, S. synon. jirgle. V. the v.

SEA-HEN, s. A name given, according to Sir R. Sibb., to the Lyra, a fish. V. CROONER.

SEA-PIET, s. Pied oyster-catcher. Haematopus ostralegus, Linn. S. V. Statist. Acc. P. Luss, Dunbartons. xvii. 251.

Our designation corresponds to Fr. Pie de mer, Brisson; Pica marina, Caii, and nearly to Dan. strand-skade, i. e. the magpie of the shore or strand. V. Penn. Zool. p. 482.

SEA-SWINE, s. V. Bressie.

SEA-TOD, s. A species of Wrasse. V. KIN-GERVIE.

SEAM, s. The work at which a woman sews, S. Fr. seme.

SEATER, s. A meadow, Orkney.

"As to our meadows, they are always called Seaters. Though I am little acquainted with the Norwegian language, I understand a Seater to be a place for maintaining milch cows; and these Seaters are to this moment properly adapted for it. We have many in this parish, namely, Kirk-seater," &c. P. Birsay, Statist. Acc. xiv. 320, N.

I know not whether this be allied to Su.G. soed, Ist. saudr, cattle, a flock; or sed-ia, to feed, pasci;

G. Andr. p. 204.

SEATH, SEETH, SETH, SAITH, SEY, s. The coalfish, Gadus Carbonarius, Linn. S.

"Seath, Gadus Carbonarius." P. Glasgow, Lanarks. Statist. Acc. v. 536.

- "The fish, which frequent Lochlong, are cod, haddocks, seath, lythe," &c. P. Arroquhar, Dunbartons. Ibid. iii. 433.
- "The fish commonly taken on this coast are cod, skate, hollibut, haddocks, whitings, saiths or cuddies." P. Drainy, Elgin, Ibid. iv. 79.

"The tenants have from their landlords threepence allowed for a ling, a penny for a cod or tusk, Vol. II. and a halfpenny for a seth (cole fish)." P. Dun-rossness, Shetl, Ibid. vii. 397.

"Asellus Niger, the Colefish of the North of England, our fishers call it a Coleman's Seeth." Sibb. Fife, p. 123.

These fish are called not only seaths, but "podlers and baddocks," on the East coast. V. BAD-

DOCK

"In Orkney and Shetland the fry are called sillocks or sellocks; at Edinburgh, podleys; and at Scarborough, pars. The year-old coal-fish is the cooth of Orkney; the piltock of Shetland; the pollock of the Hebrides; the glassock of Sutherland; the cuddie of the Moray Frith; the grey-podley of Edinburgh; and the billet of Scarborough. The appearance of the coal-fish varies much with its age: hence a new series of provincial names. In Orkney it is, 1. a sillock; 2. a cooth; 3. a harbin; 4. a cudden; and, 5. a sethe. The full-grown fish is also, in different places, termed a sey, a grey ling, a grey lord, &c." Neill's Tour, p. 209.

Dr. Barry mentions only three stages.

"The Coalfish (gadus carbonarius, Lin. Syst.), which is so well known here by the name of the sellock, cuth, or seth, according as the age of it is either one or two or more years, is much more abundant than any other, and, indeed, exceeds in number almost all the rest of our fish taken together." Hist. Orkney, p. 293.

They are also, in an early stage, called Tibrics.

V. TIBRIC.

Isl. seid is thus indefinitely expl., Pisciculi nomen, G. Andr. p. 204. Shall we suppose that sey, the name of the pollack in Norway, has been transferred to this fish? V. Sye, s. 2.

SECRET, s. A coat of mail concealed under one's usual dress.

"How soon the Earl [Gowrie] saw him in his chamber, he called upon this deponent [Henderson], and bad him put on his Secret and Plate Sleeves." Cromarty's Acc. of Gowrie's Conspired p. 47.

This is evidently distinguished from the armost used for the head. For Henderson afterwards sear to his own house for his "steel-bonnet and gantlet." Ibid. p. 48.

"Let thy secret loue bee vnto his soule like Secret or jack in this bloodie battell." Z. Boyd's

Last Battell, p. 1172.

This term has been borrowed from the Fr., but changed as to its application. For Fr. secrete is a thin steel-cap, or a close scull worn under a hat, Cotgr.

SEDEYN, adj. Sudden; sedeynly, suddenly. This is the orthography of the Perth. Edit. of Wallace. Both sodeyn and sodeynly are used in the MS., the o, if I mistake not, invariably, where it has been read as e.

SEDULL, s. A schedule; used in reference to the Legend of a Popish Saint.

Compleyn, Sanctis, thus, as your sedull tellis.

Compleyn to hewyn with wordis that noon sell is.

Wallace, ii. 215. MS.

SEED-BIRD, s. A name given to a sea-fowl, S.A.

"Sea-fowls appear here in great numbers in the spring, about seed-time; they follow the plough, and are thence called seed-birds." P. Sprouston, Tiviotdale, Statist. Acc. i. 67.

SEED-FOULLIE, s. The Wagtail, S. Motacilla alba, Linn.

Perhaps q. seed-foul, from Su.G. saed, and fugl. Or the latter part may be formed from folja sequi; q. the companion of the seed-time. For its Sw. name, saedsaerla, has this signification; as it announces to the husbandman the proper time for sowing. Saedsaerla, motacilla, ab ara, nuntiare, quippe quae suo adventu colonis nuntiat, tempus adesse, quo hordeum sulcis mandandum est; Ihre, vo. Saed. To SEEK, v. a. To attack in a hostile manner.

V. Soucht.
To SEEK one's meat, to beg, S. to gae fra door to door, synon. SEELFU', adj. Pleasant. V. SEILFU'.

To SEETHE, v. n. To be nearly boiling, S.B.

The sense is thus varied from that of the E. v., of A.S. sooth-an, Isl. siod-a, Su.G. siud-a, Germ. sied-en, aestuare; which Wachter views as allied to Heb. 777, efferbuit.

Heb. 777, efferbuit.
To SEFOR, v. a. To save, to preserve, to provide a remedy.

With God's grace, wee tak it upon hand, To sefor this as ressoun can remeid; In tyme to cum thairof thair be na pleid.

Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. p. 14.

It is printed sef or, as if two words. But this, I apprehend, is by mistake. The safrie (pron. saif-rie) of any thing is the preservation of it in safety. It sometimes denotes the reward supposed to be due for the care exercised in preserving and returning any thing that has been lost; from Fr. sauv-er, to save, to preserve. V. SAFER.

To SEG, SEYG, v n. 1. To fall down.

This term is especially used concerning liquids, when, in consequence of absorption, they sink down in the wooden casks that contain them, S. swag, E. The roof of a house is also said to be seggit, S.B. when it has sunk a little inwards.

2. Metaph. applied to the influence of intoxicating liquor, S.B.

When drink on them begins to seg, They'll tak's to see the showman.

Morison's Poems, p. 16.

Su.G. Isl. sig-a subsidere, delabi; ek syg, lentè desuo; A.S. asig-an, dilabi; Belg. zyg-en, to fall down.

This word is evidently of great antiquity. For Ulphilas uses sig-an and ga-sig-an, as signifying, delabi, deorsum ferri, subsidere. Junius views sig-an as the origin of E. sink, Alem. senk-en, &c. mergi.

SEĞ, Segg, s. The yellow flower-de-luce, S. "Iris pseudocorus. Segs, i. e. Sedge. Scotis." Lightfoot, p. 1078.

A.S. secg, Fland. segge, id. SEGE, s. 1. A soldier.

This gud squier with Wallace bound to ryd, And Robert Boid, quhilk wald no langar bide Vndir thrillage of segis of Ingland. To that falss King he had neuir maid band.

Wallace, iii. 53. MS.

The A.S. word secg signifies "a soldier, a warrior;" Somner. Miles; vir strenuus, illustris; Lye. Isl. segg-ur, vir, miles; Verel. Ind. Seigr, homo propositi tenax. It is probably from the same source with Su.G. seger, siger, A.S. sige, Germ. sieg, victory; especially as Isl. sig signifies battle, fight.

It seems pretty evident, that Blind Harry uses sege in its primary sense, as it refers to the military government of our injured country under Edw. 1.

2. Used for man, in a general sense.

I slaid on ane suevynyng, slomerand ane lite, Aud sone ane selkouth sege I saw to my sycht.— Thare is na sege for na schame that schrynkis at schorte,

May he cum to hys cast be clokyng but coist.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, a. 9. 25.

Hickes, among different examples of the word being used in this secondary sense in O.E., refers to the following from P. Ploughman.

I have seen segges, quoth he, in the city of London

Bere byghes full bryght about their neckes.—I must sit, sayd the Segge, or els I must needs nap.—

I am a Surgeon, sayd the Segge, and salves can make.

SEGE, s. 1. A seat; properly, a seat of dignity. For feyndys ar off sic natur,

"Bull-segg, a gelded bull. North." Gl. Grose. Sibb. adds, "A foul thick-necked ox, having the appearance of a bull;" Gl. Shall we therefore suppose that the designation is formed from A.S. secg, callus; "the thick skinnes in a man's hands, or other parts grown with labour?" V. Somner. Isl. sigg, callus.

To SEY, v. a. To assay, to try. V. SAY, v. SEY, SAY, s. 1. A trial, the act of tasting.

i. e. "The Queen herself tasted of all the food she had brought with her, that the Scots might be assured she had no design to poison them." It is absurdly rendered in editions;

An assay she took of all that gud her thought.

2. An endeavour, an attempt, of any kind. I sall mak a sey to do it, S.

SEY-PIECE, SAY-PIECE, s. A piece of work performed by a craftsman, as a proof of his skill in any particular art.

Sure Nature herried mony a tree, For spraings and bonny spats to thee; Nae mair the rainbow can impart Sic glowing ferlies o' her art; Whase pencil wrought its freaks at will On thee, the sey-piece o' her skill.

Doug. Virgil, 44. 34.

SEY-FAIR, adj. Properly, carried by sea; but used to denote what strictly pertains to the seafaring line.

In an action before the Admiralty court against some merchants of Hamburg for exporting a few bolls of wheat from Scotland, "it was allegit be Maister Johnne Spens, prolocutor for the merchants of Hamburg, that the said Admiral, nor his deputes, wer na juges competent in the said matter, becaus it was na sey fair matter." "That his Grace would discharge tith sebowes, leekes, kail, onions, by an act of secret council, till a Parliament be conveened." Act Gen. Assembly, A. 1574. Calderwood, p. 822.

Germ. zwiebel, an onion, zwiebelein a young onion; perhaps from Lat. cepe. The Germ. also use the phrase zweibel-bett for a bed of onions.

Palsgraue defines O.E. "chebole, a young onion; ciuol," Fr.; scipoulle, a sea onion.

SEYD, s. A sewer, a passage for water, Ang. Teut. sode, canalis, cloaca; Su.G. saud, a well. To SEYG, v. n. To sink or fall down. V. Seg. To SEIL, v. a. To strain; A. Bor. sile.

According to Lye, it appears that this term was used in MoesG. from sild-aleik-jan, admirari, Add. Jun. Etym.

SEILE, SEYLE, SELE, s. Happiness, prosperity,

He thocht weill he wes worth na seyle, That mycht of nane anoyis feyle.

Barbour, i. 303. MS.

Happy, allace, oner happy and full of sele, Had I bene, only gif that neuir nane At our coist had arrivit schip Troiane.

Doug. Virgil, 123. 13. Thus Scot. Bor. they say, sele faw, [i. e. fall or befall] me; sele and weal, health and happiness." Rudd.

" Seil never comes till sorrow be away;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 61.

Su.G. saell, happy, Isl. saela, happiness. This seems only a secondary meaning. A.S. sel signifies good, in a moral sense. The transition is very natural; for moral goodness can alone produce true happiness. As A.S. sael is used in the sense of bene, well; it also signifies, tempus opportunum, thence transferred to what happens prosperously, res prosperae, integrae; Lye.

Sibb. says that this is a " perversion of Teut. and Sax. selden, raro." But it is evidently from a quite different origin; Su.G. saen; saender, singulus; en i saender, singuli; sin, unus, singularis. Ihre marks the affinity between sin and Lat. singulus. Su.G. sinung signifies singular; sinaledes, sinalund, every one in his own way, as opposed to those who act conjunctly; quisque suo modo. In one instance I find single used for seindle in a prov. phrase. It appears as the adj.

He also observes that Lat. se has the same force in composition; as se-orsum, apart, se-parare, to separate, &c. I have observed no A.S. term that has any affinity; although ser, sere, is used by R. Brunne and other O.E. writers.

SEYNITY, Gawan and Gol. ii. 17,

He hard ane bugill blast brym, and ane loud blaw, As the seynity sone silit to the rest.

In Edit. 1508. it is seynily, which seems the true reading from Fr. signal, Ital. segnale, a signal. Silit may signify given, from A.S. syll-an dare, i. e. he heard the loud sound of a bugle horn given hastily, from without, as a signal to those who were within the castle.

SEIR, s.

Ane helme of hard steill in hand has he hynt, Ane scheld, wroght all of weir, Semyt wele upon seir. Gawan and Gol. ii. 17.

If this be the true reading, the phrase may signify, curiously devised, from A.S. sear, a device. It is feir, however, in Edit. 1508. Thus it would signify, in good order, well prepared, as fere of were. But it is doubtful, whether this be not an error in the old copy, as by this reading the usual alliteration is lost.

According to Mr. Macpherson, sen (conj.) " seems merely the part. passive of se [to see] as the Fr. use veu." This agrees with what has been advanced by Mr. Tooke, Divers. Purl. i. 269.; with this difference, that while he derives the prep. from the part. past, he says that the conj. has sometimes the sense of the one part., and sometimes of the other. But seen that, or seen as, seems a harsh and unnatural resolution of since, now used for sen.

One great and obvious defect of Mr. Tooke's ingenious system, viewed in a general light, is, that it proceeds on the supposition that the A.S. is a language completely insulated; or at least, that whatever intimacy of connexion it has with the cognate tongues in other respects, it has none with regard to the formation of its particles. As it is universally admitted that the A.S. and O.Sw. were so similar, that a Saxon could easily converse with a Swede; it might naturally be supposed that A.S. seoththan, siththan, deinde, postea, were radically the same with Su.G. sidan, sedan, id. Now the Su.G. conj. has no affinity to se, videre; but is evidently from sid, sero, post. There is no good reason to doubt, that A.S. siththan has had a similar origin. For sith exactly corresponds in its signification to Su.G. sid. MoesG. seitho signifies late, sero. Ihre (vo. Sedan,) accordingly views A.S. siththan as comp. of sith post, and than tune, as corresponding to posteu, posthine. He also observes, that the order observed in the A.S. term is inverted in MoesG. thanaseiths, posthac. The world, mik ni thanaseiths saiquhith, seeth me not henceforth; John xiv. 19. This is from than tune, and seith, sero. Alem. sid also signifies postquam. Isl. sijdan, Teut. seyd, sind, postea. It must, therefore, be quite unreasonable to deduce sen, in its different forms, from the v. see; as this mode of derivation pours contempt on all the analogy of kindred tongues, and even destroys the unity of the same language. For it might have been added, that there seems to be no example of n or nd being changed into th, in the formation of A.S. words.

Sen may be viewed as bearing the same relation to A.S. siththan, as Su.G. sen to sidan postea, of which it is a contraction. Su.G. sindan was used as synon. with sidan. Send, thereafter, q. v., in its form corresponds to this. V. Syne, adv. SEN, s. Filth, nastiness.

Spelman views S.B. serjantus as equivalent to scutiger. It seems indeed to correspond to squire, or the attendant of a knight. The term is evidently a corr. of Lat. serviens. It however appears, from Du Cange, that serjantus was also used to denote a soldier on foot, one belonging to the infautry; and sometimes an inferior kind of knight, eques serviens.

SET, s. Used nearly in the same sense with attack, shock, or onset, S.

Great may the hardships be, that she has met; And gotten for my sake so hard a set.

Ross's Helenore, p. 45.

I shanna tell you, nor can I do yet, How sad the set was, that my heart did get. Now I might gang as soon, and drown mysell, As offer hamewith, after what befel.

Ibid. p. 70.

It is always used in a bad sense; as, a set of the toothache, a set of the cauld, &c.

SET, s. Kind, manner, fashion. A new set o't, a new kind, S.

Either from set, as signifying a scion, or Su.G. saett, manner, fashion, wise.

To SET, v. a. 1. To become one; in respect of manners, rank, merit, obligations, &c. S.

And in spek wlispit he sum deill; Bot that sat him rycht wondre weill.

Barbour, i. 393. MS.

It sets him well, wi' vile unscrapit tongue, To cast up whether I be auld or young. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 148.

"It sets him ill to behave sae to me," i. e. He acts a very ungrateful part.

2. To become, applied to any piece of dress, S. Wald scho put on this garmond gay,

I durst sweir be my scill,

That scho woir never grene nor gray, That set hir half so weill.

SET, s. The set of a borough, its particular constitution, or the form of its administration, according to charter, including the number of magistrates and counsellors, the mode of election. &c. S.

" At last, Charles I, in 1633, established and confirmed all the grants of his royal predecessors, in favour of the borough; and the set, or form of its government, was ratified by the convention of boroughs, in 1706." P. Elgyn, Moray, Statist. Acc. v. 3.

Mr. Macpherson seems to view this word as radically allied to sauchtnyng, reconciliation, Isl. Sw. sactt. Sibb. derives it from Su.G. sactt, modus, sactt-a, convenire. But the origin is undoubtedly A.S. saet-an, set-an, statuere, constituere, Teut. sett-en, Germ. setz-en; whence gheset, gesetz, lex, constitutio; Alem. kesezzidu, institutione, Kero ap. Schilt.

To SET after ane, v. a. To pursue one, S. I set, or set out, after him; I pursued him.

This is a Su.G. idiom. Saetta efter en, aliquem properato cursu persequi; saett-a, cum impetu ferri, being thus used.

To SET aff, v. n. To go away, to begin a journey; generally implying the idea of expedition, S. SET, SETT, conj. Though, although.

SHABLE, SHABBLE, s. 1. A crooked sword, or hanger.

"A sea-captain offered to strike off my head with a shable." Colvil, Introd. to Mock Poem, p. 8.

Even the church-yard on a Sunday was sometimes the scene of action, where two hostile lairds, with their respective adherents, rushed upon one another with their durks and their shabbles." P. Strathdon, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xiii. 184.

Su.G. Dan. Belg. sabel, Germ. saebel, Fenn. sabeli, a crooked sword, a scymitar. Wachter derives the term from Arab. seif, a sword, properly of the falchion kind.

2. It is now generally used to denote an old rusty sword; Ane auld shable, S.

To SHACH, v. a. To shape or form any thing in an oblique way, to distort; pret. shacht; part. pa. id. also beshacht, S.

There are many cognates in the other Northern languages. Isl. skag-a, to decline, to bend, to turn out of the way; deflectere, G. Andr.; skaga, a promontory which stretches, obliquely; skack-ur, skackr, obliquis, impar, inequalia habens opposita latera; skackt, obliquitas, duarum ejusdem rei laterum inequalitas, Landnamab. Gl.

These words are formed from Isl. ska, an inseparable particle, corresponding to Lat. dis, and denoting disjunction. Hence also Su.G. ligga skafottes, divaricata crura alterius capiti obvertere, Ihre; to lie heads and thraws, S.; skaek-a, to set asunder; skack-a, to divide, to break off; Isl. skaegeltand, one who has unequal teeth, q. whose teeth are shacht, or shachelt. To the same fountain must we trace Isl. skeif-r, Dan. skuev, Germ. schief, E. skew, and askew, oblique.

SHACH-END of a web, the fag-end, where the cloth becomes inferior in quality, in consequence of the materials growing scanty, or of the best being used first, S.B. V. preceding word. To Shachle, v. a. To use any thing so as to distort it from its proper shape or direction, S. He has shachlit aw his schoon, he has put his shoes quite out of shape. Hence Shachlin, unsteady, infirm, S.

Shachled feet, distorted feet, S.

"Ye shape shoon by your ain shachled feet;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 86.

I spier'd for my cousin, fu' couthy and sweet,-And how her new shoon fit her auld shackl't feet. Burns, iv. 250. Leg. shackl't.

SHAG, s. The refuse of barley, or that which is not properly filled, generally given to horses or cattle, S. dichtings, synon.

As, in thrashing. the beards are not so easily separated from this kind of corn, as that which is fully ripened, it may have received its name from this circumstance; from Su.G. skuegg, hair in general, hence applied to the beard; Isl. skegg, Dan. skiaegg, id. A.S. sceage, coma.

To SHAK one's crap, to speak loudly and vehemently, to give vent to one's ill humour, S.B.

Afore ye lat him get o'er meikle time

To shak his crap, and scauld you for the quean, Be bauld enough to tell him a' your mind. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 54.

This metaph, seems borrowed from the cackling of a fowl, when provoked.

To SHAK a fa', [fall], to grapple, to wrestle, S. V. FAW.

SHAKE-DOWN, s. "A temporary bed made an on the floor, when a house is crowded in Buy V. Sir J. Sinclait's Obserw. p. 173.

SHANK of a coal mine, the pit that is sunk for reaching the coals, S.

From A.S. scent-un, to sink; or perhaps the E. word, as denoting a handle, is used metaph., in the same manner as shaft for a pit.

SHANKS, s. pl. Stockings. V. SCHANK. SHANNACH, s. Commonly expl. a bone-fire; but properly one lighted on Hallow-eye, Perths.; sometimes shitticle.

ALis core from Gael. Sandanes, an asit is offerwise written, Sumh-in, the great fustival observed by the Celts at the beginning of winter. Dr. Smith.

having spoken of Beltune, says:

"The other of these solemnities was held upon Hallow-eve, which, in Galic, still retains the name of Samhein. The word signifies the fire of peace, or the time of kindling the fire for manufacting the peace. It was at that season that the Britis tsualto adjust every dispute, and decide every confronersy. Of that occasion, all the fire in the country was extinguished on the preceding evening, In order to be supplied, the next day, by a portion of the holy fire which was kindled and consecrated by the Druids. Of this, no person who had infringed the peace, or was become obnoxious to implification law, or any failure in duty, was to have agg share, till he had first made all the reparations and submission which the Druids required of him bat Whoever did not, with the most implicit obedience, agree to this, had the sentence of excommunication, imore dreaded than death, immediately denounded against him. None was allowed to give him house on fire, or shew him the least office, of humanity, under the penalty of incurring the same sentence, ---

"In many parts of Scotland, these Hallow-eve fires continue still to be kindled grand in some places, should any family, through negligence, allow their fire to go out on that night, or on Whitsuntide, [Gael. Be'il-tin,] they may find a difficulty in getting a supply from their neighbours, the next morning." Gallo Antiquities, Hist. Druids, p. 31—33. V. Hallow-ren blueze.

To SHAPE away, v. a.! To drive away;

Name might him shape owny. Say NAH? Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 6.

Lord Hailes renders it, without any apparent reason, "cat off." It is certainly allied to Germ. schieb-en, schupf-en, to drive; Teut. schupf-en, id. Kilian.

SHARGAR, SHARGER, s. A lean person, a scrag; sometimes used to denote a weakly child,

S. also shargan.

At first I thought but little of the thing But mischief's mother's but like midge's wing. I never dream'd things wad ha gane this length; But we have e'en seen shargars gather strength, That seven years have sitten in the flet, And yet have bangsters on their boddom set.

Ross's Hetenore, p. 89.

V. PLAY-FEIR and WARYDRAGEL. It seems radically the same with E. scrag, which Dr. Johnson derives from Belg. scrughe, a word I have not met with. Seren., however, mentions Belg. scrughe, id.

"It [Durness] surely has been a sheal, or summer dwelling of old, belonging to the bishopric of Caithness." P. Durness, Sutherl. Statist. Acc. iii.

4. Schelis, pl. Wynter schelis, winter quarters; the term being improperly used, MAGMANS

"Agricola-returnit in Brygance, lenand his army in the wynter schelie." Bellend, Gran., B. iv. c. 11. In hibernus dimissus exercitus, Boeth.

5. Metaph, used to denote a nest for a field-. , mouse. 110 8 18 P. S.

As I hard say, it was a semple wane that the Of fog and fern, full feck leasly was maid, A silly sheil, under a eard-fast stame: ...

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 146. This term is not unknown in England. "Sheal, a cottage or shelter: the word is usual in the wastes of Northumberland and Cumberland.' Camden's Remains, Surnames, Let. S.

It is undoubtedly of Gothic origin. Isl. sael is used precisely in the first sense given above, also saelo-hus, and sello-bod. The former is thus defined by Verel.; Tuguria in sylvis, montibus, aut litoribus, quae aestivo tempore inhabitant, qui pecorum pascendorum curam habent, aut iter per invia facientes. Suel, domuncula aestiva in montanis; sueluhus, tuguria viatoribus ad pernoctandum exstructa; G. Andr. p. 295.

A.S. saeld, seld, a mansion, Alem. selitha, a tabernacle, seem to be from the same fountain.

Perhaps it is the same word which appears with the insertion of k; Su.G. skale, Isl. skali, a cottage, whence skulabu, one who dwells, or has a hut, in the woods. In Iceland, "formerly houses were built in some particular places for the use of travellers, which were called Thiod-brautar-skaula;" Von Troil, p. 57. Isl. skiul is used almost exactly as in sense 2. Latebra, propuie tectum sine parietibus, ad arcendam pluviam a substantibus; gardaskiul, q. a yard shiell; skogaskiul, a wood or schaw-shiell, &c. V. Verel. Ind. p. 229. Ihre informs us, that, in the Salic Law, skual denotes a building, hastily thrown together, in which the hunters lie in wait. The affinity of this to sense 3. is so plain, as to require no illustration. Hence probably Isl skall-a, to drive wild beasts into the nets; and skalla-lag, the society of huntsmen. Ihre derives skale, a cottage, from skyl-a, to cover; whence also skiul, tegmen, the same with the Isl. word mentioned above. Sael has been deduced from MoesG. sal-jan to inhabit, whence salithwos, habitations, mansions.

As Ir. sgalain denotes huts, cottages, (Obrien) Gael. id. (rendered in sing. by Shaw); it seems highly probable that the Celts borrowed the term from the Goths, with whom it appears to have been of far more general use.

It may be conjectured, that this word was used by the Picts to denote even their superior sort of buildings, otherwise called burgs or bruchs. For, according to G. Andr., Dan. skale has the sense of conclave, rotunda domus; as distinguished from stue, which he renders, curta domus.

To Sheal, Shiel, v. a. To sheal the sheep, to put them under cover, to inclose them in a sheal, S.

I see a bught beyond it on a bog.

Somebody here is shealing with their store, In summer time, I've heard the like afore.

Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

Shill is used in the same sense, A. Bor. But Grose improperly expl. it, "to sever sheep;" misled by the similarity of the v. to that signifying to separate.

To SHEAL, v. a. To take the husks off seeds, S. "There are—great complaints that the corn is not well shealed." Statist. Acc. xvii. 117. V.

Belg. scheele, the husk; scheel-en, A.S. sceal-ian, Germ. schal-en, Su.G. skal-a, to shell, putamen auferre; Germ. geschalete gerste, peeled barley.

The radical v. seems to be Su.G. skil-ia, A.S. scyl-an, disjungere, because thus the grain is separated from the husk.

To SHEAR, Scheir, v. a. 1. To cut down corn with the sickle, S. A. Bor.

2. To reap, in general.

And sen that thou mon scheir as thow hes sawin, Haue all thy hope in God thy Creatour,

And ask him grace, that thow may be his awin. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 258.

.Quhasa sawis littil, sall scheir litill alsa, and he that sawis plenteously sal lykwais scheir largely." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 66, a.

SHEARER, s. 1. More strictly, one employed in cutting down corn, as distinguished from a bandster, or one who binds the sheaves, S.

Scarse had the hungry gleaner put in binde The scattered grain the shearer left behinde-Hudson's Judith, p. 3.

"Male shearers [receive] from 20s to 30s, female ditto from 15s to 20s for the harvest season." P. Maryculture, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vi. 82, N.

2. In a general sense, a reaper, S.

Thus to gae to the shearing, to go to work as a reaper, without any reference to the particular kind of work in which one may be employed, S.

A.S. scear-an, tondere. But our use of the term seems of Scandinavian origin; Su.G. skaer-a, metere, falce secare; skaera saed, to reap, skaera a sickle, skoerd the harvest, skoerdetid the time of harvest, i. e. S. the shearing. A reaper in Sw. is skoerdeman, i. e. a shearer.

SHEAR-KEAVIE, s. That species of crab called Cancer depurator, Linn. receives this name at Newhaven. V. KEAVIE.

SHEARN, s. V. SHARN.

SHEAVE, s. A flat slice, as of bread, S. V. SHAVE. SHED. A shed of land, a portion of land, as distinguished from that which is adjacent, S.

From A.S. scead-an, Teut. scheyd-en, separare; scheyding, partitio.

SHED, s. The interstice between the different parts of the warp in a loom, through which the shuttle passes, S.

"The principal part of the machinery of a loom, vulgarly called the Caam or Hiddles, makes the shed for transmitting the shuttle with the weft." Adam's Rom. Antiq. p. 523. V. Hendles and SCHED.

SHEDE, SHEED, s. A slice; sheed, S.B. Shaftes in shide wode thei shindre in shedes. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 13.

Assunder I shall hack it

In sheeds this day.

A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 74. V. Schide. To SHEED, v. a. To cut into flat slices, S.B. SHEIMACH, s. "A kind of pack-saddle; same with sunks." Gl. Sibb.

But it seems more strictly defined, "a kind of bass made of straw or sprot-ropes plaited, on which the panniers are hung, which are fastened to a packsaddle." Kincardines.

This is nearly allied to Gael. sumag, Su.G. some, Alem. Germ. saum, a packsaddle. A.S. seum, sarcina jumentaria, sem-an onerare.

SHEIMACH, s. A thing of no value, something that is worn out, S.B.

This may be only a secondary sense of the preceding word, borrowed from a sheimach when useless.

SHEEN of the eye, the pupil of the eye, S.B. sicht, sight, synon. from its brightness. V. SCHENE.

It may, however, be from A.S. seo, the sight of the eye; accus. seon.

SHEEP-ROT, s. Butterwort or Yorkshire sanicle, an herb, S.B. Steep-grass, or Yearninggrass, S.A. Pinguicula vulgaris, Linn. SHEEVE, s. A slice. V. SHAVE.

SHELL. You're scarcely out of the shell yet; a phrase applied to young persons, to those especially who affect something beyond their years, S. It is obviously borrowed from a chick bursting the shell.

EHELLYCOAT, s. 1. The name given to a spirit, supposed to reside in the waters, S.

"Shellycoat, a spirit, who resides in the waters, and has given his name to many a rock and stone upon the Scottish coast, belongs also to the class of bogles. When he appeared, he seemed to be decked with marine productions, and in particular with shells, whose clattering announced his approach. From this circumstance he derived his name.—Shellycoat must not be confounded with Kelpy, a water spirit also, but of a much more powerful and malignant nature." Scott's Minstrelsy, I. Introd. civ. cv. 2. A sheriff's messenger, or bum-bailiff, Loth.

SHE

I dinna care a single jot, Tho' summon'd by a shelly-cout; Sae leally I'll propone defences, As get you flung for my expences.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 70.

Denominated perhaps from the badges of office on his coat.

SHELM, s. A rascal.

"When the Landgrave called him shelm, Pultroon, Traitor, and deceiver of him whose daughter he had married, he made earnest suit to the Emperour, for the liberty of his godfather, though in vain." Melvil's Memoirs, p. 12.

Fr. schelm, knave, rascal, varlet. This, according to Cotgr., is from a Germ. word which signifies wicked.

Germ. schelm originally signifies the carcase of a dog, or any other animal, that is cast out. Hence it has been applied to man; and denotes one whom all execrate as carrion, unworthy of the rites of sepulture. The reproach, as Wachter thinks, originated from this, that, as part of the punishment of some crimes, the bodies of the criminals were cast forth, after death, without burial.

Su.G. skelm, Belg. schelm, E. skellum, Jun.

skelm, id.

SHELTIE, s. A horse of the smallest size, S.

"This country [Shetland] produces little horses commonly called sheltics, and they are very sprightly, tho' the least of their kind to be seen any where; they are lower in stature than those of Orkney, and it is common for a man of ordinary strength to lift a sheltie from the ground: yet this little creature is able to carry double." Martin's West. Isl. p. 377.

"Their horses are but little, yet strong, and can endure a great deal of fatigue, most of which they have from Zetland, and are call'd Shelties." Wallace's Orkney, p. 36.

"Col, and Joseph, and some others, ran to some little horses called here shelties, that were running wild on a heath, and catched one of them." Boswell's Journ. p. 252.

This was in the island Col, one of the Hebudae.

"The horses are well known for their small size and hardiness. They are called shelties in Britain." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 188.

Can this have any connexion with Germ. zelt, an ambling horse; zelter, a Spanish horse? Or may not Sheltie be rather a corr. of Shetland, q. a Shetland horse? The Isl. and Dan. name of these islands is Hialtland. V. Heims Kringla, i. 95.

SHEPHROA, s. A piece of female dress.

For she invented a thousand toys,—

As scarfs, shephroas, tuffs and rings.

Watson's Coll. i. 30. V. Tuff.

Perhaps something made of kid-leather finely prepared, from Fr. chevreau, a kid; unless it denoted some ornament like a star, from chevreaux, the designation of some stars that make their appearance about the twenty-eighth of September.

SHEUCH, s. A furrow, a ditch. V. SEUCH. To SHEUCH, SHUGH, v. a. To lay plants together in the earth, when brought from the seedbed, before they are planted out; that they may be kept from withering, S. q. to put them in a sheuch or furrow.

To SHEVEL, v. a. To distort, S. Hence sherelling-gabbit, q. having a distorted mouth.

Ye'll gar me stand! ye shevelling-gabbit brock: Ramsay's Poems, ii. 147. V. Snowl.

To SHEVEL, v. n. To walk in an unsteady and oblique sort of way, S. Shail, E. is nearly allied in sense.

Isl. skag-a, and skiogr-a, gradu ferri obliquo, are mentioned by Serent, as allied to E. shail. V. Showl. SHIACKS, s. pl. A light kind of black oats, variegated with grey stripes, having beards like barley, S.B.

"The species of oats used for this last, [fauchs with a single plowing, or one fur ley] and partly for the outfield, is called small oats, hairy oats, or shiucks. They yield from five pecks to half a boll of meal." P. Keith-Hall, Aberd. Statist. Acc. ii. 533.

Perhaps from Su.G. skaeck, variegated, as these oats are striped.

SHILFA, SHILFAW, s. The chaffinch, a bird.

Her cheek is like the shilfa's breast,

Her neck is like the swan's.

Mary Stewart, Hist. Drama, p. 113. V. SHOULFALL. SHILFCORN, S.; SELKHORN, s. A thing which breeds in the skin, resembling a small maggot, and vulgarly considered as such; proceeding from the induration of sebaceous matter.

As worms and selkhorns, which with speed.

Would eat it up. Colvil's Mock Poem, p. 1. 9.

SHILLING, Schilling, Shillen, s. Grain that has passed through the mill, and been freed from the husk, S.

Ersch Katherene with thy polk, breik and rilling,

Thou and thy quean as greidy gleds ye gang, With polks to mill, and begs baith meil and schilling. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 55.

"Another absurdity is, that shillen, i. c. shealing, or hulter corn, is measured by the tacksman of the mill, and is paid, not in shealing, but in meal. There are accordingly great complaints that the corn is not well shealed." P. Rayne, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xv. 117.

i. c. grain that is shelled. V. SHEAL, v. 2. For the same reason it seems to be denominated hulter corn, because the hull is removed.

SHILLIN SEEDS, the outermost husk of corn ground, after being separated from the grain; used for making sowens or flummery, S.

SHILMONTS, s. pl. The frame or rail laid on a cart, for carrying a load of hay, S. V. SHILVINS.

SHILPIE, SHILPIT, adj. 1. Insipid. Wine is said to be shilpit, when it is weak, and wants the proper taste, S.

This seems the primary sense, from Su.G. skaell, insipidus, aquosus, Germ. schal, id. Belg. verschaalden wyn, flat wine; from Teut. verschael-en vento corrumpi, in vappam verti, saporem et odorem genuinum perdere; from schael, patera, q. too long left in the goblet or cup. V. Kilian.

2. "Of a sickly white colour, pale, bleached by sickness," Gl. Sibb. often shilpit-like, S. shilpie-like, S.B.

Warsch, insipid, is used in the same metaph. sense. 3. Ears of corn are said to be shilpie, when not well filled. S.B.

In the latter sense it would seem more nearly al-"lied to Teut. schelp, putamen, S. shaup, having only the appearance of a husk.

SHILVINS, s. pl. Rails that fixed the rungs which formed the body of a cart, constructed after the old fashion, Ang.

This word is also at times applied to the tops of a cart, or the frame used when it is loaded with hay

"Shelvings. Additional tops to the sides of a cart or waggon. North." Gl. Grose. It is the same with Shilmonts.

Su.G. skelwing discrimen, paries intergerinus; Thre, vo. Skilia, disjungere. He thinks, however, that it should rather be written skelwaegg. To SHIMMER, v. n. To shine.

The little windowe dim and darke Was hung with ivy, brere, and yewe; No shimmering sunn here ever shone: No halesome breeze here ever blew.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 134.

And whan she cum into the kirk, She shimmer'd like the sun.

Ibid. p. 190. V. SKIMMERIN. SHINICLE, s. A bonefire. V. SHANNACH. SHINTY, s. 1. An inferior species of golf, generally played at by young people, S.

"At every fair or meeting of the country people, there were contests at racing, wrestling, putting the stone, &c.; and on holidays all the males of a district, young and old, met to play at football, but oftener at shinty.—Shinty is a game played with sticks, crooked at the end, and balls of wood." P. Moulin, Perths. Statist. Acc. v. 72.

In London this game is called hackie. It seems to be the same which is designed not in Gloucest.; the name being borrowed from the ball, which is "made of a knotty piece of wood;" Gl. Grose.

This game is also called Cammon. V. CAMMOCK.

2. The club or stick used in playing, S.

Perhaps from Ir. shon, a club. SHIPPER, s. A shipmaster.

"They called all the shippers and mariners of Leith before the council, to see which of them would take in hand to pass upon the said captain." Pitscottie, p. 95. V. SKIPPER, for which this is perhaps an error.

SHIRLES, s. pl. Turfs for fuel, Aberd. corr. from Scherald, q. v.

SHIRROT, s. A turf or divot, Banffs. V. Sche-RALD.

SHIRT, s. "Wild mustard, Brassica napus," Gl. Sibb.

SHIT, s. A contemptuous designation for a child; generally denoting one that is puny, S.

Fra the Sisters had seen the shape of that shit, Little luck be thy lot there where thou lyes.

Polw. and Montgom. Watson's Coll. ii. 16. This seems the same with E. chit; Ital. cito, puer, puella. Gael. siota, however, signifies "a pet, an ill-bred child;" Shaw.

SHOCHLING, part. pr. Used metaph., apparently in the sense of mean, pattry.

Debts I abhor, and plan to be Frae shochling trade and danger free, That I may, loos'd frae care and strife, With calmness view the edge of life.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 441. V. Shachle, v. n. SHOES, s. pl. The rind of flax, S. perhaps the same with Shaws, q. v. The only ground of doubt is, that shoes is used for lint in the same places, where the foliage of potatoes, &c. is called shaws. Pron. q. shows.

To SHOOT, v. n. To push off from the shore in a boat, or to continue the course in casting a net, S.B.

"Depones, That they had the following shots on the Fraserfield side of the river,—the Throat-shot opposite the west point of the Allochy inch; and from thence they shot all the way to the sea." State, Leslie of Powis, 1805, p. 80. V. Shot, s. 4. To SHOP, v. n. To knock, to rap at a door.

"The most pairt of the warld ar so negligent in this poynt of dutie, that there are verie few that have their heart free when the Lord shoppeth."

Bruce's Serm. 1591. B. Fol. 5, a.

Knocketk, Eng. Edit. But the proper word is chappeth. V. CHAP. SHORE, s. The prop or support used in constructing flakes for inclosing cattle, S.A.

Shored is used in a similar sense, A. Bor. Their Patron so did not them learn,

St. Andrew with his shored cross.

Battle Flodden, st. 131.

Propped, Note, p. 23.
Teut. schoore, fulcimen; schor-en, schoor-en, fulcire; Isl. skur, suggrandia. The word is used in E. in 'he sense of buttress.

To SHORE, v. a. To count, to reckon, S.

Su.G. skor-a, to mark; Isl. skora muntal, to number the people. The word is derived from skaer-a to cut, from the ancient custom of making notches on a piece of wood for assisting the memory. SHORE, s. Debt.

Syne for our shore, he died therefore, And tholed pain for our mis.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 23. In the same sense E. score is used, derived by Skinner from Belg. schore, scissura, ruptura. But V. the v.

For our shore might be rendered, "on our account."

To SHORE, v. a. 1. To threaten. V. Schor, v.

2. To offer, S.O.

A panegyric rhyme, I ween, Even as I was he shor'd me.

Burns, iii. 356.

This is merely an oblique sense of the v. as properly signifying, to threaten. The E. v. offer is used in a similar sense, S. He offered to strike me; i. e. he threatened to give me a blow.

SHORT, adj. Laconic and acrimonious; as, a short answer, a tart reply; to speak short, to speak tartly, S.

Gif Isaiah had bene als short and craibed as Jonas, no question he wald have speared a reason at God." Bruce's Eleven Serm. D, 6, a.

"He maun be little worth, that left you sae."

"He maybe is, young man, and maybe nay."

"Ye're unco short, my lass, to be so lang; 66 But we maun ken you better ere ye gang." Ross's Helenore, p. 57.

Thus the adv. is used by Dunbar.

The gudwyf said richt schortlie, "Ye may trow, "Heir is na meit that ganeand is for yow."

Maitland Poems, p. 74.

Su.G. kort, brevis, (whence Isl. skorte, desum,) is used in the same metaph. sense. Kort om hufwudet; Est homo qui facile irascitur; Kort swar, iratum responsum, Ihre, vo. Stackig; and Teut. kort. Kort veur't hooft, iracundus, irritabilis. In like manner we say, Short of the temper, S.

SHOT, s. 1. The act of moving in any game, a stroke in play, S.

Su.G. skott ictus, from skiut-a jaculari.

Thus it is applied to Curling.

-Some hoary hero, haply he Whose sage direction won the doubtful day, To his attentive juniors tedious talks Of former times ;--of many a bonspeel gain'd, Against opposing parishes; and shots, To human likelihood secure, yet storm'd: With liquor on the table, he pourtrays The situation of each stone.

Graeme's Poems, Anderson's Poets, xi. 447.

2. The term is also used metaph.

"The great shot of Cromwell and Vane is to have a liberty of all religions, without any exception. Many a time we are put to great trouble of mind. We must make the best of an ill game we can." Baillie's Lett. ii. 62.

It might signify aim, object in view. But the connexion with game seems to determine the sense as explained above.

SHOT, s. To begin new shot, new bod, to begin any business de novo, after one has been engaged in it for a time; to do it over again, S.B. This is most probably a very ancient phrase. I scarcely think that it respects play. It seems rather allied to Su.G. Isl. skot, E. shot, or share of money paid for drink, and bod, invitatio convivialis, Verel.; q. "You shall not only have a new feast, but a new invitation."

SHOT. To come shot, to come speed, to advance," Shirr. Gl. S. Vol. II.

Teut. schot. proventus; crescendi ratio; or rather schot, as in the Belg. phrase, Dat schip maakt schot; That ship goes a great pace; Sewel.

SHOT, s. Shot of ground, a field, a plot of land, Loth. synon. sched.

Perhaps as originally signifying a small portion. q. a corner; Su.G. skoet angulus.

SHOT, s. The wooden spout by which water is carried to a mill, S. perhaps from Su.G. skiut-a iaculare.

SHOT, s. A kind of window. V. Schott.

SHOT, s. 1. That particular spot where fishermen are wont to take a draught with their nets,

" Interrogated, If the deepening that branch of the river called the Allochy, at the west end, would hurt the shot at that end of the Allochy, or if the deponent is a judge of fishing?" State, Leslie of Powis, v. Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 40.

Being asked, If their fishing stations or shots have not been frequently repaired on both sides of the river, and at different times, ever since he was a fisher? depones, That they have: That by the reparation made by Dr. Gregory's dike,—the bed of the river to the sea has been deepened, and the navigation of it ameliorated." Ibid. p. 96.

2. The act of drawing a net, or the sweep of the net drawn at the Leaw, S.B.

"Depones, That the fishing of Nether Don could not be carried on without sights from the high banks, as she is not a good bunging water, by which he means taking chance shots, without seeing the run of the fish." Ibid. p. 58.

Teut. schote, jaculatio, q. the act of shooting off with the boat from the bank; Belg. Netten schieten, to cast nets, Sw. skiuta ut ifraan landet, to put off from the shore.

SHOT, s. V. Elfshot.

SHOT-ABOUT, adj. "Striped of various colours," Sibb. Gl.

From the act of shooting or throwing shuttles alternately, containing different threads; the name shuttle being itself from the same origin.

Teut. schiet-spoele, radius textorius, from schieten, jaculari; Isl. skutul, Su.G. skyttel, from skiuta, id. trudere, pellere.

SHOT-BLED, s. The blade of corn, from which the ear afterwards issues, S. shot-blade.

"The sunne-maketh-the cornes to come vp at the first with small green points, and after that to shoote vp to the shot bled, and after that to come to the seede," &c. Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 726.

SHOTT, s. A name given to an ill-grown ewe.

"A few of the worst ewes, called shotts, are likewise sold every year about Martinmas." P. Strathblane, Stirl. Statist. Acc. xviii. 569.

SHOTTLE, adj. Short and thick, squat, S.B. SHOTTLE, s. A small drawer. V. SHUTTLE. SHOULFALL, s. The chaffinch; more commonly shilfaw, S. Fringilla coelebs, Linn, "Fringilla, nostratibus Snowfleck et Shoulfall;" Sibb. Scot. p. 18.

But our learned naturalist is undoubtedly mistaken, in making this the same bird with the snowflake or snow bunting.

To SHOWD, v. n. To waddle in going, S.B. V. Schowd.

SHOWERS, s. pl. Throes, agonies, S.

"It cost Christ and all his followers sharp showers, and hot sweats, ere they won to the top of the mountain." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 131. V. Schours.

To SHOWL, v. a. To showl one's mouth, to distort the face, to make wry mouths, S.B. Shevel, S.O. id.

This is evidently of the same family with chewal used as an adj. by Dunbar, chewal mouth.

Su.G. skaelg, obliquus; Munder skaelger, a showl mouth; Germ. scheel, askew, asquint. The v. Skellie, to squint, q. v. is radically the same.

SHUCKEN, s. Mill-dues. V. Sucken. To SHUE, v. a. To scare or fright away fowls,

S. Germ. scheuch-en, id.

SHUE, s. An amusement much used by children. A deal or plank being laid horizontally at some distance from the ground, and supported in the middle, one sits at each end; and this being set in motion, the one rises while the other sinks, S. In E. this is called Tettertotter. V. Strutt's Sports, p. 227.

To SHUE, v. n. To play at see-saw, S.

SHUGGIE-SHUE, s. A swing, S.; or, as it is called in E., meritot, from shog and shue, q. v.

Brand, referring to Gay, mentions this word as common A. Bor.

"Thus also of the Meritot, vulgo apud puerulos nostrates, Shuggy-Shew; in the South, a swing:

On two near elms the slacken'd cord I hung, Now high, now low, my Blowzalinda swung." Popular Antia, App. p. 406.

Popular Antiq. App. p. 406. SHUGHT, part. pa. "Sunk, covered," Gl. Ajax bang'd up, whase targe was shught

In seven fald o' hide.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect p. 1. Su.G. sko tegmen, sky-a tegere; skugga umbra, skygg-a obumbrare; Isl. skyggd tegmen, defensio. SHUIL, s. A shovel. V. SCHUIL.

SHUNNERS, s. pl. Cinders, Aberd. corr. from the E. word.

To SHUTE A-DEAD, to die; a phrase used concerning cattle. When they are very bad in any disease, it is said they are like to shute a-dead, SB

Perhaps in reference to animals pushing out their limbs at full length, when dying.

SHUTTLE, SHOTTLE, s. 1. A small drawer,

At Edinburgh we sall ha'e a bottle
Of reaming claret,
Gin that my half-pay siller shottle
Can safely spare it.

Hamilton, Ramsay's Poems, ii. 323.

2. A till in a shop, a money-box, S.

Isl. skutill, a table. Hence the Prov., Skam er skutill myn, quad Bonde; Short is my table, quoth the husbandman, or peasant; G. Andr. p. 209, vo. Skamr.

SIB, SIBB, adj. Related by blood, in a state of consanguinity, S. sib'd, id.

"Ane bastard, quhais father is incertaine, be the law is vnderstand, be reason of bluid to be sib to na man, and nane to him." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bastardus.

We're double sib unto the gods; Fat needs him prattle mair? Yet it's na far my gentle blude That I do seek the gear.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 16. This word occurs in P. Ploughman, but by War.

ton is erroneously expl. mother.

He hath wedded a wyfe, within these syx moneths, Is syb to the seuen artes, Scripture is hyr name. Fol. 47, b.

And but ye be sibbe to some of these sisters seuen, It is ful hard bi my head, quod Piers, for any of you al,

Ibid. Fol. 30. b.

Such was the general influence of the Pharisaical system of later ages, in making void the law, that even this reforming Poet swears by his head.

Sibbe, id. Chaucer. Litel sibbe, distantly related; Nigh sibbe, nearly related, Tale Melib. p. 280.

Tyrwhitt's Edit. R. Glouc. writes ysyb.

Alle that were ogt ysyb Edmond the kynge, Other in alyance of eny loue, to dethe he let bringe. P. 315.

In a latter MS. it is changed to sibbe.

A.S. sib, consanguineus; Neh sib, proxime cognatus, Leg. Eccles. Canut. 7. Su.G. sif, cognatus; Teut. sibbe, affinitas.

Some have derived this word from Lat. cipp-us, which, as Caesar informs us, was a word used by the Gauls to denote the trunk of a tree with its branches, (Bell. Gall. L. 7. c. 733.); applied, by an usual transition, to the calculation of degrees of kindred. But Ihre justly prefers the idea, that the term primarily denoted peace, concord, (as MoesG. gasib-jon, reconciliari). For, says he, as the conjunction of blood, among relations, is viewed as a bond and pledge of concord; so, with the ancients, it was almost always denominated from friendship. He refers to Su.G. fraende, (S. friend, a relation,) in proof of this.

Accordingly, A.S. sib seems primarily to have signified peace, as unsibbe denotes war; Alem. sibba, pax, siphea, Isidore; Su.G. Isl. sefe, quies, tranquil-litas.

SIBMAN, s. A relation, a kinsman. Sa maid he nobill chewisance. For his sibmen wonnyt tharby,

That helpyt him full wilfully.

Barbour, iii. 403. MS.

Doug. Virgil, 188. 30.

SYCHT, s. 1. Sight, S.

2. Regard, respect.

"The pepill (that fled to kirkis and sanctuaryis) wer slane but ony sycht to God." Bellend. Cron. B. vii. c. 11.

The term is frequently used by Bellenden in this sense; and corresponds to Belg. aan-zien, op-zigt, in-zigt, Sw. an-seende, an-sihte, Lat. respectus, from re and aspicio.

To Sight, v. a. To view narrowly, to inspect, S. from the E. s.

Sight, s. A station on the bank of a river, or elsewhere, whence those fishers called sightmen observe the motion of salmon in the river, S.

That the fishers used sights, during the fishing season, upon Fraserfield's grounds, on the north of the river, and west of the bridge: that the westmost sight was above the Fluicky-shot, the next above the Ford-shot," &c. Leslie of Powis, &c. v. Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 56.

To Sight, v. a. A term used in fishing, to denote the act of spying fish in the water from the banks, in order to direct the casting of the net, S.B.

"Being asked, Whether the Seaton side in general is not the best side for sighting fish? depones, that it is so, and is most used." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805, p. 123.

SIGHTMAN, s. One employed, in a salmon-fishery, for observing the approach of the fishes, S.

"They are also with propriety called sightmen; because, from habit and attention, they become wonderfully quick-sighted in discerning the motion and approach of one or more salmon, under the water, even when ruffled by the wind, and deepened by the flowing tide." P. Ecclescraig, Kincardine, Statist. Acc. xi. 93.

Doug. Virgil, 190. 21.

i. e. the water free from cares.

3. Certain; as denoting assurance of mind.

"Thow suld be sikkar that the cause or matter quhilk thow confermes with ane eith is trew." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 31. a.

4. Certain; as denoting the effect.

Our thourch his rybbis a seker straik drew he, Quhill leuir and lounggis men mycht all redy se. Wallace, ii. 407. MS.

Thy groans in dowy dens
The yerd-fast stanes do thirle:
And on that sleeth Ulysses head
Sad curses down does bicker;
If there be gods aboon, I'm seer
He'll get them leel and sicker.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 6. In this sense, we often speak of a sicker straik, a stroke that does not miss, that comes with all the force intended.

 Cautious in mercantile transactions, or in the management of one's business, in whatever way,
 He, who is tenacious of his own rights or property, is said to be a sicker man.

3 C 2

· ~ 16.

There couthie, and pensie and sicker, Wonn'd honest young Hab o' the Houch.

This at least seems the sense, as it is afterwards

And Habbie was nae gien to proticks, But guided it weel eneuch.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 292, 293.

Isl. seigr is used in a similar manner. Seigr a sitt mal, causam suam obstinate persequens; Verel. 6. Possessing a good understanding, to be depended on as to soundness of judgment, S.B.

Says Colin, for he was a sicker boy, Neiper, I fear this is a kittle ploy.

Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

7. Applied to language. He speaks very sicker, he expresses himself in a precise and accurate manner, including also, in some degree, the idea of determination, S.

It is also used in O.E.

Siker was the the Emperour, he ne leuede nogt by hynde.

R. Glouc. p. 55.

Chaucer, id.

Rudd, derives it from Lat. secur-us. But as Su.G. seker, siker, Isl. seigr, Alem. sichurir, Germ. sicher, Belg. zeker, and C.B. sicer, have all the same sense; this word is probably as ancient as the Lat. Both may be from the same Scythian stock. Some might prefer an Oriental etymon; Heb. סנך, sagar, clausit. It properly signifies to put any thing into such a state that it cannot be easily moved, Stock. Clav.

SICKERLY, adv. 1. Firmly, S.

"That thou may be sickerly groundit in the trew faith of this sacrament,-dout nocht bot that our saluiour Jesus Christ is baith man and God." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 142. b. 2. Smartly, severely; in relation to a stroke, S.

"Who spoke against conclusions, got usually so sickerly on the fingers that they had better been silent." Baillie's Lett. i. 384.

SICKERNES, s. Security, S.B. Baron Lawes.

It is used by R. Brunne, p. 147.

The kyng of France & he, at the river of S. Rymay,

Held a parlement, gode sikernes to make, That bothe with on assent the way suld vndertake.

Ilkon sikered other with scrite & seale therby. SICKRIFE, adj. Sickly, having a slight degree of sickness, S. used improperly, as the sense attached to it does not correspond to the force of the adj. rife. V. Sick.

SIDE, Syde, adj. 1. Long, hanging low; applied to garments, S.

Thare was also the preist and menstrale sle, Orpheus of Trace, in syde rob harpand he. Doug. Virgil, 187. 34.

Syde was hys habyt, round, and closit mete, That strekit to the ground down over his fete. Ibid. 450. 35.

This idea is sometimes expressed by the phrase fute syde.

Than he that was chefe duke or counsellere, In rob rial vestit, that hate Quirine,-Gird in ane garmont semelie and fute syde, Thir yettis suld vp opin and warp wyde.

Ibid. 229. 35. Hence the title of one of Lyndsay's Poems, In contempt of Syde Tailis; a satire not unnecessary for the ladies of this age, who subject themselves to the aukward and incommodious task of being their own train bearers. The very term fot-sith occurs in A.S., rendered by Lye, chlamys.

Side, A. Bor. id. My coat is very side, i. e. very long, Grose's Prov. Gl.

Su.G. sid, Isl. sidr demissus, A.S. side, sid, longus, amplus, spatiosus. Su.G. sida klader, vestes prolixae, Ihre, side claise, S. Isl. sidskeggr, one who has a side beard. A.S. sidfexed, qui comam prolixam alit; sidreaf, toga talaris. This sense is retained in P. Ploughman.

He was bittlebrowed, and baberlypped also, Wyth two blered eyen, as a blinde hagge, And as a lethren purse, lolled his chekes, Well syder then his chyn, they sheuered for olde.

Fol. 23. a, b.

The term was used by E. writers at least as late as the reign of Elizabeth. In the account of the Queen's entertainment at Killingworth, we are informed that one appeared in the dress of an ancient minstrel. He had " a side gown of Kendale green, after the freshness of the year now.—His gown had side sleeves down to mid-leg, slit from the shoulder to the hand." V. Essay on Anc. E. Minstrels, Percy's Reliques, i. xvi.

2. Late. One who comes to a place too late, or who passes the time appointed, is said to be syde, S.B.

Thre views this as the primary sense, giving sid, inferior, and demissus, only a secondary place. The idea seems well-founded. For MoesG. seitho signifies, sero. Seitho warth; It was late. In like manner it is said of a traveller, who is so late that he must necessarily be overtaken on his journey by the night; He'll be syde, S.B. Junius derives the Goth. word from saitua, occasus, the setting of the sun.

I have not observed that the A.S. word occurs in this sense, except in the superl. Sidesta, serissime, which may be from sith, post; like sithest, postremus. The compar. is found in Alem. sidor, later, from sid postquam. Isl. sijd sero, sydre posterior. Fyr oc sijdur, first and last, G. Andr. Su.G. sid um aptan, late in the evening, corresponds to MoesG. seitho, and to our use of the term. Su.G. sid is used, not only as an adv., sero, but as an adj., serus. Sida hoesten, autumno extremo.

SIDE-ILL, s. A disease of sheep. " I'll cut the craig o' the ewe, That had amaist died of the side-ill." Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 313. V. Sethill.

SYDIS, pl. Cuts of flesh, Doug. Virgil. V.

SYDLINGIS, SIDELINS, adv. 1. Side by side. The wallis ane hundreth fute of hicht, Na wounder was, thocht they wer wicht:

Sic breid abufe the wallis thair was, Thre cartis micht sydlingis on them pas. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 77.

2. Obliquely, not directly, having one side to any object, S. Sidelong, E. is now used in the same sense; but sideling is the ancient term.

"They had chosen a strong grounde somewhat sideling on the side of a hill." Hollingshed's Chron. V. Gl. R. Brunne, p. 647.

Sideling is also used as an adj.

1. Having a declivity, S.

2. Oblique, applied to discourse, S.

For Nory's sake, this sideling hint he gae, To brak her piece and piece her Lindy frae.

Ross's Helenore, p. 105.

This is also used as a s. The sidelins (sidlings) of a hill, S. i. e. the declivity, q. along the side. SYE, s. The sea.

To Acheron reuin down that hellis sye.— Doug. Virgil, 227. 44.

SYE, s. A seath or coalfish.

"The fishes commonly caught on the coast are lythe, syc.—Syes under one year old are called cuddies." P. Portree, Invern. Statist. Acc. xvi. 149. V. Seath.

SIERGE, s. A taper. V. SERGE.

SIGNIFERE, s. The Zodiac, Lat. signifer.

——I come vnto the circle clere

Off Signifere, quhare fair brycht and schere The signis schone.

King's Quair, iii. 3.

SIGONALE, s. "A small parcel or quantity," Sibb. Gl.

This word appears in Houlate, iii. 16.

Syne for a sigonale of frutt thai strove in the stede.

But in MS. it is supponale, perhaps a plate, or basket; from Lat. suppon-ere, to place under.

SYIS, SYISS, SYSS, SEIS, s. pl. Times; generally used in composition, as fele syis, oft syss.

So thik with strakis this campioun maist strang
With athir hand fele syis at Dares dang.

Doug. Virgil, 143. 14. Lo how hardyment tane sa sudandly, And drewyn to the end scharply, May ger oftsyss unlikly thingis

Cum to rycht fayr and gud endingis.

Barbour, ix. 634. MS. Wyntown uses fyve syis for five times.

And the left syde lang sall thou but dout

Cirkill and saile mony seis about.

Doug. Virgil, 81. 55.

V. SYITH.

SYISS, Syse, s. Sice, the number of six at dice; from Fr. six.

Sum tynis syiss, and winnis but ess.

"Thus Chaucer, Monk's Tale, 1. 687. 'Sice fortune is tourned to an ace." Lord Hailes, p. 295. Note.

Hence to sett apoun syse, to set on a throw at dice, to play at dice in general.

Sum ledis langis on the land, for luf or for lak, To sembyl with there chaftis, and sett apoun syse. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 14.

SYITH, SYTH, s. Times; feil syith, many times.

Set I feil syith sic twa monethis in fere Wrate neuir ane wourd, nor micht the volume stere.

Doug. Virgil, 484. 19.

Full fele syth, and weill fele syth, a great many times, very often.

Barbour, iii. 470. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton expl. syth, easy; in reference perhaps to the following passage.

And saw it wes not syth to ta The toun, quhill sik defens wes mad.

Barbour, xvii. 454.

But here it is eyth, in MS. A.S. sithe, MoesG. sintha, vices, used in composition. Twaimsintham, twice; sibansintham, seven times.

SIKE, SYIK, SYK, s. 1. A rill or rivulet, one that is usually dry in summer, S.; strype, synon.

Bedowin in donkis depe was every sike.

Doug. Virgil, 201. 10.

Nocht lang sensyne, besyd ane syik, Upoun the sonny syd of ane dyk, I slew with my rycht hand Ane thowsand.———

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 11.

Bot that consydryd noucht the plas; For a gret syk betwene thame was,

On ilkė syd brays stay:

At that gret syke assemblyd thai.

It indeed seems to be used in the same sense, ibid. 36. 57, &c.

Bot thare wes nere hym in that stede A depe syk, and on fute wes he; Thare owre he stert wyth his menyhè, And a-bade at the sikis bra. The Inglis, als hard as hors mycht ga, Come on, that syk as [thai] noucht had sene: Thai wend, that all playne feld had bene. Thare at the assemblè thai

In the syk to the gyrthyn lay.

It is used in the same sense by Barbour, xi. 300.

And the sykis alsua that ar thar doun,
Sall put thaim to confusioune.

To SIKE, v. a.

Giff ye be warldly wight, that dooth me sike, Quhy lest God mak you so, my derest hert, To do a sely prisoner thus smert?

King's Quair, ii. 25.

Mr. Tytler thinks it not improbable, that, as site signifies grief, syke is used metri causa. Perhaps it rather refers to sighing. V. next word.

SIKING, s. Sighing.

Hit yaules, hit yamers, with waymyng wete, And seid, with siking sare, "I ban the body me bare!"

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 7. A.S. sic-an; sicett-an, Su.G. suck-a, anc. sock-a, id. suck, anc. sikt, a sigh; MoesG. swog-jan, to groan.

SIKKIN, adj. Such kind of. V. under Sic. SIL, Sill, s. A billet, a piece of wood, a faggot.

Sum vthir presit with schidis and mony ane sill The fyre blesis about the rufe to fling.

Doug. Virgil, 297. 34.

"He brocht mony huge sillis & treis out of the nixt wod, syne fillit the fowsis and trinchis of the said castel with the samyn." Bellend. Cron. B. viii. c. 19.

A.S. syl, Teut. suyle, a post, a pillar; A.S. sylaex, a chip-axe or block-axe. V. Syll.

SILDER, s. Silver, Ang.

The adj. is pron. in the same manner.

—— Phoebus, wi' his gauden beams,
Bang'd in the light of day,
And glittering on the silder streams
That thro' the valleys stray.

A Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 72.

SYLD, part. pa. V. next word.

To SILE, SYLE, SYLL, v. a. 1. To cover, or to blindfold.

Be not thairfoir syld as ane bellie blind: Nor lat thyself be led upone the yee.

Maitland Poems, p. 164. Yet he, this glasse who hid, their eyes dide sile,

His guiltless blood must needs their hands defile.

More's True Crucifixe, p. 62.

Why doe they syle poore mocked people's sight, Christ's face from viewing in this mirror bright? Ibid. p. 78.

2. To hide, to conceal.

— Yet and thou syll the veritie, Then downe thou sall.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 9.

''Thai offend the Juge, fra quhom thai syle & hyde the veritie.'' Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1551, Fol. 70, a.

This seems the same with sylde, ouer sylde, Doug. Virgil, q. v. But the origin is uncertain. O.E.

cyll is used to denote a sort of canopy.

"The chammer was haunged of red and of blew, and in it was a cyll of state of cloth of gold; but the Kyng was not under for that sam day." Marriage of James IV. and Margaret of Engl. Leland's Collect. iv. 295.

The origin has been supposed to be Ital. cielo, in a secondary sense, any high arch, from Lat. coelum. Sibb. prefers Su.G. skyl-a, Teut. schuyl-en, occultare. But I scarcely have met with one instance of a word in our language, derived from Goth. or Teut., altogether losing k or ch. Teut. siele, indusium, subucula, might be supposed to have a preferable claim. Hence, SYLING, s. Ceiling.

The olde syling that was once fast joyned together with nailes will begin to cling, and then to gape," &c. Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 612.

To SYLE, v. a. 1. To deceive, to circumvent.

Dissimulance was bissie me to syle,

And Fair Calling did oft upon me smyle.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 16.

"Surround, encompass;" Lord Hailes. But the character, in the personification, fixes the meaning as given above.

---- Certis, we wemen

We set us all fra the sichte to syle men of treuth: We dule for na evil deidis sa it be device halden.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 61.

Thus subtellie the king was sylit,

And all the pepill wer begylit.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 64.

'' Choose ye this day, whether with humbled Esther you will wisely resolve to prove constant,—or if you will—like Peter overwhelmed with fear, adventure to seik your comforte and quietnesse in the sway of time, as though the Lord could be syled, as Absalom was with Chusaye's policie." Epistle of a Christian Brother, A. 1624, p. 5.

This might seem to be a secondary sense of the v., as signifying to cover. But it is nearly allied to A.S. syl-an, to betray. Thus it is used concerning Judas; Mannes sunu thu mith cosse sylst; Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss. Luke, xxii. 48. Isl. sel-ia, Su.G. sael-ia, to deliver into the hands of another.

2. Elsewhere it may be rendered, betray.

Sen that I go begyld With ane that faythe has syld.

Murning Maidin, Maitland Poems, p. 205. i. e. delivered up faith, acted a false and treacherous part.

To SILE, SYLE, v. a. To strain, to pass through a strainer; a term pretty general in the south of S. whereas sye is used S.B. Loth. &c.

A. Bor. to soil milk, to strain it; a sile-dish, a strainer, Ray.

Su.G. sil-a, colare; sil, a strainer, Isl. saallde, id. cribrum, colum, saeld-a, colare, cribrare.

A.S. sylla, " sella, a seat, a chaire, a bench;" Somner. Syll, as applied to Arthur, may denote his throne; as respecting his nobles, the honourable seats provided for them; seymly on syll, the dignified appearance made both by the king and his lords.

SILLABE, s. A syllable, S.

"Thankfulnes standeth not in the multitude of sillabs and voices, bot—in the dispositioun of the soule." Bruce's Eleven Serm. M. 4, a.

"There is not a worde or a sillabe lost here."

Rollocke on the Passion, p. 24.

Ben Johnson writes syllabe.

SILLER, s. A canopy.

The kynge to souper is set, served in halle, Under a siller of silke, dayntly dight. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 1.

V. SILE, v. SILLER, s. 1. Silver, S.

Robert the good, by a' the swains rever'd, Wise are his words, like siller is his beard.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 8.

2. Money in general, S.

"Mony a guid plack hae I gottin o' the Regent's siller for printin' preachins and plots." Mary Stewart, Hist. Drama, p. 44.

SILLER, adj. Of or belonging to silver, S.

"The excavations made in consequence of working the metals, at the southern extremity on the north side of the Leadlaw Hill, are still called by the inhabitants, the siller holes." P. Pennycuik, Loth. Append. Statist. Acc. xvii. 628.

SILLY, adj. 1. Lean, meagre, S.

2. Weak, as the effect of disease, S.

- We haif sae hecht,-To do the thing we can, To pleise baith, and eise baith,

This silly sickly man.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 108. " A silly bairn is eith to lear," S.; Ferguson's Prov. p. 1. intimating, that weakly children often discover great quickness of apprehension, their minds not being diverted by fondness for play.

3. Frail, as being mortal.

" My sillie bodic, wee have taken much pains together for to get a rest which we have looked long for, but could not find." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1134.

4. In the same sense as E. poor is often used, denoting a state which excites compassion, S.

- "The silly stranger in an uncouth country must take with smoky inns, and coarse cheer, and a hard bed, and a barking ill-tongued host." Rutherford's Lett. P. iii. ep. 9.
- 5. Fatuous, having weakness of mind approaching to idiocy, S.

- "By reason of the extraordinary loss of blood, and strokes he had got, he did not recover the exercise of his reason fully, but was silly, and next to an idiot." Wodrow, ii. 318.

The term, as thus used, has a much stronger sig-nification than E. silly, foolish. V. Sely. SILLIK, SILAK, SELLOK, s. The name given to the fry of the Coal-fish, or Gadus carbonarius; properly, for the first year, Orkn.; podlie, synon. Loth.

There are numbers of small fish, such as coalfish, and all their fry, of different ages, down to a year old; at which time I have seen them sold at the rate of 6d. the thousand, at the same time that worse fish of the same kind was sold in Edinburgh market at 6d. the dozen, or there about, under the name of podlics. Ours are called silliks." P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 314. Selloks, ibid. iii. 416.; silaks, vii. 542.

As this name is in Orkney given more laxly to fry of different kinds, it is not improbable that it is from Su.G. sill, a herring, because the fry thus denominated are nearly of the same size. V. SEATH, SYLOUR, Gawan and Gol. V. Deir. SILVER-MAILL, s. Rent paid in money. V.

To SILVERIZE, v. a. To cover with silverleaf, S.

SIMMER TREIS, apparently May-poles. V. SKAF-RIE, and ABBOT of VNRESSOUN.

SIMMONDS, s. pl. Ropes made of heath and of Empetrum nigrum, Orkn.; evidently a derivative from Isl. sime, vinculum, funiculus.

SYMPILL, SEMPILL, SEMPLE, adj. 1. Lowborn, S.

The sympelast, that is oure ost wyth-in, Has gret gentilis of hys kyn.

Wyntown, viii. 16. 179. Law born he was, and off law simpill blud.

Wallace, vii. 738. MS. Sexty thay slew, in that hald was no ma, Bot ane auld preist, and sympill wemen twa. Ibid. vi. 825. MS.

- To curs and ban the sempill poore man, That had noght to flee the paine.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 7. In the same sense the phrase gentle and semple, is used to denote those of superior and inferior birth, S. 2. Low in present circumstances, without respect

For he wes cummyn of gentil-men, In sympil state set he wes then: Hys fadyre wes a manly knycht; Hys modyre wes a lady bryeht.

Wyntown, viii. 13. 8.

3. Not possessing strength, from multitude or riches.

Thai war all out to fele to fycht With few felk, off a symple land. Barbour, xi. 202. MS. In the same sense he calls a few men, a sympill cumpany, because they durst not attempt to contend with their enemies.

4. Mean, vulgar.

As I hard say, it was a semple wane
Of fog and fern, full fecklessly was maid.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 146.

Fr. simple, common, ordinary.

5. Used as a term exciting, or expressive of, pity.

To your magnificens

I me commend, as I haif done befoir, My sempill heart for now and evirmoir. Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 164.

Thus the phrase poor heart is sometimes used in E.

SYMPYLLY, adv. Poorly, meanly, in low and straitened circumstances.

And levyt thar full sympylly.

Barbour, i. 331. MS.

SINACLE, s. "A grain, a small quantity," Shirr. Gl. S.B.; used also metaph.

I bade you speak, but ye nae answer made, And syne in haste I lifted up your head; But never a sinacle of life was there, And I was just the neist thing to despair. Ross's Helenore, p. 15.

SYND, s.

Quhair boun ye to, my friend, sche sais,
Astonishtly me think ye gais,
Tell me quhat mouis your mynd.
Gif ye gang wrang, I sall ye gyde,
Apearandly thou wanderst wyde,
I se weill be your synd.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 37. It may be equivalent to sign or demonstration; Isl. syne, synde, monstro. But I suspect that it rather signifies appearance, or perhaps aspect; Su.G. syn facies, A.S. onsien, onsyne, vultus, aspectus.

To SYND, Sind, Sein, v. a. 1. To wash slightly; as, to synd a bowl, to pour a little water into it, and then throw it out again, S.; to synd, to rinse, or wash out, A. Bor.

A well beside a birken bush, A bush o'er spread wi' buds, Tent well a lass of beauty flush There sinding out her duds.

Morison's Poems, p. 148. Wi' nimble hand she sinds her milking pail. Ibid. p. 185.

And shape it bairn and bairnlie-like,
And in twa glazen een ye pit;
Wi' haly water synd it o'er,
And by the haly rood sain it.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 184.

2. Metaph. transferred to the swallowing of liquids, S. To synd down one's meat, to dilute it, S.

It is always applied to things that are supposed to be nearly clean, as denoting a slight ablution. It seems originally to have denoted moral purification, especially that which was viewed as the consequence of making the sign of the cross.

That this has been the origin of the term, as now applied, appears highly probable, from the mode of consecration observed, in former times at least, in Orkney, by sprinkling with water.

"When the beasts—are sick, they sprinkle them with a water made up by them;—wherewith likeways they sprinkle their boats when they succeed and prosper not in fishing. And especially on Hallow-Even, they use to sein or sign their boats, and put a cross of tar upon them." Brand's Orkney,

p. 62.

It must be observed, however, that Isl. sign-a, consecrare, was probably used among the Goths in the times of heathenism. We read of a vessel signat or consecrated to Thor; Herraud S. Signadi Odni; He consecrated it to Odin; Heimskringla, Hakonar Goda S. c. 18. It is possible, however, that the writers only use the terms which had been adopted after the introduction of that corrupted form of Christianity which they had received. Olaus renders sygn, immunis a culpa, absolutus a crimine, insons; Lex. Run. V. Sane, to bless.

SYND, SYNE, s. 1. A slight ablution, S.
2. Metaph. applied to drink, as washing the throat,
S.

Weel kens the gudewife that the pleughs require
A heartsome meltith, and refreshing synd
O' nappy liquor, o'er a blazing fire.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 55.
To SINDER, v. a. To sunder, S.; also, as v. n., to part, to separate.

A.S. syndr-ian, separare.

SINDRY, adj. Sundry, various; A.S. sindrig.
Out of the heuin againe from sindry artis,
Out of quiet hirnes the rout vpstertis

2. Late, as contradistinguished from soon.

"What I know I shall ever give you an account of soon or syne." Baillie's Lett. i. 355.

i. e. sooner or later.

Each rogue, altho' with Nick he should combine, Shall be discovered either soon or sync.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 318.

Notwithstanding the similarity of A.S. saene, segnis, tardus, to suene, nimis segnis, too slow; this must certainly be viewed as originally the same with sen, prep. For this, as equivalent to E. since, merely denotes the time that has elapsed after some date or event referred to. Teut. sind, Germ. sint, post, postea. Wachter gives sint as synon. with seit, which he deduces from A.S. sith-ian, ire, venire, rendering it, transitus in aliud tempus. A.S. sith, as signifying time, might indeed have this origin; because of its progress, as the lapse of time resembles the motion of a body from one point to another; or, because men in a barbarous state might calculate time from the advance they made in going from one place to another, as distance is sometimes calculated by hours. Su.G. sen signifies both post and sero. V. Sen.

Under that article, we might have observed, that our phrase sen syne may be viewed as a tautology consisting of two words radically the same, and, in fact, including no other idea than what is conveyed by sen; although the latter preserves more of the form of A.S. sith-than, (after then), being immediately contr. from sythyn. Or, it may be considered as compounded of sen, conj. since, and the adv. syne, in the sense of then, q. since, after-then, or after that time. Still, however, it is tautological.

Syne, in the phrase lang syne, and auld lang syne, is used as if it were a s. To a native of this country, it is very expressive; and conveys a soothing idea to the mind, as recalling "the memory of joys that are past."

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And days o' lang syne?

-We'll tak a cup o' kindness yet, For autd lang syne.

Burns, iv. 123.

SYNE, conj. Since, seeing, S.

Bot Lordys, gywc youre curtasy,-

Syne that I set my besynes Tyl al yhoure plesans generaly.

Wyntown, i. Prol. 52.

Barbour uses sen in this sense.

To SING, v. a. To singe; part. pa. singit, also sung; pron. as E. sing, canere.

They have contriv'd rebellious books, Whose paper well might serve the cooks To sing their poultrie, I dare swear,

A thousand or three hundred year. Cleland's Poems, p. 19.

Fat are the puddings; heads and feet well sung. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 92.

"He's like the singed [pron. singit] cat, better than he's likely;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 33. Some express it,—" better than he's bonny to."

A.S. saeng-an, Germ. seng-en, Belg. zeng-en, id. SINGIT-LIKE, adj. Puny, shrivelled; as resembling what has been singed, S.

Vol. II.

SINGIN-E'EN, s. The last night of the year, Fife. -We come to Jean,

A lass baith douse an' thrifty, But singin-e'en she's owre aft seen, She's shakin' hands wi' fifty.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 24.

The designation seems to have originated from the carols sung on this evening. V. HOGMANAY. It may be observed, however, as many of the superstitious ideas and rites, originally pertaining to Yule, have been transferred to the last day of the year, that some of the vulgar believe that the bees may be heard to sing in their hives on Christmas-eve. V. Yule-e'en. SINGLAR, adj. Unarmed.

I wald tak weid, suld I fecht with a man, Bot [for] a dog, that nocht of armys can. I will haitf nayn, bot synglar as I ga. A gret manteill about his hand can ta, And his gud suerd; with him he tuk na mar. Wallace, xi. 241. MS.

The only word that resembles this in signification is S. single, thinly clad. SINGLE, adv. V. SEINDLE.

SINGLE, s. A handful of gleaned corn, S.

Thou lay richt prydles in the peis this sommer, And fain at evin for to bring hame a single. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53.

Sibb. writes also sindle, making this form of the word the ground of derivation from Su.G. syn necessitas, and del pars, q. poor man's share. But sin, unus, singularis, and del, are perhaps preferable. It may, however, be traced to Lat. singul-us, because the ears are gathered singly. SINKIL, s.

"I sau sinkil, that slais the virmis of the bellye."

Compl. S. p. 104.

Apparently, an errat. for finkil, fennel, still sometimes used as an anthelminthic. V. FYNKLE. SYNLE, adv. Seldom, S.B. V. SEINDLE. SYNOPARE, s. Cinnabar. Doug. Virgil, 400.7. SINSYNE, adv. Since, S.

- Years sinsyne hae o'er us run, Like Logan to the simmer sun.

Burns, iv. 74. V. SYNE, adv. and SEN. To SIPE, SEIP, r. n. To ooze, or distil very gently, as liquids do through a cask that is not quite tight, S. A. Bor.

"To sipe, sype, to leak, to pass through in small quantity;" Gl. Sibb.

Tent. sijp-en, id. stillare, manare, fluere. I need scarcely observe, that this is quite different from sippen, pitissare, sorbillare, which corresponds to E. sip.

The diminutives of sijp-en are, Germ. sippeln, zippeln, Belg. zypel-en, afzypel-en, to drop, zyperen, leakage. The Teut. word in Germ. also assumes the form of sauf-en; fluere, manare. Wachter marks the affinity between this and Heb. zuph []], zoob] fluxit, emanavit; although he seems to view Germ. saw, aqua, as the root of sauf-en.

A.S. sip-an is very nearly allied; expl. by Somner, " macerare, to soften by steeping in liquor, to soke or wash in water or other liquor, to sappe." Sypins, s. pl. The liquor that has oozed from an insufficient cask, S.

To SYPYRE, SUPIR, v. n. To sigh. Than softlie did I suoufe and sleep,-Sypyring, quhils wyring My tender body to. Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Goll. ii. 34. My spreit supirs and sichs maist sair.

SIRDONING, s. A term used to denote the singing of birds.

Their sirdoning the bony birds In banks thay do begin; With pipes of reeds the jolie hirds Halds up the mirrie din.

A. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 390.

Fr. sourdine, " the little pipe, or tenon put into the mouth of a trumpet, to make it sound low;" Cotgr. SYRE, s. A title of honour. V. Schir. SYRE, s. A sewer, S. syver, sometimes pron. as syre.

He and I lap o're many a syre.

Watson's Coll. i. 12. V. SYVER. SIR JOHN, a close stool, S.; knight, synon.

This name might perhaps be introduced about the time of the Reformation, from contempt of the priests, or Pope's Knights; especially as John seems to have been a name commonly imposed, in a disrespectful way, on a priest. Hence the contemptuous designation, Mess John, i. e. John who says mass.

Or shall we suppose that the synon., knight, is the more ancient name, conferred on this utensil from the idea of service?

SIRKEN, adj. Tender of one's flesh, afraid of pain, S.

Belg. sorgh-en, curare?

To SIRPLE, v. a. To sip often, to tipple, S. It is used in the first sense, A. Bor.

Sw. sorpl-a, Germ. schurft-en, Belg. slurp-en, id. all nearly allied to Lat. sorbill-are.

SISE, Syss, s. 1. Assize, abbrev. Schir Gilbert Malherbe, and Logy, And Richard Broune, thir thre planly War with a syss than ourtane; Tharfor thai drawyn war ilkane, And hangyt, and hedyt tharto.

Barbour, xix. 55. MS.

2. Doom, judgment.

Als faith is this sentence, as sharp is thy sise; Syne duly they deemed what death it should die. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 16. SYSE, s. Six at dice. V. Sylss.

To SIST, v. a. To stop, to stay. To sist procedure, or process, to delay judicial proceeding in a cause, S.; used both in civil and ecclesiastical courts. Lat. sist-ere, to stop.

"In church discipline, a difference is to be made between what is satisfactory unto a church judicatory, so as to admit the defender unto all church privileges, as if the offence had never been; and what may be satisfying, so as to sist procedure for the time." Stewart's Collections, p. 261.

Sist, s. The act of legally staying diligence, or execution on decrees for civil debts; a forensic term, S.

" A sist granted on a bill without passing it, expires also in fourteen days; Act Sederunt, Nov. 9. 1680." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. T. 3. s. 18. V. the v. To SIST, or Sist one's self, v. a. 1. To cite, to summon; a forensic term, S.

"According to this letter, he [Mr. W. Veitch] was received upon the Borders, and brought prisoner to Edinburgh, and February 22, he was sisted before the committee for publick affairs." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 6.

2. To set, or take a place, as at the bar of a court, where one's cause is to be judicially tried and determined; a term generally used in a religious sense, with respect to one's engagement in the acts of divine worship, in order to express the solemnity of the appearance, S.

"Ordinances are means by which, to use an unclassical, but expressive word, we are sisted more directly in the presence of God." Disquisition on the Observance of the Lord's Supper, p. 45. 46.

The term has been probably borrowed from the Roman law. Sist-ere, to set, or be made to stand; also, to have one forthcoming. Sistere vadimonium, to appear to his recognisance; Cic. pro Quint. 8. To SIT, v. n. 1. To stop in growth, to become stunted; applied both to animals and vegetables, S. 2. To shrink, S.

3. To sink, as when a wall falls down in consequence of the softness of the foundation, S.

This seems merely a peculiar sense of the E. v., as Lat. subsid-ere is formed from sed-ere, to sit. SIT, s. The state of sinking, as applied to a wall, S. To SIT an offer, not to accept of it, S.

"It implies that very few, who sit the offer until then, are honoured with repentance, as he was."

Guthrie's Trial, p. 82. 83.

To SIT to, v. n. Any food, prepared in a pot, is said to sit to, when, from not being stirred, it is allowed to burn, S.

The phrase evidently respects its adhesion to the vessel. "Pot-sitten. Burnt to. North." Gl. Grose. To SIT, SITT, v. a. To grieve, to vex.

And he for wo weyle ner worthit to weide; And said, "Sone, thir tithingis sittis me sor, And be it knawin, thow may tak scaith tharfor." Wallace, i. 438. MS.

SITE, SYTE, s. 1. Sorrow, grief, S. 4. Stand still there as thou art with mekle syte; Preis na forther, for this is the hald rycht Of Gaystis, Schaddois, Slepe, and douerit Nycht. Doug. Virgil, 177. 13.

In the same sense the term is used, when Gologras proposes to Gawan, who had defeated him, to submit to be carried to the castle, as if he had been his prisoner; that he might not be openly disgraced.

Thus may you saif me fra syte. As I am cristynit perfite, I sall thi kyndnes quyte, And sauf thyn honoure.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 8. False is this warld, and full of variance, Besoncht with syn, and othir sytis mo. Balade, printed 1508. S. P. R. iii. 128.

2. Suffering, punishment.

SYT

Sic wikkit and condempnit wichtis al tyte, As thay come in that dolly pyt of syte, Tisiphone, the wrekare of misdedis, With guhip in hand al reddy fast hir spedis All to assale, to skurge, toir and bete.

Doug. Virgil, 184. 19. "It is S .- sometimes taken for revenge or punishment, as when they say, I have gotten my heart's site on him, i. e. my heart's desire on him, or all the evil I wish'd him," Rudd. "To dree the syte, to suffer punishment," Shirr. Gl. S.B. V. SITHE, s.

Rudd. views it as akin to S. syith and assithment. Sibb. renders it "rather perhaps horror, à Fris. saeghe, horror, metus." He has invented a new sense, for introducing an etymon, that would scarcely deserve attention, although the words corresponded in signification,

The origin is undoubtedly Isl. syt-a, to mourn, to lament; whence sut, sorrow, anxiety, syting, id. sytning, care. Sytta dicitur, qui assiduo luget; G. Andr. Perhaps Su.G. swid-a dolere, may be viewed as a cognate; as well as Alem. suid-en, id. also, affligere.

SITFULL, SITEFULL, adj. Sorrowful, causing sorrow.

Compleyne for him in to that sitfull sell is, Compleyne his payne in dolour thus that duellis. Wallace, ii. 218. MS. V. SITE.

SYVER, SIVER, s. A covered drain, S. also syre, E. sewer.

"It lies in a swamp, the inconvenience of which the present clergyman has, in some degree, remedied by sivers, as they are here called, and by other methods of draining the water." P. Glasford, Lanarks. Statist. Acc. vii. 145.

Dr. Johns. derives the E. word from Fr. issu-er, q. to issue; Seren. from Isl. sugar euripus; saeg-r, sang, Sw. sog, colluvies, ductus aquae fluentis. Perhaps Teut. suyver, mundus, suyver-en, mundare, purgare, may have some claim of affinity.

RUMBLING SYVER, a drain filled with stones thrown loosely together, so as to leave a passage for water, S.

SIVVEN, s. The Raspberry, or the fruit of the Rubus idaeus, Linn. S. V. next word. SIVVENS, SIBBINS, s. pl. 1. A disease viewed as of the venereal kind, S.

"A loathsome and very infectious disease of the venereal kind, called the Sivvens, has long afflicted the inhabitants of the Highlands, and from thence some parts of the Lowlands in Scotland, even as far as the borders of England. Tradition says that it was introduced by the soldiers of Cromwell garrisoned in the Highlands.—Sometimes a fungus appears in various parts of the body resembling a raspberry, in the Erse language called Sivven." Pen. nant's Tour in S. 1772, p. 447.

The same account is given of the origin of the name by Swediaur.

C'est la resemblance de ces excroissances avec le fruit d'un framboisier sauvage du pays, nommé, dans la langue Celtique, Siwin, que les habitans ons donné le nom de Siwin, Sibbin, ou Sibbens, a cette maladie. Maladies Syphilitiques, Tom. ii. 380.

"The disease called Sibbins, -has made its appearance once or twice in this parish." P. Men-muir, Forfars. Statist. Acc. v. 146.

Some view this disease as a combination of the venereal with the itch.

2. The itch, Orkn. pron. sibbens.

SYVEWARM, s. Leg. Syvewarin.

The Syvewarin wes taken thar. Bot sa rad wes Richard of Clar. That he fled to the south countré.

Barbour, xv. 75. MS. "Editions read, 'The Swaryn.' I cannot interpret either." Pink. N. The Edin. Edit. 1758. reads syvewaryne. There can be no doubt that the chief magistrate is meant. For in some of the towns in Ireland, that, according to their constitution, have no Mayor, he is denominated The Sovereign; as, The Sovereign of Belfast, &c. The term seems to have been introduced from England, after the. conquest of Ireland, from Fr. Souverain.

According to Pasquier, (Recherches, quoted by Menage,) those who were afterwards called Presidents of different chambers, in France, were formerly denominated Souverains. Even the Baillies and Seneschals, he says, bore the same designation, in respect to the inferior officers in their jurisdictions. This name was given to them in the Ordinance of Charles VI. of France, A. 1386. Dict. Trev. Car. pentier expl. the term as synon. with L.B. supranus, superior, praefectus, praepositus; Ital. soprano; Suppl. Du Cange. Sovereign, quaestor, supremus balivus; Kiliau. Append.

SKADDINS, s. pl. Turfs, Banffs.

Teut. schadde cespes, gleba; which may be radically allied to Isl. skavid disjunction, as being separated from the soil. This again is from skaa, a primitive denoting separation. V. Shach.

To SKAFF, ŠKAIFF, v. a. To collect by dishonourable means.

He says, Thou shaffs and begs mair beir and aits, Nor ony criple in Carrick land about.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54.

SKAFRIE, SCAFFERIE, s. I. Extortion, unjust methods of procuring money.

"And gif ony wemen or vthers about simmer treis singand, makis perturbation to the Quenis liegis in the passage throw burrowis and vthers landwart townis, the wemen perturbatouris for skafrie of money or vtherwyse, salbe takin, handellit, and put vpone the cukstulis of cuerie burgh, or towne." Acts Mar. 1555. c. 40, Edit. 1566.

"The Lordes of Secret Counsell, and Session, considering the great extortion used by the Writers and Clerkes of all judicatories within this realme, in extorting from the subjects of the countrey such unreasonable and exorbitant pryces for their writtes, as ought not to be suffered in a well governed commonwealth: Procuring thereby not only private grudges, but publicke exclamations, against the with-gate and libertie graunted unto such shamefull scafferie and extortion," &c. Acts Ja. VI. 1606. V. Acts, 1621. c. 19. Murray.

2. "The contents of a larder or pantry," Sibb.

Gl. Sw. skafferi, cella penuaria.

SKAFFAY, adj. An epithet applied to the inferior practitioners in courts of law, apparently from their supposed eagerness to provide for themselves.

Bot skaffay clerks, with covetyce inspyred, Till execute thair office maun be hyred. Na caus thay call unless they hyrelings have; If not, it sall be laid beneath the lave.

Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 372.

Afterwards skaffing is used as synon. p. 373. Sum Senators, as weil as skaffing scribes, Ar blindit oft with blinding buds and bribes; And mair respects the person nor the cause, And finds for divers persons divers laws.

SKAICHER, s. A term used in addressing a child, implying the idea of a sort of good-humoured reprehension, Ang.

Germ. schecker a wanton, schecker-n to wanton; Gael. sgiogair, a jackanapes.

To SKAIK, v. a. 1. To spread, to separate one part of any thing from another, in an aukward or dirty manner, S.B.

It is properly applied to moist substances. A child is said to skaik his porridge, when instead of supping them equally, he spreads them over the plate with his spoon.

2. To bedaub. Clothes are said to be skaikit with dirt or gutters, especially when streaked with it here and there, S.B.

This seems to be a very ancient word, as intimately allied to Isl. skack-ur impar, skecke, dispar facio, G. Andr. p. 209. Skacki, inaequalitas, discrimen; Orkneyinga S. p. 168. V. Shach and Scalkt.

To SKAIL, SKAILL, SKALE, v. a. 1. To disjoin, to separate, to disperse; implying the idea of violence, or of the influence of terror, S.

Bot the Kyng rycht manlyly Swne skalyd all that cumpany,

And tuk and slwe. Wyntown, vii. 7. 210. Skayle is used as the pret., in relation to the dispersion of a fleet.

Bot a storme swa gret thaym skayle, That thai war drywyn all away.

Ibid. viii. 42. 96.

2. To dismiss, to cause to depart, S.

"The Schiref sall be him self, his Deputis, or Officiaris, send to thay parteis, and charge thame to ceis, and skaill thair gadderingis, and cum in sober and quyet wyis to the court after the forme of the said act." Acts Ja. III. 1487. c. 123. Ed. 1566.

To skail the byke, a metaph. phrase borrowed from a hive of bees, signifying, to disperse the assembly, S.

3. To scatter, to disperse; applied to rumours.
From thems fordwarte Vlixes mare and mare
With new crimes begouth to affray me sare,
And dangerous rumours amangis the commouns hedis

Skalit and sew of me in divers stedis.

Doug. Virgil, 41. 47. Spargere voces, Virg. A. Bor. "scale; to spread, as manure, gravel, or other loose materials;" Gl. Grose.

4. To scatter; applied to the mind.

Quha skaylis his thought in syndrynes
In ilk thyng it is the les.

Wyntown, viii. 16. 37.
5. To spill, to shed; used both with respect to liquids and solids. You will skail your kail, you will spill your broth, S.

you will spill your broth, S. "An old seck is ay skailing." Ray's Scot. Prov. p. 280. Divers. Purley, i. 238. The phrase is elliptical, as referring to what it contains, grain, meal, &c.

Mr. Tooke expl. this, "parting, dividing, separating, breaking." Ibid. p. 240. But it is not the sack itself that is skail'd, but the grain contained in it. This is skail'd or dropt out, by reason of the holes in the sack.

6. To skale down, to pour out.

I sall apoun thame ane myrk schoure down skale
Of weit and wynd, mydlit with fellown hale.

Dowg. Virgil, 103. 52. Infundam, Virg.

7. Skalit down, in a dishevelled state.

The sampn tyme the Troianis madynnes quhite With hare down skalit all sorrowful can pas Vnto the tempil of the greuit Pallas.

Doug. Virgil, 28. 2. Skail is used, rather anomalously, as the part. pa.

3

And the religious nun with hare down skail, Thre hundreth goddis with hir mouth rowpit sche. Doug. Virgil, 117. 53.

8. To skail house, to give over keeping house, synon. displenis; or perhaps, as denoting the cause, to waste one's domestic property.

"Were it not that want paineth me, I should have skailed house, and gone a begging long since." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 124.

9. To skale a rig, to plow ground so as to make it fall away from the crown of the ridge, S.

10. To unrip; Skelt, " having the seams unript," S.B. Gl. Ross.

To her left shoulder too her keek was worn, Her gartens tint, her shoon a' skelt and torn. Ross's Helenore, p. 28.

This sense is merely a particular application of the v. as signifying, to disjoin.

Rudd. improperly seeks a Fr. origin. Sibb. has mentioned the true origin, but confounds it with Su.G. skala, festinanter currere, which has certainly no connexion. It occurs indeed in almost all the Goth. dialects. Su.G. Isl. skil-ia, distinguere, separare, A.S. scyl-an, Belg. scheel-en, schill-en, Mod. Sax. schal-en, id. Su.G. skael, Teut. scheele, discrimen, distinctio. This word also appears in Celt. For scaoil-am, and sgaol-am, signify to separate, to scatter.

To SKAIL, SKALE, SCALE, v. n. 1. To part, to separate, one from another. The kirk is skailing; the people, who have been assembled for worship, are parting from each other, S.

Thai skalyt throw the toun in hy; And brak wp duris sturdely, And slew all that thai mycht ourtak.

Barbour, v. 93. MS.

Isl. skil-iast, unus ab altero recedere; G. Andr. p. 213.

Scale in this sense is used by Hollingshed. Speaking of the retreat of the Welchmen, during the absence of Richard II., he says; "They would no longer abide, but scaled and departed away." Ap. Divers. Purley, ii. 237.

2. To be diffused; applied to tidings or news. Bot tithandis, that scalis sone Off this deid that Douglas has done, Come to the Clyffurd his ere, in hy.

Barbour, v. 447. MS. It is also used with respect to an offensive smell. The stynk scalyt off ded body is sa wyde, The Scottis abhord ner hand for to byd.

Wallace, vii. 467. MS.

SKAIL, SCAIL, s. 1. A dispersion or separation; as, the skail of the kirk, the dismission or separation of those who have been assembled for public worship, S.

2. A scattered party, those who fly from battle. Schyr Adam of Gordoun, that than Wes becummyn Scottis man, Saw thaim dryf sua away thair fe; And wend that had bene quhone, for he Saw but the fleeing skail perfay, And them that seezed on the prey.

-Bot then both forray, and the scail, Were knit into a sop all hail.

Barbour, xv. 337.

The last four lines are from Edit. 1620. SKAILIN, SCAILIN, s. A dispersion, the act of scattering, S.

-It sall soon get a scailin! His bags sall be mouldie nae mair!

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 158.

SKAIL-WIND, s. A dispersion, or that which causes it, S.

The term seems to have been originally applied to denote the effects of a storm in dispersing ships. V. SKAIL, v. a. sense 1.

SKAILDRAIK, SKELDRAKE, s. The shieldrake or burrough Duck, Anas todarna, Linn.

-" They discharge any persons whatsomever to sell or buy any-Schidderems, Skaildraik, Herron, Butter, or any sik kynde of fowlles." Acts Ja. VI. 1600, c. 23.

In Orkney it is called "skeel-goos; -sometimes -skeeling-goose or skeel-duck; in Shetland scale-drake." Neill's Tour, p. 195. 196.

Shall we suppose that this fowl is thus denominated from Su.G. skael, ratio, facultas intelligendi; for the same reason that it was called chenalopex, or the fox-goose, by the ancients, and is still designed the slygoose by the inhabitants of Orkney?

Grose assigns another reason. Explaining A. Bor. sheld, party-coloured, flecked or speckled, he adds; "Hence sheld-drake and sheld-fowl. South."

SKAILLIE, SKAILVIE, s. Blue slate used for covering houses, S.B.

"That the heretors of such houses as are alreadie thaicked with thack and straw (if the same thacke, and straw-roofs shall hereafter at any time become ruinous) shall bee astricted to thaick the same againe with sklaite, or skaillic, lead, tylde, or thacke-stone." Acts Ja. VI. 1621. c. 26.

A distinction is here made between skaillie and thacke-stone, similar to that which is retained, S.B.; the name skaillie being confined to blue slates, while the flat stones, commonly used instead of them, are called brown sklates.

" Narrest the Wolfis iyle layes ane iyllane, callit in Erische Leid-Ellan-Belnachna, quhairin ther is fair skailyic aneuche." Monroe's Iles, p. 9.

Rudd. writes this skelly, vo. Skellyis.

Skailly is sometimes expressly distinguished from "Here is to be found marle, and kylestone, freestone and whinstone, slait and skailly, as good as the kingdom affords." Pennecuik's Tweeddale, p. 5.

The Dutch call those slates, which are taken from the rock in lamina, and used for covering houses, schalie. MoesG. skal-jos, tiles, tiling, Luke v. 19. pl. of skal-ja, a shell, a tile. Hence perhaps the Isl. name for a roof, skali. The origin might seem to be Su.G. skil-ja, disjungere, from the circumstance of these slates being found in lamina. Ihre, however, directs to a different one. V. SKYLE, v. Hence, SKAILLIE PEN, a sort of pencil of soft slate, used for taking memorandums, or writing accounts, on a slate, S.

To SKAIR, v. n. To take fright, S.B. V. SKAR. SKAIR, s. A share, Ang. Loth.

The Courteour replyit agane, Saying, That ressoun is bot vane: To say a man may do na mair, Bot serue a kirk untill his skair.

Diall. Clerk and Courteour, p. 17.
God grant him an unmeasur'd skair
Of a' that grac'd his great forbeers!

Ramsay's Works, i. 103.

Su.G. skiaer, id. from skaer-a dissecare, dividere; skaera lut, partes haereditatis dividere. Dan. skaer-er scindere, Isl. sker-a secare; A.S. scyr-an partiri. SKAIR, s. One of the parts of a fishing-rod; as, the hand-skair, the lowest part, the head-skair, the highest part, S.B.

Like the preceding word, from Su.G. skaer-a to divide.

SKAIR, s. A bare place on the side of a hill. V. Scar.

SKAIRS, SKARS, s. pl. Rocks through which there is an opening, S. Some rocks on our coast are thus denominated, which have such an aperture that a ship may sail through it.

Su.G. skaer a rock, Alem. scorr, O.Belg. schorre, Gr. oxve-os, id. The root is supposed to be Su.G. skaer-a to cut, to divide; as klipp-a, a rock, from klipp-a to cut. These are also called Kairs.

Hence apparently the designation of Skerries, a name given to several broken isles in Shetland. Brand, p. 92. V. SKERRY.

SKAITBIRD, s.

Ignorant elf, ape, owl, irregular, Skaldit skaitbird and common skandelar.

itbird and common skandelar. Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 49.

Here the Poet seems to allude to the Arctic Gull or Dunghunter, Larus Parasiticus, Linn. "All writers that mention it," says Pennant, "agree, that it has the property of pursuing the lesser gulls so long, that they mute for fear, and that it catches up their excrements before they fall into the water; from which the name." Zool. p. 534. Others assert, that it only forces them to vomit up their newly swallowed food, which it devours.

Kennedy seems to have believed that this fowl attacked the bird which it pursued, by pouring forth its excrement. Hence most probably the epithet of skaldit. The name skaitbird, according to this idea, may be from Sn.G. skit-a cacare; especially as in some places it is called shite-scouter, S. V. Aulin and Scoutiallan.

SKAITH, s. 1. Hurt, damage, in whatever way, S.

—Ha, how grete harme, and skaith for euermare
That child has caucht, throw lesing of his moder!

Doug. Virgil, 79. 23.

Scathe is used in the same sense, E. I mention the word in this acceptation, merely to observe that in Ang. it is pron., as would seem, nearly in the Goth. mode, skaid, or q. skaidt. 1sl. skade, Su.G. skada, id. MoesG. skath-jan, A.S. scaeth-an, Belg. schaeden, Germ. schad-en, nocere.

2. Injury supposed to proceed from witchcraft, S. Thus men or cattle are said to have gotten skaith, when it is believed, that the disease, which affects them, proceeds from preternatural influence.

"Superstition yet continues to operate so strongly on some people, that they put a small quantity of salt into the first milk of a cow after calving, that is given any person to drink. This is done with a view to prevent skaith, if it should happen that the person is not cany [l. canny]. A certain quantity of cow dung is forced into the mouth of a calf, immediately after it is calved, or at least before it receives any meat; owing to this, the vulgar believe that witches and fairies can have no power ever after to injure the calf." P. Killearn, Stirl. Statist. Acc. xvi. 121. 122.

G. Andr. observes, that Skade is the name of Janthes or Ate in the Edda. Hence, he says, skade loss, injury, and skad-a to hurt. I need scarcely add, that with the Romans Ate was the goddess of revenge, a principle supposed to be predominant with all witches.

SKAIVIE, adj. Harebrained; applied to one who acts as if in a delirium, or on the borders of insanity, S.

Sibb. writes also schavy, rendering it "wode, i. e. mad," and seems to derive it from schaw, a wood.

As the term denotes obliquity of mind, it is evidently from Isl. skeif-r, Sw. skef, Dan. skiaev, Belg. Germ. scheef, obliquus; q. having the mind awry or distorted. A. Bor. scafe, wild, as, a scafe lad, a wild youth, (Gl. Grose), may be viewed as originally the same. V. Shach.

SKALLAG, SCALLAG, s. A kind of bond-servant, who carries kelp, and does all the hard work; a term used in the Long Island.

"The scallag, whether male or female, is a poor being, who, for mere subsistence, becomes a predial slave to another, whether a subtenant, a tacksman, or a laird.—Five days in the week he works for his master: the sixth is allowed to himself, for the cultivation of some scrap of land, on the edge of some moss or moor." J. Lane Buchanan's Travels in the W. Hebrides, p. 7.

Gael. scalog, or rather, sgallag, a man-servant. The word has undoubtedly been imported into the Western Islands by the Norwegians. MoesG. skalks, A.S. Alem. scalc, Su.G. Isl. skalk, servus; a denomination given, as Wachter observes, both to slaves and to free servants. Hence Marescalc, the modern Marshal, &c.

SKAMYLL, s. 1. A bench, a form.

Thai xxx dayis his band thai durst nocht slaik, Quhill he was bundyn on a skamyll off ayk, With yrn chenyeis that was bath stark and keyn.

Wallace, xi. 1352. MS.

A.S. scaemel, scamel, scamol, id.

2. Skambles, shambles.

The fleschers' skamblis ar gane dry; The heiland men bringis in na ky.

Maitland Poems, p. 182.

S.B. skemmils denotes the butchers' market; from the tables or benches on which the meat is exposed. Seren. derives the E. word, rather whimsically, from Isl. skemma, domus brevis, skamr brevis.

To SKANCE. V. Scance.

SKANT, SCANTH, s. Scarcity.

And thus grete skant of time, and besy cure, Has made my werk mare subtil and obscure, And not so plesand as it aucht to be.

Doug. Virgil, 484. 23.

The scanth of men ye set nocht by,
And mortall weris contempnis and comptis not.

Ibid. 30. 5. V. Roove, sense 2.

"Scot. they say scanth and want," Rudd.
Jun. derives E. scant, adj., from Dan. skan-a, skona, parcere; but Seren., with greater probability, from
Isl. skam-r brevis, [skemt-a dividere, proportionari,] as originally signifying that any thing is too short for the use for which it was intended.
SKAP, s. Head, scalp.

To-skonce my skap and shanks frae rain

I bure me to a beil.

Vision, Evergreen, i. 213.

To SKAR, SKAIR, v. n. To take fright, to be affrighted, S.

Duel no langare, but cum hidder in haist, Ne skar not at his freyndis face as ane gaist. Doug. Virgil, 214. 52.

A horse that skars is one that is easily startled, or takes fright at objects on the road, S. a skair horse, id. S.B.

Johns., after Skinner, derives E. scare, to affright, from Ital. scarare, consternare: Sibb. thinks that it is "perhaps originally the same with schoir," to threaten: But Seren., after referring to the Ital. word, mentions Isl. skora provocare, scorast diffugere. But the cognate term is undoubtedly Isl. skiar, vitabundus, Ihre; refugus, Verel. From the former, we learn that Su.G. skygg, which he makes synon. with Isl. skiar, is used precisely in the same sense with S. skair, in relation to a horse. Usurpatur frequentissime de equo, qui re quavis territus a via deflectit; Ihre vo. Sky. Skiarr-ast, pavidissimus, Edd. Sacmund. The root is Su.G. sky, vitare. Skar, Scar, adj. 1. Timorous, easily affrighted or startled, S. skair, S.B.

The uther sayis, Thocht ye wes skar, Me think that now ye cum ouir nar.

Diallog. sine titulo. Reign Q. Mary. Quhilkis ar nocht skar to bar on far fra bourdis. Bannatyne Poems, p. 201.

"He began to retract, and to say that the old man was coming to ride on the horse behind him, and the horse being scar, he twice threw him off, and so he broke his neck." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 59.

2. Shy, affectedly modest, S. skeigh, synon.

And Bess was a braw thumpin kittie,
For Habbie just feer for feer;
But she was (and wasna't a pity?)
As skittish and scare as a deer.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 294.

And now cam the night of feet washin, And Bessie look'd mim and scare.

Ibid. p. 295

SKAR, SKARE, s. 1. A fright, S. skair, S.B.
I trow, friend Ned, your heart has got a skare.
Shirrefs' Poems, p. 153.

2. A scarecrow, an object of terror.

Corr. Ar ye not with the King familiar?

G. Couns. That am I not, my lord, full wais me!

Bot lyk ane brybour halden at the bar;

Thay play Bokeik, even as I war a skar.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 148.

SKARRACH, s. 1. A flying shower, a temporary blast of foul weather; skift, flist, synon.

Isl. skur, pluvia momentanea, Su.G. id. Dicitur de grandine vel pluvia copiosius et fortius ruente; Ihre. MoesG. skura windis, procella magna venti. Mr. Tooke ingeniously views E. shower, A.S. scur, as literally meaning, "broken, divided, separated, (subaud-clouds)." Divers. Purley, ii. 172.

2. A considerable quantity of drink, Loth.

This seems merely a metaph. use of the same word; q. as much as to wet one.

SKARSMENT, s.

Pinnakillis, fyellis, turnpekkis mony one, Gilt birneist torris, quhilk like to Phebus schone, Skarsment, reprise, corbell, and battellingis— Thair micht be sene.

Palice of Honour, iii. 17.
It seems to mean some kind of fortification;

Germ. schaur-en to defend.

SKART, s. A cormorant. V. SCARTH.

SKARTFREE, adj. Without injury, S. V. SCART, v.

SKARTH, s.

Worlin wanworth, I warn thee it is written, Thou skyland skarth, thou has the hurle behind.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 57.

—Ane scabbit skarth, ane scorpion, ane scutarde behind.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48.

This may signify a small, puny creature, as the term scart is still used in this sense; perhaps from Su.G. skort-a deficere, or skard-a, diminure. Or it may be the same with Scarcht, q. v.

To SKAT, v. a. To tax, to levy.

This Revin I likin till a fals crownar,
Quhilk hes a porteous of the endytment,
And passis furth befoir the justice air,
All misdoaris to bring till jugement:
But luke gif he be of a trew intent,
To skraip out Johne, and wryt in Will of [or] Wate,

And so a bud at bayth the parteis skat. Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 113.

Teut. schatt-en, taxare, censere; Germ. schaetzen, Su.G. skatt-a, beskatt-a, id. from A.S. sceat a part, share, also rent, cess, Su.G. skat, Teut. schat, id. Hence it is still said, to pay one's shot, i. e. his share of a reckoning.

To SKAUDE, v. a. To scald, pron. skadd, S. Caxtoun, for dreid thay suld his lippis skaude, Durst neuer twiche this vark for laike of knalage.

Doug. Virgil, Pref. 7. 42.
Fr. eschaud-er, Ital. scald-are, id. Belg. schauden, schoud-en, adurere. Hickes derives E. scald from Isl. skald-a, calvum facere, glabrare; A.S. Gram. p. 229.

To Skaude, Skad, v. n. When any part of the body is galled and inflamed, in consequence of heat, it is said to skad, S.

SKAUM, s. The act of singing clothes by putting them too near the fire, or by means of a hot iron; or the appearance produced by this; a slight mark of burning, S.

Sw. skamm-a a stain; from Isl. kaam, id. macula, levis contaminatio; kaam-a maculo, leviter inquino; G. Andr. Hence,

SKAUMMIT, part. adj. Having a mark produced by fire or a hot iron, S.

SKAW, s. A scall of any kind, S.

"Nocht two mylis fra Édinburgh is ane fontane dedicat to Sanct Katrine, quhair sternis of oulie springis ithandlie.—This fountane rais throw ane drop of Sanct Katrynis oulie, quhilk wes brocht out of Mont Synay fra hir sepulture to Sanct Margaret the blissit quene of Scotland.—This oulie hes ane singulare virtew aganis all maner of cankir and skawis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 10. Cutis scabrities, Boeth. SKEEBRIE, s. Thin light soil, Ang. scalp, scaup, synon.

Perhaps allied to Su.G. skofwe a covering, Teut. schubbe a scurf, or rather to Ir. scabar. V. next word

SKEEBROCH, s. Very lean meat, Galloway. Ir. scabar, thin, lean. Kebrach is synon. Loth. To SKEEG, v. a. To lash, to flog.

Quhan words he found, their elritch sound Was like the norlan blast,

Frae yon deep glack, at Catla's back, That skeegs the dark-brown waste.

Minstrelsy Scot. Border, iii. 359.

The term literally signifies to lash or scourge, S.B. It may possibly be an oblique use of Skeyg, q. to cause to move nimbly. If we may trust Bullet, skig-ia is a Celt. word, signifying, to cut, to slice, to strike. Arm. skei, to knock, to bang. Su.G. sweg denotes a green bough used as a rod or scourge.

Skeeggers, s. pl. A whip; properly, one made of sedges, used by boys in playing at top, Ang. V. the v.

SKEELY, adj. Skilful. V. SKILLY.

SKEELING GOOSE, the name sometimes given to the Shieldrake, Orkn.

Skeeling-goose, de quo fama est, in ejus ventriculo grana piperis reperiri, de quo tamen non constat. Sibb. Scot. p. 21.

Lesley also mentions it, in his Scot. Descript. p. 35. V. Neill's Tour, p. 195. 196. and SKAILDRAIK. To SKEY off, v. n. To fly, to remove quickly.

Than Jhon off Lyn was rycht gretly agast; He saw his folk failyie about him fast: With egyr will he wald haiff beyn away, Bad wynd the saill in all the haist thai may. Bot fra the Scottis thai mycht than off skey, The clyp so sar on athir burd thai wey.

Wallace, x. 873. MS.

In Edit. 1648 and 1673, eskey.

Su.G. sky, Alem. ski-en, vitare, subterfugere. Sw. af-sky, aversion, abhorrence, Wideg. E. eschew retains more of the Teut. form. V. next word. SKEICH, SKEIGH, adj. 1. Timorous, apt to startle, S.

Messapus musing can withdraw on dreich, Seand his stedis and the horses skeich.

Doug. Virgil, 278. 37.

2. Unmanageable, mettlesome, skittish; a term applied to a horse, even when not timorous, S. Perhaps this is the proper sense in the following passage.

To hym in fere also has he layd—
Thymetes, ane man of full grete fors,
Casting from his staffage, skeich, and hede
strang hors.

Doug. Virgil, 422. 18.

Casting for casten, part. pa. cast, thrown.

When thou an' I were young an' skeigh,
An' stable-meals at fairs were dreigh,
How thou wad prance, an' snore, an' skreigh!

Burns, iii. 142.

3. Coy, shy; a term frequently applied to women,

Shamefu' she was, and skeigh like ony hare, Nor cou'd she think of sitting langer there. Ross's Helenore, p. 30.

4. Proud, nice, S. often applied to women, (but in a stronger sense than in that last mentioned) as including the idea of prudery, or expressive of disdain, S.

Maggie coost her head fu' high, Look'd asklent and unco skeigh, Gart poor Duncan stand abiegh.

Burns, iv. 26.

"Let gae my hands, I say, be quait;"
And vow! gin she was skeigh
And mim that day.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

Sibb. mentions, although with marks of uncertainty, Sw. skaelg obliquus, which has no connexion. Rudd. has referred to Skinner, vo. Skittish; and this adj., as deduced from E. skew, to eschew, has evidently the same origin. Germ. scheuch, scheue, shy; Ein scheucs pferd, a skeich horse; Belg. schouwigh, also schichtig, id. from Alem. scuuu-an, Germ. scheu-en, Belg. schouw-en, to shun, to be shy.

The affinity is still closer with Su.G. skygg, a term frequently applied to a horse in the same sense. V. Skar, adj. This is from sky vitare. I need scarcely add, that there is every reason to believe, that E. skew, eschew, shun, shy, skittish, scare, and S. skeich, skair, skar, skeir, scunner, have all one origin.

To Skeich, v. n. To take freight, to startle.

Of Hippolytus, it is said that he —Sufferit by hys blude and breith
The cruel panys of his faderis wreith,
As to be harlit with hors that caucht effray,
And skeichit at ane mereswyne by the way.

Doug. Virgil, 236. 31. Su.G. skygg-a, meticulose recedere. V. the adj.

To SKEYG, v. n. To move nimbly in walking, to scud along. Skeyggin awa' on the road, walking stoutly and quickly, S.B.

MoesG. skeu-jan, iter facere; or Su.G. skygg-a, subterfugere.

Skeyg, s. At the skeyg, in a quick motion, in the act of scudding away, Ang.

SKEIGH, adv. Timorous, &c. V. SKEICH. SKEIL, SKEILL, (pron. skeel,) s. A tub; properly, one used for washing, S.

Fish wyves cry Fy, and cast down skulls and skeils. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 59.

This is a provincial E. word.

" Skeels-are broad shallow vessels; principally for the use of setting milk in, to stand for cream; made in the tub manner-from eighteen inches to two feet and a half diameter; and from five to seven inches deep." Glocest. Marshall's Rural Econ. p. 269.

"The Yorkshire skeel with one handle is described as a milking pail," Ibid. p. 26. V. SKUL.

SKEIR, SKEER, adj. Hare-brained, S.

This may seem to be the same word that is written skire by Rudd., and mentioned under Schire. But I suspect that it is rather from Isl. skiar, pavidus, as properly denoting that delirium which is produced by excessive fear.

It may thus be viewed as equivalent to an E. phrase. They shed forth a gleam, fraught with malice and ire,

A gleam fraught with horror and cruelty dire, Like mortals whose senses are scar'd.

Welsh Legends, p. 82.

SKELLAT, s. 1. A small bell.

Unto no mess pressit this prelat, For sound of sacring bell nor skellat.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20.

2. A sort of iron rattle, used for the same purpose as a hand-bell, for making proclamations on the street, (synon. clap, clapper), Loth.

Su.G. skaella, Isl. skella nola, tintinnabulum. In Su.G. that bell which is hung about the necks of animals is called skaella. The same name was anciently given to the bells worn by persons of distinction, that their inferiors might get out of the way. L.B. skella, Ital. squilla, Germ. Belg. schelle, Hisp. esquila. In this sense the word skella is used in the Salic Laws, tit. 29. Si quis skellam de caballis furaverit, &c. It is written scilla by Eadmer, in the life of St. Anselm, Lib. 1. Sumta Vol. II.

in manibus chorda pro excitandis fratribus scillam pulsantem. Thus it denoted both the bells hung to the necks of horses, and those small ones used in monasteries. V. Du Cange, vo. Skella. Ihre derives the word, with evident propriety, from Su.G. skall, sonitus, whence S. skelloch, E. squeal. V. Schill. SKELLIE, SKELLY, s. A squint look, S.

A.S. sceol-eage, scyle-eged, id. q. squint-eye, or eyed; Isl. skialg-ur, Dan. skaelg, Germ. skel, schiel, Belg. scheel, id. all from the word signifying oblique.

From Isl. skialg-ur is formed fe-skialgr, oblique intuens pecuniam, i. e. avarus; casting a squint look on fee or money, as intimating anxiety for possession.

There is an O.E. term nearly allied, although, not explained either by Junius or Skinner. This is a skile.

Than Scripture scorned me, & a skile loked, And lacked me in Latine, & light by me she set: And said, Multi multa sciunt, et seipsos nesciunt. P. Ploughman, Fol. 53. a.

In Edit. 1561, it is printed as one word, askile. To Skellie, v. n. To have a squint look, S.

Su.G. skael-a, torvis oculis intueri, Su.G. id. also skel-a, limis intueri, Germ. schiel-en, id. Skinner apprehends that E. scowl, which is probably allied to this, has some affinity to Gr. oxod-105, obliquus. SKELLY, s. The chub, a fish; Cyprinus ce-phalus, Linn. Roxburghs.

Ital. squaglio, Lat. squal-us, id. A.S. scylga denotes a fish of some kind, perhaps a roach; Rocea, Aelfr. Gl. p. 77. The name of schelly is, by the inhabitants of Cumberland, given not only to the Gwiniad, but to the Chub, from its being a scaly fish. V. Penn. Zool. iii. 268. N.

And first Sergest behynd sone left has he, Wreland on skellyis, and vndeippis of the se. Doug. Virgil, 134. 26. 51.

The word is certainly of the same meaning with E. shelves, which, I suspect, originally denoted a ridge of low rocks, rather than sand-banks. V. Skelve, v. SKELLOCH, SKELLIE, s. 1. Wild mustard, generally used in pl. S. synon. runches, S.B. Si-napis arvensis, Linn.

"The corn fields are liable to the common weeds. especially to skelloch (mostly wild mustard), for which, to sow late after ploughing, when the plant is risen up, and may be destroyed by harrowing, has been tried with success." P. Nigg, Kincardine, Statist. Acc. vii. 197.

Ir. sgeallagach, wild mustard; Obrien. Gael. sgeallan, the seeds of mustard. The E. name charlock, has some resemblance. A.S. cerlice, id. Somner.

2. The term Skelloch is sometimes applied, in the South of S. to Wild radish, Raphanus raphanistrum, Linn.

By the more intelligent, however, even among the peasantry, the wild radish is called runches, while the name skelloch is given to wild mustard.

To SKELLOCH, v. n. To cry with a shrill voice, S.B.

This, as well as squeal, squawl, E. is nearly allied to Isl. skell-a clangere, Su.G. sqwael-a ejulare, plorare. Seren. observes, that as the latter properly denotes the wailing of infants, as the consequence of disease, it may be traced to Isl. qwill-a, prae aegritudine queri, a deriv. from Sw. qwill-a, id. Franc. skell-an, Germ. schall-en, to emit a sound, erschall-en to ring. Gael. sgal a shriek, a loud shrill cry; Shaw.

Skelloch, s. A shrill cry, a squawl, S.B. To SKELP, v. n. 1. To beat; applied to the motion of a clock.

Baith night and day my lane I skelp; Wind up my weights but anes a week, Without him I can gang and speak. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 557.

2. To beat with velocity and violence. The veins are said to be skelpin, when the pulse beats very quick or hard, as in a strong fever, S.B.

Su.G. skalfw-a, Isl. skialf-a, A.S. scylf-an, to tremble; Isl. skelf-a, to shake, to cause to tremble; skialft, tremor, iardskialfe, an earthquake; Su.G. skaelfwa, skalfwosot, a fever, q. because of the tremulous motion of the joints, from skalfwa and sot sickness.

Seren., however, seems to appropriate this designation to the ague; and this is exactly analogous to the name by which it is known, S.B. the trembling fevers.

To Skelp, v. a. 1. To strike with the open hand. It properly denotes the chastisement inflicted on the breech, S. scud, scult, synon.

Bat fat's the matter? the cheil says, He sav't the Grecian schips, Held aff the Trojans an' the gods, An' skelpit Hector's hips.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 27.
Sometimes it signifies to flog the buttocks by means of a lash.

He's whirled aff the gude weather's skin, And wrappit the dandily lady therein; "I darena pay you for your gentle kin, But weel may I skelp my weather's skin.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 325.

I'm friends with Mause; with very Madge I'm gree'd;

Altho' they skelpit me when woodly fleid.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 190.

This may be viewed as an oblique use of the preceding v., as Isl. skaelf-a, Su.G. skelfw-a, also signify, to fright, terrere, Verel. Isl. skelf-a, however, is occasionally used in the very same sense with our skelp; percello, Kristnisag, Gl.; skell-a, id.

Rasskell-a, podicem manu verberare; Gl. Orkney-inga S. vo. Skella.

2. To strike, in whatever way, to drub, S.

To skelp an' clout the guard.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 51.

3. To skelp, to skelp it, to move quickly on foot, to trip along; especially applied to one who is barefooted, S.

The well-win thousands of some years
In ae big bargain disappears:
'Tis sair to bide, but wha can help it,
Instead of coach, on foot they skelp it.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 332.

As lightsomely I glowr'd abroad, To see a scene so gay, Three hizzies, early at the road, Cam skelpin up the way.

Burns, iii. 29.

Perhaps this use of the term has originated from the sharp noise made by the feet in walking smartly, q. striking or beating the road.

SKELP, s. 1. A stroke, a blow, used in a general sense, S.

Quhen Inglismen come into this land, Had I bene thair with my bricht brand, Withowttyn ony help, Bot myne allane, on Pynky Craiggis, I sowld haif revin thame all in raggis,

And laid on skelp for skelp. Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 11.

The water is said to come with a skelp on a boat, when its shock is sudden and violent, so as to make it give way. The term, in this application, has considerable resemblance to Isl. skialf-a, concutere, quatere, tremere facere.

2. Metaph. for a misfortune, in trade or otherwise, S., as E. blow is frequently used. A sair skelp, a severe blow.

Quhyls luking comfort to resaue,
Quhyls luking for a skelp;
Quhyls dreiding sche suld me disaue,
Quhyls houping for hir help.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 48. V. Mow-BIT. SKELPIE-LIMMER, s. An opprobrious term applied to a female, S.

Ye little skelpie-limmer's face, I daur you try sic sportin, As seek the foul Thief ony place, For him to spae your fortune.

Burns, iii. 131.

SKELT, part. pa. Having the seams unript. V. SKAIL, v.

To SKELVE, v. n. To separate in lamina. A stone is said to skelve, when thin layers fall off from it, in consequence of friction, or of exposure to the air, S.B.

posure to the air, S.B.

Teut. schelffe, squama, mica, schelffer mica, schelffer-en, assulatin frangere, in micas frangere sive frangi. The word appears in a more primitive form in Su.G. skaell-a, Isl. skel-iast, in tenues laminas dissilire, from skal putamen; and this perhaps from skil-ia separare.

Skelve, s. A thin slice, lamina, S.B. Teut. schelve, segmen.

Skelvy, adj. 1. A term applied to a rock which appears in a variety of lamina, S.B.

Îlk rib sae bare, a skelvy skair.-

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 358.

2. Applied to rocks which form the bed of a shallow river, S. shelvy, E.

Here, foaming down the shelvy rocks, In twisting strength I rin.

Burns, iii. 356.

SKEO, s. A small hut, built of drystone for drying fish without salt, Orkn.

SKEP, SKEPP, SKEPPE, SCAPE, s. 1. A case, resembling a basket, made of twisted straw, used as a bee-hive, S.

Forth of their skeppes sum raging beis Lyes out, and will not cast; Sum uther swarmes hyves on the treis In knotts togidder fast.

A. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 389.

- "Bees are so rare there, that a young man, in the end of April, stopt the skep (which a lady had taken hither from Angus) with a piece of a peat. About 8 days thereafter, the Laird going to look after them, found them all dead. His family being convened, he inquired who had done it. The actor did confidently answer, that upon such a day he did it because they were all flying away." Mackaile's Relation concerning Orkney, M.S. Adv. Libr. V. Barry's Orkney, p. 453.
- 2. Used metaph. in relation to industry. Yit thir, alas! are antrin fock, That lade their scape wi' winter stock.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 31. Su.G. skaepp-a, skepp-a, a vessel used by farmers in sowing, for holding the seed; sadeskaeppa, q. a. seed-skepp. A.S. sciop, a vessel, a box; Germ. schaffa, a wooden concave vessel, Teut. schap, vas, theca, Lat. scappium, L.B. scapp-a, from Gr. σκαφος, cavitas; Gael. sgeip, a bee-hive; Shaw.

E. skep must have been originally the same; expl. " a sort of basket, narrow at the bottom, and wide at the top, to fetch corn in." Johns. oddly derives it from scephen, Lower. Sax. to draw.

SKER.

Venus that day coniunit with Juppiter, That day Neptunus hid him like ane sker: That day Dame Nature, with greit besines, Furtherit Flora to kith hir craftines.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 190. Skar, later Edit. Perhaps as one scared or frightened. It seems used as an adj. But V. SKAR, s. 2. SKERRY, s. 1. An insulated rock, Orkn.

"Near this Pentland Skerry, there are two or three other skerries or rocks, on which there is not nourishment for any tame living creature." P. S. Ronaldsay, Statist. Acc. xv. 300.

"There are several which are overflowed at high water, and have scarcely any soil for the production of vegetables;—these—are called Skerries, a name which indicates sharp, ragged rocks." Barry's Orkney, p. 18.

2. It is sometimes, although perhaps improperly. used in a more limited sense; as appears from the following example.

"The sandy beaches of the two first mentioned extend each a mile in length; that of the last not so much, except at low water of spring tides; and consist partly of skerries, (flat rocks, over which the sea flows and ebbs)." P. Stronsay, Orkn. Ibid. p. 388.

Perhaps from Su.G. Isl. skaer, a rock, and ey an island; although Isl. skaer by itself, is sometimes rendered, scopulus maris. V. SKAIR. SKERTER, s. The name for Sea-belts, Orkn. Fucus saccharinus, Linn.; one of the species of sea-weed burnt for making kelp.

from hast-a festinare.

Sir Tristrem, p. 34. My ingenious friend the Editor properly refers to A.S. scyt-an irruere. It may be added, that On scyte waes is rendered by Lye, in praecipiti erat, was in haste, or rushed headlong : scyte-raese, praeceps ruens. Perhaps, however, it is more immediately allied to Isl. skiot-ur celer, pernix; skiotur à foti, swift of foot; whence the Sw. have given the name skiut to a horse, as he is also called haest, SKEW, SKEU, s. That part of a gable which is oblique, from the eaves to the chimney-stalk, S.

The bitter, blindin, whirlin drift Through raggit skeu, an' chimlie rift, The cottage fills.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 45.

This has the same origin with Shach, q. v.

To Skew, v. a. 1. To build in an oblique form, S. 2. To skew a house, to cover the gables of a thatched roof with sods, Tweedd.

SKEW'D, adj. Acting like one deprived of reason, Perths., evidently the same word with Skaivie, q. v.

SKEW, s. Skew and reskew.

Hardy and hat contenyt the fell mellé, Skew and Reskew off Scottis and Ingliss alss: Sum kerwyt bran in sondyr, sum the hals, Sum hurt, sum hynt, sum derflly dong to dede.

Wallace, v. 835. MS.
As reskew evidently denotes the deliverance of those who have been taken by an enemy, from O.Fr. rescou-er, to take again; skew signifies the state of being seized by the enemy, from secou-er, to move violently: Imprimer à un corps un mouvement qui enbranle toutes ses parties; Dict. Trev. Corr. from Lat. succut-ere, to shake.

The term seems properly to denote that disorder into which part of an army is thrown, in consequence of which some are taken prisoners.

To SKEWL, v. a. To distort, to put any thing out of its proper direction; skewled, having an oblique direction, S.B. V. Shows. SKY, s. A small board, about four inches in depth, used in the construction of the Shetland plough, in place of a mould-board. An old barrel stave is generally fixed on for this purpose. "A square hole is cut through the lower end of the beam, and the mercal, a piece of oak about 22 inches long introduced, which, at the other end, holds the sock and sky." P. Aithsting, Statist. Acc. vii. 585.

SKY, s. Shadow.

My fader than lukand furth throw the sky, Cryis on me fast, Fle son, fle son, in hye. Doug. Virgil, 63. 12.

"Fr. Junius with little ground renders it umbra, because Virgil has it so. And it would seem as if he had designed to derive the word from Gr. oxia;" Rudd. Junius, [or, as appears, Lye] is certainly right, not only as he has Virgil on his side; but because skye is an O.E. word, used in this sense by Gower.

And with that worde, all sodenly She passeth, as it were a skye.

Conf. Am. Lib. iv. Fol. 71. a. Warton has adopted the same idea. "A shadow, Yria, umbra." It is more immediately connected with Belg. scheye, (Kilian, vo. Schaede) with Su.G. sky nubes, nebula, or even with skugga, id. whence skygg-a obumbrare. Seren. derives skugga from sky, nebula, vo. Shade. Isl. skyat veder, coelum nubibus obductum, sed tamen sine pluvia.

SKYBALD, s Expl. "tatterdemallion," Rams. GI. S. Skeibalt, " mean worthless fellow," Sibb. Gl.

"The said Laird perceaving men to faint and begyne to recoule, said, Fy, lat us nevir leive efter this day, that we sall recoule for Frenche skybaldis." Knox's Hist. p. 202.

Poor skybalds! cursed with more o' wealth than wit,

Blyth of a gratis gaudeamus, sit With look attentive, ready all about

To give the laugh when his dull joke comes out. Ram ay's Poems, i. 353.

Dan. skabhals (skabbals, Sibb.) denotes a rogue, a rascal, a base man; allied perhaps to Isl. skeifr the rabble, skipe, a low fellow, Border. O.Fr. scybale is used by Rabelais, in the sense of merde endurcie, a term undoubtedly expressive of the greatest contempt possible. Hence, SKYBALD, adj. Mean, low.

Blierd babling bystour-bard obey; Learn, skybald knave, to know thy sell. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 6.

SKIBE, s. A niegardly fellow, West and South of S. V. SKYBALD.

To SKIFF, Skiff, v. n. To move lightly and smoothly along, to move as scarcely touching the ground, S.

Use not to skift athort the gait.

Maitland Poems, p. 329.

V. Mum Chairtis.

i. e. Let it not be your custom to move lightly through the streets.

Kind muse, skiff to the bent away, To try anes mair the landart lay.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 58.

Ye watchful guardians of the fair, Who skiff on wings of ambient air. Ibid. p. 214. V. Bustine.

It may be originally the same with E. skip; Isl. skop-a discurrere. But Su.G. skifwa sig is rendered, superbe incedere; and skift seems indeed to include the idea of pride as well as of levity.

To Skiff, v. a. To cause a flat stone skip along the surface of a body of water, S. V. Scoup, v. 2,

To Skift, v. a. To glide over, to pass any thing in a slight way, S.B.

V. the v. n. and Scoup, v. 2.

SKIFFIE, s. A name given to the tub or box used for bringing up coals from the pit, S.

"There were employed at least two men at the windlass, putting up the coals in skiffies, termed hutches." P. Campsie, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xv.

Apparently from E. skiff, as boat is used to signify a tub.

SKIFT, s. A flying shower, S.B.

The idea seems borrowed from that of sudden change; Su.G. skifw-a mutare, skift intervallum; as a skift is opposed to rain; or as allied to Skift, v.

SKIFT, s. Art, facility in doing any thing, S.B. Probably allied to MoesG. ga-skaft, making, from skapan facere.

SKYLAND, part. adj.

Thou skyland skarth, thou has the hurle behind. Dunbar Evergreen, ii. 57.

The connexion shews that this term conveys a dirty idea; Dan. skyll-a, Isl. skol-ia, eluere.

To SKYLE, v. a. To hide, to conceal.

Yet nerthelesse within mine orature I stode, quhan Titan had his bemis brycht Withdrawin doun, and skylid undir cure, And faire Venus, the beauté of the nycht, Henrysone's Test. Creseide Chron. S. P. i. 157. Scyled, Chaucer's Works, Fol. 182. col. i. "Closed," Gl. Skyled undir cure, "hid under cover."

Su.G. skyl-a occultare; Isl. skiol-a, Dan. skyl-er, Belg. schuyl-en, latitare. Ihre views sky-a celare, tegere, as the origin. Hence, according to this learned etymologist, skoeld, a shield, as being a covering for the body in war; and skiul tectum, the covering of a house. But it is singular, that Heb. שלם, shilte, signifies shields.

SKILL, s. Return.

" I yield me, schir, and do me nocht to smart,-"I sauf youris, suppois it be no skill."

-Thy waresoun sould be [richt] smal but kill. King Hart, i. 51. ii. 7.

Isl. skil redditio, Pinkerton. It is allied to Su.G. skyll-a debitum solvere.

SKILL, SKYLL, s. 1. Cause, reason.

Bot sen thow spekys sa rudly, It is gret skyll men chasty Thai proud wordis, till that thou knaw The rycht, and bow it as thou aw.

Barbour, ix. 751. MS.

Reason is substituted, Edit. 1620. Oft times is better hald nor len, And this is my skill and ressone quhy; Full evill to knaw ar mony men, And to be crabbit settis littil by.

Chron. S. P. iii. 225.

2. Proof, argument.

-Til the knycht the prys gawe thai, That smate Willame the Ramsay Throw-owte the hede, and a skyll Thai schawyt til enfors thare-til, And sayd, it wes justyng of were, And he, that mast engrewyt there, Suld have the grettast prys, wyth thi That he engrewyt honestly.

Wyntown, viii. 35. 187. Su.G. skael, skil, ratio, probatio; Anfoera syna skael, to bring forward his reasons; Ihre, Dan. skiel, A.S. scyle, id.. Isl. Su.G. skil-ia disjungere, separare; primarily applied to external objects, and metaph. to the mind.

3. Approbation, or regard. I have now skill of him, or it, i. e. no favourable opinion, S.B.

This is merely an oblique use of the term as denoting proof. It had originally been employed to signify that one could not judge of a person or thing, as having had no trial, or opportunity of probation. The Isl. v. is used in a similar manner. Mier skilst, sapio, G. Andr. p. 213.

SKILLY, SKEELY, adj. Intelligent, skilful in any profession or art, S.B. pron. skeely. The king sits in Dumferline town, Drinking the blude-red wine; " O whare will I get a skeely skipper, "To sail this new ship of mine?"

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 64. Upon your milk your skilly hand you'll try, And gee's a feast o't, as we're coming by.

Roes's Helenore, p. 95. Su.G. skaelig rational; Isl. skiallig-ur prudent; skialligr madr, homo disertus et consideratus; G.

To SKILT, v. n. To move quickly and lightly; skelp synon.

There Pan kept sheep, and there it was Where the red hair'd glyed wanton lass Did skilt through woods owre banks and braes, With her blind get, who, Poets sayes, Could shoot as well as those that sees.

Cleland's Poems, p. 59.

SKIMMERIN, adj. A skimmerin look, that peculiar look which characterises an idiot or a lunatic, S.B. as perhaps originally descriptive of the faint glare of the disordered eye.

Germ. schimmer, a dim or faint glare of light; Su.G. skymm-a obumbrare, skumm obscurus. For Thre justly views A.S. scymr-ian, in this sense, as radically different from the word of the same form signifying to shine. He concludes that the Scythic root denoted something faintly shining, or in an intermediate state between obscurity and brightness, from the use of MoesG. skeima for a lantern, Joh. xviii. 3. A.S. scymr-ian, " umbrare, inumbrare. To cast a shadow; Belg. schemer-en, whereof our shimering, for an imperfect light, like unto sthat of the twilight;" Somner. SKINY, s. "Packthread," S. Sir J. Sinclair's

Observ. p. 127.

He derives it from Gr. oxogos. It is pron. q. skeengie. E. skuin of thread is probably allied. SKINK, s. Strong soup made of cows hams, S.

"Scotch skink, which is a pottage of strong nutriment, is made with the knees and sinews of beef, but long boiled." Bacon's Nat. Hist. ap. Johns.

Guid barley broth and skink came next,

Wi' raisins and plumdamis mixt.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 210. Su.G. skinka, Belg. Germ. schinck, A.S. sceanc, a gammon. A.S. scenc, however, signifies drink, potus.

To SKYNK, v. a. 1. To pour out liquor of any kind for drinking.

And for thir tithingis in flakoun and in skull Thay skynk the wyne, and wauchtis cowpys full. Doug. Virgil, 210. 6.

This seems the primary sense; Su.G. skaenk-a, Franc. skenk-en, Dan. skenk-er, Germ. schenk-en, potum infundere. Hence Franc. skinko, Alem. scenke, Germ. schenk, pincerna, a butler; synon. with A.S. byrle; Germ. erz-schenk, the chief butler who presented the cup to the Emperor at the feast on occasion of his coronation; erb-schenk, a hercditary butler; from A.S. scenc drink.

2. To make a libation, to pour out in making an offering to the gods.

Now skynk and offer Jupiter cowpis full, And in your prayeris and orisonis in fere Do call apoun Anchises my fader derê. Doug. Virgil, 209. 33.

Pateras libate Jovi, Virg.

3. To serve drink; a sense still retained in E. Call on our patroun, common God diuyne is, And with gude will do skynk and birll the wynis.

Doug. Virgil, 250. 49. 4. To skink over, formally to renounce; apparently in allusion to the custom of a vender drinking the health of a buyer, as confirming the bargain, and wishing him prosperity in the enjoyment of what he has purchased.

"If this had not been, I should have skinked over and foregone my part of paradise and salvation, for a breakfast of dead moth-eaten earth." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 88.

To SKINKLE, v. n. To sparkle, to shine, S. The cleading that fair Annet had on, It skinkled in their een.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 190.

-The gay mantel Was skinkland in the sone.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 345. Squire Pope but busks his skinklin patches, O' heathen tatters.

Burns, iv. 360.

Evidently a frequentative from MoesG. skcin.an,

Su.G. skin-a, A.S. scin-an, fulgere.

Skinklin, as a s., is expl., "a small portion," Gl. Burns.

SKIP, term. Denoting state or condition, as in foreskip, herrieskip, hissieskip, nouriskip, &c. This term corresponds to Su.G. skap, Belg. schap,

Germ. schaft, A.S. scipe, E. ship; all from the v. denoting action or constitution, Su.G. skap-a, creare, &c.

SKIPPARE, SKIPPER, s. 1. A shipmaster. Himself as skippare hynt the stere on hand, Himself as maister gan marynaris command. Doug. Virgil, 133. 23.

The kiper bad gar land thee at the Bass.

Evergreen, ii. 71.

"Some of Kirkaldy skippers, Crowner Hamilton also, would have been at the trying of their fire-works on the King's ships." Baillie's Lett. i. 167. V. SKILLY.

It is still sometimes applied, but rather in a familiar way, to shipmasters of a higher order, S.

Su.G. skeppare, anc. skipare, A.S. scipar, Belg. schipper, Germ. schiffer.

2. It is now generally appropriated to the master of a sloop, barge, or passage-boat, S. 3. In the fisheries, it is used in a sense still lower, as denoting one of the men who superintends other four, having the charge of a coble, S.

"These [cobles] are used only in the herring fishing, each carrying 4 men and a skipper, with 8 nets." P. Oldhamstocks, Statist. Acc. vii. 407.

"The slippers, or men who have the charge of the boats, and give directions when to draw the nets, have for their wages during the fishing season 61, with 4 bolls of oatmeal, &c." Ibid. xi. 93.

SKIRDOCH, adj. Flirting; an epithet applied to a coxcomb, or a coquette, Fife.

Allied perhaps to Dan. skierts, a jest, raillery; skierts-er, to jeer, to banter; skerter, a jeerer. SKYRE, s. A schirrous substance.

Fy, skowdert skyn, thou art but skyre and skrumple. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54. Fr. scyre, " a hard and almost insensible swelling or kernell, bred between the flesh and skin, by cold, or of thick and clammy phlegm;" Cotgr. Lat.

SKYRIN, part. pr. 1. Shining, S.B. Simmer an' winter on it kyths,

And mony a bouny town; An' a' the skyrin brins o' light That blink the poles aroun'.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 29.

2. Making a great show, in what way soever, S. But had you seen the philibegs, And skyrin tartan trews man.

Burns, iv. 363.

A.S. scir, scyr, Alem. scieri, Su.G. skir, clear, shining; skir-a, Isl. skyr-a, to make luminous, MoesG. ga-skeir-an, to illustrate. Ihre views these terms as derived from the old Goth. word skir, or skier, fire.

To SKIRL, SKIRLE, v. n. To shriek, to cry with a shrill voice, S.

And fonk wad threap, that she did green For what wad gar her skirle

And skreigh some day.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262. V. SKREED, v. Skrilles is evidently used per metath. for skirls. -Gawayn bi the coler keppis the knight; Then his leman on loft skrilles and skrik.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 22.

Skrik, i. e. shrieked.

Sibb. derives it from skri-a vociferari. But although this be the remote source, it is immediately allied to Su.G. skrael-a, id. Dan. skralb-er, Isl. skrall-a sonum strerum edere. Hence skrall vociferatio, Sn.G. skoerl, Dan. skraal, skrald, id. This seems to be the origin of E. shrill.

SKIRL, s. A shriek, a shrill cry, S.

With skirllis and with skrekis sche thus beris, Filling the hous with murnyng and salt teris. Doug. Virgil, 61. 36. V. the v.

"Ye have gi'en baith the sound thump, and the loud skirl;" Kamsay's S. Prov. p. 82.

To SKYRME, v. n. To skirmish; or perhaps to make a feint.

Sum skirp me with scorn, and sum skyrme at Houlate, i. 6.

Printed skyrine; but it is skyrme in MS. V. Scrym, v. The origin is most probably retained in Isl. skrum-a fingo; q. to feign a fight.

To SKIRP, v. a. To mock. V. Scorp. SKIST, s. Chest, box; for kist, Gl. Sibb. SKIST, s.

Bot scoup, or skist, his craft is all to scayth. King Hart, ii. 54. V. Scoup.

SKIT, s. 1. Dancing skit, a contemptuous designation for a female dancer on a stage.

"For incontinent upon sicht of him come to hir remembrance that heinous offence that without greit propitiatiounis culd not be purgeit, for with that the Quene had not dancit at the wedding feist of Sebastiane the Minstrell and vyle jester, that scho sat be her husband quha had not yet fully recouerit his deith, that at the banquet of hir domestical parasite scho had not played the dancing skit." Buchanan's Detect. Sign. D. 7, a. Histrionicam non egerit, Lat.

Skit is still used for a vain, empty creature; sometimes, proud skit, S.

It may have a common origin with E. skittish. from Su.G. sky vitare; or be allied to Isl. skats, or skessa, mulier procax; Su.G. skess-a, petulanter se gerere.

2. A piece of silly ostentation, an action that displays much emptiness of mind, S. The term may allude to the motion of a skittish horse, which frequently starts aside. Isl. ski, convitium, may also be allied to Su.G. sky, vitare, aufugere, whence E. shy. Ski is conjoined with skripi, our skrip, mock, taunt, ski ok skripi; Hervararsag. p. 176.

SKIT, s. An oblique taunt, a sarcasm, S. Squib is not quite synon., as it does not imply that the reflection is indirect.

This term is used in E., although overlooked in Dictionaries. "A skit," Mr. Tooke says, "the past participle of scit-an, means (subaud. something) cast or thrown. The word is now used for jeer or jibe, or covered imputation thrown or cast upon any one." Divers. Purley, ii. 144.

Su.G. skiut-a, to throw.

To SKITE, SKYTE, v. a. 1. To eject any liquid forcibly; properly, liquidum excrementum jaculare, S.

Isl. skvett-a, id. Sw. skijt-a, exouerare ventrem. Hence the yulgar designation for a diarrhoea.

2. To squirt, to throw the spittle forcibly throw the teeth, S.

To Skyr, v. n. To glide swiftly, to shoot, S. Here coachmen, grooms, or pavement trotter Glitter'd a while, then turn'd to snotter; Like a shot starn, that thro' the air Skyts east or west with unco glare, But found neist day on hillock side, Na better seems nor paddock ride.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 334. Su.G. skiut-a, id. Neutraliter usurpatum notat, id., quod cum impetu prorumpit; Ihre.

SKITE, s. The dung of a fowl, S.B. V. the v. SKYTE, s. A nasty person, S.B. either from the v. in the Goth. sense, or allied to Dan. skyden sordidus.

SKIVERS, SKEEVERS, s. pl. The leather now generally used for binding school books, S. This is only one half of the thickness of the skin,

This is only one half of the thickness of the skin, which is sliced into two; the other half being reserved for making gloves. It is nearly as thin as a wafer, and often fails in a few days. I mention this practice, particularly, because it is a gross imposition on the public; as people purchase books, under the notion of their being bound, when boards would be fully as durable.

Su.G. skifva, a slice, pl. skifvar; skaera i skifvar, to cut into slices.

SKLAFFORD HOLES, the apertures in the walls of a barn, for the admission of air, Ang. SKLAIF, s. A slave.

That ony man can haif;
For he may nevir sit in saucht,
Onless he be hir sklaif.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 179. V. Sclave.

SKLAIT, s. Slate, S. V. SCLAITE.

SKLATER, s. A slater, S

SKLANDYR, s. Slander. V. SCLANDYR.

SKLEFF, adj. Shallow.

"Like a skimming dish, or skeil," Gl. Sibb. But the resemblance is far-fetched. It seems radically the same with E. shelvy.

To SKLENT, v. n. V. Sclent.

It may be added, that to sclent sometimes signifies, to deviate from the truth, to fib, S.

To SKLICE, SKLISE, v. a. 1. To slice, S. An' kebbocks auld, in monie a whang, By jock-ta-legs are skliced.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 26.

2. Metaph. used, to denote the abbreviation of time.

"By years, dayes, and hourss, our life is continually sklised away." Z. Boyd's L. Battell, p. 1016. To SKLYRE, v. n. To slide, Dumfr. Loth.

Shurl, to slide, as upon ice, A. Bor. (Grose), has most probably a common origin.

SKLYRE, s. A slide, the act of sliding on ice; or the place. Dumfr. V. the v.

To SKLOY, v. n. To slide on ice, Loth.

Sibb. writes it skly, and views it as from the same origin with slid, slippery. But it more nearly resembles Fr. escoul-er, to slide.

Skloy, s. A slide, the act of sliding on ice, Loth.

SKLOUT, SKLOUTER, s. Cows dung in a thin state, Fife.

SKLUTE, s. 1. Used in pl. to denote large clumsy feet, S.B.

Probably from klute, S. the hoof of cattle. 2. A lout, an aukward clumsy fellow, S.B.

To Sklute, v. n. To set down the feet clumsily, S.

SKODGE, SKODGIE, s. A boy or girl, who is employed as a drudge, or to do the meanest work of the kitchen, such as to clean shoes, &c. Perhaps corr. from Su.G. skoswen, the person who in ancient times put on the shoes of a prince; q. a shoe-servant. Hence,

To Skodge, v. n. To act as a drudge, S.

SKOLDIRT, SKOWDERT, part. pa. Scorched. V. Scowder.

To SKOLE, SKOLT, v. n. To drink hard, S.B. "From skull [for a bowl] may have come the Scot. Bor. to skole, or skolt, pocula exinanire; and the E. to drink helter skelter, cuppa potare magistra, Horat." Rudd. V. SKUL.

SKOMER, s. V. Scomer.

SKON, Scone, s. 1. A thin cake of wheat or barley-meal, S. "Bread baken over the fire, thinner and broader than a bannock," Shirr. Gl.

The floure skonnys war set in by and by, With vthir messis sic as was reddy.

Doug. 208. 41. Adorea liba, Virg. 2. Metaph., as denoting any thing of a particular kind, considered as a specimen, S.

"A scone of the baking is enough;" S. Prov. Rudd. It is thus expl. by Kelly; "It is unreasonable to expect two gratuities out of one thing."

P. 273.

Sibb. derives it from Sw. skon-a parcere. But the relation I cannot perceive; unless it be founded on the idea that scone denotes a thin bannock.

It would be more natural to deduce it from Isl. skonar, abundance; whence the phrase, All skonar ar, exuberans annona. But our sense of the word may be only secondary. It is perhaps from Isl. skaun, what we call the brat of milk, after it has cooled: Cortex lactis calidi effringentis. It is also used metaph., myke skaun, a cake of hardened dung, from myke, muck, and skaun; fimi portio indurata, G. Andr. p. 210. The word skone is used in this very sense, S. for a hardened cake of cows' dung. The same writer renders skiaene, omentum ventriculo subindutum.

To SKONCE, v. a. To cover, to guard.

To—skonce my skalp, and shanks frae rain,

I bure me to a beil.

Vision, Evergreen, i. 213.

Evidently allied to E. sconce, a fort, a bulwark. Su.G. skans-a, Teut. schants-en, to fortify, munire.

SKORE, s. A line drawn, as marking the goal, or end of a race.

— Had he anis won mare roume, tho in hy, He suld ful some haif skippit furth before, And left in dout, quha come first to the skore.

Doug. Virgil, 138. 31.

The term is used in the same sense S. at a variety of games; "but most," says Rudd., "at the long Bowls, [or throwing of leaden bullets], which are sometimes Scot. Bor. called the Scores, because they make draughts or impressions in the ground where they are to begin and leave off."

SKORPER, s. That round kind of bread which in S. is called a cookie, Shetl.

Su.G. skorpa, pl. skorper, biscuits; apparently from skorpa, crust.

SKOUPER, s. A light unsettled person. V.
SCOUPPAR.

SKOUR, s. A slight shower, Dumfr., Skift, synon. S.B.; also Skarrach, q. v.

SKOUR of wind, mentioned as a S. phrase, by Callander, MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Skur. He gives it as synon. with MoesG. skura windis, procella venti. V. Scowry.

SKOURIOUR, s. A scout. V. Scurrour.

SKOUTT, s. A small boat, a yawl.
What plesour wer to walk and see,
Endlang a river cleir,——

The salmon out of cruives and creills, Uphailed into skoutts.

A. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 391. Su.G. Isl. skuta, Belg. schuyt, Ir. scud, linter, celox.

SKOWURAND, part. pr. Shuddering.
And thai in hy assemblyt then,

And askyt awisement thaim amang,
Quhethir that thai suld duell or gang;
Bot thai war skowurand wondir sar,
Sa fer in to Scotland for to far.

Barbour, v. 201. MS.

Germ. schaur-en tremere, schaur tremor. E. shiver is radically the same.

SKRAE, s. A searce made of wire for cleansing grain, Loth.; synon. harp.

SKRAE, s. A thin meagre person, S. scrag, E. But gin scho say, "Lie still, ye skrae," &c.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 263.

Su.G. skraf, Isl. skrof, a skeleton; or skral, scanty; also, weak; Belg. schracl, gracilis, tenuis, Kilian; unless allied to the northern terms applied to what is shrunk or dried up by heat. V. next word.

SKRAE-FISH, Scrae-FISH, s. pl. Fishes dried in the sun, without being salted, Orkn. "The gables of the cottages here were, at this season, hung round with hundreds of small coal-fish, called piltocks, strung upon spits, and exposed to dry, without salt. The fishes dried in this manner are called scrae-fish." Neill's Tour, p. 78.

Evidently allied to Isl. skrael-a, to dry, to dry

Evidently allied to Isl. skrael-a, to dry, to dry up with heat, torreo, torresco, skraef-a torridum prae ariditate sonum edo attactum. Perhaps skred is of the same stock; piscium strues, congeries arida; G. Andr. p. 215. Su.G. skral, aridus. Hence a wooden vessel, which is chopt with the drought is called skraelle.

To SKRAIK, Scraigh, v. n. 1. Properly used to denote the cry of a fowl when displeased, S. Hid 'mang the grass, the pairtrick sat, Hearse-scraighin on his absent mate.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 84.
2. To cry with importunity and in a discontented tone, commonly applied to children, S.

Su.G. skrik-a vociferari, a frequentative from skria, id. Isl. skraek-a, Dan. skryg-er, E. screak. Skraik, Scraik, s. 1. The screaking of fowls,

S.; also skraich.

And throw the skyis wyth mony ane scraik and pyk,

Samyn in ane sop, thik as ane clud, but baide, Thar fa thay did assailye and inuade.

Doug. Virgil, 417. 13.

2. A loud or shrill sound, caused by musical instruments.

Let beir the skraichs of deadly clarions, And syne let of a volie of cannons.

Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 380.

Isl. skraek-r clamor, ploratus; Verel.

SKRAN, s. 1. Fine skran, a phrase used by young people, when they meet with any thing, especially what is edible, which they consider as a valuable acquisition, S.

Isl. skran, supellex leviusculus; G. Andr. p.

2. The offals or refuse of human food, thrown to dogs, Loth.

Su.G. skraede signifies refuse, from skraed-a, to cut; also, to bolt, to sift.

SKRANKY, adj. 1. Lank, slender, S.

2. Applied to an empty purse; q. having a lank appearance.

Your purses being skranky.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 359.

This seems the same with skrinkie, skrinkit, "as if shrunk, too little, contracted," Sibb. G1.

Germ. schrank-en, to confine, to stint; A.S. scrunc-en, contracted, for-scrinc-an, marcessere, to dry up, to shrink together; Alem. skrenk-en vincire, clathrare, Schilter.

Skrunty, Fife, synon. is perhaps radically different.

SKRAPIT, pret. Mocked. V. Scorp. To SKREED, v. n. To cry, to scream.

It made me yelp, and yeul, and yell, And skirl, and skreed.

Watson's Coll. i. 38.

From its connexion with skirl, it seems formerly to have denoted a shrill or piercing sound; perhaps allied to Franc. screiot, clamor, which must certainly be viewed as of the same stock with Scry, q. v. Verel. mentions Sw. skrijt clamor, vo. Skraekr. To SKREED, v. n. To lie; especially as denoting that sort of falsehood which consists in fabrication, or magnifying in narration. S.

Su.G. skryt-a jactare, ostentare, Isl. skreit-a fingere; skreitin figmentum. The Su.G. and Isl. terms are nearly akin to ours in signification. For it is often used to denote falsehood employed from a principle of ostentation. Ihre gives skryta as a derivative from skrymma fingere. But it seems rather from Isl. skraut, ostentatio, pompa.

SKREED, s. I. A lie, a fabrication, S. 2. A long list or catalogue, S.

I here might gie a skreed of names, Dawties of Heliconian dames.

The foremost place Gavin Douglas claims, That pawky priest.

Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore, vii. This, perhaps, is rather a secondary sense of Screed, a rent; in allusion to a long strip of cloth torn off. SKREEK, Screak, of day, break of day, the dawn, S.B.; also skrieh.

— Ilka morning by the screak o' day They're set to wark.—

Ross's Helenore, p. 51.
The page he look'd at the skrieh of day,
But nothing, I wist, he saw.
Minstrely Border, ii. 363.

Skrike o' day, id. Lancash. Gl. T. Bobbin. This might seem related to Teut. schrick-en gradi, dissilire, prosilire, which O.E. skruke resembles.

Now skruketh rose and lylie flour. Harl. MS. before 1200, Warton's Hist. E. P. i. 30.

i. e. Rose and lily break forth.

The term, however, is more analogous to Teut. kriecke, aurora rutilans. V. Creek. S may have been prefixed, in some counties; this being common with the Gothic nations.

To SKREENGE, v. a. To scourge, to flog, a term pretty generally used in S.; to squeeze, Westmorel.

To SKRY, v. a. To cry, S.B.

"The word is frequently used Scot. Bor. for cry, as, to skry a fair, i. e. to proclaim it;" Rudd.

Su.G. skri-a vociferari, ejulare; Alem. scri-en, scrih-en, Belg. schrey-en, id. Hence Su.G. skri clamor, haerskri, clamor bellicus; Germ. geschrey. Skry, Scry, s. 1. Noise, clamour.

The scry sone raiss, the bald Loran was dede. Schyr Garrat Heroun tranontit to that stede.

Wallace, iv. 671. MS.

Throw the cieté sone rais the noyis and skry.

Doug. Virgil, 47. 49.

The skry and clamoure followis the oist within.

Ibid. 295. 1.

2. The crying of fowls.

Thare was also ingrauit al at rycht The siluer ganer, flichterand with loud skry, Warnand al reddy the gilt entré by.

Ibid. 267. 5.

Rudd. observes, that the word is used in this sense by Jul. Barnes.

To SKRIFT, v. n. To magnify in narration, to fabricate, to fib, S.

Isl. skraf-a fabulari, nugari, skraef nugae. Su.G. skraefwa, locutuleius, skarfw-a, to patch, is metaph. used in the same sense with our skrift; because he who mixes falsehood with truth, as it were, adulterates the truth by the addition of rags. In the same figurative sense, one is said to cobble, S. when he patches up a story; and a person of this description is sometimes called a cobbler.

SKRIFT, s. A fabrication, a falsehood, S. To SKRIFT, v. n. To rehearse from memory, Ang.

I know not if this be allied to Su.G. skrift-a, to confess, shrive, E., as in this act the penitent enumerates, from recollection, his various transgressions.

SKRIFT, SCRIFT, s. A recital, properly, of something from memory, S.

— Yet he can pray, and tell long scrifts of Greek.

And broken smatters of the Hebrew speak.

A. Nicol's Poems, 1739. p. 109. V. Scrieve, v. 3.

SKRILLES, s. pl. Shrieks. V. SKIRL, v.

To SKRIM, v. a. To scrim along the sea, to scud, to move quickly, S. perhaps corr. from E. skim, as used in the same sense.

SKRYMMORIE, s.

Pluck at the craw thay cryit, deplome the ruik, Pulland my hair, with blek my face they bruik. Skrymmorie Fery gaue me mony a clowre. For Chyppynutie ful oft my chaftis quuik.

Palice of Honour, i. 58.

In the Perth Edit. of this poem, fery is expl. fairy; and these are said to be "vulgar names of mischievous spirits." Fery is printed with a capital letter, Edit. 1579.

Skrymmorie is certainly a designation of Goth. origin. Sibb. renders it, "frightful, filling with terror," viewing it as an adj. But it seems rather an appellative, allied to Su.G. skracm-a, to frighten, and a variety of other terms. Skrymma is a v. used to denote the appearance of spectres. Hence, skrymsl signifies both a spectre, and an idol. Liopo their allir upp, oc luto thui skrimsli; They all rose (loupit) up, and did honour by bowing (lowting) to the idol; Heims Kring. ap. Ihre. Spokeri oc dieffuls skrymmel; spectres and other tricks of the devil; Ibid. Belg. schroomsel, a bugbear, from schroom-en, to fear, to be filled with horror.

Chyppynutie, viewed as a mischievous spirit, might be one of those who fatally wounded the cattle that were believed to be elf-shot, from Su.G. kaepp, a rod, MoesG. kaupat-jan, to strike, and not, naut, an ox.

SKRINE, s. Unboiled sowens, or flummery,

"In place of milk, they were necessitated to have recourse to the wretched substitute of skrine, or unboiled flummery, prepared from the refuse of oatmeal soaked in water." P. Ruthven, Forfars. Statist. Acc. xii. 302.

Su.G. skrin, exsuccus, might seem allied, as it is applied to grain; skrin saed, frumentum gracile. But there is greater connexion, in the sense, with Teut. krinse, acus, purgamentum frumenti; krinsen, purgare frumentum; as flummery is made of the seeds of oatmeal, hence called sowen-seeds, when used for this purpose.

SKRINKIE, SKRINKYT. V. SKRANKIE. SKROPIT, pret. v. Mocked. V. Scorp.

SKROW, s. A scroll. V. Scrow. SKROW, s. A slight shower, S.B.; Isl. skur. V. SKARRACH.

SKRUFE, s. Wealth; that, most probably, gathered by great parsimony or severe exaction.

Speaking of the Popish clergy, Scott says; Thay brocht thair bastardis, with the skrufe thay skraip,

Bannatyne Poems, p. 196.

Teut. schrobber, avarus; schrobb-en, scalpere; coacervare.

SKRUMPLE, s. A wrinkle.

Fy, skowdert skyn, thou art but skyre and skrumple.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54.

Germ. schrumple, id. A.S. hrympelle, E. crumple; Su.G. skrump-en, Germ. schrump-en, Mod. Sax. schrumpel-n, to wrinkle, from Germ. krumpen, Su.G. krymp-a, to contract.

To SKRUNT, v. n. To make a creaking noise, Clydes.

SKRUNTY, adj. Meagre; applied to a raw-boned person, Fife, Loth.

Sibb. mentions the word, adding, "q. shrinked," and referring to Skrinkyt, as synon. But it may be allied to Su.G. skrin, dried, exsuccus. V. SKRINE. A.S. scrin-ian, arescere; Dan. skranten, infirm, feeble; skrant-er, to be weakly, to be sickly; Wolff.

SKUBE, s. Any thing that is hollowed out, S.B., apparently from the same origin with E. scoop. Su.G. skopa, Arm. scob, haustrum.

SKUG, Scug, Scoug, (pron. skoog,) s. 1. A shade, what defends from the heat, S.

The party popil grane

Heildit his hede with skug Herculeane. Doug. Virgil, 250. 51.

2. A shelter, a place where men may be secreted,

Thare lay ane vale in ane crukit glen, Ganand for slicht to enbusche armit men, Quham wounder narrow apoun athir syde The bewis thik hamperith, and dois hyde With skuggis derne and ful obscure perfay. Ibid. 382. 28.

S. A. Bor. the scug of a brae, the shelter it affords from the storm; synon. the lythe of it; Rudd.

The scug of a dike, &c.

"To prevent this danger, he convoys them secretly under the scoug of a rock." Spalding's Troubles, i. 232.

3. Shelter afforded or found, protection, S.

And whan they tak scoug in your arms. Be honest and kindly, and so Fend the sweet little dears frae a' harms. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 300.

4. Metaph. applied to ghosts, as corresponding to Lat. umbrae, in the following passage. Bot for an thraw desyre I to lest here, Turnus slauchter and deith with me to bere, As glaid tythingis vnto my child and barne, Amang the goistis law and skuggis derne. Ībid. 367. 13.

Skuggis, however, is not synon. with goistis, but only denotes the place of their residence. This appears from the epithet derne being conjoined. The phrase is the same with that quoted above, sense 2.

Su.G. skugga umbra. Skuggd tegmen, defensio, is a derivative from this, although immediately from the v. Isl. skuga, skugge, id. which G. Andr. derives from sky, skygg, to overshadow. A.S. scua, id.; Scren. (vo. Shade) from sky, nebula.

Rudd. thinks that E. sculk may be traced to Isl. skugge, A.S. scua. I need scarcely say that it is evidently the same with Su.G. skiolk-a latebras quaerere, from Isl. skiol, Su.G. skiul, latibulum. To Skug, v. a. 1. To shade, S.

- Ioyful and blyith thay entering in the flude, That derne about skuggit with bewis stude. Doug. Virgil, 205. 39.

Su.G. Isl. skygg-a obumbrare.

2. To shelter, to skreen, S. "To scug, to hide. North." Gl. Grose.

- 3. To skoog a shower, an anomalous phrase, signifying, to seek shelter from it, S.B.
- 4. In a moral sense, to expiate, to cover. - That's the penance he maun drie, To scug his mortal sin.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 258.

To Skug, Scoug, v. n. To flee for shelter, to secret one's self.

He's skuggin, a phrase used concerning one who tries to avoid his pursuers, who wish to arrest him for debt, or for some alleged crime, S.B.

They—loo to snuff the healthy balm, Whan E'ening spreads her wing sae calm; But whan she grins an' glowrs sae dowr, Frae Borean houff in angry show'r, Like thee they scoug frae street or field, An' hap them in a lyther bield.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 34. Analogous to this is Isl. skogar madur, exul, qui in sylvis latere debet; Ol. Lex. Run. Skog-gangr madr, and skogungr, are used in the same sense, q. a man who gangs to a skoog. The contrary idea is thus expressed; Leysa or skogi, ex sylva redimere; to restore one to the rights of a citizen, to recall from exile, to release from skoog; Landnamab. Gl. SKUGGY, adj. Shady, Rudd.

SKUGRY, s. In skugry, under covert. In skugry ay throw rankest gras or corn, And wonder slie full prively they creip. Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 149.

SKUL, SKULL, SKOLL, s. 1. A goblet or large bowl, for containing liquor of any kind.

The Troiane women stude with hare down schaik, About the bere weping with mony allake:
And on we kest of warme milk mony a skul,
And of the blude of sacrifice coupis ful:
The saule we bery in sepulture on this wyse,
The lattir halesing syne loud schoutit thrys.

Doug. Virgil, 69. 20.

As coupis corresponds to pateras in the original, skul is used for cymbia, which Douglas elsewhere renders in this manner;

Tua siluer coppis schapin like ane bote.

Ibid. 136. 35.

We are not, however, hence to conclude that the word skull necessarily denoted a vessel of this form. For he elsewhere uses it, conjoined with flagon, in rendering crateras.

For ioy thay pingil than for till renew Thare bankettis with al observance dew; And, for thir tithingis, in flakoun and in skull Thay skynk the wyne, and wauchtis cowpys full.

10. 5.

2. The term has been metonymically used to denote the salutation of one who is present, or the respect paid to an absent person, by expressing a wish for his health; while he who does so at the same time partakes of the drink that is used by the company, in token of his cordiality.

This is what is now called "drinking one's health."

In this sense it occurs in the Account of Gowrie's Conspiracy published by royal authority. "The kinge called for drinke, and in a merry and homely manner sayde to the earle, that although the earle had seen the fashion of entertaynements in other countries, yet hee would teach him the Scottish fashion, seeing he was a Scottish man: and therefore, since he had forgotten to drinke to his Majestie, or sit with his guests and entertayne them, his Majestie would drinke to him his owne welcome, desiring him to take it forth and drink to the rest of the company, and in his Majestie's name to make them welcome."

of Gowrie came from his Majestie's chamber, to drink his scoll to my lord duke, and the rest of the company, which he did. And immediately after the scoll had past about, this deponent raise from the table, to have waited upon his Majestie, conform to his former direction," &c. P. 196—227. Perth edition, 1774. In Cromarty's account, there is the following note:—"Scoll, the word used then for drinking a health." The passage itself is also differently expressed in this work.—"The earl of Gowrie came from his Majesty's chamber, to the hall, and call'd for wine; and said that he was directed from his Majesty's chamber, to drink his scoll to my Lord Duke," &c. Historical Account, p. 40.

Before particularly considering this passage, I may refer to one in another work, in which the term has the same signification.

"Shee that but pitissat, sippes before the sober, can skip at the scols with her commers, till shee bee sicke with healths." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 340.

As it is said, that "Gowrie came from his Majestie's chamber, to drink his scoll to my Lord Duke," it has been supposed that the king desired them to drink his health in his absence; Gl. Sibb. vo. Scoll. But in what way soever the passage be read, it does not appear that this is the meaning. The relative, his, might be understood in reference to Gowrie himself; as intimating, that the king desired the earl to go and welcome the company to his house, by drinking to them. But although it be viewed as referring to James, as it is immediately connected with these words, "came from his Majestie's chamber;" it will not follow, that it was the king's desire that his own health should be drunk. From what he had previously said to Gowrie with respect to his omission, it is evident that this is not the sense of the language. He, in a jocular way, reprehended the earl for not drinking to him;—" desiring him to take it forth," (that is, the drink formerly mentioned), "and drink to the rest of the company." Therefore, even admitting that the expression, his scoll, means the king's scoll, we cannot, with propriety, suppose that any thing more is meant, than that Gowrie went to the anti-chamber, to convey to the noblemen and gentlemen, who were there, his Majesty's salutation; or, as expressed in the narrative, " to drink to the rest of the company, and, in his Majestie's name," to give them that welcome which he had neglected to give them in his own.

Even supposing, then, that the writer means to say that Gowrie drank the king's scoll; all that we can conclude from it is, that, "after the Scottish fashion;" he welcomed the guests to his house;—with this peculiarity, indeed, that he did so by drinking to them in the king's name. But this is very different from drinking the king's health. It is probable, however, that in paying their respects to their host, when "the scoll passed about," they at the same time expressed their wishes for the health of his master. This they might reckon themselves bound to do, from the peculiar manner in which Gowrie had expressed their welcome.

Thus it appears that the term, primarily denoting a vessel for containing liquor, was, in consequence of the customs connected with drinking, at length used to signify the mutual expressions of regard employed by those engaged in compotation, or their united wishes for the health and prosperity of one individual, distinguished in rank, or peculiarly endeared to them all, whether he were present or absent.

I have met with one passage in which that expression, the king's skole, is not only distinctly used, but clearly meant in the sense which has been improperly attached to the phrase already considered. After the bridge of Berwick had been re-built, in the year 1621, "Sir William Beyer, mayor of the town, stayed the taking away of the centries, and putting in the key-stone, till the king's skole were drunk at that part of the bridge." Calderwood's Hist. p. 787. But the expression, although equivalent to what is now called drinking the king's health, seems strictly to signify, drinking the king's cup, or a cup in honour of the king.

For we are not to suppose, that the word skoll has any primary or proper relation to health or prosperity. This would be totally repugnant to analogy. If it be not sufficiently clear, from what has been already said, that this is merely an improper sense; this, we apprehend, will appear indisputable, from a comparison of our term with its cognates in the other Northern languages.

Isl. skal, skaal, skylldi, Alem. skala, Germ. schale, Su.G. and Dan. skaal, (pron. skol,) all signify a cup, a bowl, a drinking vessel. From the Gothic nations, this word seems to have passed to the Celtic. For, in the Cornish, skala has the same meaning, being rendered by Lhuyd patera; Gael. sgala, a bowl, Shaw. Rudd., in his Glossary to Douglas's Virgil, mentions the verb, to Skole, or Skolt, as used Scot. Bor. in the sense of pocula exinanire. This verb has undoubtedly been formed from the noun. In the North of Scotland, also, skiel still denotes a tub. Thus a washing-tub is called a washing-skiel. The tubs used by brewers, for cooling their wort, are, in like manner, called skiels. It affords a strong presumption that this is originally the same word with skoll, skull, immediately under consideration, that the goblet employed by the inhabitants of the North, for preparing their ale for immediate use, is called kaltskaal. This seems to intimate, that our use of the term, with respect to the operation of brewing, contains an allusion to its more ancient appropriation. Kaltskaal, eodem tropo illis quo Sueonibus est patera, in qua frigidus cerevisiae potus in aestate, et calidus in hyeme fieri solet. Loccenii Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 96.

It may be added, that skiel is still used in Orkney as the name of a flagon, or wooden drinking vessel with a handle.

Skull is a term of general use in Scotland for a basket of a semi-circular form. It was used in this sense so early as the time of Dunbar.

Fish wyves cry Fy, and cast down skulls and skeils.

Evergreen, ii. 59. st. 23.

It is probable that skiel was used by him as if it had been synon., because of the alliteration. Or, from the resemblance with respect to form, it may actually have been used in the same sense in his time. E. skillet, a small kettle or boiler, might appear, at first view, to have some affinity. But it seems immediately formed from Fr. escuellete, a porringer; and this again from Ital. scudella, used in the same sense. This is derived from Lat. scutula, which was a kind of concave vessel, a saucer. The learned Ihre views these Fr. Ital. and Lat. words as allied to Gothic skaal. But it is surprising that he should consider skaal itself as formed, per crasin, from Lat. scutula. The quotations he has himself made, for illustrating this word, certainly supplied him with a far more natural etymon. But before proceeding to this, it may be remarked, as a singular analogy, that, according to Athenaeus, Lib. iv. Gr. σκαλλιον is a small cup, and σκαλις is equivalent to σχαφιον, which signifies a drinking vessel.

It is highly probable, that a cup or bowl received this name from the barbarous custom, which prevailed among several ancient nations, of drinking out of the sculls of their enemies. Warnefrid, in his work, De Gestis Longobard., says; "Albin slew Cunimund, and having carried away his head, converted it into a drinking vessel; which kind of cup is with us called schala, but in the Latin language it has the name of patera." Lib. i. c. 27. The same thing is asserted of the Boii, by Livy, Lib. xxiii. c. 24.; of the Scythians, by Herodotus, Lib. ix.; of their descendants, the Scordisci, by Rufus Festus, in Breviario; of the Gauls, by Diodorus Siculus, Lib. v.; of the Celts, by Silius Italicus, Lib. xiv.

At Celtae vacui capitis circumdare gaudent, Ossa, nefas! auro, et mensis ea pocula servant. Vid. Keysler Antiq. Septentr. p. 363.

Hence Ragnar Lodbrok, in his Death-Song, consoles himself with this reflection; "I shall soon drink beer from hollow cups made of skulls." St. 25. Wormii Literatura Dan. p. 203.

The same word in Su.G. signifies both a scull, (cranium), and a drinking vessel. This observation is equally applicable to Germ. schale. But Ihre is so unfavourable to this derivation, principally, as would appear, from its exhibiting our Gothic ancestors as so extremely barbarous, that he considers the human skull as receiving the name of skaal from its resemblance to the patera, or bowl. This is surely to invert the natural order. Although the Northern nations were greatly addicted to inebriety, yet we can scarcely suppose, that they found it necessary to borrow a name for their sculls from their drinking vessels. The scull itself seems to have received this designation from its resemblance of a shell; in A.S. sceala, scala; Belg. schaele; Germ. schele; Isl. skael; Su.G. and Dan. skal. Allied to this is MoesG. skaljos, the tiling of a roof.

Ihre objects to this etymon, not only on the ground of the inhumanity of the custom supposed to be alluded to; but especially, he says, because he does not find that the word skaal is used by ancient writers, as denoting a memorial potation, or the act of drinking in honour of some distinguished personage; adding, that minne and full are the terms used by old Icelandic authors. Even supposing this to be true, it will not disprove the antiquity of the word. Nothing more could reasonably be inferred, than that skaal, in more early ages, had retained its original and proper signification of a drinking vessel; as it is used in the other sense only by a strong metonymy. It was natural to prefer minne; for, as literally signifying memory, it simply and directly expressed the reason of this particular mode of drinking. Nor need we be surprised although they even preferred the other term, full; not only as the figure is less strong, to speak of drinking the fill of a cup, than of drinking the cup itself; but also, because it referred to the established custom with respect to this draught, that the cup must be full, and completely evacuated. This is only to suppose the Isl. word to have been for some time stationary in its meaning, in the same manner with our skull or skoll. For there is not the slightest evidence, that, in the age of Gawin Douglas, it was used in that figurative sense which it bore a century afterwards.

But it is astonishing that the learned Ihre, after he has quoted Warnefrid, should lay any stress on this circumstance. He "does not find that the word skaal is used by ancient writers." And can he deny this character to Warnefrid, who flourished about the year 774? Does he not say that this kind of cup, made of a human scull, is by the Goths called schale? Can any Scandinavian writer be produced, who uses minne and full, to the exclusion of skaal, in an earlier age? There is no evidence that either of these terms was written for some ages after. Warnefrid was not only a writer of great reputation, but himself a Goth; and his positive testimony is surely far preferable to the negative evidence deduced from posterior writers. Although it could be proved, as it cannot, that the term was not used, in that early period, in the particular sense referred to; it would by no means follow that it was unknown in its simple signification, as denoting a drinking vessel. As the Longobardi were a Gothic nation, it is extremely improbable that a term, which had so singular an origin, would be unknown to other nations belonging to the same race; although, without any particular reason, it might be more used by one nation than by another.

Not only is the meaning of this term, as it occurs in other Northern languages, preserved in ours; but the figurative sense is also the same. As it has been seen that the earl of Gowrie "drunk his scoll to my lord duke," and that "the king's skole" was drunk at the bridge of Berwick; we learn from Loccenius that this very phrase is used in the languages of the North. "Illud nomen in his Septentrionalibus locis adhuc ita remanet, ut dricka skala, i. e. bibere pateram, metonymice dicatur, quando bibitur alicujus honori et memoriae, quod ex hoc vasculo quondam frequentius fieri suetum, notio vocis indicat." Antiq. Sueo-Goth. p. 96. "In compotations," says Ihre, " the name of Skaal is given to the memory of the absent, or the salutation of those who are present, which goes round in the time of drinking:" or more fully, "dricka ens skaal." As Dan. skaal signifies a bowl, or drinking vessel; at drikka ens skaal, is to drink one's health; voc. Skaal. In Isidore, we find the phrase, Calices et scalae poculorum genera. Origin. Lib. xx. c. 5.

In the same manner did the ancient Goths express their regard to their sovereigns. They drunk the king's skoll. Hence Warnefrid relates, that when Grimaold, king of the Lombards, had determined to kill Bertaridus, after he was overpowered with wine, the ministers of the palace being ordered to bring to him liquors, with dishes of various kinds, asked of him, in the king's name, to drink a full bowl in honour of him. But he, suspecting the snare, secretly procured that it should be filled with water. Immediately, promising that he would drink it off in honour of the king, he made a libation, by pouring out a little of the water. De Gestis Longobard. Lib. v. These skolls, in honour of the king, as we learn from Loccenius, they used also to drink standing. Ubi sup.

Sturleson gives a particular account of this custom, when describing the manners of the Scandinavians before the introduction of Christianity. From this it appears, that it had been originally an act of worship to their false gods. The passage presents so minute a picture of the rites of the ancient Goths, that I shall be excused for giving it at large.

"It was a received custom with the ancients," he says, " that, when the sacrifices were to be offered, the people gathered together in great multitudes, every one bringing with him food and those things which were necessary during the continuance of their festivals. Every one also brought ale with him, to be used during the feast. For this purpose, all kinds of cattle, and horses also, were slaughtered. All the blood of these victims was called Hlaut; and the vessels in which the blood was received and preserved were denominated Hlaut-bollar. They gave the name of Hlaut-tynar to those utensils which were employed for sprinkling with this blood all the altars and footstools of their gods, the walls of the temple, both within and without, and also the worshippers. The flesh was boiled, that it might be more grateful food to man.

"In the midst of the pavement of the temple fires were kindled, over which the kettles were suspended: and cups filled with drink were made to pass through the midst of the flames. It belonged to him who presided at the feast, to consecrate the cups and all the food used at the sacrifices. Fyrst Odins full, first, a cup consecrated to Odin must be drunk off, for procuring victory to the king, and felicity to the kingdom. Then, another in honour of Niordr and Freyr, for a good harvest and peace. This being done, it was usual to drink the cup called Braga-full, in memory of the heroes and princes slain in battle. Nor was it thought decorous to neglect the drinking of a cup in honour of their deceased relations, of those especially who had been interred in the tumuli: and this was called Minne." Heimskringla, Hakonar Goda S. c. 16. It may be observed, that, what in the Isl. is called Odins full, is, in the Danish version, rendered Odens skaal. In the same manner Niurthar-full, and Freys-full are translated Niords skaal and Freys skaal.

The old S. phrase of invitation, Tak aff your horn, being equivalent to the modern one, Drink your glass; it may deserve notice, that drinking a full, or the contents of a cup, and drinking out a horn, are used as synon. by Sturleson. "When the first cup was handed," he says, " Earl Sigurd, having consecrated it to Odin, drack aff hornino til kongs, drank off the horn to the king;" in this manner inviting him to follow his example. Ibid. c. 18.

As it appears, that the custom of giving toasts, to use the modern phrase, originated in the rites of our ancestors, while in a heathen state; it deserves notice, that this custom has, from its very introduction, been abused to intemperance. The idea entertained by many in our own times, that it is a token of disrespect to the person whose health is drunk, if the glass be not filled to the brim, and then emptied, may be traced to the same source. Even at their solemn sacrifices, the ancient Scandinaviaus, as Ihre has observed, placed some degree of sanctity, in scyphis strenue evacuandis, or, as we would say, in hard drinking. This custom, as it originated in the idolatrous worship of Thor and Odin, was continued after the introduction of Christianity. The names were changed; but the rites, and the morals of the people, were, in a great measure, the same. Presuming to invocate the true God, or the Saviour, the pretended worshipper reckoned himself bound to empty a full cup. The like honour was done to the Virgin Mary. Then, they in a similar manner expressed their veneration for the Saints, and for the particular Patrons of the place. Needs it seem surprising, that such acts of religion, like various convivial and friendly meetings in later times, where similar ceremonies have been enforced, frequently terminated in tumults and in blood? V. Ol. Trygguason S. c. 38. and Ihre, vo. Minne.

There is a striking similarity between these customs of the barbarous Scandinavians, and those of the ancient nations that have been called civilized. The Romans, at their feasts, not only made a libation to their gods, by pouring out part of the cup before they drank of it; but emptied it, in honour of them. "It was customary," says Potter, speaking of the Greeks and Romans, "to drink to persons absent. First the gods were remembered, then their friends; and at every name one or more cups of wine, unmixed with water, were drunk off.—It was their custom to drink unmixed wine as often as they named the gods or their friends. They did also, επιχειν τη γη, pour forth some of the wine upon the earth, as often as they mentioned any person's name; -which being the manner of offering libations, it seems to have been a form of adoration, when any of the gods were named, and of prayer for their friends, when they mentioned them. Amongst their friends they most commonly named their mistresses. Examples of this custom are very common. Thus, in Tibullus:

Sed bene Messalam sua quisque ad pocula dicat, Nomen et absentis singula verba sonent." Potter's Archaeol. Graec. ii. 394.

Sometimes the number of cups equalled that of the letters in the name of the person whose health was drunk.

Naevia sex cyathis, septem Justina bibatur. Martial.

Of this custom we find some of the more enlightened heathen complaining, as what necessarily led to the vilest intemperance. It was particularly reprobated by Seneca and Juvenal. V. Rosin. Antiq. Rom. p. 387. a.

The custom of saluting, first the gods, and then their friends by name, the Romans called "drink. ing after the Grecian manner;" as they had borrow. ed it from the Greeks. They seem to have had at least three cups, to which they ascribed a peculiar solemnity. They are indeed differently reckoned by different writers. According to some, the first was drunk in honour of Jupiter Olympius, the second in honour of the Heroes, and the third to Jupiter Soter, or the Saviour; who, it is said, was so called on this occasion, because it was supposed that this third cup might be taken, without any disorder of mind, or injury to the health. Others mention the cup of Mercury, of Jupiter Charisius, and of Good Genius, by which designation some understand Apollo as meant, and others Bacchus. V. Rosin. p. 389. 390.; Potter, ii. 398. 399.

I need scarcely add, that both as to the number, and the designations, of these cups, we may observe a striking analogy in the skolls of our Northern ancestors. From Snorro we learn, that, at all their great conventions, three cups were especially accounted sacred. No constraint was put on any to exceed this number. But it was reckoned necessary that they should go thus far. One was dedicated to Odin, who was not less honoured by the Northern nations, than was Jupiter by the Greeks. The Braga-bikar corresponded to the Grecian cup in honour of the Heroes: and we have seen that as the Greeks paid their respects to the Good Genius, the Scandinavians also dedicated a cup to the Patrons, or Guardians, of the place where they were assembled.

The learned Keysler has observed, that the Apostle Paul is to be understood as referring to these cups, when he says, (1. Cor. x. 21.), "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils," or " of demons," i. c. the cup drunk in honour of departed men, who have been deified by their deluded votaries. Keysler also refers to the language of the prophet, as containing the same allusion: "Ye are they—that prepare a table for that troop, Gad; and that furnish the drink-offering unto that number, Meni;" Isa. lxv. 11. V. Antiq. Septent. p. 352. As both these are unquestionably proper names, a sanguine etymologist might view both as of Northern origin. For as Minne was the name of one of the cups employed in the drink-offerings of the heathen, Isl. Gaud was the designation of the object of their worship. Numen Ethnicum, Christianis execratum, hodie pro re abjectissima et nauci usurpatur; G. Andr. Lex. But Gad, it would seem, in the passage referred to, denotes the Sun; and Meni the Moon. We must, therefore, be satisfied with the analogy, as it respects the drink-offerings.

The strong castel of Brystow, that he let hym self rere,

Astored wel ynou, & also the slede,

And held hem bothe age the kyng, to thenche on kunhede. P. 447.

"Slede, valley," Gl. Hearne.

This is a very ancient word; being the same with Sw. slet, a plain. Est autem Vitesleth, velut alii scribunt, Widasleth, nihil aliud quam lata planities, aut Vitarum vel Jutarum planities; Loccenii Hist. Succana, Lib. i. c. 7.

This was the ancient name of Zealand and some of the neighbouring isles in the Baltic, and has been viewed as the designation of an early settlement of the Picts. V. Pinkerton's Enquiry, i. 182.

Perhaps all these terms may be traced to Su.G. Dan. slaet, Isl. slett-r, Mem. sleht, Germ. schlecht, SLAE, SLA, s. The sloe, S.; a term applied both to the tree and the fruit.

SLAG. s. A considerable quantity of any soft substance lifted up from the rest; as, a slag of parridge, a large spoonful, S.B.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. slagg-a corradere per fas et nefas; or Germ. schlag-en ejicere.

SLAG, SLOG, s. A gust, synon. flann. For of hie landis thair may cum sloggis, At Saint Tabbis Heid, and Buchan Nes, And ryve your foir-saill all in raggis. -Sic slags may fall, suppois a hundir War yow to help, that have no hands.

Schaw, Maitland Poems, p. 133. 134. It is surprising that Mr. Pinkerton should derive this from Su.G. slug crafty, (Ihre); "a cunning blast," Note, p. 418, when he might have observed that the same Glossarist has elsewhere given the very word in question; Slagg, mixta nive pluvia, intemperies; Teut. slegghe, nebula, glacialis pluvia. There is no reason, therefore, for supposing with Sibb., Gl. vo. Slogg, that it is perhaps erroneously for Flaggs. SLAID, s. A valley. V. SLADE. To SLAIGER, v. n. "To waddle in the mud;"

This seems radically the same with Laggery, Laggerit, q. v., although Sibb. views it as allied to

To SLAIK, v. n. To carry off and eat any thing clandestinely, applied especially to confections, sweetmeats, &c. S.

It is exactly synon. with Germ. schleck-en, ligurire, suavia et dulcia appetere. This Wachter derives from Gr. yaurus dulcis, the sibilation being prefixed. But both the Germ. v. and Teut. slick-en, vorare; lurcare, ligurire; must be viewed as properly signifying to lick; analogous to Su.G. slek-a, slick-a, Isl. sleik-ia, lambere, q. to lick one's fingers, as is said of one who has this propensity. Our use of the word seems indeed to have been borrowed from the nasty habits of sweet-toothed cooks. That this is the true origin both of the S. and Germ. terms is evident from this, that, in the language last mentioned, a person of this description is indiscriminately denominated schlecker, and lecker-maul, os cibi lautioris appetens, Wachter. Su.G. slikiare, in like manner, signifies a smell-feast, also, a flatterer, a parasite; from leck-en, MoesG. laigw-an,, A.S. liccian, &c. to lick. Ihre views Heb. לחק, lahhak, id. as the common origin.

2. To kiss in a slabbering manner, S.

Slip doun thy hoiss, me think the carle is glaikit.

3. To bedaub, S. This seems merely an oblique use of the same v.

SLAINES, SLAYANS. Letters of Slaines, letters subscribed, in case of slaughter, by the wife or executors of the deceased, acknowledging that satisfaction had been given, or otherwise soliciting for the pardon of the offender; Erskine's Instit. B. iv. Tit. 4. s. 105.

Robertson, in his Hist. of Charles V., has shewn that this custom is perfectly analogous to the feudal laws which existed on the continent. Vol. I. 362. N. xxiii.

To SLAIRG. V. next word.

To SLAIRY, SLARY, v. a. To bedaub, S.B. It properly denotes the effect of carelessness.

Sibb. writes slairg, slerg, deriving the term from Teut. slijck coenum. But it must rather be deduced from sloore sordida ancilla, serva vilis, ignava; Belg. slorig sordidus. Kilian refers to E. slorie, sordidare, mentioned by Junius, which is evidently the same word. The latter refers to Dan. slor, colluvies hominum, the dregs of the people. Lye properly adds, that Isl. slor, the filth of fishes, (piscium sordes), appears to be the common origin. Sw. slarfv-a, to be careless in doing any thing; Wideg. V. SLERG.

from slaet planus, aequus; Belg. slecht-en, id. 2. Metaph. to depreciate. A slaitin tongue, a tongue that depreciates others, W. Loth.

3. Expl. "to abuse in the worst manner."

"It is much to be lamented, that people professing his name, should be so slaited and enslaved by transgression as many are." Guthrie's Trial, p. 143. 144.

4. It seems used, in an oblique sense, as signifying to wipe.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 163.

In Pink. Select Ball. i. 40, it is slaided: He expl. slaid, "to move speedily." SLAITIT, part. pa. Exhausted or worn out with fatigue.

Balnevis, Evergreen, ii. 201.

In allusion to hunting; perhaps from Teut. slete tritus, slet-en terere, atterere. MoesG. ga-sleithan, to lose. Slate, however, is expl. by Sibb., "to set loose (spoken of hounds);" and it is undoubtedly used in this sense. V. SLATE, v.

SLAK, SLACK, SLAKE, s. 1. An opening in the higher part of the same hill or mountain, where it becomes less steep, and forms a sort of pass, S.

This in sense resembles glack, S. and Gael., to which Mr. Macpherson refers. But it conveys a different idea; as the latter more properly signifies a dell or larger opening between distinct mountains. Nor is swyre exactly synon. It denotes a hollow that is not so deep as the slack.

He tuk with him a gud mengne, On horss ane hundre thai mycht be; And to the hill thai tuk thair way; And in a slak thaim enbuschyt thai.

Barbour, xiv. 536. MS. Himself ascendis the hie band of the hill, By wentis strate, and passage scharp and wil.— Tharfor ane prattik of were deuyse wyl I, And ly at wate in quyet enbuschment At athir pethis hede or secret went, In the how slake be younder woddis syde Full dern I sal my men of armes hyde.

Doug. Virgil, 382. 10.

Red Ringan sped, and the spearmen led, Up Goranberry slack.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 366. 2. A gap or narrow pass between two hills or mountains. " Slack, a valley or small shallow dell;" A. Bor. Sir J. Sinclair defines it, "a narrow pass between two hills;" Observ. p. 193.

Fra slak til hyll, oure holme and hycht, He trawalyd all day. Wyntown, vi. 16. 17.

Here it seems to denote an opening between distinct hills, or as rendered, Gl. Wynt., "a deep narrow valley."

Thus it is used by Doug. as synon. with vail, i. e.

Not fer from thens Rome cieté ekit he, Quhar by ane new invention wounder sle, Sittand into ane holl vail or slak, Within the listis for the triumphe mak, War Sabyne virginis reuist by Romanis. Doug. Virgil, 266. 8.

In a slake thou shal be slayne.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 23. 3. The slack of the hass, the narrowest part of the throat; a metaph. borrowed from a hill, Loth. Rudd. certainly refers with propriety to Belg. slaeck, laxus, remissus. For the term seems properly to signify that the ground slackens in its steepness. Su.G. slak, id. is used metaph. to denote the hollow of the side, or that part in animals which intervenes between the ribs and loins. This is called slaksidan, q. the slak of the side, in the same manner in which we speak of the slot of the breast, S.

SLAKE, SLAIK, SLEEGH, SLOKE, s. 1. The oozy vegetable substance in the bed of rivers,

S.B. pron. q. slauk.

"This ware is of three kinds, obtained at different seasons. The first is the green slake, which grows in the river, is washed down by the summer floods, and is brought ashore at the harbour-mouth." P. Nigg, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vii. 201.

"Some trials of sleech [for manure] from the shore have been made, but it did not seem to answer." P. Dornock, Sutherl. Ibid. ii. 19.

2. A kind of reddish sea-weed, S.B.; Navel laver, Ulva umbilicalis, Linn. In some places the term sluke is also applied to the Ulva compressa, and Conferva bullosa. The latter abounds in all stagnate ponds.

" Ulva umbilicalis, Navel Laver, Anglis. Sloke or Slake, Scotis." Lightfoot, p. 967.

"Scot. Bor. call a kind of sea-weed, very soft and slippery, slake, which they also eat;" Rudd. vo. Slike.

This, I am informed, when boiled, forming a jelly, is eaten, by some of the poor people in Angus, on bread, instead of butter.

Green Sloke, Ulva lactuca, Linn. " Lettuce-Laver, or Oyster-Green, Anglis. Green Sloke, Scotis." Lightfoot, p. 970.

Rudd. views this as derived from slike slime. But it seems rather denominated from Su.G. slak, &c. laxus, remissus, because of its being soft and flaccid to the touch or taste. V. SLAUKIE. It may be added that Fucus vesiculosus is in some parts of Sweden called slake; Linn. Fl. Suec. N. 1145.

SLAM, SLAMMACH, s. A share, or the possession, of any thing, implying the idea of some degree of violence or trick in the acquisition, S.B. It is often applied to food.

Su.G. slam-a congerere, coacervare. This word is sometimes used as synon. with slagga, per fas et nefas corradere, Ihre. Slem also denotes cunning, dishonest gain; Teut. sluym-en, furtim, clanculum, et tecte prorepere; slemm-en comessari, graecari.

To SLAMMACH, v. a. To lay hold of any thing by means not entirely fair or honourable, S.B. To SLAMMACH, SLAMACH, v. n. To slabber,

S.B. synon. slash.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 333.

Su.G. slem, slime, slemig, slimy; suggesting the same dirty idea with E. slabber and slabby.

SLAMMIKIN, s. A drab, a slovenly woman. Loth. Slamkin, id. Grose's Class. Dict.

Su.G. slem, turpis, obscoenus; slem eluvies, faex, Germ. schlam, schlem, id.

SLANG, s. " A species of cannon coinciding with the culverine, as the name does, which signifies a serpent. Half-slangis, a smaller species;" Gl. Compl.

"Mak reddy your cannons,—slangis, and half slangis, quartar slangis," &c. Compl. S. p. 64.

Teut. slanghe, serpens, anguis, coluber: Bombarda longior, vulgo serpentina; Kilian.

To SLANGER, v. n. To linger, Berwicks.

Teut. slingh-en, slingher-en, serpere; Su.G. slingr-a repere (Seren. vo. Slender); q. to creep in action or motion.

SLAP, s. 1. "A gap or narrow pass between two hills," Shirr. Gl. S.B.

In this use of the term, we may perceive an analogy to that of Slak, synon. For Su.G. slapp, like slak, signifies remissus.

2. A breach in a wall; a slap in a dike, S.

"The use the fishers made of the last-mentioned dike,—was for the men to pass up and down at hauling up their cobles, and felling their shots; and when a slap broke out in it, it was mended by the fishers." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805, p. 120.

Not from Teut. slap vietus, fluidus, withered, decayed; but Su.G. slapp, which is not only rendered remissus, but vacuus. Now what is a slap, but a vacuity? It may be from this source that Belg. slop is used to denote an alley. V. SLOP, s. 1. To SLAP, v. a. To break into gaps, S.

"Before the erection of the dyke last mentioned, there was the remains of an old dyke, or bulwark, much slapped and broken, that lay from Seaton's grounds, where the new dyke was built." State, Fraser of Fraserfield, 1805, p. 216.

To SLAP, v. a. To separate grain, that is thrashed, from the broken straw and coarser chaff, by means of a riddle, before it be winnowed, S.B. Su.G. slaepp-a, to permit any person or thing to escape; Tcut. slapp-en laxare.

SLAP, s. A riddle for separating grain from the broken straw, &c. V. the v.

To SLASH, v. n. A low word used to denote a fond and slubbering mode of kissing; sometimes conjoined with the E. word, To slash and kiss, S. synon. slammach.

Isl. slefs-a, allambo, alligurio; apparently from slefa, saliva; G. Andr. p. 217. SLASH, s. A great quantity of broth, or any other sorbillaceous food, Loth. V. the adj.

SLASHY, s. A term applied to work that is both wet and dirty, S.

Sw. slask wet; slask i rum som skuras, wet and filth in rooms that are scouring; slask waeder, wet weather, dirty weather; slaska i vatter, to dabble in water; Wideg.

SLATE, s. A person who is slovenly and dirty, Loth. Border; slaid, Clydes. id.

"Had aff," quoth she, "ye filthy slate."— Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

Isl. O.Su.G. sladde, vir habitu et moribus indecorus; Seren. vo. Slattern, which is evidently from the same source.

To SLATE, v. a. To let loose; a term used concerning dogs in hunting.

Speaking of Acteon, transformed by Diana into a hart, the poet says:

I saw alace! his houndis at him slatit.

Palice of Honour, i. 22. "To slate the dog at any one;" A. Bor. Gl. Grose. V. SLOTH-HOUND.

SLAUKIE, adj. 1. Loose, flaccid, flabby, unctuous; a term used as descriptive of soft flesh, such as young veal, especially when boiled, S.B. from the same origin with SLAKE, q. v.

2. Slow, inactive; applied both to speech and motion. One, who speaks in a slow and drawling manner, is said to be slaukie-spoken, Ang.

SLAUPIE, adj. Indolent and slovenly, S.B. A slaupie queyn, a slow dirty woman.

Teut. slap, laxus, remissus, languidus; Belg. slap slow; Een slappe vrow, a slow woman; Teut. sleype, a woman who creeps along in her pace or work; slapheyd, laxitas, et ignavia; Kilian. Su.G. slaep-a, to creep on the ground, to do any thing with great difficulty, to trail; kiortelen slaepar, the gown sweeps the ground; slaep trouble; slaepp-a to relax, slapp remiss; Isl. slaepa, vestis promissa et laxa; slaepe, traho, tractito laxo tractu, G. Andr. Teut. sloef, adj. lentus; s. homo sordido cultu, ignavus. Germ. schlaf torpor, schlaf-en, torpere, must be viewed as radically allied; as Franc. slaffi is rendered both remissio and ignavia, slaph-en, torpeant, Gl. Pez. and Alem. slaffii, desidia, Gl. Keron. We may add Ir. slapog a slut or dirty woman. SLAW, adj. Slow, S.B.

Quhairfore than suld we be at sik a stryfe So spedelie our selfis for to withdraw Even from the tyme, quhilk is no wayis slaw To flie from us, suppois we fled it nocht? K. James VI. Chron. S. P. iii. 489.

"Slaw at meat, slaw at wark;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 62.

SLE, SLEY, adj. 1. Sly, crafty, S. slee. Amang all vtheris samin thidder spedis That schrew prouokare of all wikkit dedis Eolus neuo, cursit Vlyxes sle.

Doug. Virgil, 182. 34.

 Wallace, i. 375. MS.

Of Crete as to hir kynrent borne was sche, And in the craft of weuing wonder sle. Doug. Virgil, 137. 12.

3. Ingenious; applied to mental exertions.

Weil at ane blenk sle poetry not tane is.

Doug. Virgil, 5. 2.

Sle is also used subst. like fre, bricht, &c.
On the fyllat full sternly straik that sle,
Persyt the bak, in the bowalys him bar.

Wallace, x. 382. MS. Su.G. sloeg, Isl. slaeg-r, id. Wachter derives Germ. verschlag-en, callidus, from schlag-en, literally to turn, metaph. to turn in one's mind, versare animo, ver prefixed denoting pravity. He gives it as synon. with Isl. slaeg-ur.

SLED-SADDLE, s. That which is borne by a horse yoked in a cart, S. from sled, synon. with sledge.

SLEDÉRIE, adj. Slippery. V. SLIDDERY. SLEEK, s. Mire, slime, miry clay in the bed of a river, or on the sea-shore, S. V. SLIK. SLEEKIT, SLEKIT, adj. Parasitical in manner and design, flattering, deceitful, S.

Now him withhaldis the Phinitiane Dido, And culyeis him with slekit wordis sle. Doug. Virgil, 34, 22.

Apon Ascaneus feil wounder was, The schining vissage of the god Cupide, And his dissimillit slekit wourdes quhyte.

Ibid. 35. 48. Slicked is the same word, with a different orthography.

"A slicked tongue and a slacke hand keepe other cumpanie." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 952. Either from Su.G. slik-a repere, q. to creep into one's good graces, or slek-a lambere, Germ. schleichen, to insinuate one's self.

Su.G. sleker, homo blandus, qui suis blanditiis alios captat; Isl. slikiare parasitus. Ihre seems uncertain whether to derive these terms from sleka lam-bere, or sliku repere. The last is most probable, if we regard analogy. For Teut. sleyck-en signifies repere, reptare, serpere humi; to creep on the ground. Hence sleycker a fox.

SLEENIE, s. A guinea, Aberd.

What tho' we canna boast of our guineas, We have plenty of Jockies and Jeanies, And these, I'm certain, are More desirable by far,

Than a pock full of poor yellow sleenies. Skinner's Old Man's Song, Burns, ii. 154.

This seems a cant term. It may, however, be allied to Germ. schlagen, cudere, used to denote the striking of metals in the mint; schlag, nota monetalis; Wachter. A.S. slean tacen, facere signum ictu; part. pa. slaegen, struck.

SLEEPERY, adj. Sleepy. V. SLIPPERY.

SLEEPIES, s. pl. Field Brome grass, S. Bromus secalinus, Linn. It is also called Goose-corn, S.

It is asserted, that meal, among which a considerable quantity of this weed is mixed, has a soporific influence, and sometimes produces a temporary delirium. For the same reason, it receives similar designations in other languages. In Su.G. it is denominated swindel or swingel, from swindel vertigo, because, according to Ihre, "the vulgar believe that bread made of this spurious grain intoxicates, or rather produces a vertigo." Dan. swingel, from swingel giddiness; Belg. droncaerd; Fr. ivroye, from ivre, inebriated.

SLEETH, s. A sloven, a sluggard, Aberd.
O Jove! the cause we here do plead,
An' unco great's the staik;
But sall that sleeth Vlysses now
Be said to be my maik?

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 1. From A.S. slaewth sloth, Su.G. sti slow. It might, however, be deduced from Su.G. slaet mean, sorry, vile.

To SLEIF, v. n. To slip or glide.

Ye did greit mis, fayr Conscience, be your leif, Gif that ye war of kyn and blude to me, That sleuthfullie suld lat your tyme our sleif, And come thus lait.

King Hart, ii. 24.
Alem. sliaf-an to glide; or Su.G. slaepa to drag on the ground, Germ. schleiff-en, id.

SLEITCHOCK, s. A flattering woman, Perths. Gael. slaodag, I am informed, is synon. SLEKIT, adj. Deceitful. V. SLEEKIT.

SLENK, s. A piece of low craft, synon. with E. sleight.

He atteled with a slenk haf slayn him in slight;
The swerd swapped on his swange, and on the mayle slik.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 22.
Teut. slincke sinistre, oblique; Germ. schlank flexuosus, mobilis, schlaenke obliquitates, allegorice doli, fallaciae, pravitates; Wachter, vo. Schlingen, p. 1433. Perhaps Isl. slungin, crafty, is allied.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 11.

Mr. Tooke seems justly to view E. sloth as the third pers. sing. of A.S. slaw-ian, q. that which sloweth, or maketh one slow. Divers. Purley, ii. 414.

To Sleuth, v. a. To neglect; or, to do work carelessly and insufficiently, S.B. sloth.

Fra tyme be past, to call it bakwart syne
Is bot in vaine: therefoir men sould be warr
To sleuth the tyme that flees fra them so farr.

K. James VI. Chron. S. P. iii. 488. 489.

⁶⁴ But seeing all was sleuthed, there was no mischief could befal our king, but was delivered unto us." Pitscottie, p. 61.

To SLEUTII, v. n. To linger, to delay.

And mony wayis himself he accusit,

That he sa lang had sleuthit and refusit

To resaif glaidlie the Troiane Enee.

Doug. Virgil, 380. 11.

This might seem allied to MoesG. af-slauthn-an obstupescere; for, as Junius remarks, men, who are astonished at any thing, generally continue for some time motionless, as if reduced to a state of torpor by sloth, Gl. Goth.

SLEUTH, s. The tract of man or beast, as known by the scent.

Bot Ik haiff herd oftymys say, That quha enlang a wattir ay Wald waid a bow draucht, he suld ger Bathe the slouth hund, and his leder, Tyne the sleuth men gret hym ta.

Barbour, vii. 21. MS.

Gret is evidently for gert, made, caused. Flench is the word used in Ed. Pink., by an error of the transcriber. In other editions, it is sent or scent. V. next word.

SLEUTH-HUND, SLEWTH-HUND, SLOUTH-HUND, SLOITH-HUND, SLOTH-BRACHE, SLOUGH-DOG, s. A blood-hound, Canis sagax, Linn.

"The inhabitants of the marches were obliged to keep such a number of slough dogs, or what we call blood-hounds: for example, 'in those parts beyond the Esk, by the inhabitants there were to be kept above the foot of Sark, 1 dog. Item, by the inhabitants of the insyde of Esk, to Richmond Clugh, to be kept at the Moot, 1 dog. Item, by the inhabitants of the parish of Arthuret, above Richmond Clugh, to be kept at the Barley-head, 1 dog; and so on throughout the border.' Nicolson's Border Laws, p. 127.—Persons who were aggrieved, or had lost any thing, were allowed to pursue the hot trode with hound and horn, with hue and cry, and all other accustomed manner of hot pursuit." Pennant's Tour in Scot. A. 1772. p. 77. 78.

" Lewis, in his History of Great Britain, Lond. 1729. fol. p. 56. says, 'In the south of Scotland, especially in the countries adjoining to England. there is another dog of a marvelous nature, called suthounds,' (that is sooth hounds, true hounds) because, when their masters are robbed, if they tell whether it be horse, sheep, or neat, that is stolen from them, immediately they pursue the scent of the thief, following him or them through all sorts of ground, and water, till they find him out and seize him; by the benefit whereof the goods are often recovered again. But now of late' (a mistake) they have given this beast the name of slouth. hound, because the people living in sloth and idle. ness, neither by themselves, or by good herdsmen, or by the strength of a house, do preserve their goods from incursions of thieves and robbers, then have they recourse to their dog for the reparation of their sloth." Maitland Poems, Note, p. 423.

The idea, that this hound derives its name from sooth, is not much more natural than the other.

According to Sibb., it is from "Teut. slock, canis vorax et rapax; in its primary sense, gula, gurges, vorago, helluo;" Gl. But there is no foundation for this idea. The term, although somewhat disguised by a capricious and variable orthography, is undoubtedly the same with E. slot, "the tract of deer," or, more strictly, of a hart. For the treading of a buck, and all other fallow deer, is called the vewe; Manwood's Forrest Laws, Fol. 27, b. This identity appears by the use of sleuth, by itself, for tract or scent. The origin may be Isl. slod, callis, semita, vestigia; G. Andr. Via in nive complanata; vestigia ferarum, in nive indagatarum; Verel. This learned writer gives diur-sporr as the Sw. synonyme. Jonaeus derives sloed tractus, vestigia, from sloed-a spargere; Gl. Orkneyinga S. Ir. sliocht, a tract or impression, has undoubtedly a common origin; as well as Gael. slaodan, id.

The only word in A.S., which seems to have any relation, is slaetinge, vestigia ferarum, Lye. But Mr. Tooke very ingeniously derives É. slot from A.S. slit-an findere, q. the mark of a cloven hoof. Divers. Purley, ii. 147. For the same reason for which a bloodhound is called slouth-hund, S. in Belg. it is denominated speur-hond, Germ. spur hund, from Belg. speur-en, na-spur-en, to trace out, Germ. nach-spur-en. Thus speur-hond is literally a tract-hound. V. SPERE.

In the Lat. of Reg. Maj. the term used is Canis trassans, which Du Cange renders, vestigium prosequens, adding; Tracer enim, est perquirere vestigiis insistendo: trace, seu trasse, vestigium.

Mr. Pinkerton says; "They were of a Gelder-breed, as Blind Harry hints,

'A slouth hound is of Gelderland,' b. 5." The passage referred to, I suppose, as the foundation of this assertion, adopted by Sibb., is that in Edit. 1648. 1758, &c.

In Gelder-land there was that bratchel bred. B. v. 25.

But it is otherwise in MS.

In Gyllisland thar was that brachell brede, Sekyr off sent to folow thaim at flede; So was scho vsyt on Esk and on Ledaill, Quhill scho gat blude no fleyng mycht awaill.

Gilsland, in the North of England, seems to be meant. This appears from the circumstance mentioned in connexion, that the hound had been accustomed to the pursuit on Eskdale and Liddale. This seems to be the only proof that our bloodhounds were of a Gelder-land breed.

Both Boece and Lesley describe these dogs in their histories. But neither insinuates that they are a foreign breed. Lesley speaks of a shaggy species of dog imported from Germany. He distinguishes this, however, from those which he calls odorisequi. V. Boeth. Descr. Alb. Fol. 12. Lesl. Scot. Descr. p. 13.

SLEW FYR, struck fire.

Men hard noucht, bot granys; and dintis That slew fyr, as men slayis on flyntis.

Barbour, xiii. 36. MS. Flew, flayis, Edit. Pink. This is the only passage in which I have observed the pres. ind. used in this sense.

Thai slew the wethir that thai bar. And slew fyr for to rost than mete; And askyt the King giff he wald etc.

Ibid. vii. 153. MS.

Strak, Edit. Pink. as in Edit. 1620. A.S. slae-an, sle-an, percutere; collidere. But we observe a greater similarity, as to the peculiar phrase, in Teut. vier-sla-en, excudere, sive excutere ignem. "Hence probably S.B. lightning is called Fire-slaughter;" Rudd. in. vo. Sw. slau eld, to strike fire.

Hewe fire was used as synon. O.E.

And hewe fire at the flynt foure hundred wynter, But thou have towe to take it, with tinder or

All thy labour is loste, and thy longe trauayle; For may no fyre flame make, fayle it his kinde. P. Ploughman, Fol. 95, a. V. SLA.

SLEWYT, pret. Slipped.

The knycht went in, and wald na langar stand; A rynnand cord thai slewyt our his hed, Hard to the bawk, and hangyt him to ded. Wallace, vii. 207. MS.

It is slipped, Edit. 1648, and 1673. V. SLEIF. Slewyt, however, might be viewed as allied to. Su.G. slau, jacere, jactare, mittere, as signifying, that they cast the cord over his head. The same v. slaa is also used in another sense which has great affinity. Sensum connectendi habet, uti-slaa knut, nodum nectere, (Ihre); to run a knot, as we use to express it.

To SLICHT, v. a. To contrive.

The swift farde cachis furth this Quene, Fenyeand the rage of Bacchus and grete mycht, Ane mare myscheif for to contrufe and slicht.

Doug. Virgil, 220, 21. Alem. sliht-en mulcere; Teut. slicht-en, slechten, extricare; Isl. slaegd fraus, dolus; Su.G. sloeg artificiosus, sloegd-a, opera fabrilia exercere.

SLICHT, SLIGHT, adj. Worthless; applied to character, S.

"Some slight lowns, followers of the Clanchattan, were execute." Spalding's Troubles, i. 5. V. SAD, sense 6.

A metaph. sense of E. slight, corresponding to. the use of Su.G. slaet. En slaet karl, homo flocci, Ihre; a man of no estimation. Teut. slecht, planus; metaph. used as signifying, ignobilis, plebeius, vilis, tennis.

SLICK-WORM, s. A species of worm bred in the oozy bed of rivers, S.

"This brook has a rich muddy bottom, in which there is plenty of slick-worm, a species of food on which the trout peculiarly delight." P. Kinloch, V. SLIK. Perths. Statist. Acc. xvii. 469.

SLID, SLYD, SLIDE, adj. .1. Slippery, glib, S. "He has a slid grip that has an eel by the tail;"

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 31.

Sum tyme in hyr hedelace, for to knyt hyr hare, Ful slyd sche slyppys hyr membris ouer alquhare. Doug. Virgil, 218. 54.

Slid ice, ice that is glib, S. 2. Mutable, uncertain; as E. slippery metaph.

signifies. Behald, said scho, and se this warldis gloir,

Maist inconstant, maist slid, and transitour. Palice of Honour, iii, 78.

The slide inconstant destenie, or chance, Unequallie dois hing in thair balance.

Ibid. i. 55, .

3. Cajoling, smooth, wheedling, S.

Ye have sae saft a voice, and slid a tongue, You are the darling baith of auld and young. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 66.

"Smooth, cunning;—as, "he's a slid loon," Gl. Sleekit, synon.

A.S. slith sliddery, Su.G. slaet laevis, politus. SLIDNESS, s. 1. Slipperiness, S.

2. Smoothness of versification, metaph. used. You—blythly can, when ye think fit, Enjoy your friend, and judge the wit And slidness of a sang.

Ramsuy's Poems, ii. 452.

SLIDDER, adj. Uncertain, unstable, variable.

Bot in thy minde thow may consider,

How warldlie power bene bot slidder:

For all thir greit impyris ar gane.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 106.

SLIDDER, s. Slipperiness.

-Thay na grippis thair micht hald for slidder.

Palice of Honour, iii. 55.

To SLIDDER, v. a. To pronounce indistinctly in consequence of speaking with rapidity, to slur, S. Teut. slidder-en prolabi; et celeriter tendere. Isl. slodr-ar, balbutio.

SLIDDERY, SLIDDRY, SLEDERIE, adj. 1. Slippery, S. " not affording firm footing."

He slaid and stummerit on the slidden ground

He slaid and stummerit on the sliddry ground, And fell at erd grufelingis amid the fen.

Doug. Virgil, 138. 41.

2. Hard to hold, escaping one's grasp, S.

"The secund thing that we mone do in our battel aganis our concupiscence, is to mak resistence to our foule lustis and desyris in the beginning of thame.—Thai ar lyk to ane slederie eil, that may be haldin be the heid, & nocht be the tail." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 76, a.

3. Deceitful. A sliddery fallow, one who is not to be trusted. V. preceding word.

SLIDERNES, s. Slipperiness.

For slidernes scant might he hald his fete. Henrysone's Traitie Orpheus, Edin. 1508. SLIDDER, adj.

This cummis not, as we considder, That men to travel now ar slidder; For mony now so bissie ar, Quhider ye travell neir or far, Go befoir, or byde behind, Ye sall thame aye in your gat find.

Maitland Poems, p. 183.

Not "more sly," as Mr. Pinkerton renders it; but either, in the positive, slow, lazy, or used comparatively, in the same sense, from Teut. slet, mulier ignava, E. a slut, or slodder, sordidus, negligens, slodder-en flaccessere. For it is evidently opposed to bissie, i. e. active.

SLIDDERY, adj. (pron. slithry). Loose and flaccid; a term applied to food, S.B. slauky, synon. Teut. slodder-en, flaccescere; slodder laxus.

*To SLIDE, v. n. Metaph. to fib, to deviate from the truth, S.

To SLIGHT, v. a. To dismantle, to demolish. "The 2d deed is the slighting the house of Airlie, and burning of Forthar in Glenyla. 'Tis answered, those houses were kept out in opposition to the Committee of Estates, and so might be slighted and destroyed: which is clear by Acts of Parliament yet in force." Inform. for Marq. Argyle, Wodrow's Hist. i. 48.

"At their first meeting July 13th, they order the citadels built by the English to be demolished: and the Earl of Murray is appointed to slight and demolish that of Inverness, the Earl of Eglintoun that of Air," &c. Ibid. p. 107.

Teut. slicht-en, slecht-en, Germ. schlicht-en, in planitiem redigere, sternere, aequare, solo aequare, diruere; Teut. slicht, slecht, Su.G. slaett, planus, aequus, i. e. level. Hence the Belg. phrase, Een stadt slechten, to throw down a town; Wachter. Het kasteel wierdt tot den grond toe geslecht; The castle was levelled with the ground, or demolished; Sewel.

SLYGOOSE, s. The Shieldrake, Anas Tadorna, Linn., Orkn.

"The wild Yowl of these islands are very numerous. Among these we may reckon—the dunter or eider duck, the sly goose, the awk, the lyre and the tyste." P. Kirkwall, Orkn. Statist. Acc. vii. 546.

"When a person attempts to take their young, the old birds shew great address in diverting his attention from the brood: they will fly along the ground as if wounded, till the former are got into a place of security, and then return and collect them together. From this instinctive cunning, Turner, with good reason, imagines them to be the chenalopex, or fox-goose of the ancients: the natives of the Orknies to this day call them the slygoose, from an attribute of that quadruped." Penn. Zool. p. 590. SLIK, SLIKE, s. 1. Slime, mud, S. sleek.

Endlang the wattyr than yeid he On athyr syd a gret quanteté, And saw the brayis hey standand, The wattyr holl throw slik rynnand.

Barbour, vi. 78. MS. Fra thine strekis the way profound anone, Depe vnto hellis flude of Acherone,—Populand and boukand furth of athir hand, Vnto Cocytus al his slike and sand.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 40.

The soyl was nocht bot marres slyke and sand.

Palice of Honour, i. 4.

Perhaps marres is here used as an adj., q. marshy.

2. The slimy shore.

We ar defendit to herbry on the sand, Prouokit eik to battall, and driven to land By force of storme, the slike thay vs deny. Doug. Virgil, 30. 4.

This is also written sleech.

"Sleech, or sea sand, is used as a substitute for lime, by those nearest the shore." P. Caerlaverock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. vi. 24. See also ii. 19.

Tent. slyck coenum, lutum, Germ. schlick, which Wachter inclines to view as the same with A.S. slog, E. slough.

SLIK, adj. Perhaps, smooth, slippery, for sleek.

The swerd swapped on his swange, and on the mayle slik.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 22.

Teut. sleyck, planus et aequus. It may, however, be viewed as a v. in the pret. q. slipped, slid; as in the same st. strik, lik, skrik, are all verbs. Su.G. slink-a signifies to slip, although rather in a different sense, from slik-a to creep.

SLIM, adj. 1. Slight, not sufficient; applied to workmanship, S.

2. In a moral sense, transferred to character, naughty, worthless. A slim fellow, a man of a very indifferent character, S.; "wicked, mischievous, perverse;" A. Bor.

Germ. schlimm denotes what is oblique; metaph., what is bad. But we receive more light from the Goth. dialects. Sw. slem signifies refuse; Isl. slaem-r vilis, invalidus. Ad slaem-a til, opus aliquod leviter et invalidè attrectare. In the very same sense we say, To slim o'er, to do one's work in a careless and insufficient way, S. Perhaps E. slim, slender, thin of shape, has the same origin; although Lye could find no etymon, but by supposing that it had been formed from Belg. slinder, slender; Addit. Jun. Etym.

To SLIM O'ER, v. a. V. the adj.

To SLING, v. n. To walk with a long step, S.

This seems merely an oblique sense of the E. v. sling, Su.G. slaeng-a jactare, valide movere, q. to throw one's self forward. Wachter observes concerning Germ, schleng-en, that although it originally denoted the throwing of a stone, it has obtained a more extensive application, as expressive of any kind of projectile force.

SLING, s. A long walk, Loth. V. the v.

SLINK, s. 1. The flesh of an animal, most commonly of a calf that has been cast by its dam before the time; properly, one calved before the hair is grown, S.

When this is palmed on an ignorant purchaser for veal, it is called slink.

It is sometimes used adjectively.

"There are besides these, a good many small and slink kid, and mert lamb-skins dressed here, which are got from the north-west of Scotland." P. Perth, Statist. Acc. xviii. 520. For mert 1. mort, as it is afterwards printed.

2. Transferred to ill-fed veal in general, S.

Sw. slyn-a, carion, Seren. Or it may be denominated from its flaccid quality; Teut. slank tenuis, gracilis; vacuus, solutus. Or from Germ. schlenken abjicere; as the phrase used to denote such an abortion is synon., a cow being said to cast her calf, S. SLINKIE, adj. Tall and slender, lank, S. A person of this form is called a slunkie.

Dan. slunken, thin, lank, scraggy; Teut. slank, Germ. schlank, id. Teut. lanck seems the more simple form, which is mentioned by Kilian as synon. with langh, long.

SLIP, s. A certain quantity of yarn, as it comes from the reel; containing twelve cuts, S. V. Cut. SLIP, SLYP, s. 1. A kind of low draught carriage, a dray without wheels.

To the next wode, wyth Dycson, syn he socht, Graithyt him a draucht on a braid styp and law, Changyt a horss, and to the houss can caw. - The yet yeld up, Dicson gat in but mar.

A thourtour bande, that all the drawcht wpbar,

He cuttyt it, to ground the slyp can ga, Cumryt the yet, stekyng thai mycht not ma. Wallace, ix. 1622. 1630. MS.

It is not long since the slype was used in Loth.

for carrying hay out of the field.

Germ. schleife, id. (traha), from schleif-en, to draw, so denominated because dragged on the ground; as a dragg-net is called Teut. sleyp-net. Perhaps the origin is Su.G. slaep-a, to creep on the ground, reptare humi; also, to drag something lying on the ground, aliquid humi reptans trahere; Ihre.

2. A wooden frame set on the top of a cart, for enlarging its size, when the draught consists of corn, hay, or wood for fuel, S.B.

SLYP, s. A contemptuous designation. V. HAN-YIEL SLYP.

To SLYPE, v. a. "To fall over, as a wet furrow from the plough;" Gl. Burns.

---- Spretty knowes wad rair't and risket,

An' slypet owrc. Burns, iii. 143.

This seems to have a common origin with E. slip. Germ. schlipf-en, in lubrico decurrere. Ihre views-slap, remissus, as the root. SLIPPERY, SLEPERYE, SLEEPERY, adj. 1.

Causing sleep. - To the walkryf dragoun mete gaif sche,-Strynkland to him the wak hony swete, And sleperye chesbowe sede to walkin his sprete.

Doug. Virgil, 117. 7.

Soporiferum, Virg.

2. Sleepy, overpowered with sleep, S. Sleep'ry Sim of the Lamb-hill, And snoring Jock of Suport-mill, Ye are baith right het and fou'.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 207. Teut. slaeperigh somnolentus, somniculosus.

SLYRE, s. Some kind of fine lawn, forbidden:

to any but the royal family.

"And that no person whatsoever weare upon their bodies, tiffinies, cobwebbe-launes, or slyres, under the payne of ane hundreth poundes." Acts Ja. VI. 1621. c. 25.

The manufacture may have been denominated from Germ. schleyer, Belg. sluyer, a scarf, a vail; (Sw. sloeju, id.) as being chiefly appropriated to this use. To SLYSTER. V. SLAISTER.

To SLYTE, v. n. To move easily or smoothly, Loth.; probably an oblique sense of the v. SLAIT, q. v.

To SLO, v. a. To slay, poetically.

Ye ar so fair be not my fo! Ye sall have syn and ye me slo. Thus throw ane suddan sycht.

Maitland Poems, p. 209.

SLOGAN, s. The war-cry, or gathering word, of a clan, S.

Then raise the slogan with ane schout, "Fy, Tindall to it! Jedbrugh's here!" Raid of Reidswire, Minstrelsy Border, i. 118. Our slogan is their lyke-wake dirge, Our moat the grave where they shall lie.

Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. iv. 23.

Corr. from slughorne, q. v.

SLOGG, SLAGG, s. A slough, a quagmire; Gl. Sibb.

SLOGGY, adj. Slimy, marshy.

Hys douchter, amang buskis ronk, In derne sladis and mony sloggy slonk, Wyth milk he nurist of the beistis wilde.

Doug. Virgil, 384. 23.

Rudd. refers to A.S. slog concavum.

SLOGGIS, s. pl. Blasts. V. SLAG.

SLOITH, s. A blood-hound. V. SLEUTH-HUND.

SLOKE, s. Ulva umbilicalis. V. SLAKE.

To SLOKIN, v. a. 1. To quench; used with respect to fire, S. A. Bor.; slake, E.; part. pa. sloknit.

----- We than all in were

Schupe with watir to slokin the haly fyre.

Doug. Virgil, 61. 49.

2. To allay thirst; sometimes with the s., often, in vulgar use, without it, S.

That bottell sweet—serued at the first To keep the life, but not to slocken thirst.

Hudson's Judith, p. 37.

3. Metaph., to assuage the heat of passion.

The sweit savour of the swairde, and singing of fewlis,

Micht confort any creature of the kyn of Adam, Aud kyndil agane his curage, tho it war cauld sloknit.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 64.
This word is purely Gothic. Su.G. slockn-a extinguere, an inceptive v., says Ihre, from slaeck-a, id. Isl. sloeck-a, slauck-va.

SLONG, SLOUNG, SLUNG, s. A sling; slung, SR

"Efter thaym followit men with licht harnes, and schot incredibill nowmer of stanis & ganyeis with corsbowis and slongis." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 13.

With dartis thay assale the cieté fast,

And thay defend with slungis and stane cast. Doug. Virgil, 318. 15.

Like a slung stane, a metaph. phrase, proverbially used in reference to a person who is treated with disregard, S.B.

Tho' I'm amang you cast like a slung stane, I was like ither fouk at hame ye ken.

Ross's Helenore, p. 84.

Isl. slunga, sloengwa, Su.G. sliunga, id. SLONK, s. A mire, a ditch, a slough.

Baith erbe and froyte, busk and bewis braid Haboundandlye in euery slonk and slaid.

Wallace, iii. 4. MS. Doug. id. V. Sloggy. Sibb. properly refers to Belg. sleyncke lacuna, fovea. To Slonk, Slunk, v. n. "To wade through a mire," S.

But feckfu' folks can front the bauldest wind, And slunk thro' moors, and never fash their mind. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 393.

To SLOOM, v. n. To slumber, S.B.

I seemit to sloom, quhan throw the gloom
I saw the river shake.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 357.

I laid my haffet on Elfer Hill, Saft slooming clos'd my ee.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 225.

Teut. sluym-en, dormitare; leviter dormire. As sluymer-en, the other form of the word, is synon. with luymer-en, it is not improbable that this use of the term is borrowed from luym-en, to walk with the head bowed down; because the head drops when one begins to slumber. A. Bor. "sloum, slaum, a gentle sleep or slumber;" Gl. Grose.

SLOOMY CORN, a phrase used with respect to grain, when it is not well filled, S.

Callander, (MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Strid,) derives it from Su.G. sloo, exilis. Strid, robustus, is opposed to it. Perhaps the term is metaph., q. sleepy; as we speak of deaf corn, a dead pickle, &c. V. Sloom, v.

SLOP, s. A breach, a gap, S. slap. Bot sloppys in the way left he, Sa large, and off sic quantité, That v c. mycht samyn rid In at the sloppys, sid be sid.

Barbour, viii. 179. 182. MS.

The hard burdis he hakkis,
And throw the yet ane large windo makkis:
By the quhilk slop the place within apperis.
Doug. Virgil, 55. 8. V. Slap, s. 1.

To Slop, v. a. 1. To make a gap or breach.

The army of the Troyanis side
Was thynnest skatterit on the wallis wyde,
And bricht arrayit cumpany of the men
War diuidit or sloppit.———

Doug. Virgil, 295. 14.

2. Metaph., to hew down.

The quhilk Turnus, as in his spedy chare The myd routis went sloppand here and there, Beheld his feris debatyng wyth Pallas.

Doug. Virgil, 332. 25.

3. To slop throw, to pierce, to stab.

"Mony of thaym sloppit throw the body fel downe aboue thair slaaris." Bellend. Cron. B. iv. c. 16. Confossi, Boeth. q. having slops made through their bodies. V. SLAP, v. SLOP, s.

Patrik and Beik away with Bruce thai ryd. V thousand held in till a slop away Till Noram House, in all the haist thai may.
Wallace, viii. 383. MS.

In to a slop, is the reading of Edit. 1648, and 1758. The term may signify a compact body. Barbour and Doug. use sop, as denoting a crowd. It may, however, be merely the s. expl. above, used obliquely, as signifying a division; denominated from the gap or breach made by their departure.

To SLORP, v. a. To swallow any thing ungracefully, by making a noise with the mouth or throat, S. Aust. synon. slubber.

Sibb. renders it merely, "to sup greedily," from Teut. slorp-en sorbeo. V. next word.

SLORPING, adj. "Tawdry. Slorping hussie, a girl who is sluggishly dressed;" Gl. Sibb.

Su.G. slurfwig, dirty, one who does his business carelessly; incuriosus, sordidus; slurfw-a, negligenter negotium aliquod perficere.

To SLOT, v. a. To bolt, to fasten by a bolt, S. "Scot. to slot, claudere, pessulum obdere;" Rudd.

1

Belg. sluyt-en, id. Su.G. slut-a claudere; Alem. bislozzen, clausus; Teut. ver-sluys-en obstipare. Hence sluys, E. sluice, properly, that which shuts up a body of water. As Lat. claud-o, anc. clud-o, signifies both to shut and to finish, this analogy is to be observed in the Su.G. v. The transition is indeed very natural. For what is the conclusion of a business, but the act of shutting it up? SLOT, s. 1. A bar, a bolt, S.

Grete lokkis, slottis, massy bandis square, Dartis and scheildis hyngis here and thare. Doug. Virgil, 211. 34.

Teut. slot, Belg. sluyt, sera, obex, pessulus.

2. Metaph. applied to the mind.

"He has means in his hand to open all the slots and bars that Satan draws over the door." Rutherford's Lett. P. iii. ep. 22.

3. The cross-spars which fasten what are called the bulls of a harrow, passing through them, are denominated slots, Ang.

SLOT, s. 1. The slot of a hill, a hollow in a hill, or between two ridges, S.

Isl. slod-r res humilis et depressa. V. Schluch-

2. Slot of the breast, the pit of the stomach; where the breast-bone slopes away on each side, leaving a hollow, resembling that between two ridges, S. SLOŤ, s.

And syne Lawyne, and all his slot, Dispitusly discumfyt he.

Barbour, iii. 456. MS.

This may signify camp; Teut. slot, Germ. schloss, castrum. In the MS., however, the first letter seems rather to be f. In this case it must signify fleet; and Egrymor, the town referred to, must have been a sea-port.

SLOT, s. A sum of money, S.B. To SLOTH, v. a. To neglect. V. SLEUTH, v. To SLOTTER, v. n. To pass the time idly or sluggishly, to slumber, S.

Slotterin, slutterin, acting in a slovenly manner,

Loth.

Thou auld hasard leichoure, fy for schame, That slotteris furth euermare in sluggardry. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96. 27.

Teut. slodder-en flaccescere, slodder homo sordidus; Isl. O.Sw. sladd-r vir habitu et moribus indecorus. E. slættern and slut are from the same fountain. SLOTTRY, adj. Slumbering, drowsy, inactive, Loth.

Thare was also the laithly Indigence,-The slottry Slepe, Dedis cousing of kynd. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 172. 52. SLOUNG, s. A sling. V. SLONG.

To SLOUNGE, v. n. To go about, in an indolent way, from place to place; especially as catering for a dinner, S.

E. lounge seems originally the same; allied to Su.G. lunk-a, tarde incedere, ut solent defatigati.

SLOUNGIN-LIKE, adj. Having a downcast look; or moving like one much fatigued, S. Vol. II.

SLOUPE, s. " A stupid silly fellow," S.A. Gl. Compl. S. vo. Slop. It is there supposed to be derived from Belg. slap laxus, remissus. SLOUSSIS, Barbour, xiii. 20. V. Flouss.

SLOUTH-HUND, s. A blood-hound. V. SLEUTH-HUND.

To SLUBBER, v. a. 1. To swallow any thing hastily, so as to make a noise with the throat; applied to substances that are soft and pulpy, S.; slorp, synon.

2. Metaph., to do any thing carelessly; slubbert, part. pa. "My custome euer was to post ouer my sinnes in the lump, with a generall slubbert confession." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 332. V. Errata, preceding p. 748.

Su.G. slabbr-a avide deglutire; Teut. slabber-en, ligurire jus tepidum; Belg. slobber-en, to sup up.

Slubber, s. The act of swallowing as described

Slubbery, adj. A term applied to that loose or flaccid kind of food, in swallowing which a noise is made by the throat, S.

Teut. slabber-en, to sup warm broth, seems immediately formed from slabb-en, to lick, to sup. But Teut. slobber-en corresponds in signification to the adj.; laxum sive flaccidum esse.

To SLUDDER, (pron. sluther), v. a. To swallow one's food with a noise in the throat, S.; synon. slubber.

SLUDDERY, adj. Soft, flaccid, Fife, pron. sluthery; synon. with SLIDDERY, 2.

Teut. slodder-en flaccescere.

To SLUDDER, v. a. To sludder one's words, to pronounce indistinctly, S.B.; E. slur. V. SLIDDER. It may, however, be a metaph. use of the v. SLUDDER.

SLUGGIED, pret. v. Swallowed greedily, Moray. The cathel cam in in a bicker;

> Wi' cutties they sluggied it roun'. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 206.

Sicamb. slocke, gula, Teut. slock-en, vorare, glutire; Su.G. sluk-a deglutire. V. SLAG.

SLUGHORNE, SLOGGORNE, s. 1. The watchword used by troops in the field, by which friends are distinguished from enemies, S.

The draucht trumpet blawis the brag of were; The slughorne, ensenye, or the wache cry Went for the battall all suld be reddy.

Doug. Virgil, 230. 36.

2. Designation, appellation.

"The pepill dwellyng in the hie land and ilis thairof, at electioun of thair capitane, haldis vp thair handis to be leil and trew to hym. And als sone as the capitane is chosyn, thay past to the nyxt mote. and defendis vnder pane of deid, that nane of thaym name thair capitane with ony vthir sloggorne, bot with the auld name of that tribe." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 20. a. b. Trito vetustoque tribus rectoris nomine deinceps appellitet; Boeth.

"Probably from A.S. slege clades, sleg-an interficere, slethe pugna, q. cornu bellicum;" Rudd,

3 H

Perhaps from Ir. sluagh, an army, and corn, a horn, in composition gorn.

Rudd., however, has observed that this word is "sometimes used figuratively for a peculiar property or quality that seems inherent in those of one family or race." It may be connected with Ir. Gael. sliocht, a tribe, a race; Su.G. slag, slaegt, id. genus, prosapia, Isl. slekte, genus, stirps; whence slaegt-as, Germ. schlacht-en, genus suum referre, prosapiae naturam imitari; slaegtinge cognatus, slaegtskap cognatio; Alem. slahta generatio.

SLUMP, s. A remnant. A silly slump, a petty fragment, S.B.

Sw. slump, that which is left, the remainder, Wideg. SLUMP, s. By slump, altogether, not separately.

"The brae farms, and the pasture land, are let by slump; it is impossible to say what they rent per acre." P. Campsie, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xv. 344.

Su.G. slump, massa informis, totum aliquod, nondum in ordinem redactum. Koepa slumpwis, to buy all together, without selection; as is said, S., coft by slump.

The term is also used as an adj. Slump wark, work taken in the lump, S.

"The slump number he has taken, as the list is ill printed, from the Scots Mist." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 215. Hence, SLUMPERT, s. A large quantity of any thing; properly, what is not measured, S.B.

SLUNG, s. A sling, S.B. V. SLONG.

SLUNKIE, s. An appellation for a tall thin person. V. SLINKIE.

SLUSCH, Slush, s. 1. A pool, plashy ground, S. Rudd. "A dirty plash;" Gl. Sibb.

2. Snow, in a state of liquefaction, S.; synon.

glush.

It sometimes happens that a fall of snow in the night-time will cover the deep water where the feiths are, with a scurf of snow and slush, that prevents the fishers from going to their feiths by water, in order to draw them out." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805. p. 120.

"A rush of water, and a rush of slush in a thaw, are common expressions for a torrent of water, a torrent of half-melted snow." Gl. Compl.

Rudd. derives the term in sense 1. from Belg. sluys, a sluice, Teut. schleuss, cataracta, emissarium; Sibb., in sense 2., with still less probability, from Teut. slijck.

In both, it seems deducible from Su.G. slask, humor quicunque sordidus; slask-a, humorem vel sordidum vel ingratum effundere; Thet slaskar, imbres cadunt, Ihre. V. Slashy. It may, however, be merely a corr. pron. of E. sludge, "mire, dirt mixed with water."

SLUTE, adj. Slovenly; E. sluttish.

Mony slute daw, and slepy duddroun, Him servit ay with sounyie.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29.

Teut. slodde, sordida et inculta mulier.

SLUTTRIE, adj. Slovenly, Loth. V. SLOTTRY.
SMA, adj. Small, S.

Alem. sma, Su.G. smaa, tenuis. Hence smack-a, to lessen, to diminish.

SMACHRY, s. Trash; a hodge-podge, or farrago, of whatever kind, S.B.

"They sent in some smachry or ither to me, an' a pint o' their scuds." Journal from London, p. 9.

As this generally denotes a dish of various materials, it may be from Su.G. smaeck-a, to diminish, from smaa, little, q. to mince, to make an olio. Isl. smaelke, minuta quaequae, ut paleae ramenta.

To SMAD, v. a. To stain, to discolour; smad-dit, blackened.

The bard, smaddit lyke a smaik smokit in a . smiddie,

Ran fast to the dur, and gaif a grit raire.

Houlate, iii. 15. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton inadvertently renders this maddened. But the word is still in common use, especially, S.B.

Belg. smett-en, to stain, to soil, Isl. Su.G. smeta, Germ. schmitz-en, A.S. smit-an, id. Perhaps MoesG. ga-smit-an, to anoint, may be the original word. V. Smot.

SMAD, s. A stain of any kind, S.B.

Belg. smette, A.S. smitta, Dan. smitt, id. Teut. smadde convitium, q. a moral stain. If I mistake not, our word is sometimes used in the same sense.

SMAICHER, s. (gutt.) A fondling term addressed to a child, S.B.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. smekr-a blandiri, which is derived by Ihre from smaa parvus, Teut. smeecker, adulator; or A.S. smicer tenuis. Isl. smock-r pulcher, formosus; hilaris.

To SMAICHER, v. n. To eat in a clandestine manner, something, especially, that is agreeable to the palate, Ang.

Alem. smechare delicatus; or perhaps smak-a, gustare, q. to be still tasting.

SMAIK, s. A silly mean fellow, a minion.

Quoth he, Quhair ar yon hangit smaiks Rycht now wald slane my bruder?

Chr. Kirk, st. 23.

Quod I, Smaik, lat me slepe; Sym skynnar the hing.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. a. 38.

Rudd. thinks that it may be from Teut. schmach contumelia. If so, Isl. smaa, to contemn, may be viewed as the root. Or it may be more immediately allied to Su.G. smaeck-a, to diminish, a derivative from smaa, little. Hence, Magnus Ericson, king of Sweden, was contemptuously denominated Smaek, as being a weak, contemptible prince, who suffered the Danes to deprive him of the province of Scania. Loccenii Hist. Suet. p. 106. Ihre, however, says that he was denominated Smaecker. Su.G. smaa also signifies, vilis; Alem. smah, Germ. schmach, id. SMAIK, adj. Small, puny.

— The smy on me smirks with his smaik smollat. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48. V. the s.

SMAIKRIE, s. Roguery.

Bot how this discharge was gotten, When Holieglass is deid and rotten, His smaikrie sall not be forgett.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 315.

SMAIR-DOKEN, s. The Common dock, S.B. From Teut. smacr, Isl. smyr, unguentum. For in former times, in our country, this species of dock was much used for making a healing ointment. To SMAIRIE, v. a. To besmear, S.B.

Teut. smeer-en, &c. linere, ungere. SMALE FOLK, people of the lower class.

In Ingland syne that made a rade Wyth the smale folk, that that hade.

Wyntown, viii. 30. 118.

Isl. smelinge, a derivative from smaa parvus, is used in a similar manner; è plebe humili, tenuis, pauper.

SMALIE, adj. Little, puny, S.B. Isl. smalig, Germ. smalih, id.

To SMASH, v. a. 1. To break to shivers, S.

This is also used as a cant E. word.

2. To hew down, in battle, S. You'll hear of us far better news,

When we attack like Highland trews, To hash and slash, and smash and bruise.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 71.

And thro' they dash'd, and hew'd and smash'

And thro' they dash'd, and hew'd and smash'd, Till fey men died awa, man.

Burns, iv. 363.

3. To beat severely, S.

Germ. schmeiss-en, to smite, to beat; Die fenster enschmeissen, to throw stones into one's windows; S. to smash them.

SMASH, s. 1. The state of being broken to pieces, S. Dung a-smash, broken in shivers.

"I wou'd na gang into the coach agen, far fear I shou'd hae—some of my banes broken or dung asmash." Journal from London, p. 6.

2. The shreds, fragments, or separate pieces of any thing broken, S.

S. The sound of breaking, a crash, S.

Germ. schmeiss, a stroke. Gael. smuais, in pieces, broken in shivers.

SMATCHET, SMATCHED, s. An appellation given to a child, expressive of contempt and displeasure, S.; perhaps from small and chit.

Ay offered thay that undought fra one to another: Where that smatched had suked, sa sair it was to shed it,

But believe it began to buckle the brother.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 21.

To SMATTER, v. n. 1. To be busily engaged about trivial matters; or, to smatter about, to go about, under a pretence of work, doing very little, S.

2. To deal in small wares, S.

3. To smatter awa', to spend in a trifling way, to expend on a variety of articles of little value, S.

4. To smatter awa', to consume victuals, by eating often, and little at a time, S. Su.G. smaa, Isl. smaa, smatt, small.

*SMATTERS, s. pl. 1. Trifles, things of little value, S.

2. Small sums, S.

SMATTIS, s. pl. "Small beer," Pinkerton; "probably the same with swatts, new ale," Sibb.

The lairds that drank guid wyn, and ail, Ar now faine to drink smattis; Thay top the beir, and cheips the meil, The ladie sawis the aitis.

Maitland Poems, p. 189.
The second is the most probable sense; from Teut.
smets, praedulcis, mulseus; nauseam provocans nimia dulcedine; as Sibb. has observed. We may add Isl. smedia, nauseabilis sapor, G. Andr. The same writer, however, mentions smolltz liquamen, from smellt, liqueat.

SMEDDUM, s. 1. The powder or finest part of ground malt; also called malt smeddum, Ang.

2. Powder, of whatever kind, S.O.

O for some rank, mercurial rozet,
Or fell, red smeddum!
Burns, iii. 229.

Wa wi' your stuff, he has nae smeadum; He publish!—— Morison's Poems, p. 4.

3. Sagacity, quickness of apprehension, S.

4. Metaph. used to denote spirit, mettle, liveliness, S.

To SMEEK, v. a. To smoke, S.

But thof this town be smeekit sair,

— Than ours there's nane mair fat an' fair.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 114.

SMEEK, s. Smoke, S. especially S.B.
I sat and ey'd the spewing reek,
That fill'd, wi' hoast-provoking smeek,
The auld clay biggin.

Burns, iii. 100. oth, S.B. A.S. smeth

SMEETH, adj. Smooth, S.B. A.S. smethe. Smeeth in the mou, a phrase applied to a horse that has lost mark of mouth. Wyntown uses smeth.

SMEETHLY, SMETHELY, adv. Smoothly, S.B. And he, as burdand, sayd smethely, 'Man, will thow have of me justyng?'

Wyntown, viii. 35. 162.

To SMEIK, SMEEK, v. a. To dry by smoke, S.B.

SMEIK, SMEEK, s. Smoke, S.B.

I grein to sie thy silly smiddy smeik.

Montgomerie, Chron. S. P. iii. 500. V. Reist, v. 1.

Perhaps here metaph, used for a visage discoloured by smoke.

SMÉLT, s. A name sometimes given in S. to the fry of salmon. In E. it denotes the Salmo eperlanus, our Spirling, or Sperlin. V. SMOLT.

SMERGH, s. 1. Marrow, pith, S.B.

Vigour of body, in general, S.B.

3. Transferred, in the same sense, to the minds S.B.

Our sells are neiper-like, I warran, For sense and smergh;

In kittle times, when face are yarring, We're no thought ergh.

Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore, st. 8.

Yet, gin I thought that ye were fit, Or that ye had ha'f smergh or wit—that Isl. smior, Germ. schmer, &c. omnis generis pinguedo, as extended to butter, ointments, &c. have been, in the same manner, formed from this root; as marrow would be the first fat substance known. Smerghless, Smeerless, Smearless, adj. 1.

Pithless, unhandy, S.B. Gin he 'bout Nory lesser fyke had made, He had na been sae smearless at the trade.

Ross's Helenore, p. 17.

2. Insipid, languid; respecting manner, S.B. "The uther wis a haave colour'd smeerless tapie, wi' a great hassick o' hair hangin in twa-pennerts [pennyworths] about her haffats." Journal from London, p. 7.

It is transferred to the mind and its actings.

For they had gien him sik a fleg, He look'd as he'd been doited;-Syne wi' my targe I cover'd him, Fan on the yerd he lies,

And sav'd his smeerless saul; I think

'Tis little to my praise.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 8. 9. My smearless sangs hae ne'er had hap Her notice to engage.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 352.

3. Senseless, incapable of reflection, S.B. Bat fat use will they be to him. Wha in hudge-mudge wi' wiles, Without a gully in his hand, The smeerless fae beguiles?

Ibid. p. 11.

SMERVY, adj. Savoury, S.B. Nae huney beik that I did ever pree, Did taste sae sweet and smervy unto me. Ross's Helenore, p. 108.

Perhaps from Isl. smior. V. Smergh. SMEWY, adj. Savoury, S.B. Gl. Shirr.

This seems allied, as Sibb. observes, to Teut. smaeckelick, grati saporis. SMY, s. "Pitiful fellow," Pinkerton.

— The smy on me smirks with his smaik smollat. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48. - Thou subteil smy-

Quhat wenis thow to degraid my hie estait,

Me to decline as judge, curst creature?

Palice of Honour, i. 64. The lown may lick his vomit, and deny His shameless sawsse, like Satan slavish smy; Whose manners with his mismade members here

Doth correspond, as plainly doth appeir. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 23.

If the sense given by Mr. Pinkerton be just, it is synon. with Smaik, q. v. It may, however, signify flatterer, parasite, especially as conjoined with subteil; from Su.G. smyg-a, reptando se insinuare, Germ. schmieg-en, to creep; also, to humble one's self, to present an humble petition. Dan. smy-er, to fawn, to flatter; Isl. smiug-a, to insinuate gradually by artful means. Ihre views smaa, parvus, as the origin; sese exiguum veluti facere.

SMIDDY, s. A smith's work shop, S. Rudd. Sw. smedia, id. A.S. smiththe, fabrile; from Su.G. smid-a, A.S. smith-ian, cudere, to strike. Junius (Gl. Goth.) derives the v. from smith, planus; because one part of a smith's work is, by beating or otherwise, to make things smooth.

To SMIKKER, v. n. "To smile in a seducing manner," Sibb. Gl.

Teut. smeeck-en, blandiri; whence smeecker a. dulator, blandiloquens. Sw. smikr-a blandiri, Seren. A.S. smerc-ian may be different in form, merely from transposition. Although this word is not mentioned by Johns., Bailey and Seren. give it as E. SMIRIKIN, SMEERIKIN, s. A hearty kiss, S. smurachin, Fife. Perhaps from Su.G. smirk-a,

To SMIRKLE, SMIRTLE, SMURTLE, v. n. To laugh in a suppressed way, S. "As this was said, Lethingtoun smirklit, and spack secretlie to the Quene in hir ear, quhat it was the Tabill hard not." Knox's Hist. p. 342.

Experience then smyrkling smyld, We are na bairns to be begyld, Quod he, and schuke his heid.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 77.

Away they went, then Wallace did revive, And leugh, and smirtl'd at them in his sleeve. Hamilton's Wallace, p. 12.

And now I think I may be cocky, Since fortune has smurtl'd on me.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 150.

Smirkle is most commonly used; smirtle is mere.

This is evidently a deriv. from A.S. smerc-ian, subridere; of which it retains the sense, more than the E. v. smerk, at least as rendered by Johns. " to smile wantonly."

SMIT, s. A clashing noise, from E. smite. -She heard a smit o' bridle reins, She wish'd might be for good.

Lord William, Minstrelsy Border, iii. 265. To SMIT, SMYT, v. a. 1. To stain, to pollute, to contaminate. -Bot Memprys

Wyntown, iii. 3. 124.

i. e. stained with many a vice.

Of Edw. I., in reference to his false conduct in pretending to act as arbiter in choosing a king for Scotland, it is said;

Thare he heycht thame, wyth lawte Thare cas to ger decleryt be. Hys lytil lawtè nevyrtheles He smyttyd thare in his process.

Ibid. viii. 5. 92.

2. To infect, as with a contagious disorder, S. "That the Bischopis, Officiallis, and Denis inquyre diligentlie in thair visitatioun of ilk paroche kirk, gif ony be smittit with lipper." Acts James I. 1527. c. 118. Ed. 1566.

A.S. smit-an, Su.G. smitt-a, Belg. smett-en, polluere, inquinare. The original idea is to besmear, MoesG. bismait inunxit. Su.G. smitt-a also signifies, to infect. Hence smittosam, contagious, A.S. smitting, id.

SMITTLE, adj. Infectious, contagious, S.

The covetous infatuation
Was smittle out o'er all the nation.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 331.

Bel. smettelick, id. A. Bor. smittleish.

SMIT, SMYT, SMYTE, s. 1. A stain literally used.
Thair men also mon be bot smyt or smoit.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 142.
Smaill sweit smaragde, smelling but smit of smot.

2. A stain, in a moral sense.

Bot quhat at sal be put in write Of falsheid sall bere nakyn smyte.

Wyntown, ix. 20. 54.

A.S. smitta, Belg. smette, macula. V. Smot. SMYTRIE, s. A numerous collection of small individuals, Ayrs.

Himself, a wife, he thus sustains, A smytrie o' wee duddie weans, An' nought but his han' darg, to keep Them right and tight in thak an' rape.

Burns, iii. 4.

Nearly allied to smatters, and from the same source. SMLEFANGER, s.

Avis anate domestica minor, piscibus victitans. Smlefanger dicta est, dorso nigricante. Sibb. Scot.

This term is most probably printed erroneously. It has been conjectured, that the first syllable should be read Smee, which nearly resembles Smew, the name of the Mergus albellus, Linn., to which the description might correspond pretty well. But the name seems characteristic; for the last part of it is evidently fanger, i. e. catcher, like Holland's description of the Scarth.

-The Scarth a fysh-fangar,

And that a perfyte. Houlate, i. 14. SMOKE, s. A beautiful figure used, in some Northern counties, to denote an inhabited house, S.

"In 1680,—so many families perished for want, that, for 6 miles in a well inhabited extent, within the year there was not a smoke remaining." P. Duthil, Morays. Invern. Statist. Acc. iv. 316.

The idiom, if I mistake not, is Gael.

But it is also used in Su.G. Rock not only denotes smoke, but a dwelling. Notat domicilium, focum; unde betala foer hwarie rock, pro quavis domo vel familia vectigal pendere; Ihre.

SMOLT, SMOUT, adj. Fair, clear, mild, applied to the weather.

—Mirrie madinis, think not lang; The wedder is fair and smolt.

A.S. smolt serenus, placidus; smolt weder. Teut. smoel weder, aura tepida. Belg. smout, blandus. A similar phraseology is used in Su.G. waedret smylter sig; from smylta serenari.

SMOLT, SMELT, SMOLTE, s. 1. The term used to denote the fry of salmon, S. smout.

"His Grace—ratifies and apprieves the former actes maid for punishing of slayers of read fish, smoltes, and frie of all fishes in forbidden time." Acts James VI. 1597. c. 261.

"They [salmon fry] are called samlets, and sometimes smelts, but are generally known among our country people by the name of salmon smouts." Dr. Walker, Prize Essays Highland Society for S. ii. 351.

Is not this learned naturalist mistaken in applying to them the name samlet, which properly denotes a distinct species? V. Par.

Perhaps from Su.G. smol-a to cramble, because of the smallness of their size.

2. Metaph. used to denote a child, S.

SMOOTRIKIN, adj. Tiny and active; a fondling epithet.

My little wee smootrikin mous. Old Song. To SMORE, SMURE, SMOIR, v. a. 1. To smother, to suffocate with smoke, S. Smoar, Westmorel.; smoore, Lancash.

"He was sae browden'd upon't [his pipe], that he was like to smore us a' in the coach wi' the very ewder o't." Journal from London, p. 21.

2. To suffocate, to choke, to suppress.

"The carefulnes of this world, and the desaitfulnes of riches, smoris the word that it beris na frute." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 72. b. By this term he renders suffocat in the Vulgate.

3. To extinguish. Smure the candle, put it out,

Aberd.

4. To conceal, to hide, S.

——I sal help to smore your falt, leif brother.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 272. 37.

Therefoir gif thou has ene, behald How they wald smoir thy fame.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 42.
A.S. smor-an, Teut. smoor-en, suffocare, extinguere.

To SMORE, SMURE, v. n. To suffocate. I was like to smore: I was in danger of being suffocated, S.

He suld have place amangis the laif, That his hie honour suld not smure, Considering what he did indure.

Lyndsay's Squyer Meldrum, 1594. A. il. b.

Smor'd thow. V. Thow.

SMOT, SMOTE, SMOIT, s. 1. A stain, in a general sense, synon. smad, S.B.

Thair men also mon be bot smyt or smoit.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 142.

"Smut, corruption occasioned by mildew;"
Lord Hailes. But this sense seems too much limited, as the term is here used. The phrase appears to have been proverbial, denoting pollution of any kind.

2. Apparently, the mouldiness which gathers on what is kept in a damp place. V. SMIT, s.

3. The distinguishing mark put on sheep, by means of ruddle or otherwise, S.A.

4. Moral pollution; a stain affecting the character.

Thay have runge in their parts evir trew and obedient bothe to God and the Prince, without ony smote in thair dayis in ony maner of sort." Knox's Hist, p. 102.

SMOTTRIT, part. pa. Besmeared.

His smottrit habit ouer his schulderis lidder, Hang peuagely knyt with ane knot togidder. Doug. Virgil, 173. 47.

Sordidus, Virg. V. Besmottrit. SMOUPSIE, s. A stripling, a youth, one not fully grown, S.B.

To SMOUTTER, v. n. To eat often, although little at a time, S.B.

Su.G. smutt-a pitissare, to taste by little and little. Ihre derives the v. from smaa, parvus; "for what," says he, " is it to sip, but by small though frequent tastings to prolong the pleasures of the appetite?"

To SMUE, or SMUDGE, v. n. To laugh in one's sleeve, to laugh in a clandestine way, Loth.

Germ. schmuts-en subridere, blande et placide ridere. Wachter seeks a Gr. origin; μειδιαζω, id. But it is undoubtedly allied to Su.G. smystr-a renidere, subridere. The radical term seems to be mys-a, id. SMUGLY, adj. " Amorous, sly, being at the same time well dressed;" Sibb. Gl.

He refers to Teut. smeeckelick blandus. From the latter idea, however, it might seem allied to Su.G. smyck-a, ornare, Belg. smuyck-en, Germ. schmuck-en; Su.G. smuch, Alem. smug, Isl. smock-r, pulcher, elegans, E. smug.

SMULACHIN, adj. Puny, looking poorly, S.B. Perhaps from Su.G. smola a crumb, the smallest part of any thing, Dan. smule, Isl. mole, id. from mol-e contundere, confringere; whence our mulin, a crumb. Or it may be allied to Belg. smeul-en to smoke hiddenly; also, to soil, to besmut, Sewel; q. having a smoked or smutted appearance. Gael. smeilag, however, is expl. "a pale puny female." SMURACHIN, s. A stolen kiss, Fife. V. SmI-RIKIN.

To SMURE, v. a. To smother. V. SMORE. SMURR, s. A drizzling rain, Ayrs.

Teut. smoor, fumus, vapor; smoor-en vaporare. To SMURTLE, v. n. To smerk. V. SMIRTLE. SMURLIN, s. A species of shell-fish, Shetland.

"The smurlin or smuthlin is the Mya truncata, remarkable for a shrivelled leathery process at one end." Neill's Tour. p. 93.

SMUSH, s. A disagreeable sulphurous smell, occasioned by smoke and dust, Fife. Smudge, a suffocating smell, A. Bor. Gl. Grose.

SNAB, s. The projecting part of a rock or hill, a rough point; a term used both in the North and South of S.

"There is a tradition universally prevalent through this part of the country that formerly the river Tay occupied a very different bed from what it does at present; -that at the Snabs of Drimmic, it sent off a portion of its waters, which entered this parish between the hills of Forgan and Dron." P. Longforgan, Perths. Statist. Acc. xix. 554.

Perhaps from Belg. snabbe, snebbe, a beak or snout, Isl. snoppa, id.; just as Su.G. nabb, a promontory, is from naebb a beak.

SNAB, s. A cant term for a shoemaker's or cobler's boy, S.A. snob, S.B. allied perhaps to Teut. snipp-en, to cut.

SNACK, adj. 1. Clever, alert, quick in action. Be snack, be quick, do not lose time, S. In grit affairs ye had not bein sae snack,

About the ruleing of the common-weil.

Semple, Evergreen, i. 77.

44 Ye're very snack, i. e. very nimble, ready, quick, Scot." Rudd. vo. Snak.

By this time Lindy is right well shot out ;— Nae bursen bailch, nae wandought or misgrown, And snack, and plump, and like an apple round. Ross's Helenore, p. 16.

Snack is evidently opposed to bursen bailch, q. one who is so lusty as to be unfit for exertion.

This is the primary sense; not, however, as Rudd. thinks, from Snak s. q. v., or as Sibb. conjectures, from snauw scomma, dictum amarum, q. snauwick. The term is beyond a doubt radically the same with Isl. snogg celer, citus; whence snogge cito. This seems formed from snu-a, verti, which Ihre views as including the idea of celerity, and as allied to A.S. snude celeriter, snell, citus; Mod. Sax. sneidig, celer, Isl. snudur, snottr, id. Sw. sno, cito auferre, snugg-a clanculum subducere, snafw-a praepropere eundo titubare, &c. V. Ihre, vo. Snabb.

2. Acute, quick of apprehension, S. The knack I learned frae an auld aunty, The snackest of a' my kin.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 288. 3. Applied to the product of genius; but improperly.

These keep my fancy on the wing, Something that's blyth and snack to sing, And smooth the runkled brow.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 452.

SNACKLY, adv. 1. Cleverly, adroitly, S. 2. With intelligence, S.

How snackly cou'd he gi'e a fool reproof, E'en wi' a canty tale he'd tell aff loof!

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 14. SNACKIE, adj. "Full of tricks and quirks." This seems to be nearly peculiar to Moray. Tam Tod was an ald-farran birkie, Weel versed i' the gawds o' the sex;

Slee, snackie, and wilie, and quirkie, And famous for pliskies and tricks. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 297.

This seems merely a dimin. from SNACK.

SNACK, s. A morsel swallowed hastily, a slight repast, S. Provinc. E.

Ramsay speaks of them,

- that drink and dinna pay, But tak' a snack and run away.

Poems, i. 302. V. SNAK. To SNACK, v. n. "To snap or bite suddenly, as a dog," Gl. Sibb. V. SNAK.
To SNAG, v. n. To snarl, to banter, Fife.
Teut. snack-en, latrare, gannire, garrire. Isl.

snecke ringere, to grin, to shew the teeth, as a dog doth. Hence.

SNAGGY, adj. Sarcastical, Fife. used as an adv. Quo' Maggy fell snaggy

"Ye lie, you loun, an' joke.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 130.

Snaggy, testy, peevish, A. Bor. Gl. Grose. Snaggin, s. "Biting, raillery."

Sic hablin' an' gablin',

Ye never heard nor saw; Sic snaggin an' braggin',

An' randy-beggar-jaw.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 121. Sw. snackare, Germ. schnak, gerro, a droll, a buffoon; schnak-en jocularia loqui.

To SNAGGER, v. n. To snarl, or grin like a dog. "Scot. etiam dicimus to snagger, hirrire;" Rudd.

SNAK, s. The gnashing of a dog's teeth together, when he aims at his prey, S.

Bot than the swypper tuskand hound assayis And neris fast, ay reddy hym to hynt,-Wyth hys wyde chaftis at hym makis ane snak.

Doug. Virgil, 439. 33.

"Belg. snack a gasp; or rather, q. d. a snatch, or aim to snatch;" Rudd. But it is evidently allied to Teut. snack-en, captare, captitare, hianti ore captare, Kilian. This perhaps may be traced to Isl. snogg celer, citus.

To SNAP up, v. a. 1. To eat hastily, to de-

2. To lay hold of suddenly, S.

"The people carried all out of his way; stragglers were snapped up; the hills made many both horse and men sicken and die." Baillie's Lett. ii. 382.

Dr. Johns. says that snap is the same with knap. But the former has certainly a different origin; Belg. snapp-en, to catch hastily, to sieze with violence; Su.G. snapp-a, id. Belg. op snappen, to devour. To SNAP, v. n. To make a hasty attempt to speak.

If some auld swinger snap to speak Of pink-ey'd queans, he gives a squeek.

A. Nicol's Poems, p. 22.

This may be the preceding v. used metaph. Belg. snapp-en, however, signifies, to tattle impudently, Sewel; praerapide multumque loqui, intercipere verba alterius, Kilian.

SNAPSY, adj. Tart, S.B. snappish, E.

The snapsy karles grain in ease;

They sleep and eat when e'er they please. A. Nicol's Poems, p. 22.

SNAPPERT, adj. Tart, hasty. A snappert answer, a tart reply, S.B.

Germ. schnapp-en to snatch, to snap; Isl. snaefur tart, austere. Snapur also denotes a person who is foolish and impudent; who makes no account of what he says. Teut. snapper, garrulus, loquax. SNAP. In a snap, in a moment, immediately, S.B.

And now the fead is soften'd, and alang They march, and mix themsells among the thrang. The face of things is alter'd in a snap.

Ross's Helenore, p. 123. V. the v.

Belg. met een snap, in a moment; in a crack, synon.

ŠNAP DYKE, a species of inclosure, S.O.

"A kind of stone fence, called Snap-dykes, peculiar to Carrick and the north parts of Galloway, is admirably fitted for sheep parks; being from 4 to 6 feet in height, strong and firmly locked together at the top." P. Kirkmichael, Ayrs. Stat. Acc. vi. 104.

Teut. snap interceptio, snapp-en intercipere; q.

a fence that checks the sheep.

SNAPLY, adv. Hastily, quickly, S.B.

Whan he's ca'd hame, they shot him in before, In a black hole, and snaply lock'd the door. Ross's Helenore, p. 47.

-Ilka morning by the screak o' day, They're set to wark, and snaply ca'd away.

Teut. snap raptus. V. SNAP up.

To SNAPPER, v. n. 1. To stumble, S. "A horse with four feet may snapper by a time;"

S. Prov. Kelly, p. 26.

2. To err in conduct, to get into a scrape, S. Neidful it is thairfoir to gang warlie, That rakleslie thow snapper nocht, nor slyd.— He reulis weil that weil in court can guide.

Maitland Poems, p. 277. Su.G. snafw-a, titubare: Det ar en god hast som aldrig snafwar; It is a good horse that never stumbles, Seren. Belg. sneu-en, id. Ihre thinks that the Su.G. word is derived from snabb celer, because it is generally from going too quickly that one stumbles. This does not hold, as to a horse at least. For it is generally from going too slowly, and of consequence carelessly, that he stumbles. SNAPPER, s. 1. A stumble, S.

2. A failure as to moral conduct, S.

"Quhat is thy parte in thir slippes and snappers?—Sleepe not there quhere thou hes fallen." Bruce's Eleven Serm. O. 8. a.

"I am not like these sinners which but trip and stumble, and rise again after a snapper, my fall is with my full weight." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p.

SNAP-WORK, SNAPWARK, s. A firelock. But those who were their chief commanders--Were right well mounted of their gear;— With durk, and snap-work, and snuff-mill, A bagg which they with onions fill. Cleland's Poems, p. 12.

Some were chasing hens and cocks, Some were loosing horse from yocks, Some with snapwarks, some with bowes, Were charging reers of toops and ewes.

Ibid. p. 343.

O.E. "snap-haunce, a firelock, a gun that strikes fire without a match;" Phillips. This is from Belg. snaphaan, id. q. a cock that snaps.

SNARRE, adj. 1. Tart, severe. A snarre mistress, a mistress who is severe to her servants,

2. Rigid, firm to the grasp; as, snarre corn, grain that feels firm and hard, when pressed in the hand, S.B.

This term, in the first sense, seems to have a very extensive affinity. Isl. snar celox, acer; whence snar-a, celeriter auferre; snerra, snaera, fight, snaerumz, I fight, Snerrir or Snorri, a man's name, denoting one addicted to fighting, Gunnlaug. S. Snarrlind-r, sharp-witted; Su.G. snar, quick; Belg. snar, snappish, snarling; Teut. snarr-en jurgare, fremere.

To SNASH, v. n. To talk saucily, to bandy insolent language, S.

This may be allied to Su.G. snack-a, nugari, to talk in a trifling manner, q. snacks-a; snack, nugae, frivolous discourse; especially as Belg. snaaksch (from snaak, a droll) signifies "burlesque, cold," Sewel. But it more nearly resembles snaes-a, increpare, verbis asperioribus corripere. Ihre derives this v. from naesa, the nib, the nose; "either because this, in birds, is the instrument of fighting, or because it is chiefly opposed to the fist of a person who is enraged, so that a similar mode of expression is used concerning one who loads another with curses, hugga en oefwer naesan," i. e. literally, to strike one over the nose. Isl. snaegg-ia is synon., duris et asperis verbis aliquem excipere. Verel. further expl. it by these Sw. phrases; snaesa, bijta en oefwer naesan. Isl. snaegd, importunior et durior increpatio, Sw. snaesande, S. snashin. We may add Isl. snefs-a increpo; G. Andr. V. Snisty. Snash, s. "Abuse, Billingsgate," Gl. Burns; S. pert or snarling language.

I've notic'd, on our Laird's court-day, An' mony a time my heart's been wae, Poor tenant bodies, scant o' cash, How they maun thole a factor's snash. He'll stamp an' threaten, curse an' swear, He'll apprehend them, poind their gear. Burns, iii. 5.

SNASH, adj. Pert, saucy, S.

The tane crys, "Gie me't, mind I brought the cash;"

The tither says, "I'll hae't," and that right Morison's Poems, p. 189. snash.

It is here used as an adv.

SNATCH, s. A hasty repast, S.

"Our kind host and hostess would not let us go without taking a snatch, as they called it; which was in truth a very good dinner." Boswell's Journ. p. 326. V. SNACK, s.

SNAW, s. Snow, S. snauw, S.B. The red, that's on my true love's cheik, Is like blood drops on the snaw.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 7. V. SNYP. A.S. snaw, MoesG. snaiws, Belg. sneeuw. Hence, SNAW BRU, SNAW-BROO, s. Snow-water, S. "Fishermen observe, and I think justly, that they [salmon] do not like to leave the estuaries or mouths of rivers, until the melted snow (snaw bru) is out of the water." Prize Essays, Highland Society of S. ii. 400.

In mony a torrent down the snaw-broo rowes. Burns, iii. 55.

SNAWIE, adj. Snowy, S.

-Thy snawie bosom sun-ward spread, Thou lifts thy unassuming head.

Burns, iii. 202.

To SNECK, Sneg, v. a. 1. To cut with a sudden stroke of a sharp instrument, S.

-Some aft, their leeful lane, Bring to the warld the luckless wean, And sneg its infant thrapple.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 360.

2. Metaph. to sneg off at the web's end, to cut off one's hopes, S.; in allusion perhaps to the cutting of a web out of the loom.

Kind Jove has play'd a parent's part, Wha did this prize to Pallas send, While we're sneg'd off at the web's end.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 465.

Teut. snoeck-en, Germ. schneck-en, scindere. Wachter mentions as synon. A.S. threo-snaecce, trisulcus; Isl. snaugg klaede, vestes laceratae. Hence perhaps the E. phrase, to go snacks, to have a share or portion, from the idea of the article being previously divided by cutting.

Su.G. snygg, Isl. snogg-r brevis, curtus, would seem to have had a similar origin. Verel. expl. the latter, pilis brevibus et curtis, q. having the hair cut or cropped.

3. To sneck with lime, to make indentations in a wall, filling the blanks with lime; or, in building, to insert a small quantity between the stones in the outer side, Aberd. synon. to teeth with lime, S. V. STOB-THACKIT.

SNECK, SNEG, s. A small incision or notch, a cut suddenly given, S.

Gin we the gully guide na now with can, 'Tmay chance to gee's a sneck into the hand. Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

SNECK, SNICK, s. 1. The latch of a door, S. Provinc. E. denominated perhaps from the notch by which it is fastened.

The door's wide open, nae sneck ye hae to draw. Ross's Helenore, p. 77.

-Click! the string the snick did draw! And jee! the door gaed to the wa!

Burns, iii. 101.

Swith, sneck and bar and bowt she drew. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 234.

I know not the origin, if it be not Teut. snack-en captare, captitare, q. what catches; as E. latch, Isl. loka, from lyck-ia to shut; Belg. klink, id. from the noise it makes, expressed, in the extract from Burns, by the cognate term click.

2. Also used for a small bolt.

To Sneck the door, to fix it by a latch, S. A. Bor. " To snick the door; to latch, or shut, the door;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 19.

Sae out she slips, and snecks the door behin'. Ross's Helenore, p. 42.

SNECK-DRAWER, SNICK-DRAWER, s. An auld sneck-drawer, one who, from long experience, has acquired a great degree of facility in accomplishing any artful purpose, S.

And mony a lie was there,-

Whan the tittlin ald snick-drawers fell to, And they wi' the creature were flush.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 295. "A sly, cunning person, that can remove locks and bolts, and raise latches, without being heard;" Gl. ibid.

The allusion is evidently to the practice of one who makes way for himself into any place that is shut up and secured, by forcing the bolt.

It has been observed, that S. pawky corresponds to Lat. astutus, q. arte tutus, Fest., and that the stronger term callidus may be fitly rendered, an auld sneckdrawer.

SNECK-DRAWIN, adj. Crafty, trick-contriving, S. Then you, ye auld snick-drawing dog!

Ye came to Paradise incog.

Burns, iii. 74. To SNED, v. a. 1. To cut, to prune; applied especially to trees, shrubs, &c. S. snath, S. Bor. id. Rudd. vo. Sneith.

I hae a wife and twa wee laddies,-But I'll sned besoms-thraw saugh woodies, Before they want.

Burns, ii. 271.

2. To lop off, in a general sense, S. Clap in his walie nieve a blade, He'll mak it whistle, An' legs, an' arms, an' heads will sned, Like taps o' thrissle.

Burns, iii. 220.

3. To remove excrescences; used in a moral

"It is good that God snedde the vnfruitfull and rotten branches of our life." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 218. "We wrote a free admonition to the Parliament, of their jealousies and divisions; which, although it took not away the root, yet did it sned many of the branches of the evils complained of." Baillie's Lett. ii. 94.

4. To emasculate, S. Teut. snijd-en, castrare, evirare.

Sibb. is mistaken in viewing this word as originally signifying to hew, to polish, from Teut. snyd-en sculpere, caelare. The primary sense of this very v., as given by Kilian, is, to prune; putare, secare. This corresponds to the sense of Germ. schneid-en, A.S. Franc. Alem. snid-an, Belg. snyd-en. Gl. Keron. abasnid-an, amputare. Hence Snod, q. v. SNEDDINS, s. pl. The prunings, or twigs, lopped off from trees, S.

Germ. abgeschittnene, id. Teut. snede, Belg. sneed, a cut, a slice.

SNEER, s. A snort, S. V. NICHER, s. SNEESHIN, SNEEZING, s. The vulgar name for snuff, S. -" Whence the S. sneezing or snuff, because it makes one to sneeze;" Rudd. vo. Neis.

Vol. II.

-A mill of good sneezing to pric. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 212.

It was early called sncesing pouder.

"The wyne pynt and Tobacca pype, with sneesing pouder pronoking sneuell, were his heartes delight. His life hath beene a stumbling blocke vato manie." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1195.

The Sw. name for snuff has a similar origin; snus, from sneys-a to sneeze. Hence snusdosa, a snuff-box. Sneeshin-mill, Snishin-box, s. A snuff-box, S. Shirr. Gl.

And there his sneezing milne and box lyes. Colvil's Mock Poem, ii. 9.

The luutin pipe, an' sneeshin mill. Are handed round wi' right guid will.

Burns, iii. 7.

His fishing-wand, his snishin-box, A fowling-piece to shoot muir-cocks,-This was his game.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 20.

Called a mill; because, being anciently of a cylindrical form, it was not only used for holding the snuff, but the tobacco, after being dried at the fire, was bruised or ground in it. V. preceding word.

To SNEG, v. a. To cut. V. SNECK. To SNEIR, v. n.

> This yeir bayth blythnes and abundance bringis, Naveis of schippis outthrocht to sneir With riches raymentis, and all royall thingis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 200. st. 24. "Probably an error in MS. for steir, steer," Note, ibid. But it may very naturally signify, to move swiftly; Isl. snar-a celeriter auferre, snar celer, citus. V. Snack, adj. SNEIRLY, adv. In derision.

Seneirly, not sneirly, To you I make it plain.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 31. i. e. I tell you this seriously, not in derision or in a sneer.

SNEIST, s. A gibe, a taunt, Loth. synon. snipe. V. Snisty.

SNEITH, adj.

This prince himself, fra that he did behald The snaw quhite visage of this Pallas bald,-And eik the gapand dedely wound has sene, Maid by the speris hede Rutuliane, Amyd his sneith, and fare slekit breist bane, With teris bristand from hys ene thus plenit.

Doug. Virgil, 360. 55. Rudd. is uncertain whether this signifies handsome, straight, or white as snow, Belg. sneeachtigh niveus; Sibb. prefers the latter sense. The term seems rather to signify bare, naked, Isl. snaud-r, Su.G. snoed, nudus. Or, shall we suppose, that it has been originally written smeith, i. e. smooth, as more immediately allied to the other epithet, slekit? SNELL, adj. I. Keen, sharp, severe; as, a snell straik, S. It is used in this sense adverbially by Blind Harry.

This man went doun, and sodanlye he saw, As to hys sycht, dede had him swappyt snell; Syn said to thaim, He has payit at he aw.

Wallace, ii. 249. MS.

2. Sharp, piercing; applied to the temperature of the air, S.

The schote I closit, and drew inwart in hy, Cheuerand for cald, the sessoun was sa snell, Schupe with hait flambis to steme the fresing fell. Doug. Virgil. Prol. 202. 34.

Thus we still say, A snell day, a snell blast, a snell wind, S.

3. Severe, sarcastic; transferred to language. A snell body, one who is tart in conversation: A snell answer, &c.

Sir David's satyres help'd our nation To carry on the Reformation; And gave the scarlet whore a box Mair snell than all the pelts of Knox.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 442.

Wha coming gatewards to me do I see, But this snell lass, that came the day with me? Ross's Helenore, p. 88.

4. Firm, determined, S.

-That in ilk action, wise and snell, You may shaw manly fire.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 49.

5. Acute; used in relation to mind, S. Europe had nane mair snack or snell

At verse or prose.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 331. -Fu' o' good nature, sharp and snell witha'.

Ross's Helenore, p. 16.

In O.E. it signifies, keen, sharp.

He hasted him to the Swin with sergantes snell, To mete with the Normandes that fals war and Minot's Poems, p. 19.

Chaucer uses it as an adv. in its original sense;

-The burgeyse sat hym somwhat nere, And preyd hym, of his gentilnes, his name for

His contrey, and his lynnage; and he answer'd snell;

Berinus I am ynamid.-

And all was doon to bring him yn, as ye shul her snel. History of Beryn, Urry, p. 608. A.S. Alem. snel, Su.G. Teut. snell, Isl. sniallur, Germ. schnell, celer, acer, alacer, expeditus; Ital. snell-o, Fr. isnel, id. The Isl. word is also expl. animis acer; and Su.G. snell is rendered ingeniosus; Ihre, vo. Snille.

Snellich, quickly, occurs in a satire written soon after the Conquest, ap. Hickes. V. Warton's Hist. E. Poet. i. 11, He calls it a Gallo-Frankish word.

The primary sense is celer; and in this sense it occurs in Launfal.

And whan the day was ycome, That the justes were yn ynome,

They ryde out also snell.

Ritson's E.M.R. i. 188.

Ihre derives it from Isl. snu-a, to make haste. V. SNACK, adj.

Snelly, adv. 1. Sharply, severely, S. How was the billy pleas'd?

Nae well, I wad, to be sae snelly us'd. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 35.

2. Keenly; applied to the weather, S.

Not Boreas, that sae snelly blows, Dare here pap in his angry nose.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 93. To SNERE, SNEER, v. a. To snore, to breathe forth, Rudd.

Ane rial chare richely arrayit he sent, With twa sterne stedis therin yokit yfere, Cummyn of the kynd of heuinlye hors were, At there neis thyrles the fyre fast snering out. Doug. Virgil, 215. 32.

This may perhaps be allied to Isl. snar-a mittere, G. Andr. Verel., however, mentions snerri, sternutatio; either q. sending or sneezing forth fire.

SNEER, s. The act of snorting, S. V. NICHER. SNET, Barbour, xiii. 32. Leg. Suet, q. v. To SNIB a door, to fasten it with a small bolt, S. synon. Slot.

Perhaps an oblique use of E. and S. snib, q. to put a check on it, to prevent it from being opened.

To SNIB a candle, to snuff it, Loth.

Either as allied to E. snib, Su.G. snubb-a, from naebb, nasus, rostrum; q. take the nib from it; or to snopp-a, emungere, de candela; which Ihre derives from Belg. schneppe, the nostrils, as containing an allusion to the wiping of the nose.

To SNIFFLE, v. n. To trifle, to be slow in motion or action, S. Snifflin, trifling, S.; snafflin, sauntering, Cumb.

Belg. snefel-en, Dan. snubb-er, Su.G. snafw-a, to hesitate.

SNIFTER, s. 1. A severe blast, as including the idea of its being in one's face, S.

-Wi' weet and wind sae tyte into my teeth-I gat na sic a teazle this seven year, And ye maun gie your answer just perqueer; I maun na ilka day be coming here To get sic snifters: courting's nae a jest, Another day like this'll be my priest.

Ross's Helenore, p. 38. V. TAISSLE.

Isl. snaefur austerus. This word is used in the same sense with ours. De ventis etiam dicunt snaefurt vedur, impetuosus ventus, Ol. Lex. Run.

2. Any sudden reverse of fortune; as, a defeat in battle, or pursuit in consequence of it, S.

3. A cutting repartee, S.B. V. SNISTY.
To SNIFTER, v. n. To draw up the breath frequently and audibly by the nose; to sniff, S.

Gin I can snifter thro' mundungus, Wi' boots and belt on, I hope to see you at St. Mungo's, Atween and Beltan.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 342.

Su.G. snyfst-a, id. anhelitum per nares crebro reducere.

SNIFTERS, s. pl. A stoppage of the nostrils from cold, which occasions frequent sniffing, S. To SNYP, v. n. To nip.

Dym skyis oft furth warpit fereful lenin, Flaggis of fyre, and mony felloun flaw, Scharp soppis of sleit, and of the snyppand Doug. Virgil, 200. 55.

Belg. snipp-en van koude, to nip with cold. Teut. snepp-en, urere frigore, sneppen de wind, aura gelidus. SNIPE, s. A rub, a sarcasm, Loth.

Isl. sneipa, contumelia, convitium; sneip-a, contumelia afficere, Su.G. snyfb-a, verbis increpare. SNIPPY, adj. Tart in language or mode of speaking, S.

Isl. snaef-ur acer, austerus.

SNIPPY, s. One who, in cutting with the scissars, gives too short measure, Ang.

Teut. snipp-en, secare.

SNIPPIT, adj. A snippit horse, one that has a white face, S.B. synon. bawsint; perhaps a deriv. from Alem. snio snow.

SNIPPIT, adj. A snippit niz, a snub nose, Aug. Isl. snoppa, rostrum; Su.G. snibb, quicquid in acumen desinit; or allied to E. snub, a jag, a snag.

SNISTER, s. A severe blast in the face, Ang. synon. snifter. V. Snisty.

SNISTY, adj. Saucy in language or demeanour.

A snisty answer, an uncivil reply, given with an air of haughtiness or scorn, S.B.

From Su.G. snaes-a, Isl. snefs-a, to chide with severity; unless it be rather allied to Su.G. snyfst-a, to draw the breath frequently through the nose, to sniff; which is often an expression of contempt.

It is observable, indeed, that many of the terms denoting displeasure, are borrowed from the nose. E. and S. snib, snub, Su.G. snubb-a, from nabb, S. neb, the nose; Isl. snaef-ur austere, from nef nasus; Su.G. snaes-a, to chide, from nasa; Germ. anschnautz-en, to snub, to grumble, from schnautze, the beak; S. snifter, a cutting repartee. This analogy may be remarked in the same term, as denoting a severe blast, especially in relation to one whose face is exposed to it. This also may be from Isl. nef nasus.

Some of the words, which denote a blast, or gale in the face, seem to have the same origin. Thus snifter and snister may be traced to nef and nasa, the nose; as being much exposed to the cold, and often severely affected by it.

Ihre, vo. Snaesa, makes a curious conjecture as to the reason of this derivation, of terms denoting displeasure, from the nose. This has been mentioned under Snash, v. He adds another, which has greater probability; that birds express displeasure by pecking with their beaks.

I am convinced that the metaphor, in some instances at least, owes its origin to the dilation of the nostrils, and the violent breathing through them, when one is enraged. This origin of the metaphor, we know, is very ancient. Heb. 78, aph, signifies the nose; 58, appim, in the dual, the nostrils; hence, metaph., anger, wrath.

To SNITE, v. a. This is used, not only like the v. in E., in relation to the nose, but also as to a candle, S. Snite the candle, snuff it.

Su.G. snyt-a, emungere; snyta liuset, emungere lucernam; Germ. das licht schneut-zen, id. A.S. candelsnytels, emunctorium.

SNYTH, s. The Coot, Fulica atra, Linn.

"The Coot, (fulica atra, Lin. Syst.), which we call the Snyth, remains with us the whole year, and is found in several places." Barry's Orkn. p. 300.

It most probably receives this name from its bare or bald head, (Su.G. snoed, Isl. snaud-ur, nudus), in the same manner as, on this account, it is called, Sw. blaes-klaeka, from blaes, white, blaesa, white forehead; Germ. weissblaessig wasserhuhn, q. the white-foreheaded water-hen; S. beld kyte, i. e. bald coot.

To SNOCKER, v. n. To snort, to breath high through the nostrils, S. ing in the breath at the nose; which Scot. also we call snottering, or snokering." Rudd. vo. Snokis.

Syne thrice he shook his fearsum bouk,

And thrice he snockerit loud.—

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 358.

Dan. snorck-er, Belg. snork-en, id. SNOCKER, s. A snort, S.

SNOD, adj. 1. Lopped, pruned, having all excrescences removed, S.

On stake and ryce he knits the crooked vines, And snoddes their bowes.———

Hudson's Judith, p. 53.

Syne chargit all there cabillis vp beliue, His awin hede warpit with ane snod oliue.

Doug. Virgil, 153. 53. is said to be snod, when it is

A piece of wood is said to be snod, when it is smoothed.

This is merely the part. pa. of the v. Sned, q. v. 2. Neat; as applied to the appearance or shape.

And snod and sleikit worth thir heistis skinnis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 402. 26.

A black-a-vic'd snod dapper fellow.—— Ramsay's Poems, ii. 362. V. BLACK-A-VIC'D.

3. Trim, neat, S.; synon. trig.
His coat was made of hodden gray,
His bannet blue, and braid that day;
His plaiding hose were snod and clean.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 131.

A person is said to be snod, when plainly, but neatly, dressed; simplex munditiis, Hor. To snod one's self up, id.

4. Transferred to literary compositions.
Your snod remarks, and pointed stile,
Wou'd gar a dorty body smile.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 163. Su.G. snoed, Isl. snaud-ur, naked, bare, would almost seem to have the same origin. Hence, To Snod, Snode, v. a. 1. To prune, to lop, S. 2. To put in order, S.

Ye saw yoursel how weel his mailin thrave, Ay better faugh'd an' snodit than the lave.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 7.

To SNOIF, v. a. To snoif the spindyl, to whirl or turn it round in spinning.

— And eik hir pure damesellis, as sche may, Naithly exercis, for to wirk the lyne,

To snoif the spindyl, and lang thredes twyne. Doug. Virgil, 256. 52.

Su.G. sno, contorquere; to twist, to twine. Gael. sniomh-am, prou. sniov-am, to spin, to twist, is evidently from a common root. Hence beansniomh, a spinster, q. a spinning woman. V. Snoove. SNOIT, s. The mucus that comes from the nese.

This term is used for some disorder, perhaps a running of the nose.

- The Snuffe and the Snoit, &c.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. V. CLEIKS. A.S. snote, ge-snote, "a rheum falling down into the nose," Somner. Teut. snot, id. Snuffe and snoit seem synon.

To SNOKE, Snook, Snowk, v. n. 1. To smell at objects like a dog, S.

Bot sche at the last with lang fard fare and wele Crepis amang the veschell and coupis all,

The drink, and eik the offerandis grete and small, Snokis and likis.

Doug. Virgil, 130. 28.

"Wonderful were the preservations of the persecuted about this time. The soldiers—would have gone by the mouths of the caves and dens in which they were lurking, and the dogs would snook and smell about the stones under which they were hid, and yet they remained undiscovered." Wodrow, ii. 449.

Nae doubt but they were fain o' ither,-Wi' social nose whyles shuff'd and snowkit, Whyles mice an' moudieworts they howkit. Burns, iii. 3.

2. To go about from place to place, prying into every corner, S.; a term applied to those who manife t a jealous curiosity.

Not, as Sibb. says, from Teut. snutt-en, to suuff; but from Su.G. snok-a, which conveys the very idea expressed by this word as metaph, used; insidiose scrutari, Ihre. Snoka efter en, to dog one, Seren. Hence, Thre remarks, the lowest sort of customhouse-officers, who are still prying into the repositories of passengers, are contemptuously called Tullsnokar, from the v., conjoined with tull, custom, daty.

SNOOD, s. A short hair-line, to which a fishing-hook is tied, S.

"The quantity of line found sufficient for a man to manage at sea and shore, contains 36 scores, 720 hooks, (in summer a few more), one yard distant from each other, on snoods of horse hair, value 15s." P. Nigg, Aberd. Statist. Acc. vii. 204. V. FLAUCHTBRED.

Su.G. snod, a small rope, funiculus, Ihre; Isl. snaede, id. Perhaps from Su.G. sno, to twist, to twine; snodt, twisted; as, snodt garn, twisted yarn. SNOOD, SNOID, SNUDE, s. A head-band, a fillet or ribband with which the hair of a woman's head is bound up, S.

The lassie's lost her silken snude.

Old Song.

"The single women wear only a ribband round about their head, which they call a snood." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 212.

A.S. snod, id. vitta; which Ihre views as the same with Su.G. snod funiculus. V. the preceding word. To Snoop, v. a. To bind up the hair with a fil-

"At home they [the young women] went bareheaded, with their hair snooded back on the crown of their head, with a woollen string, in the form of a garter." P. Tongland, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. ix. 325.

To SNOOK, v. n. To smell at. V. SNOKE.

To SNOOL, v. a. To subjugate or govern by authority, to keep under by tyrannical means, pron. snule, S.

Our dotard dads, snool'd wi' their wives, To girn and scart out wretched lives .-

Ramsay's Poems, i. 357.

Dan. snovl-er, to snub, to snuffle at, to give a tart or crabbed answer, might seem the origin. But this is only the v. signifying, to speak through the nose, used metaph. Were it not to suppose a change of idea as to the means employed, I would therefore prefer Su.G. snill-a, to deceive, from snille ingenium; which Ihre derives from snell, celer. Snool may, indeed, be immediately derived from snell, as signifying, severe. For from Germ. schnell, id. is formed anschnell-en, praeropere aliquem invehere durioribus verbis, ut excandescentes solent; Wachter. To Snoot, v. n. To submit tamely, S.

Is there a whim-inspired fool,-Owre blate to seek, owre proud to snool? Let him draw near.

Burns, iii. 344.

SNOOL, s. One who meanly subjects himself to the authority of another; "one whose spirit is broken by oppressive slavery;" Gl. Burns.

Thus a henpecked husband is said to be a mere

"Ye'll wind a pirn! ye silly snool, "Wae worth ye'r drunken saul;" Quoth she, and lap out o'er a stool, And caught him by the spaul.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 277. How shall I be sad when a husband I hae, That has better sense than ony o' thae Sour, weak, silly fellows, that study, like fools, To sink their ain joy, and make their wives snools? Ibid. ii. 80.

To SNOOVE, (pron. snuve), v. n. 1. To move smoothly and constantly.

A boy's top is said to snuve, when it whirls round with great velocity, preserving at the same time an equal motion, S.; to spin, synon. V. Snoif. 2. To walk with an equal and steady course, S.

The stevest brae thou wad hae fac't it; Thou never lap, and sten't and breastit,

Then stood to blaw; But just thy step a wee thing hastit,

Thou snoov't awa.

Burns, iii. 144.

3. To snure awa', to withdraw one's self in a clandestine sort of way, to sneak off, S.

MoesG. sniw-a ire, venire. Su.G. sno implies the idea of celerity, celeritate uti inter agendum vel eundum; sno sig, festinare, Ihre. It is also used in sense 3. Han snodde sig undan; He withdrew himself clandestinely. Isl. snu-a admits a signification allied to this; to turn back; reverti, terga dare, Ihre; snua aptur, retroverti, G. Andr. vo. Aptan; snu-ast à flotta, in fugam verti. Perhaps Su.G. snop-a is allied; re infecta, cum pudore abire. Junius mentions Ir. snoimh-am nere, torquere, which corresponds to sense 1. V. SNACK, and SNOIF.

SNORL, s. A snare, a difficulty, a scrape, S.B. Probably a dimin. from Su.G. snoere, Teut. snoer, funis, chorda; q. a gin.

SNOTTER, s. 1. The snot that hangs from a child's nose, S.

2. Metaph. used to denote any thing that has no weight or value.

Hence I inferr, though I'm no plotter, No help nor gloss can weigh a snotter.

Cleland's Poems, p. 109.

Teut. snot, defluxio capitis ad nares; Fland. snotter, snotteringe, rheuma, catarrhus, Kilian. To Snotter, v. n. To breathe hard through the nostrils; "to snort," Rudd. vo. Snokis.

Close by the fire his easy chair too stands, In which all day he snotters, nods, and yawns. Rumsay's Poems, i. 96. V. SNOCKER.

SNOW-FLAKE, SNOW-FLIGHT, SNOW-FOWL, s. The Snow-bunting, S. Orkn.; Emberiza nivalis, Linn.

"The migratory birds are—the swallow, mountain-finch, or snow-flake, and sometimes the Bohemian chatterer." P. Dingwall, Ross, Statist. Acc. iii. 6. Snow-flight, P. Hamilton, Lanarks. ibid. ii.

"Snow-fowl,—Snow-bunting.—It is the snee-fugl of Norway." Neill's Tour, p. 204.

Sw. snosparf, q. snow-sparrow; Isl. snee-kok. SNUDE, s. A fillet. V. Snood, s. 2.

SNUFFE, s. A disorder in the nostrils.

—— The Snuffe and the Snoit, &c.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. V. CLEIKS. Most probably a superabundant discharge of mucus; Teut. snof, snuf, rheuma, defluxio capitis ad nares, Kilian; to which A.S. snofel, defined precisely in this manner by Somner, is allied.

To SNUG, v. a. 1. To strike, to push; applied to an ox or cow that strikes with the horn, or pushes with the head, Ang.

2. To chide, to reprimand with severity, Ang.
The latter is perhaps the primary sense; from Isl.
snaegg-ia, duris et asperis verbis aliquem excipere, Verel.

SNUG, s. A stroke, a push, Ang.

SNUGS, s. pl. Small branches lopped off from a tree, S.B. V. SNECK, SNEG, v.

SNUK, SNUKE, s. A small cape or promontory. Befor the ost full ferdly furth that fle Till Dwnottar, a snuk within the se; Na ferrar that mycht wyn out off the land.

Wallace, vii. 1043. MS. Swak, Perth Ed. Former editors, not understanding the term, have substituted strength.

The same word is used in The Bruce.
To Scotland went he than in hy,
And all the land gan occupy:
Sa hale that bath castell and toune
War in till his possessione,
Fra Weik anent Orkenay,
To Mullyr snwk in Gallaway.

Bart, ar, i. 188. MS.

And giff he seis we land may ta, On Turnberys Snuke he may Mak a fyr, on a certane day, That mak takynnyng till ws, that we May thar arywe in sawfté.

Ibid. iv. 556. MS.

In Edit. Pink. Turnberys Inuke, from an error of the copyist, who read (long) f for I. Turnberyse-nuke, Edit. 1620.

Isl. nuk-r, vulgo hnuk-r, signifies a little mountain, a higher kind of rock, G. Andr. The s may have been prefixed, as in many words of Goth. origin. Teut. snoecks, nasutulus, q. a little nose. I need scarcely observe, that ness, synon. with snuke, has a common origin. Isl. snok-ur is rendered exporrectus scopus, G. Andr.; q. a mark stretched out.

To SNURL, v. a. 1. "To ruffle or wrinkle;" Gl. Rams.

— Northern blasts the ocean snurl, And gars the heights and hows look gurl. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 349.

 "To contract, in the manner of hard twisted yarn; from Teut. knorre tuberculum;" Gl. Sibb.

SNURLIE, adj. Knotty, S.B.

Perhaps allied to Su.G. snoere, Teut. snoer, a cord.

SOAKIE, adj. Plump, in full habit, Loth.

SOAM, s. The rope or chain by which a plough is drawn. V. SOWME.

SOB, s. A gale of wind, a land-storm, S.B. V. Summer-sob.

SOBIR, SOBYR, SOBER, adj. 1. Poor, mean, S.

—— From distruction delyner and out scrape The sobir trumpis, and meyne graith of Troyanis.

Doug. Virgil, 150. 55.

Gftimes we fynd innocent pepyll and passingeris murdryst be the theuis for sobir geir in thair vaiage." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 4. Ob pauculam rem, Boeth.

Thyself appleis with sobir rent.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 186.

Thus sobir diet denotes mean fare.

"By the present system, it requires the utmost exertion of his industry, and an almost uninterrupted succession of crops, to pay his rent and servants, and afford a maintenance, very sober indeed, to his family." P. Killearnan, Ross, Statist. Acc. xvii. 343.

2. Little, small, S.

"If he had not respect to himselfe & his Christ, if we tooke neuer so great paines, we would find but a sober success." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 482. id. 483.

3. Weak, feeble.

Allace! so sobir is the micht Of wemen for to mak debait, Incontrair menis subtell slicht, Quhilk ar fulfillit with dissait.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 156.

4. Ailing, in a poor state of health, S. Very sober, ailing a good deal.

5. Sometimes used as denoting a moderate state of health, S.

6. Denoting any thing not good of its kind; or applied to a person who does not merit commendation, S.

A sober servant, a very indifferent one.

This is evidently the E. word, although used in a variety of peculiar senses.

To SOBER, SOBYR, r. a. To compose, to keep under, S.

Bathe ire and luff him set in till a rage; Bot nocht for thi he soberyt his curage.

Wallace, v. 682. MS.

Sobyrit, Edit. Perth.

SOC, Sock, Sok, s. The right of a baron, to hold a court within his own domains, S. V. SAK.

SOCCOMAN, SOCKMAN, s. 1. One who holds lands by soccage, or on condition of performing certain inferior services in husbandry; E. socman.

"Gif ane man deceissis, leaueand behind him moe sonnes nor ane, ane distinction is to be observed, quhither the father was ane Knicht, haueand lands halden be knichts service,—or ane Socco-man." Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 27. s. 1.

2. A tenant of a particular district, subjected by his lease to certain restrictions, and bound to perform certain services, Aberd.

"The parish is accommodated with seven cornmills, to some one of which the tenants of a certain district, called the sockcom, or sockmen, or sucken, are astricted." P. Turreff, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvii. 407.

A.S. soc jurisdictio. V. SAK.

To SOCHER, (gutt.) v. n. To make much of one's self, to be careful of one's health to an extreme, particularly by the use of warm potions, palatable draughts, &c. S.

SOCK, Sok, s. A ploughshare, S. A. Bor.
1 saw Duke Sangor thair, with mony a knok
Six hundreth men slew with ane pleuchis sok.
Palice of Honour, iii. 26.

Peace to the husbandman and a' his tribe,
Whase care fells a' our wants frae year to year!
Lang may his sock and couter turn the gleyb!
And bauks o' corn bend down wi' laded ear!
Fergusson's Poems, ii. 59.

Fr. soc, id. vomer. This has been derived from Lat. sulc-us, a furrow, because this is the effect of the former. In Dict. Trev., however, it is said that soc is an old Celt. word, which has passed into Fr. from the Bas Bretagne. As Alem. sahs, Germ. sachs, A.S. seax, denote a knife, or any instrument for cutting; Germ. saeg-an, to cut; there may possibly be some radical affinity.

SODDIS, Sonns, s. pl. A sort of saddle used by the lower classes in the country, made of cloth stuffed, S.; synon. sonks, sunks.

For thai, that had gude hors and geir, Hes skantlie now ane crukit meir: And for thair sadils thai have soddis.

Maitland Poems, p. 322. Next, like Don Quixot, some suppose, He had a lady Del to Bose, Who never budged from his side, Upon a pair of sodds astride.

Colvil's Mock Poem, i. 17.

If I mistake not, the generality of farmers, little more than half a century ago, used sodds for riding. Many of the pendiclers, who keep only one horse, still have no better equipage.

They were also formerly used, in some of the southern counties at least, for supporting the loads on the backs of horses.

Allied perhaps to A.S. seod, pl. seodas, a sack, satchel, or budget.

SODIOUR, s. A soldier.

For a knycht, Schyr Gawter the Lile, Said it wis all to gret perile Swa ner thir sodiourys to ga.

Barbour, v. 205. MS.

SODROUN, SUDROUN, SOTHROUN, s. 1. Used as a collective name, equivalent to Englishmen.

He saw the Sothroun multipliand mayr, And to hym self oft wald he mak his mayne. Wallace, i. 188. MS.

2. The English language, as distinguished from the Scottish.

— Forsoith I set my besy pane
(As that I couth) to make it brade and plane,
Kepand na sodroun, bot oure awin langage,
And spek as I lerned quhen I wes ane page:
Na yit so clene all sudroun I refuse,
Bot sum worde I pronunce as nychboure dois.

Doug. Virgil, Pref. 5. 5. 7.

It is merely southern, A.S. sutherne; Su.G. soeder, Isl. sudur.

SOY, s. Silk. Fr. soye, id.
His stockings were of silken soy,
Wi' garters hanging doune.

Gilderoy, Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 24. Silken soy must be a tautology; unless some particular kind of silk be meant; as podesoy, S. is the name given to a rich species of cloth of this quality.

SOILYIE, s. Soil. V. Sulye. SOYME, s. A rope. V. Sowme.

SOIT, SOYT, s. 1. An assize.

"Gif ane man mutilats ane other, or wounds, or beates him, be forthocht felonie: and the partie grieved persewes him before ane judge, either be soyt (be an assise) or be complaint; sic forme and order of proces salbe ledde,—as is ordained agains ane manslaver." Stat. Rob. II. c. 11. s. 1.

2. Attendance on an overlord by his vassals, in the court held by him.

"He quha is oblished to give soyte in the courte of his over-lord, suld doe the samin, conforme to the tenour of his infeftment, and na vther-waies." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Sok. L.B. secta, secta curiae; Fr. suite, i. e. sequela.

Soytour, Soyter, s. 1. Any person appearing in a court of law, as the vassal of another.

"The soytes suld be first called, with their lords and maisters; for albeit the soytouris compeir, nevertheles their lords and maisters, likewaies are oblished to compeir, and to give presence to the Iustice, in his air." Skene, Crimes, Tit. ix. c. 28.

2. It was afterwards used to denote one employed by another to manage his business in court, and regularly admitted by the court as an agent.

"Ilk soytour, before he is admitted and receaved be the judge, sould be examinat in thrie courts, gif he can make recorde of the court," &c. Quon. Attach. c. 36. s. 3.

SOITH, s. Truth.

King Priamus son made answere; Soith is it, Na thing, my dere frende, did thou pretermyt. Doug. Virgil, 181. 47.

For thoch scho spayit the soith, and maid na

Quhat ener scho said, Troianis trowit not ane wourd.

Ibid. 47. 6.

A.S. soth, veritas.

SOITHFAST, adj. True, certain. V. SUTHFAST. To SOKE, v. n. "To slacken," Pink.

Ryse, fresch Delyte, lat nocht this mater soke. King Hart, i. 20.

Let it not rest, or be delayed. It may be only a metaph, use of E. soak, because things are said to soak, when allowed to remain a considerable time in a moist state. Or perhaps from Teut. swijck-en, to subside, to fall.

SOLACE, s. Sport, recreation.

- Or with loud cry folowand the chace Efter the fomy bare, in there solace.

Doug. Virgil, 23. 10.

Solacious, s. Cheerful, gay.

In cumpany solacious

He was; and tharwith amorous.

Barbour, x. 290. MS.

i. e. he was a cheerful and loving companion. For amorous seems simply to signify affectionate; as it immediately follows;

And gud knychtis he luffyt ay.

V. Solace.

SOLAND, SOLAND GOOSE, s. The Gannet, Pelecanus Bassanus, Linn.; S. pron. solan.

It receives its trivial name from the Bass isle, where it incubates every year, as it does also on Ailsa rock.

Syne all the lentren but les, and the lang rede, And als in the advent,

The Soland stewart was sent;

For he coud fra the firmament

Fang the fische deid.

Houlate, iii. 5.

"In it ar incredible noumer of soland geis, nocht vnlik to thir fowlis that Plineus callis see ernis."

Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.

Martin observes, that "some derive the name of this bird from the Irish word Sou'l-er, corrupted and adapted to the Scottish language;" as denoting its remarkable power of vision, in spying its prey from a great distance. Voyage to St. Kilda, p. 27. This species of goose, according to Shaw, is in Gael. called Suilaire.

Sibb. derives the name "from Sw. solande, lingering, loitering, sottish; part of the verb soela procrastinare." There is, however, a bird that breeds in the Feroe islands, which is called Sula, and which may be the same with this. V. Encyclop. Britann. vo. Pelicanus.

According to Pennant, this is the same bird which the Norw. call Sule, Hav-Sul. He also views it as the Sula of Clusius, in his Exot.; Zool. p. 612.

"Gannets-breed chiefly on the Stack of Suliskerry. Sule is the Norwegian name for a gannet, and skerry means rock." Neill's Tour, p. 199. 200.

To SOLD, v. a. To solder.

"It is ordanit, that the said gold or silver salbe ressaifit be all his liegis, sa that it keip all the wecht, and be gude trew mettell, suppois it be with crak or flaw, or soldit." Acts Ja. IV. 1489. c. 34. Edit. 1566.

Fr. soud-er, Ital. sold-are, Arm. sout-er, id. from Lat. solid-are.

SOLD, s. 1. " A weight, ingot, Scot. sowd, as a sowd of money, i. e. a great sum," Rudd.

With ane grete sold of gold fey Priamus Secretly vinquhile send this Polidorus, Quhilk was his son, to Polymnestor king Of Trace, to keip and haue in nurissing. Doug. Virgil, 68: 41.

2. Money in general.

O der Wallace, wmquhill was stark and stur, . Thow most o neide in presonne till endur. Thi worthi kyn may nocht the saiff for sold. Wallace, ii. 208. MS.

According to Rudd., from Teut. sold, soud, Fr. solde, stipendium, merces; L.B. sold-us, sold-um, from solid-us, the chief gold coin used in the Roman empire. Hence Fr. soldat, E. soldier, i. e. one who serves for pay, miles stipendiarius. It may be observed, however, that A.S. seod signifies not only a sack, but a box, a purse. Hence cyninga seod, the royal treasury. Su.G. siud, siod, Isl. siod-ur crumena, pera, marsupium; Ol. Lex. Run.

As Isl. soel denotes a pension, a gift, pl. soelur, from Su.G. sael-ia, to deliver, to pay, Ihre supposes that Lat. salaria, used to signify the stipend both of magistrates and soldiers, has been borrowed by the Romans from the Scythians, to whom they were indebted for a variety of other military terms.

SOLESHOE, s. A piece of iron, on what is called the head, or that part of a plough on which the sock, or share, is fixed. The two pieces of iron which go below the sock are called plaitings, Fife.

Su.G. sko denotes whatever strengthens the extremity of any thing; often applied to points of iron.

SOLYEING, s. The act of solving.

Than to his lords cum is this nobil king, Desyrand for to wit the solyeing Of this questioun, this probleame, and this dout. Pricets of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 11.

SOLIST, adj. Careful, anxious, eager. Lat. solicit-us.

"Riche kyng Amphion vas verray solist to keip his scheip, and at enyn quhen thai past to there faldis, scheip cottis and ludgens, he playt befor them on his harpe." Compl. S. p. 67.

Fr. soing, care, diligence.

To SONK, v. n. Apparently, to drivel, to loiter; or to be in a low or dejected state.

There's no glee to give delight,
And ward frae spleen the langsome night.
For which they'll now have uae relief,
But sonk at hame, and cleck mischief.
Ramsay's Poems, i. Life xliv.

If not from E. sink, Su.G. siunk-a, q. depressed; perhaps allied to sink-a, retardare; sinka sig, tempus terere. Ei laenger saenken; Diutius non tardate; Hist. Alex. Magn. ap. Ihre. Isl. seink-a, id. from sen tardus, serus.

SONK, s. 1. A seat of that form and quality that it may be used as a couch.

Thus Doug. uses the term as corresponding to torus in Virg., to denote that kind of couches on which the ancients reclined during their meals.

Syne eftir endlangis the sey coistis bray, Vp sonkis set and desis did array, To meit we satt with haboundance of chere. Virgil, 75. 12.

This seems the primary sense; not only from the use of the word by this venerable writer, but from its affinity to A.S. song, Su.G. saeng, siang, Isl. saeng, seng; a bed, a couch; also, a pillow. For G. Andr. renders the Isl. word by culcitra. Both Lyc, (Add. Jun. Etym.), and Ihre have remarked the affinity between these terms and S. sonk.

2. A green turf, or seat made of it, S.

Tho gan the graue Aceste with wordes chyde Entellus, sat on the grene sonk him besyde.

Doug. Virgil, 140. 31.

The term has most probably come to be applied to a green turf, or grassy seat, because of its softness, and consequent fitness for being used as a couch or place of rest. This idea receives confirmation from the following passage.

Eneas and vtheris chiftanis glorius— Vnder the branschis of ane semelie tre Gan lenyng donn, and rest thare bodyis fre: And to thare dinnare did thame al addres On grene herbis, and sonkis of soft gres. Ibid. 208. 40.

Gang in and seat ye on the sunks all around, And ye'se be sair'd with plenty in a stoun. Ross's Helenore, p. 125.

3. "A wreath of straw, used as a cushion, or a load saddle," Gl. Evergreen.

Godscroft has preserved part of a satyrical rhyme, on the defeat of Argyle by the Kerrs, A. 1528, in which the term occurs in this sense.

The Earle of Argyle is bound to ride From the border of Edge-bucklin bray, And all his Habergeons him beside, Each man upon a sonke of stray. They made their vow that they would slay, &c. Hist. Doug. p. 260.

This name, in the pl., is still given to the cushion, or substitute for a saddle, used by some of the lower classes in S.

"Towards the beginning of November this year, a party of soldiers apprehended about twelve persons in that parish, most of them merely for not keeping the church, and carried them prisoners to Hamilton.—To morrow being to be carried in to Edinburgh, some horses were provided for them, and a guard of dragoons. The horses had all sunks laid on them when brought; but the commander, Bonshaw, caused remove them, and two men were put upon each of the dragoons lean horses, without any thing under them; yea, the men were first tied one to another by their arms, and then had their legs twisted with cords, cross the horse's belly, so hard, that their ancles were galled to the effusion of their blood," &c. Wodrow, ii. 291.

The whole passage would deserve to be transcribed, to give a taste of the tender mercies of that period.

Saccoing being the term which occurs in the A.S. version, Mark vi. 55. for a couch, Ihre thinks that Su.G. saeng may be traced to this as its origin. Here he seems mistaken. But he subjoins an observation, which may assist us in discovering the reason of this name being given to the sort of saddle used by the poor in this country. "The ancients," he says, " had for their beds, or cushions and pillows, sacks stuffed with straw." This is just the description of that kind of saddle now called sonks, synon. soddis. It is a piece of strong sacking cloth, stuffed with straw, wool, or some substance of this with the adj., might be traced to Teut, soen reconciliatio, expiatio; soen-en reconciliare, propitiare; MoesG. saun, Su.G. Isl. sona, atonement. But both in sense and form it is more allied to Gael. Ir. sonas, prosperity, happiness; Ir. sonos, chance, fortune; sona, prosperous, blessed, happy; sonsa, in favour, Bullet. Teut. sanse augmentum, prosperitas, seems radically the same. Kilian refers to deghe, salus, sanitas, vigor, as synon.

2. It seems to be used, as Mr. Ellis conjectures, in that old Ballad on the death of Alexander III., preserved by Wyntown, as signifying abundance.

Sonsy, Sonse, adj. 1. Lucky, fortunate, happy, (canny, synon.) as opposed to what is accounted ominous or ill-boding, S.B.

This seems to be the primary sense, as it is the only one in which the term is used by our old writers.

Gif thow be gude, or evill, I cannot tell; Thay ar not sonsy that so dois ruse thame sell.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 15. "This spirit they called Brownie in our language, who appeared like a rough-man: yea, some were so blinded, as to beleeue that their house was all the

But I've twa sonsy lasses, young and fair, Plump, ripe for men: I wish ye cou'd foresee Sic fortunes for them might bring joy to me. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 124.

5. It seems also used to denote fullness with respect to provisions, conjoined with cordiality in. the host.

It seems originally the same with E. swig, which, as Lye (Add. Jun.) supposes, may be derived either from Isl. siug-a sorbeo, or as nearly of the same signification with swill, from A.S. swilg-an. Seren. prefers the former etymon.

2. Any body, consisting of a variety of parts or particles conjoined, as E. cloud is metaph. used; as, a sope of mist, Doug. Virgil, 25. 42., a dusty sope, 264. 15.; also, 274. 47.

What metaph. analogy, as Rudd. imagines, it can have to Fr. soupe, soup, or porridge, is not easily conceivable. It seems the same with Isl. sopp-ur, a ball, pila, Verel. Now, Rudd. expl. sop by globus. Isl. sop-a, to scrape or rake together; sopa til um fefaung, commeatum undecunque corradere. Su.G. swaef-ia denotes a train or retinue.

To SOPE, Soup, v. n. To become weary, to droop, to faint, sopit, sowpit, fatigued, exhausted.

Sum dele or than walxis dolf this syre, Seing his hors begyn to sope and tyre. Doug. Virgil, 433. 29.

So was I sopit and overset.

Cherrie and Slae.

And for no sair,

Nor sorrow, can I soup.

Maitland Poems, p. 264.

Rudd. is at great pains to shew how this use of the word may come from E. sope, to drench, steep. But there are many Goth. words which are evidently cognates. MoesG. swaif, cessavit; A.S. swaefian, to fail, deficere; Belg. suff-en, to dote, to mope, suf, doting, pensive, versuff-en, to pine away with heaviness of mind; Su.G. foer-soffad, stupid, soefw-a sopire; Mod. Sax. versuff-en, to be stupified. SOPHAM, SOPHINE, s. A sophism, Fr. so-nhime.

This seems to have been three sops of some favourite cordial; denominated perhaps from the idea of its strength or powerful effects. V. MANE. SORDANE, adj.

—Thai suld exemple tak of hir sordane teiching.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 63.

This might be understood of secret instruction; Fr. a la sourdine, privately. But it is sourane, in Edit. 1508.

SORDES, s. Filth, S.B.

"It ought and should be found and declared that the said Alexander Fraser, or any person deriving right from him, have no right or title, by means of any operations or manufactures on the banks of the river, to throw or convey into the said river, corrupted water, the filth, sordes, dregs or refuse of a distillery or manufactory, or any other substance of a nauseous quality." State, Leslie of Powis v. Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 36.

Lat. sordes, id. This term might be introduced by the monks or clergy in their charters. Isl. saur, however, signifies filth, and saurd-a to defile; Verel. Ind. p. 217. Thus the Lat. word might itself have a Gothic origin. The term is also used in E.

To SORN, SORNE, v. n. 1. To obtrude one's self on another for bed and board, S.

"Whenever a chieftain had a mind to revel, he came down among the tenants with his followers, by way of contempt, called in the lowlands giliwitfitts, and lived on free quarters; so that ever since, when a person obtrudes himself upon another, stays at his house, and hangs upon him for bed and board, he is said to sorn or be a sorner." Macbean, Johns. Dict. vo. Sorehon.

2. Used, in an improper sense, to denote the depredations made by an invading army.

All things perplexed were, the Baliol proud, With English forces both by land and flood In Scotland came, arrived at Kinghorne, And through the country mightily did sorne.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 96.

Sibb. properly enough refers to Fr. sejourn-er commorari. For the S. word is merely the E. one, according to the old mode of writing it. It would appear that the j was sounded as i.

For thought me tharfor worthit dev. I mon soiourne, quhar euyr it be.

Barbour, iii. 323. MS.

Wallace than said, We will not soiorne her. Wallace, iii. 79. MS.

It is also used actively, with respect to the practise of sorning.

"The Parliament statutis, and the King forbiddis: that na cumpanies pass in the countrie, to ly vpone ony the Kingis liegis: or thig or soiorne hors outher on kirkmen or husbandis of the land." Acts James I. 1424. c. 7. Edit. 1566.

Sornare, Sorner, s. One who takes free quarters, S.

Quhair euer sornaris be ouertane in tyme to cum, that thay be deliuerit to the Kingis Schireffis, and that furthwith the Kingis justice do law vpone thame as vpone a thief or reuar." Acts James II. 1455. c. 49. Edit. 1566. V. the v.

This severe act was put in force, about fifty or sixty years ago, upon two brothers of the name of M'Farlane, who were executed at Forfar; if I remember right, by the sentence of the sheriff. They were habit and repute notorious thieves; but nothing could be proved against them. This cruel expedient was therefore fallen upon, of trying and condemning them on the Sornare Act. They broke prison, and escaped, a day or two before that appointed for execution. But such was the rigour of justice, that, the country being raised, they were catched at the head of a Glen, in the entry to the Highlands, making crowdie in their bonnets at the side of a brook; carried back, and executed. I have conversed with persons who witnessed their death. *SORROW, s. A term unwarrantably used in imprecations, or strong asseverations, S.

Alace, the porter is foryett,

But sorrow mair the men mycht gett.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 384. "No," Gl. But this is by no means a simple negative. It is often used, although by some perhaps ignorantly, yet in the same unlawful way as fient, i. e. fiend, de'ill, &c. when meant to express a strong negation; and, in imprecation, like, E. pox, plague, deuce, &c. The term would seem indeed sometimes to denote a personification; as the vulgar speak of the muckle Sorrow, in the same manner as they speak of the devil.

SOSS, s. A mixture of incongruous kinds of food, or any heterogeneous mass, S. " a mucky puddle," A. Bor. Ray.

Sibb. expl. it, " a large dish of flummery," calling it Fr., but on what authority I cannot find. It may be from saulce, Teut. sausse, condimentum, sauss-en, condire, the idea being borrowed from ,the variety of ingredients often mingled in sauces.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 271. This seems to have the same origin with the E. v. souse, to strike with sudden violence, or the adv. souse, conveying the same idea. Dr. Johns. views Fr. sous or dessous, down, as the root.

SOT, s. A fool, S.
"The Scots use sot, as the French do un sot, not for a tippler, but a fool." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 128.

To SOTTER, v. n. 1. To boil slowly, to simmer, S. evidently a deriv. from A.S. seoth-an, Su.G. siud-a, Isl. siod-a, to boil.

2. Frequently used to denote the bubbling noise made by any thing in boiling, S.

To SOUCH, Soogh, Swouch, (pron. sooch gutt.) v. n. 1. To emit a rushing or whistling sound. It properly denotes those low melancholy tones of the wind, which precede and prognosticate rain, S.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 133.

A.S. sweg-an, swog-an, sonare, tinnire; part. pr. swogend, S. souchand. This word is often used to denote the noise made by the wind. Sweathe wind, cum strepitu irruit ventus; S. the wind souch't. It denotes the noise which is made when the ears ring. Ic thone sweg, on earum haefde; sonum in auribus habui; Lye. S. I had a soughing in my lugs. It also signifies the sound of trees moved by the wind. The wudubeamas swegdon; sylvae arbores sonucrunt; S. the trees were souchin.

Souch, Sowch, Sugh, Swouch, s. 1. A rushing or whistling sound, S.

Doug. Virgil, 240, b. 30.

3. It is used to denote a deep sigh, S.O. I saw the battle sair and tough,

And reekin-red ran mony a sheugh, My heart for fear gae sough for sough.

Burns, iv. 362.

Chaucer uses swough for sound, noise, from A.S. sweg, swege, sonus, clangor; strepitus flammarum. Hence swege denotes any kind of musical instrument, as a trumpet, an organ.

SOUCH, adj. Silent, quiet, tranquil, S. To keep souch, to be silent. He grew quite souch; he became entirely calm, so as to make no disturbance.

Left by Mr. Pinkerton for explanation. It seems to signify, deserted, forsook; A.S. swic-an, to deliver up; or, Su.G. swig-a, loco cedere. This may be formed from the latter, as souch, silent, from A.S. swiga.

SOUCHT, pret. Attacked in a hostile manner, assailed by arms.

This is a Su.G. idiom. Soek-a, Ihre observes, usurpatur de violenta invasione. Nu soekir man hem til annan; Si quis in alterius aedes impetum fecerit. This he views as the origin of Hemsoekn, our Hamesucken. For hemsoek-a properly signifies, to invade the house of another with violence. He also derives ransak-a, to ransack, from ran a house, and saek-a. Isl. adsoka, atsoka, a warlike assault; sokn itself signifying a battle, praelium; G.

SOUCYE, s. The old name in S. for the herb helytropium. V. APPIN.

SOUD, s. A quantity.

"The tradesmen are paid for the piece, or with a certain sum or quantity of victual annually agreed on, called soud." P. Daviot, Moray, Statist. Acc. xiv. 74. N. V. Sold.

SOUDIE, s. A gross heavy person, one who is big and clumsy; a term generally used as to women, S.

Perhaps allied to Su.G. sod, soid, an animal, any individual of the larger kind of cattle; sometimes, a sow. MoesG. saud seems to have signified cattle; hence, transferred to a sacrifice. Isl. saude, small cattle.

This word is perhaps part of that designation used, Evergreen, ii. 20. Sowdy-mowdy. The latter part may be merely alliterative; or from Teut. moede, muede, wearied, fatigued.

SOUDLAND, s. One who comes from the south country, S.B.

SOUDLY, adj. Soiled, dirty.

SOVERANIS, s. "Difference of degree," Pink. For, the I say it myself, the soveranis wes meikle Betwix his bastarde blude, and my birth nobill. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 56.

According to Ed. 1508, severanis; O.Fr. sevrer, to separate.

To SOUF, Souff, v. n. 1. To slumber, to sleep in a disturbed manner, S.B.

Su.G. sofw-a, Isl. sof-a, Dan. sov-er, A.S. swefan, id. Geswef-od consopitus, laid asleep; Isl. sof-r sleep. Junius thinks that the v. may be traced to MoesG. swaif, cessavit. Lat. sop-ire, to set at rest or asleep, seems to have had the same origin. Belg. suff-en, to dote. V. Suoufe.

2. To breathe high in sleep; properly, as the effect of disease, S.B.

This is the more common sense. It seems doubtful, indeed, whether this be not radically a different v., from Teut. soeff-en, Germ. schopf-en, spirare, which seem to have some affinity to Heb. AND, shaaf, anhelavit. One might almost suppose, A.S. seof-ian, lugere, to mourn, to moan, had some affinity to the word in this sense; as it denotes a sort of moaning anhelation.

- 3. "To whistle in a low tone," Sibb. Gl. I sigh at hame, a-field am dowie too, To sowf a tune I'll never crook my mou. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 1.
- 4. "To con over a tune on an instrument." Thus I-Bang'd up my blyth auld-fasion'd whistle, Denominated perhaps from his occupying the shell of the periwinkle as a tent, or centry-box.

SOULE, Sole, s. A swivel, Gl. Sibb. V. CULPIT.

SOUM, Sowme, s. A term expressing the relative proportion of cattle or sheep to pasture, or vice versa, S.

1. A soum of sheep, five sheep; or, in other places, ten.

"There are 36 freeholders in the burgh, whose freeholds at present are reckoned, at an average, at 50s. yearly, with a privilege of pasturage for 72 soums of sheep upon the common, 5 sheep being reckoned to the soum." P. Monkton, Airs. Statist. Acc. xii. 396.

"One cow makes a soum, a horse two; ten sheep (and in some places fewer) are considered as a soum." P. Saddel, Argyles. Ibid. p. 477. N.

2. A soum of grass, as much as will pasture one cow, or five sheep, S.

"It is statute and ordeined, that in all tyme comming, there be designed to the Minister serving at the cure of sik Kirks where there is na arrable land adjacent thereto, foure sownes grasse for ilk aiker of the saids foure aiker of gleib land, extending in the haill to sextene sownes, for the saids foure aikers." Acts James VI. 1606. c. 7. Murray.

"The glebe—is supposed to be legal as to extent, with 4 soums grass, in common with the cattle of the farm." P. Kilmartin, Argyles. Statist. Acc.

Sw. sum is equivalent to tal, number. V. Sowme, number; as this is evidently the same word used as also denoting quantity.

To Soum land, to calculate and fix what number of cattle or sheep it can properly support, S.

"Where there are several small tenants upon one farm, the farm is (what they call) soumed; which means, that the number of cattle it can properly maintain or pasture, is ascertained, that none of the tenants may exceed bis just proportion, nor over-stock his farm." P. Balquhidder, Perths. Statist. Ace. vi. 93.

To Soum and Roum.

"It seems probable, that the land outfield, in many places, was occupied in common, each proprietor or tenant, in a certain district, parish, or estate, having been thereby entitled to soum or pasture on the outfield land in summer, in proportion to the number and kinds of cattle he was thus able to roum or fodder in winter, by means of his share of infield land." P. Bedrule, Roxburgh, Statist. Acc. xv. 473, N.

To roum, to find place for. V. Rowme, v.

SOUMS, s. pl. The sounds of the cod dried for food, Shetland. V. next word.

SOUNDS (of a fish), s. pl. The swimming bladder, S.

"The greatest part of the cod's sounds, in this parish, are permitted to remain and rot on the sea beach, or are cast into the dunghill, though the use and value of them as an article of food and delicacy at table have been known here for many years." P. Peterhead, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 549.

Isl. sund, natatio. To SOUP, Soop, v. a. To sweep, S. Quhair cuer thay go it may be sene, How kirk and calsay thay soup clene. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. Contemptioun of Syde Taillis, p. 307.

3. A considerable quantity of drink, or of any thin food; as, a soup milk, a soup broth, a soup drink, a considerable quantity of any intoxicating liquor, S.

"Wae worth that weary sup of drink He lik'd so well.

He drank it a', left not a clink, His throat to sweel.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 27.

Here it is printed like the E. word.

"I wish you had drank water, when you drank that soup drink;" S. Prov., "Spoken when people say something out of the way, upon a jocose supposition that they are drunk, or they would not say so;" Kelly, p. 179. Isl. sope, a draught, saup pottage or any spoonmeat; sofe, as much of this kind of food as the mouth receives at once. E. sup, is used as in sense 2. But we extend the signification. For notwithstanding the general prejudice which prevails among our southern neighbours, as to the poverty of our country, we have, in the use of food, a greater varicty of gratification than themselves. They eat all, or drink all; whereas we not only eat and drink, but sup.

SOUPAND, part. pr. Seems to signify sobbing, or groaning, complaining.

SOW, s. A military engine anciently used in sieges.

Of gret gestis a sow thai maid, That stalwart heildyne aboyn it had. With armyt men inew tharin, And instrumentis for to myne.

Barbour, xvii. 597. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton, in his Notes on K. Hart. p. 377, says; "They shattered the walls with sows or battering rams.—The sows were arietes." In his note on this passage of The Bruce, he throws out a different idea; "A sow was a military engine resembling the testudo of the Romans." But neither of these descriptions is accurate. It is evident, that the sow was not a battering ram. For it was not employed for battering down walls, but for covering those who were employed to undermine them. Hence, Barbour says, it had stalwart heildyne, or covering above.

Such is the account given by William of Malmesbury, Hist. L. iv. Unum fuit machinamentum, quod nostri Suem, veteres Vineam vocant, quod machina levibus lignis colligata, tecto, tabulis, cratibusque contexto, lateribus crudis coriis communitis, protegit in se subsidentes, qui quasi more suis ad murorum suffodienda penetrant fundamenta. He here assigns as likely a reason for the name as we can find. It was thus denominated, because it protected those who sat in it, who after the manner of a swine, dug under the walls. This account exactly corresponds with that given by Barbour in the passage quoted. The armed men, which it contained, were employed for the purpose of mining. Other authors are quoted by Du Cange, who give the same description of the instrument, and the same origin of the name.

The word is used in this sense by R. Glouc. p. 410.

A gyn, that me clupeth sowe, hii made ek wel strong.

Muche folc inne vor to be, bothe wyde & long. This agrees with the account given by William of Malmesbury. No notice is taken of this term in the Gl. to R. Glouc.

Fordun calls the sow, ingentem testudinem, a large testudo or tortoise; Scotichron. L. xiii. c. 40. But he uses the term improperly. For the sow differs also from the testudo. For this, although distinguished by Vegetius from the Aries, and different in its construction, was also meant for battering down walls. According to him, it received this name, because it resembled the tortoise: and as this animal now draws back its head, and then pushes it forward, this instrument was so contrived, that the beam, intended for battering, was sometimes drawn back, and sometimes thrust forward, that it might strike with the greater force. Testudo autem a similitudine verae testudinis vocabulum sumsit, quia sicut illa modo reducit, modo praefert caput, ita machinamentum interdum reducit trabem, interdum exerit, ut fortius caedat. De Re Militar. Lib. iv. cap. 14.

As William of Malmesbury says, that the sow was the same instrument which the ancients called Vinea, he describes it almost in the same words which are used by Vegetius concerning the latter. E lignis levioribus machina colligatur, alta pedibus octo, lata pedibus septem, longa pedibus sexdecim. Hujus tectum munitione duplici, tabulatis, cratibusque contexitur .- Istac, cum plures factae fuerint, junguntur in ordinem, sub quibus subsidentes tuti ad subruenda murorum penetrant fundamenta. De Re Mil. lib. iv. cap. 15. It seems to have been called vinea, from the resemblance which a number of these joined together bore to a vineyard. This machine was also in Latin denominated scrofa, scropha. V. Du Cange. The French gave it the name of truie, truye, (Du Cange, vo. Troia,) which, according to Cotgr. signifies, "a sow; also, a warlike engine used in oldtimes for the beating down of walls." This last word had still the same meaning. For Pomponius Sabinus observes on the Aeneid, that a sozo is in Latin called Troia. Hence Teut. truye; sus, scropha, troia apud veteres: ita Troiani Troiam, id est, scropham, in sua moneta dicuntur habuisse expressam: Kilian.

On this head the learned Camden observes: "As the ancient Romans had their Crates, Vineae, Plutei, and such like to make their approaches; so had the English in this age their Cat-house and Sow for the same purpose. This Cat-house, answerable to the Cattus mentioned by Vegetius, was used in the siege of Bedford Castle, in the time of King Henry the Third. The Sow is yet usual in Ireland, and was in the time of King Edward the Third used at the siege of Dunbar, which when the Countess, who defended the castle, saw, she said merrily, That unless the Englishmen kept their sow the better, she would make her to cast her pigs." Remains, p. 266. 267.

The history of this engine supplies us indeed with a sample of the wit that prevailed among our war-like ancestors. At the siege referred to by Camden, where the Countess, commonly called Eluck Agnes, displayed such undaunted courage in defending the castle, when the Earl of Salisbury brought up the sow, with many armed men and warlike instruments within it, to batter the walls; she cried to him;

O Montagow, Montagow, Be war, for ferry sall thi sow.

And her prediction was not false. For immediately she caused a huge stone to be thrown aloft from a machine ingeniously constructed within the castle, which, falling from a great height on the sore, shattered it to pieces, and so stupified many of those that were within, that with difficulty they escaped with their lives. Fordun, Scotichron L. xiii. c. 39. But it would seem that this witticism of the Black Countess, like many smart sayings of later times, was not original. She had most probably heard of its being used at the siege of Berwick, in the reign of R. Bruce. For Barbour, when giving an account of the sow prepar'd by the English, says;

Thai pressyt the sow towart the wall; And has hyr set tharto gentilly. The gynour than gert bend in hy The gyne, and wappyt out the stane, That ewyn towart the lyft is gane, And with gret wecht syne duschit doun Rycht be the wall, in a randoun; And hyt the sow in sic maner, That it that wes the mast sower, And starkast for to stynt a strak, In sundre with that dusche it brak. The men than owt in full gret hy. And on the wallis thai gan cry, That thair sow wes feryt thar.

Barbour, xvii. 688. MS.

The sow is distinguished both from our awblasters. and from the battering ram, in an elegant Norwegian work, believed to have been written in the 12th century. "If the awblasters cannot overturn or strike a wall, it is necessary to bring on these machines; a Ram having its front covered with iron, the force of which walls can seldom resist: but if the walls are not overthrown, tha ma Graf-suin til thessarar velur leida; you may bring forward the Sow. Spec. Regal. p. 410-412. The awblaster or catapulta, is called Isl. valslaungur, from val, Su.G. wal, apparatus bellicus, and slaenga, jactare, q. the weapon-thrower. The Ram is denominated vedur, or the wedder; and the name graf-suin seems literally to signify the digging sow, from its use already mentioned, as meant to cover those who dug under the wall: from graf-a, fodio, whence E. grave.

Grose thinks that "it derived its name from the soldiers under it lying close together, like pigs under a sow."—" Two machines, the one called the boar, the other the sow, were employed by the parliamentarians in the siege of Corse castle, Dorset-shire." Milit. Antiq. p. 387. 388.

I may add, that Gael. muc, which signifies a sow, is also expl., "an instrument of war, whereby besiegers were secured in approaching a wall, like the pluteus of the Romans, covered over with twigs, hair-cloth, raw hides, and moving on three wheels;" Shaw. This writer does not seem to have observed, that the instrument referred to was in E. denominated a sow.

SOW, HAY-Sow, s. A large stack of hay erected in an oblong form, S. pron. soo.

"In Scotland a long hay-stack is termed a sow; probably from a traditionary remembrance of the warlike engine, which went under that name; hence we may have a distinct notion of the figure of that engine." Annals Scot. ii. 89.

engine." Annals Scot. ii. 89.

But there is no evidence tha

But there is no evidence that the military engine, thus denominated, was so frequently used in the wars between Scotland and England, as to lend its name to one of the common fruits of husbandry. Although a few individuals, returning from a siege, might be struck with the resemblance, it is scarcely conceivable that the name would be received through a whole country. The peasantry are more attached to ancient names, than to give them up out of compliment to a few who have returned from warfare. For it cannot be supposed, that in S. there was no name for a large stack of hay, till its inhabitants became acquainted with the military engine referred to.

Besides, it seldom happens, that any thing common and generally known, is denominated from what is rare, or has been seen only by a few of those who use the designation.

The term is allied perhaps to Teut. soeuw, soye, which signifies the ground on which a heap or pile of any kind is erected; gleba qua agger conficitur, Kilian. Hence,

To Sow, Soo, v. a. To stack, S.

SOW, s. 1. A term applied to one who makes a very dirty appearance, S.B.

Perhaps a figurative sense of the E. term. Teut. souwe, soye, however, signifies a common shore.

Barbour, xvi. 391. MS.

The sense is changed in Edit. 1620, p. 303. Saile them sar, i. e. assail.

Sow sar, or sare, seems to have been a common phrase; as it is also used by Wyntown, viii. 40. 174. but apparently in a neut. sense.

It occurs in O.E. as synon. with smert.

When he sailed in the Swin it sowed him sare; Sare it tham smerted that ferd out of France.

Minot's Poems, p. 18. V. next word. To Sow, v. n. To smart, to feel acute or tingling pain, S. gell synon.

It occurs in the same sense in Maitland Poems,
p. 201.

Scho gars me murne, I bid nocht seyn, And with sair straiks scho gars me sow.

It is a strange idea that Sibb. gives of the sense of this term. "In Wyntown it probably means sleep; sow sare, sleep for ever. Swed. sofwa, dormire."

Allied perhaps to A.S. se-on effervescere; Teut. soye, soeuwe, fervor; or Sw. swid-a to smart; Sa-ret swider, the sore smarts, Wideg. Hence, Sowing, s. The act, or effect, of piercing or gall-

Be than the auld Menet ouer schipburd slyde, Heuy, and all hys weide sowpit with seyis.

Doug. Virgil, 133. 27.

2. Metaph. in reference to grief. -Sone and selkouth sege I saw to my sycht, Swownand as he swelt wald, and sowpit in site. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, a. 10.

I hard a peteous appeill, with a pure mane, Sowlpit in sorrow, that sadly could say, ' Woes me wreche in this warld wilsum of wane!' Houlate, i. 4.

3. One is said to be sowpit, S. who is much emaciated.

Teut. sopp-en intingere; A.S. sip-a macerare;

syp, watering, moistening.

It is possible, however, that sense second may be borrowed from Fr. soupi, dull, heavy, s'assoup-ir, to grow dull; immediately allied to Lat. sop-ire, But this is radically one with Su.G. sofw-a, Isl. sof-a, dormire, and MoesG. swaif cessavit.

To SOWTH, v. n. "To try over a tune with a low whistle," Gl. Burns.

On braes when we please, then, We'll sit and sowth a tune; Syne rhyme till't, we'll time till't,

And sing't when we hae done.

Burns, iii. 157. It is evidently the same with South and Souf, sense 3.

SPAAD, s. A spade, Aberd. Dan. spaud, A.S. spad, id.

To SPACE, v. a. 1. To measure by paces, S. 2. To take long steps, to walk with a solemn air, or as one does when the mind is deeply engaged.

"The said Mr. George [Wisheart] spacit upe and down behind the hie alter mair than half an hour, his verie countenance and visage declarit the greif and alteratioun of his mind." Knox's Hist. p. 48, (erron. 52.)

Perhaps from Belg. pass-en to measure, with s prefixed; or originally the same with Isl. spiss-a, deambulare.

SPACE, s. A pace, a step including three feet, S.B.

"The biggest leauws there for felling at does not exceed one space and one half in breadth from the declivity of the brae to the margin of the water; but they extend several paces in length along the margin of it." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. p. 102. To SPACEIR, v. n. To walk.

" Of this sort I did spaceir vp and doune but sleipe, the maist part of the myrk nycht." Compl. S. p. 58.

Lat. spatior, Belg. spacier-en, id. Ital. spacci-

Quhat euer scho said, Troianis trowit not ane Doug. Virgil, 47. 6. wourd.

He may, if wyly, spae a fortune right. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 122.

2. To foretoken.

-The Harpie Celeno Spais vnto vs ane fereful takin of wo. Doug. Virgil, 80. 26.

3. To bode, to forebode.

" Spae well, and hae well;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 63. Kelly expl. it by "Eng. Hope well, and have well. That is, hope and expect good things, and it will fall out accordingly." P. 290.

My ingenious namesake is entirely mistaken, in asserting that spell "is the real word, which, in Scotland, has now taken the form of spae." Popul. Ball. ii. 27, N. He also expl. spae-man by spellman; Ibid. i. 235. It is perfectly obvious, that these are from different origins. The words allied to spell, in various dialects, all simply signified, to declare, to narrate, without the slightest reference to prophecy. But space is evidently the same with Isl. ek spae, 1 foretel, Dan. spaa-er to foretel. Alem. spach-en, when applied to the mind, primarily signifies to consider; then, to investigate; and last of all, to divine. V. Wachter. As the word originally means, to see with the bodily eye, he views this as the radical idea; referring, in confirmation of his opinion, to the scriptural designation of seer as given to a prophet, because he sees future events, in dreams and visions, as in a mirror.

Hence the Voluspa, an ancient work containing the Scandinavian mythology, received its name; from vola art, and spa, a poem or speech; or, according to others, Vola Sibylla, and spa vaticinium. Hence also Alem. spacher, Isl. spak-r, Su.G. spak, a wise man; the denomination originating from a supposed knowledge of future events.

On quhelis spakis speldit vtheris hing.

Doug. Virgil, 186. 14.
"It is the best spake in your wheel;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 47.

2. A bar (or lever) of wood.

"That na merchandis gudis be reuin nor spilt with vnressonabill stollin as with spakis." Acts Ja. III. 1466. c. 17. Ed. 1566. i. e. as being driven close together by means of wooden levers.

Teut. speecke, spaecke, vectis; also radius rotae. 3. The wooden bars, on which a dead body is carried to the grave, are called spaiks, S.

"The marquis son Adam was at his head,—the earl of Murray on the right spaik, -Sir Robert Gordon on the fourth spaik." Spalding's Troubles, i. 53.

4. Used metaph, as a personal designation.

I dreid ye spaiks of Spiritualitie Sall rew that ever I came in this cuntrie.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 207. The term is still used in a similar sense. One who has been hurtful to another by his company or counsel, is said to have been an ill spaik to him; perhaps as pretending to give support, in allusion to the bar of a wheel, or as we speak of a limb of the church, law, &c. As, however, it is perhaps as frequently pron. spoke, there may possibly be an allusion to one's being haunted by an evil spirit; Teut. spoock, a ghost, a hopgoblin.

SPAIL, s. Gawan and Gol. iii. 26. V. SPALE. To SPAIN, SPANE, SPEAN, v. a. To wean, S.

To spane a child, to wean it, A. Bor.

"Upon the said shore towards the west, lyes Ellan-Nanaun, that is the Lambes Ile, wherein all the lambes of that end of the country uses to be fed, and spained fra the yowis." Monroe's Iles, p. 38.

Germ. spen-en, Belg. speen-en, id. abducere lac, ablactare; Een kind speenen, to wean a child; Isl. spen-a, admoveo uberi; from Teut. speen, Germ. spene, Isl. spena, spine, a teat, the nipple.

Spanna, I am informed, in Gael. signifies to wean; but it is most probably of Gothic origin. Hence, Spaining-brash, s. That disorder with which children are often affected, in consequence of being weaned, S.

To SPAYN, SPAN, v. a. To grasp. -Newys that stalwart war and squar, That wont to spayn gret speris war, Swa spaynyt aris, that men mycht se Full oft the hyde leve on the tre.

Barbour, iii. 582. MS.

i. e. grasped oars. Doug. uses it in the same sense; q. to inclose in the span.

To SPAIRGE, v. a. 1. To dash; as, to spairge

2. To be spatter by dashing any liquid, S.

3. Metaph. to sully by reproach, S. An' Will's a true guid fallow's get, A name not envy spairges.

Burns, iii. 95.

Fr. asperg-er to besprinkle; whence aspergés, a holy water stick or sprinkle. Lat. sparg-o, asperg-o.

SPAIRGE, s. 1. A sprinkling; or the liquid that is sprinkled or squirted, S.

2. A dash of contumely, S.

SPAIT, SPATE, SPEAT, s. 1. A flood, an inundation, S.

-The burne on spait hurlis doun the bank, Vthir throw ane wattir brek, or spait of flude, Ryfand vp rede erd, as it war wod.

Doug. Virgil, 49. 17. I now behald, and Tybris the grete flude For grete haboundance of flude on spate wox rede. Ibid. 165. 47.

Wyntown applies the term to the universal deluge. In this chapitere rede, and se

The arke and the spate of Noe.

Cron. i. Rubr. c. 6. Mr. Macpherson is certainly right in his conjecture, that spate vii. 5. 171. should be read as spat (snot). Seuse cannot otherwise be made of the passage. For the shallowness of the river must have been removed by a spate.

The term occurs in a mode of expression analogous to the E. one, a flood of tears.

And down the water wi' speed she rins, While tears in spaits fa' fast frae her e'e. Minstrely Border, i. 174.

2. Metaph, used for any thing that hurries men away like a flood.

God proves them, who transported with this spaite Of madnesse, basely doe crouch downe before The craftsmans worke, which ought to have no more Respect, than as much mettell, timber, stone, Appointed for the basest use, or none. More's True Crucifixe, p. 91.

3. Also used metaph. for fluency of speech, S. " Eodem sensu-Cic. dixit, flumen ingenii; Juvenal, ingenii fons; nos, a speat of language." Rudd. vo. Flum.

Rudd. derives this from A.S. spett-an, spaethian, spumare. But spett-an signifies merely to spit, spuere; and the word rendered spumare is spaetl-ian. SPALD, SPAULD, SPAWL, s. 1. The shoulder.

Hence S. the spule-bane, the shoulder-blade. The remanent of the rowaris enery wicht, In popill tre branchis dycht at poynt, With spaldis nakit schene of oile anoint, Apoun there setes and coistis al atanys Thare placis hint, arrayit for the nanys.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 201. Thus we vulgarly speak of lang spauls, S. strictly referring to the limbs.

Fr. espaule, C.B. yspolde, the shoulder. L.B. spall-a armus, quasi lamella humeri. Ihre views Fr. espaule as radically allied to Su.G. spiaell, segmentum. It sometimes denotes a small portion of ground; segmentum vel portiuncula agri, a corpore suo separati; from spiael-a dividere.

"Reading the speal or spule bane" of a leg of mutton well scraped, as Sibb. observes, was "anciently a common mode of divination." It most generally prevailed in the Highlands, and is not yet extinct. After the bone is thoroughly scraped, they hold it between them and the light; and looking through it, pretend to have a representation of future events, as of the arrival of strangers, battles, &c. This species of divination the Highlanders call Sleinanachd. V. Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 198.

BLACK SPAULD, a disease of cattle, S. synon. Quarter-ill, q. v.

"Mr. J. Hog says,—that it [the sickness] is the same disease with the Black Spauld, which prevails among the young cattle in the west of Scotland, when the grasses fail, and they begin to feed on fodder and dry herbage." Prize Essays Highl. Soc. s. iii. 368.

SPALE, SPAIL, SPEAL, s. 1. A lath or thin plank used in wooden houses for filling up the interstices betwixt the beams, S.B.

3 L 2

Rudd. derives it from Teut. spalt-en, findere. But it is immediately allied to Su.G. spiaell segmentum, lamina; from spiala to cleave, whence Teut. spalt-en has been formed, and Dan. spalt-er,

2. A splinter or chip, also, a shaving of wood, S. Spales, spalls, chips, A. Bor.

Sum stikkit throw the coist with the spalis of tre Lay gaspand.— Doug. Virgil, 296. 40. V. SPAIL.

It seems uncertain whether the term does not here denote a pole or stake, referring to the shafts of spears. V. SPYLE.

He that hews above his head, may have the speal fall in his eye;" S. Prov. "He that aims at things above his power, may be ruined by his project." Kelly, p. 128.

It is thus expressed in D. Ferguson's Prov.

He that hews over hie,

The spail will fall into his eye.

It occurs in another S. Prov.; "He is not the best wright that hews maist speals." Ibid. p. 14.

It is sometimes applied to metallic substances, as denoting the splinters which fly from them, when struck.

The spalis, and the sparkis, spedely out sprang. Gawan and Gol. ii. 25.

Battle Flodden, st. 91.

Fr. spolla denotes the shavings of wood. To SPÂN, v. a. To grasp. V. SPAYN. To SPANG, v. n. 1. To leap with elastic force, to spring, S.

Sum presis thik the wyld fyre in to slyng, The arrowis flaw spangand fra euery stryng. Doug. Virgil, 318. 17.

Fan I came to him, wi' sad wound He had nae maughts to gang; But fan he saw that he was safe, Right souple cou'd he spang.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 9.

2. In an active sense, to cause to spring. -Hys swyft stedis huffis, quhare thay went, Spangit vp the bludy sparkis ouer the bent.

Doug. Virgil, 421. 15. 3. To spang o'er, metaph. to overleap, S. But when they spang o'er reason's fence,

We smart for't at our ain expence. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 386.

Rudd. derives this word from span, or Ital. spingere, violenter impellere. But he has not observed, that Isl. spenn-a, Germ. spann-en, signify, to extend; spannende, elasticity; spangen, the clasps of a book, because they extend from one side of it to another. The latter is nearly allied to the most common use of the S. word, a definite intermediate space being generally mentioned in connexion with it; as, He spang'd o'er the burn; he leaped from one side of the rivulet to the other, i. e. he included the rivulet within his leap. Wachter derives spanne, a span, in measurement, from the v.

Spang, s. 1. The act of springing with elastic force; a leap, S.

Chauc. spannishing, Fr. espanouissement, the full blow of a flower, Tyrwhitt. Ihre views the Fr. v. espanouir as allied to Su.G. spann-a to extend.

It seems to be a frequentative from Spang v. q. v. or allied to Isl. spink-a decursitare.

Quo' Jeany, I think, 'oman, ye're in the right; Set your feet ay a spar to the spinning o't.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 135. Perhaps from Germ. gesperre, straddling; or from E. spar, to close, to shut, because denoting opposition; q. using one's foot as a spar, or bar, in the way of another.

SPARE, s. 1. An opening in a gown or petticoat.

"That parte of weemens claiths, sik as of their gowne, or petticot, quhilk vnder the belt, and before is open, commonly is called the spare." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Bastardus.

He derives this from Gr. oxogov, which he there explains. But it is evidently allied to Su.G. sparr-a to open, to expand; Teut. sperr-en.

2. The slit or opening, formerly used in the forepart of breeches, S. spaiver, S.B.

SPARE, adj. 1. "Barren," Gl.

The tothir drew hym on dreigh in derne to the dure;

Hyit hym hard throu the hall to his haiknay, And sped hym on spedely, on the spare mure. Gawan and Gol. i. 9.

It might, however, signify wide, extensive; from Germ. sperr-en extendere, whence sparrweit, late patens.

2. This term is still used to denote what is lean or meagre.

A mim mou'd maiden jimp an' spare, Mistook a fit for a' her care.

Morison's Poems, p. 25.

SPARKLE, s. A spark.

SPARLING, SPIRLING, s. A smelt, S. A. Bor. It is sometimes called spurling, E. Salmo eperlanus, Linn.

"The smelt or sparling, a very rare fish, is also found in the Cree. It is found only in one other river in Scotland, viz. the Forth at Stirling." P. Minnigaff, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. vii. 54.

Fife, p. 125.

"They have a very particular scent, from whence is derived one of their English names Smelt, i. e. smell it. That of Sparling, which is used in Wales, and the north of England, is taken from the French Eperlan." Penn. Zool. iii. 265.

The etymon here given of smelt seems fanciful. For its A.S. name is the same. Seren. derives it from Su.G. smaa, smal, parvus, exilis. The Germ. name is spiering, spierling; Lat. eperlan-us.

Isl. sperling is perhaps the same. G. Andr. gives it as the name of a fish. The Su.G. name is nors, which Ihre views as derived from nor, a strait, because these small fishes crowd into narrow friths.

To SPARPALL, SPARPELL, SPERPLE, v. a. To disperse, to scatter.

Mr. Pinkerton renders this wise; probably viewing it as allied to Alem. spach-en. V. SPAE. It might denote both freedom and latitude of discourse, as expl. by what follows; from Germ. spaun-en, span-en, Su.G. spann-a, to extend. But it seems rather allied to A.S. spaen-an, speon-an, span-ian, to intice, to allure, to persuade; speonde, alluring, inticing; Somner. Thus to speik speanlie, may be, to speak persuasively. It may, however, signify boldly; as speonde is also rendered, "provoking, stirring up.'

The term speanle occurs ibid. st. 11.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 136.

From the use of this aperture, the term might seem derived from the v. spere, speer, to inquire. Whatever be the origin, it is apparently the same with Spire, q. v.

SPEICE, s. Pride.

In mekle speice is part of vanity.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 96.

2. To gallop, Loth. V. SPYN.

SPENS, Spence, s. 1. A larder, the place where provisions are kept, S. A. Bor.

-Thair herboury was tane, Intill a spence, wher vittell was plenty. Baith cheis and butter on lang skelfs richt hie. Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 149.

Fr. despence, id. Skinner gives this as an E. word; and it is used by Chaucer in sense 1.

2. The interior apartment of a country-house, although not appropriated as a larder; ben-house, synon. It bears this sense, Lanarks.

3. The place where the family sit and eat, S.B. "The spence, or dispensary, in which the family sit and eat, is commonly of the length of the distance between the gable-end, on the partition-wall against which the fire burns, and the first couple, at which commences the partition called the hallan, which divides the fire-place from the door." Abbrev. from Fr. despensier.

To SPERE, Speir, Spyre, v. n. 1. To trace. or search out, applied to a way.

Off rapys a leddre to me mad I; And thar with our the wall slaid I. A strayt roid, that I sperit had, In till the crage, syne down I went.

Barbour, x. 559. MS.

Sometimes the prep. to is joined.

How now, Panthus, quhat tything do ye bring? In quhat estate is sanctuarie, and haly geir? To quality within fortres sall we spere?

Doug. Virgil, 49. 55.

Quam prendimus arcem? Virg.

This is very nearly allied to the original sense of the v. A.S. spyr-ian "investigare,—explorare; to search out by the track or trace; Lanc. to spirre;" Somner. Germ. spur-en, to trace, to spy the footsteps, Belg. speur-en, Su.G. spoer-ia, Dan. sporger; from A.S. Isl. Alem. spor, a footstep, a track or tread, Germ. spur, Belg. speur, id. Hence Germ. spurhund, a dog that follows the tract, or by the scent.

In this sense spire is used by R. Brunne, p. 112. In Huntingtonschire the kyng in that forest A moneth lay, to spire for wod & wilde beste.

2. To investigate, to make diligent inquiry, to use all means of discovery.

And quhen he hard sa blaw and cry, He had wondir quhat it mycht be; And on sic maner spyryt he, That knew that it wes the king:

Barbour, iii. 486.

In Edit. 1620, spyed. But spyryt is the reading of MS.

"To try, search, and speir out all excommunicates, practisand and uthers Papists quhatsumever within oure boundis and schyres quhair we keep residence." Band of Maintenance, Collect. of Confessions, ii. 111.

Spire is also used in this sense by R. Brunne, p.

He spired as he gede, who did suilk trespas, Brak his pes with dede, tille he in Scotland was. In this sense some understand the following passage in Chaucer.

- He so long had ridden and gone,. That he fond in a privee wone The contree of Faerie.

Wherein he soughte North and South,
And oft he spirid with his mouth,
In many a forest wilde,
For in that contree n'as ther non,
That to him dorst ride or gon,
Neither wif ue childe.

Sir Thopas, v. 13733.

This is the reading in Urry's Edit. In others it is spied. Mr. Tyrwhitt observes; "The emendation is probable enough; as the expression of spying with the mouth seems to be too extravagantly absurd even for this composition." N.

There is, however, a difficulty which both these learned writers have overlooked. How could Thopas spere with his mouth, in a country in which he found no inhabitant? Urry does not expl. spirid as Tyrwhitt does. For he views it as signifying, blowed. V. his Gl.

3. To ask, to inquire, S.

My fader exhortis vs to turn agane our fludis To Delos, and Appollois ansuere spere.

Doug. Virgil, 72. 19.

Abp. Hamiltoun uses this word, in a passage in which he finds an easy way of avoiding the force of a pretty strong objection to the invocation of departed saints.

"And quhairto will thou, O christin man, be sa curious, as to speir gif the sanctis of heuin kennis our prayars or na? Put away that vaine curiositie, & beleif as the haly catholyk kirk of God beleiffis, quhilk, as S. Paule sais, is the house of God, the fundament and pillar of veritie." Catechisme, Fol. 197. b.

Speir at is commonly used in this sense, S. Of this progeny gyf yhe will mare, Yhe spere at othir forthirmare.

Wyntown, viii. 7. 96.

It is also used actively.

"Mony ane spears the gate they ken fu' well;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 25.

A.S. spyr-ian also signifies to inquire; Isl. spyr-ia, id. It has the same form in which our v. is frequently used; Ad spyria han ad, Mark ix. 32. To speir at him. Dict. Run. Jon. spurull, avidus quaerendi.

We also say to speir after, S. to inquire for; A.S. spyrian aefter; A. Bor. to sparre, speir, or spurre.

Spyrre aftyr occurs in a poem viewed by Sibb. as of Scottish, "or at least of North country, extraction."

And yf he spyrre aftyr me,

Say, thou sawe me wyth non eye.

Chron. S. P. i. 147.

To spier for, is used in the same sense, especially as denoting an inquiry concerning one's welfare.

When ye gae hame to my sister,
She'll speer for her brother John:—
Ye'll say, ye left him in Kirkland fair,
The green grass growin aboon.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 62. I spier'd for my cousin, fu' couthy and sweet, Gin she had recover'd her hearin.

Burns, iv. 250. V. Spure.

Speryng, s. Information in consequence of inquiry.

Tharfor he thocht to wyrk with slycht;
And lay still in the castell than,
Till he got speryng that a man
Off Carrik, that wes sley and wycht,— Wes to the King Robert maist prine.

Barbour, v. 490.

Teut. speuringhe, indagatio, investigatio.

SPERE, s. A small hole in the wall of a house. V. Speere, and Spire, s.

SPERE, SPEIR, s. A sphere.

Jupiter from his hie spere adoun
Blent on the saleryle seyis, and each tharby.

p. 16.
Brompton says, that the Norwegians carried the use of that kind of axe, which in E. is called sparth, into Ireland. Ap. Du Cange.

SPETIT, part. pa. "Pierced, as with a spit," Rudd.

Syne ane Halys vnto the corpis dede
In company he eikit in that stede,
And Phegeas down brittynnys in the feild,
Spetit throw out the body and the scheild.
Doug. Virgil, 305. 39.

But although spete is used by Doug. for a spit, this is not to be viewed as the origin. For it is only a secondary sense. The primary idea is that expressed by Su.G. spets, any thing sharp-pointed; whence spiuts, a spear, a lance. Spets itself is used in this sense; sometimes softened into spes, spis; Franc. spiet, Isl. spiot, Mod. Sax. spet, speet, Germ. spitze, spiess; Ital. spiedo, hasta, lancea; and most probably, spada, a sword. Hence Su.G. spisseri hastiludium, a just or tournament. Thus spetit properly signifies pierced, with a sharp instrument, without restriction to one of any particular description. Teut. spet-en, fodicare.

SPEWEN, s. Spavin.

This is certainly the meaning of the term in the following verse;

Bock-blood, and Benshaw, spewen in the spald.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. V. CLEIKS. i. e. Spavin in the shoulder.

SPICE, s. 1. This term is appropriated to pepper, S.

The yungest sister to her butrie hyed,

And brocht furth nuts and peis instead of spyce. Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 146.

Here, however, it may denote spiceries in gene-

"It is now perceived, by the leaves and sheets of that book [the Scots Common-Prayer Book] which are given out athort the shops of Edinburgh, to cover spice and tobacco, one edition at least was destroyed." Baillie's Lett. i. 14.

2. Metaph. applied to pride, S. V. Speice. Hence,

Spicy, adj. Proud; testy, S. SPYLE, s. A stake, a palisado.

Eschame ye not, Phrigianis, that twyis tak is, To be inclusit amyd ane fald of stakis? And be asseguit agane sa oft syis, Wyth akin spylis and dykis on sic wys?

Doug. Virgil, 298. 53. Sibb. views this as a variation of pile. But it seems to be the same with Spale, spail, q. v. From Su.G. spiaele, lamina lignea, Ihre deduces L.B. spalliera, Fr. espalier, the lath to which a vine is fixed.

SPILGIE, s. Long and slender, Ang. Also used as a s., a tall meagre person; a lang spilgie.

Long limbs are called spilgies.

Allied perhaps to Teut. spil, a spindle, as nearly of the same sense with spindle-shanked; spill-en, attenuare; or Su.G. spial-a, spialk-a, to divide, from spiaell lamina; q. something which, from its meagreness, seems to be only the half of what it ought to be.

To SPILL, SPYLL, v. a. 1. To destroy, in whatever way; to spoil, to lay waste, S. In this sense it frequently occurs in E.

2. To kill.

-Quham Turnus lansand lichtly ouer the landis, With spere in hand persewis for to spyll.

Doug. Virgil, 297. 17.

And at ane hie balk teyt vp sche has With ane loupe knot ane stark corde or ane lace, Quharewith hir self sche spilt with schameful

Ibid. 432. 47.

A.S. spyll-an not only signifies consumere, per-Thaer spilde; Ibi interfecit, dere, but interficere. Chron. Sax. 204. 16.

3. To defile, to deflower.

Both wiffis, wedowis, that tuk all at thair will, Nounys, madyns, quham thai likit to spill.

Wallace, i. 164. MS.

A.S. spill-an corrumpere, vitiare, Su.G. spill-a violare; Isl. spille, corrumpo, spilte corrupi. To Spill, Spille, v. n. 1. To perish, to go to wreck.

"Em," he seyd, "Y spille, Of lond keep Y na mare." God in Trinité,

No lat thou me nought spille. Sir Tristrem, p. 74. 88.

Sauf vs lattir wardis of Troy that we ne spill, Leuyng of Grekis and of the fers Achill.

Doug. $Virgil_{\tau}$ 70. 13.

It is used by Chaucer in the same sense.

- Veraily him thought that he shuld spille. Man of Lawes T. 5007.

2. To corrupt, to putrify.

Meat is said to spill, when it begins to become putrid, S.

3. To be in a fretted or galled state; as denoting the effect of heat, of friction, or of violent motion, on any part of the body, S.

To SPYN, v. n. To run, to glide, S. Vnder thy gard to schip we vs addres, Ouer spannand many swelland seyis salt.

Doug. Virgil, 72. 46.

" By a metaphor taken from spinning, as swepit & raik;" Rudd. Spin, E. and S., is indeed used with respect to velocity of motion. But it denotes that which is of a rotatory kind. This term seems properly to signify extending, from A.S. spann-an extendere, to which spend, Loth., seems allied, as denoting the quick motion of a horse.

Or it may be allied to Su.G. spaenn-a, to measure with the hand, which might seem to agree with permensi.

Nos tumidum sub te permensi classibus aequor.

But it must be acknowledged that the usual sense of the v. Spynner gives probability to Rudd. etymon. To SPYNNER, T. n. "To run or fly swiftly, S."

Ane vthir part syne younder mycht thou se The heirdys of hartis wyth thare hedis hie Ouer spynner and wyth swyft cours the plane Doug. Virgil, 105. 14. vale.

The term, as commonly used, signifies, to ascendin a spiral form, S.B. It therefore seems formed from spin, the idea being borrowed from the motion of the distaff.

SPYNDILL, adj. Thin, slender.

And to the rude scho maid ane vow, ' For I sall hit thy spyndill schyn.'

Maitland Poems, p. 201.

q. resembling a spindle, like E. spindle-shanked. SPYNDLE, SPINDLE, s. A certain quantity of yarn, including six hanks; each hank consisting of six heers, each heer of two cuts, each cut of 120 threads, the legal length of the thread being the circumference of the reel, S. pron. q.

spynle. "The spinners are paid at the rate of 1s. per spyndle, and the agents or factors employed to give out the flax, and take in the yarn, have 2d. per spyndle for their trouble." P. Thurso, Caithn. Sta-tist. Acc. xx. 517.

"It is a common and an easy task, for one of these two-handed females, to spin three spindles in the week; which, at the rate of 1s. 3d. the spindle, comes to 3s. 9d." P. Ecclesgreig, Kincard. Ibid. xi. 114.

This is most frequently spelled, as if it were the same with spindle. But although both are formed from the v. Spin, they seem quite different. Spyndle is perhaps q. spin-del, from A.S. spinn-an, and del pars, portio, q. a certain portion of labour in spinning.

Vol. II.

SPYNIST, part. pa.

Off ferliful fyne favour war thair faces meik, All full of flurist fairheid, as flouris in June,-New upspred upon spray as new spynist rose. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 45.

" Spynist (rose), prickly. Fr. spineux," Gl. Sibb. But it seems to signify, fully spread, q. spanyst. V. Spanys.

SPINK, s. 1. The Maiden pink, S. Dianthus deltoides, Linn.

2. Often used to denote pinks in general, S. Countless spinks an' daisies springin, Gaily deckt ilk vale an' hill.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 99.

SPINKIE, s. A dram, a glass of ardent spirits,

SPINKIE, adj. Slender, and at the same time active, Fife.

Su.G. spinkog, id. gracilis; Ihre. Some derive the word from spinde, a spider.

SPINTIE, adj. Lean, thin, lank, Loth.

This seems originally the same with the preceding. SPIRE, s. 1. " The spire in a cottage, is properly the stem or leg of an curth-fast couple, reaching from the floor to the top of the wall, partly inserted in, and partly standing out of, the wall." Gl. Jamieson's Popular Ball.

2. A wall between the fire and the door, with a seat on it, S.B.; hallan, synon.

I'se no seek near the fire; Let me but rest my weary banes, Behind backs at the spire.

Song, Ross's Helenore, p. 142.

" From the circumstance of the partition beginning at the couple-leg, or spire, the name has been transferred from the wooden post-that supports the pillar, and commences the partition, to the partition itself." Gl. Popular Ball. ubi sup.

This is also called the spire wa'. This word in Chesh. signifies, the chimney-post, Ray. C.B. yspyr, id. Chaucer uses spire for a stake.

A different etymon has been given, from Spere, to inquire. V. Spere, s. To SPIRE, v. n. To wither, or cause to fade. Thus heat, or a strong wind, is said to spire the grass, Loth. Hence,

SPIRY, adj. Warm, parching.

It is said to be a spiry day, when the drought is very strong, Loth.

I know no origin, unless it be a metaph, use of A.S. spyr-ian, to search, in the same sense in which we speak of a searching wind.

SPIRLING, s. A smelt. V. Sparling.

SPIRLING, s. Contention, a broil, Perths. allied perhaps to Germ. sperr-en to oppose, to SPITALL, Barbour, ii. 420. Leg. pitall, as in MS. V. PETTAIL.

To SPITE, v. a. To provoke.

"Rather spill your jest, than spite your friend;"

S. Prov. Kelly, p. 283.
SPITTER, s. A very slight shower; whence the imp. v. It's spitterin, i. e. a few drops of rain are falling, S. from spit spuere.

SPLECHRIE, s. Furniture of any kind; but most generally, used to denote the clothes and furniture provided by a woman, in her single state, or brought by her to the house of her husband, when married, S.

It is also used for the executory of a defunct person, or the moveable goods in his house left by him to his heirs, S.

This is perhaps merely a corr. of Lat. supellex, or supellectilis, the terms used by civilians to denote all the household-goods which are daily used by a family. V. Alexand. ab Alexand. Genial. Dies, Lib. i. c. 19.

Or shall we view it as more immediately allied to Isl. plagg supellex? G. Andr. p. 192. It is sometimes pron. sprechrie; which might indicate affinity to Ir. spre, Gael. spre, spreidh, a marriage portion or dowry, literally cattle; because anciently this was always given in cattle. This, however, may be radically a different word. V. Spraygherie and SPLENDRIS, s. pl. Splinters. Thair speris in splendris sprent,

On scheldis schonkit and schent.

Gawan and Gal. ii. 24. Speris full sone all into splendrys sprang. Wallace, ix. 918. MS.

Belg. splenters, Dan. splinde, Su.G. splinta, id. splint-a, Dan. splint-er, to splinter; from Isl. splita, to tear.

SPLENTIS, s. pl. Leg-splents, a sort of inferior greaves, or armour for the legs; so denominated from their being applied as splints.

" - Vthers simpillar of x pund of rent, or fyftie pundis in gudis, haue hat, gorget,-breist plate, pans, and leg splentis at the leist, or gif him lykis better." Acts Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566.

These were in like manner used for the arms. "A defence for the arms, called splints, constituted part of the suit denominated an almaine ryvett." Grose's Milit. Antiq. ii. 252. 253. Expl. " harness or armour for the arms;" Philips's New World of Words.

SPLEUCHAN, s. "Gael. a tobacco-pouch;" GI. Sibb. S.

SPLIT-NEW, adj. A term applied to what has never been used or worn, S. span-new, spick and span, E.

"In a word, they had, as it were, a split-new systeme of government, to temper and establish." Account Persecution of the [Episcopalian] Church in Scotland, p. 32.

Germ. splitter-neu, id. q. as new as a splinter or chip from the block. The Germ. term, of the composition of which there can be no reasonable doubt, although not observed by the learned Ihre, affords a strong collateral confirmation of the etymon which he has given of E. span-new, and its Su.G. synon.

sping spaangande ny, Isl. spanosa, span ny-r. He deduces them all from Su.G. spinga assula, segmentum ligni tenuius, from spaan, id. V. Spon. Thus split, and span, equally denote a splinter or chip.

Lye (Addit. to Jun. Etym.) traces spick to spike, a nail. Johnson adopts the idea. But it rests on the correlative idea, that span is from Germ. spannen, to extend; both being supposed to refer to the work of a fuller, in stretching cloth on the tenterhooks. Perhaps spick and span may be a corr. of the Su.G. reduplication, sping spuangande.

SPLORE, s. " A frolic, a noise, a riot;" Gl.

Burns.

Lament him, a' ye rantin core, Wha dearly like a random-splore, Nae mair he'll join the merry roar.

Burns, iii. 215.

Perhaps from Ital. esplor-are, to explore, q. the act of exploring, or a party engaged in searching out something for sport. It seems nearly synon. with Ploy, q. v.
To SPLUNT, v. n. "To court," S.A.

The lovers comin there to splunt .-Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 9.

SPOYN, s. A spoon.

His fostyr modyr lowed him our the laiff, Did mylk to warme, his liff giff scho mycht saiff; And with a spoyn gret kyndnes to him kyth. Wallace, ii. 271. MS.

Spayn erroneously, Perth Edit.

SPON, s. Shavings of wood.

Tristrem was in toun;

In boure Ysonde was don;

Bi water he sent adoun

Light linden spon.

Sir Tristrem, p. 115.

i. e. chips or shavings of the linden tree.

A.S. spon assula, "a chip or splenter of wood;" Somner. Teut. spaen, Germ. span, Su.G. spaan, (pron. spon), Isl. spann, id. Hence Su.G. laerospaan, tyrocinium, the rudiments, that in which one first exercises himself; "a mode of speaking," says Ihre, "adopted, when it was common to write on shavings or chips of wood, the use of paper either not being discovered, or very infrequent." I need scarcely add, that this throws light on the circumstance mentioned in the narration of our celebrated Thomas of Ercildoun.

SPONK, s. Spark of fire, &c. V. Spunk.

SPONSIBLE, adj. Capable of being admitted as a surety, or of discharging an obligation, S.

like E. responsible. " Mr. Archer, his wife, and five small children, the eldest not ten years of age, were carried to Kirkcaldy prison. Next day, the provost of the town hearing of this severity, liberate the mother and the infants; yet not till caution was found, by two sponsible persons, she should present herself to the sheriff when called, under the penalty of 2000 merks." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 284.

Lat. spond-eo, spons-um, to undertake, to be surety, for another; whence spons-or, a surety.

SPOOTRAGH, s. Drink of any kind, Loth.

Gael. sput, a word of contempt for bad drink. To SPORNE, v. n.

Oft in Romans I reid,

"Airly sporne, lait speid."

Gawan and Gol. iii. 18.

Mr. Pinkerton leaves this word for explanation. But there seems little difficulty. It certainly means, to stumble; as stumbling in the beginning of a journey, or of any undertaking, has been generally accounted a bad omen.

Chaucer uses the term, as signifying to strike the foot against any thing.

The miller sporned at a ston,

And doun he fell backward.

Reves T. v. 4279.

This, as Rudd. observes, notwithstanding the obliquity, is perhaps from A.S. spraec, Belg. spraeck, speech, discourse, Germ. sprech-en, Su.G. spraek-a, to speak, to converse. The A.S. term is itself used nearly with as great latitude. For it also signifies, strife, controversy, plea; hence sprec, the forum, or place of public controversy; all from the idea of speaking, as mall, the place of meeting, from Su.G. mael-a, loqui, maele vox, sermo. It must be observed, however, that Su.G. sprak-a signifies strepere. It is properly used as to the fire, 3 M 2

Rudd, thinks that it may be deduced from spray, a twig, q. sprayings, as the Lat. call such garments virgata, Virg. 8. 66. virgata sagula, i. e. tartan plaids. Propert. virgutae braccae, i. e. tartan trews.

But it is evidently from A.S. spraeng-an, to sprinkle, Teut. spreng-en, id.; also, variare, variegare; Su.G. spreng-a conspergere, whence Ihre derives isprengd, variegatus, maculis conspersus. Alem. kispranct, aspersus, variegatus. Hence also O.E. sprene, spreyne, conspergere; sprant, sprent, spreyned, conspersus. V. Lye, Addit. Jun. Etym. vo. Sprenc. Also vo. Sprinkle, it is observed that Belg. sprenkel-en signifies variegare; and Dan. sprinckled, guttatus, variegatus.

According to the most simple form of dyeing, this diversity of colours is produced by sprinkling. SPRAING'D, SPRAINGIT, part. adj. Striped, streaked, S. V. the s.

It seems doubtful, whether this signifies, did spring, or did split. If the latter, allied to Su.G. spraenga, diffindere; part. spraengd; a derivative from spring-a salire. It may be observed, however, that Ihre gives the following as one sense of spring-a itself. Dicitur etiam springa de rebus, quae subita vi dissiliunt.

5. The clasp of iron that fastens down the lid of a chest or trunk, entering an aperture through which the lock passes, S.

"In December this year a key and sprent band were added to the Locksmith's essay." Transact. Antiq. Soc. Edin. p. 174. V. STENT, s. 2.

This is evidently the same with Su.G. sprint, a bolt, bar, or any thing that shuts in, to prevent separation. Ihre mentions splint as the same; and expl. it as properly denoting the nail which joins the axle of a carriage to the beam. He derives splint from split, separation, disjunction. But as the signification of the word is directly the reverse, it is more natural to view splint as corr. from sprint, and the latter as a derivative from spring-a, to spring; especially as it appears from the use of the part., that S. sprent has undoubtedly this origin. SPRETE, s. Spirit.

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 17.

Thus denominated, either from its exhilarating influence, or because it is customary to dance to a tune of this description; Germ. spring-cn salire, saltare.

SPRINGALD, s. A youth, or stripling. Seis thou yone lusty springald or yonkere, That lenys hym apoun his hedeles spere. Doag. Virgil, 192. 30.

Chaucer, springold, Spenser, springal; from spring, germinare, q. viri germen vel surculus; Lye Addit. Jun. Etym.

SPRINGALD, SPRYNGALD, s. 1. An ancient warlike engine, supposed to have resembled the cross-bow in its construction, used for shooting large arrows, pieces of iron, &c.

He gert engynys, and cranys, ma, And purwayit gret fyr alsua; Spryngaldis, and schot, on ser maneris, That to defend castell afferis, He purwayit in till full gret wane.

Barbour, xvii. 247.

This, in Edit. 1620, is altered to fyre-galdes. Hence spryngald gaynyhè, the shot of a large cross-bow.

Willame of Dowglas thare wes syne

Wyntown, viii. 37. 59.

This, in Scotichron. ii. 331., is telo albalastri. Godscroft, when giving an account of the same fact, says; "He returned to the siege of Saint Johnstoun, where (as he was ever forward) he was hurt in the leg with the shot of a crosbow going to the Scalade." Hist. Dougl. p. 72.

2. Improperly used, as denoting the materials thrown from this engine.

Stanys and spryngaldis that cast out so fast, And gaddys of irne, maid mony goym agast. Wallace, viii. 776. MS.

In Edit. 1648, it is changed to, "Stones of spring-holds.

There can be no doubt that this term is immediately from Fr. espringalle, "an ancient engin of warre, whereout stones, pieces of iron, and great arrowes were shot at the wals of a beleagured towne, and the defenders thereof;" Cotgr.—Froissartes, Vol. i. cap. 144. Et fit le chastel asseoir droit sur le ville, du costé de la mer, et le fit bien pourvoir de Pringalles, de bombardes, d'arcs et d'autres instrumens. Ubi legendum Espringalles, ut cap. seq. et 191. Springaldos, balistas, arcus, sagittas, ingenia, et alias hujusmodi armaturas, pro munitione castrorum et villarum.

Springolds is used in the same sense by Chaucer, Rom. Rose, v. 4191.

The origin is uncertain. It seems to have been written, in a more early period, springardus, springarda. V. Du Cange, vo. Spingarda. This learned writer, in explaining the word Muschetta, says; Ut a falconibus venaticis machinas tormentarias Falcones et Falconia appellarunt; ita et muschetas, quo nomine dicuntur sparvarii masculi, vulgo mouchets: Germanis vero Sprintz, unde Springalles, et Espringales, ejusmodi machinae, quibus emitti muschetas, innuit Guignevilla.

Grose has observed, to the same purpose, that "the espringal was calculated for throwing large darts, called muchettae; sometimes, instead of feathers, winged with brass; these darts were also called viretons, from their whirling about in the air." Milit. Antiq. i. 382.

The idea mentioned by Du Cange, is at least highly probable; that, as some kinds of artillery were called Falcons, from the birds of prey of this name, that of Muschetta was borrowed from the Fr. designation of the Sparrow-hawk. It has been suggested to me by a friend, not less distinguished by his learning than by his rank, that here perhaps we have the origin of the E. term musket, as denoting one species of fire-arms. At first it denoted what was thrown from an engine; and by a common metonymy, the term may have been transferred from the effect to the cause. We have a similar change in the use of the very term under consideration: for we have seen that spryngalds is sometimes used to denote the materials thrown from the engine of this name.

It seems most probable, that the spryngald has been denominated from its elastic force, as throwing out missile weapons with a spring; especially as Germ. spreng-en, a v. formed from spring-en saltare, is used in relation to military operations, signifying, to spring a mine, to blow up, pulvere pyrio evertere. To SPRINKIL, SPRYNKIL, v. n. To move with velocity and unsteadiness, or in an undulatory way.

Al thocht scho wreil, and sprynkil, bend and skip,

Rudd. expl. sprinkilland, "gliding swiftly with a tremulous motion of their tails; Scot. Bor. call it spartling."

Either a deriv. from Teut. sprenghen salire; or allied to sprenckel-en, in the sense of variegare, because of the inconstant motion referred to. Spartle is evidently synon. with Teut. spertel-en, agitare sive motare manus pedesque; et palpitare.

SPUNG, s. 1. A purse; properly, one which closes with a spring, S.

In this sense Lord Hailes is inclined to understand the word as used, Banuatyne Poems, p. 160.

Anc pepper-polk maid of a pedell,

2. A fob or breeches pocket, S.

This man may beet the poet bare and clung, That rarely has a shilling in his spung.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 353.

"In Scotland the word spung is still used for a fob." Bannatyne Poems, Note, p. 294.

This is radically a very ancient word; being evidently from MoesG. pugg, apparently pron. like A.S. Su.G. pung, a purse, a pouch. Purses of old were generally worn before; as the watch-pocket is in our time.

What if this should be the origin of the E. v. spunge, rendered, "to suck in as a sponge, to gain by mean arts," Johns.? Thus its proper sense would be, to empty one's purse. V. the v. To Spung, v. a. To pick one's pocket, S.

Another set, of deeper dye, Will try your purse to catch; And, if you be not very sly, They'll spung you o' your watch.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 94.

SPUNK, SPUNKE, SPONK, s. 1. A spark of fire, or small portion of ignited matter, S.

Of the fals fire of purgatorie, Is nocht left in ane sponke.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 17. "The coolness of the good old General, and diligence of the preachers, did shortly cast water on this spunk, beginning most untimeously to smoke." Baillie's Lett. i. 210.

Sibb. derives it from Sw. spinga, segmentum ligni tenuius. But its origin undoubtedly is Teut. vonck, id. scintilla, strictura; Kilian. Germ. funck, funk, scintilla, igniculus, Wachter: P and F being often interchanged, and S prefixed in some Goth. dialects, although wanting in others. Both Wachter and Ihre derive these terms from MoesG. fon fire; as in Germ. K is often used as a termination forming a diminutive. V. Wachter, Proleg. s. vi. also before Letter K.

2. A very small fire is called a spunk of fire, S. Gl. Sibb.

-We'll light a spunk, and, ev'ry skin, We'll rin them aff in fusion

Like oil, some day.

Burns, iii. 67. I see thee shiverin, wrinklet, auld, Cour owre a spunk that dies wi' cauld. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 18.

3. A match, a bit of wood, the ends of which are dipt in sulphur, S. Gl. Sibb. Tinder, Gl.

" Sponk, a word in Edinburgh which denotes a match, or any thing dipt in sulphur that takes fire: as, Any sponks will ye buy?" Johns.

This is the only sense in which it is allied to the E. term spunk, expl. "rotten wood, touch-wood;"

Teut. voncke, any thing which easily catches fire; roncke-hout, a match, q. spark-wood.

4. Life, spirit, vivacity. One is said to have agreat deal of spunk, who possesses much liveliness, S.

The term is used indeed in a variety of senses, the same as those in which E. spirit occurs. It denotes activity, mettle; sometimes, laudable elevation of spirit, as opposed to meanness; also, quickness of temper, that sort of irritability which will not brook an insult, S.

- 5. Used as a personal designation, denoting quality. A mere spunk, a lively creature; especially applied to one who has more spirit than bodily strength, or appearance of it, S.
- 6. A small portion of any principle of action, or intelligence, S as containing an allusion to a spark hid among ashes. Thus we say of a dying person, "He has the spunk of life, and that is all," S.

And loe, while ev'n his lifes last spunke is spent, The temples vaile is to the bottome rent.

More's True Crucifixe, p. 56. And gif this Sait of Senetours gang doun, The spunk of justice in this regioun. I wait not how this realme sall rewlit be.

7. A very slender ground or occasion.

"Be this slauchter thir two pepyll that was so lang confiderat togidder fra the tyme of Fergus the first kyng of Scottis to thir dayis ay risyng vnder ane blude, amite and kyndnes, grew in maist hatrent, aganis otheris for ane sponk of small occasioun of vnkindnes, throw quhilk nane of thame apperit to ceis fra vter exterminioun of other." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 6.

Nulla, aut levi admodum occasione: Boeth. To Spunk out, v. n. To be gradually brought to

This phrase is used as to any thing, kept secret for a time, which at length comes to be known, as it were insensibly, by whispers or insinuations. It contains an obvious allusion to a spark, at first hid among ashes, which, being fanned by the air, begins to shew itself. Teut. vonck-en, scintillare.

Spunkie, s. 1. The name vulgarly given to Will i' the wisp, or an ignis fatuus, S. evidently from its luminous appearance.

Merkand the way quhidder that we suld spure.

Doug. Virgil, 62. 10. Rudd. is evidently mistaken. For it has the sense of A.S. spur-ian, spyr-ian, investigare, explorare. Signantemque vias, Virg. Nolit ille ullam semitam unquam relinquere, aer he gehede thaet he hwile acfter spyrede; priusquam ille deprehenderet quod ille prius insectatus est. Boet. ap. Lye. V. SPERE.

SPURGYT, pret. Sprung, spread itself.

Fra a Sotheroune he smat off the rycht hand.— Than fra the stowmpe the blud out spurgyt fast, In Wallace face aboundandlye can out cast.

Wallace, vi. 164. MS.

This seems from the same source with S. Sparge,

SPUR-HAWK, s. The Sparrow-hawk, Loth. Falco nisus, Linn.

Spurre-hoeg, Brunnich; Dan. spurve-hoeg, id. SPURTILL, s. 1. A wooden or iron spattle, for turning bread, is called a spirtle, Ang. a bread spaad, i. e. spade, Aberd.

Ane spurtill braid, and ane elwand.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 159. "Flat iron for turning cakes," Lord Hailes. Note, p. 292. The epithet braid confirms this definition.

Perhaps it is used in the same sense in the following passage.

"For the Priest, said he, whose dewtie and office it is to pray for the pepill, standis up one Sonday, and cryis, ' Anc hes tint a spurtill; thair is a flaill stoun beyoind the burne; the Gudwyif of the uther syid of the gait hes tint a horne spone; Godis malesoun and myne I give to thame that knawis of this geir, and restoiris it not." Knox's Hist. p. 14.

The Eng. Editor, not understanding the term, has substituted spindle, Ed. 1644. p. 17.

2. A circular stick with which pottage, broth, &c. are stirred, when boiling, S. a theevil, S.B.

It's but a parridge spurtle My minnie sent to me.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 234.

Apparently from A.S. sprytle assula, a splinter or slice of wood. This properly applies to the term in sense 1., which seems the original one. Sibb.

however, refers to Teut. spatel, spatula. SQUAD, SQUADE, s. 1. A squadron of armed men, S.

"The same day, July 31st, the council order out a squade of the guards to bring in Mr. William Weir, indulged Minister at West-calder, Prisoner, to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh." Wodrow's Hist. i. 360.

2. A party, a considerable number of men convened for whatever purpose, S.

Teut. ghe-swade, cohors, turma, agmen; Kilian. To SQUATTER, v. n. To flutter in water, as a wild duck, &c., S. V. SWATTER. To SQUATTLE, v. n. "To sprawl," Gl. Burns. Swith, in some beggar's haffet squattle;
There ye may creep, and sprawl, and sprattle,
Wi' ither kindred, jumpin cattle.

Burns, iii. 229.

Perhaps it rather signifies, to lie squat, as formed from the E. adj.

Su.G. squaett-a, liquida effundere.

SQUIRBILE, SQURBUILE, adj. Ingenious.
Seven foot of ground, clay-flour, clay-wall,
Serve both for chamber, and for hall
To Master Mill, whose squrbuile brain

Could ten Escurialls well containe.

"A French word adopted into the old Scottish language, and used in the northern counties to signific an ingenuous artist who understands every science." Cant's Hist. Perth, i. 138. N.

I know not what term is referred to, if it be not escarbillat, fantastical, humorous.

To SQUISHE, v. a.

Suppois I war ane ald yaid aver,

Schott furth our cleuchs to squishe the clevir,—I wald at Youl be housit and stald.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 114.

This seems synon. with E. squash, q. to keep down the clover by cropping it. Squash is from the same fountain with quash; A.S. cwys-an, to press. Perhaps Su.G. ques-a, quis-a, to wound, and Alem. quezz-en, allidere, are allied.

S. sweesh signifies to beat. But this seems a corr.

of E. switch.

To SQUISS, v. a. To beat up. A squissed egg, apparently, one that is beaten up, as for a pudding.

"My heart within me is so tossed to & fro, that it is come like a squissed egge, whose yolke is mingled with its white." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 701.

Fr. escoussée shaken, escousse a shaking, from escourre, to beat, to shake. Or, according to last part of the preceding etymon.

SRAL, s. Perhaps an error in copying. Stones of sral they strenkel and strewe.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 20.

STAB, s. A stake. V. STOB.

STAB AND STOW, adv. Completely, entirely; synon. stick and stow, S.

The hostler then, without further delay,
Directed Wallace where the Suthron lay;
Who set their lodgings all in a fair low
About their ears, and burnt them stab and stow.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 259.

Stab is used in the sense of stake, as expl. above. Stow may be synon. with Isl. stoo, Su.G. sto, A.S. stow, a place, a mansion; from Su.G. stau stare. Thus, the phrase stab and stow may signify, not merely the burning of the stakes used in erecting a house, but the total destruction of the mansion or place itself.

Or it may be the same with Su.G. stuf, the remaining part of any thing cut off. Thus stubbe, corresponding to our stab, signifies a stake or the trunk of a tree; stuf, the remaining part of the stock with the roots, Isl. stofn; from stufw-a amputare. V. Ihre, vo. Stufwa, p. 805. The S. use Vol. II.

STABLE, s. "Seems station, where the hunters placed themselves, to kill the animals, which were driven in by the attendants;" Gl. Wynt.

The stable, and the set is sete,

Hym-self wyth bow, and wyth werslete, Fra slak til hyll, oure holme and hycht,

He trawalyd all day. Wyntown, vi. 16. 15. Stablestand, i. e. stabilis statio, vel potius stans in stabulo; hoc est, in loco ad stationem composito. Spelm. Gl. in vo.

"Stable stande is, when a man is found in any forrest at his standing, with a crosse bowe bent, ready to shoote at any deere, or, with a long bow, or els, standing close by a tree with greyhounds in his lease, ready to let slip, this is called by the auncient Forresters Staple stand." Manwood's Forrest Laws, ch. 18. s. 9.

To STACKER, STAKKER, STACHER, v. n. To stagger. It is now pron. in the last mode, S.

Thair stedis stakkerit in the stour, and stude stummerand. Gawan and Gol. ii. 25.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 94.

It is also written stockar.

IIe stockerit lyke ane strummal aver.

——Thus this dronken wight

Then each of them, with stackring steps outwent.

And groping hands, retyring to his tent.

Hudson's Judith, p. 78.

I stacher'd whyles, but yet took tent ay
To free the ditches.

Burns, iii 41.

Seren. derives Scano-Goth. stagr-a, id. from Su.G. stig-a to go. But Isl. stak-a vid signifies, to stumble.

STACK, s. A columnar rock, Caithn.

"Near Freswick castle the cliffs are very lofty. The strata that compose them lie quite horizontally in such thin and regular layers, and so often intersected by fissures, as to appear like masonry. Beneath are great insulated columns, called here Stacks, composed of the same sort of natural masonry as the cliffs." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p. 196.

"Near Wick is the creek of Staxigoe, deriving its name from a pyramidal rock, commonly called here a stack, formed in the mouth of a creek." P.

Wick, Statist. Acc. x. 5.

Teut. staeck columna. Isl. staksteinar prominentes lapides; G. Andr. Gael. stuaic seems used nearly in the same sense; "a little hill or round promontory," Shaw.

STAFFAGE, STAFFISCH, adj. 1. Obdurate, obstinate; applied to a horse that throws his rider. Thymetes, ane man of full grete fors,

Casting from his staffage, skeich, and hede

strang hors.

Doug. Virgil, 422. 18. Equus sternax, Virg. Rudd. derives it from Ital. staffeg-iare, to be dismounted, or lose the stirrup, from staffa a stirrup; Sibb. from Teut. stief, rigidus, durus, stief-hals, obstinatus.

It seems the same with S.B. Stivage, q. v.

Teut. staf-sweerd, sica, dolon; perhaps from O.Teut. stav-en, to stab.

STAGE, s. A step; especially applied to the corbels at the gable-ends of old houses.

Rudd. derives it from Fr. estage, a storey of a house. But perhaps we ought to refer to Germ. steg, Isl. stigi, gradus, scala; steig-en ascendere. STAY, STEY, adj. 1. Steep, difficult of ascent, S.

The dale wes strekyt weill, Ik hycht; On athyr sid thar wes ane hycht; And till the watre doune sum deill stay. Barbour, xix. 319. MS.

Ane port there is, quham the est fludis has In manere of ane bow maid boule or bay, With rochis set forgane the streme full stay. Doug. Virgil, 86. 22.

"We say Scot., a stay brae, i. e. a high bank of difficult ascent," Rudd.

In cart or car thou never reestit; The steyest brae thou wad hae fac't it. Burns, iii. 144.

Mr. Tooke quarrels with Rudd. for the account he gives of this term, but without the least reason. The precise meaning of stay, as still used, is steep. This corresponds to the sense Mr. Tooke has given of his radical word A.S. stig-an, ascendere; and to the use of O.E. stye, in many of the passages he has quoted. V. Divers. Purley, ii. 276-280. 285.

Be ye humane, our humill thai will hald you. Gif ye beir strange, that yow esteme owr stay: And trows it is ye, or els sum hes it tald you. Maitland Poems, p. 158.

Teut. steegh is rendered pertinax, obstinatus. But it is probably abbreviated from stedigh, of which it is given by Kilian as the synonyme.

STAID, STADE, s. A furlong.

Ibid. p. 77. This is staidis, p. 82. STAIG, STAG, s. 1. A horse of one, two, or three years old. The term is more generally applied to one that has not been broken for riding, nor employed in working, S.

"Gif horses are found in the forest, after inhibition; it is lesome to the Forester, for the first time, to tak ane fole of ane yeare auld; for the second time, ane staig of twa yeare auld; for the third time, ane staig of three yeare auld." Forrest Lawes, c. 8. Pullum, Lat. copy.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 286.

4. Metaph. applied to young courtiers. There some old horse turn'd out of stable, When young dames are at Council Table. The fate of some were once dandillies. Might teach the younger stags and fillies, Not for to trample poor cart-horse. Cleland's Poems, p. 76.

As S. staig always denotes the male, in distinction from a filly, Isl. stegge signifies the male of birds, as of geese and ducks. V. G. Andr. p. 223. 224. To STAIK, v. a. To accommodate, to supply with, or be sufficient for, in whatever way, S. sometimes, to settle, to fix.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 28. This name seems formed from A.S. stan-gillan, the pelican. But how is it classed with the Stonechatter? V. STANCHELL.

STAIT, s. Obeisance. To gif stait, to make obeisance; by a transition, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, from the passive to the active sense.

-And ay the freyr couth lout, Quhen that he came ocht neir the almerye.— Sche saw him gif the almerie sic ane stait; Ontill hirself scho said, 'Full weill I wait, 'He knaws full weill that I have in my thocht.' Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 78.

STALE, STAILL, STEILL, STALL, s. 1. A body of armed men, stationed in a particular place; such especially as ly in ambush.

Thom Halyday in wer was full besye; A buschement saw that cruell was to ken, Twa hundreth haill off weill gerit Inglissmen. Wncle, he said, our power is to smaw, Off this playne feild I consaill yow to draw: To few we ar agayne yon fellone staill. Wallace, v. 809. MS.

Bot guha sa list towart that stede to draw, It is ane stolling place, and sobir herbry, Quhare oft in stail or enbuschment may ly, Quhidder men list the bargane to abyde, Owthir on the richt hand or on the left side; Or on the hight debate thame for the nanys.

Doug. Virgil, 382. 37.

This seems the primary sense. Rudd. derives it from Fr. estal, a stall, as a stall in a fair, &c. But it is more nearly allied to A.S. stall, Germ. stall, stelle, Su.G. staclle, locus; especially as the Germ. word is used to denote a military station, a permanent camp. Hence herstall, Franc. heristal, castra, from her an army, and stal a station; Vi vocis est mansio, vel statio exercitus, locus castrorum vel castrametationis. Nam stall haec omnia significat; Wachter. L.B. heristall-us. V. Du Cange; Schilt. p. 454.

I need scarcely observe, that the terms mentioned above are nearly allied to Germ. stell-en, Su.G. staell-a, ponere, collocare. That staill properly denotes a body of armed men posted in a particular station, appears from its connexion with stolling, in the second extract. V. STOLLING.

2. The centre, or main body, of an army, as distinguished from the wings.

"Our Scottish men placed themselves very craftily. For George Earl of Ormond was in the steill himself, and the Laird of Craigie-Wallace, a noble knight of sovereign manhood, was upon the right wing; the Lord Maxwell and the Laird of Johnstoun on the left wing." Pitscottie, p. 30.

"The Scottish army assembled upon the west side of Esk, above Musselburgh, and were mustered to the number of forty thousand men, whereof ten thousand were in the vanguard under the Earl of Angus; other ten thousand were in the rear with the Earl of Huntley. The Governor himself commanded the Steil or Battle, wherein were twenty thousand men." Ibid. p. 193.

"Against them a number went out of Maxwell's army, who, encountring with a great company, were beaten and chased back to the stall or main host, which by their breaking in was wholly disordered."

Spotswod, p. 401.

4. A body of armed men keeping close together in array, as distinguished from scattered parties.

5. In stale, in battle array.

6. Transferred to hunting, as denoting the principal body employed in the chace.

"At last quhen he [David I.] was cumyn throw the vail that lyis to the gret eist fra the said castell, quhare now lyis the Cannogait, the staill past throw the wod with sic novis & din of rachis and bugillis, that all the bestis wer rasit fra thair dennys." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 16.

7. Staill, or adj. staill skep of bees, S. denominated perhaps as being the principal skep, or mother-hive, from which all the other swarms have, as it were, been sent off only as flying parties.

It may, however, be merely the E. adj. stale, as signifying old, long kept.

STALE, s. A place of confinement, a prison. Thou has fund in stale

This mony day withoutin werdis welc, And wantis now thy veray hertis hele.

King's Quair, v. 18.

The ingenious annotator views it as the same with stail, Doug. Virgil, 382. 37. V. preceding word, sense 1. It seems rather allied to A.S. horsa steal, carceres, Gl. Aelfr. p. 68. V. Stell.

STALE FISHING, s. The act of fishing by means of what is called a stell-net, S.

"The herrings are the only fish caught in this coast, except a few salmon caught at Stale fishing, and some cuddies, of a very small size, in the summer months." P. Kilmuir, W. Ross, Statist. Acc. xii. 270. V. Stell-net.

STALKAR, STALKER, s. I. A huntsman.

Or scho persaif, from fer betis with his flaine Amyd the woddis of Crete.

Doug. Virgil, 102. 6.

2. More commonly, one who ranges, illegally killing deer.

"The Justice Clerk sall inquyre of Stalkaris, that slayis deir.—And alssone as ony stalkar may be conuict of slauchter of deir, he sall pay to the king xL. s. And the halders and mantenaris of thame sall pay ten pundis." Acts Ja. I. 1524. c. 39. Ed. 1566.

Ye lyke twa stalkers steils in cocks and hens. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 55.

A.S. staelc-an signifies, pedetentim ire. But the term seems immediately formed from E. stalk, "to walk behind a stalking horse or cover."

The following description of a stalking horse may perhaps be acceptable to some readers.

"The stalking horse was a horse originally trained for the purpose, and covered with trappings, so as to conceal the sportsman from the game he intended to shoot at. It was particularly useful to the archer, by affording him an opportunity of approaching the bird unseen by them, so near that his arrows might easily reach them; but as this method was frequently inconvenient, and often impracticable, the fowler had recourse to art, and caused a canvass figure to be stuffed, and painted like an horse grazing, but sufficiently light, that it might be moved at pleasure with one hand. These deceptions were also made in the form of oxen, cows and stags, either for variety or for conveniency sake. In the inventories of the wardrobe belonging to King Henry VIII. we frequently find the allowance of certain quantities of stuff, for the purpose of making "stalking coats and stalking hose for the use of his majesty." Harleian MS. ap. Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 29. V. Bogstalker.

STALL, s. The main army. V. STALE.

STALL, pret. v. Stole.

My traisty swerd fra vnder my hede away Stall scho, and in the place brocht Menelay. Doug. Virgil, 182. 25.

STALLENGE, s. The duty paid to the magistrates of a burgh, for liberty to erect a stall during a market.

"In the auld forme of customes, it is called the stallenge of the mercat." Ibid.

L.B. stallag-ium; Praestatio pro stallis seu jure ea habendi in foris, mercatis, et nundinis. Anglis, usurpatur, pro Quietum esse de quadam consuetudine exacta pro platea capta, vel assignata in nundinis, et mercatis; Du Cange.

STALLANGER, s. A foreign merchant, who sets up a stall in a burgh for the sale of his goods during a fair or market.

"Ilk stallenger sall either agree with the Provest of the burgh, in the best forme as he may, or else ilk mercat day sall pay to him ane halfepennie." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Stallangiatores. L.B. stallangiar-ius is also used, Iter Camerar. c. 39. s. 63. STALLIT, part. pa. Set, placed.

Wele maistow be a wretchit man callit,

That wantis the confort that suld thy hert glade.

And has all thing within thy hert stallit,

That may thy youth oppressen or defade.

King's Quair, v. 19. V. Stell, v.

STALWART, adj. 1. Brave, courageous.

It seems to admit this sense in the following passage.

And now Amycus harme complenis he,

Now him allone the cruell fate of Licus,

Now strang Gyane, now stalwart Cloanthus.

Doug. Virgil, 19. 52.

-Fortemque Gyan, fortemque Cloanthum. Virg.

The only difficulty as to this sense is that fortem, as applied to Gyas, is rendered strang.

According to the learned Hickes, either from A.S. stal-ferhth, chalybei animi homo, sive fortis; or stathol-ferhth, stabilis et firmi animi vir; or stoltferhth, magnanimus.

Perhaps the word might have its origin from A.S. staelwort, staelwyrth, captu dignus, ejus estimationis ut operae pretium sit surripere; from stael-an to carry off clandestinely, and weorth worth. Thus the Sax. Chron. speaks of stalwart ships. They brought to London, tha the thaer stael-wyrthe waeron, i. c. those ships that were worth carrying off. In like manner, stael-herge, stael-herige, denote a praedatory troop. Drehtan tha hergas West-Seaxna lond mid stael-hergum; Vexarunt praedatores West-Saxonum terram cum praedatoriis turmis; Chron. Sax.

Strong, powerful.

3. Strong; like wicht, applied to inanimate objects.

—With wapynnys stalwart of stele Thai dang apon, with all thair mycht. Barbour, xiii. 14. MS.

Ful lichtlie vp he hynt his stalwart spere.

Doug. Virgil, 409. 38.

We the beseik that schaw also thou wald

Ibid. 70. 10. Moenia, Virg.

4. Hard, severe. As we say, hard fighting, in modern language.

He fand thare stalwart barganyng. Nevyretheles thare duelt he, And oft in gret perplexytè.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 194.

5. Violent, as applied to stormy weather.

I met dame Flora in dull weed disguised;
Which, into May, was dulce and delectable,
With stalwart storms her sweetness was surprised;

Her heavenly hues were turned into sable.

Lyndsay's Dream, Ellis, Spec. ii. 24.

The word occurs in O.E., either in the first or second sense.

Minot's Poems, p. 15.

STAMMAGUST, s. A disgust at any kind of food, S.B.

The first part of the word is evidently from stomach, S. stammack, often pron. q. stamma. May gust be traced to Fr. goust, a taste, as it is common S. to speak of an ill gust?

To STAMMER, v. n. To stagger, S. "The horse stammers;" Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 94.

Isl. stumr-a collabi; stumra yfer, Verel. STAMMEREL, s. Friable stone, S.B.

STAMP, s. A trap; as, a rotten-stamp, a trap for rats; a fowmart-stamp, a trap for catching the polecat, S.

Su.G. stampa, also stappa, Dan. stomp, id. It appears that the term has been originally applied to the traps or snares laid for larger animals. Hence Dan. reffestomp, a snare for foxes, G. Andr. p. 38. vo. Boge. Ihre derives the Su.G. term from stampa, to stamp or tread, because it is by treading on the snare that the animal is caught. In the same manner Su.G. falla, S. faw, a trap, receives its name from something falling, so as to confine or catch the prey. STAMP, s.

—" There was many noblemen of both kingdoms that were not on this course, nor privy to the same, while about this council-day, this clandestine band began to break out and be divulged, whilk took some stamp in their stomacks, thinking they were not tied to this privy covenant, and would rather follow the king nor the chief leaders of this covenant." Spalding's Troubles, ii. 15.

Perhaps stop, demur, Belg. Fris. stemp-en, sistere; or struggle, qualm, Isl. stymp, lucta levis. STANCE, s. 1. A site, a station, S.

Thence to the top of Law-Tay did we hye, And from the airie mountaine looking down, Beheld the stance and figure of our town. Muses Threnodie, p. 152.

"He very judiciously remarked, that every man's house was built upon a rock, meaning that every man had a dry gravellish stance whereon to found his house." P. Cromdale, Moray, Statist. Acc. viii. 253.

2. A pause, a stop, S.

But here my fancie's at a stance;

Are we to have a war with France?

Cleland's Poems, p. 11.

To put to a stance, to stop, to suspend,

Their sad misfortunes, and unlucky chance, -Had put their measures to a stance.

Hamilton's Wallace, p. 167.

The term is Fr. evidently from Lat. sto, stare, to stand.

STANC'D, part. pa. Stationed.

Fr. estanch-er, id.

STANCHELL, s. A kind of hawk.

The tarsall gaif him tug for tug,

A stanchell hang in ilka lug.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 21. Thair wes the herraldis foe the hobby but fable; Stanchellis, Steropis, scrycht to thair sterne lordis.

Houlate, iii. 2.

This seems to be the Kestrel, falco tinnunculus, Linn., the Steingal of Turner, the Stannel, Stone-gull, of Willoughby.

It is the same species, I suspect, which in Ang. is called Willie-whip-the-wind, from the action of its wings on the air. For Pennant observes concerning the kestrel; "This is the hawk that we so frequently see in the air fixed in one place, and as it were fanning it with its wings; at which time it is watching for its prey." For the same reason it seems to be denominated in Germ. Windwachl, Wannenweher, and by Willoughby Windhover. V. Penn. Zool. p. 195. 196. V. WINDCUFFER.

The origin of the name is uncertain. It seems the same with Stainyell, q. v.

2. A stall; as, a stand in a market, a book-stand,

"The stranger merchand, quha hes ane covered stand in the market day, or ane buith in the market day; for his custome sall giue ane halfe pennie."

Burrow Lawes, c. 40. STAND, s. A barrel set on end for containing water, or salted meat, S.; as, a water-stand, a beef-stand.

Sibb. refers to Gael. stannadh, a tub. STAND of claise, a complete suit, S.

" Proclamation was made at the cross of Aberdeen, commanding both Newtown and Oldtown to furnish out to General Lesly's army, and to ilk soldier thereof, their share of a stand of gray cloaths, two shirts, and two pair of shoes, under the pain of plundering." Spalding's Troubles, i. 289. To STAND one, v. a. To cost; as, It stood me a groat, it cost fourpence, S.

This is a Germ. idiom; Mir hoch zu stehen; it costs me a great price.

STANDFORD, s. An opprobrious designation, of uncertain meaning.

STANE, s. A stone, S. steen, S.B. Sum straik with slings; sum gadderit stanis; Sum fled and weil escheuit.

Chr. Kirk, st. 15.

MoesG. stains, A.S. stan, Su.G. sten, anc. stain, id. The S.B. pron. corresponds more to Alem. Isl. stein, Belg. steen.

STANECAST, s. The distance to which a stone may be thrown, S.

STANE-CHAKER, STONE-CHECKER, s. The stonechatter, S. Motacilla rubicola, Linn.

The "Stonechecker arrives about the first of May; disappears about the middle of August." P. Campsie, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xv. 326.

It seems to have borrowed the northern name of the Motacilla oenanthe or Wheat ear; Sw. stensquette, Norw. steen squette, Germ. steinschwaker. The form of the word refers us to Sw. squaett-a to squirt. But perhaps the name was formed from squattra, to chat, to chatter. V. CHACK, CHECK, s. and SCHAKER-STANE.

STANERAW, STEINRAW, s. Rock-liverwort, S. The term Steinraw is appropriated S.B. and Orkn. to the Lichen Saxatilis, Linn.

"In some places it is covered with lichen saxatilis, -throughout the north of Scotland called Steinraw." Neill's Tour, p. 50.

"Lichen saxatilis. Grey blue pitted Lichen, Anglis. Staneraw, Scotis australibus." Lightfoot, p. 816.

From A.S. stan, or Isl. stein, stone, and rawe hair, q. the hair of stones; or Belg. ruyg, mossy. STANERIE, adj. Gravelly. V. STANNERY.

To STANG, v. a. To sting, S.

As guha vnwar tred on ane rouch serpent, Ligand in the bus, and for fere bakwart sprent, Seand hir reddy to stang, and to infek. Doug. Virgil, 51. 48.

Sw. staang-a, to gore with horns, seems radically the same, as derived from sting-a, to prick. Isl. stanga is rendered not only, impeto, but, pungo, transpungo, G. Andr. p. 223.

To STANG, v. n. To thrill with acute pain, S. A. Bor. My teeth's stangin, my tooth is thrilling, a phrase used with respect to the tooth-ache.

STANG, s. 1. A sting, the act of stinging, S. 2. The sting of a bee, serpent, &c. the instrument of stinging, S.

First athir serpent lappit like ane ring, And with there cruell bit, and stangis fell, Of tendir membris tuke mony sory morsell. Doug. Virgil, 45. 52. 3. An acute pain; as, a stang of the toothache, stound, synon.

The lady was leech, and had skil, And spared not, but laid him till, Both for the stang, and for the stound, And also for his bloody wound.

Sir Egeir, p. 26.

4. The beard of grain, S.B. synon. Awn, q. v. To STANK, v. n. To ache smartly, to thrill, Fife; synon. stound.

This seems to be a frequentative from A.S. stingan, Su.G. sting-a, pungere; or more immediately from S. stang, to thrill with pain. In the same manner Su.G. stick-a, pungere, has been formed from sting-a, id.

STANG, s. "A long pole or piece of wood, like the staff of a carriage," Gl. Sibb. S. A.Bor.

Isl. staung, Su.G. staang, Alem. Dan. stang, Belg. stange, A.S. staeng, steng, styng, Ital. stanga, C.B. ystang, id. These terms have been generally traced to Su.G. sting-a, MoesG. sting-an, pungere, ferire, as originally denoting a sharp-pointed pole, (contus). Hence the phrase,

To RIDE THE STANG. The man who beats his wife, is sometimes set astride on a long pole, which is borne on the shoulders of others. In this manner he is carried about from place to Grose mentions the same custom as remaining in Yorkshire; where the woman, who beats her husband, is also punished in the same way. Prov. Gl. in vo.

It is also mentioned by Brand.

"There is a vulgar custom in the North, called riding the stang, when one in derision is made to ride on a pole, for his neighbour's wife's fault. This word Stang, says Ray, is still used in some colleges in the University of Cambridge, to stang scholars in Christmass time, being to cause them to ride on a colt-staff, or pole, for missing of chapel." Popular Antiq. p. 409. 410.

This, as Callander observes, "they call riding the stang," and "is a mark of the highest infamy. -The person," he subjoins, "who has been thus treated, seldom recovers his honour in the opinion of his neighbours. When they cannot lay hold of the culprit himself, they put some young fellow on the stang, or pole, who proclaims that it is not on his own account that he is thus treated, but on that of another person whom he names." Anc. Scot. Poems, p. 154. 155.

I am informed that, in Lothian, and perhaps in other counties, the man who had debauched his neighbour's wife, was formerly forced to ride the

But very frequently, another is substituted, who is said to ride the stang on such a person.

They frae a barn a kabar raught, Ane mounted wi' a bang, Betwixt twa's shoulders, and sat straught Upon't, and rade the stang On her that day. Ramsay's Poems, i. 278. -On you I'll ride the stang.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 12. Here we have evidently the remains of a very ancient custom. The Goths were wont to erect, what they called Nidstaeng, or the pole of infamy, with the most dire imprecations against the person who was thought to deserve this punishment; Isl. nidstong. He, who was subjected to this dishonour, was called Niding, to which the E. word infamous most nearly corresponds; for he could not make oath in any cause. The celebrated Islandic bard, Egill Skallagrim, having performed this tremendous ceremony at the expence of Eric Bloddox King of Norway, who, as he supposed, had highly injured him; Eric soon after became hated by all, and was obliged to fly from his dominions. V. Ol. Lex. Run. vo. Nijd. The form of imprecation is quoted by Callander, ut sup.

It may be added, that the custom of riding the stang seems also to have been known in Scandinavia. For Seren. gives stong-hesten as signifying, the rod, or roddle horse; vo. Rod.

STANG of the trump, a proverbial phrase, used to denote one who is preferred to others viewed collectively; as the best member of a family, the most judicious or agreeable person in a company, S.B. synon. tongue of the trump, S.

It is apparently borrowed from the small instrument called a trump or Jew's harp; of which the spring, that causes the sound, seems formerly to have been denominated the stang.

STANG, or STING, s. The Shorter Pipe fish, Syngnathus acus, Linn.

"Acus vulgaris Oppiani, the Horn-fish or Needle-fish;" Sibb. Fife, p. 127. "Our fishers call it the Stang or Sting;" Note, ibid.

In Sw. it has a similar designation; Kantnaal, the border pin or needle.

STANGRIL, s. An instrument for pushing in the straw in thatching, synon. stobspade, Ang. also Sting, q. v.

STANK, s. 1. A pool or pond, S. Thay boundis, coistis, and the chief cieté, Divers spyes send furth to serche and se, And fand ane stank that flowit from an well, Quhilk Numicus was hait .-

Doug. Virgil, 210. 15. Rudd. derives it from Lat. stagn-um, L.B. stangnum. Su.G. staang, Arm. stanc, Gael. stang, Fr. estang, Ital. stanga. A.S. stanc, pluvicinatio, seems allied.

It is used to denote a fish-pond.

To STANK, v. n. To have long intervals in respiration, to gasp for breath, to be threatened with suffocation, S.B.

Isl. Su.G. stank-a, to pant for breath, to fetch the breath from the bottom of the breast, as persons in sickness use to do, Verel.; a frequentative from staen-a, sten-a, Germ. sten-en, suspirare; to breathe,

To STANK, v. n. To thrill with pain. V. under Stang, s. 2.

STANERS, STANNIRS, STANRYIS, s. pl. The small stones and gravel on the margin of a river or lake, or forming the sea-beach; applied also to those within the channel of a river, which are occasionally dry, S.B.

Even when the gravel is mingled with larger stones, the term is applied in common to both.

"I socht neir to the see syde. Than vndir ane hingand heuch, I herd mony hurlis of stannirs & stanis that tumlit doune vitht the land rusche, guhilk maid ane felloune sound, throcht virkyng of the suclland vallis of the brym seyc." Compl. S. p. 61.

- The new cullour alichting all the landis, Forgane the stanryis schene and beriall strandis. Doug. Virgil, 400. 10.

- "Dugar-hastily takes both the ferry-boats, and carries over his men to the staners whilk is in the midst of the water of Spey." Spalding's Troubles, i. 198.
- "Interrogated, Whether, when they fish upon the south side of the Allochy Inch, they do not draw their nets in general upon the stanners, and not on the grass-grounds? depones, That at low water the net comes ashore on the stanners, and at high water on the grass." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805. p. 91.

"The whole of the poles are fixed on stanners, flooded over at the lowest tides." Ibid. p. 109.

Sibb., without the slightest reason, views stannirs and stanryis as essentially different, expl. the latter as probably signifying "small pools." The term is used not only S.B., but in E. Loth. Ayrs. and some other parts of the W. of S.

Rudd. views it as perhaps q. standers, i. e. standing or lying within the current, or from stane, stone, q. a collection of stones. But the term is purely Su.G. Stenoer, gravel; glarea, locus scrupulosus, thre; comp. of sten, a stone, and oer, gravel, literally, gravel-stones. Ihre remarks, that oer was anciently written eir, which forms the last syllable of our word; and aur, which also denotes stones thrown into the water for making a ford. Teut. gever, litus, ripa, seems to have a common origin. This nearly corresponds to Isl. eyre, as defined by G. Andr. p. 60. Ora campi vel ripac plana et sabulosa.

Basnage, in his History of the Jews, during the fourth century, says, that they were dismissed from the city of Constantinople, and that a place was given them " in the Stenor, that is, in the space that was left void betwixt the city and the sea." He adds, that here they remained in the year 1204, when the Crusaders went into the Holy Land; and quotes Harduin, as saying that they "lived in a place called Stanor;" B. vi. c. 14.

As it is evident that this is not a Gr. word, there seems to be little reason to doubt that it is Gothic. Not only is this the very term by which a Scandina. vian, or any native of the N. of Scotland, would describe such a situation; but we learn from Ihre, that it is very ancient. We are not less certain, that the language of the Thracian Bosphorus, where this designation occurred, was Gothic; as that of Crim Tartary still is, according to Busbequius and other

Doug. Virgil, 178. 17.

Rudd. inclines to trace it to the same origin with E. stern. Sibb. views it as probably for sture. But it is synon. with Su.G. Germ. starr rigidus, durus. The Carex in Su.G. is denominated starr, Isl. staer, quum herba sit perquam rigida; Ihre. Starr korn, barley, either, says Ihre, because it abounds with awns, or as distinguished from softer grain, and especially from oats.

MoesG. stairno, Isl. stiorn-a, Su.G. stierna, Precop. stern, Dan. stierne, id. The S. word has less affinity to the A.S., which is steorra. Rudd. thinks that all these may be deduced from Gr. asng, id. Vossius views Pers. ster, id. as the root. But it seems highly probable, that, as in early ages, mariners had no other means of directing or steering their course, but by the stars, the very name given to these heavenly bodies might originate from this circumstance. A.S. steorra, stella, might thus be formed from steor-an, regere, gubernare. Isl. stiorna, equally denotes a star, and the rudder of a ship, whence E. stern; and both seem to be formed, as well as Su.G. stierna, a star, from styr-a gubernare, and MoesG. stairno, from stiur-an, re-

2. A single grain, a particle.

Vol. II.

No a starn meal, not a particle of meal, S. It is sometimes applied to liquids.

This term is not now applied to liquids.

3. A small quantity of any thing, S.

A little starnie, a very small quantity, Gl. Shirr.

4. The outermost point of a needle, S.B.

It seems to be merely the term, denoting a star, used metaph., to signify any thing that is very small. Sterne is synon. A. Bor. "Have you a shilling in your pocket? Answ. Sham a sterne, i. e. not one." Lambe's Notes, Battle of Floddon, p. 70. STARNY, STERNY, adj. Starry, S. ing, to gormandize, to gorge.

Sibb. mentions Teut. stouw-en, stau-en, acervare, accumulare, to which it has considerable resemblance. But it is more immediately allied to sticken farcire, saginare turundis; also, aggerare, cumulare; and to O.Teut. staeck-en stipare, to stuff, to cram, from staeck stipes.

2. To confine one with a great quantity of bodyclothes; also, to confine one's self in a very warm room, S.B.

Germ. stick-en, suffocare, suffocari, seems allied. 3. v. n. To stech in bed, to indulge sloth in bed, to please one's self with the heat, so as to be unwilling to rise, S.B.

STECH, s. 1. A heap, or crowd; a term conveying the idea of many thronged in little room; as, a stech of bairns, a number of children crowded together, S.B.

2. A confused mass; as, a stech of claise, a great quantity of clothes, S.B.; stechrie, id.

3. It also frequently conveys the idea of heat, as naturally connected with that of a crowd, S.B.

To STED, v. a. 1. To place, to situate; part. pa. stad.

Succour Scotland and remede That stad is in perplexyte.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 534.

2. To establish.

Thir brethir thre Had stedede thame in there cuntre, And in-tyl quiete and pes Ilkane in his regnand wes.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 86.

STEDE, s. 1. Place, as E. stead.

2. Fute stede, a footstep.

The pray half etin behynd thame lat thay ly, With fute stedis vile and laithlie to se.

Doug. Virgil, 75. 53.

i. e. the place where the foot has been set. V. STEAD.

To STEEK, v. a. To shut. V. STEIK.

STEELBOW GOODS, those goods on a farm, which may not be carried off by a removing tenant, as being the property of the landlord, S.

"Till towards the beginning of this century, landlords, the better to enable their tenants to cultivate and sow their farms, frequently delivered to them, at their entry, corns, straw, cattle, or instruments of tillage, which got the name of steelbow goods, under condition that the like, in quantity and quality, should be redelivered by the tenants, at the expiration of the lease." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. T. 6. s. 12.

"The stocking in Sanday, belonging to the proprietor, is called steelbow." P. Cross, Orkney, Statist. Acc. vii. 472.

This term, which appears to be very ancient, may be deduced from Teut. stell-en, Su.G. staell-a, to place, and Teut. bouw, a field, q. goods placed on a farm, or attached to it; or A.S. stael, Su.G. staell, locus, and bo supellex; q. the stocking of a place or farm. Bo is used in a very extensive sense, as denoting a farm; furniture of any kind; also, cattle; from bo, bo-a, to prepare, to provide. This word, as still used in Orkney, is most probably of Scandinavian origin. It may be merely an inversion of Sw. bo-staelle, a residence, domicilium.

STEEP-GRASS. s. Butterwort, S.

" Pinguicula vulgaris. Moan. Gaulis. Steepgrass, Eurning-grass. Scotis austral. The Lowlanders believe that the leaves of this plant eaten by cows induce a ropiness in the milk. Probably there may be some foundation for this opinion, considering the known effects of this plant when put into warm milk." Lightfoot, p. 1131.

"The inhabitants of Lapland, and the North of Sweden, give to milk the consistence of cream, by pouring it, warm from the cow, upon the leaves of this plant, and then instantly straining it, and laying it aside for two or three days, till it acquires a degree of acidity. This milk they are extremely fond of." Ibid. p. 76. 77. V. SHEEP-ROT. TO STEER, STIR, v. a. 1. To touch, to meddle with, so as to injure; as, I wirna steer you, I will not meddle with, or injure you in any way, S.

2. To give ground a slight ploughing, S.

"The in-field land is generally all stirred after harvest, and the dunged third part is again ploughed in spring, and sown with bear about the beginning of May." P. Alford, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xv. 452. 3. To give ground a middle furrow; to plough it a second time, when it is to be ploughed thrice,

A.S. styr-ian, to stir, to move. V. STERE, v. STEEVE, adj. 1. Firm; as, a steeve bargain, one that cannot be easily broken, S.

2. Firm, compacted; as applied to the frame of an animal, S.

Sax souple hempies, stive an' stark, Frae ilk side forat stendit.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 15. Thou ance was i' the foremost rank, A filly buirdly, steeve, an' swank, An' set weel down a shapely shank.

Burns, iii. 141.

3. Trusty; as, a steeve friend, S.

4. Sometimes used for obstinate. A steeve carle, an inflexible man, S.

Germ. steif, firm, stable; A.S. stife, stiff, inflexible. STIEVELIE, adv. Firmly, S.

- Till life's short blink be dune,

Still stievelie may ye fill your shoon. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 108.

STEY, adj. Steep. V. STAY.
STEIDDIS, s. pl. States, applied to those in the Netherlands.

Swadrik, Denmark, and Norraway, Nor in the Steiddis I dar nocht ga.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 176. Teut. stad, stede, urbs; hence stad-houder, stedehouder, prorex, legatus.

To STEIK, STEKE, v. a. 1. To pierce with a sharp-pointed instrument, to stab; E. stick.

The kingis men sa worthi war, That with speris, that scharply schar, Thai stekyt men, and stedis baith, Till rede blude ran off woundis raith.

Barbour, viii. 321. MS.

MoesG. stigg-an, A.S. stic-an, stic-ian, Teut. stick-en, Germ. stech-en, Su.G. stick-a, pungere.

2. To stitch, to sew with a needle, S. His riche arrey did ouer his schulderis hyng. Bet on ane purpour claith of Tyre glitteryng, Fetusly stekit with pirnyt goldin thredis. Doug. Virgil, 108. 51.

V. BEGAIRIES.

Su.G. stick-a, Germ. stick-en, acu pingere.

3. To fix, to fasten.

Forgane thaym eik at the entre in hy, The goldin branche he stekis vp fare and wele. Doug. Virgil, 187. 13.

Figere, Virg.

The proper signification undoubtedly is, to fix on, or by means of, a sharp instrument. Thus it occurs as a v. n.

- Ful dolorously thay se

The twa hedis stekand on the speris.

Ibid. 293. 29.

Thus A.S. stic-ian on, signifies, inhaerere; Germ. steck-en, Teut. stick-en figere.

STEIK, STEEK, STYK, s. 1. A stitch, or the act of stitching with a needle, S.

Then up and gat her seven sisters, And sewed to her a kell; And every steek that they pat in, Sew'd to a silver bell.

Gay Goss Hawk, Minstreley Border, ii. 12. Still making tight, wi' tither steek, The tither hole, the tither eik, To bang the birr o' winter's anger,

And had the hurdies out o' langer.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 89. "For want of a steek the shoe may be tint;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 26.

- The best that sewes her any styk, Takes bot four penys in a wik. Ywaine, v. 3053. Ritson's E. M. R. i. 128.

2. The threads in sewed or netted work; improperly used.

He draws a bonie silken purse, As lang's my tail, whare, thro' the steeks, The yellow letter'd Geordie keeks.

Burns, iii. 4.

3. A small portion of work, S. Sa did our Lord the reprobat ay mark, As members of sedition and stryf, That maisters of ane evil steik of wark Sould ay detest the godlie upricht lyf. N. Burne, Chron. S. P. iii. 452.

4. To the steeks, completely, entirely. He brags he'll tak baith hill an' howe, An' to the steeks us plunder.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 10.

To STEIK, v. a. 1. To shut, to close, S. A. Bor. Ane hundreth entres had it large and wyde, Ane hundreth durris tharcon stekit cloce.

Doug. Virgil, 164. 4. "Tavernes sould be steiked at nine houres, and na person suld be found therein." Skene's Acts, Index, vo. Tavernes.

I have observed only one instance of this being used as a v. n.

"When ae door steeks anither opens;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 76.

3 O 2

"We say, Scot. to steek the door; He steeked his eyne; A steeked neive;" Rudd.

2. To stop, to choke up; as referring to the course of a stream.

And Bannok burn, betuix the brays, Off men, off horss, swa stekut wais, That, apon drownyt horss, and men, Men mycht pass dry out our it then.

Barbour, xiii. 338. MS.

Rudd. refers to Teut. stick-en, figere. Sibb., more properly, mentions stck-en [stcck-en] claudere ligneis clavis; Kilian. This is evidently from steck, synon. with slotel, a bolt; q. to shut by means of a wooden bar.

But as Teut. steck also signifies, stipes, which is undoubtedly the primary sense, synon. with Su.G. sticka, stake, E. a stake, it is evident that this v. acknowledges the preceding, in its primary sense, as the origin. For what is a stake, but a piece of wood pointed? For it seems admitted on all hands, that stake is from A.S. stic-an, Su.G. stick-a, &c. pungere. This analogy may be remarked in several other Northern verbs: Isl. stiak-a, to separate by a pole or stake, from stiaka, a stake; i. e. to steek out, or exclude one from a place, in consequence of its being fenced with stakes: Also stik-a, adactis et impactis palis flumina et freta navibus impervia reddere; Verel. i. e. to steek the channel of a river or frith. May not steck-r, a sheep-fold, be denominated from the idea of its being an inclosure? Perhaps the Germ. phrase, ins gefaengnus stecken, con-jicere in carcerem, is allied. There can be no doubt as to Belg. in een klooster ge-stoken, shut up in a cloister.

Stocked is used by Chaucer for confined. This seems to correspond to Belg. ge-stoken. Gower uses stoke.

For if thou woldest take kepe, And wysely couthest ward and kepe Thyne eye and eare, as I have spoke, Than haddest thou the gates stoke Fro such foly .-

Conf. Am. Fol. 10, b.

Stoken part. and stak pret. occur in Ywaine. Als he was stoken in that stall, He hard by hind him, in a wall, A dor opend fair and wele. And tharout come a damysel, Efter hir the dor sho stak.

Ver. 695. 697. Ritson's E. M. R. i. 30. Gower also uses vnstoken in the sense of opened. Speaking of the avaritious person, he says;

Thus whan he hath his cofer loken, It shall not after ben vnstoken, But whan hym lyst to haue a syght Of golde, howe that it shyneth bright. Conf. Am. Fol. 83, b.

STEIK, s. A piece of any thing, as of cloth. "That in cuerie burgh, thair be ane qualifeit man chosin, to seill all claith, and sall haue for his lau-bouris of ilk steik seilling xii.d." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 93. Ed. 1566.

This seems the origin of what is now called stamping cloth.

A.S. sticce, stycce, a part or piece. This might be traced to Su.G. staeck-a decurtare.

STEIL, s. "Handle. Steils of a barrow, or plough, the handles. Teut. steel, caudex, scapus;" Gl. Sibb.

STEILBONET, s. A kind of helmet.

"That all vthers our souerane lordis liegis, gentilmen vnlandit and yemen, haue jakis of plate, halkrikis, splentis, sellade, or steilbonet, with pesane or gorget." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 57. Edit. 1566.

"This deponent abode half an hour or thereby, locked his allane, having his secret, plate-sleeves, sword, and whinger with him, and wanting his steelbonnet." Cromarty's Gowrie's Conspiracy, p. 49.

Isl. stalhufa has the same signification; from stal, steel, and hufa, hat. The ancient Goths and Swedes also called this piece of armour iarnhatt, i. e. an iron hat; in like manner, katilhatt, q. kettle-hat, when made of brass. Priscis Gothis et Sueonibus Galea Iarnhatt vel Katilhatt, dicebatur, quod esset ca ferro aut aere, capiti tuendo aptata. Loccenij Antiq. SueoG. Lib. iii. c. 2. p. 119. Our term seems to be a translation of Fr. chapelle dc fer, which, Father Daniel says, was "a light helmet, without visor or gorget, like those since called bacinets." Grose's Milit. Antiq. ii. 241. 242.

STEILD, part. pa. Set, Wallace, vii. 868. V. STELL.

STEIN, s. A stone, S.B. V. STANE.

STEIN-BITER, s. A fish, Orkney; perhaps the lump, Cyclopterus Lumpus, Linn.

"Two of the best kinds of fish we have are the tusk and the stein-biter; but these are seldom caught."

P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv. 314.

The Swedish name of the lump is Stenbit. It seems to be thus denominated, because it adheres very strongly to the rocks; q. biting the stones. The Wolf fish, Anarchicas Lupus, Linn. is called the Steen-bider, Pontoppidau's Norway.
STEING, s. A pole. V. STING.
STEINRAW, s. Rock Liverwort. V. STANE-

To STEIR, v. a. To govern; also, v. n. to stir. V. Stere.

STEIR, adj. Stout, strong.

Peblis to the Play, st. 22.

2. It seems the same word that is now vulgarly used for the trigger of a musket, S.

A.S. sticcel, Teut. stekel, Belg. steekel, aculeus, stimulus, from stek-en, Su.G. stick-a, pungere; also, figere.

To STELL, STEIL, STILE, v. a. 1. To place,

Off hewyn temyr in haist he gert thaim tak Syllys off ayk, and a stark barres mak,

At a four frount, fast in the forest syd, A full gret strenth, quhar thai purpost to bid. Stellyt thaim fast till treis that growand was. Wallace, ix. 831. MS.

The Lord Cambel syne hynt it by the har, Heich in Cragmor he maid it for to stand, Steild on a stayne for honour off Irland.

Ibid. vii. 868. MS.

This, in editions, is changed to still. To stile or stell cannons, to plant them.

"The earl Marischal at Stonehaven had stiled his cartows and ordnance just in their faces."-" They stiled cannons on ilk ane of their mounts for pursuit of the castell." Spalding's Troubles, i. 172. 215.

They stell'd their cannons on the height, And show'r'd their shot down in the how. Minstrelsy Border, iii. 222.

2. To put; used in a forensic sense.

Stelling to the horne, putting to the horn, declaring one a rebel.

"The maist part of all billis, warrants, and chargis, hes ben deliverit and directit to officiaris of arms quha hes execut thame, quhilk hes not only bein very hurtfull and prejudicial to all his Majesty's leigis, in drawing in question diverse and sundrie of the chargis and executions maid be the said officiaris of arms, and by stelling of sundrie persouns to the horne maist privelie and wranguslie; bot also, and to our particular interest." Act Sederunt, 9th Nov.

Belg. stell-en, Su.G. staell-a, to place, to put. Stelling, in the act referred to, cannot surely mean stealing.

- STELL-NET, STILL-NET, s. A net stretched out by stakes into, and sometimes quite across, the channel of a river, S. This net is much used in Solway Frith. The fishes are catched in it by the neck.
- " A still net has been tried on the lake with some success, but not enough to defray the expence of attendance." P. Strachur, Argyles. Statist. Acc. iv. 557.

This is called stell-fishing.

"There is belonging to the public good of Dingwall, a stell salmon fishery on Conan, or a fishery on that part of the river into which the sea flows." P. Dingwall, Ross, Statist. Acc. iii. 4.

"Culloden has on his property what is called a stell-fishing." P. Petty, Invern. Ibid. p. 29.

It is also written Stale-fishing, q. v. From Teut. stell-en, Su.G. staell-a, to place, the nets being fixed by means of stakes. L.B. estellus, pali in fluvio fixi ad sustinendum rete eisdem annexum in piscium capturam.—Estalaria, id. Fr. estellier & estalée; Carpentier, Suppl. Du Cange.

This is also called a Stent-net, S.B. as being extended and fixed by stakes.

STELL, STILL, STOLL, s. 1. A covert, a shelter,

"The stock land has been much improved of late, by draining the wet and marshy grounds; by planting clumps of firs, for stells to shelter the flocks in storms; and by inclosing some part of the lands contiguous to the farm houses, for hay to the sheep in severe winters and springs." P. Oxnam, Rox. burghs. Statist. Acc. xi. 326.

2. A small inclosure for sheep, S.A. -Truth maun own that monie a tod,-In fauld or stell nae lambie worried, Then aff, leg-bail, directlie hurried.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 90.

Teut. stelle, locus tutus.

STELLIFYIT, part. pa. Converted into a star; Lat. stella and fro.

O Venus clere, of goddis stellifyit, To quhom I yelde homage and sacrifice, Fro this day forth your grace be magnifyit! King's Quair, ii. 33.

STELLFITCH, STELLVITCH, adj. Dry, coarse; applied to flax or grain that grows very rank, Teut. stael, stele, caulis, stipes herbae, whence the E. synon. stalk.

STEM, s. The utmost extent of any thing. One is said to be at one's stem in a journey, when it is not meant to go any farther, Loth.

A.S. stemne, the fixing of time and place, the announcing of any thing as to be done at a certain time; Su.G. staemm-a, staemn-a, to fix a day; Staemma en til sig, to charge one against a partieular day. Hence faestnadastaemma, the day appointed for the celebration of nuptials.

It may, however, be derived from staemm-a, stag-nare facio, cohibere.

To STEM, v. a. To stanch, used rather differently from the v. in E.; as, to stem blude, S. Su.G. stuemm-a bloden, to stanch blood.

STENCHEN, s. An iron bar for a window. V. STANSSOUR.

To STEND, v. n. 1. To leap, to spring, to move: with elastic force, S.

Things have taken sic a turn Will gar our vile oppressors stend like flaes, And skulk in hidlings on the hether braes. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 88.

"To stend, in common use, signifies to stride," Gl. Compl. p. 374. But this does not accurately express the idea.

2. Metaph. to rise to elevation; applied to the Whase fancy can sae tow'ring stend, Thy merits a' to trace?

Ramsay's Works, i. 119. Fr. estend-re, Ital. stend-ere, to extend. Lat. . extend-ere.

STEND, s. 1. A leap, a spring, S. Bot fra the hors on fer did him espye Sa grym of chere stalkand sa bustuously, For fere they stert abak, and furth can swak The duke Nipheus wyde apoun his bak, And brak away with the carte to the schore, With stendis fell, and mony bray and snore. Doug. Virgil, 338, 31.

2. Sometimes, a long step or stride, a leap on one foot, S. Rudd.

STENDLING, s. The act of leaping or springing. with great force.

"It was ane celest recreation to behald ther byoht lopene, galmouding, stendling bakuart & forduart." Compl. S. p. 102.

To STENYE, v. a. To sting. "Conscience stenyies if he steil;" Gl. Sibb.

To STENT, v. a. 1. To stretch, to extend, S. His ost all thar arestyt he,

And gert a tent sone stentit be; And gert hyr gang in hastily.

Barbour, xvi. 282. MS.

On ather halff the watre of Wer Gert stent thair pailyownys, als ner As ther befor stentyt war thai.

Ibid. xix. 515. MS.

2. To straiten. A cord is said to be stentit, when straitened; stent, at full stretch, S.

3. To restrain, to confine, S.

-Never did he stent

Us in our thriving with a racket rent.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 90.

4. To erect; improperly, in allusion to the mode of erecting a tent.

-Than to his freynd the seruice funeral With obsequies to do for corpis absent, And in my memour vp ane tombe to stent. Doug. Virgil, 282. 43.

It is certainly allied to Fr. estend-re, Ital. stendere, from Lat. extend-ere, as Rudd. observes. But it deserves to be remarked that Su.G. stinn-a is used in a similar sense; stinna segel, the sail when extended by the force of the wind; from stinn rigidus, robustus, Ihre. Hence,

STENT-NET, s. A net stretched out and fished by means of stakes or otherwise, SB.

-" That he had no instructions whatever to mark any thing upon the plan that did not appear evident on the ground, except as to the place where a stentnet was said to have been fixed, a cruive-dike once placed, and such other things as are engrossed in the letter produced." State, Leslie of Powis, v. Fraser of Frascrfield, p. 39.

" No nets can be counted stent-nets, unless they cross the water." Ibid. p. 78.

To STENT, v. n. To stop, to cease, S. the same with the E. v. a. stint.

I the require suffir me to assay With my retinew and thir handis tway The first dangere in batal, or I stent.

Doug. Virgil, 381. 38.

I wan the vogue, I Rhacsus fell'd Au' his knabbs in his tent;

Syne took his coach, an' milk-white staigs,

Ere ever I wad stent.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 25. Not, as Rudd. conjectures, from A.S. stinc-an hebetare, &c. but from O.Sw. stynt-a, Isl. stunt-a, abbreviare; West-Goth. stynta up, religare.

To STENT, v. a. To assess, to tax at a certain rate, S.

-"And then, be the gude discretions of the saidis Provests, &c. to taxe and stent the haille inhabitantes within the Parochin-to sik ouklie charge and contribution, as sall be thocht expedient and sufficient to susteine the saidis pure peoplil." Acts Ja. VI. Parl. 6. c. 74. Murray.

From L.B. extend-ere, aestimare, appretiare; a term common in the E. law. Fr. estend-re, id. Par mesmes les Jurours soient les terres estendues à la very valuë. Du Cange, vo. Extendere. V.

STENT, STANT, s. 1. A valuation of property, in order to taxation.

"Becaus his rentis and treasour wes nocht sufficient to sustene the samyn (as he vsit) he desyrit ane general stent to be tane throw the realme of ilk person efter his faculte." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 6. Petiit censum agi, Boeth.

L.B. extent-a, aestimatio. O.E. and S. extent. V. Cowel. Hence the juridical phrase, Lands of old extent.

"The rentall & valour of lands hes bin taxed and liquidat to ane certaine sum of silver, conforme to the profites and dewties, quhilk the lands paid at that time [about the year 1280], quhilk is called the auld & first extent.-Ane vther taxation and extent was maid in the time of peace, as the former extent, conforme to the profites augmented;—quhilk therefore is called the new or second extent." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Extent. V. also Erskine's Instit. B. ii. T. 5. s. 31.

Thus stent is merely the corr. of extent.

2. A taxation, S.

"The nobill Galdus (that recoverit his realme) desyrit neuir stent of thaym for na maner of chargis that he sustenit aganis his ennymes: knawyng weil how odius it was to the pepyl to seik ony new exactionis on thaym." Bellend. ubi sup.

Stent, the tax, or proportion of it, payable by a Burgh or Incorporation," S. Rudd. It is also used to denote the proportion paid by individuals.

"When necessary, they voluntarily assess themselves in such sums as the support of the poor requires, thereby wisely preventing a general stent." P. Irvine, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. vii. 179.

3. A task, S. stint, E.

"Scot. stent, i. e. a piece of work to be performed in a determined time," Rudd.

The fassioun how this stant to do maist habill Herk at schort wordis, that point I sall you say. Doug. Virgil, 103. 43.

It seems questionable, whether the word in this sense, is not rather allied to Su.G. stynt-a. V. Stent, v. n.

Act Sederunt, 23 Feb. 1687.

This term is analogous to L.B. Extensor, aestimator publicus, cujus munus est res haereditarias inter comparticipes aestimare et partiri; Du Cange. STENT-ROLL, s. The cess-roll, S.

STEP IN AGE, advanced in years.

This ald hasard caryis over fludis hote Spretis and figuris in his irne hewit bote, All thocht he eildit was, or step in age, Als fery and als swipper as ane page.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 53:

This phrase may be analogous to what we now use, past his grand climacteric. For as the E. word originally refers to the ascent of a ladder, from Gr. xhuzzrne, scalae gradus, secondarily, annus transilis; Teut. stap is rendered climacter, scalae, (Kilian), as synon. with sporte, leder-sporte. Hence Germ. stapf-en, stapp-en, scandere, ascendere.

STEPPE, s. A stave. V. STAP.

STER, the termination of various names of trades, as Baxster, Webster, &c. V. BROUSTARE.

This termination in Germ. also forms one s. from another; as schuster a shoemaker, from schu a shoe, hamster a field-mouse, from hamm ager. V. Wachter, Prol. Sect. 6. In like manner, our term bangster is formed from bang, multster from mult, &c.

Somner derives this termination from A.S. steoran, regere, gubernare; as denoting power, or the authority of a master over others. V. Lex. Sax. vo. Steoran.

STER, a termination of many names of places in Caithness.

"The names of places here seem to be either Danish, Icelandic, or Norwegian. Many of them end in ster, a contraction of stader, (that is to say, a stead of houses, a station or habitation.) Thus Ulbster, properly Wolfster, either from its being of old a place infested with wolves, or from a person called Wolf—having possessed it." P. Wick, Statist. Acc. x. 39.

Another sense is given, which seems preferable.

"Ster, which signifies an estate, is the terminating syllable of an immense number of the names of places in Caithness and elsewhere.—Brabster is the estate or possession of Brab." P. Canisbay, Ibid. viii. 162. 163. N.

Isl. staer, Su.G. starr, denote long grass; Isl.

stord, Sw. star, gramen, locus gramine consitus, Verel. q. a fit place for residence.

STER, STERE, s. The helm. V. STERE, v. 1. STERDE, STERDY, adj. Strong, Stout, E. sturdy. The tuelf makis ane end of all the were but

Doug. Virgil, 12. 52.

Skinner derives the E. word from Fr. estourde, which has no affinity; Casaubon, from Gr. o. cases validus; Jun. refers to Sclav. twrdy durus. But the most probable origin is Isl. styrd rigidus.

To STERE, STEER, v. a. To govern, to rule.

Barbour, iv. 72. MS.

Isl. sterk-ur, Franc. starc, Germ. stark, validus,

I take notice of the word, merely to observe that this does not seem the primary meaning. The only snose of A.S. stearc, sterc, is rigid, hard, severe. Wachter gives this as also the primary sense of the Germ. word: which, after Stiler, he with the higher probability deduces from starr-en rigere, induvare, q. darrig. It may be added that MocsG. taurknith, arcscit, drieth up, Mark ix. 18. seems to have the same origin. V. STARE above. It retains this sense in R. Glouc. Chron. p. 393. When it is said that Robert Courthose had to pledge Normandy to his brother William Rufus, for the loan of an hundred thousand marks; the author speaks of the terms as hard.

And borwede of hym thervppe an hondred thousand marc,

To wende with to the holy lond, & that was somdel starc.

" Hard, severe," Gl.

STERK, s. A bullock. V. STIRK.

STERLING, STRIUELING, adj. A term used to denote English money.

I mention this word, merely to remark the general idea of our ancestors, that it had a Scottish ori-, in company with Ella, gin. Osbret, a Saxo having overrun the a part of Scotland, in the ninth century, is sai nave taken possession of the Castle of Stirling, and established a mint during his residence there.

"This Osbret had his cunyeouris within this castel (be quhom the Striveling money tuk begynnyng). Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 14. Libris, solidis, denariisque Sterlingis; Boeth.

Bellenden evidently adopts this as the origin of the term. For he gives it according to the old orthography of the name of the town.

King Edward sal pay ane. M. pundis striueling to the Danis." Ibid. B. xi. c. 11.

This derivation is, however, quite improbable. The term seems far rather deducible from esterling, a name given to those Germans that inhabited the confines of Denmark, who are said to have been the first that brought the art of refining silver into England. V. Du Cange, vo. Esterlingus.

STERLING, s. The name of a river-fish, Aberd.

A.S. steorf-an, Germ. sterb-en, occidere, interficere, facere ut moriatur; A S. steorfa, caedes. STEUG, STEWG, s. 1. A thorn, a prickle, or any thing sharp-pointed, S.B. synon. stob.

This seems the primary sense; in which it is allied to Germ. stich punctum, ictus; stech-en, A.S. stic-an, pungere, cuspide fodere, confodere; as Wachter observes of the v.; Incipit a puncto, et desinit in vulnere. He views MoesG. stik punctum, (in stika melis, in puncto temporis) as allied; also stikl calix, properly a horn, with which the animal strikes, and transferred to a cup, because the ancients drunk out of horns. Isl. stikil still denotes the sharp part of a horn; resembling A.S. sticcel stimulus, aculeus.

2. A rusty dart, Aberd.

This doughty lad he was resolv'd Wi' me his fate to try,

Wi' poison'd stewgs o' Hercules; Bat 'las! his bleed wis fey.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 6. 3. Obliquely, a hasty stitch with a needle, a slight and coarse sewing, S.B.

The idea evidently suggested is, that this sense has originated from the use of a coarse instrument in place of a needle; as small pins of wood were formerly used, instead of buttons, for fastening an under-waist-coat. Hence,

To Steug, v. a. To stitch, to sew slightly and coarsely, S.B.

STEUEN, s. Expl. "hour, or time."

No say nought what thou ses, Bot hold astow art hende, And hele;

Lay it al under hende. To steuen gif that it stele.

Sir Tristrem, p. 170.

The term seems properly to signify judgment, judicial trial, as synon. with Stewyn. Thus the meaning of the phrase is, "If they place it in judgment," i. e. if they make any judicial or strict inquiry. In like manner, the phrase used both by S. and E. writers, unset stevin, denotes a time not fixed, in allusion to the determination of a day of law, or of trial. Quhen cup is full, then hold it evin; For man may meit at unset stevin, Thocht mountanis never meits. Montgomerie, MS. Chron. S.P. iii. 504. We may chance to meete with Robin Hood, Here at some unsett steven.

The word is still used in this sense, S.B. Quo' Jean, My steven, Sir, is blunted sair, And singing frae me frighted aff with care. Ross's Helenore, p. 117.

Doug. Virgil, 14. 14.

Rudd. mentions S. steven as synon. with Belg. steuen rostrum navis, steve prora. Without sufficient reason he views this and the preceding s. as originally the same. Isl. stofn signifies caudex, stipes, stirps; and stafn, prora; which Seren. deduces from stofna inchoari. A.S. stefn also signifies prora. Ihre views Isl. staf tabula, asser, as the origin; vo.

Bot thys Eneas, full bald vnder scheild, With all his oist driuis throw the plane feild; And with him swyftly bryngis ouer the bent Ane rout cole blak of the stew quhare he went.

Doug. Virgil, 426. 6. Stew is thus expl. by Grose, "when the air is full of dust, smoke or steam," A. Bor.

Rudd, derives the word immediately from Belg. stof pulvis, pulvisculus. It seems more nearly allied to Isl. styfa, vapor in vaporariis non defumatis; G. Andr. Rudd. properly mentions E. stew, Fr. estuve, Ital. stufa, hypocaustum, as cognates; also Hisp. tufo, vapor calidus et densus qualis e balneis halat. This is merely a corr. of the Isl. term. MoesG. stub, Franc. stuppe, Alem. stouf, Su.G. stoef, Germ. staub, all signify dust. Hence, MILL-STEW, s. The dust which flies about a miln, S. Germ. muhlstaub.

STEWATT, s. "A person in a state of violent perspiration, from Stew, vapour," Gl. Sibb. V. STUVAT.

STEWYN, s. Judgment, doom.

Grantyt wes fra God in the gret hewyn, Sa ordand he that law suld be thair stewyn. To falss Saxonis, for thair fell jugement, Thar wykkydnes our all the land is went.

Wallace, vii. 232. MS.

The Minstrel here relates the story concerning the hanging of the Scottis' T rons at Ayr. The sense is; "It was the w God, that they should be judged according to own law, or their mode of dispensing law to others." The signification of stewyn is determined by the expression in the following line, "thair fell jugement."

Isl. stefna denotes a fixed time, statutum tempus, Ihre. This is the precise sense of E. steven, as given by Lye; Add. Jun. Etym. vo. Stevin, vox. The Isl. term also signifies a meeting, convention; G. Andr. At times it denotes, in a general sense, a meeting for whatever purpose. Aki bauth oc Eyrike Kongi til veizlo, oc lagthi honom hinn sama stefnodug; Aco also invited king Eric to a feast, and appointed the same day of meeting. Heims Kr. Tom. i. 88. ap. Ihre, vo. Staemma.

Sometimes it signifies a more solemn meeting, that which in Lat. is denominated comitia. Ener heidnu menn höfdo tha stefna fiölmenna, oc toko that rad at bloto tweim monnom or hweriom fiordungi; In the mean time the heathen, having held a full meeting, took counsel that they would sacrifice two men for every province. Kristnis. p. 92.

It also denotes an action at law, dica, G. Andr. Af thwi fell stefnan; Lis sopita est, Kristnis. p. 96. Eg stefne, dicam indico, dicam scribo, accerso. Tha er Olafr Kongr spurdi uspektr thuer er Thangbrandr gordi, stefndi hann hanom til sin, oc bar

Vol. II.

MoesG. stau-an, stoi-an, signify to judge; Raihlaba stauides, Thou hast judged right, Luke vii. 34. Hence stana a judge, stanastol a judgment-seat, and andastaua an adversary, one who appears against another in judgment.

Ihre seems inclined to derive the MoesG. word from staf a rod; because judges anciently carried rods or staves, as badges of authority; adding, that the military staff is the judicial power in a regiment. Some have conjectured, with considerable probability, that Isl. stefna, as denoting a fixed time, an action at law, or judgment, may be traced to A.S. stefn, vox; because it is by the voice of authority that a day is fixed, or judgment pronounced. We may add, that a day fixed for judgment was generally made known by public proclamation.

The A.S. word, denoting a fixed time, is stemne, to which Su.G. staemma corresponds; diem definire, in jus vocare. Ihre views this word as analogous to Isl. stefna. These three Isl. phrases, stefna hanum thing, lagga lagstefnu, and dag gifwa, (i. e. to give, or fix a day), are used as synon.; and convey the same idea with our old phrase, to appoint a luwday, or day of law. V. STEUEN.

A custom formerly prevailed in S., and has not entirely gone into desuetude in some places, of turning out horses loose, to feed among the stubble, after harvest. These horses are denominated stibblers. In former times it was reckoned allowable for a person to take one of them, and ride him for a few miles, without asking the leave of the owner, or paying any hire. Hence, it is said, a Preacher STI received this designation, as he might be employed by any minister who needed his assistance; and, little to the credit of these times, the slightest consideration for his services was rarely accounted necessary.

To STICHLE, (gutt.) v. n. To rustle, to cause

2. Stilpers, pl. crutches, S.B.

3. Two long poles, with notches for supporting the feet, by means of which one crosses a river dry-shod, S.B.

As used in the two last senses, it might be deduced from Su.G. stolpe, a prop, a support, a pillar. To STILT, v. n. 1. To go on crutches, S.

2. To halt, to cripple, S.

It is sometimes used metaph. in this sense.

As sting denotes a pole, ling has been supposed to signify quick motion; or as expressing the relative situation of the bearer, as they move in a line, the one following the other. V. LING.

3. The use both of a pole and of a rope, especially in the management of horses and cattle.

Then did she halt lang in despair, Withdraw her to a place, even where She thought there should be least repair, And that nane should come near her.

-By sting and ling they did up-bang her, And bare her down between them To Duncan's burn, and there, but dread, They left her, and came hame good speed. Mare of Collingtoun, Watson's Coll. i. 48.

i. e. They forced her to rise by using both a pole and a rope. This is perhaps the original sense.

STINGER, s. A mender of thatched roofs; so called, because he uses a sting or short pointed stick in doing his work, S.

STINGISDYNT, s. " Ane dint or straike with ane sting or batton; in Latine, Fustigatio;" Skene, Verb. Sign. in vo.

"Within bourgh, bloudwit, stingisdynt, marchett, herreyeld, nor other like things-sould not be heard." Burrow Lawes, c. 19.

STINKING-WEED, s. Common Ragwort.

"Senecio Jacobaea, Bualan Gaulis. The stinking weed, Scot. aust." Lightfoot, p. 1132.

To STYNT, v. n. To stop.

He saw per ordoure al the sege of Troy .-

He styntis, and wepand sayd Achates tyll, &c. Doug. Virgil, 27. 20.

Stynt, pret. stopped.

Right styth stuffit in steill that stotit na stynt. Gawan and Gol. iii. 3.

O.E. id. Thus it is used, Hoccleve, p. 41. He styntith never, till his purs be bare. To STIR, v. a. To plough slightly. V. STEER. STIRK, STERK, s. 1. A bullock or heifer between one and two years old, S. A stot is a bullock about three years old; the name being generally changed from stirk to stot, about the time of its being fit to be yoked in the plough.

It occurs in the S. Prov. "There was ay some water where the stirk drowned;" i. e. "there was certainly some occasion for so much talk, rumour, and suspicion." Kelly, p. 309.

-Ye haif our oxin reft and slane, Bryttnyt our sterkis, and young beistis mony Doug. Virgil, 76. 5. The stirkis for the sacrifyce per case War newly brytnit. Ibid. 138, 36.

Jok that wes wont to keip the stirkis, Can now draw him an cleik of kirkis.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 66.

Stirk is the mod. pron.

"Commonly Scot. Bor. they distinguish between stirk and steer, the first being younger, and either male or female, the other some older, and only male;" Rudd.

2. Metaph. a stupid ignorant fellow, S. For me I took them a' for stirks-That loo'd na money.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 307. A.S. styrc, styric, juvencus, juvenca. Hence E. sturk, a young ox or heifer; styrke, Lancash. Somn. styric, styrc, is undoubtedly a dimin. from A.S. styre, steor, MoesG. stiurs, Alem. stier, a The more ancient form of the latter is supposed to be Su.G. tiur, Isl. tyr, C.B. tar-us, (Lat. taur-us), from tar-o, tar-u, ferire, percutere. Seren. vo. Steer. V. also the letter K. Hence,

To STIRK, v. n. To be with calf, S.B. STIRKIN, part. pa. Wounded, stricken.

Ouer all the cieté enrageit scho here and thare Wandris, as ane stirkin hynd, quham the stalkar, Or scho persaif, from fer betis with his flaine. Doug. Virgil, 102. 6.

STIRLIN, s. The denomination of a silver coin, apparently ascribed to David I. of Scotland. "The stirlin in the time of the said King David, did wey threttie twa graines of gude and round quheat: Bot now it is otherwaies, be reason of the minoration of the money." Stat. Rob. III. c. 22. s. 6. Lat. copy, Sterlingus.

This is expl. by Du Cange, -pro monetae specie, quam denarium Sterlingum vocabant. He quotes Matt. Paris, An. 1247, as using the term in a similar sense. Praecepit Dominus Rex-ut quicunque deinde Esterlingus in regno suo pondere non legalis inveniretur, statim funderetur; vo. Esterlingus.

The term starlinges, as used by Chaucer, is expl. " pence of sterling money;" Tyrwhitt.

The name has evidently originated from the term sterling or stirlin, as denoting the quality of the money. Thus it is also used as an adj.

"It is statute, that the kings money, that is stirlin money, sall not be caried furth of the realme." Stat. David II. c. 37. V. STERLING.

STIRLING, s. The stare or starling, a bird, S. Sturnus vulgaris, Linn.

——I think ane greit derisioun, To heir Nunnis, and Sisteris, nycht and day, Singand and sayand psalmis and orisoun; Nocht vnderstanding quhat thay sing or say, Bot like ane stirling, and ane popingay, Quhilk leirnit ar to speik be lang vsage.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 16. Teut. sterlinck sturnus, from sterre, id.

STIRRAH, s. 1. "A stout boy, S.
An honest neiper man, Ralph was his name,—
A dainty stirrah had twa years out-gane.

Ross's Helenore, p. 13.

2. A young fellow.

If ony mettl'd stirrah green
For favour frae a lady's een,
He mauna care for bein' seeu
Before he sheath

His body in a scabbard clean

O' gude braid claith.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 22.

STITH, STYTH, adj. 1. Firm, steady, S.

Als that haid

A lord that sua swete wes, and deboner,—And in bataill sa styth to stand,—
That thai had gret causs blyth to be.

Barbour, viii. 384. MS. And athir gan contrare vthir stith stand,

With fingers fast fakand there mace in hand.

Doug. Virgil, 141. 51.

2. Strong; applied to inanimate objects.

A styth castell, and there he hade

Oft and mekyl his duellyng.

Wyntown, vii. 7. 8. Also Ibid. x. 108. Barbour, iv. 101.

A.S. stith, styth, durus, rigidus, severus. Stethe, however, signifies, stabilis, firmus.

3. Dead; properly, having the stiffness of death. Sheet styth, shot dead, Aberd.

"For, thinks I, an' the horses tak a brattle now, they may come to lay up my mittens, an' ding me yavil an' as styth as gin I had been elf-shot." Journal from London, p. 4.

Up-by the lambie's lying yonder styth; But maksna, that it's no yoursel I'm blyth. Ross's Helenore, p. 15.

STITHILL.

Mony sege our the sey to the cité socht, Schipmen our the streme thai stithill full straught, With alkin wappyns I wys that wes for were wroght.

Gawan and Gal. ii. 12.

Mr. Pinkerton views this as a v., rendering it, interrogatively, steer. But it seems rather an adj. or adv., from A.S. stithlic durus, or stithlice severe, strenue. Thus straucht must be the v. "Mariners stretched full firmly," or perhaps, "sternly, over the sea."

STIVAGE, adj. "Stout, fit for work;" Gl. Shirr. V. STAFFAGE.

STIVE, adj. Firm. V. STEIVE.

STOB, s. 1. A prickle, or a very small splinter of wood, fixed in any part of the body, S.

In this sense it is also used metaph., as denoting something that mars piece of mind.

"Ye had no need to be bare-footed among the thorns of this apostate generation, lest a stob stick up in your foot, and cause you to halt all your days." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 79.

2. The puncture made by means of a prickle, S. Germ. stupf, stipp, punctum, stupf-en, stipp-en, pungere.

To STOB, v. a. 1. To pierce with a pointed instrument, S.; synon. job.

2. To point with iron.

Thay maid them burdowns nocht to bow, Twa bewis of the birk;

Weil stobbit with steil, I trow, To stik into the mirk.

Symmye and his Bruder, Chron. S. P. i. 360.

STOB, s. 1. The stump of a tree.

—— Sum wer fletand on the land:

Quhailis and monstouris of the seis,

Stickit on stobbis among the treis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 43.

2. A palisade, a stake driven into the ground, for forming a fence, S.; more commonly, stab.

Sum of Eneas feris besely

Flatis to plet thaym preissis by and by,

And of smal wikkeris for to beild vp ane bere,

Of sowpill wandis, and of brounys sere,

Bound with the syouns, or the twistis sle

Of smal rammel, and stobbis of akin tre.

Doug. Virgil, 362. 9.

Vimen, however, is the only term used by Virg. "The different articles made from these woods are sold at the following prices on the spot: Stobs, at 4s. the hundred, four feet long." P. Campsie, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xv. 321.

3. A pole, a stake.

"He was taken and headed, and his right hand set upon a stob in the same place where he was slain." Spalding's Troubles, i. 53.

A.S. steb, stubb, Belg. stobbe, Su.G. Mod. Sax. stubbe, stipes, truncus. Dan. stub, "a stump, a stock, a stem or stalk;" Wolff. Kilian mentions. Teut. stipp-en as signifying intersepire, to fence about; whether from the s., or vice versa, seems doubtful. Ihre derives Su.G. stubbe from stufw-a amputare. S. Stow, q. v., is used in a cognate sense.

Stob, s. The stump of a rainbow, or that part which seems to rest on the horizon, when no more of it is seen, S.

This, by seamen, is viewed as a prognostic of an approaching storm. If I mistake not, they also call it a dogg.

This seems allied to the preceding term, and to Su.G. stubb, which denotes a part of any thing broken off from the rest: Notat rem quamvis minorem a suo continuo abruptam; stubbig mutilus, bre-vis, Ihre; (E. stubbed). Dan. stuv, a remnant, an STOB-FEATHERS, s. pl. The short unfledged feathers which remain on a fowl after it has been plucked; applied also to those which appear first on a young bird, S.

Hence, a bird is said to be stobbed, or stob-feather'd. The latter term is also used metaph. Of a young coulle, who have little provision or furniture, it is said; They're nae stob-feather'd yet, S.B.

The origin is stob, a stump, from the shortness of the feathers.

STOB-THACKER, s. One who forms or mends thatched roofs, by driving in the straw with a stob, sting, or stake, S.B.

The work thus performed is called stob-thacking or -thatching.

"Stob-thatching is now become pretty general, and, when well executed, makes a warm and durable roof." P. New Deer, Aberd. Statist. Acc. ix. 187, 188.

STOB-THACKIT, STOB-THATCHED, adj. Thatched in the manner described above, S.

"Farm-houses and cottages.—Within these five years, a very few of them have been stob-thatched, or covered with a deep coat of straw,—and snecked or harled with lime." P. Keith-Hall, Aberd. Statist. Acc. ii. 534.

To STOCK, v. n. To become stiff, to be benumbed, S.

Germ. stock-en, to be stopped or obstructed; Sn.G. stock-a, to harden, to condense. Blodet stockar sig, the blood congeals. In the same manner we say that one stocks, or that the limbs stock, from cold or want of exercise, S. Hence, STOCK, s. One whose joints are stiffened by age or disease; an auld stock, id. S.

Belg. stok-oud, very ancient, decrepid.

Stock, s. The hardened stalk or stem of a plant.

A kail-stock, the stem of colewort, S.

Su.G. stock, id. sponda, vel pars lecti anterior. STOCK-DUCK, s. The Mallard, a bird, Orkney

"The Mallard, (anas boschas, Lin. Syst.), our stock-duck, is a pretty numerous species, which builds in marshes, meadows, and holms, through all the Islands." Barry's Orkney, p. 301.

Germ. stock ent, Kramer, p. 341. Norv. stok-and, Penn. Zool. p. 591. Dan. id. The name is the same, and or ent signifying duck. The meaning of stock, as thus applied, I do not know. As it denotes a stick, also, the trunk of a tree, can this signify the tree-duck? it being ''k known sometimes to lay the eggs in a high tree, in a deserted magpie's or crow's nest;" Encycl. Britann. vo. Anas, N°. 32.

STOCK AND HORN, a musical instrument anciently used in S.

When I begin to tune my stock and horn, With a' her face she shaws a caulrife scorn. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 68.

Ritson describes it as "a reed or whistle, with a horn fixed to it by the smaller end." V. CORNE

But it is more particularly described by Burns.

"It is composed of three parts; the stock, which is the hinder thigh-bone of a sheep, such as you see in a mutton-ham; the horn, which is a common Highland cow's horn, cut off at the smaller end, until the aperture be large enough to admit the stock to be pushed up through the horn, until it be held by the thicker end of the thigh-bone: and lastly, an outen reed, exactly cut and notched like that which you see every shepherd boy has, when the corn stems are green and full-grown. The reed is not made fast in the bone, but is held by the lips, and plays loose in the smaller end of the stock; while the stock, with the horn hanging on its larger end, is held by the hands in playing. The stock has six or seven ventiges on the upper side, and one back-ventige, like the common flute. This of mine was made by a man from the braes of Athole, and is exactly what the shepherds wont to use in that country." Burns's Works, iv. 209. No. 64.

This is also written Stock-in-horn, though, I apprehend, improperly; and derived from Gael. stoc, a pipe. V. Statist. Acc. xv. 8, N.

STOCK-HORNE, s. A horn anciently used by foresters in S.

"Ane stock-horne—commonly is maid of timmer and wood, or tree, with circles and girds of the same, quhilk is yet vsed in the Hie-landes and Iles of this realme: quhairof I have seene the like in the cuntrie of Helvetia, in the yeir of God 1568, amangst the Zuitzers." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Menetum.

Ane stocke horne, ex Lib. Sconensi, species et forma cornu lignei quod si inflatur magnum et raucum edit sonum. Leg. Forest. c. 2. N.

STOCK-OWL, s. The Eagle Owl, Orkn. V. KATOGLE.

STOCK-STORM, s. Snow continuing to lie on the ground, Aberd.

I know not, whether we ought to view, as allied to this, the Su.G. phrase, en stickande storm, saeva tempestas, and Isl. stakastormur, id.

STOCKERIT, pret. Staggered. V. STACKER. STOCKIE, s. A piece of cheese, or a bit of fish, between two pieces of bread, Fife.

STOER-MACKREL, s. The tunny fish, S.; Scomber Thunnus, Linn.

"Thunnus, nostratibus, the Stoer-Mackrel."

Sibb. Scot. P. iii. p. 23.

Perhaps from Sw. stor, great, large, and makrill, mackerell.

STOG SWORD. V. Stok.

STOIP, s. A measure of liquids. V. STOUP. To STOIT, STOT, STOITER, v. n. 1. To walk in a staggering way, to totter, S.

What comes?—an auld, beld carle,—

Just stoitin to the ither warl

As fast's he can.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 61.

2. To stumble on any object, S.

Sho stottis at strais, syn stumbillis not at stanis.

Montgomerie MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 499.

Steit has anciently been used in the same sense. As Ganhardin steit oway.

His heued he brac tho,

As he fleighe.

Sir Tristrem, p. 172. st. 62.

Wi' writing I'm sae bleirt and doited, That when I raise, in troth I stoited.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 336.

3. Used metaph., as denoting the staggering state of public affairs.

- He can lend the stoitering state a lift, Wi' gowd in gowpins as a grassum gift.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 86.

On steit, Gl. Tristr., misprinted stut, my friend Mr. Scott seems justly to remark, that this is the origin of stutter, though now limited to the voice. They may at least be viewed as radically the same. In like manner, stammer, which in E. signifies to stutter, as applied to speech, in S. denotes stagger-

Su.G. stoet-a allidere, offendere. Stoeta sin fot emot stenen, to strike one's foot against a stone. Isl. staut-a, steyt-a, Teut. stuyt-en, impingere; Dan. stoed offendiculum; Teut. stoot-steen, lapis offensionis. Wachter derives Germ. stotter-n, balbutire, from stot-en impingere.

STOITER, s. The act of staggering, S.

To STOK, v. a. To thrust.

For so Eneas stokkis his stiff-brand

Throw out the youngkere hard up tyl his hand. Doug. Virgil, 349. 14.

The swerd wichtly stokkit or than was glade Throw out his coist .-

Ibid. 291. 52.

This v. seems formed from the part. pa. of stik; stokyn, pierced, stabbed.

Grekis insprent, the formest have thay stokyn, And slane with swerdes .-

Ibid. 55. 29.

E. stock, which is nearly allied, denotes a thrust, a stoccado. V. the s. and STUG. STOK, STOK SWERD, STOG SWORD, s. "A stiff or strong sword," Rudd.; but, as Sibb. ob-serves, rather "a long small sword."

This Auentinus followis in thir weris,

Bure in thare handis lance, staiffis and burrel speris;

With round stok swerdis faucht they in mellé, With poyntalis or with stokkis Sabellyne.

Doug. Virgil, 231. 51. 52.

The term properly denotes a sword formed rather for thrusting than for striking down.

"Thay had stok'swerdis quhom na armour may resist." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 16. Hostem punctim magis quam cuesim petere assueti essent, commoda brevitate mucronibus munimentum omne rupturis. Boeth.

This is also written stoge, stog.

"And so he straik him twyss or thryss throw with a stog sword:" Knox's Hist. p. 65. A stog sweard, MS. i.

"He strikes him twice or thrice throw with a stog sword." Watson's Histor. Collect. p. 69.

Rudd. refers to Fr. estoc, Ital. stocco, ensis longior, verutum; which he derives from O.Belg. stokkadé, pugio, sica. But Kilian mentions Teut. stocke, sica, ensis. The origin seems Su.G. stick-a pungere; although perhaps through the channel of the preceding v.

STOKEN, part. pa. Shut up, inclosed. V.

STEIK, v.

To STOLL, v. a. To place in safety, or in am-

Bot quha sa list towart that stede to draw, It is ane stolling place, and sobir herbry. Quhare oft in stail or enbuschment may ly, Qubidder men list the bargane to abyde, Owthir on the richt hand or on the left side.

Doug. Virgil, 382. 36. Rudd. derives the term from Fr. estal, locus ubiquidpiam reponitur. Teut. stolle denotes a mine, q. a secret place under ground, from stoll-en fulcire. Perhaps stell-en, ponere, is the radical word.

Stolling, stollin, is used for the stowing of a cargo on shipboard.

"That na merchandis gudis be reuin nor spilt with vnressonabill stollin, as with spakis." Acts Ja. III. 1466, c. 17. Edit. 1566.

This, however, may be rather from O. Teut. stouwen, acervare, accumulare, cogere.

STOLL, s. A place of safety; Gl. Sibb. V. the v. and STELL, s.

STOLUM, s. As much ink as a pen takes up, S. Teut. stolle frustum?

STOMOK, s. A shred, a piece of cloth, a frag-

Frae claith weil can thou cleik a clout, Of stomoks stown, baith red and blew, A bag fou anes thou bore about,

Stewart, Evergreen, i. 120. Allied perhaps to Su.G. Germ. stump, a segment, a fragment; stumpig, mutilated; from stufw-a amputare.

To STONAY, STUNAY, v. a. To astonish.

- For to stonay the chasseris, That Alysander to erth he bar.

Barbour, iii. 82. MS.

Thair wes nane auentur that mocht Stunuy hys hart, na ger him let To do the thing that he wes on set.

Ibid. i. 299. MS.

STONE-CHECKER, s. A bird. V. STANE-CHAKER

STONE-FISH, s. The spotted Blenny, S.; Blennius Gunnellus, Linn.

"Gunnellus Cornubiensium, the Butter-fish of the English; our fishers call it the Stone-fish." Sibb. Fife, p. 121.

Probably denominated from its being found lying under stones. V. Penu. Zool. p. 171.

STONE-RAW, s. Rock Liverwort.

"Like the feld elfen of the Saxons, the usual dress of the fairies is green; though, on the moors, they have been sometimes observed in heath-brown, or in weeds dyed with the stone-raw, or lichen." Minstrelsy Border, ii. 226.

Here the term has an E. orthography. V. STANE-

STONKERD, adj. Silent, and at the same time sullen; obstinate; S. stunkart.

- And ken them well whase fair behaviour Deserve reward and royal favour,

As like you do, these stonkerd fellows,

Wha merit naithing but the gallows.

Ramsay's Works, Life, xlii.

Isl. stygg-r conveys nearly the same idea; indomitus, insolens, non mansuetus, G. Andr.; Su.G. stygg, odiosus, invisus; Belg. stug, surly.

To STOO, v. a. To crop. V. Stow.

STOOK, STOUK, s. A rick or shock of corn, consisting of twelve sheaves, S. A. Bor.

"As a proof of the productive crop we have had this harvest, 17 stooks of wheat, in a farm at Woodhall, have produced $11\frac{1}{2}$ bolls excellent grain." Edin. Even. Courant, Oct. 13. 1803.

Sibb. doubtfully refers to Sw. skock, a cluster. But it more resembles Germ. stock tectum, from steck-en, tegere, q. a quantity of sheaves covered, for resisting rain; or Teut. stock meta, a heap, hoystock meta foeni, Kilian; q. a stook of hay.

To Stook, v. a. To put corn into shocks, S. When corn is ripe, and fit for the shearing, The joys of the harvest we jointly shall see ;-And when 'tis a' cut, I'll stook it with pleasure, And fit it for mill, or fit it for measure.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 199. STOOL-BENT, s. Moss-rush, S.

"Juncus squarrosus. Stool-Bent. Scot. aust." Lightfoot, p. 1131.

To STOOM, v. n. To frown, generally connected with gloom; as, to gloom and stoom, S.B. Su.G. stumm, Belg. stum, Germ. stom, dumb; q. to look sour and with sullen taciturnity.

STOOP, STOUPE, s. 1. A post fastened in the earth, as that on race ground, S. A. Bor.

Whan mark'd the ground, whan plac'd the stoop, They made a proclamation,

That sic as for the prize had hope, Soud tak the middle station.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 15.

- 2. A prop, a support, S.; pron. stoop.
- 3. Metaph., a supporter, one who stands by, or maintains another, S.

"Lethingtoun and the Maister of Maxwell wer that nicht the two stoupes of hir chair." Knox's Hist. p. 343.

"Since he heard of Ratcliff prisoned, and Wentford's death, his two stoops, his heart is a little fallen." Baillie's Lett. i. 226. Dalhousie, of an auld descent,

My chief, my stoup, and ornament. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 367.

Su.G. stolpe columna, fulcrum.

STOR, adj. Rough, severe. V. STURE. STORE, s. Applied to sheep or cattle; hence, a store farm, a farm principally consisting of a walk for sheep, S.

STORARE, STOROUR, s. An overseer, one who has the charge of flocks.

Welcum, storare of al kynd bestial.

Doug. Virgil, 403. 48. Tvrrheus thare fader was hie maister and gyde Of steddis, flokkis, bowis, and hirdis wyde, As storour to the kinge, did kepe and yym.

Ibid. 224. 27.

*STORY, s. A softer term for a falsehood, a lie; as, You tell a story, S. evidently borrowed from the fabulous character of most of those narrations commonly called stories or story-books.

*STORM, s. Snow, Aberd.

This use of the term is pretty general in S.

"Great frosts and snows in this oat seed-time, no ploughs going, and little seed sowing, so vehement was the storm." Spalding's Troubles, i. 216.

When snow continues on the ground, it is called a lying storm; also, a Stock-storm, q. v.

STORM-STEAD, STORM-STAID, adj. Stopped in a journey, by reason of a storm, and under a necessity of keeping a place of shelter, till it be over, S.

This might seem q. storm-bestead. But Spalding's orthography directs to the v. stay; stayed, i. e.

stopped.

"Saturday he came to Fettercairn,—where he was storm-staid.—He is storm-staid while the tenth of February." Troubles in S. i. 41.

STOT, s. 1. A young bull or ox; properly, one that is three years old, S.

Mare nedeful now it war, but langare tary, Seuin young stottis, that yoik bare neuir nane, Brocht from the bowe, in offerand brittin ilkane. Doug. Virgil, 163. 47.

Skinner expl. stot, "a young hors." This is most probably the sense in Chaucer, from A.S. stad, a stallion. Germ. stutte is rendered a filly-fole, Arnold's Dict. Tyrwhitt justly observes, that " the passage which Du Cange, in vo. Stottus, has quoted from Maddox, Form. Angl. p. 427. to shew that stottus signifies Equus admissarius, proves rather that it signifies a bullock. John de Nevill leaves to his eldest son several specific legacies, et etiam cc. vaccas pro stauro, cc stottos et stirkes, mm bidentes, &c. Stirke is the Saxon name for a heifer, so that there can be little doubt that cc stottos et stirkes should be rendered cc bullocks and heifers." Note, ver. 617. A. Bor. stot, a young bullock or steer. Su.G. stut juvencus; Dan. stud, a bull, an ox,

It is here corrected from Edit. 1508. Mr. Pinkerton reads stolin. Stot is thus synon. with stynt; and the phrase redundant, which is very common with our old writers. It is merely the preceding v. used in a neut. sense.

STOTIT, Gawan and Gol. iii. 3. V. preceding v. To STOVE, v. a. To stew, S.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 67.

The term is frequently used to denote a vessel used as a measure, of indefinite size; as, a pint-stoup; a vessel made of pewter, that contains two quarts; a mutchkin-stoup, a vessel containing half a pint English, &c.

A.S. stoppa, a pot or flagon for wine, Somner; Belg. stoop, poculum majus, cantharus; Teut. stoop, urna. Su.G. stop, mensura liquidorum.

2. It is vulgarly used to denote a pitcher or bucket used for carrying water, narrower at the top than at the bottom, for securing the iron-hoops. This is denominated a water-stoup, S.

The name water-stoup is also given, at Leith, to the common periwinkle, Turbo terebra, Linn.

STOUP, adj. Stupid, Aberd. V. STUPE. STOUP and ROUP, adv. Completely, entirely, S.

"Nae mair about it," quoth the miller,

STOUR, STOURE, STOWR, STURE, s. 1. The agitation of any body, the parts of which are easily separable from each other.

Sum graths thame on fute to go in feild, Sum hie montit on hors bak vnder scheild, The dusty pouder vpdriuand with ane stoure.

Doug. Virgil, 230. 6.
2. Dust in a state of motion, S. pron. stoor.

2. Dust in a state of motion, S. pron. stoor.

And the stout stedis with thare huffs sound,
With swift renkis dynlit the dousty ground:
The blak stoure of pouder in ane stew,
Als thik as myst towart the wallis threw.

Doug. Virgil, 397. 19.
——Stour of powder vp strekis in the are.
Ibid. 426. 30.

Yestreen I met you on the moor, Ye spak na, but gaed by like stoure.

Burns, iv. 286.

The term is also used, but improperly, with respect to dust that is laid, S.

My books like useless lumber ly,
Thick cover'd owre wi' stour, man.
A. Douglas's Poems, p. 41.

3. The spray driven, in consequence of the agitation of a body of water; or, as Rudd. expresses it, "water flying like dust."

Besely our folkis gan to pingil and strife, Swepand the flude with lang routhis belife, And vp that welt the stoure of fomy see. Doug. Virgil, 77. 34.

—Hir bowkit bysyme, that hellis belth
The large fludis suppis thris in ane swelth,
And vthir quhilis spoutis in the are agane,
Driuand the stoure to the sternes as it war rane.

Ibid. 82. 18.

Dust or water receives this denomination, merely from its agitated state; Teut. stoor-en turbare, perturbare; lutum aut vadum commovere; Kilian. This derivation is confirmed by the use of upstourand as an epithet conjoined with dust.

Younder mycht thou se
The heirdys of hartis wyth thare hedis hie
Ouer spynnerand wyth swyft cours the plane vale,
The hepe of dust upstour and at thare tale.

Doug. Virgil, 105. 15.

4. Metaph., trouble, vexation. To raise a stour, to cause disturbance, S.

Yon hobbleshow is like some stour to raise; What think ye o't? for, as we use to say, The web seems now all to be made of wae.

Ross's Helenore, p. 89.

5. Battle, fight.

Wyntown, viii. 11. 157.

—The best, and the worthiest, That wilfull war to wyn honour, Plungyt in the stalwart stour, And rowtis ruyd about thaim dang.

Barbour, ii. 355. MS.

It is still used in this sense, S.

There Scotia's sons most firmly stood,
Maintain'd an' gain'd the stour, man.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 11. It occurs in this sense in O.E.

R. Brunne, p. 71.

Isl. styr, Dan. styri, pugna, praelium; O.Fr. estour, a fight, a combat. Rudd. views A.S. styrian, steor-an, turbare, as the root.

6. Perilous situation, hardship, conflict, severe brush. S.

And I trast yhe wald nocht set till assail,
For your worschipe, to do me dyshonour,
And I a maid, and standis in mony stour,
Fra Inglissmen to saiff my womanheid,
And cost has maid to kepe me fra thar dreid.

Wallace, v. 690. MS.

Ye are informed what a sture
Innes got at Lilsly Mure;
And Sharp's lifeguard, how they in Fife
Were in the hazard of their life.

Cleland's Poems, p. 21.

7. Force, violence.

"Thocht thai [the soland geese] have ane fisch in thair mouth abone the seis quhair thai fle, yit gif thai se ane vthir bettir, thay let the first fall, & doukis with ane fellon stoure (magno impetu, Boeth.) in the see, & bringis haistelie vp the fische that thay last saw." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9.

8. A paroxysm of rage.

9. Severe reproof. I wadna stand your stour, S.B. Our lads and ye'll about it pluck a craw, For forty groats I wadna stand your stour.

Ross's Helenore, p. 83.

The term, as used in the two last senses, is nearly allied to A.S. steore, reproof, correction, chastisement; from steor-an to reprove, to correct. 10. A fright, Dumfr. q. a state of perturbation.

It is evident that this word, in all its senses, may be traced to Belg. stoor-en, Teut. stoer-en, A.S. styr-an, turbare, movere, É. to stir. A.S. steoran, to reprove, to correct, has been viewed as a different v. from styr-an. But the latter also signifies, to irritate. Steor-an, in its primary sense, gubernare, is the very same with styr-an movere. For steor-an, like Su.G. styr-a, seems originally to have been applied to the government of the helm, or steering of a ship. Now what is it, to govern a ship, but to move it by means of the helm? A.S. steore, the helm, merely signifies that part of a ship, by which the rest is stirred or put in motion. This seems also the origin of the Goth. terms used to denote a star. V. STARN.

STOURIE, adj. Dusty, S. V. the s.

Doug. Virgil, 295. 43. "Another method is called pock-net fishing. This is performed by fixing stakes or stours (as they are called) in the sand, either in the channel of the river, or in the sand which is dry at low water. These stours are fixed in a line, across the tide-way, at the distance of 46 inches from each other, about three feet high above the sand, and between every two of these stours is fixed a pocknet, tied by a rope to the top of each stour." P. Dornock, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. ii. 16.

Su.G. Dan. stoer, anciently staur, id. vallus, palus. Isl. taur, fulcrum sepimenti; Su.G. stoermaul, insterstitium inter paria perticarum, quae seper sustinent, Ihre. Hence stoer-a, to prop up with sticks or poles, Wideg.

STOURNE, adj. Stern; used as a s. In stele he was stuffed that stourne uppon stede.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 5.

A.S. styrne, id. Teut. stuer, torvus.

STOUSSIE, s. A term denoting a strong healthy child, S. perhaps corr. from stout.

STOUTH, s. 1. Theft, S.

" Erle Thomas (seand how difficyl it was to bring thaym fra stouth that hes bene hantit thairwith) held ay with hym ane gard of bodin men." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 1.

2. Stealth, clandestine transaction.

Sum rownys till his fallow thaym betwene, Hys mery stouth and pastyme lait yestrene.

Dong. Virgil, Prol. 402. 52. Su.G. stoeld, id. furtum. from stiael-a furari. STOUTHREIF, s. Theft accompanied with violence; robbery.

"Because the cryme of thift and stouthreif, is sa commounlie vsit amang the kingis liegis, and for stanching of the samin, It is statute, &c." Acts James V. 1515, c. 2. Ed. 1566.

Although thift and stouthreif are mentioned as if they were the same cryme, they are evidently distinguished in what follows in the act, by the expression thief or reifar. They are also distinguished, Acts James VI. 1587. c. 50, Skene.

"Robbery is truly a species of theft for both are committed on the property of another, and with the same view of getting gain: but robbery is aggravated by the violence with which it is attended. It is in our old statutes called rief, 1477. c. 78. or stouthrief, 1515. c. 2. from stouth, or stealth, and rief, the carrying off by force; and it is in all cases punished capitally." Erskine's Inst. B. iv. Tit. 4. s. 64.

The same word is still vulgarly pron, stouthrie, S. But it merely denotes theft.

STOUTHRIE, s. Provision, furniture, synon. with Splechrie, Fife.

Unless we should view this as an oblique sense of the preceding term, as properly denoting what has been gained by pillage; allied perhaps to Teut. stouw-en acervare, E. stow, q. what one stoweth or accumulates; or with the addition of ryck, A.S. ric, properly rich, used as a termination of nouns. STOUTLYNYS, adv. Stoutly.

For thai that hardy war and wycht, And stoutlynys with thair fayis gan fycht, Pressyt thaim formast for to be. Barbour, xvi. 174. MS.

V. Lings, Lingis, term.

To STOW, STOWE, v. a. To crop, to lop, to cut off, S. A. Bor. Pron. stoo.

Vegetables are said to be stow'd, when the tender blades or sprouts are nipt off.

The hair is said to be stow'd, when it is cropped or cut short. I'll stow the lugs out of your head, I will crop your ears.

Thare he beheld ane cruell maglit face, His visage menyete, and baith his handis, allace! His halfettis spulyeit, of stowit his eris tuay, By schamefull wound his neis cuttit away.

Doug. Virgil, 181. 23. 3 Q 2

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 46. Quhae-maid you a gentillman wuld not stow your luggis? Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 61. This is purely Su.G., stufw-a, styfw-a, signifying, amputare. Wurder styft af hanni næser eller verum; Si nares aut etiam aures illi amputentur. Leg. Suderm. ap. Ihre. Styfwa oeronen paa en haest; aures equo decurtare; to stoo a horse's lugs, S. Mod. Sax. stuv-en, afstuv-en, id. This is the origin of Su.G. stubb, E. stub, " a thick short stock left when the rest is cut off." V. Stob. Hence also E. stubble; and, Stowins, s. pl. The tender blades or sprouts nipt from a plant of colewort or any other vegetable, S.

STOWLINS, adv. Clandestinely, q. by theft, from stouth, stealth, S. Stowenlins, S.A.

-A' his aim at putting, jump, or play, Is frae the rest to bear the gree away; And stowlins teetin' wi' a wishfu' ee, Gin she he loves his manly feats does see.

STRA, STRAY, s. 1. A straw, S. strae. -With hir cours na rede nor tendir stray Was harmyt oucht, nor hurt by any way. Doug. Virgil, 237. b. 26.

2. Metaph., a thing of no value.

Stra for thys ignorant blahering imperfite. Doug. Virgil, Pref. 3. 36.

A.S. stre, Su.G. straa, A. Bor. streea, id. 3. To draw a strae before ane, to attempt to deceive one, S.

I'm our auld a cat to draw a strae before, Prov. S.; or as given by Ferguson, p. 21. "It is ill to draw a strue before an auld cat." Signifying that one has too much experience to be easily deceived.

"Morton was too old a cat, to draw such a straw before him, or to propound any thing tending that way; wherefore their best was to make him away, that so the plot might goe on." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 347.

The phraseology is also inverted.
"The Earle of Angus, though he were no very old cat,-yet was he too warie and circumspect to be drawne by a straw." Ibid. p. 228.

This Proverb is undoubtedly very ancient, and must have been transmitted from our Gothic ancestors. The very same occurs in Su.G. Thet aer swaart, at draga straa for gamla kattor, i. e. It is difficult to deceive an old cat. Draga straa foer en, to deceive; Ihre.

It may be supposed, that this very ancient phrase merely alludes to the childish custom of making a kitten follow a straw, or any thing of the same kind. But as it is vulgarly believed, that those who have the power of that species of fascination called casting glaumer, often employ a straw, making it appear as large as a pole; it is not improbable, that the phrase might originally have some such allusion.

There seems to be a vestige of the magical use of straws in incantation in Semple's Legend.

STREASE.

Principal Baillie has a phrase, now obsolete, which most probably contains a similar allusion.

" It seems Digby and Langdale intended to have kept Montrose's parliament at Glasgow, but-God laid a straw in their way. In their route, Digby's coach was taken, and sundry of his writs."-Letters, ii. 166.

4. To bind with a strae. When one is so overcome with laughter, as to have no power over himself, it is commonly said, Ye might hae bund him wi' a strae, S.

The phrase perhaps merely alludes to the custom of twisting ropes of straw for binding sheaves; as signifying that one is in such a debilitated state, as the effect of violent laughter, that, instead of a rope, a single straw would be sufficient to bind him.

STRAE-DEATH, s. A fair strae-death, a natural death on one's bed, as opposed to a violent or accidental one, S.

For a' the claith that we ha'e worn, Frae her and hers sae often shorn, The loss of her we cou'd ha'e born, Had fair strae-death tane her awa'. Ewie wi' the Crooked Horn.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 289.

This term alludes to the simple manners of our forefathers, who slept on straw. Hence the phrase. ology retained, S.B.

Sick, sick she grows, as ever lay on strae, And near gae up the ghost 'tweesh that and wae. Ross's Helenore, p. 56.

It is entirely a Goth. idiom. Su.G. straudoe, id. morte sicca obire diem suum, Ihre;-from straa, straw, and doe to die. Han straadoe i Wizingzo, He died a natural death, in insula Wisingiana; Catal. Reg. ap. Ihre.

The warlike Goths reckoned this kind of death disgraceful. They therefore denominated it Kerlinga daude, i. e. the death of old women, S. carlins' dede; Keysler. Antiq. Septent. p. 145. V. GER. STRAEIN, adj. Of or belonging to straw, S. A straein raip, a rope made of straw; A.S. strawene, id.

STRABBLE, s. Any thing hanging loose and aukwardly, or trailed on the ground; a shred, a tatter, S.B.

Germ. straublein, Belg. struyf, a fritter.

STRABUSH, s. Tumult, uproar, S. allied perhaps to Su.G. rabbus, tumultus, qualis esse solet hostium diripientium.

STRACK, adj. Strict, S.B. A.S. strae, upright, strict, severe. V. STRAK.

STRAIGHT, s. A straight line, S.

"That the distance from opposite the angle of the ford dyke to the Coffin-stone on the Seaton side, taking the straight, and leaving the small angles and turns of the banks unnoticed, is about 2060 feet." State, Frazer of Fraserfield, 1805. p. 186. V. Straucht.

To STRAIK, STRAYK, v. a. 1. To stroke, to rub gently with the hand, S.

With Venus hen wyffis, quhat wyse may I flyte? That straykis thir wenschis hedes thame to pleis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96. 54.

A.S. strac-an, Germ. streich-en, Su.G. stryk-a molliter fricare.

2. To anoint with any unctuous substance, S.

Su.G. stryk-a up haret med pomada, to rub up the hair with pomatum, S. To straik bread, to put butter on it; stryka smoer paa broed, id. Wideg. Sw. stryka ut et plaaster, to spread a plaister.

3. Applied to the mode of measuring corn, &c. S.

V. the s.

STRAIK, s. 1. The act of stroking, S. Germ. streech, id.

"And for eschewing of fraud, hes thoucht expedient, that all victual salbe measured be straik." Acts James VI. 1587, c. 114. Skene. This is called straiked measure, as opposed to heaped.

Su.G. stryk-a has the same application, to smooth a measure of corn by the stritchel. Hence struket mual, i. e. straiked measure, is opposed to rogadt maal, mensurae cumulatae; Ihre, vo. Stryka.

2. The act of anointing, S. STRAIK, STRAKE, s. 1. A stroke, a blow, S.

Bot wyth his divinacion nor augury The straik of deith ne couth he not put by.

Doug. Virgil, 287. 28.

"I sall visit and punis thair wyckednes with a wand, and thair synnis with straikis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552. Fol. 28. a.

2. Metaph. used as signifying remorse.

"Therefore knawledge must go before the straik of the conscience. Thy hart can neuer feele that to be euill, quhilk thy mynde knawis not to be euill." Bruce's Serm. on the Sacr. N. 8. a.

Germ. streich, Sw. streek, ictus.

3. An engagement in the field of battle.

At the first straik with thaim he had nocht beyne; With him he led a thousand weill beseyne.

Wallace, vi. 684. MS.

From the idea of striking a battle.

4. Coinage, the act of striking money.

"As anentis the money, it is referrit to the actis maid of befoir be the xxiiii persounis chosin thairto, baith for the hame bringing of the bulyeon be the merchandis, and of the new straik to be maid." Acts James II. 1449. c. 30. Edit. 1566.

STRAIK, s. 1. Upo' straik, in motion, in a state of activity, S.B.

2. A tract, an extent of country, S.B.

3. Ground travelled over. A lang straik, a long excursion on foot, S.B.

Belg. streek, Germ. streeke, a tract or extent of way or land; Eene gute streeke, a great way; Su.G. stryk-a, ire, vagari; strok, via trita. STRAIK, pret. v. Struck.

STRAIKEN, adj. Linen cloth made of coarse flax, and worn for shirts by working people; generally pron. streekin, S.O.

At that time men cou'd gang to market, Wi' plaiding hose, and straiken sarket.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 111. V. Gash, adj. STRAITIS, s. pl. "A kind of coarse woollen cloth, or kersey;" Gl. Sibb.

Thair gluves wer of the raffel richt, Thair schone wer of the straitis.

Chr. Kirk, st. 2.
Sibb. seems justly to reject the common idea that this means Morocco leather, or that which was brought "from the Straits of Gibraltar." For this woollen stuff is mentioned in several O.E. Acts of Parl. as An. 18. Hen. 6., 4. Edw. 4. c. 1. and :

1 Rich. 3. c. 8.

STRAK, adv. Straight, in a straight line.

The hund eftre him draw,

And folow strak eftre that twa,

He knew the King wes ane off tha.

Barbour, vi. 587. MS.

A.S. strac, right, direct; Alem. strack, id. Su.G. stracks, a straight road; Isl. Gangu strak til Jerusalem, They go straight to Jerusalem.

STRAMASH, s. Disturbance, disorder, broil, Loth. synon. strabush, S.

Fr. estrumaçon a blow, a cuff. Hence, perhaps our term, a little varied, may have been used to denote a broil in which persons come to blows. A. Bor. to stramash, to crack or break irreparably, A. Bor. To STRAMP, v. a. To tread, to trample, S.

Sa Christ is signifyit the stane, Quhais monarchie sall neuer be gane: . For vnder his-dominioun,

All princis salbe strampit doun.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 108.

"Thou art over peart, Lown, to stramp on my foot; were thou out of the King's presence, I should take thee on the mouth." Pitscottie, p. 98.

Our trechour Peirs thair tyrrans treit, Quha jyb them, and thair substance eit, And on thair honour stramp.

Vision, st. 8. Evergreen, i. 216.
Germ. strampf-en, id. used by Luther, in his version, Job xxxix. 24. It is amusing to observe, that Ihre, in his Su.G. Glossary says concerning this pronunciation, vo. Trampa; "Germ. praeposita s, strumpfen;" and Wachter returns the compliment to the Swedes; "Suevi sibilo praefixo dicunt strampfen;" vo. Trampen. MoesG. anatrimp-an. Managai anatramp ina; Luke v. 1. Many pressed upon him.

STRAMP, s. The act of trampling, S.

STRAMULLION, s. A term used to denote a strong masculine woman, Fife.

STRAND, s. 1. A small brook, a rivulet. On salt stremes wolk Dorida and Thetis By rynnand strandis, Nymphes and Naiades. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 402. 28.

2. A gutter, a passage for water, S. Wallace and his thai wyst off no rameid Bot cauld wattir that ran throu owt a strand; In that lugeyng nane othir fud thai fand. Wallace, xi. 443. MS.

This sense, in which the term is still commonly used, as well as the former, is a deviation from that of all the other Northern dialects; in which it signifies, as in E., the shore, the margin of the sea, or any water.

STRANG, adj. 1. Strong, powerful.

Away, away, thou traitor strang! Out o' my sight soon may'st thou be! I grantit nevir a traitor's life, And now I'll not begin with thee.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 64.

Strange, id. is used by Blind Harry.

Schir Amar Wallange, a falss traytour strange, In Bothwell duelt, and thar was thaim amange. Wallace, iii. 261. MS.

A.S. strang, Alem. streng, robustus.

2. Harsh to the taste, bitter, S.B. Germ. streng, id. Isl. straung asper, durus, rigidus. Su.G. magstark is used in the same sense. De cibo dicitur qui cito nauseam movet, tanquam fortiorem diceres, quam ut a ventriculo digeri possit; q. too strong for the stomach or maw.

To STRANGE, v. n. To wonder, S.

I strange to hear you speak in sic a stile.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 164. Tall;

STRAPPING, STRAPPAN, part. adj. generally including the idea of handsomeness, S. -" Randolph, the English minister, proposed to hire a band of strapping Elliots, to find Home business at home, in looking after his corn and cattle." Keith ap. Minstrelsy Border, i. xxxv.

> Wi' kindly welcome Jenn'y brings him ben, A strappan youth; he takes the mother's eye; Blythe Jenny sees the visit's no ill ta'en;

The father cracks of horses, pleughs, and kye. Burns, iii. 176.

STRATH, s. A valley of considerable size, through which a river runs, S. It forms the initial syllable of a great many names of districts in S.

"In this district there is a considerable strath, i. e. valley, or level land between hills." P. Kiltearn. Ross. Statist. Acc. i. 260.

Gael. srath, a country confined by hills on two sides of a river.

To STRAVAIG, v. n. To stroll, to wander; to go about idly, S.

-Pith, that helps them to stravaig Owr ilka cleugh an' ilka craig.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 106.

"To vaig, is in common use, as well as stra-vaig." Gl. Compl. vo. Vagit, p. 379.

Ital. stravag-are, from Lat. extravag-are, to wander abroad; whence also Fr. extravaguer, id. SIRAUCHT, pret. Stretched.

Baith hys handis joyfuly furth straucht he than. Doug. Virgil, 189. 17.

It is also used for the part. pa., from streik; as raucht, from reik.

STR AUCH Γ, adj. Straight, direct. The straucht road, the direct way, S.

A.S. straege, Germ. streek, rectus.

This, I imagine, ought to be viewed as originally the part. pa. of A.S. strecc-an and other Goth. verbs, signifying to stretch. For a straight line gives us the idea of that which is stretched out between two points.

STRAUCHT, s. 1. A straight line, S.B.

2. A district, S.B. Straik, synon. q. v.

STRAUCHT, STRAWCHT, adv. 1. Straight, in a straight line, S.

This Malcolme enteryd in Scotland,

2. Directly, immediately.

And straught vnto the presence sodeynly Off dame Minerue, the pacient goddesse, Gude Hope my gyde led me redily.

King's Quair, iv. 3.

Germ. Belg. strack, cito; Dan. strax, id. STREAMERS, s. pl. The Aurora Borealis, or Northern lights, S.

The eiry bloodhound howled by night, The streamers flaunted red.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 391. Perhaps thus denominated from their resemblance of streamers or flags unfurled in the atmosphere.

This term seems not to have been properly adopted as E. It is mentioned, as used in the north; Baddam's Mem. Royal Soc. viii. 215. They are also called Merry Dancers and Pretty Dancers. STREAPE, s. A small rill. V. STRIPE.

STREASE, s. pl. Given in Gl. as not understood, is evidently for straws.

-Raising the devill with invocationes, With herbis, stanis, buikis, and bellis,-Palme croces, and knottis of strease.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 318. To STREEL, v. n. To urinate forcibly, Fife; synon. Strule, q. v. STREICH, adj. Stiff and affected in speaking.

And be I ornate in my speiche, Than Towsy sayis, I am sa streich, I speik not lyk thair hous menyie.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 63.

Perhaps from A.S. strace strict; or rather Fr. estreci, strairened, contracred, made short. The phrase indeed seems to signify, that he used the English pronunciation, as contrasted with the Scot-

To STREIK, STREEK, v. a. 1. To stretch, S. 2. To lay out a dead body, S. A. Bor.

The waxen lights were burning bright, And fair Annie streekit there.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 32.

"I find in Durant a pretty exact account of some of the ceremonies used at present in what we call laying out or streeking in the North.—A streeking-board is that on which they stretch out and compose the limbs of the dead body." Brand's Popular Antiquities, p. 23.

3. To engage in any work, the noun added determining the nature of the work, S.B.

Ae day last week, I mind it weel, She happ'd by chance to streek the wheel. Morison's Poems, p. 109.

i. e. to spin.

When cogs are skim'd, an' cirn streekit, The yellow drops fast in are steekit.

Ibid. p. 111.

Gae streek the rake, or to the house and spin; Who eats a breakfast, should a breakfast win. Ibid. p. 131.

A.S. strecc-an, expandere, Germ. streck-en. To STREIK, v. n. To extend.

Fra thine strekis the way profound anone Depe vnto hellis flude of Acherone.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 35.

To STREIK, STREEK, v. n. To go quickly, S.B. O'er hill and dale with fury she did dreel; A' roads to her were good and bad alike, Nane o't she wyl'd, but forward on did streek. Ross's Helenore, p. 56.

A.S. stric-an to go, to proceed; Isl. striuk-a, Su.G. stryk-a, currere, vagari. Isl. striuka a brautt, aufugere, q. to striek abroad. Su.G. stryka omkring i landet, to ramble about the country, Wideg. Germ. streich-en, Teut. stryck-en, tendere, proficisci. From Isl. striuk-a is formed strok-a cursitare: a boy, who has recently acquired the power of running, is called strak-r, G. Andr. Perhaps streik, to extend, is the radical term; because in running the limbs are thrown forward, q. at full stretch.

STREIK, s. 1. Speed, expedition. To mak little streik, to make small progress, S.B.

2. Exertion in whatever way, S.B. Contrive na we, your shaklebanes

Will mak but little streik.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 35.

3. Bustle, tumultuous noise, disturbance. It is said, that there is a michty streik in the house, when people are buzzing up and down in a confused way. To raise a streik, to make much ado, to make great noise or disturbance, S.B. V. the preceding v.

From Isl. striuk-a is formed hafzstroka, procella maris, q. a streik in the sea.

STREIN, STREEN, s. The strein, yesternight, S. The streen to chamber I him led; This night Gray Steel hath made his bed.

Sir Egeir, p. 53. V. MIRLIGOES.

Corr., as would seem, from Yistrene, q. v. STREK, adj. Tight, strait. E. strict is used in this sense.

For gif ye hauld your sale ouir strek, Thair may cum bubbis ye not suspek.

Schaw, Maitland Poems, p. 133. Germ. strack tensus, intensus; from streck-en tendere, intendere. Belg. strikk-en to tie, strikk, a knot; Su.G. strek, a rope, funis.

STREMOURIS, s. pl.

The twynkling stremouris of the orient Sched purpour sprayngis with gold and asure

Persand the sable barmkin nocturnall, Bet doun the skyes cloudy mantil wall.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 399. 26.

"The reader may judge for himself whether the poet means the Northern lights, or merely the streams of light which precede the rising of the sun;" Gl. Sibb.

There can be no reasonable doubt that the latter is meant. The description quoted does not apply to the Aurora Borealis; and the poet has previous:

Nyctimene affrayit of the licht,

Went vnder couert, for gone was the nycht. V. Streamers.

STRENEWITE', s. Fortitude, stoutness. B in thi name betaknis batalrus; W valyeantnes; S for strenewité.

Ballad, S.P.R. iii. 140.

From Lat. strenuit-as.

To STRENYIE, v. a. 1. To strain, to sprain. -Baith hir tendir handes War strenyeit sairly boundin hard with bandes. Doug. Virgil, 52. 36.

2. To constrain.

-We for our lyvis, And for our childre, and for our wywis, And for our fredome, and for our land, As strenyeit in to bataill for to stand. Barbour, xii. 248. MS.

Fr. estraind-re, Lat. string-ere.

STRENYEABILL, adj. Used to denote one who is possessed of so much property, that he can relieve his bail by being distrained.

"Ilk frie man may be borgh for himselfe in court, or outwith court, for his awin vnlaw, or other small things; swa he be responsall and strenyeabill to the judge." Quon. Attach. c. 37.

Contr. from distrenyie, Lat. distring-o.

To STRENKEL. V. STRINKIL.

To STRENTH, v. a. To strengthen.

"Forthir to strenth his manheid with more crafty slycht, he maid deip fowseis in the place quhare the battall wes set, and dang in staikis with scharp pointis rysing vp, couerit with scherrettis." Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 10.

STRENTHLY, adv. By force, by main strength.

The tothyr that makys ws eggyng, Is that that our possessionne Haldis strenthly, agayne resonn.

Barbour, iv. 541. MS.

SIRESS, s. 1. An ancient mode of taking up indictments for the Circuit courts.

"This method of taking up of dittay or indictments is substituted—in place of the old one by the stress (traistis) and porteous rolls mentioned in 1487. c. 99." Erskine's Instit. B. iv. T. 4. s. 86. Acts Ja. II. c. 86. Ed. 1566.

This learned writer seems to view stress as a corr. of Traistis, q. v.

2. Distress, the act of distraining.

" Of the taking of stressis be the Constabill." Acts Ja. II. 1457. c. 86. Tit. Edit. 1566. This in the act itself is called distressis.

STRESTELY, adv.

Thar duelt a Wallas welcummyt him full weill, Thocht Inglissmen thar of had litill feille. Bathe meite and drynk at his will he had thar. In Laglyne wode, quhen that he maid repayr, This Gentill man was full oft his resett; With stuff of houshald strestely he thaim bett.

Wallace, ii. 18. MS.

In Gl. Perth Edit. this is expl. fully. But it rather signifies, with difficulty, because of the danger of discovery by the English; from Fr. estrecé, estroisse, pinched, straitened. He did it, as we would say, S. with a stress.

To STRY, v. a. "To strive, to oppose," Pink. May no man stry him with strength, while his whele stondes.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 21.

Perhaps for try, the alliteration being preserved; or stroy, destroy.

STRIAK, s. Sound. Striak of the swesch, sound of the trumpet. V. STREIK, s. and SWESCH. To STRICK lint, to tie up flax in small handfuls, in preparing it for being milled, S.B. Either from Teut. streck-en tendere, q. to stretch it; or from the Sw. phrase straak-a lin, to ripple flax, changed in its sense. STRICK, s. A handful of flax knit at the end, in order to its being milled, S.B. Strike, Chauc. id.

Bot smoth it heng, as doth a strike of flax. Prol. Cant. Tales, ver. 678.

STRICT, adj. Rapid. 'The stream's very strict,

S., it runs rapidly.
"That the said dike is for the benefit of the Ford-shot, and without it the Ford-shot would be good for little, as it stems and calms the water where the shot is felled, while otherwise it would be a strict current." State, Leslie of Powis, v. Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 60.

It also occurs in a metaph. sense.

"Furnish him with strength, whereby he may row against the strictest streams of all temptations, till hee arrive into the hauen of the heavens, the sole and safe harberie of saluation." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1075.

Sw. straake, streke, the main current of a river, midstream; Wideg.

To STRIDDLE, v. n. To straddle, S.

From E. stride, or Dan. strett-a, pedibus divari-

STRIDELEGS, adv. Astride, astraddle. To ride stridelegs, to ride astride as a man does on horseback; as opposed to riding sidelegs, which denotes the female mode, S.

-Stride-legs, on a bougar-stake, Sat Cupid, wild an' clever.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 148.

STRIDELINGIS, adv. Astride.

Auld Willie Dillie, wer he on lyue, My life ful weill he culd discryue; How as ane chapman beiris his pack, I bure thy Grace vpon my back, And sum times strydlingis on my nek, Dansand with mony bend and bek.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 262.

V. Lingis, term.

To STRYK a battle or field; to fight. -That Jhon gat Edwarde, That come in-til Scotland syne,

And strak the battaile of Duplyne.

Wyntown, viii. 6. 278. We find in our Erische Cronickelis, that Coelus King of Norroway commandit his nobils to take his bodey and burey it in Colm-kill, if it chancit him to die in the iles; but he was so discomfitit, that ther remained not so maney of his armey as wald burey him ther; therfor he was eirded in Kyle, after he stroke ane field against the Scotts, and was vanquish be tham." Monroe's Descr. W. Iles, p. 20. This corresponds to Su.G. slag, as primarily signifying a stroke, in a secondary sense a battle.

STRYND, STREIND, s. 1. Kindred, race, offspring.

It suffycyt well than, Man-kynd, Anys suld cum of Adamys strynd.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1299.

Here was the noble kyn and anciant strynd, The maist douchty lynnage sprang be kynd Fra king Teucer-

Doug. Virgil, 187. 39. Chauc. strene, E. strain, id. A.S. strynd stirps, genus, from streon-an, strin-an, gignere.

2. A particular cast, disposition, or quality of any person, who in this respect is said to resemble another. It is generally used as to those related by blood, S.

"Scot. the word strynd or strain is metaph. used for the resemblance of the features of the body. As we say, He has a strynd or strain of his grandfather, i. e. resembles him;" Rudd.

It is also said, He takes a streind of such an one. STRYND, s. Expl. stream, rivulet, spring of Apollo chargit vs to speide bedene To Tyber flowand in the se Tyrrhene, And to the funtane and the stryndis clere Of Numicus the hallowit fresche riuere.

Doug. Virgil, 214. 1.

Vada sacra Numici, Virg.

It properly denotes the shallow places nigh the source of a river, which may be easily waded. This is probably the same with E. strand. Rudd. views it as the primary sense of strynd, signifying kindred. It may be a secondary one; but cannot well be the primary, because all the cognate terms in A.S. respect generation.

To STRING, v. a. To hang by the neck, S.

Tho' by the neck she should be strung,
She'll no desert.

Burns, iii. 25

I need scarcely say, that it is from the use of a string or halter.

To STRING, v. n. To be hanged, S. also used in cant E.

—" My accusations—are so well founded, that was there, (as we say in Scotland) a right sitting Sheriff, I would not doubt to see some Gentlemen string." Carnwath's Mem. Pref. ix.

STRINGIE, (g soft), adj. Stiff, affected, Loth. corr. perhaps from E. stingy.

To STRINKIL, STRENKEL, v. a. 1. To sprinkle, S.

—And with there bludis schede, as was the gise, The funeral flamb strinkill in sacrifyce.

Doug. Virgil, 362. 53.

2. To scatter, to strew, S.

Stones of sral they strenkel, and strewe. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 20.

Sibb. views this as a variation of sprinkle. Perhaps it may rather be traced to Su.G. stryk-a, colore obducere, with the insertion of n; as other terms, used to signify sprinkling, imply the idea of variegation; or to Teut. strekel-en, leviter tangere. V. Sprayng.

STRIP, STRYPE, STREAPE, s. A small rill, S. "In this ile of Mula is ane cleir fontane two mylis fra the see. Fra this fontane discendis ane litil burne, or strip rynnand ful of rounis to the seis. Thir rounis ar round & quhit schynand like perle full of thik humour: and within two houris eftir that thay come to see thay grow in gret cocles." Bellend. Desc. Alb. c. 13.

"Out of this well runs ther ane little strype downwith to the sea." Monroe's Iles, p. 31.

"This brooke Cedron—was a little streape that ran when it was raine, but in time of drought it was drie." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 3.

A strype is distinguished from a burn. "When the fish ascend forth of the said Loch, to the waters, burnes and strypes that fall in the same to spawn therein, there is great slauchter and destruction of them committed by the country people about." Acts Charles I. 1633. c. 29.

The gradation seems to be; watter a river, burn a brook, burnie a small brook, stripe a rill of the smallest kind, synon. sike.

Shall we consider this as a secondary use of stripe, used by Chaucer to signify race, kindred, from Lat. stirps; as strynd, a stream, has been viewed, in relation to strynd race? Or is it merely E. strip, used in a peculiar sense; as denoting a very narrow gully or passage for water?

To STROY, v. a. To destroy.

Mekyl of France oure-rad he than, Ande gret skaith did in all the land, Nakyn thing of froyt sparand, Abbays, and many solempne place, That stroyit, but recoverance, wace.

Wyntown, viii. 45. 26.

It was used also in E. Vol. II.

Lincolne & Lyndeseie thei stroied & wasted. R. Brunne, p. 42.

Ital. strugg-ere, id. corr. from Lat. destru-ere. STROKOUR, s. A flatterer.

Stuffets, strokours, and stafische strummels, Vyld haschbalds, haggarbalds, and hummels. Dunb. Compl. Maitland Poems, p. 109.

Isl. striuk-a, to stroke, metaph. to flatter. V. Wachter, vo. Streichen, mulcere. In like manner Fr. flat-er, whence E. flatter, also signifies to stroke gently.

To STROMMEL, v. n. "To stumble," Gl. Sibb. V. Strummal.

STRONACHIE, s. A stickleback, or banstickle, S. Gasterosteus spinachia, Linn. V. HECKLE-BACK.

To STRONE, STROAN, v. n. "To spout forth as a water pipe," Gl. Sibb.; also, to urine, synon. strule.

Nac tawted tyke, tho' e'er sae duddie, But he wad stan't, as glad to see him, And stroun't on stane, an' hillocks wi' him.

Burns, iii. 2.

Sibb. refers to Teut. stroom-en, fluere. But it has more resemblance to Isl. streing-r cataracta, fluvii fluxus fortior, G. Andr.; or to stroningum sparsim, Verel.

STRONTLY, adv. Strictly. Laws are said to be strontly led, i. e. rigidly observed on domysday.

I pray to Jesu Chryst verrey
For us his blud that bled,
To be our help on domysday,
Quhair lawis ar strontly led.

Bludy Serk, S.P.R. iii. 194.

This may be a derivative from streng strictus, rigidus; or perhaps rather abbrev. and corr. from Fr. estreint, estreint, id. V. STRUNTY.

STROP, STROAP, s. Treacle, Ang. Belg. stroop, id.

STROUL, s. Any stringy substance found among sorbile food; as, a lang stroul among the parritch, Fife.

Stroil, "a denomination for the long roots of weeds and grass in grounds not properly cultivated," Exm. Grose. Isl. strial raritas, strial-ast rarus ferri. Dan. straal, radius rarus. Gael. straoil-am, to draw after.

STROUNGE, STROONGE, adj. 1. Harsh, "especially to the taste, as a sloe," Gl. Sibb. S.

2. Surly, morose, S.

Isl. string-r denotes a sort of sorbile food, that is unpleasant to the taste; also, asper. Gefa string fra ser; Aspera verba evomere, gravibus convitiis uti; Gl. Landnamab. O.Fr. truang-er is synon. with gourmand-er; Male habere, indignum in modum excipere; Dict. Trev.

STROUP, STROOP, s. The spout of a pump, tea-kettle, tea-pot, &c. S.

Su.G. strupe, Isl. strup, guttur; q. the throat of a kettle, &c.

STROW, (pron. stroo), s. 1. A fit of ill humour, a tiff, Ang.

2. A quarrel, a state of variance, a scramble, S.

3 Ř

Strow has formerly been used as an adj. "Daft folk's no wise strow," S. Prov. i. e. not hard to be dealt with; "spoken when people advise what is not prudent, or promise what is not reasonable;" Kelly, p. 89.

Sibb. derives this from Teut. stoor-en turbare. But there is no affinity. The origin undoubtedly is Su.G. strug simultas.

Than drog hwar wid annan strugh Med krankom wilja och ondom hug.

Chron. Rhythm. p. 26. ap. Ihre.
"Then they cherished contentions among them,

With wounded hearts and hostility of mind."

Ok worom ther saate med helom hug,

Ok drog ingen sidan wid annan strug.

Ibid. p. 117.

"There they were saucht," or "reconciled with sincere mind; and neither cherished secret ill will against another." In some parts of Sweden, Ihre informs us, they still use stru to denote hatred or envy.

STROWBILL, adj. Troublesome; or perhaps

The red colour, quha graithly wnderstud, Betaknes all to gret battaill and blud; The greyn, curage, that thou art now amang, In strowbill wer thou sall conteyne full lang.

Wallace, vii. 138. MS.

It may be either corr. from trouble, or allied to Flandr. struvel-en horrere; Germ. straub, strobel-har, horricomis, having the hair standing on end. STROWD, s. A senseless silly song, S.B.

Isl. strad, stred-a, futuere obscaenum. To STRULE, v. n. 1. To urine, S.

2. It occasionally signifies, in a general sense, to pour water from one vessel to another, to emit any liquid in a stream, S. streel, Fife.

Mod. Sax. Fris. Sicamb. struyl-en, strull-en, streyl-en, reddere urinam, mejere; Sw. stril-a, to stream out, to gush out; Wideg.

STRUM, s. A pettish humour, S.B. synon. strow, stront, strunt.

Su.G. strug, stru, is probably the radical term. V. Strow.

STRUM, adj. Pettish, sullen, S.B.

Perhaps it merits observation that Isl. stremb-en signifies, dry, astringent, difficult; spissus, stypticus, difficilis; G. Andr.

STRUMMAL, STRUMMIL, adj. Stumbling.

He stockerit lyke ane strummal aver.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 94.

My strummil stirk yit new to spane.

Clerk, Evergreen, ii. 21. st. 8. Sibb., vo. Strommel, properly refers to Teut. striemel-en, vacillare, cespitare, nutare gressu. Strompel-en is used in the same sense; Isl. stumr-a, id. A stumral horse, is a phrase still used S. to denote one that is habituated to stumbling; and may either be traced per metath. to Strummal, or deduced from Stammer, q. v.

STRUMMEL, STRUMBELL, s. A person so feeble that he cannot walk without stumbling.

Stuffets, strokours, and stafische strummels.

Dunb. Compl. Maitland Poems, p. 109.

i. e. old men, who are under the necessity of leaning on a staff, for supporting them in walking. Strumbell, ibid. p. 111. V. FORYEING.

To STRUNT, v. n. 1. To walk sturdily, S. I canna say but ye strunt rarely, Owre gauze and lace.

Burns, iii. 228.

2. To walk with state, to strut, S.

The wooer strunted up the house;

And vow! but he was wond'rous crouse.

Old Song.

STRUNT, s. "Spirituous liquor of any kind," Gl. Burns, S.O.

Syne, wi' a social glass o' strunt, They parted aff careerin

Fu' blythe that night.

Burns, iii. 139.

Fr. estreintif; q. astringent? or allied to the preceding v. q. elevating?

STRUNT, s. A pet, a sullen fit. "To tak the strunt, to be petted or out of humour," Gl. Rams.

Wow, man, that's unco sad!—Is that ye'r jo Has ta'en the strunt?———

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 4. Sibb. offers various conjectures as to the origin; but they are all unnatural. It may be radically the same with its synon. Strum, q. v.; or the adj. from which Strontly is formed.

To STRUNT, v. n. To tak the strunt, to become pettish, S.

STRUNTAIN, s. A sort of woollen network.

"Before this period, the only manufacture was what is called Stow struntain, made of the coarsest wool, and wrought by the women on a loom like a bed-heck." P. Stow, M. Loth. Statist. Acc. vii. 138.

Sw. strunt, trash, any thing worthless, refuse, Wideg. This corresponds to the quality of the wool. STRUNTY, adj. Short, contracted; as, a strunty gown, Ang.

Fr. estreint, straitned, pinched, shrunk up. STRUTE, STROOT, adj. 1. "Stuffed full," Gl. Rams. S.

2. Drunken, S.

When lying bed-fast sick and sair, To parish priest he promis'd fair, He ne'er wad drink fou ony mair: But, hale and tight,

He prov'd the auld man to a hair, Strute ilka night.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 237.

3. Metaph. vain-glorious.

E. strut, O.E. strout, to swell, to protuberate; prae superbia cristas erigere, &c. Jun. Etym. Germ. strotz-en turgere. The term primarily respects what is turgid in a literal sense.

STUDY, STUTHY, STYDDY, s. An anvil, a smith's forge; stiddie, S. studdie, S.B.

The large cone, and all the mont wythin.

The huge coue, and all the mont wythin, For straik of studyis, gan resound and din. Doug. Virgil, 258. 21. Fine of the gretest and maist cheif cieteis, Thare wappinnis to renew in all degreis, Set vp forgeis and stele styddyis syne.

Ibid. 230. 16.

Rudd. derives the S. word, as Johns. does E. stithy, from A.S. stith strong. But Sibb. justly mentions Isl. stedia incus. He indeed also refers to the A.S. adj. Stedia, however, is derived from Su.G. sted-ia, to prop, to make firm, as denoting any thing on which another solidly rests. V. Gl. Kristnisag.

Styth is used by Chaucer in the same sense with

E. stithy.

-The smith

That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his styth. Knightes T. ver. 2028.

To STUFF, v. a. 1. To supply, to furnish, to provide.

Quhill I had ony thing to spend, And stuffit weill with warldis wrak, Amang my freinds I wes weill kend.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 184. i. e. "amply supplied with the trash of this world." Fr. estoff-er, etoff-er, id. from Teut. Germ. stoff, apparatus, Wachter. Teut. stoffe, materies.

2. To supply with men; referring to warfare. Hay, hay, go to, than cry thay with ane schout,

And with ane huge brute Troianis at schort There wallis stuffit, and closit every port.

Doug. Virgil, 275. 4. It is also applied to the field of battle. —Vmbro eik, the stalwart chiftane rude,— The bargane stuffis, relevand in agane.

Ibid. 337. 18.

Hence, as Rudd. observes, the phrase so common in Wallace, to stuff the chass, to furnish men necessary for giving chace to a flying enemy.

The Sotheron fled, and left thaim in that place. Horss thai ran to stuff the chass gud spede.

Wallace, v. 935. MS. Fr. Bien garnir et estoffer les villes de frontiere.

Teut. stoffer-en, munire. Stuff, s. 1. "Corn or pulse of any kind," S.

Gl. Burns. q. provision for sustenance.

The simmer had been cauld an' wat, An' stuff was unco green.

Burns, iii. 132.

2. This term is used in a singular mode of expression. It is said of one, who will not yield in reasoning, or in fighting, "He is good stuff, or, a piece of good stuff," S.

This is undoubtedly a Fr. idiom. Chevaliers de bonne estoffe, Knights well armed, and well managing their arms; Cotgr.

3. The men placed in a garrison for its defence. The wardane than fra Perth is gane, To Stryvelyne wyth of his ost ilkane, That castelle till assege stowtly, That than Schyre Thomas of Rukby Held wyth othyr worthy men, That of the stwff war wyth hym then. Wyntown, viii. 37. 138.

4. A relief, or reserve in the field of battle.

The hardy Bruce ane ost abandownyt, xx thowsand he rewllyt be force and wit. Wpon the Scottis his men for to reskew, Serwyt thai war with gud speris enew: And Byschop Beik a stuff till him to be. Wallace, x. 321. MS.

STUFF, s. Dust, Ang. Teut. stuyve, stof, pulvis.

STUFFET, s.

Stuffets, strokours, and stafische strummels. Dunb. Compl. Maitland Poems, p. 94. Mak your abbottis of richt religious men, Quhilk to the pepill Christis law can ken: Bot not to rebaldis new cum from the roist, Nor of ane stuffet stollin out of ane stabil, The quhilk into the scule maid neuer na coist. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 286.

It seems to signify a lackey, a foot-boy; corr. from Fr. estaffier, id. or estafete, Ital. staffetta, a courier.

To STUG, v. a. To stab, to prick with a sword. "They stugged all the beds with their swords, and threatned to rost the children in the fire, and forced one of them to run from the house with nothing on him but his shirt, about half a mile in [a] dark night." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 173. V. Stok, v. STUGGY, adj. Stubble is said to be stuggy, when it is of unequal length, in consequence of carelessness in cutting down the corn.

Germ. stucke, pars a toto separata; or Su.G. stygg teter, deformis.

STULT, adj. Having the appearance of intrepidity, or perhaps of haughtiness.

Wallace and his than till aray he yeid, With x thousand off douchty men in deid. Quha couth behald thair awfull lordly wult, So weill beseyn, so forthwart, stern and stult, Sa gud chyftanys, as with sa few thar beyn, Without a King, was neuir in Scotland seyn. Wallace, x. 78. MS.

This may indeed be merely metri causa for stout, which is the reading of Edit. 1648. It must be observed, however, that Su.G. stolt, Isl. stollt-ur, have the sense of magnificus, fastuosus; Teut. stolte, superbus. This has a strict analogy with the phrase, awfull lordly wult. The Su.G. word also signifies what is excellent in its kind. Ett stolt hus, magnificent buildings; en stolt haest, a generous steed. Swa war hon stoltz ok hofwelik; Adeo erat splendida et decens; Chron. Rhythm. p. 63. ap. Ihre. He views E. stout as from the same stock.

STUMFISH, adj. Strong, coarse, rank; applied to grain when growing, Tweedd.

Germ. staemmig robustus, a term derived, according to Wachter, from stumm stirps, as expressing the quality of the trunk of a tree: stumpf blunt, as denoting a trunk wanting the top or point.

To STUMMER, v. n. To stumble.

Thair stedis stakkerit in the stour, and stude stummer and. Gawan and Gol. ii. 25. He slaid and stummerit on the sliddry ground. And fell at erd grufelingis amid the fen. Doug. Virgil, 138. 41.

Isl. stumr-a, cespitare.

3 R 2

To STUMP, v. n. 1. To go on one leg; to halt,

Teut. stompe, mutilatum membrum. Hence stompen hebetare.

2. To walk about stoutly; at times implying the idea of heaviness, clumsiness, or stiffness in motion, S.

An' stumpan on his ploughman shanks, He in the parlour hammer'd.

Burns, i. 139.

STUMPLE, adj. Mutilated; used also as a s. for any thing of this description, as a limb which has undergone amputation, S.

Su.G. stumpig, curtus, mutilatus; Ihre, vo.

Stufwa.

To STUNAY, v. a. To confound. V. STONAY. To STUNGLE, v. a. Slightly to sprain any joint or limb. I've stungled my kute, I have sprained my ancle, S.B.

Perhaps a dimin. from E. stun, or Fr. estonn-er. STUNKARD, adj. Sullen. V. STONKERD.

Germ. stenker litigator. Wachter derives this from Dan. sting-en, to strike with the horn; stang-er, an animal that strikes in this manner.

STUPE, s. A foolish person, S.B.

Teut. stuype deliquium, defectio animi.

STURDY, s. A vertigo, a disease to which black cattle when young, as well as sheep are subject. A bag of water gathers in the front between the horns, which, producing giddiness, makes them run round about, S.

"The principal diseases in sheep are—5th, the sturdy, or water in the head. The scull grows soft above where the water is lodged; and they are sometimes cured by a trepan performed by a herd's knife." P. Linton, Tweedd. Statist. Acc. i. 138.

"The Sturdy—When the forehead feels soft, a knife is inserted: both skin and bone are raised up, and the breath of the animal is stopped, till a small globule of fluid matter issues at the orifice." Prize

Essays Highl. Soc. S. ii. 208.

The immediate origin is most probably O.Fr. estourdi dizzy-headed; estourd-cr to make giddy, or dizzie in the head, Cotgr. This, however, may be radically allied to Belg. stoor-en to trouble, to disturb, or Su.G. stort-a, to fall or rush headlong. STURE, STUR, STOOR, adj. 1. Strong, hardy, robust, S.

He wes a stout carle and a sture; And off him selff dour, and hardy.

Barbour, x. 158. MS.

O der Wallace, wmquhill was stark and stur, Thow most o neide in presoune till endur. Wallace, ii. 206. MS.

The tothir of limmis bygger & corps mare sture is.

Doug. Virgil, 142. 11.

In his hand the self tyme had he
Ane bustuous spere percais baith stiff and sture.

Ibid. 383. 39.

2. Rough in manner, austere, S.
He lighted at lord Durie's door,
And there he knocked, most manfullie;

And up and spake lord Durie, sae stoor, "What tidings, thou stalward groom, to me?"

Minstrely Border, iii. 115.

3. Rough, hoarse. A sture voce, a harsh voice, Gl. Shirr. S.

Rudd. conjecturally refers to Lat. auster-us. Although in sense 2. it may be allied to Teut. stuer torvus, trux, austerus; I apprehend that it primarily denotes strength or hardiness; A.S. Su.G. stor, anc. stur, ingens, magnus, Isl. stor, stoer. Lapp. stuorra, id. Isl. styrdr, rigidus, asper, is also, like the S. term, used to denote a harsh voice. Germ. storr asper, rigidus.

Stor, store, is used in a sense nearly akin,

Ywaine and Gawin.

The king and his men ilkane Wend tharwith to have bene slane; So blew it stor with slete and rayn.

E. M. Rom. i. 55.

Ritson renders it "loud, blustering;" rather, severe, keen, rough. For it is elsewhere said;

The store windes blew ful lowd, So kene come never are of clowd.

Ibid. p. 16.

STURNE, s. Trouble, vexation, disquietude.
This word occurs in one of the rubrics in Barbour's Bruce, Edit. 1620, p. 201, although not in MS.

How Sir Edward withoutten sturne, Vndertook the battell of Bannockburn,

It is doubtful, whether this should be traced to Belg. stoor-en to move, to trouble, whence stoor-enis disturbance; or to stirn, stern, Su.G. stierne, the forehead, used metaph. as denoting that displeasure often manifested by the contraction of the eyebrows. Ihre thinks that stern, torvus, acknowledges this as its origin.

To STURT, v. a. To vex, to trouble, S.
Insaciat of haitrent I rest in pece,
That was sa bald afore, and neuer wald ceis,
Quhen thay ware chasit of thare natyfe land,
To sturt them on the streme fra hand to hand.
Doug. Virgil, 216. 28.

But human bodies are sic fools,
For a' their colleges and schools,
That when nae real ills perplex them,
They mak enow themsels to vex them;
An' ay the less they had to sturt them,
In like proportion less will hurt them.
Burns, iii. 9. 10.

Su.G. stoert-a praecipitem agere, deturbare; stoerta en i olycka, aliquem in infortunium praecipitem dare. This Ihre properly derives from the obsolete v. stoer-a, syuon. with A.S. styr-ian movere; Germ.

sturz-en praecipitare, deturbare. For to sturt is, greatly to stir oue.

STURT, s. 1. Trouble, disturbance, vexation, S.B.

Dolorus my lyfe I led in sturt and pane, Henely wittand my innocent frende thus slane. Doug. Virgil, 41. 36.

Suffer me swelt, and end this cruell lyffe, Quhil doutsum is yet all syc sturt and striffe. Itid. 263. 40. 2. Wrath, indignation, heat of temper, S.B. Ane bent ane bow, sic sturt couth steir him, Grit skayth war to haif skard him.

Chr. Kirk, st. 8.

"A pund of patience is worth a stane of sturt;" S. Prov.

" Sturt pays no debt;" S. Prov.; "spoken with resentment, to them who storm when we crave of them their just debts." Kelly, p. 292.

Dan. stird, styrt, strife, is probably allied. To STURT, v. n. To startle, to be afraid, S.

He marches thro' amang the stalks, Tho' he was something sturtin; The graip he for a harrow taks, An' haurls at his curpin.

Burns, iii. 133.

STURTSUMNES, s. Crossness of temper, Maitland Poems.

To STUT, v. a. To prop, to support, with stakes or pillars, S.; steet, Aberd.

"In the north of Scotland, to steet still signifies to prop, and a steet, a prop." Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 227, N.

SUBCHETT, Subditt, s. One who is subject to another.

Defy the warld, feynyeit and fals, With gall in hart, and hunyt hals. Quha maist it servis sall sonast repent: Of quhais subchetts sour is the sals. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 122.

"It was also ane odious thyng to ane kyng to fecht aganis his subdittis." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 19, a.

The former is immediately allied to Fr. soubject, O.E. subgette, Gower, Lat. subject-us: the latter to subdit-us. By writers of the dark ages, subditi is often used as equivalent to vasalli. V. Du Cange. SUBERBYLLIS, s. pl. Suburbs.

SUCKEN of a mill, s. 1. The jurisdiction attached to a mill; or that extent of ground, the tenants of which are bound to bring their grain thither, S.

"The astricted lands are called the thirl, or the sucken; and the persons subjected to the astriction get the name of suckeners. Hence the duties payable by those who come voluntarily to the mill, are called outsucken, or out-town multures; and those that are due by tenants within the sucken, in-town or insucken multures." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. T. 9. s. 20.

2. Vulgarly used to denote the dues paid at a mill, S.; shucken, Moray.

Her daddie, a cannie auld carl,

Had shucken and mouter a fouth.

To SUDDILL, SUDDLE, v. a. To sully, to defile. S.

In the dusty pouder here and thare Suddill and fule his crispe and yallow hare.

Doug. Virgil, 410. 1.

Sibb. refers to Fr. souill-er. But this is the origin of E. soil, S. sule, also used here. Suddill is more directly allied to Teut. sodel-en, Germ. sudel-n, id. inquinare, polluere. Wachter views this as formed from sul-en, id. d being inserted. MoesG. saul-jan, A.S. syl-ian, Franc. sal-on.

SUDEREYS, s. pl. A name given to some of the Hebudae.

"The title of these prelates, during the conjunction of Man and Sodor, had been universally mistaken, till the explications of that most ingenious writer, Dr. Macpherson: it was always supposed to have been derived from Sodor, an imaginary town either in Man or in Iona: whose derivation was taken from the Greek Soter, or Saviour. During the time that the Norwegians were in possession of the isles, they divided them into two parts: the northern, which comprehended all that lay to the North of the point of Ardnamurchan, and were called the Nordereys, from Norder, North, and ey, an island. And the Sudereys took in those that lay to the South of that promontory." Pennant's Voyage Hebr. p. 294.

The propriety of this etymon appears beyond a doubt from the following passage.

Logmadr het son Gudraudur Sudreyia konongs; Logmadr var settr til landvarnar i Nordrey-om. "The son of Gudraud, king of the Sudereys, was called Logmadr, [or Lagman, q. Law-man]. He was set over the Nordereys, that he might protect the lands." Snorr. Sturles. ap. Johns. Antiq. Celt. Scand. p. 233.

The valyeand Hectour loist the swete
On Achilles spere.——

Doug. Virgil, 16. 13.
Both Junius and Rudd. view this as an adj., signifying sweet, and think that the term life must be supplied. Sibb. has justly rendered swete life; referring to A.S. swat sanguis.

This is a Goth. idiom. We learn from Ihre, that Su.G. swett properly denotes humour, moisture, but that the term has been restricted by use to two principal humours of the body. It not only signifies sweat, but also blood. The latter sense, he says, anciently prevailed throughout the North. In this sense it is still used in Upland; as is sueit in Iceland.

* To SUFFER, v. n. To delay.

It is said of Wallace, after he received an invitation, while in France, to return to his country, and take the crown;

The wryt he gat, bot yeit suffer he wald, For gret falsheid that part hym dyd off ald. Mekill dolour it did him in his mynd, Off thar mysfayr, for trew he was and kynd. He thocht to tak amendis off that wrang; He ansuerd nocht, bot in his wer furth rang. Wallace, x. 1057. MS.

SULE, s. A ring with a swivel, S.B.

Seren. derives the E. word from Isl. sweif volva, instrumentum quo aliquid circumrotatur; sweifl-u volutare. Su.G. soelia, however, denotes a ring into which a thong is put, Isl. sylgia, which, because of its rotundity, G. Andr. derives from sole, the sun; others from Fenn. sul-ien, to close.

SUM, a termination of adjectives, frequently occurring in S.

Dr. Johnson has given so loose a definition of E. some, that no just idea can be formed from it, either as to its meaning or its origin. "A termina. tion," he says, " of many adjectives which denote quality or property of any thing; as, gamesome."

Sum is used by us in three different senses.

1. It denotes conjunction; as, threesum, three to-

It is nocht possibil to gar thresum keip consel, and speciale in causis of trason." Compl. S. p. 205. Thresum occurs in the same sense in The Bruce.

Jamys of Dowglas, at the last, Fand a litill sonkyn bate, And to the land it drew fut liate. Bot it sa litill wes, that it Mycht our the wattir bot thresum flyt. Barbour, iii. 420. MS.

He also uses twasum and fyvesum in a similar signification.

- That wes in an ewill plass,

That sa strayt and sa narow was, That twa um samyn mycht nocht rid In sum place off the hillis sid.

Barbour, x. 19. MS. Samyn here is redundant; the idea being conveyed by the termination of the preceding word.

Dr. Leyden, in his Gl., refers to Su.G. samja and sama (Leg. saem-ia, saem-a) consentire. "Hence," he adds, " the termination sam expresses union or agreement; as hedersam, consistent with honesty; warsam, consistent with prudence; fraendsaemia; jus consanguinitatis, magsaemia, jus affinitatis." It may be further observed, that Su.G. sam, whence Ihre deduces saem-ia, saem-a, signifies, plurium unitas; and that sam occurs in some A.S. compound terms, as equivalent to Lat. con, as sam-hiwan conjuges, sam-maele concordes, sam-wyrcan co-opera-

Twasum is used Caithn: for two acting together. Thus, a sick person is said to be lifted by twasum. Threesum, generally through S., denotes the union: of three, in a particular kind of dance, called a threesum reel.

2. It signifies similitude, S.

This is the proper idea, when it seems to be used, in a general way, as denoting quality. It is commonly affixed to a s., and forms an adj., expressing a property analogous to the idea conveyed by the s.; as, lufsum, amiable, hairtsum, cheerful, winsum, id. jucundus, gaudio similis.

Su.G. sam, mentioned above, also bears thissense. Ihre renders fridsam, pacifico similis. Som is used in the same way. Thus also, according to SUM SUM Wachter, sam occurs in Germ. tugendsam virtuosus, virtuti similis; heilsam salutaris, saluti similis; healthy, bearing the likeness, or exhibiting the appearance, of health. I need scarcely observe, that this is the obvious sense of S. halesum. A.S. sum, in this connexion, seems frequently synon. with Su.G. and Germ. sam. Thus sibsum pacificus may literally signify, paci similis. Lye, vo. Sum, expl. win-sum, jucundus aliquantum. But as wyn signifies gaudium, perhaps it is rather, gaudio similis, exhibiting the appearance of joy.

Wachter has observed that lich is synon, with the term. sam: giving as an example friedsam and friedlich, which are promiscuously used, in the sense of pacific; Proleg. sect. 6. in vo. This is confirmed by our use of hairtsum and hairtlie, as conveying the very same idea.

3. In some degree, S. Both Ihre and Wachter view A.S. sum as perfectly synon, with Su.G. and Germ. sam. Now, Lye observes that the term. sum, in certain A.S. words, has its origin from the pronoun sum, aliquid, aliquantum. There are indeed various words, both in A.S. and S., in which it seems most naturally to bear this signification; as A.S. lang-sum, diuturnus aliquantum, long in some degree, S. id.; fowsum, applied to things that are more full, than what is necessary; as to a piece of dress that has rather a clumsy appearance, from its being made too large.

SUM, adj. Some; used distributively, denoting first the one, then the other.

"Betwix Clid and Lennox lyis the baronie of Renfrew, in the quhilk ar twa lochis, namyt Quhynsouth and Leboth, sum. xx. and sum. xii. mylis of lenth." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 7. Unus and alter are the correspondent terms used by Boece.

This is an A.S. idiom. Sum waes bescoren preoste, sum waes laewede; Hic erat attonsus clericus, ille erat laicus; Bede ap. Lye. MoesG. sums and suma also signify unus, a, um. V. Hickes Gramm. A.S. and MoesG. p. 36.

SUMDELL, SUMDELE, adv. 1. Somewhat, in some degree.

And he, that hard sa suddanly Sic noyis, sumdele affravit was.

Barbour, vi. 221. MS.

2. Used as respecting quantity or number. Bot thai the chansell sturdely Held, and thaim defendyt wele, Till off thair men war slayne sumdell. Barbour, v. 358. MS.

It occurs in sense 1. O.E.

But she was sumdele deaf, and that was skaith. Chaucer, Prol. W. Bathes T.

A.S. sum daele, aliqua parte, partim.

SUMER, s. A sumpter-horse; Barbour, xix. 746. Leg. summer, as in MS.

SUMMER-BLINK, s. A transient gleam of sunshine, S.; used also metaph.

"Yet I am in this hot summer-blink with the tear in my eye." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 86. V. BLENK.

SUMMER-COUTS, SIMMER-COUTS, s. pl. The name given to the exhalations seen to ascend from the ground in a warm day, S.B.

And she is like to sconfice wi' the heat: The summer-couts were trembling here and there. Ross's Helenore, p. 27.

 Het, het was the day, The simmer-couts were dancing brae frae brae. Ibid. p. 87.

Perhaps q. summer-colts, in allusion to the undulating motion of these vapours, which may have been thought to resemble the frisking of young horses. These are called king's weather, Loth. In the South of S. it is pron. king's wethers; and it has been supposed to refer to the gay and unsteady motion of wedders, analogous to the other designation of couts. It may deserve to be mentioned, that an Isl. term very nearly resembling this, kyngevedr, has a sense almost directly contrary, denoting a storm; tempestas saeva; Sw. synon. stark storm; Verel. Ind.

SUMMER-SOB, s. A summer-storm, Ang. - Yon summer-sob is out;

This night bodes well, spy, 'oman, round about, The morn will better prove.-

Ross's Helenore, p. 75.

SUMMYN, adj. Some.

All and summyn, all and every one. Or list apprufe thay pepill all and summyn To giddir myddill, or jone in lyig or band.

Doug. Virgil, 103. 35.

A.S. sumne signifies, aliquot. It is properly the accus. of sum aliquis. Sumon is also used as the ablat. pl.

SUMP, s. The pit of a mine.
"A shaft, or sump, as the miners term it, was made, to the depth of several fathoms, immediately below the bottom of the waste, from whence the rich mass of ore, above-mentioned, had been taken, and a drift carried on, in the direction of the silver vein, upon that level." P. Alva, Stirl. Statist. Acc. xviii. 142.

SUMPH, s. A blockhead, a soft blunt fellow, S. "Better thole a grumph than a sumph." Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 20.

The finish'd mind, in all its movements bright, Surveys the self-made sumph in proper light, Allows for native weakness, but disdains Him who the character with labour gains.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 347. Callander derives this from Su.G. stumm, balbutiens, stuttering; MS. Notes on Ihre, (in vo).

Perhaps it is rather allied to Germ. sumpf, Teut. sompe, a marsh; or Su.G. swamp, a spunge, also, a mushroom, q. fungosus homo; as, a fozy chield, S.B. Ihre, vo. Swamp, refers to Gr. σομφος, spungy. Teut. sompe is sceptrum morionis. It may be observed, however, that if we suppose m to have been inserted, the word would be literally analogous to Teut. suff-en delirare, desipere, hallucinari; suf, delirus. Thus there would be no occasion for having recourse to a figurative origin.

To Sumph, v. n. To dote, to be in a state of

I will affirm they're skant of wit, Who in a supream court like that, Will sumph and vote they wot not what. Cleland's Poems, p. 113.

SWA, SWAY, conj. adv. V. SA, SUA, and ALS. SWACK, adj. 1. Limber, pliant, S.

"S. swack, i. c. supple, flexible;" Rudd. vo. Swik. 'Twill mak ye suple, swack, and young.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 40. -She was swift and souple like a rae, Swack like an eel, and calour like a trout; And she become a fairly round about.

Ross's Helenore, p. 16. V. GAUCIE. 2. Clever, active, nimble, S.B.

Teut. swack, wack, lentus, quod facile flectitur, flexilis. As wack is synon. with swack, it seems the radical term; A.S. wac lentus, flexibilis; Su.G. Germ. wig, alacer, agilis, Isl. vig-ur, id. Isl. sweigia incurvare, and Teut. swack-en vibrare, are probably from this root. The transition, from flexibility of form to nimbleness, is perfectly natural. Thus, a swack chield denotes one, who is not only agile in his motions, but whose bodily form indicates agility.

To SWAY, SWEY, v. n. (pron. swey). 1. To incline to one side, S.

-Thir towris thou seis down fall and sway, And stane fra stane down bet, and reik vpryse. Doug. Virgil, 59. 18.

Growing corn, or grass, is said to be swayed, when wind-waved, S.

" For the heart, pleasing that device, in so far swayeth to it." Guthrie's Trial, p. 116.

Johns. derives E. sway from Germ. schweb-en to move. But both this and the S. v. are allied to Isl. sweig-ia, Su.G. swig-a inclinare, flectere.

2. To move backwards and forwards on a seat or pillow, suspended by a rope fastened at both ends to the branch of a tree, or any similar support, S. swey, A. Bor. id. swing, E. The E. word, corresponding to Su.G. swaeng-a swing-a, seems formed from swig-a, or Isl. sweig-ia, mentioned above.

SWAY, s. 1. A moveable instrument of iron, of a rectangular form, fastened to one of the jambs of a chimney, on which pots and kettles are suspended over the fire, S.

2. A swing, or rope fastened for the purpose of swinging. V. the v.

SWAIF, v.

Receive, and swaif, and haif, ingraif it here. Bannatyne Poems, p. 201.

"Probably kiss, receive cordially," Lord Hailes. It may rather signify, "ponder this bill or poem, which I have written for your use;" Su.G. swaefwu, Isl. sweif-a, to be poised (librari); also, to hover, to fluctuate. But the first sense is preferable.

SWAIF, SUAIF, s. A kiss.

Adew the fragrant balmie suaif, And lamp of ladies lustiest! My faithful hairt scho sall it haif, To byd with hir it luvis best.

Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 167.

A.S. swate ale, beer. SWAYWEYIS, adv. Likewise; Acts Ja. I. To SWAK, SWAKE, v. a. 1. To throw, to cast with force.

The entrellis eik fer in the fludes brake In your reuerence I sall flyng and swake.

Doug. Virgil, 135. 30. Neuir sa swiftlie quhidderand the stane flaw, Swakkit from the ingyne vnto the wall.

Ibid. 446. 47.

2. To strike, S.B.

According to Rudd., it is much the same with E. swag; Sibb. views it as formed ex sono. It is more probable allied to Teut. swack-en vibrare; as persons are wont to poise, and sometimes to brandish, a missile weapon, before it is thrown.

The term may perhaps be traced to the same origin with Su.G. swik-a to frustrate, to deceive. For. as Ihre observes, this is a v. which properly respects athletic exercises, and is applied to him who overthrows another, with whom he wrestles, by a certain inclination of his body, i. e. by suddenly twisting or throwing his body into a new position. Lipsius accordingly renders Alem. besuiken supplanta. Ihre seems to view swik-a as a derivative from swiga loco cedere, Isl. sweig-ia incurvare.

Nor would this disprove the affinity of our verb to Teut. swack-en. For Teut. swick denotes a lash, to which sense 2 agrees, from swiek-en, synon. with swack-en, vibrare; Su.G. sweg, which has the same signification, is deduced from Isl. sweig-ia. SWAK, SWAKE, s. 1. A throw, Rudd.

2. A stroke; properly a hasty and smart blow. That man hald fast his awyn swerd In-til his neve, and wp thrawand He pressit hym, noucht agayne standard That he wes pressit to the erd, And wyth a swake thare of his swerd [Throw] the sterap lethir and the bute Thre ply or four, a-bove the fute He straik the Lyndesay to the bane.

3. A violent dash, as that of waves. Hie as ane hill the jaw of the watter brak, And in ane hepe come on them with a swak. Doug. Virgil, 16. 25.

4. Metaph. a little while.

-He had slummerit bot an swak, Quhen the fyrst silence of the quyet nycht His myddell cours and cyrkyl run had rycht, Prouokyng folk of the fyrst slepe awaik.

Doug. Virgil, 256. 38. " So Scot. we say, I'll be with you with a rap, and with a clap [more commonly in a rap, &c.] and Scot. Bor. in a weaving: and so our author uses frequently the word thraw;" Rudd.

To SWAK away, v. n. To decay, to consume, to waste.

Yet deid sall tak him be the bak, And gar him cry, Allace! Than sall he swak away with lak.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 182. st. 2. Lord Hailes thinks that there is an " allusion to the oscillatory motion, remarkable when great loads are carried on mens shoulders." But as the person is described as in the hands of Deid or Death, the language does not seem expressive of motion, but of decay. Dan. swackk-er, to waste; Teut. swack-en, Germ. schwach-en, to become weak, to fail; Teut. swack, feeble, languid, enervated.

SWAK, s. Wallace, vii. 1043, Edit. Perth. V.

Dan. swang, lean, meagre, thin; also, hungry. V. Swamp. Germ. schwank, agilis, mobilis, quod dicitur de gracili et macilento, quia caeteris alacrius movetur, Wachter; from sweng-en, to move quickly, whence schwank-en motitare. The words of this form may be all traced to Swack. This seems to suggest the most natural etymon of Swanky, s. q. v. Swanky, s. An active or clever young fellow, S.

Doug. uses the term. V. SWANE.

SWANKY, adj.

Sweir swapit, swanky swyne, kepar ay for swats. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54. st. 11.

It may signify empty, hungry; as Kennedy is compared to a sow still seeking to catch wort. V. SWAMP and SWANK.

To SWAP, v. a. To exchange, S.

This word appears to be also O.E., being mentioned by Phillips; by Johns. too, but without any authority. Dryden uses swop, id. Johns. calls it a low word, of uncertain derivation. The learned and ingenious Callander, in his MS. notes on Ihre, views it as allied to Su.G. omswep, ambages, a term also used in Germ., traduced from A.S. ymb-swape, id. turnings and compassings, Somner; from ymb-swipan circumire; as denoting the circumvention often used in bartering commodities.

Dr. Johns. gives the E. word as of uncertain origin. But I observe a passage in Orkneyinga Saga, ap. Johns. Antiq. Celto-Scand., which, as it refers to a very ancient custom among those who wished to cement their friendship, a custom which still prevails when friends are about to part for a long time, seems also to point out the origin of this word. Their Gilla-Kristr oc Kali skiptuz giofum vid at skilnadi, oc het huor othrum sinne vinattu fullkominne huar sem fundi theirra baeri saman. Gilchrist and Kali swaupit gifts, when they were about to separate (skail) from each other, mutually promising entire friendship wheresoever they should afterwards meet together. P. 253.

Instead of Isl. skipt-a, in Su.G. it is skift-a (mutare). E. shift is more immediately allied. But it is not improbable, that this is also the origin of swap. To SWAP, v. a. 1. To draw, with the prep. out.

And that that held on horss in hy Swappyt owt swerdys sturdyly.

Barbour, ii. 363. MS.

2. To throw with violence.

In hy he gert draw the cleket, And smertly swappyt out a stane.

Barbour, xvii. 675. MS.

Schir Philip of his desynes
Ourcome; and persawit he wes
Tane, and led suagat with twa:
The tane he swappyt sone him fra,
And syne the tothyr in gret hy;
And drew the suerd deliuerly.

Ibid. xviii. 136. MS.

3. To strike.

This man went down, and sodanlye he saw, As to his sycht, dede had him swappyt snell; Syn said to thaim, He has payit at he aw. Wallace, ii. 249. MS.

Isl. swip-a raptare; swerda swipan, vibratio gladiorum, i. e. the swapping out of swords; Landnamab. p. 409.

SWAP, s. A sudden stroke.

With a swap of a swerde that swathel him swykes. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 16. Wap is the modern term, q. v.

SWAP, SWAUP, s. The cast, mould, or lineaments of the countenance; as, the swaup of his face, the general cast of his face, S. Isl. swip-ur, umbra alicujus rei vel imago ap-parens; Verel.

SWAPIT, adj. Perhaps, q. lazy-moulded. Sweir swapit, swanky swyne, kepar ay for swats. Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54. V. preceding word. SWAPPIS, Palice of Honour, i. 2.

> -Brayis bair, raif rochis like to fall, Quhairon na gers nor herbis wer visibill, Bot swappis brint with blastis boriall.

This seems to signify carices or sedges; Teut. schelp, carex, ulva.

SWAPPYT, part. pa. Rolled or huddled together.

In thair brawnys sone slaid the sleuthfull sleip, Through full gluttre in swarff swappyt lik swyn. Wallace, vii. 349. MS.

Isl. sweip-a, Su.G. swep-a, involvere.

SWAR, s. A snare.

Wallang, he said, be forthwart in this cace, In sic a swar we couth nocht get Wallace, Tak hym or sla; I promess the be my lyff, That King Edwart sall mak the Erll off Fyff. Wallace, ix. 878. MS.

Be he entrit, hys hed was in the swar, Tytt to the bawk hangyt to ded rycht thar. Ibid. vii. 211. MS.

Ye wald ws blynd, sen Scottis ar so nyss: Syn plesand wordis off yow and ladyis fayr, As auha suld dryff the byrdis till a swar, With the small pype, for it most fresche will call. Ibid. viii. 1419. MS.

In the last two places erroneously snar, Edit. Perth; in older Edit. snare.

A.S. syrw-an to lay snares, and syrwa a snare, are evidently allied. But the term, used by the Minstrel, is more immediately connected with MoesG. swer-an insidiari; So Herodianai swor imma; Herodias laid snares for him, Mark vi. 19. The word in the A.S. version is syrwde.

SWARE, SWIRE, SWYRE, s. 1. The neck. The formest, clepit Diopé In ferme wedlock I sall conione to the For thi reward, that lilly quhite of sware With the for to remane for euermare.

Doug. Virgil, 15. 21. With Thomlyn Wayr Wallace hym selff has met, A felloun strak sadly apon him set, Throcht hede and swyr all through the cost him claiff. Wallace, ix. 1334. MS.

Swere, Gower, and Kyng of Tars; swyre, Chaucer, id.

2. A hollow or declination of a mountain or hill, near the summit, corr. squair, S.

The soft south of the swyre, and sound of the stremes,- Micht confort any creature of the kyn of Adam. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 64.

Mr. Pinkerton renders it hill. But this does not express the sense.

This folkis ar in likyng at there willis, This land inhabitis vale, mont, and swyre, Doug. Virgil, 259. 33.

Lo, there the rais rynnyng swift as fyre, Dreuin from the hichtis brekis out of the swyre. Ibid. 105. 11.

-The prince Enee with al his men Has enterit in, and passit throw the glen, And ouer the swyre schawis vp at his hand; Eschape the derne wod, and wyn the euin land. Ibid. 398. 26. Jugum, Virg.

Hence the designation, the Reid-squair Raid. At the Reid-Squair the Tryst was set. -But yit, for all his cracking crouse, He rewd the Raid of the Reid-squyre.

Evergreen, ii. 224. 226.

Godscroft writes Red Swire, Hist. Doug. p. 339. "Sir John Forrester warden of the English side, and Sir John Carmichael of the Scottish, meeting at a place called the Red Swyre for redressing some wrongs that had been committed, it fell out that a Bill (so they used to speak) was filed upon an Englishman, for which Carmichael, according to the law of the borders, required him to be delivered till satisfaction was made." Spotswood, p. 274.

This is merely a metaph. use of the term properly denoting the neck; and undoubtedly a beautiful figure it is. For the hollow between the lower part of a mountain and its summit strikes the eye, as bearing a resemblance of that part of our corporeal frame which intervenes between the body and the head. A similar metaph. is used in E., when a peninsula is called a neck of land. Lat. jugum, a ridge, expl. swyre by Doug., seems to havet he same allusion, although somewhat obliquely; as it primarily signifies a yoke which surrounds the neck. V. Now.

3. It is used, in a looser sense, to signify the most level spot between two hills, Loth. " a. steep pass between two mountains," Gl. Sibb.

A.S. sweor originally denotes a pillar; hence, according to Lye, transferred to the neck. Isl. swyr, however, simply signifies the neck. Our term, in its secondary senses, is confined to the South of S.

To SWARF, v. n. 1. To faint, to swoon, S. swarth, Ang.

Al pale and bludeles swarfis scho rycht thare, And in the deith closis hir cauld ene.

Doug. Virgil, 394. 51. ----She grew tabetless, and swarft therewith. Ross's Helenore, p. 25.

2. To abate, to become languid; applied to inanimate objects.

Mony abade the ebbing of the sand, Quhill the swarf fard wallis abak dyd draw. Doug. Virgil, 325. 45.

Recursus languentis pelagi, Virg.

Rudd. very naturally supposes that it should be read swarfand wallis, i. e. failing, retiring waves.

He views it as obliquely derived from Belg. swerven errare, vagari, whence E. swerve. Our v. may have the same respect to swerven, as doil'd to dwaalen errare; dénoting stupor of mind. Perhaps the original idea is retained in Su.G. swoerfw-a tornari, in gyrum agitari; as a person, when seized with a swoon, often feels a kind of vertigo. Seren. derives the Sw. term from MoesG. hairb-an ire, praeterire, transire.

SWARFF, SWERF, s. 1 Stupor, insensibility.

Off ayle and wyne yncuch chosyne haiff thai:
As bestly folk tuk off thaim selff no keip,
In thair brawnys sone slaid the sleuthfull sleip,

SWARFE, s. The surface.

"Wee may not settle vpon the swarfe of the heart, but the heart must be pricked with many interrogations, it must be lanced deipely." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 501.

SWARYN, s. V. SYVEWARM.

SWARRACH, s. A large unseemly heap, Ang. It often implies the idea of disorder. Allied perhaps to Su.G. swaer gravis.

SWARTBACK, s. The Great Black and White Gull, Orkn.

"The Great Black and White Gull, (larus marinus, Lin. Syst.) our black-backed mew, or as it is sometimes called swartback, is the largest of the gull kind in our seas." Barry's Orkney, p. 304.

Norv. swartbag, id. V. Penn. Zool. p. 528.

SWARTH, s. A faint. Also,

To SWARTH. V. SWARF, v. and s.

SWARTRYTTER, s. Properly, one belonging to the German cavalry.

"He changeit his apparell, becaus he wald be vnknawin of sic as met him: and put on ane lose cloke, sic as the Swartrytters weir, and sa yeid fordwart throw the watche to execut his intendit traiterous fact." Buchanan's Detect. B. ii. 6. Penulam laxiorem, qualis Germanorum equitis est, superinduit. Lat. copy.

This term seems to be here used for dragoons in general, or those called Red cloaks. But it had originally a peculiar application. Swerte ruyters, according to Kilian, are, milites nigri, formerly in low-er Germany. "Their garments," he says, "as well as their spears, were black. They called themselves devils, to infuse terror into the minds of those against whom they were sent; and to many indeed, according to their name, they brought destruction, till at length they were wasted by frequent wars."

Kilian refers to Aud. Altham and B. Rhenanus, as his authorities. I need scarcely add, that the word is formed from Teut. swert black, and ruyter a horseman.

SWASH, s. "The noise which one makes, falling upon the ground;" Rudd. vo. Squat.

E. squat, used as signifying a sudden fall, has been deduced from Ital. quatt-are, chiatt-are, acquattare, humi desidere. Seren. mentions Su.G. squaett-a, liquidum excrementum cjaculare, as the probable origin.

To SWASH, v. n. To swell, to be turgid.

—" Who, in a word, in hight of stomacke, ruffling & swashing, did tread vpon God's turtles, accounting them the most vile off-scourings of the earth." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 673.

Su.G. swassa denotes the swelling of language, a bombast style; also, to walk loftily: whence it is probable, that it was formerly used literally to signify any thing swollen or inflated.

Swash, s. 1. A person of a broad make, or of a corpulent habit, S.

2. A large quantity viewed collectively; as, a swash of siller, a large sum of money, S.

Swash, Swashy, adj. 1. Of a broad make; or, of a full habit, S.B. "squat," Gl. Shirr.

2. It is also rendered fuddled, ibid. "swollen with drink," Gl. Rams.

Fou closs we us'd to drink and rant, Until we baith did glow'r and gaunt,— Right swash 1 true.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 218.

SWATCH, s. 1. A pattern, generally of cloth, S. Swache, A. Bor. "a tally, that which is fixed to cloth sent to dye, of which the owner keeps the other part;" Ray.

"A swatch (from swath); a pattern, or piece for a sample." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 161.

2. A specimen of whatever kind, S.

- "This is but a short swatch of the unprecedented force, violence, and heavy oppression of Ministers, in their ministerial and judicative capacity." Wodrow, i. 41.
- 3. Metaph. a mark. An ill swatch of him, a bad mark of one's character, S.

SWATHEL, s. A strong man.

With a swap of a swerde that swathel him swykes.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 16.
A.S. swithlic ingens, vehemens; swith potens, fortis.

SWATS, s. pl. New ale, S. V. SWAITS.

To SWATTER, SQUATTER, v. a. 1. To move quickly in any fluid substance; generally including the idea of an undulatory motion, as that of an eel in the water, S.

The water stank, the field was odious, Quhair dragonis, lessertis, askis, edderis swatterit.

Palice of Honour, i. 25.

Some by their fall were fixed on their spears, Some swat'ring in the floud the streame down bears.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 112.

Birdis with mony pieteous pew Efferitlie in the air thay flew, Sa lang as thay had strenth to flee; Syne swatterit down into the see.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 41.

Burns writes squatter, Ayrs.

Awa ye squatter'd, like a drake,

On whistling wings.

Works, iii. 72.

2. To move quickly in an aukward manner; used improperly.

I shall remove, I you assure,
Tho' I were nere so weak and poor,
And seek my meat throw Curry moor,
As fast as I can swatter.

Watson's Coll. i. 43.

Teut. swadder-en profundere, turbare aquas, fluctuare. Perhaps Su.G. squaett-a, liquida effundere, and sqwaettr-a, spargere, dissipare, have a common origin.

SWATTER, s. A large collection, especially of small objects; as, a swatter of bairns, a great number of children, Loth.

This may allude to the unequal motion of a crowd, and thus be allied to the v. Kilian expl. Teut. swadder-en as also signifying, strepere. Thus swatter might refer to the noise made by a multitude. Germ. schwader is rendered, turma; but, according to Wachter, it is from Ital. squadra, a squadron. Su.G. swet, conglobatio, is also viewed by Ihre as of foreign origin, from Fr. suite, id.

of foreign origin, from Fr. suite, id. SWATTLE, s. The act of swallowing with avidity, Stirlings.

To SWAVER, v. n. To walk feebly, as one who is fatigued, S.B. "walked wearily," Gl. Ross.

By the help of a convenient stane,
To which she did her weary body lean,
She wise to foot, and granning makes to

Ross's Helenore, p. 26.

Teut. sweyv-en, vagari, vacillare, fluctuare, nutare; sweyver vagus.

To SWEAL, v. a. To swaddle, S. V. SWILL. To SWEAP, v. a. To scourge, S. Rudd. vo. Swipper.

Isl. swipa a scourge.

SWECHT, s. The force of a body in motion.

Bot thys ilk Latyne, knawand thare malyse,
Resystis vnmouyt as ane roik of the seis,
Quham with grete brute of wattir smyte we se,
Hymself sustenis by his huge wecht,
Fra wallis fel in al thare bir and swecht,
Jawpyng about his skyrtis with mony ane bray.
Doug. Virgil, 228. 27. Mole tenet, Virg.
For as thay ran abak, and can thame schape
For till withdraw towart the tothir side,—

Than with there sweektis, as they rele and lepe, The birnand towris down rollis with ane rusche. Ibid. 296. 33. Pondus, Virg.

Rudd. renders this "burden, weight, force," viewing it as probably nothing else but the E. weight, with s prefixed. But it is more probably allied to Su.G. swigt-a vacillare, ut solent loco cessura; from Isl. sweig-ia incurvare. Thus swecht is a s. from the same origin with sway, swey, to incline to a side.

To SWEE, SWEY, r. n. To incline to one side. Swey, s. V. SWAY.

SWEEK, s. The art of doing any thing properly. When one cannot accomplish what he attempts, it is said, He has nae the sweek o't, S.B.

It is probably the same with Su.G. swik, swek, dolus, insidiae. V. Swak, and Swik, s.

To SWEEL, v. n. To drink copiously, S. swill,

* SWEET, adj. Used in the sense of fresh, with respect to butter, generally beyond the Frith of Forth.

Sweet butter now on mony a plate, An' sugar is presentit.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 547.

Hence, SWEETIE-BUN, SWEETIE-SCON, s. A cake baked with sweetmeats, S.

—The bride's sweetie bun, and good liquor, Wi' gawfin and jeerin' gaed down.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 296. SWEG, Sweig, s. A quantity, a considerable number, Loth.

Franc. sueig pecus, grex; Alem. suiga, armentum; Germ. schweigen, praedia pecuaria. The term, from denoting a flock or herd, might be transferred to a collection of any kind, like hirsell, drave, &c. V. Swack.

SWEY, s. A long crow for raising stones, Angas punch denotes a smaller one.

Probably from Isl. sweig-ia inclinare, q. to move the stones from their place. V. Sway, v.

SWEYNGEOUR, SWYNGEOUR, s. S. swinger. Sweyngeouris, and skuryvagis, swankys and swanys,

Geuis na cure to cun craft.—

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 238, b. 23.

Ane swyngeour coffe, amangis the wyvis,
In land-wart dwellis with subteill menis,
Exponand thame auld sanctis lyvis,
And sanis thame with deid mennis banis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 170.

Lord Hailes renders this "a rascally wencher." Were this the sense, it might be allied to Dan. swangr-er gignere, which is probably from swange, ilia. Rudd. expl. it "scoundrel, rascal;" but gives no probable etymon. Lye renders it desidiosus, iners, piger; Add. Jun. Etym. This sense is more probable; A.S. sweng, swong, lazy, swongornes torpor. In Edin. Review, Oct. 1803, it is observed, however, that the term "means only a strong man, or as the vulgar still say, a swingeing fellow, from MoesG. swintheins potentia, or swinth validus, robustus, as in Ulph., Gatayida swinthein, fecit potentiam." P. 206.

SWEIR, SWERE, SWEER, SWEAR, adj. 1. Lazy, indolent. S.

Mony sweir bumbard belly-huddroun, Mony slute daw, and slepy duddroun, Him servit ay with sounyie.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29.

Lord Hailes says; "In modern language, the consequence only is used; for sweir means unwilling;" Note, p. 237. But I know not how the learned writer could assert this, as the word is still commonly used in the sense of lazy.

Not swere, bot in his dedis diligent, Palynurus furth of his couche vpsprent.

Doug. Virgil, 85. 36.

Quharfor bene nobillis to fallow prowes swere?

Ibid. Prol. 354. 8.

Hence the name given to a lazy girl, Ketty Sweer-ock, as in the S. Prov.;

Ketty Sweerock frae whare she sate,, Cries, Reik me this, and reik me that.

Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 48.
"Work for nought makes fowk dead swear;"
Ibid. p. 79.

A.S. swaer, swere, piger, deses. Swer thegn, piger servus, Matt. xxv. 26. But the primary sense of the A.S. term is, heavy; corresponding to Su.G. swaer, Alem. swaar, gravis. The transition to laziness is very natural; as this flows from heaviness of spirit, or any pressure of disease on the body.

2. Reluctant, unwilling, S. V. sense 1. To do a thing with sweir will, to do it reluctantly.

Yet sweer were they to rake their een, Sic dizzy heads had they.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 271. Unyoke thee, man, an' binna swear To ding a hole in ill-hain'd gear!

O think that eild, wi' wyly fit, Is wearing nearer bit by bit!

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 106.
3. In the Western counties, it is often used in the sense of niggardly; as denoting one who is unwilling to part with any thing that is his property. Hence,

DEAD-SWEIR, adj. Extremely lazy, S.

"Deferred hopes need not to make me dead-swier (as we use to say)." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 199.

Sweir-kitty, s. An instrument for winding yarn, S.B.

It had originally received this denomination, as affording an easier mode of working than had formerly been known; from sweir, and Kitty, a contemptuous term for a woman. There is probably an allusion to the nickname given, in the S. Prov., to a lazy girl. V. Sweir, sense 1.

SWEIRNES, s. Laziness, S.

A.S. swealt-an, swelt-an, Moes G. swilt-an, mori; Su.G. swaelt-a, to perish by hunger. Callander, MS. Note in vo., mentions "Scot. to swalt, to die." I have not heard the word used in this sense.

2. To feel something like suffocation, especially in consequence of heat, S. nearly allied to E. swelter.

With faut and heat, I just was like to swelt, And in a very blob of sweat to melt.

Ross's Helcnore, p. 87. "Swelt, suffocated, choked to death," Gl. Shirr. O.Flandr. swelt-en, deficere, languescere, fatis-ere.

Ibid. 216. 34.

Swelchie is still used in this sense, Orkn.

"On the north side of this isle is a part of Pightland-Firth, call'd the Swelchie of Stroma,—very dangerous to seamen." Wallace's Orkney, p. 5.

66 Did we credit the tales of former times, wells and swelchies, gulphs and whirlpools, are constantly surrounding this island, like so many gaping monsters, more hideously formidable than even Scylla or Charybdis." Barry's Orkney, p. 44.

Swell, in modern S.B., is used in a sense very nearly allied, as synon, with bog.

-" He knows the place called the Waggle, between which and the water [river] there was a bog or swell that beasts would have laired in." State, Leslie of Powis, A. 1805, p. 74.

Su.G. swalg, which, like Teut. swelgh, primarily signifies the throat, (guttur, fauces), is used, in a secondary sense, for an abyss or gulf: Abyssum, vel quicquid affluentes humores absorbet. Ett stort swalg, ingens vorago; a great gulf; Luke xvi. 26. Isl. swelg-ur barathrum. V. Ihre in vo, who derives the v. swael-ja from the s.

SWESCH, s. A trumpet.

"All the Gild brether sall convene, and compeir after they heare the striak of the swesch (or the sound of the trumpet)." Stat. Gild. c. 14.

Audito classico, Lat.

It is used in a similar sense by Lyndsay, although given by Mr. Pinkerton as not understood.

Ane thousand hakbuttis gar schute al at anis With swesche, talburnis, and trumpettis awfullie. S. P. Repr. i. 212.

Here it may denote some other musical instrument used in war, or a trumpet of a different construction from those mentioned in the close of the verse.

A.S. sweg, sound in general; also, any musical instrument. Swege herelic, instrumentum militare; classicum. The pl. is swegas, whence swesch may have been formed. MoesG. swiga-jon to pipe, swigajon a minstrel. E. swash, "to make a great clatter or noise," seems a cognate term.

SWEUIN, SWEVING, SWEVYNYNG, SWENYNG,

s. A dream, the act of dreaming.

The figure fled as licht wynd or the sonne beme, Or maist likly ane wauerand sweuin or dreme. Doug. Virgil, 65. 15.

-Sum tyme in our sweving we tak kepe. Ibid. 446. 11. I slaid on ane swerynyng, slomeraud ane lite. Itid. Prol. 238, a. 8.

A swenung swyth did me assaile Of sonis of Sathanis seid.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 19. The latter is merely a contr. O.E. sweven, A.S. swefen, id. from swaef-ian to sleep; Dan. sov-cr, id. whence soven sleep; Isl. sueffn, id. from sof-a dormire.

That Sueuin has also been formerly used as a v., appears from its part. sweyning.

Than come Dame Dremyng, all clad in black sabill,

With sweyning Nymphis, in cullouris variabill. Dial. Honour, Gude Fame, &c. p. 1.

SWYCHT, adj.

And for thair is na horss in this land Swa swycht, na yeit sa weill at hand, Tak him as off thine awyne hewid, As I had gevyn thairto na reid.

Barbour, ii. 120. MS.

" Swift," Gl. Pink. Isl. skiot-ur celer, or perhaps powerful, from wicht, with the sibilation prefixed.

SWICK, adj. Clear of any thing, Banffs.

Perhaps allied to the s. as denoting escape by some artful mean.

To SWICK, v. a. To blame, to censure, Ang. Allied to Teut. swecht-en reprimere, or rather from A.S. swic-an decipere; also, offendere. V.

SWICK, SWYK, s. 1. Fraud, deceit, S.B. Bot he gat that Archebyschapryk Noucht wyth lawte, bot wytht swyk. Wyntown, vii. 8. 38.

Su.G. swik, anc. swick, Dan. swig, id. 2. Blame, fault, criminality. I had nae swick o't, I had no blameableness in the matter, S.B.

A.S. swica, swic, offensa, offendiculum.

3. A deceiver, Fife.

A.S. swice, swica, proditor, deceptor, seductor. SWICKY, adj. 1. Guileful, deceitful, Ang.

2. Tricky, roguish; applied to one who is given to innocent sport, Ang. V. Swik.

To SWIDDER, v. a. To cause to be in doubt, to subject to apprehension, to shake one's reso-

Than on the wall ane garritour I considder. Proclaimand loude that did thair hartis swidder; "Out on all falsheid the mother of euerie vice,

Palice of Honour, iii. 55. V. v. n. To Swidder, v. n. To doubt, to hesitate, pron. swither, S.

Sae there's nae time to swidder 'bout the thing, Ross's Helenore, p. 93.

Then fute for fute they went togidder, But oft she fell, the gate was slidder: Yet where to take her he did swidder, While at the last he would.

Watson's Coll. i. 41.

Sibb. refers to Teut. swier-en vibrare, vagari, in gyrum verti; swier, vibratio, gyrus. I have sometimes thought that the v. or s. might originate from A.S. swaether, which of the two, contr. from swahwaether. But as the active sense, as it occurs in the Palice of Honour, is the most ancient example I have met with, perhaps it may rather be allied to Germ. schutter-n concutere, concuti. For Doug. evidently uses it to denote a mental concussion. The Germ. v. is a frequent. from schutt-en, Teut. schudd-en, id. Su.G. skudd-a. Hence E. shudder. "Swither is expl. trembling," Gl. Morison's Poems. Swidder, Swidder,

And since that ye, withoutten swither,
To visit me are come down hither,
Be blyth, and let us drink together,
For mourning will not mack it.

Watson's Coll. i. 66.

SWIFF, s. Rotatory motion, or the sound produced by it; as, the swiff of a mill, Loth.

Isl. swef-ast, Su.G. swaefw-a, circumagere, motitari.

To SWIG, v. n. "To turn suddenly," S.A. Swig, s. The act of turning suddenly. V. Gl. Compl. vo. Suak.

The Editor views these terms as connected with Isl. sweig-a, to bend.

To SWIK, v. a. "To soften, asswage, allay;" Rudd. Sibb.

And sum tyme wald scho Ascaneus the page, Caucht in the fygure of his faderis ymage, And in hir bosum brace, gyf scho tharby The luf vntellibyl mycht swik or satify.

Doug. Virgil, 102. 38.

Rudd. derives it from A.S. swic-an cessare, desistere; Sibb. from Teut. swicht-en sedare, pacare. But swik here undoubtedly signifies to deceive, used metaph., from A.S. swic-an, id. in its primary sense. For it is the v. corresponding to fallere in the original.

SWYK, s. Fraud, deceit. V. Swick.

To SWYKE, v. a. To cause to stumble, to bring to the ground.

With a swap of a swerde that swathel him swykes,

He stroke of the stede-hede, streite there he stode.

The faire fole fondred, and fel to the grounde. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 16.

A.S. swic-an, facere ut offendat.

SWIKFUL, adj. Deceitful, Wyntown. Hence,

Swikfully, adv. Deceitfully.

Bot a fals traytoure cald Godwyne

This Ethelrede betraysyd syne,
And hym murtherysyd swykfully.

Wyntown, vi. 15. 85.

SWILK, adj. Such.

With swilk wordis thai maid thair mayn.

Barbour, xx. 277. MS.

A.S. swilc, swylc, talis. S. sic, sik, is evidently corr. from this, as the A.S. word is contr. from MoesG. swaleik, id. from swa so, and leik like, (similis).

To SWILL, v. a. To swaddle, S. sweal, swayl.

How that gaist had been gotten, to guess they

Well swill'd in a swins skin and smeir'd o're with suit.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 13. Attour, I hae a ribbon twa ell lang, As broad's my loof, and nae a thrum o't wrang. Gin it hae mony marrows, I'm beguil'd,

Ross's Helenore, p. 114.

Isl. swellt, strictus.

SWINE-FISH, s. The Wolf-fish, Orkn.

"The Wolf-fish, (anarhichas lupus, Lin. Syst.) here the swine-fish, an ugly animal, is often found in our seas." Barry's Orkn. p. 294.

SWINES ARNUTS, Tall Oat-grass with tuberous roots; Avena elatior, Linn. S.

SWINES MOSSCORTS, Clown's all-heal, an herb, S. Stachys palustris, Linn. The Sw. name is Swinknyl, from swin, swine, and knyl, knoel, a bump, a knob.

SWING, s. A stroke, a blow; Barbour. A.S. id. SWYNGYT, Barbour, viii. 307. Ed. Pink.

For that that fyrst assembly twer, Swyngyt, and faucht full sturdely.

But in MS. it is fwyngyt, i. e. foined, pushed; as in Edit. 1620, fonyeed. Foin is not, as Skinner and Johns. conjecture, from Fr. poindre, to prick, but from O.Fr. foine, a sword. V. Dict. Trev.

To SWINGLE lint, to separate flax from the pith or stalk on which it grows by beating it, S. pron. sungle. A. Bor. to swingle, to roughdress flax; Gl. Grose.

Teut. swinghel-en het vlas, id. Mollire linum flagello, contundere linum, Kilian; from swingh-en, Su.G. swaeng-a, vibrare, quatere, or A.S. swing-an flagellare, caedere.

Swingle-wand, s. The instrument with which flax is swingled, S.B.

SWINGLE-TREE, s. 1. The moveable piece of wood put before a plough or harrow, to which the traces are fastened; pron. sungle-tree, S.

2. Used improperly to denote the poles of a coach. "Sometimes the breast-woddies, an' sometimes the theets brak, and the swingle-trees flew in flinders, as gin they had been as freugh as kail-castacks." Journal from London, p. 5.

Teut. swinghel-en, to vibrate, to move backwards and forwards.

To SWINK, SWYNK, v. n. To labour. His servand, or himself, may nocht be spard, To swynk or sweit, withouttin meit or wage.

Henrysone, Bannatune Poems, p. 120.

A.S. swinc-an laborare, fatigare.

O.E. swinke.

P. Ploughman, Pass. 1.

SWINK, s. Labour; Chauc. swinke.

Ever as thai com newe,

He on ogain hem thre; Gret swink.

Sir Tristrem, p. 97. SWIPPER, SWIPPERT, adj. 1. Quick, swift, nimble.

All thocht he eildit was, or step in age, Als fery and als swipper as ane page.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 54.

Bot than the swypper tuskand hound assayis And neris fast, ay reddy hym to hynt.

Ibid. 439. 29.

2. Sudden, S.B.

In rinning aff lay my relief I thought; But of my claise he took a swippert claught.

Ross's Helenore, p. 88.

3. Hasty, tart. One is said to speak swippertlike, when one speaks hastily, as if in ill humour, S.B.

A.S. swip-an, Isl. swip-a, cito agere, swip-r, subita apparentia, swipan, motus subitus, swipul, brevis, momentaneus, evanescens. Verel. mentions Sw. kort, hastig, as synon.

SWIPPERTLY, SWIPPIRLIE, adv. Swiftly. Turnus the chiftane on the tothir syde, Come to the cieté, or that ony wist, Furth fleand swippirlie, as that him best list. Doug. Virgil, 275. 24.

Then swippertly started up a carl. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 303.

SWYRE, s. The neck; also, a declination in a hill, &c. V. SWARE.

To SWIRK, v. n. To fly with velocity. Full craftely conjurit scho the Yarrow, Quhilk did forth swirk as swift as ony arrow. Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 4.

To SWIRL, v. n. 1. To whirl like a vortex, S.

2. Used to denote the motion of a ship in sailing; but improperly.

-Wha-in a tight Thessalian bark To Colchos' harbour swirl'd.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 3. Su.G. surr-a, swarfw-a, Isl. swirr-a, Belg. swieren, to be hurried round. Swarfw-a and swirr-a are originally the same with hwerfw-a, s being prefixed.

Hence hwerst-a, to be carried round, wattn hwirfel. a whirl pool, &c.

SWIRL, s. A whirling motion, S.

The swelland swirl vphesit vs to heuin, Syne with the wall swak vs agane down euin, As it apperit, vnder the sev to hell.

Doug. Virgil, 87. 24.

It often signifies an eddy; applied to water, to wind, to driving snow, S. V. the v.

Swirlie, adj. Full of knots, knaggy, synon. S.; q. as denoting the circumvolutions of wood, the veins of which are circular.

He taks a swirlie, auld moss-oak, For some black, grousome carlin.

Burns, iii. 136.

SWITH, SWYTH, SWYITH, adv. Quick'y; als swyth, as soon.

For hunger wod he gapis with throttis thre, Swyth swelliand that morsel raucht had sche. Doug. Virgil, 178. 27.

Als swith as the Rutulianis did se The yet opin, thay ruschit to the entré.

Ibid. 302 32. Chancer, as with.

Rudd. mentions A.S. withe prom, te; and indeed Somner renders ealles to swithe, " nimium promptè, too quickly or readily." But this is now the proper sense. It is simply a sign of the superlative, like Lat. valde, E. very. Sometimes it signifies vehementer; from swith valens, potens, tortis.

"Scot. we say, Swith away, 1. e. be gone quickly," Rudd.

Sibylla cryis, that prophetes diuyne, Al ye that bene prophane, away, away, Swyith outwith, al the sanctuary hy you, hay. Doug. Virgil, 172. 13.

Swyth man! fling a' your sleepy springs awa'. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 6.

Swith frae my sight, nor lat me see you mair.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 62. This perhaps may be viewed as a v. In this sense the term is often used to a dog, when he is ordered to get away. Isl. swcy is used in the same manner. It is thus illustrated by G. Andr. Swey, Interject tio, Vae, Graece Ouns, Phy, Danice ewi, swei thier, tvi vorde dig; Phy, apage, st, Canis! Ad wey-a, silentium cum pudore imperare, p. 230. Perhaps our term is formed from Su.G. swig-a loco cedere, q. give place.

SWITHNES, s. Swiftness, velocity.

" Efter deith of Canute succedit his son Herald, namit for his gret swithnes Hairfut, quhilk reiosit the croun of Ingland twa yeris." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 8. A pedum velocitate, Boeth.

To SWOICH, Swouch, v. n. To emit a rushing or whistling sound. V. Souch, v.

SWONCHAND, part. pr.

Yit induring the day, to that dere drew Swannis swonchand full swyith, sweitest of Houlate, i. 14.

"Swimming," Gl. Pink. But this is too general. The term may either signify, vibrating, Germ. swenck-en motitare, whence swanck-vederen, pennae remiges, Kilian; or it may denote the stateli-ness of the motion of this beautiful fowl, as allied to Dan. swink-er to strut, to have a proud gait.

SWOON, s. Corn is said to be in the swoon, when, although the strength of the seed is exhausted, the plant has not fairly struck root, S.B. In this intermediate sort of state, the blade appears sickly and faded.

A.S. swinn-an deficere, to decay.

SWORDICK, s. The Spotted Blenny, Orkney. "The Spotted Blenny (blennius gunrellus, Lin. Syst.), which, from the form of its body, has here got the name of swordick, is found under stones among the sea-weed, both at low-water mark and above it." Barry's Orkney, p. 292.

SWORDSLIPERS, s. pl. Sword-cutlers, Gl. Knox's Hist. But I have not marked the place.

SWORL, s. A whirling motion, swirl synon. Bot lo ane sworl of fyre blesis vp thraw, Lemand towart the lift the flamb he saw. Doug. Virgil, 435. 38. V. SWIRL, s.

SWOURN, Wallace, vi. 575. Perth Ed. Read, Smoryt, as in MS. i. e. smothered.

Palyone rapys thai cuttyt in to sowndyr, Borne to the ground, and mony smoryt owndir.

Doug. Virgil, 118. 15.

TA AND FRA, to and from, on this and on that side.

Bot the slouth hund maid styntyn thar; And waweryt lang tyme ta and fra, That he na certane gate couth ga. Barbour, vii. 41. MS.

TAANLE, s. V. TAWNLE.

To TAAVE, v. n. To make any thing tough by working it with the hands, Moray, Banffs. pron. q. Tyaare. V. TAW. TAAVE, TYAAVE, s. Difficulty, pinch; as, to do any thing with a tyaave, I have a great tyaare, I have much difficulty; applied to means of subsistence, &c. Banffs. V. TAWAN, which seems radically the same.

TAAVE-TAES, s. pl. The name given to pitfir, used in Moray and the neighbouring counties, for making ropes, being split into fibres and twisted. Denominated from its toughness, taes, toes.

TAAVIN, TAWIN, s. "Wrestling, tumbling,"

" By this time the gutters was coming in at the coach-door galore, an' I was lying taavin an' wamlin under lucky-minny like a sturdy hoggie that has fa'en into a peat-pot." Journal from London, p. 3. 4. V. Vogie.

Teut. touw-en agitare, subigere, Su.G. tag-a to struggle, A.S. taw-ian to beat.

TABETS, TEBBITS, s. Bodily sensation, feeling. My fingers lost the tebbits, i. e. they became quite benumned, so that I had no feeling, S.B. C.B. tyb-io, tyb-ygw, are expl. sentio, to feel-Lhuyd; but seem properly to apply to the mind, existimare, putare, opinari; Davies.

TABETLESS, TAPETLESS, TEBBITLESS, adj. 1. Not as expl. by Shirr. and Sibb., "without strength," but destitute of sensation, benumned, S.B.

But toil and heat so overpowr'd her pith, That she grew tabetless and swarft therewith. Ross's Helenore, p. 25.

2. "Heedless, foolish," Gl. Burns, S.O. The tapetless ramfeezl'd hizzie, She's saft at best, and something lazy. Burns, iii. 243.

This is undoubtedly the same word.

TABRAGH, s. A term applied to animal food, that is nearly in the state of carion, Fife; perhaps corr. from CABROCH, q. v.

To TACH, v. a. To arrest, to attach. As he thus raid in gret angyr and teyne, Off Inglissmen thar followed him fyfteyn, Wicht, wallyt men, that towart him couth draw, -With a maser, to tach hym to the law. Wallace, vii. 304. MS.

Tack, Edit. Perth; teach, Edit. 1648, 1673. Most probably abbrev. from Fr. attach-er; L.B. attach-iare, which, according to Hickes, primarily signifies, to seize by the hands of lictors or officers: But these terms, as well as Ital. attac-arc, Hisp. atac-ar, acknowledge a Goth. origin; A.S. taec-an, Isl. tak-a, tak-ia, to take; Su.G. tag-a, Belg. tacken, to apprehend. Isl. tak donotes the apprehension of those who struggle; luctantium arreptatio, G. Andr. MocsG. attek-an, tangere, probably expresses the primary idea.
TACHT, adj. Tight, tense, close, S.B. Sw.

tact, id. TACK, TAK, s. The act of taking; particularly used to denote violent seizure.

-" Certane gentilmen—hes vsit to tak Caupis, of the quhilk tak thair, and exaction thairof, our souerane Lord, and his thre estatis knew na perfite nor ressonabill cause." Acts Ja. IV. 1489. c. 35. Edit. 1566. Tacke, Edit. Murray, c. 18.

TACK, s. A slight hold or fastening. It hings by a tack, It has a very slight hold, S. from the

E. v. tack.

TACK, TAKE, s. The act of catching fishes; a gude tack, success in catching, S.

"IIc [the King] suld have of enery boate, that passis to the draue and slayis herring, an thousand herring of ilk tack that halds, viz. of the lambmes tack, of the winter tack, and of the Lentron tack." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Assisa.

"This ile hath alsa salt water loches, to wit, Ear, ane little small loche with guid take of herringes.-Then is Lochfyne, quherein ther is a guid take of herringes." Monroe's Iles, p. 18.

Isl. tek-ia captura, G. Andr. TACK, TAKK, TACKE, s. 1. The lease of a house or farm, S.

-" Suppois the Lordis sell or annaly that land or landis, the takaris sall remaine with thair takkis, vnto the ischie of thair termis, quhais handis that euer thay landis cum to, for siclyke maill, as thay tuik thame for." Acts Ja. II. 1449. c. 17. Ed. 1566. Tacke, Skene.

2. Possession. A lang tack of any thing, long possession of it, S. Hence,

TACKSMAN, s. 1. One who holds a lease from another, S.

"An assignation by the tenant without the landlord's consent, though it infers no forfeiture of the right of tack itself against the tacksman, can transmit no right from him to the assignee." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. T. 6. s. 31.

2. In the Highlands, used in a peculiar sense, as denoting a tenant of a higher class.

"In this country, when a man takes a lease of a whole farm, and pays L50 sterling, or upwards, of yearly rent, he is called a tacksman; when two or more join about a farm, and each of them pays a sum less than L50, they are called tenants." P. Lochgoil-head, Argyles. Statist. Acc. iii. 186, N.

"By tacksmen is understood such as lease one or more farms; and by tenants, such as rent only an half, a fourth, or an eighth of a farm." P. S. Knapdale, Argyles. Statist. Acc. xix. 323, N.

TACKET, s. A small nail, S.

-Johny cobbles up his shoe Wi' tackets large and lang. Morison's Poems, p. 47. V. CLAMP, s. The idea of lang is not quite correspondent. Evidently a deriv. from E. tack, id. which denotes a nail so small that it only as it were tacks one thing to another.

TACKIT. Tongue-tackit, adj. 1. Having the tongue fastened by a small film, which must sometimes be cut in infants, to enable them to suck, S.

2. Tonguetied, either as signifying silence, or an impediment in speech, S. He was na tonguetackit with them, i. e. he spoke freely.

TAE, s. 1. The toe, S. A. Bor.

2. The prong of a fork, leister, &c.

TAFFIL, TAIFLE, s. A table. Now it generally denotes one of a small size, S.B.

—" There was a four-nooked taffil in manner of an altar, standing within the kirk, having standing thereupon two books, at least resembling clasped books, called blind books," &c. Spalding's Troubles, i. 23.
"Then the Earl of Errol sat down in a chair,— at a four-nooked taffil set about the fore face of the parliament, and covered with green cloth." Ibid.

p. 25.

Germ. tafel, Su.G. tafla, tabula cujuscunque generis; skriftafla, tabula scriptoria. Hence, as would seem, A.S. taeft a die, because tables were used in playing at dice; Su.G. tafwel-bord, a dicetable, tabula aleatoria, tuefla to play at dice; skaftafwel, chess.

TAFT, TAFTAN, s. A messuage or dwellinghouse and ground for household uses, S.B.

This term seems radically the same with E. toft, L.B. toftum. These, however, must be traced to Su.G. tofft, topt, Isl. topt-r, area domus; in Sw. now corrupted to tomt, the ground belonging to a house. Ihre views taepp-a, claudere, as the origin, because it is customary to inclose houses.

TAG, s. 1. The latchet of a shoe; any thing used for tying, S.

Isl. taug a thong, from teig-a to stretch. Tag has a similar sense, vimen lentum; radices virgultorum flexiles, Verel. taggar fibrae. Su.G. tagg cuspis, aculeus, i. e. a point, a name also commonly given S. to a shoe-latchet. Mr. Tooke derives E. tag from A.S. ti-an vincere, viewing it as the part. past.

2. A long and thin slice of any thing; as, a tag of skate, i. e. a slice of skate hung up to be. dried in the sun, S.

3. Trumpery, triffing articles.

Thus quhan thay had reddit the raggis, To roume thay wer inspyrit;

Tuk up thair taipis, and all thair taggis,

Fure furth as thay war fyrit.

Symmye and His Bruder, Chron. S.P. i. 360. Perhaps it may denote shreds of parchment on which pardons or indulgences were written. The language seems borrowed from a taylor's board.

TAGGIF, part. pa.

This rich man, be he had heard this tail, Ful sad in mynd he wox baith wan and pail, And to himselfe he said, sickand ful sair, Allace how now! this is ane hasty fair.

And I cum thair, my tail it will be taggit, For I am red that my count be ovir raggit. Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 38.

"Pulled," Pink. But it seems to be the same term, which in E. is sometimes used as equivalent to tacked. The phrase certainly signifies, "I shall be confined," or "imprisoned." There may be an allusion to a custom which still prevails in fairs or markets. Young people sometimes amuse themselves by stitching together the clothes of those who are standing close to each other; so that when they wish to go away, they find themselves confined. This they call tagging their tails, S.B. Hence the phrase may have come to denote the act of depriving one of liberty by imprisonment. V. Over RAG-

TAGGLIT, adj. Harassed with any thing; incumbered, drudged, S.B. most probably originand the same with Taigled. V. TAIGLE. TAY, TAE, s. A toe, S.

Followit Elymus, guham to held euer nere, Diores, quhidderand at his bak fute hate, His tayis choppand on his hele all the gate. Doug. Virgil, 138. 27.

Tip-tais, tip-toes, Ibid. 305. 2. A.S. ta, Germ. zehe, Belg. teen. TAID, s. A toad, S. A.S. tade.

TAIDREL, s. A puny feeble creature. Let never this undought of ill-doing irk, But ay blyth to begin all barret and bail: Of all bless let it be as bair as the birk, That tittest the taidrel may tell an ill tail. Let no vice in this warld in this wanthrift be wanted.

Poliv. & Montgom. Watson's Coll. iii. 19. A dimin. from A.S. tcdre, tyddre, tener, fragilis, TAIGIE, TEAGIE, TYGIE, s. A designation given to a cow which has some white hairs in her tail. On this account she is also said to be taigit, Fife.

An' whare was Rob an' Peggy, For a' the search they had, But i' the byre 'side Teagie, Like lovin' lass an' lad.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 124.
To TAIGLE, v. a. To detain, to hinder, S.
Sibb. refers to Teut. tagg-en altercari. But the term has no connexion with altercation. It is undoubtedly allied to Sw. tauglig, slow of motion, Wideg. tegetig lentus, Ihre. This the latter derives from A.S. tohlice lentus, lente, from toh tenax, lentus, from Su.G. tog-a ducere. The pret. is togh.

TAIL, TALE, s. Account, estimation. That send to Perth for wyn ande ale, And drank, and playid, and made na tale Of there fays, that lay theme by. Wyntown, viii. 26. 80.

Barbour, xviii. 238. MS.

In Edit. 1620, it is rendered without regard to the MS.

TAINCHELL, s. Tainchess, pl.

"Syxteen myle northward from the ile of Coll, lyes ane ile callit Ronin ile, of sixteen myle lang and six in bredthe in the narrowest, ane forest of heigh mountains, and abundance of litle deir in it, quhilk deir will never be slaine dounwith, but the principal saitts [snares] man be in the height of the hill, because the deir will be callit upwart ay be the Tainchell, or without tynchel they will pass upwart perforce." Monroe's Iles, p. 23.

"All the deire of the west pairt of that forrest will be callit [driven] be tainchess to that narrow entrey, and the next day callit west againe, be tainchess throw the said narrow entres, and infinite deire slaine there." Ibid. p. 7.

Can this be from Fr. estincelle, etincelle, a twinkle, a flash? If so, it must refer to some mode of catching deer under night, by the use of lights. To TAYNT, v. a. 1. To convict in course of law.

That schepe, he sayd, that he stall nought. And thare-til for to swere an athe, He sayd, that he wald nought be lathe. Bot sone he worthyd rede for schame, The schepe thare bletyd in hys wame. Swa was he tayntyd schamfully, And at Saynt Serf askyd mercy.

Wyntown, v. 12. 1232.

" f. attainted," Gl. It properly signifies, convicted; corresponding to Fr. attaint, L.B. attaintus, attainct-us, criminis convictus. Attaincta, attincta, convictio in actione criminali, aut manifestus cujuslibet criminis reatus; Du Cange.

2. Legally to prove; applied to a thing.

"And quhair it be taintit that thay [ruikis] big, and the birdis be flowin, and the nest be fundin in the treis at Beltane, the treis sall be foirfaltit to the King." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 21. Ed. 1506.

In this sense Skene uses attainted.

"And gif it be otherwaies attainted (or proven), he quha is essonyied, and his pledges, salbe amerciat for his noncompearance." 1. Stat. Rob. I. c. 6. s. 3. Attayntum, Lat.

TAINT, s. Proof, conviction.

Acts Ja. II 1476. c. 88. Edit. 1566.

"For gif the assisors sall happin to be convict as mensworne in the court, be ane Taynt, that is, be probation of twentie foure loyall men; -they sall tine and forfalt all thair cautell." Reg. Maj. B. i.

c. 14. s. 2. 3.

" Attaint or Taynt, is called the deliverance or probation of 24 leil men, the qualik may be called an great assise." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Attaunt.

This seems the same with S.B. tint, commonly used in the phrase tint nor tryal, with respect to any thing about which there is no information.

Sae sair for Nory she was now in pain: And Colin too, for he had gane to try; But tint nor trial she had gotten nane, Of her that first, or him that last was gane.

Ross's Helenore, p. 41.

It seems, however, somewhat dubious, whether the phrase may not signify, that one can neither find certain evidence that a person or thing is tint, i. e. lost; nor, supposing this to be the case, light on any means of recovery. A phrase somewhat similar, is used by R. Brunne, p. 165. when giving an account of a fruitless search for a fugitive prince.

Sir Guy & Bumund thei com as thei gede, The ne tynt ne fond, ne were at no dede.

To TAIR, v. n. To cry as an ass.

"Than the suyne began to quhryne quhen thai herd the asse tair." Compl. S. p. 59.

Said to be "an imitative word," Gl. But it is evidently the same with Teut. tier-en, intentiore voce clamare, vociferari.

To TAIS, v. a. To poise, to adjust; pret. tasit. Ane bustuous schaft with that he grippit has, And incontrare his aduersaris can tais.

Doug. Virgil, 327. 36.

He taysyt the wyr, and leit it fley,

And hyt the fadyr in the ey.

Barbour, v. 623. MS. Than Turnus smitin ful of fellony,

Ane bustuous lance, with grundin hede full kene, That lang quhile tasit he in propir tene, Lete gird at Pallas.— Doug. Virgil, 334. 11. Rudd. and Sibb. refer to Belg. tees-en trahere, vellicare. A stickler for Gr. etymology might, without hesitation, deduce it from race-a, ordino. But it is more natural to view it as allied to Su.G. tast-a, Germ. tatsch-en, to grasp, to handle. The root is Su.G. tasse, the hand; originally the paw of a beast. The ideas are nearly connected. One grasps a weapon in the hand, in order to poise it. As Fr. brand-cr, and E. brandish, are generally supposed to be from brand, the weapon that is brandished; this word seems to be formed from the manner in which the action is done.

TAIS, TAS, TASSE, s. A bowl, or cup, S. tass. He merely ressauis the remanent tais,

All out he drank, and quhelmit the gold on his face.

Doug. Virgil, 36. 48.

This term occurs in a passage which contains a curious account of the minutiae of politeness in the reign of James V.

At that tyme ther vas no ceremonial reuerens nor stait, quha suld pas befor or behynd, furtht or in at the dur, nor yit quha suld have the dignite to vasche ther handis fyrst in the bassine, nor yit quha suld sit downe fyrst at the tabil. At that tyme the pepil var as reddy to drynk vattir in ther bonet, or in the palmis of ther handis, as in ane glas, or in ane tasse of siluyr." Compl. S. p. 226.

Concluding this, we toome a tas of wyne.

TAISSLE, TEAZLE, s. 1. The effect of a boisterous wind, when the clothes are disordered, and one is scarcely able to keep one's road, S.

I—hailst her roughly, and began to say, I'd got a lump of my ain death this day; Wi' weet and wind sae tyte into my teeth, That it was like to cut my very breath. Gin this be courting, well I wat 'tis clear, I gat na sic a teazle this seven year.

Ross's Helenore, p. 38.

The word is pron. taissle.

2. A severe brush of any kind, S. This is called a sair taissle.

The idea might seem borrowed from A.S. taesl, carduus fullonum, or fuller's thistle, E. teasel, a kind of thistle used in raising the nap upon woollen cloth; from taes-an, to teese. It is a curious fact, that this thistle in Su.G. is called karborre, more properly kardborre, q. the carding bur. For, according to Ihre, it is denominated from kard-a to card; as the Lat. name card-uus is from car-o, -ere, id. which is generally traced to Gr. xiv-iv tondere. Teut. kaerde, kaerden-kruyd, kaerden-distel, id. A sanguine theorist might infer, that, among the Western nations at least, the use of cards had been suggested by the burs of thistles; or, that these had been used, instead of cards, by men in a simple state of society.

Taissle might seem to be the same with tussel, nsed in the sense of struggle, N. and S. of E. (Grose Prov. Gl.) adopted by P. Pindar. But tussel is synon. with S. Tousle, q. v. which is still used as if quite a different word from taissle. Whether tussel be related to Germ. tusel-n tundere, percutere, is doubtful.

To TAIST, v. n. To grope; used to express the action of one groping before him with his spear, while wading through a deep trench filled with water.

—Arayit weill in all his ger, Schot on the dyik, and with his sper Taistyt, till he it our woud: Bot till his throt the watyr stud.

Barbour, ix. 388. MS.

Mr. Pinkerton has overlooked this word; which is evidently synon. with Belg. tast-en to grope, to handle, to feel; Germ. id., also antast-en; Su.G. tast-a, antast-a, id. Ital. tast-are, Fr. tast-er, tater, used in the same sense, are clearly of Goth. origin. Wachter derives the Germ. v. from tasche, Su.G. tasse, the paw of an animal, which originally signified the hand. Germ. tasche still denotes a clumsy fist. Teut. met den tast gaen, praetentare iter manibus aut pedibus; Kilian.

It confirms this derivation, that Teut. tetse, tatse, is rendered, palma pedis feri animalis; and tets-en, palma tangere.

Seren. assigns the same origin to the E. v. to taste. It seems undeniable, indeed, that this v., as used in E., has been transferred from one organ to another; as originally respecting the sense of touch. Thus indeed the E. v. was anciently used.

Al they wer vnhardi, that houed on horse or stode

To touche or to taste him, or taken downe of rode,

But thys blinde bachiler bare him throughe the hert. P. Ploughman, Fol. 98, a.

It is remarkable, that while both Junius and Skinner refer to this as the sense of Teut. tasten, neither has observed that it occurs in this sense in O.E.

TAISTE, s. The black Guillemot. V. TYSTE. TAIT, TYTE, adj. "Neat, tight," Rudd. Warton, Hist. E. P.

Frae fute to fute he kest her to and frae, Quhyls up, quhyls down, als tait as ony kid.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 152. st. 25. It is descriptive of the cruel sport which a cat makes with a mouse, and of her playful motions before she kills it. The most natural sense is, gay, frisky, lively, playful. I cannot think, with Rudd., that it has any relation to tyte; as tyte, Ir. teadadh, signifies quick, active, nimble. But the origin certainly is Isl. teit-r, teit-ur, hilaris, laetus, exultans. Verel. Teiti hilaritas, Landnamab. Gl. Oelteite, merry with drink. The idea seems borrowed from the young of animals; teit-r, pullus animalis, hinnulus; as, a young fawn, a kid, G. Andr.; teit-ur juveneus, vel equulus exultans, expl. by Verel. merry and lively as a foal.

It seems to signify nimble, active, in the following passage.

Sa mony estate, for commoun weil sa quhene, Owre all the gait, sa mony thevis sa tait, Within this land was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 43. TAIT, s. A small portion. V. TATE. To TAIVER, v. n. 1. To wander. Tauren, i. e. taivering. V. DAUREN.

This might be viewed as akin to Isl. tauf, mora, genit. tafar; tef-ia morari, moram facere; G. Andr. p. 234.

2. To talk in an incoherent manner, like one delirious, S.

This may be merely a metaph, signification of the same v, as applied to the mind. In the same sense one is said to waver, when incoherent in ideas and discourse.

Allied perhaps to Teut. toover-en, Alem. touber-en, toufer-en, fascinare, incantare; which Lye deduces from Teut. doov-en, Alem. tob-on, dob-en, insanire, delirare: as magical arts seem to derive their name, either from the vain ravings of those who use them, or from the stupor produced in the ignorant. O.E. tave is also used in the sense of delirare. V. Jun. Etym. Isl. tofr-a incantare, tofrad-r incantatus.

Chr. Kirk, st. 10. Chron. S. P. ii. 362.

Takil, Chaucer, tacle, Gower, id. Rudd. derives this from C.B. tacel sagitta. Bullet mentions Celt. tacclu orner, tacclau ornemens. From taccl comes O.Fr. tacle, a shaft or bolt, the feathers of which are not waxed, but glued on. From the same source is takillis, Doug. the tackling of a ship.

Chaucer uses the word in the same sense. Wel coude he dresse his takel yemanly.

One might suppose it to be comp. of Isl. taum, habena, and Su.G. taer-a consumere; q. to wear out by holding in a rein, to gall by means of the bridle.

It is probable, however, that this might be originally a military term, signifying that men were still kept, as we now say, on the alert; from Fr. tantarare, mot imagineé pour représenter un certain son de trompette. Tubae sonus guidam. Dict. Trev.

"The one of two. Tane is a rapid pronunciation of ta ane;" Gl. Wynt. Rudd. views the word as formed from ane with t prefixed, as the Fr. put t before il, when the foregoing v. terminates in a vowel. But the tane, the tother, seem to have been originally that ane, that other. A similar form at least existed in O.E.

TANE-AWA, s. A decayed child, S.

The name seems to have been formed from the vulgar belief, that the fairies used formerly to carry off, or take away, healthy children, and leave poor puny creatures in their room. V. FARE-FOLKIS.

The Romans had an idea somewhat similar, with respect to certain birds of night, particularly screechowls; but, according to Ovid, it was doubtful whether they were really birds, or merely assumed this form from the power of witchcraft.

Out of their cradles babes they steal away, And make defenceless innocents their prey.— Whether true birds they were, or had that form From some old ugly witches potent charm.—

Fasti, B. vi. Massey's Transl. p. 303.

They believed, however, that these birds sucked the blood of the infants whom they carried off.

TANC. A pame given to the larger fuci in TANG, s. A name given to the larger fuci in general, particularly to the F. digitatus and saccharinus, Orkn. Shetl.

—"The sea-oak, (Fucus vesiculosus, Lin.) which we denominate black tang, and which grows next to the former, nearly at the lowest ebb." P. Shapinsay, Statist. Acc. xvii. 233.

The common sea weed, here called tang, is pretty generally and successfully used as a manure for the lands." P. Delting, Zetl. Statist. Acc. i. 390.

Su.G. tang, Isl. thang, id. Shall we view these words as allied to Isl. teng-ia, jungere?

TANGLE, s. 1. The same with Tang. This name is also given to the stem or stalk of the larger fuci, S.

"The Alga Marina, or Sea-Tangle, as some call it, Sea-Ware, is a rod about four, six, eight or ten feet long; having at the end a blade, commonly slit into seven or eight pieces, and about a foot and half in length. It grows on stone, the blade is eat by the vulgar natives." Martin's Western Islands, p. 149.

This seems formed from thaungull, the pl. of Isl. thaung, alga.

2. Used metaph. to denote a person, who although tall, is lank, S.B.

——We'll behad a wec. She's but a tangle, tho' shot out she be.

Ross's Helenore, p. 21.

TANGLE, s. An icicle, S.

At first view this might seem to be merely the preceding term, used in a metaph. sense, because of the resemblance of an icicle to the sea-weed thus denominated. But it is undoubtedly the same with Isl. dingull, an icicle; whence dingl-a, to hang and move as a loose icicle; pendere et motari veluti pendulae stiriae; G. Andr. vo. Iseschokull. E. to dangle.

gle.
TANG-WHAUP, s. The whimbrel, Orkn. Sco-lopax phoeopus, Linn.

TANGS, TAINGS, s. pl. Tongs, S.

The wyff, that he had in his innys,

That with the tangs wald birs his schynnis,

I wald scho drount war in a dam. He is no dog; he is a lam.

Dunbar upon James Doig, Maitland Poems, p. 92.

A.S. tang, Isl. taung, Belg. tanghe, forceps. Junius views Goth. teing-ia, colligere, as the root.

TANNER, s. 1. That part of a frame of wood, which is fitted for going into a mortice, S. Su.G. tan, tanor, a tendon; q. that which binds or unites. Isl. thinnor, lignum cui arcus incurvatus insertus est, et quod eum tensum retinet et sustinet; Verel.

2. Tanners, pl. The small roots of trees, Loth. synon. tanouns.

In this sense it seems more nearly allied to Is1. tannari, assulae; laths, chips, splinters; or tein, Sw. teen, surculus; MoesG. tains virga, virgula; Belg. teen-en, vimina.

Belg. teen-en, vimina.

TANNERIE, s. A tan-work, S. Fr. id.

TANTERLICK, s. A severe stroke, Fife.

TANTONIE BELL.

He had to sell the Tantonie bell, And pardons therein was.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 6. 44 St. Anthony's bell, hung about the necks of animals," Lord Hailes.

Fr. tantan, "the bell that hangs about the neck of a cow," &c. Cotgr. It seems very doubtful, however, if this has any relation to St. Anthony. It seems rather from Fr. tintant, any thing that makes a tingling; whence perhaps S. tingtang, a term often used by children, to denote the sound made by the ringing of a bell. The origin is Lat. tintinn-o, -are, to ring; whence tintinnabulum, a little bell. C.B. tant, the chord of a musical instrument.

TANTRUMS, s. pl. High airs, stateliness. In his tantrums, on the high ropes, S. Cant E.

—I thought where your tantrums wad en'. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 299. V. Hosta. Fr. tantran, a nick-nack; Germ. tand vanity.

TAP, s. 1. The top of any thing, S.

2. The head, S. Gl. Shirr.

3. The tuft on the head of some fowls, S. Hence the phrase, tappit hen.

4. "Such a quantity of flax as spinsters put upon the distaff is called a lint-tap," Gl. Shirr. S.

5. A top used by boys in play, S.

The shape or fashion of his head
Was like a con or pyramid;
Or like the bottom of a tap.

To TAPE, v. a. To make any thing, although little, go a great way, to use sparingly, S. synon. hain.

Then let us grip our bliss mair sicker,
And tape our heal and sprightly liquor,
Which sober tane, makes wit the quicker,
And sense mair keen.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 378.

Erroneously printed tup, which suggests an idea almost directly the reverse.

Isl. eg teppe obstruo, obturo; tept-r, cohibitus, shut up, restrained; tepping, restraint; G. Andr. p. 238. Su.G. taepp-a to shut, to stop up, to fill up 3 U 2 blanks in a hedge; taeppa a field hedged on all sides. This etymon receives confirmation from the similar use of hain, which originally signifies, to hedge in, to inclose by a hedge. Fr. tap-er, to cover, to keep close, is probably from this origin. Isl. taepileg-ur signifies sparing, parcus, Verel. taepilega, parce.

TAPEIS, s. Tapestry; Fr. tapis.

—Thy beddis soft, and tapeis fair,
Thy treitting, and gud cheir;
Gif I the treuth wald now declair,
I wait thow hes no peir.

Maitland Poems, p. 257.

Chaucer uses tapiser, for a maker of tapestry. TAPETLESS, adj. Heedless, foolish. V. under Tabets.

TAPETTIS, s. pl. Tapestry.

Amang proude tapettis and michty riall apparall.

Hir place sche tuke, as was the gise that tyde.

*Doug. Virgil, 35. 22.

Teut. tapijt, Lat. tapetes.

TAPISHT, part. pa. In a lurking state.

The hart, the hind, the fallow deare, Are tapisht at their rest.

A. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii. 388.

Apparently from Fr. tap-ir, to hide, to keep close; tapiss-ant, hiding one's self, lurking, squatting.

TAPONE-STAFF, s. The stave, in a barrel, in which the bung-hole is.

"That no barrel be sooner made and blown, but the Coupers form be set thereon, on the taponestaff thereof, in testimony of the sufficiency of the tree." Acts Char. II. 1661. c. 33.

It seems doubtful, whether it has received this name from the cork, or plug that is used for filling the bung-hole. This by coopers is called the tap, S. Perhaps originally the tapping-taff, i. e. the stave in which the orifice is made for drawing off liquor.

The term blown refers to the mode of trying whether a cask be tight. A little water is put into it. Then, the head being fixed on, a small hole is bored, by means of which the vessel is filled with as much air as it can contain. The effect is, that, if there be the least chink, the force of air makes the water bubble through it.

'TAPOUN, s. A ramification, or long fibre at the root of a plant or tree, S.B.

I have met with it in print, only as used metaph.,

with respect to Bishops.

"All here, praised be God, goes according to our prayers, if we would be quit of bishops; about them we are all in perplexity. We trust God will put them down; but the difficulty to get all the tapouns of their roots pulled up, is yet insuperable by the arm of man." Baillie's Lett. i. 241.

Perhaps from Dan. tap, a hollow tube; or Belg. tapp-en to draw out, as these fibres extend themselves so far.

TAPPIE-TOUSIE, s. A sort of play among children, S.

In this sport, one taking hold of another by the forelock of his hair, says to hin;

"Tappie, Tappie tousie, will ye be my man?" If the other answers in the assirmative, the first "Come to me then, come to me then;"

giving him a smart pull towards him by the lock which he holds in his hand. If the one, who is asked, answers in the negative, the other gives him a push backward, saying;

"Gae fra me then, gae fra me then."

The literal meaning of the terms is obvious. The person asked is called Tappie-tousie, q. dishevelled head, from Tap, and Tousie, q. v. It may be observed, however, that Su.G. tap signifies a lock or tuft of hair. Haertapp, floccus capillorum; Ihre, p. 857.

But the thing that principally deserves our attention, is the meaning of this play. Like some other childish sports, it evidently retains a singular vestige of very ancient manners. It indeed represents the mode in which one received another as his bondman.

"The thride kind of nativitie, or bondage, is, quhen ane frie man, to the end he may have the menteinance of ane great and potent man, randers himselfe to be his bond-man, in his court, be the haire of his forehead; and gif he thereafter withdrawes himselfe, and flees away fra his maister, or denyes to him his nativitie: his maister may proue him to be his bond-man, be ane assise, before the Justice; challengand him, that he, sic ane day, sic ane yeare, compeired in his court, and there yeilded himselfe to him to be his slaue and bond-man. And quhen any man is adjudged and decerned to be natiue or bond-man to any maister; the maister may take him be the nose, and reduce him to his former slaverie." Quon. Attach. c. 56. 1. 7.

This form, of rendering one's self by the hair of the head, seems to have had a monkish origin. The heathenish rite of consecrating the hair, or shaving the head, was early adopted among christians, either as an act of pretended devotion, or when a person dedicated himself to some particular saint, or entered into any religious order. Hence it seems to have been adopted as a civil token of servitude. Thus those, who entered into the monastic life, were said capillos ponere, and per capillos se tradere. In the fifth century, Clovis committed himself to St. Germer by the hair of his head; Vit. S. Germer. ap. Carpentier, vo. Capilli. Those, who thus devoted themselves, were called the servants of God, or of any particular Saint.

This then being used as a symbol of servitude, we perceive the reason why it came to be viewed as so great an indignity to be laid hold of by the hair. He, who did so, claimed the person as his property. Therefore, to seize, or to drag one by the hair, comprehendere, or trahere per capillos, was accounted an offence equal to that of charging another with falsehood, and even with striking him. The offender, according to the Frisic laws, was fined in two shillings; according to those of Burgundy, also in two; but if both hands were employed, in four. Leg. Fris. ap. Liudenbrog. Tit. 22. s. 64. Leg. Burgund. Tit. 5. s. 4. According to the laws of Saxony, the fine amounted to an hundred and twenty shillings; Leg. Sax. cap. 1. s. 7. ibid. Some other statutes made it punishable by death; Du Cange, col. 243. V. Husband.

'TAPPILOORIE, s. Any thing raised high on a slight or tottering foundation, S.

Teut. tap, veru, extremitas rotunda et acuta; and perhaps loer speculator, loer-en speculari, or lore, leure, res parvi valoris, res frivolae, nugae. TAPPIN, s. A tuft, as that on the crown of a bonnet, S.O.

My father's thrown his bonnet in the pot! -Nought o't but the tappin's to be seen. Falls of Clude, p. 108.

Probably a dimin. from tap, the top.

TAPPIT HEN. 1. A hen with a tuft of feathers on her head, S.

2. A cant phrase, denoting a tin measure containing a quart, so called from the knob on the lid, as being supposed to resemble a crested hen. V. Gl. Sibb.

Weel she loo'd a Hawick gill, And leugh to see a tappit hen.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 268. V. Dubble. TAPSALTEERIE, adv. Topsyturvy, S. But gie me a canny hour at een,

My arms about my dearie, O; An' warly cares, an' warly men, May a gae tapsalteerie, O!

Burns, iii. 283.

TAPTHRAWN, adj. Perverse, obstinate, S. q. having the tap, i. e. top or head distorted; or in allusion to the hair of the head lying in an aukward and unnatural manner, S.

To TAR, v. n.

To tar and tig, syn grace to thig, That is a pityous preis. Therfore bewar, hald the on far, Sic chafwair for to prys: To tig and tar, then get the war, It is ill merchandyse.

Balnevis, Evergreen, ii. 199.

I know not if this word, bears a sense allied to Isl. taer-a, donare, sumptum facere; Su.G. id. alere, nutrire; Teut. teer-en victitari; epulari.

TARANS, s. pl. " Expl. children who have died before baptism;" Gl. Sibb.

"The little spectres called Tarans, or the souls of unbaptised infants, were often seen flitting among the woods and secret places, bewailing in soft voices their hard fate." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769. p.

Gael. taran, the ghost of an unbaptised child,

To ΓARGATΓ, v. a. To border with tassels.

" All things mislyked the precheors; they spack baldly against the targatting of thair taills, and against the rest of thair vanity; quhilk they affirmed sould provock God's vengeance, not only against those folisch wemen, bot against the hole realme." Knox's Hist. p. 330.

" Bot fie upon that knave Death, that will come quhidder we will or not; and quhen he hes laid on his areist, the foull wormes will be busic with this flesch, be it nevir so fair and so tender: and the silly saull, I fear, sall be so feabill, that it can nyther cary with it gold, garnisching, targating, pearll, nor precious stones." Ibid. p. 334.

Perhaps from Su.G. targ-a, lacerare, an idea not unapplicable to a tassel. V. the s.

TARGAT, s. 1. A tatter, a shred, S. Hale interest for my fund can scautly now Cleed a' my callants' backs, and stap their mou':

Their duds in targets flaff upo' their back. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 87. V. Codroch.

2. A tassel.

There hang nine targats at Johnie's hat, And ilk ane worth three hundred pound. Johnie Armstrong, Minstrelsy Border, i. 68.

3. Targets of skate, long slices of this fish dried,

Ang. synon. tags.

Sw. targad, torn; Isl. targar, ramenta, chips. But the immediate origin is Su.G. targ-u, minutis ictibus disscindere, to split by a repetition of light strokes; a frequentative from taer-a, terere. V. Thre, vo. Sarga.

TARY, s. Delay.

The thickest sop or rout of all the preis, Thare as maist tary was, or he wald ceis, This Lausus all to sparpellit and inuadis. Doug. Virgil, 331. 44.

TARYSUM, adj. Slow, lingering. Almychty Juno hauand reuth by this Of hir lang sorow, and tarysum dede, I wys, Hir maide Iris from the heuin has send The thrawand saul to lous .-

Doug. Virgil, 124. 32.

To TARY, v. a. To distress, to persecute. In Twlybothy ane il spyryte A Crystyn man that tyme taryit. Of that spyryte he wes then Delyveryd through that haly man. Wyntown, v. 12. 1211.

Su.G. taer-a consumere, or targ-a lacerare.

TARYE, s. Vexation, trouble.

-For folye is to mary, Fra tyme that bayth thair strenth and nature falis, And tak ane wyf to bring thameself in tarye. Maitland Poems, p. 314.

TAR-LEATHER, s. V. MID-CUPPLE. TARLIES, s. Lattice of a window, S. tirless, Fr. treillis.

"Upoun the pavement of the said gallerie he laid a fedder bed, and upoun the windowes he affixt blak claithes, that his shaddow should not be seen, nor his feit hard quhen he went to and fro, and cuttit ane small hole in the tarlies, quhairby he might visie with his hagbute." Historie of K. James Sext, p. 75.

TARLOCHIS, s. pl.

I charge the vit as I have ellis, Be halie relickis, beidis and bellis, Be ermeitis that in desertis dwellis, Be limitoris and tarlochis.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 47.

It is perhaps synon, with limitoris, with which it is conjoined; as denoting some sort of mendicant feiars. A.S. thearftic poor, needy. But this is mere conjecture.

TARRY-FINGERED, adj. Dishonest, disposed to carry off by stealth, S. from tarry, of or belonging to tar, because of its adhesive quality.

Su.G. klarfingrig is used in a similar sense; literally, one whose fingers itch.

To TARROW, v. n. 1. To delay

'This semple counsale, brudir, tak at me; And it to cun perqueir sé nocht thou tarrow; Bettir but stryfe to leif allone in lé, Than to be machit with a wicket marrow.

Henrysone, Baunatyne Poems, p. 122. The S. Prov. seems used in this sense; "Be still taking and tarrowing; take what you can get, though not all that is due;" Kelly, p. 63. i. e. take what is offered, and allow time for what remains. Also, that, "Lang tarrowing takes all the thank away;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 23.

2. To haggle, to hesitate in a bargain.

He that wes wont to beir the barrowis,

Betwixt the baik-hous and the brew-hous,

On twenty shilling now he tarrowis,

To ryd the hé gait by the plewis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 144.

i. e. he hesitates as to the sufficiency of the sum. Tarrow is still sometimes used as signifying that one murmurs at one's allowance of food, &c. S.

3. To feel reluctance.

But she's as weak as very water grown,
And tarrows at the broust that she had brown.

Ross's Helenore, p. 60.

Nane of us cud find a marrow,
So sadly forfairn were we;
Fouk sud no at any thing tarrow,
Whose chance looked naething to be.

Song, Ibid. p. 150.

To loath, to refuse," Gl. Ross. This is perhaps more strongly expressed than the term admits. Children are said to tarrow at their meat, when they delay taking it, especially from some pettish humour, or do it so slowly that it would seem they felt some degree of reluctance. It is rendered, take pet," Gl. Ritson.

" A tarrowing bairn was never fat;" S. Prov.

Kelly, p. 13.

"He tarrows early that tarrows on his kail;" S. Prov. "The Scots, for their first dish have broth (which they call kail) and their flesh-meat, boil'd or roasted, after. Spoken when men complain before they see the utmost that they will get;" Kelly, p. 135.

Tarrie and tarrow are used in this sense as synon.

But ye'll repent ye, if his love grow cauld;—
Like dawted wean that tarries at its meat,
That for some feckless whim will orp and greet.—
The dawted bairn thus takes the pet,
Nor eats tho' hunger crave,

"To refuse what we love, from a cross humour;" G1. ibid.

The prep. of had formerly been used instead of at.

"I am sure it is sin to tarrow of Christ's good meat." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 19.

Perhaps from A.S. teor-ian, ateor-ian, geteor-ian, to fail, to tarry, to desist or give over. Celt. tario, to tarry, Bullet.

TARTAN, TARTANE, s. Woollen cloth, checkered, or cross-barred with threads of various colours, S.

Syne schupe thame up, to lowp owr leiss,

Twa tabartis of the tartane;

Thay comptit nocht quhat thair clowtis wes.—Quhan sewit thaim on, in certain.

Symmye & his Bruder, Chron. Sc. Poetry, i. 360.

Tartan is worn both by men and women in the Highlands, for that piece of dress called the Plaid. In Angus, and some other Lowland counties, where it is not worn by men, women of the lower, and some even of the middle ranks, still wear a large veil of this stuff, rather of a thin texture, as a covering for the head and shoulders. The Philibeg also, or Kilt, worn by the Highlanders instead of breeches, is generally of Tartan.

Notwithstanding the zeal of Ramsay, in ascribing the highest antiquity to the Plaid under this name, (V. his poem entitled Tartana, or the Plaid); there is no evidence that this word was anciently used in Scotland. It is not Gaelic or Irish. It seems to have been imported, with the manufacture itself from France or Germany. Fr. tiretaine signifies linsey-woolsey, or a kind of it worn by the peasants in France. Tent. tiercteyn, id. vestis lino et lana confecta, pannus linolaneus, vulgo linistima, linostema, burellum; Kilian. Bullet mentions Arm. tyrtena as of the same meaning with Fr. tiretaine. which he calls a species of droguet, our drugget. L.B. tiretanus occurs in the same sense in ancient MSS. This, according to Du Cange, is pannus lana filoque textus. He quotes the Chartulary of Corbilum, or Nantes, as containing the following article. Item ung fardeaulx de Tiretaine vers doit 11 sols ob. These linsey-wolsey cloths were most probably particoloured. But although this should not have been the case, the word, originally signify. ing cloth of different materials, when it passed into another country, might, by a natural transition, be used to denote such cloths as contained different colours. Or, although the stuff first used in Scotland, under the name of Tartan, might be merely the Tiretaine of the continent; when the natives of this country imitated the foreign fabric, they might reck on it an improvement to checker the cloth with the most glaring colours. Tiretaine is thus described by Thierry, Le Frere's edition 1573. De la Tiretaine, Picard du telon, Coenomanis, Du Beinge, Northman. The passage, I suppose, should have been printed thus. De la Tiretaine, Picard Du Telon, Coenomanis; Du Beinge, Northman.; as intimating that this cloth was called Tiretaine in Piccardy, Telon in Maine, and Beinge in Normandy. .

Gael. brace is the term used to denote what is particoloured. What we call a tartan plaid is Gael. breacan. Perhaps Gallia Braccata may have received its designation from the circumstance of a particoloured dress being worn by its inhabitants, rather than from that of their wearing breeches.

TARTAN, adj. Of or belonging to tartan, S. O! to see his tartan trouze, Bonnet blue, and laigh-heel'd shocs!

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 107.

TARTAN-PURRY, s. "A sort of pudding made of red colewort chopped small, and mixed with oatmeal;" Gl. Shirr. Aberd. p. 37.

I would have gi'en my half year's fee, Had Maggy then been jesting me,

And tartan-purry, meal and bree,
Or butt'ry brose,

Been kilting up her petticoats
Aboon her hose.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 35. V. Purry. The last part of the word is evidently Teut. porreye, purreye, jus sive cremor pisorum; Fr. jurée, sap, juice, La purée de pois, pease pottage or the liquor of pease. Perhaps the term tartan is prefixed, because the coleworts used are particoloured. It may, however, be softened from Teut. taerte-panne, testum, q. soup made in an earthen pot.

- To TARTLE at one, v. n. 1. To view a person or thing with hesitation as not recognising the object with certainty, Loth. Perths. "I tartled at him," I could not with certainty recognise him.
- 2. To boggle, as a horse does, Loth.

3. To hesitate as to a bargain.

- "A toom purse makes a tartling merchant;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 17.
- 4. To hesitate from scrupulosity; denoting an act of the mind.

Some gentlemen, that's apt to startle, Some seem two sentences to tartle,— Contained in this ancient deed.

Cleland's Poems, p. 86.

Perhaps the second line was written, Seem at two sentences, &c.; as the repetition of some mars the sense.

Thir Gentlemen have weasands narrow,
That makes them tartle, flinch, and tarrow.
A medicine I will prescrive,
And paun my thrapple it shall thrive.
Send them a while to other nations,
Whence their veins may have dilatations.
When they refurn, they'll you request
To have the favour of the Test.

Ibid. p. 104.

Perhaps q. tartal, allied to Isl. tortallit, difficult to tell or reckon, Verel. from tor a particle denoting the difficulty one has in effecting any thing, and tala to speak, to tell; as signifying that one finds it difficult to tell who the person is.

TARTUFFISH, adj. Sour, sullen, stubborn, Renfrews.

To TARVEAL, r. a. 1. To fatigue, S.B.

The never a rag we'll be seeking o't;

Gin ye anes begin, ye'l turveal night and day,
Sae 'ris varo my mair and tking o't.

Song, R. Helenore, p. 134.

2. To plague, to vex; Gl. Sibb. .

This seems merely a corr. of Fr. travaill-er, to labour; to vex, to trouble; Ital. travagliare. This Verel. deduces from Isl. thrael-a, Sw. traal-a, duro labore exerceri, p. 264. Isl. taarfelle, however, signifies illachrymor, G. Andr. to lament, bewail. TARVEAL, adj. Ill-natured, fretful, S.B.

"The vile tarveal sleeth o' a coachman began to yark the peer beasts sae, that you wou'd hae heard the sough o' ilka thudd afore it came down."

Journal from London, p. 5.

To TASH, v. a. 1. To soil, to tarnish, S. Fr. tach-er, id.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 214.

- 2. Often used to denote the injury done to character by evil-speaking, S.
- 3. To upbraid, S.B.

TASH, TACHE, s. 1. A stain, a blemish, S. Tache, Chaucer, a blot, Fr. id.

2. A stain in a metaph. sense; disgrace, an affront, S.

"Mr. Hog was one from whom the greatest opposition to Prelacy was expected, and therefore a tash must be put on him at this Synod." Wodrow, i. 41.

TASK, s. The angel or spirit of any person, Ross-shire.

"The ghosts of the dying, called tasks, are said to be heard, their cry being a repetition of the moans of the sick.—The corps follow the tract led by the tasks to the place of interment; and the early or late completion of the prediction, is made to depend on the period of the night at which the task is heard." Statist. Acc. iii. 380.

Gael. taise, dead bodies, ghosts; Shaw.

TASKER, s. A labourer who receives his wages in kind, according to the quantity of work he performs, who has a fee for a certain task, Loth. The taskers are those who are employed in threshing out the corn; and they receive one boll of every 25, or the twenty-fifth part for their labour; and this has been their fixed and stated wages, as far back as can be remembered." P. Whittingham, E. Loth. Statist. Acc. ii. 353.

TASS, Tasse, Tassie, s. A cup or goblet. V. Tais.

TASSES, s. pl.

Mon in the mantell, that sittis at thi mete, In pal pured to pay, prodly pight. The tasses were of topas, that were thereto right.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 2.

"Cups," Pink. V. Tais. But it seems rather to signify bags or purses; for the tasses are described as fixed or tied to the mantell or pall. Su.G. Isl. taska pera, bulga, Alem. Ital. tasca, Fr. tasche, Belg. tasche, tesche. V. Tische.

TASTER, s.

Avis marina Taster dicta. Sibb. Scot. p. 22.

It is uncertain what bird is meant; not the Tyste surely, because the author mentions this a few lines below.

TATE, TAIT, TEAT, TATTE, s. A small portion of any thing; as a tate of woo, of lint; i. e. of wool, of flax, S.

TAT

It is applied to hair, as equivalent to lock, S. Her hair in taits hung down upon her brow. Ross's Helenore, p. 28.

-Apoun his chin feill chanos haris gray, Liart felterit tatis, with birnand ene rede.

Doug. Virgil, 173. 45.

It is used by Skene as denoting a portion, or part divided from another.

"Like as ane forke hes twa graines, this precept hes ane alternative command of twa partes .-Itaque hoc praeceptum est furcatum,—quhilk is divided in twa taits or parts." De Verb. Sign. vo.

Sibb. defines it "lock of hair or wool, commonly matted;" deriving it from A.S. getead, connexus, unitus. But the term does not necessarily include this idea; as appears from the use of the epithet felterit by the Bishop of Dunkeld. Su.G. taatte hodie significat pensum, vel quantum fuso simul imponitur. En lin-taatte, portio lini. Fenn. tutti, Ihre. Sw. tott, totte, manipulus lini aut lanae, ab Isl. toe, Sw. to, tod, lanificium, tomentum; Seren. Thus it seems probable, that this word has had its origin from the pastoral life of our ancestors; when their ideas were greatly confined to their flocks, and many of their terms borrowed from these. V. Fr.

TATH, TAITH, TATHING, s. 1. The dung of black cattle, S. taid, Ang.

"There is a tradition that a priest lived here, who had a right to every seventh acre of Ladifron, and to the tathing (dung as left on the ground) every seventh night." P. Monimail, Fife, Statist. Acc. ii. 204.

Isl. tad, dung, manure; also tadfall, id. q. the falling of the tath.

2. "The luxuriant grass which rises in tufts where the dung of cattle has been deposited," Gl. Sibb. A tuft of such grass is called a tath, S.

Isl. tada expresses the very same idea: Focuum, laetaminis beneficio proveniens; G. Andr. p. 234.

The term tath had been anciently used in some parts of E. as Suffolk, Norfolk, &c. Dominicum hoc privilegium faldam liberam vocant forenses: Tenentium servitutem, Sectam faldac: stercorationem, Iceni Tath. Spelman, vo. Falda.

To TATH, v. n. To dung; applied to black cattle only, S. taid, Ang.

Isl. ted-ia stercorare; also, laetare.

To TATH, v. a. To manure a field by laying cattle on it, S.

"The outfield was kept five years in natural grass; and, after being tathed by the farmers cattle, who were folded or penned in it, during the summer, it bore 5 successive crops of oats." P. Keith. Hall, Aberd. Statist. Acc. ii. 533.

TATHING, s. The act of manuring a field, by making the cattle lie on it, S.

" After a tathing, by allowing to lie upon the field at night, and after milking at noon, two or three crops of oats are taken." P. Kilchrenan, Argyles. Štatist. Acc. vi. 268.

ΤΛ[']ΓΗΙS, s. pl. Gawan and Gol. iii. 21.

Thai gird on tua grete horse, on grund quhil thai grane;

The trew helmys, and traist, in tathis that ta. As it corresponds to the following line,

Thair speris in the feild in flendris gart ga; it may signify splinters, very small segments: Su.G. taut, a string, a wire; Teut. taetse, tatse, a nail with a large head.

TATTER-WALLOPS, s. pl. Tatters, rags in a fluttering state, S. TATTY, TATTIT, TAWTED, adj. Matted, disordered by being twisted, or as it were baked together; a term often applied to the hair when it has been long uncombed, S.

"The hair of thaym is lang and tattie, nothir like the woll of scheip nor gait." Bellend. Descr.

Nae tawted tyke, tho' e'er sae duddie, But he wad stan't, as glad to see him. Burns, iii. 2.

-This ilk strang Aventyne, Walkis on fute, his body wymplit in Ane felloun bustuous and grete lyoun skyn, Terribil and rouch with lokkerand tatty haris. Doug. Virgil, 232. 2.

Junius so far mistakes the scuse of this word, as to render it terribilis, horridus. Lye, (Add. Jun. Etym.) who gives its proper signification, derives it from Ir. tath, gluten, ferrumen. Perhaps rather allied to Isl. taatt-a, to tease wool. V. Seren. vo. Teaze.

TAVART, s. A short coat, made without sleeves. V. TALBART.

TAUCHEY, adj. Greasy, clammy, S.

This might seem allied to Belg. taai, clammy, Tent. taey tenax; but rather from S. Taulch, q. v. TAUCHT, pret. v. Gave, delivered, commit-

He taucht him silver to dispend, And syne gaiff him gud day, And bad him pass furth on his way.

Barbour, ii. 130. MS. Bonnok on this wise, with his wayne,

The pele tuk, and the men has slayne. Syne taucht it till the King in hy,

That him rewardyt worthely.

Ibid. x. 253. MS.

There is no ground for Mr. Pinkerton's conjecture as to the first of these passages, that it should be "perhaps raucht, reached to him, held out to him." N. i. 38. It is merely an abbrev. of Betaucht, q. v.

TAUDY, Towny, s. A term used to denote a child, Aberd. Tedie, Todie, Ang.

Hence tandy fee, Forb. the fine paid for having a child in bastardy, and for avoiding a public profession of repentance; in some places called the cuttie-stool-mail.

But yet nor kirk nor consterie, Quo' they, can ask the taudy fee.—

For tarry-breeks should ay go free,

And he's the clerk.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 43.
Towdy, however, also signifies, podex; as in Gl.
Everg.

TAULCH, TAUGH, s. Tallow, S. tauch.

"It is ordanit that na taulch be had out of the realme, vnder the pane of escheit of it to the king." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 35. Edit 1566.

This is properly the name given to the article by tradesmen, before it is melted. After this operation it receives the name of tallow, S.

"Resolved, 1st, That anciently, when Taugh, or Rough Fat, was sold by Tron weight, it was then of very little value in proportion to its worth now.—2dly, That the standard weight for selling the carcases of Black Cattle and Sheep by is Dutch; and Taugh was sold by Tron weight, merely to make allowance for the garbage or refuse, which was unavoidably mixed with it in slaughtering the cattle and sheep." Edin. Even. Courant, Oct. 5. 1805.

It is written tauch, in a foolish Envoy of Dunb.

Everg. ii. 60. st. 25.

Belg. talgh, Su.G. Germ. talg, Isl. Dan. tolk, id. TAUPIE, TAWPIE, s. A foolish woman; generally as implying the idea of inaction and slovenliness, S.

"Pottage," quoth Hab, "ye senseless tawpie!
"Think ye this youth's a gilly-gawpy?"—

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 525. V. SMEERLESS. Su.G. tapig, simple, silly, foolish. Ihre views Gr. θηπ-ω stupeo, and τωφ-ω stupidus, as cognates. Germ. tapp-en to fumble, tappisch clumsy.

To TAW, v. a. "To pull, to lay hold of, to tumble about;" Gl. Sibb.

Su.G. tae-ja, lanam praeparare, vellicando deducere; Ihre, vo. To. V. TAAVIN.

To TAW, v. a. 1. To make tough by kneading, Ang.; as, Be sure you taw the leaven weel.

2. To work, like mortar, either with the hand or with an instrument, Ang.

Teut. touw-en depsere.

TAWAN, s. Reluctance, hesitation. To do any thing with a tawan, to do it reluctantly, Ang.

Hence the Prov. phrase; "He callit me sometimes Provost, and sometimes my Lord; but it was ay with a tawan." Perhaps allied to the last v. or Su.G. tog-a, toi-a, togn-a, Isl. teig-ia, MoesG. tiuh-an, to draw; if not to Isl. tauf mora, tef-ia morari.

TAWBERN, TAWBURN, s. The tabour or tabret.

——The quhissil renderis soundis sere,

With tympanys, tambernis, ye war wount to here.

Doug. Virgil, 299. 44. Tawburnys, MS. V. TALBRONE.

TAWIE, adj. Tame, tractable; "that allows it-Vol. IL self peaceably to be handled; spoken of a horse or cow;" Gl. Burns.

---Ye ne'er was donsie, But hamely, tawie, quiet, an' cannie.

Burns, iii. 141.

Allied perhaps to Isl. taeg-iast, Su.G. taag-us, trahi, tog-a trahere, ducere; q. allowing itself to be led; or teg-ia, Isl. tey-a, allicere, as being easily enticed or prevailed with.

TAWIS, TAWES, TAWS, s. 1. A whip, a lash.
As sum tyme sclentis the round top of the tre,
Hit with the twynit quhip dois quhirle we se,
Quham childer driuis bissy at thare play
About the clois and vode hallis al day;
Sche smytin with the tawis dois rebound,
And rynnys about about in cirkil round.

Doug. Virgil, 220. 7.

Rudd. derives it from E. taw, A.S. taw-ian, coria subigere, Belg. touw-en. But it is more allied to Isl. taug, tag, vimen, lorum, juncus. It is evidently a pl. s. q. tagis. Taw is still used in the sing. for the point of a whip.

2. The ferula used by a schoolmaster, S. tawse. Syne be content to quite the cause,

And in thy teeth bring me the tawes, With becks my bidding to abide.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 3.

"Never use the taws when a gloom can do the turn;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 57.

3. Metaph. the instrument of correction, of whatever kind, S.

—Now its tell'd him that the taws Was handled by revengefu' Madge.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 179. Hence, To TAZ, v. a. "To whip, scourge, belabour;" Gl. Shirr. S.B.

TAWM, s. A fit of rage; a cross or sullen humour; especially as including the idea, that one cannot be managed, when under its influence. S.

It might seem allied to Isl. talma, to hinder, talman hindrance, obstruction, farar talme, that which prevents one from taking a journey, itineris remora, G. Andr.; especially as he, who has agreed to go to any place, when he suddenly alters his purpose, without any apparent reason, is said to tak a tawm. But I suspect that it is merely Gael. taom, a fit of sickness, madness, or passion; taomuch, subject to fits; especially as A. Bor. to taum signifies to swoon; Grose.

TAWNLE, TAANLE, s. A large fire, kindled at night about Midsummer, especially at the time of Beltein, S.O. synon. bleize, banefire.

"The custom of kindling large fires or Taanles, at Midsummer, was formerly common in Scotland, as in other countries, and to this day is continued all along the strath of Clyde. On some nights a dozen or more of them may be seen at one view. They are mostly kindled on rising ground, that they may be seen at a greater distance." Gl. Sibb. vo. Taanle.

"An ancient practice still continues in this parish and neighbourhood, of kindling a large fire, or tawnle as it is usually termed, of wood, upon some eminence, and making merry around it, upon the eve of the Wednesday of Marymass fair in Irvine. As most fair days in this country were formerly Popish holy days, and their eves were usually spent in religious ceremonies and diversions, it has been supposed, that tawnles were first lighted up by our catholic fathers, though some derive their origin from the druidical times." P. Dundonald, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. vii. 622.

Su.G. taend-a, MoesG. tand-ian, A.S. tend-an, tyn-an, to kindle; Gael. teine, a fire. I have heard it conjectured, that taanle might be merely Beltein inverted, q. Tein-bel. According to the system of the Welsh kingdom of Stratcluyd, we might suppose that the ancient Britons had left this word in the West of S. from C.B. tanlhuyth, incendium, a burning flame, Lhuyd; also, rogus, Davies. Ir. teineal signifies touchwood, igniarium. V. Beltein. TAWPY, s. A foolish woman. V. TAUPIE. TAWSY, s. A cup or bowl. Siller tawsy, silver bowl, Evergreen, ii. 20. V. TAIS.

TEAGIE, s. A designation given to a cow. V. TAIGIE.

To TEAL, TILL, v. a. To entice, to wheedle, to inveigle by flattery; generally, to teal on, or to teal up, Ang.

With Penny may men wemen till, Be that neuer so strange of will, So oft may it be sene;

Lang with him will thai noght chide.

Sir Penny, Chron. S. P. i. 140. st. 5. It also occurs in the Old Legend of King Estmere.

Nowe stay thy harpe, thou proud harper, Nowe stay thy harpe, I say; For an thou playest as thou beginnest, Thou'lt till my bride away.

Percy's Reliques, i. 59. Su.G. tael-ja pellicere, decipere; Isl. tael-a decipere, circumvenire, synon. with Sw. beswik-a, Verel. Hence taeld-ur deceptus, circumventus. Miok taeldr oc swikinn, id.

Tulle, to allure, used by Chaucer, is radically the same

With empty hand, men may na haukes tulle. Reves T. v. 4132.

It seems to be the same word which R. Brunne uses in a neut. sense, p. 128.

In alle manere cause he sought the right in skille,

To gile no to fraude wild he neuer tille.

Junius views this as allied to A.S. betilldon, used by King Alfred, in rendering the phrase, introductus est, Bed. iv. 26. Add. Jun. Etym. But this etymon is doubtful.

TEALER, s. Or, a tealer on, one who entices,. Ang. V. the v.

TEASICK, s. A consumption, Montgomerie, V. FEYK. E. Phthysick, id. Gr. φθισις. TEAZLE, s. A severe brush. V. TAISSLE.

TEBBITS, s. pl. Sensation. V. TABBETS.

TEDD, adj. Ravelled, entangled, S.B. Su.G. tudd-a intricare.

TEE, s. 1. A mark set up in playing at colts. pennystane, &c. S.B.

Isl. ti-a demonstrare, q. as pointing out the place; Teut. tijgh-en, indicare.

2. The nodule of earth, from which a ball is struck off at the hole; a term in golfing, S. Driving their baws frae whins or tee,

There's no nae gowfer to be seen.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 205.

V. Goff, a Poem, p. 32.

To TEE, v. a. To tee a ball, to raise it a little on a nodule of earth, at the same time giving it the proper direction, S.

"That's a tee'd ba';" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 64. TEE, adv. Too, also. Aberd. Cumb.

To TEEN, v. a. To provoke. V. TEYNE. TEENGE, s. A colic in horses, S. perhaps corr.

from E. twinge.

TEEWHOAP, s. The Lapwing, Orkn.
"The Teewhoap, (tringa vanellus, Lin. Syst.) which, from the sound it utters, has the name of the teewhoap here, comes early in the spring." Barry's Orkney, p. 307. V. PEEWEIP and TUQUHEIT. TEES, s. pl.

The tees of the sadle down yeed, Or else he had born down his steed.

Sir Egeir, p. 46.

It seems uncertain, whether this be the same with teis, Doug. strings, cords; or allied to Teut. tatse, a buckle. The former is most probable.

TEES. This is mentioned among a list of articles used in incantation.

-Palme crocis, and knottis of strease,

The paring of a preistis auld tees.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 318. Perhaps for taes, toes, i. e. the nails or corns on his toes; as strease for straes, straws.

TEESIE, s. A gust of passion, Fife.

To TEEΓ, v. n. To peer, to peep out. V. TETE:

TEET-BO, s. Bo-peep, S. Gl. Shirr. synon. Keekbo. V. under TETE.

To TEETH, v. a. To teeth with lime, to build a wall, either dry or with clay in the inside, using a little lime between the layers of stones towards the outside, S. q. to indent.

"The fences are partly stone walls teethed with lime, partly ditches with thorn hedges on the top." P. Carnock, Fife, Statist. Acc. xi. 482.

TEETHY, adj. Crabbed, ill-natured, S. A. Bor.

A teethy answer, a tart reply. The term conveys the same idea as when it is said that a man shews his teeth.

TEHEE, s. A loud laugh. He got up with a tehee, S.

It is frequently used as an interj., expressive of loud laughter.

Te hee, quoth Jennie, teet, I see you. Watson's Coll. iii. 47. Tam got the wyte, and I gae the tehee. Ross's Helenore, p. 64, Either from the sound; or allied to Su.G. hi-a ludere, Isl. ridere.

TEICHER, s.

At every pylis poynt and cornes croppis
The teicheris stude, as lemand beriall droppis,
And on the halesum herbis, clene but wedis,
Like cristall knoppis or small siluer bedis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 449. 30.

"Drops of dew, f. a Fr. tacher, to spot; tacheture, a spot, speckle or mark." Rudd.

It seems rather to signify dots, small spots; in which sense S. ticker is still used, a dimin. from Tick, id. q. v.

To TEIL, v. a. To cultivate the soil, S. to till, E. We—be the tennor hereof grantis and gevis license to thame and thair successors to ryfe out breke and teil yeirlie ane thousand acres of thair common and teil yeirlie ane thousand acres of thair common landis of our said burgh." Chart. Ja. V. to the Burgh of Selkirk, ap. Minstrelsy Border, i. 264.

As Mr. Tooke has derived the E. v. from A.S. til-ian to raise, to lift up; observing, that "to till the ground is, to raise it, to turn it up," (Divers. Purley, ii. 69.) one might suppose that this derivation were greatly confirmed by the synon. expressions, ryfe out and breke, here used. But unfortunately, there is no evidence that the A.S. v. was ever used in this sense. It signifies to prepare, to procure; to labour, to cultivate; to toil; to compute, to assign. V. Lye and Somner. Isl. till-a indeed signifies to lift up; attollere, leviter figere. But I do not find that it is ever used to denote the cultivation of the soil. Nor does Teut. till-en, tollere, admit of this sense.

To TEYM, TEME, v. a. To empty, teem, S.B. Mony off hors to the ground down that cast, Saidlys that teym off horss, bot maistris thar.

Wallace, viii. 213. MS.

Than young men walit, besy here and thare, And eik preistis of Hercules altare, The roistit bullis flesche set by and by, The bakin brede of baskettis temys in hye.

Doug. Virgil, 247. 5.

This Rudd. derives from Dan. tomm-er, vacuo. But the v. in this form more closely resembles Isl. taem-a, evacuare; Verel. Teem is also used as an E. v. V. Tume.

TEINDIS, TENDIS, s. pl. Tithes, S. V. Skene Ind.

"That na man let thaim to sett thair landis, and teindis, vnder the pane that may follow be spiritual law or temporal!." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 1. Edit. 1566.

Fra the Kyrk the tendis then He reft wyth mycht, and gawe his men. Wyntown, vi. 4. 17.

Moes G. taihund, the tenth part, (whence taihundondai, tithes), Su.G. tiende, anc. tiund, Belg. teind, id. Hence Isl. tiund-a, Sw. tind-a, tiend-a, Belg. tiend-en, decimare.

To TEIND, TEYND, v. a. To tithe, S. The hirdis teindit all the corne.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 19.

V. also Acts Ja. VI. 1579. c. 73.

TEYND, s.

For ony trety may tyd I tell the the teynd, I will noght turn myn entent, for all this warld brerd.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 7.

Perhaps, "I tell thee for the tenth time;" or, "I tell thee the enquirer;" A.S. teond, a demandant; also, an accuser.

To TEIND, TYNDE, TINE. v. n. To kindle, S. Gandle-teening, candle-lighting; Westmorel. To teen and doubt the candle, to light and put out the candle;" Gl. Grose.

" Ne me teendith not a lanterne, and puttith it undir a bushel." Wiclif, Matt. v.

A.S. tend-an, tyn-an, MoesG. tand-jan, intand-jan, Su.G. taend-a, Isl. tendr-a, accendere. Wachter traces the Goth. terms to Celt. tan fire, Gael. teyn, Ir. tinning: and undoubtedly the affinity is very obvious. He observes, that to the same family belong tunder, tinder, Isl. tin, tinna, a flint, tindr-a to emit sparks, tinn-a to shine forth, tungl a star, the moon, Germ. tannen baum, the pine, q. a tree which easily catches fire; and A.S. tender, tyndre, Isl. tundur, E. tinder, q. something that kindles easily. V. Beltein.

TEIND, TYND, TINE, s. 1. A spark of fire, S.B.

2. A spark at the side of the wick of a candle, synon. spender, waster. There's a teind at the candle; i. e. It is about to run down, S.B. V. the v.

Doug. Virgil, 57. 21.

2. Sorrow, vexation, S.

'Cess, men,' he said, 'this is a butlass payne; 'We can nocht now chewyss hyr lyff agayne.' Wness a word he mycht bryng out for teyne; The bailfull ters bryst braithly fra hys eyne.

Wallace, vi. 208. MS.

Thus it is used by R. Brunne, p. 37.

That was all forwondred, for his dede com tene. A.S. teon, teona, injuria, irritatio. Tene is used by Chaucer and Gower in the sense of grief.

TEYNFULL, adj. Wrathful.

Cum teynfull tyrannis trimling with your trayne.

Adhortatioun to all Estates, Lyndsay's

Warkis, 1592.

TEIR, s. Fatigue; or perhaps as an adj. fatiguing, tiresome.

It war teir for to tel treuly in tail
To ony wy in this warld wourthy, I wise,
With revaling and revay, all the oulk hale.
Gawan and Gol. iv. 27.

Su.G. taer-a consumere; A.S. teor-ian, tir-ian, to tire. V. Tere.

TEIRFULL, adj. Fatiguing.

As thai walkit be the syde of ane fair well, Throu the schynyng of the son ane cieté thai se, With torris, and turatis, teirfull to tell, Bigly batollit about with wallis sa he.

Gawan and Gol. i. 4.

TEIS, s. pl. Ropes, by which the yards of a ship hang.

Than all samyn, wyth handys feit and kneis Did heis thare sale, and crossit down thare teis. Doug. Virgil, 156. 14.

From the same origin with E. tie.

To TELE, v. a. To cultivate, E. to till.
(Quhen seid wantis than men of teling tyris;
Than cumis ane, findis it waist lyand:
Yokis his pleuch; telis at his awin hand.
Maitland Poems, p. 315.

TELYIE, s. A piece of butcher meat. V

TELLYEVIE, s. A violent or perverse humour. Scho will sail all the winter nicht,

And nevir tak a tellyevie.

Semple, Evergreen, i. 67. Apparently the same with S. tirrivie, q. v. or perhaps from Fr. talu-er to slope, to take an oblique direction.

To TEME, v. a. To empty. V. TEYM. TEMED, pret.

For drede thai wald him slo, He temed him to the king.

Sir Tristrem, p. 29. st. 40. "Perhaps from Sax. Temed, or Getemed. Man-suefactus, domitus. Tamed." Gl.

Mr. Scott is certainly right. The idea is, to enice forward. For the Goth. words, allied to E. same, imply not only the use of force, but occasionally of gentle and persuasive means. Isl. tem-ia assuefacere.

TEMPER-PIN, s. The wooden pin used for tempering or regulating the motion of a spinning wheel, S.

My spinning wheel is auld and stiff,— To keep the temper pin in tiff, Employs aft my hand, Sir.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 175.

TENCHIS, s. pl. Taunts, reproaches.

The rial stile, clepit Heroicall,

Full of wourschip and nobilnes ouer all,

Suld be compilit, but tenchis or vode wourde,

Kepand honest wise sportis, quhare euer thay bourde,

All lous langage and lichtnes lattand be; Observand bewtie, sentence, and gravité.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 271. 31.

Fr. tenc-er, tanc-er, tans-er, to chide, scold, taunt; tanson, a chiding, scolding, brawling with; Rudd. Tenceresse, grumbling, Rom. de la Rose.

Tunce and tence are also used in O.Fr. in the sense of querelle, debat, Dict. Trev. Tanson was applied also to a species of verse, in which poets seem to have carried on a sort of scolding-match.

"The evidences of the poetical talent, which had hitherto occurred in France, consisted of romances, tales and love-songs, tensons, or pleas in verse, and sirventes, or the overflowings of a satirical humour." Godwin's Life of Chaucer, i. 351.

He here speaks of the period preceding the age of Lorris, who wrote the Roman de la Rose.

Tenson. Vieux terme de Poesie Françoise, qui s'est dit de certains ouvrages des Trouveres ou Troubadours.—Ils contencient des disputes d'amours, lesquelles etoient jugées par des Seigneurs et Dames qui s'assembloient à Pierrefeu et a Romans, dont les résolutions s'appelloient Amets d'Amours. On trouve encore de jolis Tensons dans les vieux Poëtes Provençeaux. Dict. Trev.

The Fr. tenson most probably first suggested to our poets that singular species of writing to which they have given the designation of Flyting; as, The Flyting of Dunbar and Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 47. The Flyting of Polwart and Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. It even descended so far as to assume the title of The Soutar and Tailyior's Flyting, Evergreen, i. 190. st. 1. Leo, that lywyd in fals erroure,
Oure the Scottis the Kyng Ewan,
Wyth the Peychtis, regnyd than,
In-til the kynryk of Scotland.

Wyntown, vi. 1. 3. V. TEINDS.

To TEND, v. n. To aim at, to intend.

"His Grace tendis on na sort, to move or do ony thing, bot that he may justlie be the auise of the thre Estatis." Acts James V. 1535. c. 38. Edit. 1566.

Fr. tend-re, id.

* TENDER, adj. Sickly, S.

"Mr. Henderson is much tenderer than hewont." Baillie's Lett. ii. 139.

"As, Pope was a tender man.—By delicate, the Scots mean sickly, and the English beautiful or pleasing. These senses of the words, tender, and delicate, the Scots seem to have taken from the French, who make use of delicat in the same sense as foible, weak or feeble; and tendre, for douillet, unable to bear any hardship." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 108. 109.

TENE, s. Anger, sorrow. V. TEYNE.
To TENE, v. a. To irritate. V. TEYNE, v.
TENEMENT, s. A house; often denoting a building which includes several separate dwellings; as a tenement of houses, S. L.B. tenement-um, Rudd.

To TENT, v. a. To stretch out, to extend.

The army al thay mycht se at ane sycht,
Wyth tentis tentit strekand to the plane.

Doug. Virgil, 264. 50.

Fr. tend-re, to extend; Lat. tend-ere, to pitch a tent.

TENT, s. Care, notice, attention. 1. To tak tent, to take care, to be attentive, S.

With thair mengne, gud tent suld ta.
Quhill off thaim had of help myster,
And help with thaim that with hym wer.

Barbour, xi. 451. MS.

Dawnus son Turnus, in the nynte tak tent, Segeis new Troye, Eneas tho absent.

Doug. Virgil; Contentes, 12. 45.

The pl. is sometimes used.

The prince Eneas on this wyse allane
The fatis of goddis, and rasis mony ane
Rehersing schew, and sundry strange ventis,
The Quene and all the Tyrianis takand tentis.

Doug. Virgil, 92. 44.

The phrase corresponds to Fr. faire attention. "A story is told of an English lady, who consulted a physician from Scotland, and being desired by him to tak tent, understood that tent wine was prescribed her, which she took accordingly. It is not said what was the consequence of this mistaken prescription; but as that species of wine is far from being a specific for every disorder, this is a phrase, which, by the faculty at least, ought to be carefully avoided." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 19.

2. To tak tent to, to take care of, to exercise concern about a person or thing, S.

To say the salmes fast sho bigan, And toke no tent unto no man.

Ywaine, ver. 890. E. M. R.

Remane I here, I am bot perischit,
For thair is few to me that takis tent,
That garris me ga sa raggit, reuin, and rent.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 254.

R. Brunne uses a similar phrase, p. 220.

I rede thou gyue gode tent, & chastise tham sone,
For tham ye may be schent, for vengeance is granted bone.

3. To tak tent of, to beware of, to be on one's guard against, S.

I redd you, good folks, tak tent of me. Herd's Collection, ii. 29.

To Tent, v. n. To attend, to observe attentively, generally with the prep. to. Spynagros than spekis; said, Lordingis in le, I rede you tent treuly to my teching. Gawan and Gol. ii. 3.

It is sometimes used without the prep.
These lurdanes came just in my sight,
As I was tenting Chloe.

Ramsay's Works, i. 119:
Abbrev. from Fr. attend-re, or Lat. attend-ere.
Tent, how the Caledonians, lang supine,
Begin, mair wise, to open baith their een.
Ramsay's Poems, i. 50.

To Tent, v. a. 1. To observe, to remark, S. The neighbours a' tent this as well as I.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 75.

Think ye, are we less blest than they, Wha scarcely tent us in their way, As hardly worth their while?

Burns, iii. 157.

2. To regard, to put a value on, S. And nane her smiles will tent, Soon as her face looks auld.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 76.

A. Bor. to tent, i. e. to tend, or look to; Ray.
TENTIE, adj. Attentive, S. Fr. attentif.
Be wyse, and tentie, in thy governing.

Maitland Poems, p. 276.

TENTILY, adv. Carefully, S.

Back with the halesome girss in haste she hy'd,
And tentily unto the sair apply'd.

Ross's Helenore, p. 15. 16.

TENTLESS, adj. Inattentive, heedless, S.
I'll wander on, with tentless heed,
How never-halting moments speed,
Till fate shall snap the brittle thread.

Burns, iii. 87.

TER, s. Tar.

And pyk, and ter, als haiff thai tane; And lynt, and herdis, and brynstane. Barbour, xvii. 611. MS.

Teut. terre, Su.G. tiaera, A.S. tare, id. The origin, according to Seren., is Sw. toere, tyre, taeda, lignum pingue, ex quo hoc liquamen coquitur.

TERCE, s. "A liferent competent by law to widows who have not accepted of a special provision, of the third of the heritable subjects in which their husbands died infeft." Erskine's Instit. B. 2. Tit. 9. s. 44. Lat. tert-ia, Fr. tiers.

The widow is hence styled the tercer, ibid. TERE.

Eschames of our sleuth and cowardise,
Seand thir gentilis and thir paganis auld
Ensew virtue, and eschew euery vice,
And for sa schorte renowne warren so bald,
To sustene were and panis tere vntald.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 358. 8.

"To bear, undergo, to digest," Rudd. Sibb. views it as the same with deir injury. Perhaps it may be viewed as an adj., allied to, or the samo with Teir, q. v.

It may be observed, that Isl. for denotes difficulty in accomplishing any thing. Torfaera, a difficult way; tarkaend, hard to be known.

TERE, adj. Tender, delicate.

In describing the dresses of the courtiers of Venus, the poet mentions Satine figures champit with flouris and bewis, Damisflure tere pyle, quhairon thair lyis Peirle, Orphany quhilk euerie stait renewis.

Palice of Honour, i. 46. This seems to mean the tender or delicate pile of flowered damask; Teut. tere tener, delicatus. TERLYST, TIRLLYST, part pa. Grated.

A fell Iyoun the King has gert be brocht Within a barrace, for gret harm that he wrocht, Terlyst in yen, na mar power him gaiff; Off wodness he excedyt all the laiff, Wallace, xi, 197, M.S. Ferlyst, Edit, Perth, -The full mone wyth beames brycht,

In throw the tirllest wyndo schane by nycht, Doug, Virgil, 72, 37,

Fr. treillis, a grated frame; treill-er, to grate or lattice, to compass or hold in with cross bars or latticed frames; Cotgr.

TERNE, TERNED, adj. Fierce, wrathful, choleric. Thoch ye be kene, and inconstant, and cruel in mynd:

Thoch yo as tygaris be terne, be tretabil in luif. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 54.

"The moderator, a most grave and wise man, yet naturally somewhat terned, took me up a little accurately, shewing I might draw the question so strait as I pleased, yet he had not stated it so." Baillie's Lett. i. 134.

Belg. toornig wrathful, toorn anger, Su.G. foertorn-a to irritate.

TERNYTE', s. Corr. of Trinity. Til the Fest of the Ternytè

He grawntyd thame trewyd for to be.

Wyntown, vii. 8. 99.

Hence the corr. Tarnty Market, Ang. the name still given to a fair held, at Brechin, at the time when this feast was celebrated during Popery. TERSE, s. A debate, a dispute, S.B.

To Terse, v. n. To debate, to contend, S.B. Allied perhaps to Teut. tort-en, trots-en, irritare, instigare, provocare verbis ferocibus. TERSEL, s.

Foul Flirdon, Wansucked, Tersel of a Tade, Thy meiter mismade hath lousily lucked.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 5. It may perhaps signify brood, as a deriv. from A.S. teors, Teut. teers, membrum virile.

TESTOON, TESTONE, s. A Scottish silver coin, varying in value.

There is no mention of these coins in the Scottish statutes before the beginning of James VI.'s time, which the French and English call testoons from their having the king's head stamped on them; but Nicolson is of opinion that their name was common enough in the time of queen Mary, mother of James VI. Certainly Fr. Blancius expressly calls some of the coins of Francis II, of France, and Mary of Scotland, his wife, testoons. Their value in England was always the same as shillings, but among the Scots, at first they were five shillings, and then raised to a higher value." Introd. to Anderson's Diplom, p. 131,

The silver coin, weighing about 92 grains Troy, with Mary's head, 1562, is generally denominated her testoon. V. Cardonnel's Numism. p. 99. O.Fr. teste, a head. Teston. Capitatus nummus. On les appelloit testons à cause de la tête du Roi, qui y etoit représentéc. Dict. Trev.

To TETE, TEET, r. a. 1. To send forth as if by stealth; to cause to peep out.

The rois knoppis, tetand furth there hede Gan chyp, and kyth there vernale lippis red. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 401, 18.

2. v. n. To peep out, to look in a sly or prying way; often as implying the idea that this is done elandestinely, S. pron. teet; synon. keik. "They say Scot, He is teeting out at the window, i. e. he steals a glance or hasty view through the window;" Rudd.

But I can teet, an' hitch about, And melt them ere they wit.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 36. Sibb., while he justly overlooks Rudd.'s etymon, (" probably a F. tete, caput) is not much more happy in his derivation. For he views it as " corr. from Belg, kijck-en, to peep or spy." It is evidently from the same stock with Su.G. titt-a inspicere. Thre explains this word almost in the same terms with Rudd. Per transennam veluti videre, ut solent curiosi aut post tegmina latentes. This idea of " lurking behind a covert," very frequently enters into the sense in which we use our S. term. There had undoubtedly been a cognate word in O.E., as Skinner renders toteth, looketh; supposing that it is allied to Lat. tue-or, tui-tus. Ihre adopts the idea as to titt-a. Hence, Теет-во, s. 1. Во-реер, S. But she maun e'en be glad to look, An' play teet-bo frae nook to nook.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 113. 2. Used metaph, to denote inconstancy, or infidelity.

By teet-bo friends, an' nae a few, I've rough been guidit.

Morison's Poems, p. 95.

TETH, s. Temper, disposition. Ill-teeth'd, illhumoured, having a bad temper, Fife.

Allied perhaps to A.S. tyht instructio, teting disciplina, or Isl. tidt indeclin. Mierer titt um; huic rei studes; Verel.

TETHERFACED, adj. Having an ill-natured aspect, S.

Allied perhaps to Isl. teit-a, rostrum beluinum; whence teitstr, torvus et minax.

TEUCH, TEUGH, TEWCH, adj. 1. Tough, not easily broken, S.

Amiddis ane rank tre lurkis a golden beuch, With aureate leuis, and flexibil twistis teuch. Doug. Virgil, 167. 42. A.S. toh, id. from Moes.G. tioh-an ducere, vel pertrahi; q. any thing that may be drawn out or extended.

2. Tedious, lengthened out, not soon coming to

It occurs in an old adage:

The Spring e'ennings are lang and teuch.

3. Not frank or easy, dry as to manner, stiff in conversation, S.

About me freindis anew I gatt, Rycht blythlie on me thay leuch; But now they mak it wondir teuch.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 185.

4. Pertinacious. A teuch debate, one in which the disputants, on both sides, adhere obstinately to their arguments, S.

Baillie uses tough in this sense.

"Here arose the toughest dispute we had in all the Assembly." Letters, i. 98.

A teuch battle, one keenly contested, S.

At Loncarty they fought fu' teuch.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 12.

Isl. seig-er, synon. with A.S. toh, denotes a man who is tenacious of his purpose. Their voro seiger a sit mal; caussam suam tenaciter defendebant; Ol. Tryggv. S. p. i. 140.

5. To make any thing teuch, to do it reluctantly. Schir, say for thi self, thow seis thow art schent, It may nocht mend the anemyte to mak it sateugh.

Gawan and Gol. iv. 6.

TEUCH, s. A draught, a pull of any liquor, S. This word is entirely Gothic. Su.G. tog notat haustum, potantium ductum.

Drack ut then dryck i en tog. Uno haustu potum illum hausit. i. e. S. "He drank out that drink at ae teuch." Hist. Alex. Magn. ap. Ihre.

This learned writer gives it as derived from tog-a trahere, ducere, as E. draught from draw. Ihre adds; Nos etiam toga paa usurpamus de impigre bibentibus. Belg. teug; toge, id. Kilian gives toghe, teughe, haustus, as synon. with dronck.

TEUG, Tug, s. A rope. It is particularly applied to a halter, Loth.

Su.G. tog, a rope, Isl. tog, taug, id. from tog-a ducere.

TEUKIN, adj. Quarrelsome, troublesome, S.B. If I mistake not, it sometimes includes the idea of fraud. Allied perhaps to Teut. tuck fraus, fallacia, insidiae, machinatio; Isl. tulk-a pellicere.

To TEW, v. a. To make tough. Meat is said to be tewed, when roasted with so slow a fire that it becomes tough, S.O. V. TAAVE and TAW, v. 1.

To Tew, v. n. Grain is said to tew, when it becomes damp, and acquires a bad taste, S B.

Su.G. tuef odor, tuefk-a gustare; Isl. thef-ur, odor, plerumque ingratus, thef-a odorari, item, foetere, Arm. taff-a, tuv-a, gustare.

TEW, s. A bad taste, especially that occasioned by dampness, S.B.

THA, THAY, THEY, pron. These; all pron. in the same manner.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 7.

Johns. gives A.S. thi as the origin of E. they.

But hi is the A.S. word. This seems from that ge, like the property of the than like the pron. tha, thay.

THAINS, s. pl. V. RAYEN.

THAIR, used in composition, Like E. there.

Johns., in deriving thereabout, only says, "from there and about." But the E. adv. there does not seem properly to enter into the composition. There, in comp. (S. thair, thar,) seems to be originally the genit., dat. and abl. of the A.S. article, thaere, there, corresponding to Gr. 715, 711, 711. V. Hickes. Gramm. A.S. p. 7. According to this idea, Lye expl. A.S. Thaer-to, ad cum, cam, id.; Praeter eum, eam, id.: Thaer-of, de vel ex eo, ea, iis; Thaer-inne, in eo, ea, iis. I am much inclined to think that A.S. thaer, ibi, in that place, was originally the genit. or abl. of the article; as Lat. illic and istic have been formed from ille, iste.

THAIRANENT, adv. Concerning that.

"Being cairfull that the samyne be cleired to the leidges, and thay be put in ane certaintie thair-anent—the saids Lordis finds and declaris," &c... Acts Sederunt, 29th January 1650.

Ibid. 18. 23.

Although it occurs in our history before the reign of Malcolm Canmore, it has been supposed that it was introduced by this prince, from his attachment to A.S. manners, as he had been educated in the English court; Notes to Sibb. Fife, p. 224. But it is more probable, that it was borrowed from the A.S. in an earlier reign, as in this it seems to have given place to the title of Earl; Lord Hailes' Annals, i. 27.

This, as taking place of Murmor, appears to have been the highest title of honour known in S., before the reign of Malcolm Canmore. Afterwards, that of Earl was probably reckoned more honourable, as having obtained a more determinate sense in England after the Norman conquest. For, according to Spelman, (vo. Eorla) Erle seems rather to have denoted a Duke than a Count.

It has been supposed, that there were Earls in S. even before the time of Malcolm II. Dalyell's Fragments, Desultory Reflections, p. 37. Torfacus says; Fuit quidam Comes in Scotia Melbrigdius, Hist. Orcad. circ. A. 860. Lib. i. c. 4. According to Sturlson, "Earl Sigurd killed Melbrigd, called Tonn, a Scottish Earl." Sigurdr Iarl drap Melbrigda Tonn, Iarl Vol. II.

Skotskan; Heimskringla, V. i. 99. Torfaeus also mentions Dungad Comes Catenesiae, A. 875. He is called Dungadar iarls of Katanese; Orkneyinga S. p. 4. We also read of Erp, the son of Meldun, a certain Earl from Scotland; Melduni cujusdam comitis è Scotia, about 870. Hist. Orcad. Lib. i. c. 5. of Earls Hund and Melsnat, the kinsman of Malcolm, who afterwards came to the throne, A. 993. Ibid. c. 10. And Mr. Dalyell also refers to Adils and Hring, A. 985, who both receive the name of Iarl; Egill, Skallagrim S. But there is no evidence that they resided in Scotland. They are called two brothers who presided over Bretlandi, the land of the Britons; and are said to have been, skattgilldir undir Adalstein konung, tributaries to Athelstan King of England. V. Johnstone, Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 33. comp. with pp. 41. 42. Mention is made, in Niala Saga, of an Earl Melkolf, i. c. Malcolm, who seems to have resided on the Border, in a place called Whitsburg, near Berwick. V. Johnstone, p. 142.

In the same work, Makbeth Comes, 952. is also mentioned; and Finleikus Comes Scotorum, 985. Ol. Trygguason S. It is added, that, "if we might credit Torfaeus,—Malcolm Mackenneth was in use to create Earls;" and that "there is an earlier account of the creation of an Earl;" for Skuli, the brother of Liot, having gone into Scotland, was there dignified with the name of Earl by the Scotish king. V. Ol. Trygguason S. Johnstone, p.

Mr. Dalyell has justly observed, that "great latitude must be given to the imperfect accounts Torfaeus and the writers of the Sagas might obtain." When they use the term, it is highly probable, that it is meant to express the dignity of Thane; as the latter designation, although of Gothic origin, does not appear to have been used, among the Scandinavians, as so honourable a term, or in so definite a sense.

It is probable, that some were created, by our kings, earls in Caithness, before the term was more generally used. As this country had been long in the possession of the Norwegians, and governed by those who had been honoured with this title by the kings of Norway, their successors in power, who adhered to the Scottish crown, might view it as more honourable than Thane.

It seems evident that this name, as used in the instances referred to, was not merely honorary, but descriptive of office. For no sooner was Skuli, above mentioned, made an Earl, than he raised forces in Caithness, and led them into the islands; Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 118. The same thing was done by Moddan, after he had been made an Earl by a Scottish king, called Karl by the Norwegian writers; Orkneyinga, S. p. 31. Whether such a king ever existed or not, is not material. These passages shew, that they understood the title as conferring at least territorial authority.

It is probable that Thane was at first synon. with Lat. Comes, as expressive of an honour arising from office. He, who enjoyed this title, seems to have presided in a county, and sometimes in a province.

Macduff, as Thane of Fife, must have had an extensive jurisdiction.

It may also be supposed, that he had a partial command in the army, at least of the forces in his own district. Spelman accordingly observes, that Thune, among the ancient Scots, is equivalent to Tosch; and Gael. Toshich signifies the General, or Leader of the van. This interpretation, as Dr. Macpherson observes, is confirmed by the name of a considerable family in the Highlands of Scotland,—the clan of M'Intosh, who say, that they derive their pedigree from the illustrious Macduff, once Thane, and afterwards Earl of Fife. Macduff, in consideration of his services to Malcolm Canmore, obtained a grant, which gave him and his heirs a right of leading the van of the royal army on every important occasion. The chieftain of the clan, that is descended from this great Earl, is stiled Mac in Toshich, that is to say, "the Son of the General." Crit. Diss. 13.

The Thane, according to Bocce, collected the king's revenues; Fol. 20, a. Fordun, speaking of an Abthane, says that, "under the king, he was the superior of those who were bound to give an annual account of their farms and rents due to the king. For," he adds, "the Abthane had to reckon the royal revenues, as discharging the office of a Staward or Chamberlain." Lib. iv. c. 43.

Thane, according to Mr. Pinkerton, is equivalent to Murmor; (Enquiry, ii. 193.) which seems to have been the highest title anciently given to a subject. To this, we imagine, the A.S. term succeeded. It is worthy of observation, that Thane and Mair, in their primary sense, conveyed the same idea; both signifying a servant.

As Thane succeeded to Mair in its composite form (Murmor), it is hence probable, that there has been some foundation for the assertion of Buchanan and other writers, that the Thane not only administered justice, but collected the King's revenues in a county or district. For Gael. maor is also expl. steward. V. Mair.

It has been supposed, that the Thane "did not transmit his honours to his posterity;" Notes, Sibb. Fife, p. 225. This is not quite consistent with what is said, in the page immediately preceding, that the extract from the Book of Paisley represents Macduff as asking the privileges referred to, for himself and his successors, Thanes of Fife. This extract evidently supposes indeed, that, in this family at least, the honour was hereditary. Petit a rege Malcolmo, primum, quod ipse et successores, Thani de Fyf, regem tempore sui coronationis in sede regia locaret. Ap. Sibb. Fife, p. 212.

From some ancient charters, it appears that thanages were hereditary. In one granted by David II., it is said; "Although we have infeoffed Walter de Lesly, Knight, in the Thanage of Abirkyrdore, in the sheriffdom of Banff, and in the Thanages of Kyncardyn; nevertheless, because perchance the heirs of the Thanes who anciently held the said Thanages in few farm, may be able to recover the said Thanages, to be held as their predecessors held them; we have granted, that if the said heirs, or any one of them, should recover the said Thanages, or any one of them, our said cousin and his heirs shall have the services of the said heirs or heir of the said Thanes or Thane, and the few farms anciently due from the foresaid Thanages." Robertson's Index of Charters, p. 87. No. 220. V. also p. 96. No. 315; p. 121, No. 72; p. 133. N. 13.

It may be added, that the title of Earl of Fife, which succeeded to that of Thane of Fife, and which seems to have included all the honours connected with the latter, was given by David Bruce to Sir Thomas Biset, and his heirs male by Isabella de Fyf; whom failing, the whole earldom was to return to the King and his heirs. Ibid. p. 74. No. 62.

Sometimes this honour was conferred only for life. Thus, the moiety of the Thanage of Fernartine, in the shire of Aberdeen, is given by David Bruce to the Earl of Sutherland, and his male heirs, "which had formerly been given to him only during the term of his life." Ibid. p. 81. No. 157.

The last Thane said to be mentioned is William Thane of Caldor; Cart. Morav. fol. 98. V. Hailes' Annals, i. 27. N.

It perhaps deserves notice, that all the thanedoms specified, in the Index of Charters, are to the north of Forth, and seem to have been situated within the limits of the Pictish kingdom, in the counties of Cromarty, Banff, Aberdeen, Kincardine, Forfar, Fife, and in the lower parts of Perthshire. Shall we view this a proof, that the designation never extended to that part of the country which was inhabited by the Celts?

Abthane has been considered as a title expressive of still higher dignity, and explained as equivalent to that of High Steward of Scotland; Buchanan. Hist. vii. 19. This title, it has been conjectured, has found a place in our history, merely in consequence of a mistake of Fordun, who, perhaps un-willing to admit that an Abbot was married, or misled by the contractions common in MSS., has substituted Abthane of Dull, for Abbat of Dunkeldyn. V. Pink. Enquiry, ii. 193. Notes to Wynt. ii. 467. But Mr. Pinkerton seems to go too far, when he says; "Who ever heard of an Abthane?" The modest remark made by Mr. Macpherson supplies an answer to this query. "The nature and antiquity of this office is unknown to me; but that there was such an office, and that it remained for ages after this time, is unquestionable. David II. granted to Donald Macnayre the lands of Easter Fossache with the Abthanrie of Dull in Perthshire. [Roll, D. 2. K, 22, in MS. Harl. 4609.] The Baillerie of Abthane of Dull, and the lands of the Abthane of Kinghorn, occur in other grants in the same MS. in Roll D. 2. F." V. Robertson's Index, p. 46. No. 46. 50.

Mr. Pinkerton seems inclined to think, that Abthane is q. Abbot-Thane, a title given to a Thane who was also an Abbot, and corresponding to Abbas Comes expl. by Du Cange, as denoting a laic count to whom an abbey was given in commendam. But, whatever be the origin of the particle prefixed, it seems to have signified an inferior dignity.

The title of Thane, as has been formerly observed, seems gradually to have sunk in its meaning. It may not perhaps be viewed as a sufficient proof of this, that, according to our old laws, the Cro of an Earl's son was equal to that of a Thane; Reg. Maj. Lib. iv. c. 36. s. 2. In the Statutes of Alexander II., however, the Thane is ranked, not only as inferior to a Baron, but apparently as on a level with a Knight.

"Touching all others quha remaines from the hoist, that is, of lands perteining to Bischops, Abbats, Earles, Barones, Knichts, Thanes, quha halds of the king: the king allanerlie sall haue the vn-law:—Bot the king sall haue onlie the ane halfe thereof: and the Thane, or Knicht, ane other half." Stat. Alex. II. c. 15. s. 2.

It affords further evidence of this, that, whereas, in the more early periods of our history, a Thanedom seems to have been as extensive as a sheriffdom, in the reign of Robert Bruce, and of his son David, we find several Thanedoms within one county; as the Thanedom of Aberbothnot, of Cowie, of Aberlachwich, of Morphie, of Duris, of Newdoskis, &c. in the sheriffdom of Kincardine. V. Robertson's Index of Charters, p. 17, No. 55. 56. p. 18, No. 59. p. 23, No. 4. p. 32, No. 14. p. 33, No. 37.

It appears, indeed, that some of the more ancient Thanedoms were as extensive as what are now called counties, including all the extent of jurisdiction originally given to Comites or Earls. This is evident, not only from the Thanedom of Fife, but from that ascribed to Macbeth. He, as has been seen, is called by Wyntown, Thayne of Crumbawchty, i. e. Cromarty. Now, this was a sheriffdom as early at least as the reign of Robert Bruce. Robertson's Index, p. 2, No. 50. In this reign also, the Thandome of Alith (Alyth) gave designation to a sheriffdom. Ibid. p. 4, No. 38.

In some insances, the term Thandome is used as synon. with Barony. Thus, the "baronies of Kincardin, and Aberluthnok, and Fettercardin, vic. Kincardin (Ibid. p. 63, No. 53.) are called "the thancdome of Kincardine, Abercouthnot, [in both places, for Aberluthnot] Fetherkern;" Ibid. p. 65, No. 15. Chart. David II. At first view, it might seem that the thanedome, as mentioned in the singular, included these three baronies. But we find the phrase, thanagiorum de Kyncardyn, Abirlouthnot, et Fethirkern, in vic. de Kincardyn; Ibid. p. 89, No. 242.

According to the A.S. laws, as Cowel has remarked after Spelman, some, distinguished by this title, were called Thani Majores and Thani Regis; while those who served under them, as they did under the King, were denominated Thani minores, or the lesser Thanes. The term, as used in the Laws of Alex. II., seems nearly to correspond to the latter.

In its original use, indeed, in other languages, it was quite indefinite. A.S. thegen, thegn, in its primary sense, denotes a servant. Thus theowne oththe frige signifies a slave as distinguished from a freeman; Leg. Inae, c. 11. Hence it was transferred to a military servant; and, from the dignity attached to an important trust in war, it seems at length to have been used to signify a grandee, one who enjoyed the privilege of being near the person of the King, or of representing him in the exercise of authority. The person, who was thus distinguished, was designed cyninges thegen; Thanus regius, satrapa, optimas, dynasta, baro. One of an inferior rank was called medmera thegen, mediocris vel inferior Thanus; "a Thane or nobleman of a lower degree, as that at this day of a Baronet;" Somner. Woruld-thegen signified a secular Thane; maesse-thegen, a spiritual Thane or priest.

Germ. degen has a similar variety of significations; servus; civis, et quilibet subditus; dominus, sed superiori domino (Principi vel Regi) obnoxius; miles, ab infima ad supremam conditionem; vir fortis; sensus a milite ad omnes strenuos traductus. Franc. thegn signified not only a common soldier, but a general. V. Wachter.

Dan. degn, diagn, now written tagn, was used nearly with the same latitude as the Germ. word Worm. Monum. Dan. p. 264—267. Schilter seems to give the original sense. For he observes, that Alem. thegan properly signifies a man; hence theganliche, viriliter, manfully. "By and by," he says, "it came to be used to denote the peculiar state of those subject to the power of others, as soldiers, and servants." He derives it from dinh-en, progredi, proficere, crescere, prodesse; vo. Dinhen, p. 230.

In the celebrated Death-Song of Regner Lodbrog, v. 23. this phrase occurs; Hrokkve ei degn fyrir degne; Man yields not to man; literally thane—to thane. Spelman, although he explains thegan vir fortis, mentions lesse thegen as used in the Laws of Canute, MS., in the sense of, mediocris homo. Ol. Wormius seems to think that the office of Decanus, (mentioned by Vegetius, Lib. 2. c. 13.) who presided over ten soldiers, might originate from this Gothic term.

It appears that Alem. thegan denoted a servant, prior to its use as signifying a grandee. For an epithet was prefixed to determine its signification. Hence edilthegan, literally, a noble servant. It is evident, indeed, that thegan was anciently synon. with skalk, knab, and knecht; all signifying a servant. Hence Lindenbrog, vo. Adelscalc, expl. this term as equivalent to Germ. edelknab; adding, that they were formerly denominated edildegin. Aedelknecht was used in a similar sense in Denmark. Monum. ubi sup. In Isl., thegn is equivalent to Lord. Thiaegn oc thrael, dominus et servus; Verel. To the same source Danneman, a Su.G. title of honour has been traced. V. Ihre in vo. But this is doubtful; as thaegn in that language corresponds to A.S. thegn.

The word is most probably from A.S. thegn-ian, then-ian, Germ. dien-en, Dan. thien-er, tien-er, Isl. thien-a, then-a to serve; although some invert the derivation. The common fountain seems to be Isl. thi-a humiliare, subigere, (whence Su.G. tiaen-a,) thiad-ur, servitute oppressus.

Lambard has justly observed, that the motto, Ic Dien, (retained in the arms of the Prince of Wales,) is of Saxon origin, for Ic thegn; or, according to the Belg. mode of writing, Ic dien; i. e. I serve.—Archaionom. Rer. et Verb. Expl.

Verstegan, on the same subject, observes, that d and th were "in our ancient language indifferently used;" Restitution, p. 259.

Comites, the term used by Tacitus to denote men of rank among the ancient Germans, had a similar origin, as conveying the idea of honourable service. For, as Dr. Robertson has remarked, "we learn from Tacitus, that the chief men among the Germans endeavoured to attach to their persons and interests certain adherents whom he calls Comites. These fought under their standards, and followed them in all their enterprises. The same custom continued among them in their new settlements, and those attached or devoted followers were called fideles, antrustiones, homines in trusta Domini, leudes." Hist. Cha. V. i. 260. Tacitus evidently uses a Lat. term, well understood by his countrymen. He most probably substitutes Comes for the Germ. word Graf, in A.S. gerefa, expl. comes, socius.

word Graf, in A.S. gerefa, expl. comes, socius.

Shaw views Gael. Tanaiste, "lord, dynast, governor," as equivalent to Thane. Dr. Macpherson indeed apprehends, that it is an ancient Gael. word, signifying "the second person or second thing." In proof of this he observes, that "before the conquest of Ireland by Henry the second, the title of Tanist became obsolete." Crit. Diss. 13. It appears, however, that it continued to be used so late as the year 1594. V. Ware's Antiq. p. 71. From the similarity of the terms, and from the sameness of signification, it is far more probable, that Tanist was formed from Thane, or was imported into Ireland by the Belgae. In confirmation of this, it may be observed, that there is no evidence of the existence of any Celtic root, from which Tanist can reasonably be deduced. I observe, that my ingenious friend, the Rev. Mr. Todd, has thrown out the same idea, in his Illustrations of Spenser, vol. viii. 308.

"To dare.—He will not dare (be able) to go far;" Gl. Trist. It seems rather to signify, to need, to have occasion, to find it necessary. A.S. thearfan carere, indigere, opus habere; MoesG. tharfan, thaurban, necesse habere, Alem. tharfan, tharben, Isl. thurfa, Su.G. tarfwa, id. E. dare is from A.S. dearran, dyrran. The sense may be; "He who gives heed to lies, has no occasion to proceed any further." It must be admitted, however, that verbs, signifying to dare, seem to be occasionally used, in ancient writing, as denoting power. V. Thureh, Thurst.

THEDE, s. 1. A nation, a people.

-Ye are thre in this thede thrivand oft in thrang;

War al your strenthis in ane, In his grippis and ye gane, He wald ourcum you ilk ane.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 3.

i. e. "Ye are three persons, belonging to this nation, often prosperous in the heat of battle."

Mr. Pinkerton conjectures that this word means business. But it is undoubtedly from A.S. theod gens, populus. According to Verstegan, theod or thiad signifies a strange nation. But I do not perceive the ground of this assertion; especially as he renders pl. thiada simply nations.

It seems used in this sense by R. Brunne.

Tille Adelwolf gaf he Westsex, hede of alle the Lordschip ouer all the londes bituex Douer & Tuede. P. 18.

Isl. Su.G. thiod, thiud, thyd, thiaud, thiot, populus; MoesG. thiuda, Alem. thiot, thiota, thiade, pl. thied; Germ. deut, Ir. tuath, id.

Hence Junius and Ihre derive the L.B. term diae. ta, diet, used by the Germ. to denote a public convention; although this may perhaps be from dies, the day fixed for meeting. Hence also Theotisc, gentiles; the name given by the Franks or Alemans to all the people of their nation; A.S. getheode vernacular language; Franc. bithiot-en, Belg. be-duyd-en, to interpret, Isl. thyd-en, to explain.

2. A region, a province. Sen hail our doughty elderis has bene endurand, Thrivandly in this thede, unchargit as thril.

If I for obeisance, or boist, to bondage me bynde,

I war wourthy to be Hingit heigh on ane tre, That ilk creature might se To waif with the wynd.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 10.

It might bear this sense in the passage quoted, sense 1. In the same poem i. 14. instead of,

All the wyis in welth he weildis in weid Sall halely be at your will, all that is his; it ought to be, according to Edit. 1508,

—weildis in theid—

i. e. "all the wealthy wights which he rules in the nation or province."

The same idea is thus expressed in the following

Of all the wyis, and welth, I weild in this steid. i. e. place; A.S. stede locus, folcstede, populi statio. Perhaps in welth, in the first passage, should be read, and welth, as here. Thus persons are distinguished from property.

With alle thing Y say, That pende to marchandis,

Thai ferden of this wise, Intil Yrlond thede.

Sir Tristrem, p. 85.

This, misquoted in Gl. as p. 95, is viewed as apparently a contraction for they gede." But it certainly signifies Ireland country. They gede would be an obvious tautology, being anticipated by ferden, fared.

A.S. theod signifies not only gens, but provincia. East-Seaxna theod, Orientalium Saxonum provincia; Myrcna theod, Merciorum provincia.

3. It seems to be used in the sense of species, kind.

Fiftene yere he gan hem fede, Sir Rohand the trewe; He taught him ich alede, Of ich maner of glewe; And everich playing thede, Old lawes and newe; On hunting oft he yede, To swiche alawe he drewe.

Playing thede appears to signify "kind," or " manner of play," i. e. game. V. Thew.

Sibb. first observes, that "it seems to be an abbreviation of Sax. theire-dom, servitium, from the verb theow-ian, mancipare, in servitium redigere." Afterwards he mentions themys, as the pl. of theow, servus. Theowum is indeed the dat. pl. of this s. But the etymon of Lye and others is preferable, from A.S. team, offspring. Proinde, apud forenses, Sequela, i. e. familia nativorum bondorum et Villanorum manerio pertinentium: necnon jus habendi istam sequelam, ubicunque inventi fuerunt in Anglia. For the term has been borrowed from the E. law; as it has been adopted, into this, from the A.S. Team is the word used in a charter of Edw. the Confessor, and in the Sax. Chronicle; Toll and team. V. 2. The term is often used metaph. One is said to be quite out of thetes, when one's conduct or language is quite disorderly, like that of a horse that has broke loose from its harness, S.

" Hence the ordinary expression in Scotland, Ye are out of theet, i. e. ye are extravagant or in the wrong;" Rudd.

It appears from Sibb. that in some places, perhaps S.A., this is corr. pron. Feets.

One might fancy that there were some affinity with A.S. theowet, servitude; as cords are the badges of bondage, and Isl. thiad-ur denotes one oppressed with servitude. But it is undoubtedly from another Isl. term, thatt-r, a thread, cord, or small rope. The term is also used for a narration, q. the thread or connexion of a discourse. This has some analogy to the metaph, sense mentioned above. Pars historiae, narratio; proprie filum vel funis tenuior, ex quo funis crassior conficitur; Gl. Kristnis.

THEW, s. Custom, manner, quality. Wilyhame Wyschard of Saynct Andrewys Byschape, wertus, and of gud thewys, Wys, honest, and awenand, Til God and men in all plesand Wyntown, vii. 10. 292. Deyd.-O Troiane prynce, I lawly the beseik, Be thyne awne vertuis, and thy thewis meik. Doug. Virgil, 339. 26.

A.S. theaw, mos, modus. Hence (says Lye) A. Bor. thew'd, docilis; towardly, Grose. Seren. gives Sw. thooielse in the sense of quality, which seems to acknowledge the same origin. A.S. theaw mos, and theow servus, can scarcely be viewed as radically different; especially as the word, signifying a servant, is sometimes written theaw. Both, I suspect, must be traced to Isl. thia, thiaa, humiliare, duriter tractare, subigere: as a servant is one brought into a state of subjection; and what are manners, but the habits learned in consequence of instruction, restraint, and chastisement? It is highly probable, indeed, that the term thede, as primarily signifying a nation, A.S. theod, is from the same source, q. a body of men brought into a state of subjection. It may be viewed as a proof of this, that the v. theodan, formed from theod, signifies to serve. Ic him geornlicor theodde; Ego illis impensius servire curavi; Bed. 516. 9. and Theoden denotes a king, q. one who subjects others, or causes them to serve. Isl. thiod, populus; God thiod, bonus populus, i. e. cives et fideles subditi. Thiad-ur, servitute oppressus, thyda mansuetudo, obsequium; Verel.

THEWIT, part. pa. Disciplined, regulated. Weill thewit, having a proper deportment.

Thair was na wicht that gat a sicht eschewit, War he never sa constant, or weill thewit, Na he was woundit, and him hir seruant grantis. Palice of Honour, i. 38.

The term seems to denote that self-command which a knight, or one regularly bred to arms, ought to have over himself. One of the senses of A.S. theaw is, institutum. V. the s.

THEWLES, THIEVELESS, adj. 1. Unprofitable. Lat vs in ryot leif, in sport and gam, In Venus court, sen born thareto I am, My tyme wel sall I spend: weuys thou not so? Bot all your solace sall returne in gram, Sic thewles lustis in bittir pane and wo. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96. 24.

Thowles seems formerly to have been used nearly in the sense of mod. dissipated, or profligate.

He wes thowles, and had in wown By hys wyf oft-syis to ly Othir syndry women by.

Wyntown, viii. 24. 166.

Welle waxyn wp that tyme he wes, And thowles than, for his yowthhed To that nature wald hym lede: Justynge, dawnsyng, and playnge He luwyd welle, for he wes yhyng.

Ibid. 38. 291.

From A.S. theow a servant, or theow-ian, to serve, and the privative particle les, less; q. what does no service.

2. Inactive, remiss, S. pron. thowless.

How worthless is a poor and haughty drone,
Wha thowless stands a lazy looker-on!

Ramsay's Works, i. 55.
Sibb. justly gives thieveless as synon. A thieveless excuse, one that is not satisfactory, q. does not serve the purpose. He came on a thieveless errand, S.; "He pretended to have business about which he was not in earnest."

3. "Cold, forbidding;" S. Gl. Sibb.
It chanc'd his new-come necbor took his ee,
And een a vex'd and angry heart had he!
Wi' thieveless sneer to see his modish mien,
He down the water gies him this guideen.

Burns, iii. 54.

"Thieveless, cold, dry, spited;" Gl. Shirr.
To look thieveless to one, to give one a cold reception, S.O.

4. Hence transferred to a cold, bleak day. It's a thiexeless morning, is a phrase used in this sense by old people, Renfrews.

5. Insipid, as applied to mind; destitute of taste,

A saul with sic a thowless flame, Is sure a silly sot ane.

Ramsay's Works, i. 118.

6. Feeble.

For thowless age, wi' wrinklet brow,—
Mae need the aid I gae to you,
When strang an' young.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 47.

It is used indeed to denote frigidity or insipidity of manner, but evidently as including the primary idea; being applied to one who appears unfit for action, S.

THEWTILL, THEWITTEL, s. A large knife, or one that may serve as a dagger.

"So we perceive that England never forgot their old quarrels upon small or no regard, when they saw an apparent advantage to have been masters; and, by the contrary, they were fain to thigg and cry for peace and good-will of Scottish-men, when there was unity and concord amongst the nobles living under subjection and obedience of a manly Prince." Pitscottie, p. 56.

To go about, receiving supply, not in the way of common mendicants, but rather as giving others an opportunity of manifesting their liberality, S.

"It is used properly for a more civil way of seeking supply, usual enough in the Highlands and North of Scotland, where new married persons, who have no great stock, or others low in their fortune, bring carts and horses with them to the houses of their relations, and receive from them corn, meal, wool, or what else they can get;" Rudd.

"Better a thisging mother than a riding father,"
S. Prov. Kelly, p. 66. He expl. it by another;
Better the mother with the poke, than the father with the sack; observing that both these signify, that the mother, though in a low condition, will be more kindly to, and more careful of, or phans, than the father can be, though in a better."

He that borrows and bigs, Makes feasts and thigs, Drinks and is not dry; These three are not thrifty.

Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 13.

The father buys, the son biggs,

The grandchild sells, and his son thiggs.

"A proverb much used in Lowthian, where estates stay not long in one family; but hardly heard of in the rest of the nation." Kelly, p. 312.

Had Kelly lived a little later, he would have seen no reason for the restriction of the proverb to Lothian.

It seems uncertain, whether this, or the preceding, be the primary sense. Although the Alem. v. signifies to ask, A.S. thicg-an, thicg-ean, thig-ian, is rendered accipere, sumere, sc. cibum; having properly a relation to food. Isl. thygg-ia very nearly approaches the common sense of the term in S. Gratis accipere, dono auferre; from thaa, id. Hence G. Andr. derives thack-a, q. thagk-a, to thank: and the derivation is certainly natural; for that only, which is received as a gift, can properly be matter of thankfulness.

3. To beg, to act the part of a common mendicant, S.

It is probably in this sense that the term is used by Henrysone.

For Goddis aw, how dar thow tak on hand, And thow in berne and byre so bene and big, To put him fra his tak, and gar him thig? Bannatyne Poems, p. 120.

This is the most common sense of the Su.G. v. tigg-a, petere, proprie usurpatur de mendicantium precibus; Ihre. V. the s.

4. To borrow; used improperly. Some other chiel may daftly sing,-And blaw ye up with windy fancies, That he has thigit frae romances.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 144.

THIGGAR, s. A beggar, a common mendicant. "The King hes statute—that na Thiggaris be tholit to beg, nouther to burgh nor to landwart, betuix xiiii and LXX yeiris, bot thay be sene be the counsall of the townis or of the land, that thay may not win thair leuing vther wayis. And thay that sal be tholit to beg, sall have a certane takin on thame, to landwart of the Schiref, and in the burrowis thay sall have takin of the Alderman or of the Baillies." Acts Ja. THIMBER, adj. Given as not understood by

-There I spy'd a wee wee man, And he was the least that ere I saw. His legs were scarce a shathmout's length, And thick and thimber was his thighs; Between his brows there was a span, And between his shoulders there was three. Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 139.

It seems to signify gross, heavy, cumbrous, or perhaps swollen; Isl. thungber, gravis, portatu molestus, from thungi, onus, and ber-a, ferre, portare; q. what is difficult to carry. Thamb-a, inflare; thember upp, turgescit, inflatur. THINARÉ, s.

A.S. thanon furth, deinceps, deinde, de caetero. THING, s. 1. Affairs of state.

And gyff it hapnyt Robert the King To pass to God, quhill that war ying,

The gud Erle off Murreff, Thomas. And the Lord alsua off Dowglas, Suld haff thaim into gouernyng. Quhill thai had wyt to ster thair thing, And than the Lordschip suld thai ta.

Barboar, xx. 142. MS. Not ring, or reigne, as in Edit. Pink. and others. Ster thar thing is, manage their affairs of state. 2. It seems to signify a meeting, or convention, concerning public affairs.

Chanslar, schaw furth quhat ye desyr off me. The Chanslar said, The most causs of this thing, To procur peess I am send fra our King, With the gret seill, and woice off hys parliament, Quhat I bynd her oure barnage sall consent. Wallace, vi. 904. MS.

Not understanding thing in this sense, Editors. have reckoned it necessary to substitute another word for causs, i. e. cause; as in Edit. 1648;

The chancellar said, The most part of this thing, To procure peace, I am sent from the King.

Isl. thing, Su.G. ting, a meeting of the citizens called for consultation concerning public affairs; also used for the forum, the place of meeting or judgment. Hence Thingvoll-r, the plain of convention, (which has been viewed as the origin of the name of Dingwall in the county of Ross); Thingstod, the place of meeting; Althing, an universal convention.

There is a parish of this name in Shetland, the signification of which confirms the etymon given of "Tingwall-is said to derive its name from a small island, in a water called the Loch of Tingwall, and joined to the nearest shore by the remains of a stone wall. In this island, the courts of law are said to have been anciently held, and to this day it is called the Law-Taing." Stat. Acc. xxi. 274. It is more properly written Law-ting; Neill's Tour, p. 89.

The etymon given of Tingwall, Stat. Acc. ubi sup.

rather opposes the preceding account. For it is said, that ' Taing, in the language of that country, signifies a point of land stretching out into the water.'

In the Orkney Islands, the Law-ting, or the "Supreme Court, in which business of the utmost importance was transacted," continued till the time of the Commonwealth. V. Barry's Orkney, p. 217.

It is thought that Ting, as denoting a convention, is derived from Su.G. ting-a to speak, Alem. dingan; because they anciently met in their public assemblies for conference, and in this manner settled their business. This etymon is supported by analogy. MoesG. mathls signifies forum, from mathlian, to speak. In the Laws of the Lombards, the place of public meeting is called the Mall, from Goth. mal, discourse. Among the ancient Germ. Sprache also denoted such a convention; from sprach-en, to converse; as Fr. Parlement is from parl-er, to speak. V. Ting, Ihre.

To THINK SHAME, to feel abashed, to have a sense of shame, S. This idiom seems pretty ancient.

Bot ane thing have I hecht sickerly, That nane sal cum about hir, Sir, bot I. The virgine is bot yong, and think[i]'s shame; And is full laith to cum in ane ill name.

Priests of Poblis, S. P. Repr. i. 32. She perceived that I thought shame; She asked not what was my name.

Isl. theyr illi, thacr illae. V. Runolf. Ion. Isl. Vocab. The learned Hickes has demonstrated, that these might be rendered not less properly by Lat. hi. E. these.

Sibb. observes, that in some cases there seems no correspondent English word; as, 'Thir shillings (which I hold concealed in my hand) are better than these upon the table." A Scotsman would say, "than thai." For thir and thai are generally opposed, like these and those; although they seem properly to have both the same meaning.

To THIRL, THYRL, v. a. 1. To perforate, to bore, to drill, S.

Besides your targe, in battle keen
But little danger tholes,
While mine wi' mony a thudd is clowr'd,
An' thirl'd sair wi' holes.

To THIRL, THIRLE, v. n. To pass with a tingling sensation, S. dirle, and dinle, synon.

And then he speaks with sic a taking art, His words they thirle like music thro' my heart. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 79.

Thro' ilka limb and lith the terror thirl'd, At every time the dowie monster skirl'd.

Ross's Helenore, p. 24.

To THIRL, v. a. To furl.

"Tak in your top salis, and thirl them." Compl.

S. p. 64.

This at first view might seem a corr. of the E. word. But it is rather allied to Teut. drill-en, trillen, gyrare, rotare, volvere, conglomerare.

To THIRL, THIRLL, v. a. 1. To enslave, to

"Ye sal nocht alanerly be iniurit be cuil vordis, bot als ye sal be violently strykkyn in your bodeis, quharfor ye sal lyf in mair thirlage nor brutal bestis, quhilkis ar thirlit of nature." Compl. S. p. 144.

Thus four times thirld and overharld, You're the great refuse of all the warld.

Rob. HI's Answ. to Henry IV. Watson's Coll. ii. 6.
From A.S. Isl. thracl, Su.G. tracl, a bondservant.
According to the ingenious Editor of Spec. Eng.
Poetry, i. 20. the name of a slave is from thirl-ian to bore. He accordingly quotes that passage concerning a servant, Exod. xxi. 6. from the A.S. version; "He shall also bring him to the door," or "to the door-post," and thirlie his eare mid anum acle, "and bore his ear through with an awl:"
adding that this custom was "retained by our forefathers, and executed on their slaves at the church door."

If this custom can be authenticated, it must greatly confirm the etymon given. Yet one difficulty would still remain; that, although Isl. thrael, thraela, Dan. trael, and Su.G. traell, signify a bondservant, there is no similar term in these languages, signifying to bore, except Su.G. drill-a.

Ihre, with less probability, derives Su.G. trael, a bondservant, from A.S. thre-an, to correct, to chasten; observing, that the term properly denotes a slave that is wont to be beaten, or that wretched race of men who seem born for stripes. Su.G. annolag also signified a slave; with this difference, however, according to the same learned writer, that it strictly denoted one who had been made captive in war, or otherwise subjected, whereas trael was the designation of one born a slave.

2. To bind or subject to; as when a person lays himself, or is laid, under a necessity of acting in any particular way, or when a thing is bound by some fixed law. S. Ill no thirl myself, or be thirled, to ony tradesman; i. e. I will not

" Na Mailman, or Fermour, may thirle his Lord of his frie tenement." Baron Courts, c. 48.

3. To bind, by the terms of a lease, or otherwise, to grind at a certain mill, S.

Thirlage is constituted by writing, either directly or indirectly. It may be constituted directly, first, by the proprietor thirling his tenants to his own mill by an act or regulation of his own court." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. Tit. 9. s. 21.

THIRL, s. The term used to denote those lands, the tenants of which are bound to bring all their grain to a certain mill, S.

THIRLAGE, s. 1. Thraldom, in a general sense. This mysfortoun is myne of auld thirllage, As therto detbund in my wrechit age.

Doug. Virgil, 366. 28.

2. Servitude to a particular mill, S.

"That servitude by which lands are astricted or thirled to a particular mill, to which the possessors must carry the grain of the growth of the astricted lands to be grinded, for the payment of such duties as are either expressed or implied in the constitution of the right." Erskine, ubi sup. s. 18. Thirdome, s. Thraldom.

Na he, that ay hass levyt fre, May nocht knaw weill the propyrté, The angyr, na the wrechyt dome, Barbour, i. 236. MS. Threldome, ibid. v. 265. THO, adv. Then, at that time.

Ane wattry cloud blak and dirk but dout, Gan ouer thare hedis tho appere ful richt. Doug. Virgil, 127. 35.

This word occurs very frequently in the same sense in Chaucer and Gower. It is also used by Langland, in a passage which contains such genuine strokes of poetry, that I cannot resist the inclination of transcribing it.

Consummatum est, quod Christe, and coinseth for to swonne,

Pitiously and pale as a prisoner doth that dieth; The Lord of life & of light tho laied his eies togither;

The day for dread withdrew, & darck became the sunne;

THOF, conj. Although, Loth.

Thof to the weet my ripen'd aits had fawn, Or shake-winds owr my rigs wi' pith had blawn, To this I cou'd hae said, "I carena by." Fergusson's Poems, ii. 6. V. ALLTHOCHT.

THOILL, Toll, s. One of the ancient privileges of barons, usually mentioned in charters.

"Barons hauand liberties, with sock, sak, theme, thoill, infang-theif, and out-fang-theif, may doe justice in their court, vpon ane man, taken within their. fredome, saised with manifest thift." Quon. Attach. c. 100, s. 1. Toll and thame, Reg. Maj. B. i. c. 4.

According to Skene, it is an immunity from payment of custom in buying.

"He quha is infeft with Toll, is custome free, and payis na custome. All Earles, Barrones, Knichts, vassalles, life-renters, Free-halders, and al. quha hes landes nomine eleemosynae, suld be quite and free fra payment of Toll and custome within burgh; in bying meate and claith, and vther necessair things to their awin proper vse. Bot gif ony of them be commoun merchandes, they suld paye tholl and custome; albeit they have als great libertie as Barronnes." De Verb. Sign. vo. Toll.

In this sense it was also used in E. V. Cowel, vo. Toll. But Spelman defines it to be "the liberty of buying or selling on one's own lands." It. occurs indeed in both senses in the A.S. laws; although most frequently in the latter. V. Lye, vo. Toll. L.B. tholonium, telonium.

To THOLE, THOILL, v. a. 1. To bear, to undergo, to suffer, S. A. Bor. Chauc.

A.S. thol-ian, MoesG. thul-an, Alem. thol-en, Isl. thol-a, Su.G. tol-1, Germ. Belg. duld-en, pati, ferre.

Ihre thinks that the ancient Latins had used tol-o or tul-o in the same sense. This he infers from the use of tuli, the pret. of fer-o, which is employed to express the bearing of hardships; and also from to-ler-o, which he considers as derived from tol-o, in the same manner as gener-o from the obsolete gen-o. He also refers to Gr. Tal-aw suffero, perpetior, &c. Tal-as miser.

2. To bear with, not to oppose.

"Quha brekis this command?—Thai that tholis nocht thair father and mother, suppose thai do thame iniuris and be cummersum." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 46, b.

3. To bear patiently, to endure, S.

"For if I thoill him, I will be accusit for all thame that he corruptis and infectis in Heresic." Memorand. Archbishop of St. Androis, Knox's Hist. p. 103.

Su.G. tol-a, to tolerate, Seren.

6. To exempt from military execution, on certain terms.

The King gert men of gret noblay Ryd in till Ingland for to prey;

That broucht owt gret plenté of fe:
And sum contreis tholyt he,
For wittaill, that in gret foysoun
He gert bring smertly to the toun.

Barbour, xvii. 228. MS.
And with some countries trewes tooke he.
Edit. 1620.

7. To permit, to allow, S.

Yeit glaid wes he that he had chapyt swa,
Bot for his men gret murnyng can he ma;
Flayt by him self to the Makar off buffe,
Quhy he sufferyt he suld sic paynys pruff.
He wyst nocht weill giff it wes Goddis will,
Rycht or wrang his fortoun to fulfill:
Hade he plesd God, he trowit it mycht nocht be,
He suld him thoill in sic perplexité.

Wallace, v. 234. MS.

Thoill is evidently used as synon. with suffer, v.
230., as denoting permission. V. also viii. 43.

Faint-hearted wights, wha dully stood afar,

Tholling your reason great attempts to mar.—

Ramsay's Poems, i. 325.

8. To wait; to expect.

This seems to be the sense in the following passage

"We suld nocht prescriue to God any special tyme to heir our prayer, bot paciently commit all to God baith the maner of our helping and the tyme, according as the Prophet commandis in the Psalme, sayand: Expecta Dominum, viriliter age, comfortetur cor tuum, et sustine Dominum. Wait apon our Lord, do all thi deidis stoutly, lat thi hart be of gud comfort, and thole our Lord to wyrk all thingis to his pleisure." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 46, b.

Thole a wee, wait a little; A. Bor. Thole a while; corresponding to Su.G. tola tiden, tempus expectare. The idea plainly is; "Exercise patience for a short time." Su.G. gifwa sig tol, to be patient of delay.

9. To thole the law, to be subjected to a legal trial.

"It is—forbidden, that ony man, that is officiar of ony countrie, or ony man, that indictis ane wher for ony actioun, be on hys assyse, that sall thole the law, under the pane of ten pund to the king." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 56. Edit. 1566.

THOLMUDE, THOILMUDE, adj. Patient. In vane that name thou beris, I dare say, Gif thou sa thoilmude sufferis lede away Sa grete ane price but derene or batell.

Doug. Virgil, 140. 35. Scot. Bor. say tholemoody, i. e. patient," Rudd. A.S. thole-mod, tholmod, tholmoda, patiens animi.

THONE, pron. demonstr. Yonder, Loth. yon, S. the accus. of the article A.S.

MoesG. thana, id. or from Su.G. then, anciently thoen, ille, iste.

THOR, s. "Durance, confinement. Swed. thor, carcer;" Gl. Sibb.

THORROWS, s. pl.
Gret sorrows and thorrows
Ill companie procuris:

Forese than, with me than, This trouble that induris.

Burel, Watson's Coll. ii. 49.

Apparently troubles, q. throws, from A.S. threow-ian, pati; the word being lengthened for the sake of the measure.

To THORTER, v. a. To oppose, to thwart, S. -"Their willingness to suppresse the growth of these enormities hath been ever thortered and impeded by too many advocations of these matters granted by you, whereby they were discharged of all further proceeding." Letter Ja. VI. Calderwood, p. 581. V. Thorrour, adj.

THORTOUR, s. Opposition, resistance, S.

"The Romanis hes experience about ingyne of man in cheualry. Sa agill of thair bodyis, that thay may dant all thortour and difficill gatis. Swift of rynk, and reddy to euery kynd of jeopardé." Bellend. Cron. Fol. 27, a.

"The third thorture and debate he had was with the Provest, bailyes and Councell of the town about their ministery." Mr. James Mellvill's MS. Mem.

p. 85.

THORTER-ILL, THWARTER-ILL, s. A kind of palsy to which sheep are subject, Tweedd. "3d, Palsy, called trembling or thorter ill, to which those fed on certain lands are peculiarly subject." P. Linton, Tweedd. Statist. Acc. i. 138.

"Trembling, Thwarter, or Leaping ill. These three appellations, of which the last is most common in Annandale, and the first in Selkirkshire and to the eastward, are now used as synonimous."

"The animal-continues leaping frequently during the day, and the neck is frequently stiff, and turned to one side." Prize Essays Highl. Soc. S. iii. 385. 390.

The disease seems to receive its name from this distortion of the neck.

THORTOUR, THUORTOUR, adj. Cross, transverse, laid across.

A cleuch thar was, quharoff a strenth thai maid With thuortour treis, bauldly than abaid.

Wallace, iv. 540. MS. Su.G. twert oefwer, transverse; from twert adv. twaer transverse, and oefwer, over, softened into our, S. Dan. twertover, transversely. A.S. thweor, thwyr, thwur, Belg. dwars, dwers, Isl. twer, trans-versus, oppositus, E. thwart.

To THOW, v. a. To address in the singular number, as a token of contempt.

This v. is used by Shakspeare in the same sense. I take notice of it, therefore, merely to observe that it had been early used in S.

Wallace ansucr'd, said, "Thow art in the wrang."

"Quham thowis thow, Scot? in faith thow serwis a blaw."

Till him he ran, and out a suerd can draw. Wallace, i. 398. MS.

Dowis, Ed. Perth; evidently an error of the transcriber for thowis. The sense is preserved in Ed. 1648. Whom thoust thou, Scot?-

I need scarcely add that it corresponds to Fr. tutoy-er.

THOUGHT, THOUGHTY, s. 1. In a thought, in a moment, as respecting time, S.

2. At a little distance, in respect of place, S.B. Upon his bow he lean'd his milk white hand, A bonny boy a thoughty aff did stand. Ross's Helenore, p. 68.

To THOUT, v. n. To sob, S.B. Gi. Shirr. The only terms that seem to have any affinity are A.S. theot-an, Isl. theyt-a, Su.G. tiut-a, ululare. But these are more nearly allied to Toot, v.

THOUT, s. A sob, S.B. -Judge gin her heart was sair;

Out at her mou' it just was like to bout Intill her lap, at ilka ither thout.

Ross's Helenore, p. 23.

To THOW, v. n. 1. To thaw, S.

2. Used actively; to remove the rigour produced by cold, S.

I-beekt him brawly at my ingle, Dighted his face, his handles thow'd.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 145.

Thow, Thowe, s. Thaw, S.

When thowes dissolve the snawy hoord, Then Water-kelpies haunt the foord, focate one, Ang. THOWEL, s. The nitch or hollow in which the oar of a boat acts, Loth. perhaps allied to Thafts,

q. v.
THOWLESS, adj. Inactive. V. Thewles.
Inactivity. Thowlesnes, Thowlysnes, s. Inactivity, or evil habits; literally, unfitness for service. Hys dochteris he kend to wewe and spyn, As pure wemen thare met to wyn,

That thai suld noucht for ydilnes Fall in-til iwyl thowlysnes.

Wyntown, vi. 3. 74.

This is printed thowtesnes, Barbour, i. 333. expl. thoughtlessness, Gl. But the word in MS. is thowlesnes.

-Sone to Paryss can he ga, And levyt thar full sympylly. The quhethir he glaid was and joly; And til swylk thowlesnes he yeid, As the courss askis off yowtheid!

V. THEWLES. THOWRROURIS, s. pl. Wallace, iii. 103, most probably, by mistake of some copyist, for skorrowris. The worthi Scottis maid than no soiornyng, -Send twa thowrrouris to wesy weyll the playne.

THRA, THRO, adj. 1. Eager, earnest.

Rohand was ful thra, Of Tristrem for to frain.

Sir Tristrem, p. 37. st. 56.

Hys frendis movyd the Kyng of Frawns For this Willame to mak instawns And thra prayere to the Pape, This Willame that he wald mak Byschape Of Saynct Andrewis se wacand.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 235.

i. e. eager to ask of him. Lo here the boundis, lo here Hesperia, Quhilk thou to seik in werefare was sa thra. Doug. Virgil, 422. 10.

2. Brave, courageous; like E. keen. Wallace with him had fourty archarys thra, The layff was speris, full nobill in a neid, On thair enemys thai bykkyr with gud speid. Wallace, ix. 844. MS.

Thus the batayl it bigan, Witeth wele it was so. Bituene the Douk Morgan, And Rouland that was thro.

Sir Tristrem, p. 11. st. 4.

3. Obstinate, pertinacious. Bot thar mycht na consaill awaile. He wald algat hav bataile. And guhen that saw he wes sa thra To fycht, thai said, "Ye ma well ga To fycht with yone gret cumpany. Bot we acquyt ws wtrely That nane of ws will stand to fycht."

Barbour, xviii. 71. MS.

This may also be the sense of the term in the following passage.

Like as twa bustuous bullis by and by, Quhen thay assembill in austerne batall thra, With front to front and horn for horne attanis Ruschand togiddir with crones and ferefull granis.

Doug. Virgil, 437. 47.

4. Opposite, reluctant, averse.

Thay pingil thraly quha mycht formest be, Wyth doure myndis, vnto the wallis hye. Doug. Virgil, 431. 34.

Thraw seems used in the same sense, if it be not the adj.

Bot lo ane sworl of fyre blesis vp thraw: Lemand towart the lift the flamb he saw. Ibid. 435. 38.

THRAFTLY, adv. In a chiding or surly man-

"The ambassadours past out of Scotland, in this manner as I have shewn you, to London to King Hary, where they were but thraftly received of the King and council of England at that time." Pitscottie, p. 171.

A.S. thraf-ian increpare, thrafung increpatio, a chiding, reproving, or blaming;" Somner.

The A.S. v. seems to have the same origin with THRAIF, THRAVE, THREAVE, s. 1. Twentyfour sheaves of corn, including two stooks or shocks, S. A. Bor. Glouc.

"A farmer who rented 60, 80, or 100 acres. was sometimes under the necessity of buying meal for his family in the summer season: Nor will this appear wonderful, when it is considered that 15 bolls of bear have of late years been produced on the same field, where 50 thrave [i. e. thraves] (1200 sheaves) formerly grew, which the owner said ' he would give for 50 bear bannocks (barley cakes)." P. Caputh, Perth. Statist. Acc. ix. 449, N.

"The produce of this farm, which in the year 1780 was only 900 threaves, amounted to 2700 threaves in the year 1790." P. Turreff, Aberd. Sta-tist. Acc. xvii. 406.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 463.

Su.G. trafwe, a heap of any kind, acervus segetum, lignorum aliarumque rerum. In one part of Sw. it has precisely the sense of our thrave. Smolando-Goth. en trafwe saad, strues segetum viginti quatuor fascibus constans; Seren. Isl. trafwe, a heap. of corn cut down. C.B. trefa, drefa, id. L.B. trava, trava bladi, acervus frumenti. Ihre has remarked on this word, that, among the ancient Goths straba was used to denote that heap of spoils, or trophy, which was erected in honour of a deceased warrior.

To THRAIP, v. n. Apparently, to thrive, to prosper.

The smith swoir be rude and raip, Intill a gallowis mot I gaip, Gif I ten dayis wan pennies thré,

For with that craft I can nocht thraip.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 33. Isl. thrif-ast, Su.G. trifw-a, id. F and P are often interchanged in all the Goth. dialects.

To THRAM, v. n. To thrive, Aberd. Moray, GL Shirr.

Sae, while we honest means pursue, Well mat thou thrum, for sin thou's been so free,

I for a whyllie yet sal lat thee be.

Ross's Helenore, p. 21.

We yet may chance to thram: Nor ferly, tho' sparely The blessings now are gi'en.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 360.

Isl. thro-ast invalescere, incrementum capere; throan, throtte, incrementum ac vires viriles. THRANG, pret. and part. pa. Pressed. V. Turing.

To THRANG, v. a. To throng, S.

Sw. traang-a to crowd, A.S. thring-en to press, from MoesG. threih-an, id.

To THRANG, v. n. To crowd towards a place; as, They are thrangin to the kirk; they are going to church in crowds, S.

MoesG. thrang-an significs currere. But this seems merely the same with E. throng, v. n.

THRANG, adj. 1. Crowded, S. Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 109.

Belg. gedrang, id. Isl. thraung-ur, Su.G. traang, arctus, angustus.

2. Intimate, familiar, S. thick, grit, synon. Fu' tyr'd he seem'd, yet back wi' me wou'd gang, Syne hame we scour'd fu' cheery and fu' thrang: Wi' kindly heart he aft your welfare speer'd. Morison's Poems, p. 136.

"is a very common Scotticism." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 109. V. GILL-WHEEP.

THRANG, s. 1. A throng, a crowd, S.

2. Constant employment, S.

"Ye canna get leave to thrive for thrang;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 81.

3. Straits, a state of hardship or oppression. The nobill men, that ar off Scottis kind, Thar petous dede ye kepe in to your mynd, And ws rawenge, quhen we ar set in thrang. Wallace, vii. 237. MS.

Editors, not understanding the sense, have changed the word to throng. It is A.S. thrang turba, or Ist. thracng, angusta, used metaph. Su.G. traungmual, necessitas.

To THRAPPLE, v. a. To throttle or strangle,

S. Thropple, A. Bor. V. THROPILL.
THRASH, s. A rush. V. THRUSH.
To THRATCH, v. n. To gasp convulsively, as one does in the agonies of death, S.B.; to draucht, synon.

Isl. threyte certo, fatigo, laboro; thraute, labor; Su.G. trot fatigatus, trott-a fatigare.

THRATCH, s. The oppressed and violent respiration of one in the last agonies, S.B.

Dead-trach occurs in this sense, evidently an errat. for dead-thratch.

"That same deceitfull illusion-having, by slow degrees, mounted to so monstrous an height, is now, agayne, nearc the dead-trach, to the Devil's great displeasure." Forbes's Eubulus, p. 107.

Peter, who was ever maist sudden, sayis: "Thou art thrumbled and thrusted be the multitude, and yet thou species quha hes twitched thee." Bruce's Serm. Sacr. J. 5. a.

It is strange that Rudd. and Sibb. should both view this as perhaps originally the same with Thirl. It does not, as the latter asserts, even bear the same meaning. For it nowise suggests the idea of drilling, or hering.

It might seem allied to A.S. thrym multitudo. But I would rather deduce it from Teut. drommel, res simul compactae et densae; from dromm-en premere. It may, however, have the same origin with the following v.

To THRIMLE, v. n. To wrestle, to fumble, S.B. Gl. Shirr.

It is not easy to determine the particular species of thistle which should be viewed as the Scottish emblem. Most probably it is the Spear thistle, carduus lanceolatus Linn., which is a wide-spreading elegant plant, very common in Scotland, and which accords well with Buchanan's celebrated inscription, Nemo me impune lacesset.—The Milk thistle, or Our Lady's thistle, Carduus Marianus, has been preferred by some. It grows on the banks of Stirling Castle, and about Fort William; but Lightfoot, in his Flora, denies that it is indigenous to Scotland, never being found but in the neighbourhood of cultivation. Besides, the finely variegated leaves of the Milk thistle would not probably have escaped the praises of Dunbar and others.

This seems to be the Scots thistle referred to by Dr. Garnet who, when describing the castle of Dumbarton says; "The true Scotch thistle, a rare plant, having its light green leaves variegated with white, grows in considerable quantity about the bottom of the rock, and sparingly even on the very top." Tour through the Highlands, &c. vol. i. p. 14. Others give the preference to the lofty Cotton thistle, onspordon acanthium, which grows on calcareous soils, by our sea-shores, to the height of 10 or 12 feet. But it is destitute of the formidable spines of the two former.

This name, with the r, does not seem to occur in any other dialect. It may, however, be supposed that this was its ancient form among the Goths, as the linnet, which Lat. is called carduelis from carduus, because it feeds among thistles, is in Isl. denominated throstr. V. G. Andr.

THRISSLY, adj. Testy, crabbed, S.B.

This at first view might seem a metaph, term formed from thrissill, a thistle, to which our national motto, referred to above, is certainly applicable. But perhaps it is rather allied to Germ. verdriesslich, fretful, uncivil, rude, &c. or A.S. thristlee, bold, daring.

Either from A.S. throc a table, because of its flat form; or Dan. trykk-er to print, whence tryk-papier, printing paper. A throuche might originally signify as much paper as was laid in the press at once, to receive the impression; Belg. drucke impressio, character.

Barbour, iv. 223. MS.

In Edit. 1620, the word traist is used. Through may be from the same origin with Su.G. trogen, trygg, faithful, tro to believe.

It may be questioned, however, whether the phrase, gaiff throuch, be not equivalent to gave place; from A.S. thurk through, a prep. respecting place.

THROUCH, (gutt.) prep. Through, S. Throuch and throuch, S. thoroughly, fully.

Silfrthro, a tilver chest in which the reliques of Martyrs were kept; Verel. In an old Alem. Gloss.

quoted by Wachter, a sarcophagus is denominated steininer druho, which approaches nearly to our thruch-stane. Wachter derives it from Germ. triegen, to cover for the purpose of preserving. He expl. truhe, receptaculum clausum, sive arca sit, sive loculus.

L.B. truc-a denotes a coffin. Sepulchrum—fabricavit; -- similiter Trucam etiam, in qua sepeliri debuit, cum vestibus funeralibus ibidem impositis.

Eberhard. A. 1296, ap. Du Cange.

It has been supposed, but apparently without sufficient ground, that our term has some affinity with A.S. thurh, through, and with dure door. Ihre conjectures, that there has been an ancient Celtic or Scythic word, denoting any thing hollow or perforated; and that not only Su.G. trog, a trough, but

A.S. thruh, sarcophagus, is allied to it.

The word thruch may have been originally used to signify a grave or coffin promiscuously; especially as in former ages, in this country, a grave was properly composed of four stones set on end. cover, laid on these, seems to have been called the thruch-stane. Perhaps the form of a grave, or of such a coffin, gave rise to the name; from its resemblance to a trough. The hold of a ship may in like manner have been denominated a thurrok, from its hollow form. This term is used by Chaucer.

2. To cleave with a crashing noise, used actively.

Awkwart the bak than Wallace can him ta, With his gud suerd that was off burnyst steill; His body in twa it thruschyt enirilkdeill.

Wallace, xi. 252. MS. This is merely an oblique sense. In Gl. Perth Edit. it is rendered burnished. The Editor has been probably misled by the boldness of some former Editor, who has inserted this word in the text.

The birnisht blade his halse in sunder share. Isl. thrusk-a strepere; G. Andr. p. 268. There seems to be no reason to doubt that this is radically the same with MoesG. drius-an cadere; draus-jan, ex alto deorsum praecipitare: whence draus, a fall, ruin; Teut. druysch-en strepere, impetere, stridere, fremere; and druysch impetus, strepitus. ac procidentis. Gl. Goth. The Goth. word, however varied in different dialects, has primarily signified the act of rushing or falling, and hence been secondarily used to denote the noise produced by a fall or disruption. Ihre views MoesG. drius-a as having the same origin with Su.G. rus-a, to rush; d being prefixed.

THRUSH, THRUSH-BUSH, s. The rush; Loth. thrash.

THUD, s. 1. The forcible impression made by a tempestuous wind; as including the idea of the loud, but intermitting, noise caused by it, S. Small birdis flokand throw thik ronnys thrang In chirmynge, and with cheping changit thare

Bot did thole mony thud:

For cauld thay wer discomfeist clene, The schowrs wer sa seucir.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 22. Thus it is commonly said, The wind comes in thuds, when it comes in gusts; and especially when it strikes on any body that conveys the sound, as a door, &c. S.

It sometimes implies the idea of that velocity of motion which distinguishes a stormy wind.

Before thame all furth boltis with ane bend Nisus ane fer way, stert mare spedely Than thud of weddir, or thundir in the sky. Doug. Virgil, 138. 21. Quanta turbine, Virg.

3. Transferred to any loud noise, as that of thunder, cannons, &c.

4. A stroke, causing a blunt and hollow sound: as resembling that made by the wind, S.

From Jupiter the wylde fyre down sche flang Furth of the cloudis, distrois there schyppis all, Ouerquhelmit the sey with mony wyndy wall, Aiux peirsit gaspand and furth flamand smoke Sche with ane thud stikkit on ane scharpe rok.

Doug. Virgil, 14. 29. V. RUTHER. Sometimes it merely signifies a blow with the fist, S.B.

Nor can she please him in his barlic mood: He cocks his hand, and gi's his wife a thud. Morison's Poems, p. 151.

It is surprising that Rudd. should view this word as formed from the sound. We have seen that Doug. uses it as giving the sense of Lat. turbo. Now, A.S. thoden conveys this very idea: "Turbo, noise, din, a whirlwind;" Somner. This must certainly be traced to Isl. thyt, thaut, ad thiot-a, cum sonitu transvolo; thyt-r sonitus; G. Andr. p. 266. Germ. dud-en, sonare, seems radically the same. Ir. dud, a noise in the ear.

To THUD, v. n. 1. To rush with a hollow sound, S.

To THUMB, v. a. To prepare any thing by applying the thumbs to it; a vulgar mode of: making a thing clean, S.

-Honest Jean brings forward, in a clap, The green-horn cutties rattling in her lap; And frae them wyl'd the sleekest that was there, And thumb'd it round, and gave it to the Squire.

Ross's Helenore, p. 116.

THUMBIKINS, s. pl. An instrument of torture, applied as a screw to the thumbs, S.

"A respectable gentleman in the town, a relation of the celebrated Principal Carstairs, has in his possession the identical thumbikins, with which the Principal was severely tortured.—The story of the thumbikins is, that Carstairs asked, and obtained them in a present from his tormentors. 'I have heard, Principal,' said King William to him the first time he waited on his Majesty, 'that you were tortured with something they call thumbikins; Pray what sort of instrument of torture is it?' I will shew it you,' replied Carstairs, 'the next time I have the honour to wait on your Majesty.' The Principal was as good as his word. 'I must try them,' said the King; 'I must put in my thumbs here,—now, Principal, turn the screw.'—'O not so gently—another turn—another—Stop! stop! no more—another turn, I'm afraid, would make me confess any thing." P. Greenock, Statist. Acc. v. 583.

This mode of torture was practised on the persecuted Presbyterians, during the reign of Charles II. Whether the merciful rulers of that period borrowed the idea from the Spaniards, I cannot say. But it has been generally asserted, that part of the cargo of the Invincible Armada, was a large assortment of thumbikins, which it was meant should be employed as powerful arguments for convincing the heretics.

THUMBLICKING, s. An ancient mode of confirming a bargain, S.

"Another symbol was anciently used in proof that a sale was perfected, which continues to this day in bargains of lesser importance among the lower rank of people, the parties licking and joining of thumbs: and decrees are yet extant in our records, prior to the institution of the college of justice, sustaining sales upon summonses of thumb-licking, upon this medium, That the parties had licked thumbs at finishing the bargain." Erskine's Inst. B. iii. T. 3. s. 5.

The same form is retained among the vulgar in the Highlands; an imprecation against the defaulter being generally added to the symbol.

There is evidently an allusion to this mode of entering into engagements, in the S. Song,
There's my thumb, I'll ne'er beguile thee.

There's my thumb, I'll ne'er beguile thee.

Ramsay's Works, ii. 263.

This custom, although it now appears ridiculous and childish, bears indubitable marks of great antiquity. We learn from Tacitus, that it existed among the Iberians, a people who inhabited the country now called Georgia. His language seems also to apply to their neighbours the Armenians. "It was customary," he says, "with these kings, in concluding a peace, or striking an alliance, to join their right hands, and bind their thumbs together, and draw them hard with a running knot. Immediately when the blood had diffused itself to the extremities, it was let out by a slight prick, and mutually licked by the contracting parties. Their covenant was henceforth deemed sacred, as being ratified by each other's blood." V. Tacit. Ann. Lib. xii. Anc. Univ. Hist. ix. 516.

Hence it has been supposed by some interpreters, that Adonibezek might excuse his cruelty, in cutting off the thumbs of threescore kings, by pretending that he thus punished their treachery in breaking the covenant that had been confirmed by this symbol. V. Pol. Synops, in Jud. i. 7.

This custom might be introduced into our country by the Goths, as the Iberi appear to have been a Scythian nation. Anc. Univ. Hist. vi. 57. x. 138.

That the Goths were not strangers to it, appears by the definition which Ihre gives of Su.G. Topp. Formula digito micantium, et veteri more pollice pollici opposito, consensum indicantium. Hence, it would seem Germ. doppe is used as an invitation to strike a bargain. Wachter thinks that it may be viewed as the imperat. of dupp-en, percutere. Ihre also mentions Fr. topp-er, convenire, oblatas conditiones acceptare.

This custom is well known on the continent of India. I have not heard that it is used among the Hindoos; but am assured by a gentleman, who has long resided in that country, that he has often observed the Moors, when concluding a bargain, do it in the very same manner as the vulgar in Scotland, by licking their thumbs.

Something of a similar kind prevailed among the Romans. According to Pierius, the hand being stretched out, the thumb, bent downward, was held by them a symbol of the confirmation of peace. He quotes Quintilian as his authority. Ait, Qui gestus in statuis pacificatorum esse solet, qui inclinato in humerum dextrum capite, brachio ab aure praetenso, manum inflexo pollice extendit. Hieroglyphic. Lib. xxxvi. Tit. Pacificatio; Fol. 260. V. also Plin. Hist. Nat. Lib. xxviii. c. 2.

Lat. pollic-eri to promise, to engage, has been viewed as comp. of per and liceor, for pellic-eri; as properly signifying, to offer and promise a price for merchandize. But it is not improbable, that the v. had been formed from pollex, -icis, the thumb. This member being used among the Romans, in latter times, as a symbol of the ratification of peace, it may be conjectured, that, in an earlier period, they had some custom more analogous to that of the Iberians, which gave rise to the term used to denote a promise or engagement, although the original reason of the designation was afterwards lost.

I had hazarded this conjecture, before observing that Wachter throws out the same idea. Having derived Germ. zusagen, to promise, from zu copulative, and zugen to say, because promises, according to ancient manners, were made by pledging the hand; he adds, Forte etiam Latinis a pressione pollicis dicitur Polliceri. Prolegom. Sect. v. vo. Zu.

The shedding of blood, in entering into covernants, has, in various modes, been practised among many nations. Lucian gives an account of the custom of the Scythians, the same people with the Goths, in this respect. "The happy chosen friends enter into a solemn oath and covenant, that they will live with, and, if occasion calls for, die for each other: and thus it is performed; each cuts his finger, and drops the blood into a bowl; they then dip the points of their swords in the blood, and both drink together of it, after which nothing can dissolve the band;" Toxaris. V. also Herodot. Melpom. iv: 70. Brotier (in his Notes on Tacit. ubi sup.) refers to Herodot. Thal. iii. 8. in proof of the existence of a similar custom among the Arabs. He seems disposed to trace these observances, among the heathen, to the very ancient and divinely instituted.

rite of confirming covenants by sacrifice. For he quotes Gen. xv. 3. and Ezek. xxxiv. 18. observing, that the Scripture exhibits a similar use of blood, although one more consistent with humanity. THUNNERIN, adj. An epithet applied to drought. A thunnerin drouth, a strong drought, S.B. apparently expressing that which is viewed as the effect of fire in the air, or lightning. THUORT, THUORTOUR. V. THORTOUR.

THURCH.

Bot his hart, that wes stout and hey, Consaillyt hym allane to bid, And kepe thaim at the furd syd; And defend weill the wpcummyng; Sen he wes warnyst off armyng, That he thar arowys thurch nocht dreid.

Barbour, vi. 124. MS. Hurt, Edit. Pink.; should, in former copies.

Thurch may be viewed as a s., signifying force. "Being provided with sufficient armour, he did not dread the force of their arrows," or fear that they would penetrate it. Isl. thrug-a, invitum cogere, thrugan force, violence; Su.G. trug-a premere.

It may, however, signify might, as synon. with Thurst, q. v. but immediately allied to Isl. thor-a THURST, s.

For scho wes syne the best lady, And the fayrest, that men thurst se.

Barbour, xx. 107. MS.

This seems to signify could, as allied to Su.G. troest-a valere, posse.

Han troeste ey mera ther foerwaerfwa.

Chron. Rhythm. ap. Ihre.

i. e. There he could accomplish no other thing. The v. primarily signifies to dare.

THUS-GATE, adv. In this manner. The justyng thus-gate endyt is,

And athyr part went hame wyth pris.

Wyntown, viii. 36. 1. V. GAT.

THWAYNG, s. A thong, S. whang.

A rone skyne tuk he thare-of syne And schayre a thwayng all at laysere.

Wyntown, viii. 32. 51.

A.S. thwang, Isl. thweing, id. THWARTER-ILL. V. THORTER-ILL.

TYAL, s. Any thing used for tying a latchet, S.B. Isl. tigill, ligula.

TYBER, s.

Yet shal the riche remayns with one be over-

And with the Rounde Table the rentes be reved. Thus shal a Tyber untrue tymber with tene.

Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 22.

A.S. tyber signifies a sacrifice, an offering; and timbr-ian, to build. But the connexion of these ideas is not obvious. The language is metaph., expressing the consequences of the death of King Ar-

TIBRIC, TIBRICK, s. A name given to the young of the Coal-fish, Orkn.

"These boats sometimes go to sea, for the purpose of fishing cod, cooths, and tibrics, which are the small or young cooths.—The time of fishing the young cooths or tibricks begins about the middle of August." P. Westray, Statist. Acc. xvi. 261.

Were it not that there are no Gael. words found in Orkn., this might seem a corr. of Dowbreck, q. v. a name given to the sparling or smelt.

TICHT, pret. Tied. V. TIGHT.

To TICK, v. n. To click, as a watch, S.

Belg. tikk-en, als een uurwerk, id.

TICK, LICKER, s. 1. A dot of any kind. The tick above an I, the dot above the letter I, S. Teut. tick, punctus.

2. A very small spot on the skin, S.B.

Hence perhaps freckles are called fernie-tickles. q. tickers, as resembling the dots on the herb called a fern. V. TEICHER.

TICKET, s. A pat, a slight stroke with the hand, or with any instrument, S.

Belg. tik a pat, a touch; tikk-en to pat, to touch slightly; MoesG. tek-an, to touch.

TID, s. 1. Proper time, season, S.

2. Metaph. applied to the mind, as denoting humour, S. I'm just in the tid; I am in the proper humour of doing any thing, S.

What pleasure matrimony brings To counterbalance a' its stings. To pay for a' their plaids and gowns,-To hide their fauts and keep their tid, And, whan they're ill, to ca them gude.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 11.

It is also applied to brute animals.

Tak tent case Crummy tak her wonted tid, And ca' the laiglen's treasure on the ground.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 58.

A.S. Su.G. tid, time, season. V. Txte, adv. To Tid, v. a. To time, to choose the proper season. The aitseed has been weill tiddit; The proper season for sowing oats has been taken, V. the s.

TID, Typ, v. impers. Happened. Chauc. id.

Perauenture of Priamus wald ye spere How tid the chance, his fate gif ye list here. Doug. Virgil, 56. 6.

For ony trety may tyd, I tell the the teynd, I will noght turn myn entent, for all this warld Gawan and Gol. iv. 7. brerd.

A.S. tid-an, Su.G. tid-a, contingere.

These verbs are undoubtedly formed from tid, tempus, as primarily denoting the time when any thing takes place.

TYDY, TYDIE, adj. 1. Neat, synon. trig, S. In this sense tidy is used in E. as in the passage which Johns. quotes from Gay's Pastorals.

Whenever by you barley-mow I pass, Before my eyes will trip the tidy lass.

2. Plump, fat, S.

Fyue twinteris britnyt he, as was the gyis, And als mony swine, and tydy qwyis Doug. Virgil, 130. 35. Wyth hydis blak-Tydy ky lowis, velis by thaym rynnis. Ibid. Prol. 402. 25.

Fat and tydy, rakand ouer all quhare. Ibid. 75. 5.

A tydy bairn, a child that is plump and thriving,

3. Lucky, favourable.

King Aeol, grant a tudie tirl,

But boast the blasts that rudely whirl.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 201.

The term, in sense 1, seems most analogous to Isl. tyd-r obsequens, applicabilis. The phrase cn tyd kona is expl. by the Sw. synon. liuflig husfru, i. e. a pleasant housewife. Su.G. tidig decorus, decens, conveniens.

The second sense is perhaps immediately borrowed from Teut. tydigh, in season, mature, ripe. Thus a young cow is denominated, cene tydighe koe; Kilian. To this corresponds Su.G. tidfocdd hiord, grex mature editus; and tidig frukt, fructus cito maturescens, which Ihre derives from tid tempus. Teut. tydigh also signifies, tempestivus, which corresponds to the third sense.

TIFT, s. Condition, plight, humour, S. tid, synon. In tist, in proper capacity for doing any

"The soldiers owned that the country men behaved themselves with the utmost bravery, and very few of them who engaged, escaped, being overpowered by numbers, and the King's horse being in good tift." Wodrow's Hist. ii. 140.

To sing or dance, I'm now in proper tift: My birn, O Bess, has got an unco lift.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. 84.

Isl. tif-a, tyf-a, praeceps ire; G. Andr. p. 237. 238. Hence it might be used to denote eagerness to engage in any business.

To Tift, v. a. To put in order, S.B. The fidler tifted ilka string.

Morison's Poems, p. 25.

TIFT, s. Used as expressive of tediousness; at least of considerable duration. A lang tift, a long discourse, S.

Isl. tef-ia, Su.G. toefw-a, to delay, morari, moram facere. Hence tof mora; lang tof, a long delay. TIFT, s. 1. The act of quarrelling, Loth. tiff, E.

- 2. It sometimes signifies the act of struggling in a wanton or dallying way, Loth. synon. with tous-
- 3. Used to denote the action of the wind.

Four and twenty siller bells

Were a' tyed till his mane, And at ac tift of the norland wind,

They tinkled ane by ane.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 190.

Isl. tyft-a to chastise; tyf-a to run headlong. To TIFΓ, v. a. To quaff.

> Well fed were they; nor wanted to propine Among their friends; but tifted canty wine. Hamilton's Wallace, p. 39.

Apparently allied to E. tiff, drink, or a draught. To TIG, v. n. 1. To touch lightly, to dally. Young people are said to be tigging, when sporting with gentle touches, or patting each other. It properly applies to those of different sexes, S.

Fareweil with chestetie, Frae wenchis fall a chucking, Thair follow things thre,

To gar them gae a gucking; Imbracing, tigging, plucking. Scott, Evergreen, i. 125. 126. V. TAR.

2. To trifle with, to treat in a scornful and contemptuous manner.

Complain, and tell him how the world handleth us, and how our King's business goeth, that he may get up, and lend them a blow, who are tigging and playing with Christ and his spouse." Rutherford's Lett. P. iii. ep. 35.

This may either be allied to MoesG. tek-an to touch, Belg. tikk-en to pat; or Isl. tey-a, teg-ia, teig-ia, lactare, allicere, as denoting the allurements employed in this way. Teyging allectio, illecebra.

V. Tyte, s. Hence, Tig-tow, s. To play at tig-tow, to pat backwards and forwards, to dally, S. It is sometimes used as a v.

Formed perhaps from tig and Su.G. toefw-a mo. rari; as denoting procrastination in the way of dallying.

TIG, TEYG, s. A pet, a fit of sullen humour. To tak the tig, to be pettish, S. dorts, synon. What tig then takes the fates that they can thole Thrawart to fix me i' this dreary hole?

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 73. Perhaps from Su.G. tig-a, to be silent; as it is a usual mark of the pettishness expressed by this term, that the person preserves a sullen taciturnity. Or, it may be allied to C.B. dig, ira, iracundia; Davies. Hence,

TIGGY, adj. Petty, prone to pettishness, S. Dorty more properly expresses that ill humour which is manifested by giving a saucy answer. To TIG-TAG, v. n. To trifle, to be busy while doing nothing of importance.

"The King came on Sunday last to Basing-house, with purpose to break up Waller's quarters, and then to enter Kent; but, as we hear, Waller is recrnited, from Kent, with horse and foot, and minds to stand to it. They may tig tag on this way this twelve-month." Baillie's Lett. i. 404.

Probably from E. ticktack, a game at tables; q. moving backwards and forwards to little purpose. TIGHT, TICHT, part. pa. and pret. 1. Tied.

The tasses were of topas, that were thereto tight. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 2.

2. Prepared, girt for action.

Nou will I rekkin the renkis of the round tabill, That has traistly thame tight to governe that gait. Gawan and Gol. iii. 8.

For ticht, id. V. TISCHE.

Qu. bound up, from A.S. tyg-an to bind. And here perhaps we see the true origin of F. tight as signifying neat, generally traced to Teut. dicht solidus. It seems merely, q. tied close, well kuit. The term, however, as used in sense 2, may be immediately allied to Isl. ty-ia armo, instruo; ty, arma, utensilia; tyad-r armatus.

TYISDAY, s. Tuesday. V. TYSDAY. TIKE, TYKE, TYK, s. A dog, a cur; properly, one of a larger and common breed, as a mastiff, a shepherd's dog, &c. S. A. Bor.

TIKE-TYRIT, adj. Dog-weary, tired like a dog after coursing or running, S.

Quhan greits the wean, the nurse in vain, Thoch tyke-tyrit, tries to sleip.

Minstrelsy Border, iii. 363. It is the same word, I suspect, that Rudd. writes tig-tyre, rendering it, to vex or disquiet, vo. Tary; unless this be q. to tire with tigging, or childish sportiveness.

The same idiom is found in Sw. troett som en hund, dog-weary; Seren. vo. Dog.

TYKED, adj. Having the disposition of a degenerate dog, currish; from tike.

For all her waful cries and greeting, Her loving words and fair intreating, (These follows were too tyked) To her they would make nae supplie, Nor yet let her remaining be Amang them, but twa days or three, Say to them, what she liked.

Watson's Coll. i. 46.

TYKE AND TRYKE, adv. Higgledy-piggledy, in an intermingled state, S.B.

Su.G. tiock densus; tryck-a angustare, used to denote a crowd of objects pressing one upon another; q. closely crowded or pressed together. TIL, TILL, prep. 1. To, S. A. Bor.

Now God gyff grace that I may swa Tret it, and bryng it till endyng, That I say nought bot suthfast thing.

Barbour, i. 35. MS.

Tille is often used by R. Brunne for to. Ther were chanons of clergie, That knewe wele of Astronomie, To knowe the sternes ther wittes leid, & tille Arthure oft tymes seid, That what thing that he was aboute, He suld spede withouten doute. V. Tille, Gloss. R. Glouc.

3. From, improperly. Swa til Saynt Margret eftyre syne, As til Malcolme in ewyn lyne, All oure kyngis of Scotland Ware in-til successyowne discendand. Wyntown, vi. 19. 139. TIL, TILL, as a mark of the infinitive, instead of to. It is more generally used by our old writers, before a vowel or the aspirate; although this rule is by no means strictly observed.

> For joy thay pingil than for till renew Thare bankettis with al observance dew.

Doug. Virgil, 210. 3.

Mr. Macpherson has observed that it is used by Ulphilas, as a prefix to the infinitive, Luk. vi. 7. "where Junius is quite at a loss for a meaning to it." Gl. Wynt. Ei bigeteina du til wrohjan ina; Ut invenirent unde accusarent eum. Du til is a redundant phraseology, resembling for till; du, as well as til, signifying to.

Liand in till his seknes.

Barbour, ix. 105. MS.

This line is omitted in Edit. Pink.

As quhill S. is used for till E., till, vice versa, occurs in the sense of while.

The A.S. s. tille signifies rest, as if it were synon. with hwile, id. whence E. while, which is evidently from Isl. Su.G. hwil-a, quiescere. Thus, it would appear that the change of till for quhill is not accidental, or merely arbitrary.

To TILL, v. a. To entice. V. TEAL. TILL, s. A cold unproductive clay, S.

"The soil of the upper grounds, in general, is a very strong heavy clay, lying upon a stratum of a dense argillaceous substance, generally of a great depth; which, under all its different appearances, is called till in this country." P. Dalserf, Lanarks. Statist. Acc. ii. 372.

"The bottom is a very bad sort of clay, commonly called by the farmers here mortar or till." P. Kilspindie, Perths. Statist. Aec. iv. 203.

TILLIESOUL, s. A place at some distance from a gentleman's mansion-house, whither the servants and horses of his guests are sent, when he does not choose to entertain the former at his own expence. The person employed is often an old servant of the family, who is allowed to sell corn, hay, &c. for his own sustenance, and for the accommodation of visitors, Loth.

It does not appear that this is of Gael. origin. It may perhaps have been formed, in allusion to soldiers getting dry billets, as they are called, i. e. money to pay for lodging elsewhere, from Fr. tillet a ticket, and sould soldier's entertainment or pay. TILLING, s.

"The birds are-plover pages, tillings, linnets, thrushes, hill sparrows," &c. P. Reay, Caithn. Statist. Acc. vii. 574.

This might seem the Sea-pie, Haematopus ostralegus, Linn. (Norv. tield. In Iceland the male is called Tialld-ur, the female Tilldra; Penn. Zool. p. 482.) But as sea-pies are mentioned before, it is probably an erratum for titting or teeting, the Titlark, Alauda pratensis. TILLIT, pret. v.

' Quhat suld a Scot do with sa fayr a knyff?' "Sa said the Prest that last janglyt thi wyff.

"That woman lang has tillit him so fayr,

"Quhill that his child worthit to be thine ayr." Wallace, vi. 149. MS.

This is part of the dialogue between Wallace and an Englishman, who, according to the story, was employed to provoke Wallace to some act that might seem to warrant an attack on him and his handful of friends at Lanark.

Tillit most probably signifies, coaxed, enticed; Isl. tael-ia, pellicere; the same with Teal, q. v. Tillit is absurdly changed to called, Edit. 1648. TILT, s. Account, tidings of, S.B.

Great search was made for her baith far and near.

But tilt nor trial of her cud we hear.

Ross's Helenore, p. 126. If not an errat. for tint, (V. TAINT); apparently formed from A.S. tel-ian to tell, or Isl. til-ia narrare; like tilth tillage from til-ian to till.

TYMBER, TYMMER, TYMBRELL, TYMBRILL,

Fr. timbre, "a crest upon an helmet, corresponding to the crest of the bearer's coat of arms;" Pink. Bullet derives the Fr. word from Arm. tymbr a mark; L.B. timbr-um, tymbr-is. Du Cange observes, that Fr. tymbre anciently signified the helmet itself.

Perhaps originally an improper use of Fr. etincelle a spark, as applied to the blazes, made in the night season, in the black fishing, and transferred to hunting.

To TYND, v. n. To kindle. TYND, s. A spark. V. TEIND.

TYND, s. 1. The tooth of a harrow, S. tine, E. From Isl. tindr, Su.G. tinne, id.; harftinnar, the teeth of a harrow.

2. Used to denote the act of harrowing. A double tynd, or teind, is harrowing the same piece of ground twice at the same yoking, S.B. q. bringing, it twice under the teeth of the harrow.

3. Tyndis, pl. "The horns of a hart, properly the tines of the horns;" Rudd.

This hart of body was bayth grete and square, With large hede and tyndis birnist fare.

Doug. Virgil, 224. 22.
This is from the same origin. For Su.G. tinne signifies any thing sharp like a tooth; hence used to denote the niched battlements of walls, pinnae murorum.

TINDE, s. On tinde, in a collected state.

He tight the mawe on tinde, And eke the gargiloun.

Sir Tristrem, p. 32. st. 46.

i. e. He tied its parts together, in the way of collecting the grease of the deer, and all its appurtenances. Isl. tin-a colligere, tynt, collectum; Verel. To TINE, TYNE, v. a. 1. To lose; tynt, pretand part. pa.

2. To forfeit; used as a forensic term.

—" And gif he slayis, he sall die thairfoir, and tyne all his gudis as escheit to the King." Acts Ja. 1. 1426. c. 108. Edit. 1566.

"And at the thrid tyme gif he be conuict of sic trespas he sall tyne his lyfe or than by it.—And gif ony dois the contrare he sall tyne ane hundreth. S. for the vnlaw befoir the Justice." Ibid. 1424. c. 12.

3. To kill or destroy.

In-to the innys lang or day,
Quhare that the Erle of Athole lay,
A fell fyre hym to colys brynt.
Thus suddanly was that lord there tynt,
And wyth hym mony ma.

Wyntown, vii. 9. 506.

"And seeing hee only is terrible, because he is onely Lord of body and soule, onely hee hath power to saue and tyne; And seeing it is so, let vs feare and retyre our selfis to him, who is able to preserve & keep baith body and soule." Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. R. 4. a.

He seems to refer to James iv. 12. "There is one lawgiver, who is able to save, and to destroy."

" Leese and delyuere;" Wiclif, ibid.

4. To type the saddle, to lose all; a proverbial phrase, S.

''You must not look to expences, when presently we are either to win the horse or tyne the saddle." Baillie's Lett. i 397.

This term has no affinity to any A.S. v. Isl. tyn-ast perdere, eg tyne perdo, tynde perdidi. The same Isl. v. signifies, to separate chaff from grain. Legumina purgare, ab aliis rejectaneis separare; G. Andr. This may have been its primary sense. The chaff being thrown away or lost, the term may have been at length used to denote the loss of any thing in what way soever. Sw. tyn-a, tyn-a af, aftyn-a, to languish, to dwindle away. This sense corresponds to the neut. signification of the Isl. v., perdi, interire. Hence tion jactura, perditio; Verel. To this corresponds Tin, s. q. v.

TINEMAN, s. An appellation given to one of the-Lords of Douglas whose christian name was. Archibald.

Lord Hailes, after Fordun, says that this was that. Archibald who was killed at Halidon. He was the first of this name. Godscroft ascribes this designation to Archibald the third of the name, who was Duke of Turrane in France. He also assigns a far more satisfying reason for the appellation, than that adopted by Lord Hailes, who says; "He was commonly called Tineman, implying, as may be conjectured, tiny or slender little man." Ann. ii. 260.

According to Godscroft, "this Archbald is hee who was called Tineman, for his unfortunate and hard successe he had, in that he tint (or lost) almost all his men, and all the battels that he fought. This nick-name, or cognomination, the old manuscript (of Sir Richard Metellan of Lithington) giveth to Archbald slain at Halidoun hill, and calleth this, Archbald one eye, for distinction, because of the losse of his eye in a battell against Percie. But that surname of Tyneman cannot bee given so conveniently to the former Archbald who lost only one field, and himself in it; whereas this man ever lost his men, himself escaping often." Hist. H. Douglas, p. 115.

Besides its being a mere conjecture that he was a little man, the word tiny, I suspect, was never so much in use in S. as to be the foundation of a nick.

The historical fact cannot perhaps be easily determined; and it is not of great importance. But the first Archibald might be thus denominated, although he lost but one battle, because it was a very fatal one to the Scots; and especially as Douglas seems to have been blamed by the bulk of his countrymen afterwards, for engaging with Edw. III. in the circumstances in which his army was placed. Hence Lesley; Intellexisset Archibaldum Douglasium gubernatorem, furore quodam, tanquam Eren-er, percitum, praelio ad Halidonum monticulum commisso, militibus fusis fugatisque, cecidisse, &c. Hist. Lib. vii. p. 238.

TYNAR, TINER, s. A loser.

"It is statute and ordanit, that gif ony persoun persewis ane vther within burgh, that the tynar of the cause, pay the winnaris expensis." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 91. Edit. 1566. Tiner, Skene's Edit.

TYNSAILL, TINSALL, TYNSEL, s. 1. Loss, in whatever sense, S.B.

For oftsyss throw a word may ryss Discomford, and tynsaill with all. And throu a word, als weill may fall, Comford may ryss, and hardyment May ger men do thair entent.

Barbour, xi. 488. MS.

A wykyd word may wmqwhil mak Full gret tynsel, as it dyd here.

Wyntown, viii. 30. 83.

It is retained in the Buchan Dialect. V. AIMPUIST. It occurs in a very useful S. Prov. "He that's far from his geer, is near his tinsel."-" A man may soon be wrong'd when his back is turn'd." Kelly, p. 132, 133.

It is used by R. Brunne.

Lost he had his men ilk one. Conseile couth he tak at none, How he myght his brother help. Of tynselle myht he mak his gelp.

V. Gl. R. Glouc. vo. Boskes.

2. Forfeiture; used as a forensic term.

"That na man have out of the realme gold nor siluer, bot he pay xL.d. of ilk pund of custume to the king, vnder the pane of tinsall of all gold and siluer that beis fundin with him, and. x .pund to the King for the vnlaw." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 16. Edit. 1566.

To TINSALL, TINSELL, v. a. To injure; synon. with skaith; formed from the s.

"Gif he does otherwise, the partie that is essonyied will be tinsalled." Baron Courts, c. 40. s. 2.

"And gif sic essonyie without borgh, be made against the soyte of the partie mutand in court, he that swa is essonyied may be tinselled and skaithed." Ibid. c. 54. s. 3.

To TING, v. a. To ring.

-In ane dreme she fel, And by aperaunce herde quhere she did lie Cupide the King tingand a silvir bel, Quhich men micht here fro hevin into hel.

Henrysone's Test. Creseide, Chron. S. P. i. 161. Hence ting-tung, a reduplicative term used among children, to denote the sound made by a bell. Teut. tinghe-tungh-en tintinare.

To TINKLE on, v. n. To trifle about.

"If that man now go to tinkle on bishops, and delinquents, and such foolish toys, it seems he is mad." Baillie's Lett. ii. 208.

TINT NOR TRIAL. V. TAINT.

To TIP, v. n. To take the ram.

"Tip when you will, you shall lamb with the leave;" [l. lave, i. e. rest.] S. Prov. Kelly, p. 306. V. LAMB, v.

It is also used actively.

"The lamb where it's tipped, and the ewe where she's clipped;" S. Prov., "a proverbial rule about tythes; signifying that the lamb shall pay tythes in the place where the ewe was when she took the ram, but the old sheep where they were shorn." Kelly, p. 307.

S. it is tup. Johns. expl. this v. "to but like a ram." But in O.E. it had the same sense as in S. Hence Phillips renders it, to cover the ewe.

To TIP, v. a. This term is used to signify the effect of an expression, action, or event, which disappoints or nettles one. That tips him; It silences or mortifies ! im, S.

It seems to be merely a metaph. use of E. tip, as signifying to strike slightly.

To TIPPANIZE, v. n. To act the toper, properly in drinking small beer, S.

"Your tippanizing, scant o' grace," Quoth she, "gars me gang duddy; "Our nibour Pate sin break of day's "Been thumping at his studdy."

Ramsay's Poems, i. 277.

"Scant o' grace," seems to be an appellation. V. TWO-PENNY.

TIPPERTY, adj. 1. Unstable. An object is said to be tipperty, or to stand tipperty-like, when it is ready to fall, S.B.

2. To gang tipperty-like, to walk in a flighty, ridiculous sort of way, S.B.

Q. to walk on tip-toes; as allied to E. tip, top or end, Su.G. Dan. tipp, Isl. typpe, cacumen. Or V. next word.

TIPPERTIN, s. A bit of card with a small piece of stick passed through it; resembling a te totum, Loth. Hence the phrase, to loup like a tippertin.

TYRANE, s. Tyrant, S.

"Succedit his son Lugtak ane odius and mischeuus tyrane." Bellend. Cron. B. v. c. 1. Fr. tyran. Hence, Tyrane, adj. Tyrannical.

Behald how God, ay sen the warld began, Hes maid of tyrane kingis instrumentis, To scurge pepill, and to kill mony ane man, Quhilkis to his law wer inobedientis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 119.

TYRANDRY, s. Tyranny.

Off tyrandry King Eduuard thocht him gud.

Wallace, vii. 737. Ms. Tyranically. V. Unrest.

TYRE, s. A hat off tyre, mentioned as part of the dress of Robert Bruce, at the battle of Bannockburn.

And on his bassinet he ber Ane hat off tyre aboune ay guhar: And tharwpon, in to taknyng, Ane hey croune, that he wes king.

Barbour, xii. 22. MS. "This legat als presentit [to King William] and bonat of tyre, made in maner of diademe of purpoure hew, to signify that he was defendar of the faith." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 8. Galerum purpureum; Boeth.

A.S. tyr is rendered by Lye, tiara, cidaris; which is either a sash about the cap or turban worn by eastern monarchs, or the cap itself. This seems formed from the Lat. designation.

The term may, however, be allied to A.S. Tir, tyr, originally one of the names of Odin, or of one of the sons of Odin; and in a secondary sense, any lord, prince, or general. It is also transferred from persons to things; so as to signify glory, power, dominion. Torhte tire, illustrious in dominion.

TYREMENT, s. Interment.

Now Pallas corpis is tyl Euander sent, Wyth al honour accordyng hys tyrement. Doug. Virgil, 361. 45.

The marginal note, p. 362. determines the sense. 'A lang narration contenyng the honour of Pallas funeral entyrment.' It is merely an abbrev. of this term.

TIRL, s. A substitute for the trundle of a mill, Shetland.

"A round piece of wood, about 4 feet in length, and fitted with 12 small boards, in the same manner as the extremity of the exterior wheel of an ordinary mill, with a strong iron spindle fixed to its upper end, supplies the place of a wheel in these mills. The iron spindle, passing through the under millstone, is fixed in the upper. A pivot in the under end of the tirl (the piece of wood above mentioned) runs in a hollowed iron plate.—The tirl occupies the same situation under this mill, as the trundles in the inner part of an ordinary mill; and it performs the same office. The diameter of the tirl is always equal to that of the millstone." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 195.

This is undoubtedly allied to Su.G. trill-a rotari, to trundle, Dan. trilld-er.

TIRL, TIRLE, s. 1. A smart tap or stroke, S. either as allied to the v. TIRLE, or denominated from its producing a thrilling sensation. V. DIRLE.

2. A touch, in the way of intermeddling with

Her nain-sell shook her naked breeches, For she was tyred with his speeches; She would far rather had a tirrle Of an Aquavitae barrel.

Cleland's Poems, p. 32.

S. A dance.

—The young swankies on the green, Took round a merry tirle.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 262.

4. A gentle breeze, S. synon. a pirr of wind.

King Acol, grant a tydie tirl,

But boast the blasts that loudly whirl.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 201.

To TIRL, TIRLE, v. a. 1. To uncover; as, to tirl a house, Gl. Shirr. Aberd.

It seems properly to include the idea of velocity of motion, as having been originally used to denote the effect of the wind.

— Whyles on the strong-wing'd tempest flyin, Tirling the kirks.

Burns, iii. 71.

Mr. Chalmers is therefore mistaken when he mentions it as one of Sibbald's egregious interpolations, "that he gives tirl for tirr." Works Sir D. Lyndsay, iii. 215.

2. To pluck off lightly and expeditiously; applied to dress.

And syne this fule thay thankit of al,
That caused sik concord amang them fal.
And off his coate thay tirlit be the croun,
And on him kest ane syde clarkly goun.
Priests Peblis, S. P. R. i. 36.

This is classed by Sibb., as if it were the same with Tirr, or a dimin. from it. But perhaps it is from a common fountain with E. twirl; Isl. thyrlac turbine versari subito, G. Andr. This indeed expresses the sense in which the term is still frequently used, as denoting the effect of an impetuous wind.

3. To strip, applied to property, S.

Nane gathers gear withouten care;— Suppose then they should tirle ye bare And gar ye fike;

E'en learn to thole.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 300.

To TIRLE, v. n. To touch the chords of an instrument, so as to produce tremulous vibrations of sound

Courage to give, was mightily then blown

Saint Johnston's Huntsup, since most famous known

By all musicians, when they sweetly sing With heavenly voice, and well concording string. O how they bend their backs and fingers tirle.

Muse's Threnodie, p. 133.

Evidently the same as E. trill, which Johns. derives from Ital. trillo, a quaver. But this, I apprehend, is itself derived from Su.G. drill-a, vocem inter canendum crispare; trall-a cantillare.

It seems used in a similar sense in the S. poem, Sweet William's Ghost, Ramsay's Tea Table Miscellany.

There came a ghost to Margaret's door, With many a grievous groan, And ay he tirled at the pin.

i. e. caused a tremulous motion.

'TIRLES, s. pl. Some kind of disease.

The Teasick, the Tooth-aik, the Titts & the Tirles.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 14. V. Feyk. Fr. tarle signifies a wood worm; but there seems no affinity.

TIRLESS, TIRLASS, TIRLIES, s. 1. A lattice, grate, or rail. It is now generally applied to that used for defending a window, S.

"At the back of the throne were two rooms on the two sides. In the one, Duke de Vanden, Duke de Valler, and other French nobles, sat; in the other, the King, Queen, Princes, Mary, the Prince Elector, and some court ladies. The tirlies that made them to be secret, the King brake down with his own hands; so they sat in the eyes of all; but little more regarded than if they had been absent; for the Lords sat all covered." Baillie's Lett. i. 259.

2. A wicket, a small gate, S.B.

"That at or near the westmost pole,—there is a tirlass, at which a single person may enter; and he recollects no other opening on any part of said planted inclosures at the north." State, Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 194.

Fr. treillis, "a grate set thick with cross bars of wood:" Cotgr. Teut. traelie.

Tirllest, part. adj. Having grates, latticed, trellised, S. V. Terlyst.

TIRLYWIRLY, TIRLIEWIRLIE, s. 1. A whirligig, S.

Tirly mirly, used as an appellative, Evergreen,

ii. 20. seems originally the same.

2. A figure or ornament of any kind on stone, wood, stockings, S.

It is used to denote clocks in stockings.

Red, blue, an' green, an' likewise pearl,

I hae to fit the little girl; Wi' mony a bony tirly-wirl

About the queets.

Forbes's Shop Bill, Journal, p. 13. It would seem comp. of two synon. terms, Su.G. trill-a and hworl-a, rotare, q. something that is whirled.

TIRMA, s. The sea-pie, a bird; hoematopus ostralegus, Linn.

"The Tirma, or Sea-Pie, by the inhabitants called Trilichan, comes in May, goes away in August." Martin's St. Kilda, p. 35. To TIRR, TIRUE, v. a. 1. To tear.

Or in quhat land lyis thou manglit and schent, Thy fare body and membris tyrryt and rent.

Doug. Virgil, 294. 27. It may be viewed as synon. with rent, lacerum being the only term used by Virg. -Aut quae nunc artus avolsaque membra,

Et funus lacerum tellus habet?-

Aen. ix. 491.

There is a possibility, however, that Doug. allades to the preceding complaint of the mother of Euryalus, that she was not at hand to dress his dead body.

Veste tegens.-Rudd. and Sibb. derive it from Fr. tir-er, to draw.

But if the sense given above be just, (and it receives confirmation from another passage to be quoted just now,) it directs us to A.S. tyr-an, tyrw-an, to tear, as the origin of our tirr.

2. To uncover in a forcible way, S. q. to tear off. Vnto him syne Eneas geuin has,

That by his vertw-wan the secund place, Ane habirgeoun of birnist mailyeis bricht,-Quhilk he sum time, with his strang handis two, Tiruit and rent of bald Demoleo.

Doug. Virgil, 136. 22.

Thir venerable virgins, whom the warld call witches,

In the time of their triumph, tirr'd me the tade. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 17.

"Scot. to tir one to the skin, i. e. strip him naked;" Rudd.

Both these examples evidently suggest the idea of force. Hence, a house is often said to be tirred by a strong wind.

"They tirred skipper Walker out of his cloaths, and clad him in rags." Spalding's Trouble, ii. 170. 3. To unroof, S.

"He tirred the haill toofalls of the office-houses, -and carried roof and slates away, wherewith he roofed a long school." Spalding, ut sup. p. 26.

"To tir a house, to take of the slates, tiles, &c.

of a house;" Rudd.

4. Metaph. to strip one of his property, S.

The term is used in a very emphatic S. Prov. applied to a selfish greedy person: "He caresna quhabe tirr'd, gin he be theikit."

Sae Fortune, tirr me steek by steek,

And hair by hair.

Morison's Poems, p. 99.

5. To pare off the sward by means of a spade. Persons are said to tirr the ground, before casting peats; as they first clear off the surface that covers the moss. To tirr and burn, to cast turfs on bad ground, and burn them that their ashes may serve for manure, S.

"Terrnave.—The name is evidently a corruption of Terrae navis; but whether given it by the Romans, or since they left the country, is uncertain. To this place a superstitious regard is attached by the vulgar. Tradition asserts, that some time ago a man attempting to cast divots (turfs) on the side of it, no sooner opened the ground with the spade, than the form of an old man, supposed to have been the spirit of the mountain, made its appearance from the opening, and with an angry countenance and tone of voice, asked the countryman why he was tirring (uncovering) his house over his head? On saying this, the apparition instantly disappeared.-None has since ventured to disturb the repose of the imaginary spirit." P. Dunning, Perths. Statist. Acc. xix. 442.

The term is also used with respect to quarries.

"These quarries require very little tirring. In some places the rock has no covering of earth." P. St. Andrews, Fife, Statist. Acc. xiii. 201. Ibid.

It is probable indeed, that this is the true origin of turf, a term that has puzzled etymologists. As tyrf is used in the same sense in A.S. it would appear to be derived from tyrw-an, to tear; the surface being thus rent from the soil. This etymon is not materially different from that of Seren., who derives Isl. torf, id. from what he designs antiquiss. Goth. torfu, effodere; according to Wachter, (vo. Torf,) the most ancient language of Iceland.

To TIRR, v. n. To snarl, to speak ill-natured-

Teut. tergh-en, irritare, lacessere, exacerbare; Mod. Sax. terr-en, id.

TIRR, adj. Crabbed, quarrelsome, in bad humour, S.B. V. the v.

TIRRIVEE, s. A fit of passion, S.

This has much appearance of being of Fr. origin: perhaps from tir-er, to draw; also, to dart forth; and vif lively, as denoting the lively action of one animated by rage.

TIRWIRR, TIRWIRRING, adj. Growling; a term applied to one who is habitually chiding or quarrelling. As tirwirr as a cat, S.

This might seem comp. of two synon. verbs, as more forcibly expressing the habit referred to; Teut. tergh-en, (V. Terr, v.) and werr-en, to contend, or rather Isl. verr-a, to bark.

TISCHE, TYSCHE, TYSCHEY, TUSCHE', s. A girdie, a belt.

Ane riche tysche or belt hynt he syne, The pendentis wrocht of byrnist gold maist fyne.

Doug. Virgil, 288. 52.

And quhar hir pap was for the spere cut away, Of gold thairon was belt ane riche tischey. Ibid. 28. 25.

Holland and Dunbar use tusché in the same sense. Syne schyre schapin to schaw, mony schene scheild

With tusheis of tuest silk ticht to the tre.

Houlate, ii. 8. MS. And of ane burde of silk, richt costlie grein, Hir tusché was, with silver weil besene.

Maitland Poems, p. 70. V. Burde. Rudd. derives it from Fr. tissu, " a wide sort of ribbon, a girth or fillet, or tissu, participle of tistre, to weave." Ihre views our term as allied to Su.G. taska, Alem. Isl. tasca, Belg. tassche, tessche, a bag or scrip; observing, that S. tesche denotes such a girdle as the ancients used to fix their purses to. Hence Ital. tascha marsupium, intasc-are, to hide.

TYSDAY, TYISDAY, s. Tuesday, the name given to the third day of the week, S.

"Yit befoir the nixt day at 12 Hours (quhilk was Tyisday the 13th of Junii) the number passit thre thousand men, quhilk be Godis Providence came unto the Lordis." Knox's Hist. p. 141.

This name has been generally derived from Tuisco, one of the deities of the Saxons, to whom it has been supposed that this day was consecrated. In A.S. it is written Tiwesdaeg, Dan. Tigzdag, Thys-dag, Isl. Tijsdag.

Arngrim views this as Tyrsdag-ur, softened into Tyssdagur; deriving the term from Tyr, one of the detties of the Goths, to whom great power over battle was ascribed. V. Bartholin. de Causis Contempt. Mort. p. 350. 351. According to G. Andr. it is from Tyr, Mercury or Mars; in the oblique cases, Ty.

Wormius traces the name to Disa, or Thisa, the wife of Thor; who was supposed to preside over justice. From her, he thinks, the third day of the week was in Dan. denominated Thijsdag. In honour of this goddess, sacred rites were annually performed with great pomp and solemnity at Upsal in Sweden. These were called Tijsating.

This learned writer having mentioned Tuisco, Lat. Teutas or Teutates, who was worshipped as a male divinity, observes that Tijs did not correspond to the Teutates, but to the Hesus, of Latin writers. He adds, that, according to Vossius, de Idolol. Lib. 2. c. 33. T was often prefixed to H. Monument. Dan. Lib. 1. c. 4. Fast. Dan. Lib. 1. .c. 15.

To TYSE, Trist, Trst, v. a. To entice, te allure, to stir up, S B.

At hasard wald he derflie play at dyse: And to the taverne eith he was to tyse.

Priests Peblis, S. P. R. i. 11. Quhilk Fury quent, of kynd sa perrellus, Juno tyistis to myscheif, sayand thus.

Doug. Virgil, 217. 51. O.F. tyce. "I tyce one by fayre wordes to my purpose;" Palsgraue.

Rudd. derives tyist, as Skinner entice, from Fr. attis-er, Ital. tizz-are, accendere, or A.S. tiht-an, allicere. But perhaps our term is rather allied to Arm. tis, a train; bon train, bon allure, Bullet; or even to Su.G. tuss-a incitare, a term used to denote the setting on of dogs.

TYST, (Orkn.) Tystie, (Shetl.) s. The Sea-

Als tyte, as soon as. At this ilk coist ar we arrived als tyte, And in the port enterit, lo, we se Flokkis and herdis of oxin and of fee. Doug. Virgil, 75. 2.

Huc ubi delati. Virg.

Tite, full tite, and als tite, are used by R. Brunne. Me thouht Kyng Philip inouh was disconfite, Whan he & alle his trip for nouht fled so tite. P. 203.

The bisshop to him said, & told to him full tite, That the Norreis purueied, to do him a despite.

The monkes alle were schent, suspended tham : P. 209.

Hearne improperly views this as the same with tite close, tight. He indeed renders als tite, also (vel as) tightly. V. Gl.

As tite, anon, shortly, as soon, id. Lancash.;

tide, soon, A. Bor.

Rudd. derives it from A.S. tid tempus. Macpherson, more properly, from Isl. titt ready. This seems formed from tid-r, titt, Su.G. tid, frequens, diurnans; the origin of which is evidently tijd tempus. Su.G. tid, although primarily signifying time, is used in the sense of, quickly. Komma i tid, not to delay. Isl. Foro their i burt som tydaz; They departed as quickly as possible; Heims Kringl. 1. p. 261.

TITLY, adv. Quickly, speedily.

Artow comen titly

Fram Mark thi kinsman.

Sir Tristrem, p. 48. V. Tyte, adv.

TYTTAR, TITTAR, adv. Rather; sooner. Nele the Bruys come, and the Queyn, And othir ladyis fayr, and farand, Ilkane for luft off thair husband.-Thai chesyt tyttar with thaim to ta Angyr, and payn; na be thaim fra.

Barbour, ii. 518. MS.

And nane may betreyss tyttar than he That man in trowis leawté.

Ibid. v. 525. MS.

Wae worth the wicht sould set his appityte, To reid sic rolls of reprobation; But tittar mak plain proclamation, To gather all sic lybills bisselie, And in the fyre mak thair location.

Stewart, Evergreen, i. 237.

Isl. tidari, compar. from tid-r; frequentior. Tider, titter, sooner, A. Bor.

TITHING, TITHAND, s. Tidings.

How now, Panthus, quhat tything do ye bring? Doug. Virgil, 49. 53.

The trew Turture has tane with the tithandis. Honlate, i. 11.

This is the reading of the MS. where titgandis. occurs in printed copy; the transcriber having mistaken h of the old form for g.

Belg. tijding, Isl. tidende, id. TITGANDIS. V. TITHING.

To TITLE, v. n. To prate idly, S. tittle, the same with the E. v. tittle-tattle.

"Otherwise I should have at the earnest desire of the House of Guise, my old and great acquaintances, while I was residing at the court of France, titled in the Queen's ear, that her rebellious subjects, who had at their own hands, without her authority, changed their religion, should have been exemplarily punished as rebels and trayters." Melvil's Mem. Author's Address to his Son.

Under E. tattle, Seren. refers to Sw. tadl-a reprehendere; Isl. thwatt-a, nugari. Perhaps Su.G. twetalan, double-tongued, from twe, twaa, two, and tala to tell, may be a cognate term; as tattlers are generally false to both parties.

TITLAR, TITTILLAR, s. A tattler.

The tittillaris so in his eir can roun,

The innocent may get no awdience.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 136. V. the v. TITLENE, FITLING, s. The hedge-sparrow, a small bird which commonly attends the cuckoo. S. Curruca Eliotae, Gesn.

Titlinga, Titling, or Moss-cheeper, An Currucae species? Sibb. Scot. p. 22.

"The titlene follouit the goilk, ande gart hyr sing guk guk." Compl. S. p. 60.

When two persons are so intimate that the one obsequiously follows the other, it is said, "They are as grit as the gowk and the titlene;" or the names of these birds are ludicrously imposed on them.

ТО T O C

Isl. tytling-r, id. passerculus, G. Andr. Isl. tyta, goektyta, curruca, avis, in cujus nido cuculus ova sua deponere creditur, quaeque illius pullos dein alit et educat; Ihre. This learned etymologist deduces the name from Gr. TITGEVW nutrio, TITGES nutrix. Teut. tyte, however, not only signifies a chicken, but any very small bird; avis quaelibet minutior;

TITTY, s. The diminutive of sister, S. He had a wee titty that loo'd na me, Because I was twice as bonny as she.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 129. TITTY, adj. The wind is said to be titty, when forcible, or coming in gusts, S.B. from tit a stroke. V. Tyte, v. and s. TITTISH, adj. Captious, testy, ill-humoured, S.B.; apparently from the same origin.

TITTS, s. pl. Supposed to be a disease of cows, affecting their dugs.

The Teasick, the Tooth-aik, the Titts & the Tirles. Montgomerie. V. Feyk.

A.S. titt, Teut. titte, uber, mamma, mammilla.

TITUPP, s. A trigger.

"In the middes of this hous was ane ymage of bras maid in the similitude of Kenneth with ane goldin apill in his hand, with sic ingyne, that als sone as ony man maid him to throw this apill out of the hand of the ymage, the wrying of the samyn drew all the tituppis of the crosbowis vp at anis, & schot at hym that threw the apill." Bellend. Cron. B. xi. c. 10.

This is evidently from tit, tyte, a pull, a slight stroke, conjoined with the prep. up; as denoting the motion of the trigger upwards.

TO, adv. Too.

Thai war all out to fele to fycht With few folk, off a symple land. Bot quhar God helpys quhat may withstand? Barbour, xi. 201. MS.

i. e. Too many. A.S. to, nimis.

TO, adv. "When preceding a verb, part. or adj., quite, entirely, very." Gl. Wynt.

Thai fand thare mawmentis, mare and myn,

To fruschyd and to brokyn all, And castyn downe in pecis small.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 71.

Here war we first to fruschit and hard beset, With dartis and with stanis all to bet.

Doug. Virgil, 52. 41.

To bet, i. e. much hurt, overpowered. Obruimur, Virg. A.S. to beat-an, dilacerare.

This form occurs in O.E.

"Too monithes after the batel of Poyter, the cite of Basile al to shaken and rent with an yerth quake." Leland's Collectan. i. 568.

Mr. Macpherson refers to Wachter, who in his Prolegom. Sect. v. observes that Germ. zu is used as an adverb, denoting excess, also intension. The former quotes as examples, A.S. to-qwysan (l. tocwysan) to shake in pieces; to-broken quite broken; to-faegen, very glad. He also refers to Tyrwhitt in vo., who observes that "to, in composition with werbs, is generally augmentative."

But both these learned writers seem mistaken, in viewing to, as if it occurred only in one sense. It is indeed augmentative, as in to-faegen, perlaetus; and in this sense may be traced to A.S. to insuper. But it is very often disjunctive, having the force of Lat. dis. Thus, to-braecan is rendered by Lye, disrumpere, to-cwysan, not only, quatere, but dissipare; to-beatan dilacerare, diverberare, to-braedan, dilatare, to-clifian diffindere, &c. It must be admitted, however, that in some of these compounds, it is chiefly augmentative or intensive; the v. in its simple state conveying the idea; as in to-braecan and to-cliftan.

TO, shut, close, pron. tu, as Gr. v. The dore is ta, S. The door is shut.

Belg. toe, id. De duur is toe. In Belg. toe is used as an adj. Germ. zu, id. Significat clausum. sicut auf apertum. Hinc vulgo dicimus, Die thür est zu, janua clausa est; item zuthun, zumachen claudere, clausum facere. Wachter, Prolegom. Sect. v. vo. Zu.

TOCHER, Touchquhare, Tocher-Good, s. The dowry which a wife brings to her husband by marriage, S. Towgher, Cumb.

"Peace wes roborat with the Danys in this sort. King Charlis douchtir salbe geuin in mariage to Rolland. And Rolland with all the Danis sall ressaue the Cristin faith, and in the name of touchquhare sall haue al thai landis quhilkis wer namit afore Newstria." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 22.

"The first was married upon Sir William Crighton, heir to the said Lord Crighton foresaid, and got with her the land of Frendraught in tocher."

Pitscottie, p. 26.

"King James III. being of the age of twenty years, taketh to wife Margaret the King of Norroway's daughter, (otherwise the King of Denmark,) and got with her, in tocher-good, the lands of Orkney and Shetland, with all right and title of right to them, pertaining to the King of Norroway at that time." Ibid. p. 72.

Sibb., after Skinner, derives it from A.S. taecan, betaec-an, tradere, assignare. But it is a Celt. term. Ir. tochar, a dowry; perhaps originally from

Lat. douar-ium, id.

To Tocher, v. a. To give one a dowry, S. "He married her to his brother John Earl of Athole, the Black Knight of Lorn's son, and toch-ered her with the lordship of Balveny." Pitscottie, p. 56.

Tocherless, adj. Having no portion, S. Wha bids the maist, is sure to win the prize; While she that's tocherless, neglected lies. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 76.

To TO-CUM, v. n. To approach. In sic like wise Turnus was to cumyng: And guhen that Pallas saw him cum so nere, He mycht areik to him ane casting spere. Doug. Virgil, 333. 8.

A.S. to-cum-an, advenire.

TOCUM, To-cummyng, s. 1. Access, approach.

Baith here and thare Turnus the greuit sire Went on horsbak, sersand about the wall Euery dern way and secrete passage al, Gif ony entré or tocum espy He mycht for till assale the city by.

Doug. Virgil, 275. 49.

And lat vs formest haist vs to the se,
And there recounter our fais, or thay land.
Quhilk as thay fyrst set fute vpon the sand
With slyd to cummyng, half dede in affray,
Or thay there futesteppis ferme, and tak array.

Ibid. 325. 27.

2. Meeting, encounter.

And furth thay streike there lang speris on fer, Drew in there arms wyth schaftis chargeit wele far.

Tasit vp dartis, takillis, and fleand flanis, To counter the first tocum, for the nanis.

Doug. Virgil, 385. 50.

A.S. to-cyme, adventus, accessus, an arriving, approaching; Somner. Belg. toe-komste, id. In like manner Sw. tiltrade, literally, a treading to; tilgang, a going to.

TOD, s. The fox, S.

"Item of ilk daker of Otter skinnis and Tod skinnis vi. d." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 34. Edit. 1566. Sum in ane lamb-skin is a Tod.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 41.

Amang thame are mony martrikis, bevers, quhitredis, and toddis." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 8.

—Thou may reid in his halie Evangell;

"Birds hes thair nests, and tods hes thair den,

" Bot Christ Jesus, the Saviour of men,

"In all this warld hes nocht ane penny braid, "Quhairon he may repois his heavenlie head."

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 249.

The fox is vulgarly known by no other name throughout S. Yet I find no term, that has the least resemblance to it, except Isl. toa, tove, vulpes, G. Andr. tofa, Verel.

This crafty animal is often called Tod Lowrie, and simply Lowrie, q. v.

Tod's BIRDS, an evil brood, a perverse young generation; sometimes, Tods Bairns.

"Suspect ever your affectious, what ever entisement they have to cloake the selfe with: suspect ever the motioun of them, for the Devill is in them:
—Swa, they wald ever be handled as Tod's birds; for they ar aye the war of ouer great libertie."
Bruce's Eleven Serm. 1591. Sign. Y. 8. a.

"Argyle—put some 4 or 500 on Kintyre shore, to watch on Antrim's designs; the rest on the head of Lorn, to hold the islanders and those tods birds of Lochaber in some awe." Baillie's Lett. i. 159.

"The Tod's Bairns are ill to tame," S. Prov., apply'd to them who are descended of an ill parentage, or curs'd with a bad education. Such are hard to be made good or virtuous." Kelly, p. 329.

"You breed of the Tod's Bairns, if one be good," all are good," S. Prov., "spoken of a bad family, where there are none to mend another." Ibid. p. 361.

In like manner, those called "the quhelpis of the wolfis," Acts Ja. I. c. 115. Edit. 1566. are, in the title, denominated wolf birdis.

Birds, as applied to quadrupeds, may be merely a tropical use of the term, as denoting the young Not. 11.

of a fowl; especially as bairns is used in a similar manner. It deserves to be mentioned, however, that Isl. byrd has the sense of, nativitas, genus, familia; Verel.

Top and LAMBS, a game played on a perforated board, with wooden pins, S.

This game is materially the same with the E. one, called Fox and Geese, described by Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 237. 238.

Tod's Tails, s. pl. Alpine club-moss, an herb, S. Lycopodium clavatum, Linn. It seems to receive its name S. from its supposed resemblance to the tail of a fox.

To TODLE, TODDLE, v. n. 1. To walk with short steps, in a tottering way, as children do, or those who are in some degree intoxicated, S.

Than out thar come the Modiwart, Ane beist throw nature blind,

Quho fast the eirth culd scraip and scart,

Rest and refuge to find:

Quhiles dodling and todling, Vpon fowr prettie feit.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 22.

Todle and Dodle are undoubtedly synon. Doddle is given by Seren. as an obsolete E. word, corresponding to Lat. vacillare. Our term seems also equivalent, and allied, to diddle, a v. used by Quarles, although I have not met with it in any Dictionary.

And when his forward strength began to bloome, To see him diddle up and downe the roome!

O, who would thinke, so sweet a babe as this, Should ere be slaine by a false-hearted kisse!

Divine Fancies, Lib. i. 4.

The vera wee things, todlin, rin Wi' stocks out-owre their shouther.

Burns, iii. 127.

2. To purl, to move with a gentle noise, S. Cou'd—todling burns, that smoothly play O'er gowden bed, Compare wi' Birks of Indermay?

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 25.

3. It denotes the murmuring noise caused by meat boiling gently in a pot, Fife; more generally tottle, S.

A junt o' beef, baith fat and fresh, Aft in your pat be todlin!

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 67.

Isl. dudd-a, segnipes esse; Su.G. tult-a, minutis gressibus ire, ut solent decrepiti aut infantes; Ihre. Isl. tolt-a, id. Seren. expl. doddle by tulta. Exm. tolle, a slow, lazy person, tolling, slow, idle, E. totty, shaking, unsteady, seem allied. The latter is derived by Dr. Johns. from totter, which has more the appearance of being a derivative than the other.

TOFALL, TOOFALL, s. A building annexed to the wall of a larger one. It now properly denotes one, the roof of which rests on the wall of the principal building, S.

Of the Corskyrk the ilys twa, Wyth lede the south yle thekyd alsua, The north ile, and the qwere, The tofallis twa war made but were.

Wyntown, ix. 6. 126.

4 C

"The toofalls were not theeked, because they might not be overtaken this season." Spalding's Troubles, ii. 30.

TO-FALL, Too-FALL, s. The close. To-fall o' the day, the evening, S. Toofal of the night, id.

He shot them up, he shot them down, The deer but and the rae;

And he has scour'd the gude green wood Till to-fall o' the day.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 197.

But e'er the toofal of the night,

He lay a corps on the Braes of Yarrow. Ritson's S. Songs, i. 152.

Mr. Lambe views this image as drawn from a suspended canopy, so let fall as to cover what is below. V. Gl.

TOFORE, prep. Before.

And other quhilis walde scho raik on raw, Or pas tofore the altaris with fat offerandis.

Doug. Virgil, 101. 42.

A.S. to-for, ante, coram. TOFORE, adv. Before.

With thyr wourdis the sprete of Dido Quene, The quhilk tofore in luf was kendillit grene, Now all in fyre the flambe of luf furth blesis.

TOHILE, Wyntown, vi. 15. 13. Gret possessyownys thai tynt qwyte Be mysdoaris, that had delyt Pylgrynys to tak, and tohile, Or ony lele men wald despoyle.

Perhaps it should be read as two words to hile, q. to imprison; A.S. hel-an, Su.G. hel-a, occultare; A. Bor. to hele, to hyll, to conceal.

TOY, s. A head dress either of linen or woollen, that hangs down over the shoulders, worn by old women of the lower classes, S.

"The tenants wives wore toys of linen of the coarsest kind, upon their heads, when they went to church, fairs, or markets. At home, in their own houses, they wore toys of coarse plaiding." P. Tongland, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. ix. 325.

I wad na been surpris'd to spy,

You on an auld wife's flainen toy.

Burns, iii. 230. V. Mutch.

Germ. tuch denotes cloth of any kind, linen or woollen; Su.G. tyg, id. natt-tyg, a night-cap. But it seems rather from Belg. tooij-en to tire, to adorn; whence tooisel, a tire, an ornament; tooister, a tirewoman. This fashion, doubtless, when introduced, was reckoned highly ornamental. From its formidable appearance, it may be supposed that it was at first used in full dress.

To TOIR, v. a. To beat, S. toor. Tysiphone the wrekare of misdedis With quhip in hand al reddy fast hir spedis All to assale, to skurge, toir and bete. Doug. Virgil, 184. 22.

Su.G. torfw-a verberare. TOIT, s. A fit, whether of illness, or of bad humour; the same with Toutt. V. EYNDLING. TOYT, s. Toyts of Tay, the name given to the fresh water mussels found in Tay.

Now let us go, the pretious pearles a fishing. Th' occasion serveth well, while here we stay, To catch these muscles, you call toyts of Tay. Muse's Threnodie, p. 91.

Perhaps from Teut. tote, tuyt, cornu, extremitas instar cornu; Kilian.

To TOYTE, v. n. To totter like old age, S. also tot.

We've worn to crazy years thegither, We'll toyte about wi' ane anither.

Burns, iii. 145. * TOKEN, s. The name given in S. to a ticket of lead or tin, which every private christian receives as a mark of admission to the sacrament of the Supper.

The first instance, as far as I have observed, of the use of such tokens, was at the General Assembly at Glasgow 1638.

"The church gates were strictly guarded by the town, none had entrance but he who had a token of lead, declaring that he was a covenanter." Spald. ing's Troubles, i. 89. TOKIE, s. An old woman's head-dress, resembling a monk's cowl, S.B.

Fr. toque, "a fashion of bonnet, or cap, (some. what like our old courtiers velvet cap, worne ordinarily by schollers, and some old men;" Cotgr. Toc. qué, coiffed. Span. toca, Ital. tocador, a woman's night head-dress.

TOKIE, s. A fondling term applied to a child,

S.B. Germ. tocke, a baby, a puppet.

TOLL, s. A turnpike, S. V. Sir J. Sinclair's

Observ. p. 130.
TO-LOOK, TOLUIK, s. A prospect, matter of expectation; as, a puir tolook, an ill prospect as to the future, S.

"Bot heirof had our proud and vane Quene no plesour, and especially efter that her husband was deid; for (thocht sche) the to-luik of England sall allure mony wowers to me." Knox's Hist. p.

" Bodwell-had the Queen of England by her Ambassador ordinar-to be his Commer, and Mr. Robert Bruce, my Uncle, and me, being moderator of that Assembly, invited now and then to good cheer; having some great purpose and to-look in hand; but he was never luckié, nor honest to God nor man." Mr. Ja. Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 196.

A.S. to-loc-ian adspicere.

To TOLTER, v. n. To move unequally, to

So tolter quhilum did sche it to wreye, There was bot clymbe and rycht downward hye, And sum were eke that falling had sore, There for to clymbe thair corage was no mores. King's Quair, C. v. 13.

Perhaps there is an inversion, for, "so did she at times writhe herself to make it totter."

Su.G. tult-a, vacillare; Lat. tolutar-is ambling. TOLTER, TOLTIR, adj. Unstable, in a state of vacellation.

For sothe it is, that, on her tolter quhele . Every wight cleverith in his stage. And failyng foting oft quhen hir lest rele,

Sum up, sum doun, is non estate nor age Ensured more, the prynce than the page.

King's Quair, i. 9.

Before his face ane apill hang also, Fast at his mouth, apon a toltir threde, Quhen he gapit, it rokkit to and fro, And fled as it refusit hym to fede.

This is part of the description given of Tantalus, in the Tractic of Orpheus kyng, Edinburgh, 1508.

TO-LUCK, s. Boot, what is given above bargain, S. mends, synon. I got a penny to the to-luck.

This has originated from the vulgar idea of giving luck to a bargain; like Lucks-penny, q. v.

TOME, s. A line for a fishing-rod, including the whole length, S.O. Cumb. A snood denotes only one length of the hair, from knot to knot.

TOMMY NODDIE, Tom-Noddy. The Puffin, a bird, S. Orkn. The Tam Norie of the Bass. "Puffin, Tom-Noddy." P. Luss, Dunbart. Statist. Acc. xvii. 251.

"The Puffin (alea arctica, Lin. Syst.), the coulterneb, or tommy noddie of this place, is seen very often on our rocks; it builds in holes under-ground, and lays but one egg." Barry's Orkney, p. 305.

TO-NAME, s. A name added, for the sake of distinction, to one's surname; or used instead

Thay theifs that steillis and tursis hame, Ilk ane of them has ane to-name;

Will of the Lawis, Hab of the Schawis: To mak bair wawis, Thay thinke na schame.

Maitland of Lethington, ap. Scott's Minstrelsy, I. Introd. CLIII.

"Owing to the marchmen being divided into large clans, bearing the same sirname, individuals were usually distinguished by some epithet, derived from their place of residence, personal qualities, or descent. Thus, every distinguished moss-trooper had, what is here called a to-name, or nom de guerre, in addition to his family name." Ibid. N. TONE, part. pa. Taken.

Quhairfoir I counsall every man, that he With lufe nocht in the feindis net be tone.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 92. TONGUE-FERDY, adj. Loquacious, glib of the tongue, Ang.

Su.G. tung lingua, and faerdig, paratus. Many words of the same formation occur in Su.G.; as spakferdig, meek, peaceable, raettferdig, hogferdig, &c. Ihre thinks, that all the words, which have this termination, acknowledge A.S. ferhth mens, animus, as their origin. If this be the case as to some of them, others seem more nearly allied to Teut. vaerdigh, expeditus, promtus, agilis. Laett, Ihre.

TONGUE-RAIK, s. Elocution, S. V. RAIK.

To TOOBER, v. a. To beat, to strike, S.O. tabour, E. and Loth.

Fr. tabour-er to strike or bump on the posteriors, q. as on a drum; from tabour a drum.

Toober, s. A quarrel, S.O.

TOOFAL, s. Toofal of the night, nightfall, S. V. To-FALL.

TOOLYE, s. A broil. To Toolye, v. n. To quarrel. V. Tullyie.

TOOM, adj. Empty. V. Tume.

To TOOT, Tour, v. a. To blow or sound a horn, S.

"Sir William Hamilton of Preston,-and the other heritors of Prestonpans parish, are convened for the riot mentioned supra,—for suffering Brown then preaching and praying to be affronted by boys, who touted horns," &c. Fountainhall's Decis. i. 182.

O lady, I heard a wee horn toot, And it blew wonder clear.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 172.

Su.G. tut-a, Isl. taut-a, Dan. tud-er, A.S. thutan, theot-an, thiot-an, ululare; Germ. dud-en, sonare. Su.G. tuta i horn, to blow a horn, Belg. toet-en, Teut. tuyt-en, id. tuyte, a horn; Germ. dud-horn, a sounding horn. It seems to be the same Belg. v. which also signifies to buzz: tuyting der ooren, a buzzing in the ears.

Ihre observes, that Isl. taut-a is almost always used to denote the sound made with horns, although it primarily respects the howling of wild beasts. Olaus Rudbeck refers to Chald. tit, which signifies both a horn, and the sound made by it.

To Toot, v. n. To make a plaintive noise, as when a child cries loud and mournfully, S.

Toot, Tout, s. The blast of a horn or trum-

The rattling drum and trumpet's tout Delight young swankies that are stout.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 369.

"A new tout in an old horn;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 7.

Touting Horn, a horn for blowing, S.

" Every individual was accoutred with a large club, and, if possible, a touting horn (the horn of an ox perforated at the small end), by blowing on which they made a loud, and not altogether a discordant sound." Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 2. Note. To TOOT, v. n. To express dissatisfaction or contempt.

This v., as well as the E. interj. tut, seem formed from the sound.

TOOTHFU', s. To tak a toothfu', to take a moderate quantity of strong liquor, S.

Whan night, owre yirth, begins to fa', Auld gray-hair'd carles, fu' willin, TOOT-NET, s. A large fishing-net anchored, Ang. A man stands in a coble, or small fishing-boat; and, when he sees the fish enter the net, calls the fishers to haul it. He is designed the Tootsman, pron. tutsman. This net is used only, it is supposed, in the sea, or in rivers where the tide flows.

"The fishing-tackle formerly employed was of various kinds. Sometimes it consisted of a common moveable net or siene; sometimes of a toot-net, much larger and stronger than the former, extending to an indefinite length from the beach into the water, and secured at its extremity by an anchor." Case in the House of Lords, A. 1805. Charles Gray of Carse, Respondent.

This word is evidently of Belg. origin. For tootebel is defined, "a certain square net;" Sewel. Perhaps as this species of net projects so far, the term is allied to Teut. tote, rostrum.

TOP OUR TAILL, adv. Topsyturvy.

The pryd of princis, withowttyn faill,
Garris all the warld rin top our taill.

Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 97.

TOP ANNUELL, a certain annuity paid from lands or houses.

In the Acts of Mar. 29 May 1551. c. 10. three kinds of annuells are mentioned, which Skene doubt-fully expl. in the following manner.

Ground annuell is esteemed to be quhen the ground or propertie of onie lande bigged or vnbigged, is disponed and annalied for ane annuell to be payed to the annalier thereof, or to ane vther person, sik as ony Chaiplaine or Priest. Top annuell, is ane certaine dewtie, given and disponed furth of ony bigged tenement, or land, of the quhilk tenement the propertie remains with the disponer, & he is only oblished to paye the said annuell. Few annuell is ather when the few maill, or dewtie is disponed as ane yeirlie annuel: or quhen the land, or tenement is sette in few-ferme heretablie, for ane certaine annuel to be payed nomine feudifirmae." De Verb. Sign. vo. Annuell.

In Acts, Edit. 1566. tope is the orthography; Tope annuellaris, Fol. 149, b.: toppe, Skene.

Erskine has observed, that "the very meaning of these words, Sir John Skene, not above forty years after the statute was enacted, professes himself utterly ignorant of." Instit. B. ii. T. 3. § 52.

"The case being there of tenements within burgh, the feu-annual," according to Stair, "is that which is due by the reddendo of the property of the ground before the house was built; ground-annual is a distinct several annualrent, constitute upon the ground, before the house was built; and the top-annualrent is out of the house." Instit. B. ii. T. 5. § 7.

It is possible, that the term top may be equivalent to chief or principal, as it is often used, in this sense, S. as if it were an adj. These annuitants may be thus denominated, because the annuity alone is disponed to them, whereas the property remains with the disponer. It may have some reference to L.B. feudum capitale, Fr. fief en chef; the person, giving the annuity, still retaining his right to the lands; only with the burden of paying a certain sum annually, in consequence of his act of disposition.

It may be observed, however, that in O.Fr. we find the phrase, Terre estant en toppe, "waste because unhusbanded, or untilled,) ground;" Cotgr.

L.B. topa, destructio, ruina vel alienatio; Du Cange. Carpentier denies the justness of this definition; observing that it is synon. with Vastum, i. e. waste. Ager incultus, terra pascendis animalibus destinata, a veteri Gallico Tope & Toppe, eadem notione. He shews that Tope was used in this sense, A. 1480.

I hesitate whether this correction be just. Topa is certainly used, as expl. by Du Cange. It seems, indeed, properly to refer to buildings: Et si qua alienata vel in ruinam seu topam deducta fuerint, ad debitam statum deducam. Jurament. Canonic. Belnens. in Burgundia.

To TOPE, v. a. To oppose.

"The King nominated one day, in face of parliament, the Earl of Morton; while Argyle topes this nomination, as of a man unmeet, because of irresponsibleness to the law for his debts." Baillie's Lett. i. 329.

Perhaps the S. phrase is allied, to be on one's tap, to assault him, either with hands, or with the tongue. TO-PUTTER, s. This most nearly corresponds to E. task-master.

"Ill workers are ay good to-putters;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 43.

TOR (of a chair), s. Perhaps the round, or the semicircular arm of a chair of state.

"Things thus put in ordour the Quene cam forth, and with no litle worldly pompe was placed in the chair, having twa faythfull supposts, the Maister of Maxwell upoun the one Tor, and Secretare Lethingtoun upoun the vther Tor of the chair, quhareupoun they waytit diligently, all the tyme of that accusatioun, sumetyme the one occupying hir ear, sumtyme the uther." Knox's Hist. p. 340.

Fr. tour, Teut. toer, circulus.

TORE (of a saddle), s. The pommel, the forepart of which is somewhat elevated, S.

A horse he never doth bestride Without a pistol at each side: And without other two before, One at either sadle tore.

Colvil's Mock Poem, i. 41.

A.S. tor a tower, an eminence. To TORE, v. a. To tear.

Like so as quhare Jouis big foule the erne, With hir strang tallouns, and hir punsis sterne, Lichtand had claucht the litil hynd calf ying, Toring the skyn, and made the blude out spring.

Doug. Virgil, 465. 40.

Rudd. is inclined to view this as the same with toir. But this seems formed from A.S. teor-an rum-

TORFEIR, TORFER, s. Hardship, difficulty:
Than said he loud upone loft, "Lord, will ye lyth,

"Ye sal nane torfeir betyde, I tak upone hand,
"Na mysliking have in hart, nor have ye na dout."

Gawan and Gol. iii. 18.

It occurs in MS. Libr. Royal College of Physicians, marked H. iii. 12, supposed to be of the age of Rob. Bruce, or prior to it.

In thair speling ful wele thai spedde; Thoh that thai wel sped als I saie, Ful mani a torfer sufferid thaie; Na lefte thai for na grame of man Bot werande on the wrang thai wan.

This would seem merely Isl. torfaer-a, iter difficile et impeditum, Verel. p. 257. from Tor, a particle in composition denoting difficulty and trouble in accomplishing any thing, and faer-a to go.

To TORFEL, TORCHEL, v. n. "To pine away, to die;" Gl. Sibb. Torfle, to decline in health, A. Bor.

Sibb. derives it from Isl. thurk-a, Su.G. tork-a, siccare, arescere, abstergere, Isl. thorr aridus, siccus. Perhaps it may signify, to be in a state of difficulty or trouble; Isl. torfellde, torvellde, difficilis, arduus; apparently from tor, as in Torfeir, and velld efficio, valeo, potis sum.

TORYT, Wallace, vii. 1240, Perth Edit. Leg. taryt, as in MS. i. e. tarried.

To TORN, v. a. To turn.

The cattel eik beheld thay raik on raw,— Bayth squeil and low in thay ilk plentuous gatis, Quhilk sum tyme hecht Caryne fare and large, Quhare the housis war like ane torned barge. Doug. Virgil, 254. 42.

TORN BUT.

And the King that angry wes, For he his men saw fle him fra, Said then, 'Lordingis, sen it is swa 'That vre rynnys again ws her,

Gud is we pass off thar daunger,
Till God ws send eftsonys grace;

And yeyt may fall, giff thai will chace,

Quyt thaim torn but sum dele we sall.

Barbour, ii. 438. MS.

Instead of combat in Pink. and other Edit. "It may happen, that we shall in some degree retaliate on our enemies for the victory they have obtained, if they attempt to pursue us." The most probable conjecture I can form as to the phrase is, that it is equivalent to turn about; Fr. tourn-er to turn and but in but a but, on equal terms.

TORNE, s. A turn, an action done to one, whether favourable or injurious.

And in remembrance of this ill torne, Thay can his templis wourschip and adorne.

Doug. Virgil, 480. 13.

TORRIE, s. A term applied to peas roasted in the sheaf, Fife; apparently from Lat. torreo, q. what is scorched.

TORRY-EATEN, adj. Torry-eaten land, poor moorish soil, when exhausted by cropping, and appearing puffed, and very bare, having only scattered tufts of sheep's fescue, S.B.

TORRIS, pl.

The king faris with his folk, our firthis and fellis,—

Withoutin beilding of blis, of bern, or of byre: Bot torris, and tene wais, teirfull quha tellis.

Gawan and Gol. i. 3.

Does this mean towers (Teut. torre turris) and mournful ways? Or shall we view tene as an error for teme, q. empty walls?

TORT, part. pa. Tortured, distorted.

Now sal he perische, and now sal he de; And sched his gentyl blude so pacient, In greuous panys, be Troianis tort and rent. Doug. Virgil, 340. 34.

Lat. tort-us.

TOSCH, Tosche, adj. Neat, trim, S.

—So as quhilom the mekil tosche fir tre
On Erimanthus the mont of Archadé,
Or in the wod of Ida with ane sound,
Vp by the rutis rent, ruschis to the ground.

Doug. Virgil, 142. 46.

As cava pinus is the phrase in Virg., and the reading in MS., according to Rudd., costhe; it seems very doubtful what had been the word, as written by Doug. Bosse would have been most natural.

I gang ay fou clean and fou tosh, As a' the neighbours can tell.

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 99.

Sibb. mentions O.Fr. tousé clipped, polled, pared round. Arm. touz-er is to cut, q. to make trim. But as Doss, S.O. is used as synon. with tosch, it may perhaps be allied to Belg. dos array, doss-en to clothe; transferred, from neatness in clothing, to a trim appearance in whatever respect.

TOSCHEODERACHE, s. The deputy of a Mair of fee; also, the name given to the office itself, in our old laws. V. MAIR, MAIRE. TOSIE, adj. 1. Tipsy, intoxicated in some degree, S. synon. ree.

2. Intoxicating, S.

A good true Scot, who kept a stabling there,— Frae be't he saw them, came within a blink, And brought them wealth of meat and tosic drink. Hamilton's Wallace, p. 41.

Mod. Sax. dosig, giddy; Isl. dus, drunken. Su.G. dus is used in relation to those who are addicted to tippling. Isl. tos-a, to babble, to talk idly; tos, babbling.

TOSTIT, part. adj. A term vulgarly used, as signifying that one is tossed with severe affliction, S.B.

TOT, s. A fondling name given to a child, S. Wow, Jenny! can there greater pleasure be, Than see sic wee tots toolying at your knee; When a' they ettle at, their greatest wish, Is to be made of, and obtain a kiss?

Gentle Shep. Ramsay's Works, ii. 81. O waes me! for our blooming tots!

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 41.

Perhaps contr. from totum, a term often applied to a child, from its diminutive size, in allusion to the Te totum used by children; or from S. tot, to totter, in allusion to the motion of children. V. TOYTE. It may, however, be an ancient term, allied to Isl. tott-a, leviter sugere, applied to infants; G. Andr. p. 241. evidently akin to Teut. tote, mamilla.

TOTHIR, TOTHYR, adj. 1. The other, S. pron.

The tothir twa fled to thar hors agayne.

Wallace, i. 416. MS.

The tane the tothire wald have wndwne.

Wyntown, vii. 8, 76.

Tother is used in the same sense O.E.

Concupiscentia carnis men called the elder mayde,

And Couetis of eyes called was the tother.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 53, a.

His sonnes thei ne wald, the ton no the tother.

R. Brunne, p. 90.

2. The second.

For-thi haldis clerkis be there sawe, That custwme is the tothir lawe.

Wyntowu, viii. 4. 256.

We still say, Custom's a second nature, Prov. S. Bot fra the stok down ewynlykly Discendand persownys lynealy In the tothir, or the thryd gre, Newu, or Pronevw sulf be.

Wyntown, viii. 3. 115.

Tother occurs in the same sense, R. Brunne, p. 169.

At none the tother day thei sauh fer in the se A grete busse & gay, fulle hie of saile was he.

3. It seems to be sometimes used indefinitely, in the sense of another, or posterior.

The Kyng apon the tothyr day Gan till his priwe menye say, &c.

Barbour, iv. 518. MS.

Notwithstanding its resemblance to Gr. hurre-os, the second, this seems merely other with t, or as some think, the, prefixed, after a vowel; like ta for a. TOTTIS, s.

Na dentie geir this Doctor seikis; Of tottis russet his ryding breikis.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 327. Perhaps q. taits, as denoting the refuse or coarsest locks of wool; Su.G. totte, a handful of flax or wool

To TOTTLE, v. n. A term used to denote the noise made by any substance, when boiling gently, S.

In summer time a piece fat beef to tottle,— Some pocket-money; these can please my mind. A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 100.

It is used, perhaps improperly, as a v. a. Imprimis, then, a haggis fat,
Weel tottl'd in a seething pat,
Wi' spice an' ingans weel ca'd thro',
Had help'd to gust the stirrah's mow.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 78. V. Todle, v. To TOVE, v. n. To talk familiarly, prolixly, and cheerfully, S. To tove and crack, to carry on a free conversation with great glee, without regard to the lapse of time; often applied to one whose animal spirits are elevated by strong drink.

It may be allied to Belg. toov-en, to tarry, Teut. toev-en, prolixe accipere; Kilian. But it has great appearance of being originally the same with O.E. tave, insanire, delirare; Jun. Etym. Germ. tob-en, Belg. doov-en, Alem. top-un, id. Hence, Tovie, adj. Tipsy; a low term, synon. with Tosie, q. v. perhaps, q. loquacious, in consequence of drinking.

TOUK, s. A hasty pull, a tug, S. "Scot. the word is used for a touch, pull; as, to take a touk of any thing, i. e. have a touch of it;" Rudd.

Sibb. properly refers to A.S. teog-an, trahere. He also mentions Teut. tucken as synon. But it signifies to touch; also, to strike. We may add MoesG. tiug-a, Su.G. tog-a, trahere. It may be observed, however, that A.S. twicc-an, vellicare, precisely expresses the idea conveyed by our term. To TUCK, v. a. To beat.

"Aberdeen carefully caused tuck drums through the town, charging all men to be in readiness with their best arms," &c. Spalding's Troubles, ii. 166. То Тоик, Тиск, v. n. To emit a sound, in consequence of being beaten.

The armies met, the trumpet sounds, The dandring drums alloud did touk.

Battle Harlaw, Evergreen, i. 85.
"Trumpets sound, and drums tuck." Spalding's Troubles, i. 167. V. the s.

Touk, s. 1. A stroke, a blow.

Hercules it smytis with ane mychty touk, Apoun the richt half for to mak it jouk. Doug. Virgil, 249. 23.

2. Touk of drum, beat of drum, S. Gl. Sibb.

In this sense, evidently from Teut, tuck-en ice

In this sense, evidently from Teut. tuck-en icere; as Sw. trumbslag, drumming, from trumb, and slace to strike.

TOUNDER, s. Tinder.

Than vp to Mars in hy we haistit vs,
Wounder hote, and dryer than the tounder.
His face flammand, as fyre richt furious;
His bost and brag mair aufull than the thunder,
Maid all the heuin most like to schaik in sunder.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 238.

Alem. tundere, Isl. tunthere, id. The term seems derived from tinthra, MoesG. tand-jan, A.S. tendan, to kindle; whence also Teind, a spark, q. v.

TOUSIE, Towzie, adj. 1. Disordered, dishevelled; as, a tousie head, one that has not been combed, S. Touslie is sometimes used.

2. Rough, shaggy, S.

His breast was white, his towzie back Weel clad wi' coat o' glossy black. Burns, iii. 3. V. Tousle.

To Tousle, v. a. 1. To put into disorder, to dishevel; often, to rumple, S.

Frae Gudame's mouth auld warld tale they hear.—

O' gaists that win in glen and kirk-yard drear, Whilk touzles a' their tap, and gars them shak wi fear. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 57.

2. To handle roughly, as dogs do each other.

With warwolfes and wild cats thy weird be to wander.

Dragleit through dirty dubs and dykes, Tousled and tuggled with town tykes. Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 16.

Tussel is used for struggle, N. and S. of E. Grose, Prov. Gl. This term is adopted by P. Pindar.

Thus Envy, the vile Hag, attacks my rhymes, Swearing they shall not peep on distant times; But violent indeed shall be the tussel.

Royal Tour, Proem.

It seems doubtful, if this has been formed from E. touse, expl. "to pull, to tear, to haul, to drag;" Johns. Germ. tusel-n signifies to beat. But the S. term has more analogy to Isl. tusk-a, luctari, tusk, lucta lenis et jocosa, G. Andr. p. 243. as it is most generally used to express the disorder of one's dress in consequence of playful or wanton struggling. It may be a dimin. from the Isl. v., as the adj. is most commonly used, wanting the l. V. Taissle.

Tousle, Touzle, s. Rough dalliance, S.

For tho' I be baith blyth and canty, I ne'er get a touzle at a'.

R. Galloway's Poems, p. 214.
To TOUT, v. a. To sound a horn. V. Toor.
To TOUT, Toor, v. n. To drink copiously, to take large draughts, S. pron. toot.

They'll ban fu' sair the time That e'er they toutit aff the horn, Which wambles thro' their weym

Wi pain that day.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 52.

For now our gentles gabbs are grown sae nice, At thee they toot, an' never spear my price. Ibid. p. 74.

TOUT, s. 1. A copious draught, S. 2. A drinking match, S.B. Gl. Shirr.

To TOUT, Town, v. a. 1. To toss, to put in disorder, S.

To spill the bed it war a pene, Quod he, the laird wald not be fane To find it towtit and ourtred.

Chron. S. P. iii. 201.

2. Metaph. to throw into disorder by quibbling or litigation.

"They came in a loving & well willing manner to enquire, but we perceive the purpose is but to canvass and tout our matters here a while, that hereafter men of litle skill and less conscience may decern into them as they please," &c. Mr. James Melvill's MS. Mem. p. 298.

3. To teaze, to vex, S.

This might seem allied to Isl. tuatt-a, to tease (wool), Seren. vo. Teaze; or Su.G. tugt-a to chastise: But V. the s.

Tour, s. 1. A fit of illness; an ailment of a transient kind, S.

Ir. tochd signifies a fit or trance. But our term greatly resembles the use of Belg. tocht, togt, wind, air; also, an expedition, a voyage. De togt van dedeur, the wind that comes into the door. Zy had sen zwaare togt, She had a sore bout; Sewel. It is often said, of one who has been pretty severely ill, He had a sair tout, S.

2. A transient displeasure, a fit of ill humour, Ang. It seems to be the same which was anciently written toit, toyt, expl. "freak," Gl. Everg.

Were he ay sae, he then wad ay be kind; But then anither tout may change his mind. Shirrefs' Poems, p. 42. TOUTTIE, adj. 1. Throwing into disorder; as, a touttie wind, a boisterous wind that tosses one who is exposed to it, S.

This is much the same with Belg. togtig, windy.

2. One whose temper is very irritable, who is easily put in disorder, S.

It may be observed that Belg. togt, which in sing. signifies air, wind, in pl. (togt-en) denotes the passions. Zyne togten bedwingen, to refrain one's passions; q. to dwang ane's touts, S.

TOW, s. 1. A rope of any kind; as, the belltow, the rope for ringing a bell; the tows of a ship, the cables, S.

His towes, I find, hes bene so fyne, For all the stormes hes bene sensyne, His schip come never on the schalde, But stack still on the ancker halde.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 314.
"The anchor-tow abideth fast within the vail."

Rutherford's Lett. Ep. 15.

Su.G. tog, Isl. tog, taug, Belg. touw, restis, funis. Sw. ankartog, a cable. Ihre derives tog from tog-a ducere, as appearing properly to denote the ropes by which nets, and things of the same kind, are drawn.

L.B. tugg-ae, ropes or harness, or traces for drawing. Cowel, in like manner, deduces this from A.S. getog-an, to tug, or pull, or draw.

Sibb. mentions town as used in the same sense with tow; Sw. toem, habena.

2. A halter, S.

And whoso yields alive, this tow portends, Streight must he hing, where did our dearest friends

Who suffered for the truth.——

Muses Threnodie, p. 134.

To TOW, v. n. To give way, to fail, to perish, S.B. It is used with respect to both persons and things. In the former acceptation, it denotes death. Perhaps from Alem. douu-en, Su.G. do, to die.

To TOWEN, v. a. To tire, to weary out, Fife. TOWMONT, Towmon, Tomond, s. A year; corr. of twelve-month, used in the same sense, S.

An' young weel fill'd an' daft are, Wha winna be sae crous an' bauld For a lang towmont after.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 27. Till this time tomond I'se indent,

Fill this time tomond I'se indent, Our claiths of dirt will sa'r.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 260.
Towmon, Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 295.

Townontell, s. A cow of a year old, Ayrs. To TOWN, Town, v. a. To tame; as, to town an unruly horse, Loth. Berwicks.

Ye towin'd him tightly; I commend ye for't; His bleeding snout gae me nae little sport. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 151.

It may be allied to Su.G. toeg-a to draw with a rope; or to Isl. thion-a, laborare. It is in favour of the latter etymon, that town properly respects taming by means of hard work.

TOWNNYS, pl. Tuns, large casks or barrels. Syne off he townnys the heids out strak; A foule mellé than gan he mak.

Barbour, v. 403. MS.

TRACED, adj. Laced. A traced hat is a hat bound with gold lace, S.

Perhaps from Fr. tress-er, to weave, to twist.
To TRACHLE, TRAUCHLE, v. a. 1. To draggle, to trail; to abuse from carelessness or slovenliness, S.

"That night the Laird—suffered the souldiers to come a land and ly all together to the number of thirteen score, for the most part young beardless men, silly, trauchled, and hungered." Mr. James Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 186. This respects some of the soldiers who sailed on board the Spanish Armada, 1587.

It seems doubtful, whether it be allied to Belg. treyl-en trahere, whence E. trail; or formed from Teut. traegh-en, pigrescere, tardescere; Alem. dregel-en, per incuriam aliquid perdere.

2. To dishevel.

44 Hyr hayr, of the cullour of fyne gold, vas feltrit & trachlit out of ordour, hingand ouer hyr schuldirs." Compl. S. p. 106.

3. To drudge, to overtoil. I'm trachlit with sair wark, S.B. I am overfatigued with hard labour.

In this sense it would seem allied to Sw. traal-a, duro labore exerceri. V. TARVEAL.

TRACK, s. Feature, lineament, S. Belg. trek, id. from trekk-en to delineate.

It is evident that this v. has been formed from drag-a to draw. For what is delineation, but drawing in a metaph. sense? Hence Draught is used as synon. with Track.

TRACK-BOAT, s. A boat used on a canal, S. Belg. trek-schuyt, id. from trekk-en to draw, because it is drawn by a horse.

TRACK-POT, s. A tea-pot, S. i. e. a pot for masking, from Belg. trekk-en to draw. De thee wordt getrekken; the tea is infused.

TRACTIUE, s. A treatise.

This is the title of Mr. Quintine Kennedy's (Commendatar of the Abbey off Crosraguell) work.

"Ane compendius Tractive conforme to the Scripturis of almychtic God, ressoun, and authoritie, declaring the nerrest, and only way, to establische the conscience of ane christiane man in all materis (quhilks ar in debate) concerning faith and religioun;" A. 1558.

Fr. traieté, id.

TRAD, s. Track, course in travelling or sail-

The Kyng hym-self in-to that quhyle Wytht hys nawyn, that sawfyd was, Wychtly wan owt of the presse, And tuk the se hamwart the way, Thare trad haldand til Orknay.

Thare than tuk land Haco that Kyng.

Wyntown, vii. 10. 212.

Mr. Macpherson refers to C.B. trawd, A.S. trode, O.Dan. Isl. tradk. The latter is expl. by Verel. Vestigiorum multiplicata impressio. Isl. troeda, proprie terra, quod teratur et calcetur, G. Andr. p. 241. q. a beaten path; from trod-a, to tread. To this Cumb. trod, a footpath, evidently corresponds.

TRAGET, TRIGGET, s. A trick, a deceit, S. triget, Rudd.

Thou swelth denourare of tyme vnrecouerabill,—

Of thy tragetis quhat toung may tell the tribyll?

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 98. 10. Rudd. derives it from Fr. trigaut, "a man that by tricks or slights makes a business hard to be decided." Sibb. views it as a corr. of tragedy.

TRAY, s. Trouble, vexation, loss.

—He tuk purpos for to rid
With a gret ost in Scotland;
For to weng him with stalwart hand,
Off tray, of trawaill, and of tene,

That done tharin till him had bene.

Barbour, xviii. 233. MS.

They wirk him mekle tray and tene.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 154. st. 7. Treie, O.E. id. rendered by Hearne tryal, but not so properly.

Was neuer prince, I wene, that I writen of fond,

More had treie & tene, than he had for his lond, In Scotlond & in Wales, in Gasconie also.

R. Brunne, p. 235.
A.S. treg, trege, vexatio, contumelia, damnum; treg-ian, vexare, Su.G. traeg-a, id. traege, Alem. trege, dolor. Isl. traeg-a lugere.

To TRAIK, v. n. To go idly from place to place, S.

Hence trakit, sore fatigued; perhaps implying that one is also draggled.

In winter now for purtith thou art trakit.

Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 54. st. 9.

Traikit-like expresses the appearance that one makes, when draggled and fatigued, in consequence of ranging about.

Belg. treck-en, vertreck-en, to travel, to engage in an expedition. Sw. traek-a, niti, cum molestia incedere; Seren. vo. Trace. The adj. might seem allied to Sw. traeck, dirt, filth; traeck-a to dirty one's self.

TRAIK, s. 1. A plague, a mischief, a disaster, applied both to things and persons.

—Suddainlie ane cruel pest and traik,
So that cornes and frutis gois to wraik,
Throw the corrupit are, and cours of heuin,
Ane dedelie yere, fer wers than I can neuin,
Fell in our membris with sic infectioun,
Was na remede, cure, nor correctioun.

Doug. Virgil, 72. 5.

Bot al this time I bid na mare, I wys, Saif that this wensche, this vengeabil pest or traik,

Be bet down dede by my wound and scharp straik.

Ibid. 393. 49.

It is sometimes used, in profane language, like meikle Sorrow, apparently as a designation for the devil.

The meikle Trake come o'er their snouts. A. Nicol's Poems, 1739, p. 22.

From the same origin with Tray, q. v.

2. Used to denote the flesh of sheep that have died of disease or by accident, S.

. To TRAIK, v. n. To be in a declining state of

It is said of one, who is very durable; "He's the gear that winna traik;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 33. If I mistake not, this Prov. is also applied to one, who is of so little use to society, that his death would not be regretted; as it is generally supposed that persons of this description survive others whose lives are far more valuable.

"The English bodies could not endure to be prisoned in ships .- Had we in time foreseen to have fortified Inchkeith and Inchcolm, as we did thereafter Inchgarvie, they could not have lain in our frith one month; yet, notwithstanding of all the comfort the air and water of these isles could furnish them, many of them died; and when they went home, the most part of all who remained traiked pitifully." Baillie's Lett. i. 166.

This might seem allied to Su.G. trak-a, cum difficultate progredi; tra viribus defici. But it is most probable, that the v. has been formed from the s., the idea being transferred from sheep to men.

TRAILSYDE, adj. So long as to trail on the

2. v. n. To pledge faith, by entering into a truce. Syne thai traist in the feild, throw trety of

Put up thair brandis sa braid, burly and bair. Gawan and Gol. iv. 10.

Isl. treist-a, Su.G. traest-a, Germ. trost-en, confidere.

As the Isl. and Su.G. verbs signify both to dare, and to trust, this points out the radical affinity between durst, the pret. of dure, and trust. What is during, but confiding in one's own strength, or means of defence; and what is trusting to another, but daring to depend on him?

Ihre has accordingly observed, that the various Northern verbs, signifying to trust, seem all to conspire in Su.G. toeras audere; and that jug toers, and jug troester, equally mean, I dare. It is singular, he adds, that the same metathesis, which is observable in the letters here, may be traced to a very early priod. The Greeks promiscuously use bapros (irom fage sir) and fearos, audacia; fagoviw and feaovin, amorem reduc. He also refers to MoesG. thruf t-jan, to trust, as bearing an obvious analogy to daur-an to dare, whence ga-daurst-an, he durst, audebat. V. Traist, adj.

Hence the forensic term tram-recht, the liberty of inserting a roof into a wall belonging to a neighbour. MoesG. thrams, a tree.

2. A beam or bar.

46 By order, the hangman brake his sword between the crosses of Aberdeen, and betwixt the gallows trams standing there." Spalding's Troubles. i. 290.

3. Used metaph., in a ludicrous sense for leg or limb; as, lang trams, long limbs, S.

TRAMALT NET, corr. from E. trammel. Into thair tramalt net, thay fangit ane fische. Mair nor ane quhale, worthy of memorie: Of quhom thay have had mony dainty dische, Be quhome thay ar exaltit to greit glorie, That maruellous monstour callit Purgatorie. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 136.

TRAMORT, s. A corpse, a dead body.

Thair wes with him an ugly sort, And mony stinkand fowll tramort.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 29. V. also p. 94. The last part of the word is undoubtedly from Fr. mort dead, or Germ. mord death. Su.G. tra signifies to consume, to rot, tabescere; q. a dead body in a state of consumption.

To TRAMP, v. a. 1. To trample, to tread with force, S.

Behald, how your awin brethren now laitly In Dutchland, Ingland, Denmark and Norroway, Ar trampit down with thair hypocrisie, And as the snaw ar moltin clene away. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 75.

"Tramp on a snail, and she'll shoot out her horns;" Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 30., a proverb founded on the vulgar idea, that the telescopical eyes of the snail are horns.

2. To tread, in reference to walking, S. Frae this the human race may learn Reflection's honey'd draps to earn; Whether they tramp life's thorny way, Or thro' the sunny vineyard stray. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 32.

To TRAMP, v. n. 1. To tread with a heavy step, S.

Su.G. tramp-a, cum pedum aliqua supplosione incedere.

2. To walk; as opposed to any other mode of travelling; a low sense, S.

I've trampit mony a weary fit, And mony a tumble did I get, Sin I set out frae hame, jo.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 237.

TRAMP, s. 1. The act of striking the foot suddenly downwards, S.

2. An excursion; used metaph. It properly signifies a pedestrian one, S.

If haply knowledge, on a random tramp,
Had shor'd them with a glimmer of his lamp,—
Plain, dull Simplicity stept kindly in to aid them.

Burns, iii. 58.

TRANCE, TRANSE, s. 1. A passage within a house, S.

" "A passage from a stair case." Sir J. Sinclair's Observ. p. 169. He derives it from Lat. transitus.. Perhaps it is rather immediately from the v. transite to pass.

2. Also used metaph.

"If death—were any other thing but a friendly dissolution, and a change, not a destruction of life, it would seem a hard voyage to go through such a sad and dark trance,—as is the wages of sin." Rutherford's Lett. P. ii. ep. 47.

To TRANE, v. n. To go from home, to travel.

Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 52. Su.G. tren-a incedere, gressus facere; trant, incessus; O. Teut. trant gressus, gradus; trant-en, gradi lentè.

To TRANONT, TRANOWNT, TRANOWNT, TRANENT, TRAWYNT, v. n. 1. To march suddenly in a clandestine manner; often, to steal a march under night.

And quhen he hard the certanté,

Houlate, ii. 16. MS.

In printed copy, trawyntit.

2. To march quickly, without including the idea of stratagem or secrecy.

The scry sone raiss, the bauld Loran was dede. Schyr Garrat Heroun tranontit to that stede, And all the host assemblit him about.

Wallace, iv. 672. MS.

3. To return, to turn back.

Tranountyt north apon a gudlye wyss.

Ibid. viii. 1560. MS.

It is used in the same sense, as denoting a retrograde march, Ibid. ii. 52. MS. tranoyntyt.

Mr. Macpherson says; "Travent or tranoint in B. Harry—seems a different word." But there appears to be no ground for this idea. The passages he refers to, are these quoted above. Could we suppose travent, or trawynt, the original orthography, the term would in form much resemble Teut. trouwanten, otiosè vagari; Fr. truander, to beg, to play the rogue; from Teut. trouwant, Germ. drabant, satelles, stipator, a retainer. But what affinity would there be in signification, unless we supposed that the reference were to the clandestine arts practised by such wanderers? It seems rather connected with Fr. traine a snare, an ambush; especially from their being conjoined in the passage quoted from the Houlate.

TRANOWINTYN, s. A stratagem of war; without any regard to marching.

We ar the fox: and that the fyscher,
That stekis forouth ws the way.
That wene we may na get away,
Bot rycht quhar that ly.—
—Our fayis for this small tranowintyn
Wenys weill we sall prid us swa,
That we planely on hand sall ta
To giff thaim opynly battaill:
Bot at this tyme thair thoucht sall faill.

i. e. Now resolving, then hesitating.

Fr. tranch-er, decider, parler franchement, ou avec autorité. Illico, praecisèque decernere, statuere; Dict. Trev. Fr. transe denotes extreme fear. But the former sense seems preferable, as retaining the contrast, which occurs in the preceding lines. TRANSS, s. Supposed to be a species of dance anciently in use.

He playit sa schill, and sang sa sweit, Quhill Towsie tuik ane transs.

Chr. Kirk, st. 6.

Callander views it as what the Scots call, "reel, a train, Belg. trein." But the passage may have been misunderstood. Quhill does not signify while, during, but till. Might it signify, "He continued his exquisite melody, till it cast Towsie into a trance?" . To TRANSMUGRIFY, v. a. To transform, to transmute; a ludicrous and low word, S.

See social life and glee sit down, All joyous and unthinking,

Till quite transmugrify'd, they're grown, Debauchery and drinking.

Burns, iii. 115.

*To TRANSPORT, v. a. To translate a minister from one charge to another, S.

"Actual ministers, when transported, are not to be tryed again, as was done at their entry to the ministery." Stewart's Collect. B. i. Tit. 2. § 11.

To an English ear this seems a very odd use of the word.

TRANSPORTATION, s. The act of translating a minister, S.

"That in all Transportations in time coming, previous enquiry be made if there be a legal stipend and a decreet therefore, in the Parish craving the Transportation." Act 5. Ass. 1702.

And wi' my trantlims, made a clattering din. Ross's Helenore, p. 37.

3. Toys used by children, S. Loth. trantles.

There seems little reason to doubt that these are only secondary senses of a term originally used to denote one of the Popish services. This contemptuous application might be introduced after the Reformation, from a conviction of the unprofitable and trivial nature of the employment. It is printed trantals, Evergreen, ii. 8. st. 12. and expl. in the Gl. by nig-nays, a S. word nearly allied in sense to trantles as now understood. V. TRENTALIS. Patter, pattering, pitter-patter, &c. have had a similar origin.

TRAP, s. A sort of ladder, a moveable flight of wooden steps, S. Sw. trappa, Teut. trap, gradus.

TRAPPYS, s. pl. Trappings.

Rudd. derives this from Fr. draperie,—from drap cloath. Although these terms are radically the same; this is more nearly allied to L.B. trappatura, ornatus è trapo seu panno, amplum equi stratum un-dique defluens. Du Cange. V. TRAPPYS.

TRAT, TRATTES, s. An old woman; a term generally used in contempt, S. Chaucer, trate, E. trot.

Out on the, auld trat, agit wyffe or dame, Eschames ne time in rouse of syn to ly? Doug. Virgil, Prol. 96. 28. Thus said Dido, and the tothir with that Hyit on furth with slaw pase lik ane trat.

Ibid. 221. 39.

Trat, according to Sibb., is " one who has trotted, or trudged about for a long time. Teut. trat, gressus; tratt-en gradi." This idea is borrowed from Jun. Etym. Su.G. tratt-a signifies, to go with short steps like a child.

But the etymon given by Rudd., in his Addenda, has greater probability. "Goth. drotta domina, Teut. truhtin, dominus, whence Dr. Hickes derives the Ital. drudo, amasia, concubina."

It must be observed, however, that in signification it is more nearly connected with some other terms proceeding from the same stock; Isl. dracttur; Su.G. drott, a servant; whence kirkiudrott, oeconomus templi, corresponding to kirkiuwaerjande, which seems nearly the same with churchwarden, E. There is an obvious analogy between this designation, and that given by Doug. to Calybe, whom he calls "the nun and trattes of Junois

Some have viewed the term as allied to Germ. drutte, a witch; saga, mulier fatidica; trot, a woman, an old woman, a witch. Wachter thinks that the latter was a designation originally given to any woman, afterwards restricted to those that were decrepit with age; and hence transferred to witches, because the vulgar generally imputed the crime of witchcraft to old women. Keysler, having made the same observation, in reference to E. trot, derives it from Drut a female Druid. Antiq. Septent. p. 503. 504.

The word waltrot occurs in P. Ploughman, although overlooked both by Skinner and Junius; and might be viewed as favouring the latter etymon. -" Patriarks & Prophets have preched here often,

That man shall man saue throughe a womans helpe,

And that was tynt through tree, tree shall it wynne;

And that dethe downe brought, deth shall relieue."

- 'That thou tellest,' quod Truth, 'is but a tale of waltrot;
- ' For Adam and Eue, Abraham and other

4 Patriarkes and Prophetes yet in payne liggen,' &c. Fol. 99. a.

This term, I strongly suspect, has some affinity. Isl. Vata, Volua, is the name of a certain Sibyl, says G. Andr., whence Voluspa, Sibyllinum vaticinium. Thus waltrot may signify, an old woman's

I shall only add, that, according to some writers, Isl, troda denotes a woman, in general; foemina,

Gl. Gunnlaug. vo. Lins-troda. G. Andr. however, says that they err who view this term, when standing singly, as signifying a woman; p. 241. 242.

To TRATTIL, TRATLE, v. n. 1. To prattle; to tattle.

2. To repeat in a rapid and careless manner:

And with greit blis bury we sal your banis, Sine Trentallis twenty trattil al at anis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 208.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. traet-a detrectare. The idea of Mr. Pinkerton, that the term, as used Maitl. P., signifies to asperse is highly probable. Junius refers to C.B. tryd-ar, to prattle.

Trittell truttell, pshaw, expressive of contempt;

TRAZILEYS, s. pl. The props of vines. Furth of fresche burgeouns the wyne grapis ying, Endland the trazileys dyd on twistis hing. Doug. Virgil, 400. 50.

Fr. treillis, a latticed frame for supporting vines; Rudd. This may be viewed as the origin, if the z should, as I suspect, be read y. If otherwise, perhaps rather from L.B. trestell-us, fulcrum mensae, but used in a general sense for a prop.

To TREADLE, v. n. To go frequently and with difficulty, Fife; the idea being perhaps borrowed from the treadle of a loom.

TREE, s. A barrel, S.

"Gif ony fische, salmound, hering, or keling, beis found in sic barrellis vnmarkit, the samin to be escheit, and siclyke the tume treis; that ane half to our Souerane Lord, and the vther to the toune." Acts Ja. V. 1540. c. 90. Edit. 1566.

i. e. empty barrels.

Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Serplaith.

"That no barrel be sooner made,-but the Coupers birn be set thereon,—in testimony of the sufficiency of the tree. Acts Cha. II. 1661. c. 33.

This is a Su.G. idiom. True denotes a barrel used as a dry measure. Accipitur pro mensura aridorum. Hinc habemus spiltrae, dolium ex assulis confectum ad continenda arida; Ihre.

In the passage first quoted, it in like manner denotes a barrel used for a dry measure. But it also signifies a measure of liquids. A barrel for containing ale is vulgarly called a tree; as, a ten gallon tree, a twenty gallon tree, S.

A.S. aescen, a pail, and Isl. ask-r, a measure of liquids, seem likewise to derive their names from A.S. aesc, Isl. ask-r, the ash-tree, as having been originally made of this wood.

TREE and TRANTEL, a piece of wood that goes behind a horse's tail, for keeping back the sunks or sods, used instead of a saddle. This is fastened by a cord on each side, and used instead of a crupper; but reaching farther down, to prevent the horse from being tickled under the tail; Perths.

TREGALLION, s. Collection, assortment. The haill tregallion, the whole without exception, Dumfr.

If we might suppose that this term had been originally used to denote a measure of liquids, we might view it as allied to Isl. trygill, parva trua, from trog trua, linter.

TREIN, TRENE, adj. Wooden, treein, S. as a treein leg, a wooden leg.

"Thay spulyeit the eucarist out of the cais of siluer, quhair it hang, & kest it in ane trein kist." Bellend. Cron. B. xiv. c. 15. In ligneam pyxidem; Boeth.

Are trene truncheour, are ramehorne spone. Bannatyne Poems, p. 160.

Lord Hailes renders this spout; but on what ground I cannot conceive. It evidently means a wooden plate.

A.S. treowen, arboreus, ligneus, from treo arbor. This word was used by E. writers, so late as the time of Camden.

"Sir Thomas Rokesby being controlled for first suffering himselfe to be serued in treene cuppes, answered; These homely cups and dishes pay truely for that they containe: I had rather drinke out of treene, and pay gold and siluer, than drink out of gold and siluer, and make wooden payment." Remains, p. 354. Hence, TRENTAL, s. Properly a service of thirty masses, which were usually celebrated upon as many different days, for the dead.

Thay tyrit God with tryfillis tume trentalis, And daifit him with [thair] daylie dargeis; With owklie Abitis, to augment thair rentalis, Mantand mort-mumlingis, mixt with monye leis. Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 197.

It has been observed, (vo. Trantles,) that this term was most probably used in a contemptuous sense after the Reformation, to denote any thing. mean and trifling. In this passage, it seems rather to admit this general signification. Even long before the Reformation, it appears to have been declining in its acceptation.

And so leue lellye Lordes, forbode els That pardon and penaunce, & prayers done saue Soules that have sinned seven sythes deadly: And to trust to these trentals, truely methinketh, Is not so siker for the soule, as to do well. Therefore I rede you reukes, that rich be on this earth, Apon truste of your treasure, trientales to have, Be ye neuer the bolder to breake the ten hestes. P. Ploughman, Fol. 39. a.

The term is also used by Chaucer. V. Tyrwhitt.

Sibb. mentions A.S. trep, grex, troop. But trepus, for it is found only in pl., seems to be used to signify an army. " Acies, the front of an army, battell-aray, troops;" Somner. He adds,—grex, collectio, turba. Su.G. drift, grex; Isl. thyrpa, caterva. The origin of drift is drifw-a agere, pellere. TRIST, adj. Sad, melancholy.

Thare bene also full sorrowfull and trist, Thay quhilkis thare dochteris chalmeris violate. Doug. Virgil, 186. 29.

Fr. triste, Lat. trist-is. TRYST, TRIST, TRISTE, TRYIST, s. 1. An appointment to meet, S.

-He herd that of Ingland The Kyng was northwartis than cumand, As to the New-castelle, or Durame, Til Bawnbowrch, or Norame. Thare he thought for til have mete, As tryst mycht there of have bene sete; For thai twa Kyngis bwndyn wes To-gyddyr in gret tendyrnes.

Wyntown, vii. 9. 490. V. also vii. 9. 179. vii. 10. 131.

To set trust is still used in the same sense. To keep tryst, to fulfil an engagement to meet; the phrase opposed to this is, to break tryst, formerly to crack tryst. V. sense 3.

"John Forbes of Lesly broke tryst, having appointed to have settled the same." Spalding's Troubles, ii. 54.

2. An appointed meeting, S.

On the Marche a day of Trew wes set.— Schir Davy Lord than de Lyndesay Was at that Triste that ilke day.

Wyntown, ix. 18. 3-16. Markets are in various instances denominated Trysts; because those, who design to sell or buy, have agreed to meet at a certain time and place.

This designation has considerable antiquity. It occurs in the old Ballad, entitled Thomas the Rhymer.

"My tongue is mine ain," true Thomas said, "A gudelie gift ye wald gie to me! "I neither dought to buy nor sell,

"At fair or tryst where I may be." Minstrelsy Border, ii. 273.

"Under the article of Commerce, we must not omit the three great markets for black cattle, called Trysts, which are yearly held in the neighbourhood of Falkirk, in the months of August, September, and October." Nimmo's Stirlingshire, p. 456.

"Tryst is a Scotch word for an appointed meeting." Statist. Acc. xix. 83. N.

3. The appointed time of meeting.

He trystyt hyr quhen he wald cum agayne, On the thrid day.-

At the set trist he entrit in the toun, Wittand no thing of all this falss tresoun.

Wallace, iv. 709. 731. MS.

We sall begin at sevin houris of the day: So ye keip tryist, forsuith we sall nocht felyie. Lyndsay, S.P.R. ii. 6.

- "The salmons also in their season returne to the place where they were spawned: They like skilled arithmeticiens number well the dayes of their absence, and for no rubs in their way will they be moued to cracke their tryst." Z. Boyd's Last Battell, p. 1256, 1257.
- 4. The place appointed, a rendezvous. -Thai approch to the Pape in his presence, At the foirsaid triste quhar the treté tellis. Houlate, i. 24.

"By thir letters came to the King's Majesty, he knew well that his navy had not passed the right way; and shortly hereafter got wit that they were landed at the town of Air; which displeased the King very greatly; for he believed surely that they Yol. II.

had been in France at the farthest tryst." Pitscottie, p. 110.

Traist, q. v. is also used for an appointed meeting. The word evidently has its origin from the trust, or confidence, which the parties who enter into such an engagement, repose in each other. V. TRAIST, v.

5. A concurrence of circumstances or events.

"Indeed men cannot consider the same without acknowledging a divine hand and something above ordinary means and causes, where all did thus meet together in a solemn tryst to accomplish that people's ruin." Fleming's Fulfilling Script. p. 148.

In a sense very much akin to the fourth, trist, triste, is used in O.E., as denoting "a post or station in hunting."

Ye shall be set at such a trist,

That hart and hind shall come to your fist. Lydgate's Squire of Low Degree.

V. Ellis's Spec. E. P. i. 336.

-He asked for his archere,

Walter was redi, he wend haf schoten the herte, The kyng stode ouer nehi, the stroke he lauht so smerte.

R. Brunne, p. 94.

Hearne renders it, " meta, mark, direction." The same writer uses it to denote a station in battle. The Inglis at ther triste bifor tham bare all doun, & R. als him liste the way had redy roun.

Ibid. p. 179.
It is used in the same sense by Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 1534. V. Trista, Tristra, Du Cango; Trista and Tristis, Cowel. The latter expl. Tristis as an immunity from attending on the Lord of a Forest, when he is disposed to chase. But, according to the quotation, the immunity is from the Tristae, as denoting this attendance. Et sint quieti-de-Tristis, &c.

To TRYST, v. a. 1. To engage a person to meet one at a given time and place, S.

He—then trysted Mr. Williamson at London, who met the same man in a coach, near London bridge, and who called on him by his name." Fountainhall's Decisions, i. 15. V. the s. sense 3.

- 2. To meet with; used in relation to a divine ordination.
- "The plot hath laid Leith and Edinburgh desolate.—That this should have trysted the enemy at that time and place, when we had most to do with Leith and Edinburgh, is evidently God's hand." Baillie's Lett. ii. 151.
- "It is found that the most eminent and honourable service of the church, doth usually tryst her in a low and suffering condition, when there hath been but little strength, many outward disadvantages." Fleming's Fulfilling, Epist. p. iv.

To Tryst, v. n. 1. To agree to meet at any particular time or place, S.

4 E

"In our treaty, we prefaced with a declaration in writ, that our trysting there [in London] was no submission to the English Parliament." Baillie's Lett. i. 221.

The prep. with is often added, S.

- "The particulars are,—the writing, dictating, and contriving a letter directed to the perfidious Oliver Cromwell, and trysting with him and his officers at the Lady Hume's lodgings, tending to the ruin of the late King, and these kingdoms." Wodrow's Hist. i. 85.
- 2. To concur with; used metaph. as to circumstances or events.
- What a marvellous concurrence of providence, and convincing appearance of a divine hand was in this judgment, the besieging of Jerusalem by the Romans, trysted with the very time of the passover, whilst so great a confluence of the people from all parts of the land were there on that account, that both sword and famine might contribute their help to destroy." Fleming's Fulfilling, p. 148.

3. It is often used, in a passive sense, in relation to one's meeting with adverse dispensations, S.

"It is a dark time now with the church of Christ, which we see every where almost suffering and afflicted, whilst the whole earth besides seemeth to be at ease, christians also even beyond others, in their private lot, trysted with very sharp trials." Fleming's Fulfilling, Epist. p. iv.

-" The proud and insolent, who do most hunt after outward glory, are usually trysted with some humbling abasing stroke; he poureth contempt on princes, and such who will not honour God shall not enjoy that honour they seek from men." Ibid. p. 113. V. following word. Trist, s.

Swa, on ane day, the dayis watchis tua

Come [in;] and said that saw ane felloun mist.

- 'Ya,' said Wisdome, 'I wist it wald be sa: 'That is ane sang befoir ane hevie trist!
- 'That is perell to cum, quhaeir it wist. ' For, on sum syde, thair sall us folk assaill.'

King Hart, ii. 48. The phrase has evidently been proverbial. Trist might signify sadness, from Fr. triste, sad; or trial, affliction. The v. tryst is used in this sense, or in one equivalent. He is sore trysted; He has met with a heavy trial. This sense of the v., however, signification, it is now obsolete.

TRYSTER, s. A person who convenes others, as those of opposite parties, fixing the time and seems oblique; and if the s. ever admitted of this place of meeting.

" Mr. Blair and he [Mr. Durham] deal with Mr. Wood to be content with conference at Edinburgh. -We had drawn up an overture, as we thought, very favourable, as far as we could go, according to the Assembly's late overture for union, and by the hands of the trysters, Mr. Blair and Mr. Durham, sent in to their meeting. Also the trysters had given us both their overtures to be thought upon." Baillie's Lett. ii. 387.

TRYSTING-PLACE, s. The place of meeting previously appointed, S.

At our trysting-place, for a certain space, I must wander to and fro;

But I had not had power to come to thy bower, Had'st thou not conjur'd me so.

Minstrelsy Border, ii. 346.

TRISTRES, s. pl. The stations allotted to different persons in hunting.

Germ. trottel-n, tarde et pigre incedere; Su.G. tratt-a, minutis passibus ire, ut solent infantes. The origin seems to be traad-a, trod-a, calcare; although Ihre derives it from trant incessus.

TRODWIDDIE, s. The chain that fastens the harrow to what are called the Swingle-trees,

S.B. V. RIGWIDDIE.

As this bar of wood is immediately joined to the harrow, and lies nearer the ground, the name may be from Isl. troda terra, G. Andr. p. 242. and vijder, vimen, q. the ground-withy, or that which touches the earth. For it had been originally formed of twisted withes.

TROGGERS, s. pl. The designation given to one species of Irish vagrants, Wigton.

"The people are greatly oppressed by inundations of poor vagrants from Ireland.—They may be divided into two classes. The first are those whose only object is to beg their bread. The second are those called troggers, who carry on a species of traffic, unknown, I am persuaded, in most places. They bring linen from Ireland, which they barter for the old woollen clothes of Scotland, and these they prefer to gold or silver. Bending under burdens of these clothes, they return to their own kingdom." P. Inch, Statist. Acc. iii. 139.

Morison's Poems, p. 106.

TROLY, TRAWLIE, s. A ring through which the sowme passes betwixt the two horses or oxen next the plough, and by means of which it is kept from trailing on the ground, Ang. V. SOWME.

Isl. travale, impedimentum; Teut. traelie, clathrus, a bar, lattice-work, &c. Or perhaps from Trowl, q. v. because this ring is intended to prevent the rope from being dragged.

TROLOLLAY, s. A term which occurs in a rhyme used by young people, on the last day of the year, S. V. HOGMANAY.

We find a similar phrase in O.E.; but whether originally the same is uncertain.

And than satten some, and song at the nale, And holpen erie his halfe acre, with hey trolly lolly.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 32, b.

Can this be allied to Su.G. troll-a incantare; trall-a canere?

TRONACH, s. The crupper used with dorsets or a pack-saddle; formed of a piece of wood, connected with the saddle by a cord at each end; Mearns.

TRONE, s. 1. An instrument, consisting of two horizontal bars crossing each other, beaked at the extremities, and supported by a wooden pillar; used for weighing heavy wares, S₇ This instrument still remains in some towns.

"It is statute, that the Chalmerlane sall cause big, and mak ane Trone for weying of woll in all the Kings burghis, and in all the portis of the realme." Stat. Dav. II. c. 39. s. 1.

Du Cange expl. L.B. Trona, Statera publica, seu Trutina; supposing that it is a corr. of the latter term. Such a "Trona or beam, for the tronage of wooll, was fixed at Leadenhall in London;" Cowel.

The term, I apprehend, is originally equivalent to crane, E. an instrument for raising weights. Isl. triona signifies a beak; Rostrum porrectum, quasi serpentis vel Rajae; G. Andr. Thus the stern or beak of a ship receives this denomination; Landnamab. p. 299. Trana signifies not only a beak, but a crane; Grus, item Rostrum longiusculum, seu res porrectum; G. Andr. p. 241.

Hence it appears that the name of the bird, which we call a crane, has been used to denote a beak, or any thing extended so as to resemble the long neck of a crane. C.B. trwyn, Fr. trogne, also signify a beak.

2. The pillory, S.

"They ordain the said John Rob to be sett upon the Trone, with a paper upon his head bearing thir words (This John Rob is sett heir for being an false informer of witnesses), and ordaines his lugg to be nailed to the Trone be the spaice of ane hour." Act Sederunt 6th Feb. 1650. V. also Act 24th July 1700. In the Index to these Acts it is rendered Pillory.

"In Edinburgh the Pillory is called the Trone;"

Rudd

There seems to be no reason for the extension of this name to the Pillory, save that, as this stood in a public place, those subjected to the punishment referred to, were exhibited here.

TRONE WEIGHT, the standard weight used at _ the Trone, S.

TRONARE, s. The person who had the charge of the Trone; L.B. tronar-ius.

"The clerk of the cocquet, sall controll beath the custumars, and the Tronaris." Stat. Dav. II. c. 39. s. 4.

TRONE-MEN, s. The name given to those who carry off the soot sweeped from chimneys, because they had their station at the Trone, Edinburgh.

To TRONE, v. a. To subject to the disgraceful punishment of the pillory.

I sall degrad the gracless of thy greis, Scald thee for skorn, and scor thee af thy sule, Gar round thy heid, transform thee as a fule, And with treason gar trone thee on the treis.

Kennedy, Evergreen, ii. 68. st. 19.

Or as in Edin. Edit. 1508. 1. 2. and 4.

Scalle thee for skorn, and schert thee af thy scule—

And syne with treason trone thee to the treis. V. the s.

TRONE, s. A throne, Fr. id.

Togidder he thare with mony thousand can hy, And euin amydwart in his trone grete, For him arrayit, takin has his sete.

Doug. Virgil, 137. 25.

Hardyng uses this term.

Belyn was kyng, and sat in royal trone.

Cron. Fol. 28, a.

TRONIE, s. Any metrical saw, or jargon, used by children, S.B. Rune, Ratt rhyme, synon. q. v.

This, I suspect, is the same with Trewane, q. v. 4 E 2 a term used by Knox; allied perhaps to O.Su.G. troen, now trogen, true, trusty; because such rhymcs, although now in general justly viewed as expressing the language of ignorance or superstition, were considered by our ancestors, as containing adages worthy of implicit confidence. Teut. trovens, bona fide.

TROOD, s.

"Patrick Earl of Orkney, in a disposition of the lands of Sand to Jerome Umphray, narrates—that he had evicted 6 merks from — in Cullswick for stealing bolts from his lordship's trood, probably some piece of wreck which had been drawn [driven?] into Cullswick." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 584.

It seems rather to signify wood employed for fences. Su.G. trod-r, lignum, quod materiam praebet saepibus construendis. Timber ok trodhor, materiam aedium et sepimentorum; Leg. Ost-Goth. c. 28. ap. Ihre, in vo.

TROPLYS, s. pl. Expl. troops.

For all the Scottismen that thar war, Quhen that saw that eschew the fycht, Dang on that with all thair mycht, That that scalyt that in troplys ser; And till discomfitur war ner.

Barbour, xiii. 275. MS.

This is not, as Sibb. thinks, "a strange corr. of troops," but from Teut. troppel globus, congeries; which seems derived from troppe grex, collectio. This Wachter deduces from Germ. treib-en agere, ut agmen ab agendo.

To TROSS, v. a. 1. To pack up, to truss, S. 2. To pack off, to set out, S.B. also turs, truss, Thus trus is used by Minot. Ye men of Saint Omers,

Trus ye this tide,
And puttes out yowre paviliownes
With youre mekill pride.

Poems, p. 50. Fr. trouss-er, to truss; C.B. triosa, Isl. truts, sarcina, fasciculus. TROSSIS, s. pl. "The small round blocks in which the lines of a ship run; "Gl. Compl. "Than the master cryit, and bald renye ane bonet, vire the trossis, nou heise." Compl. S. p. 63.

This in the Gl. is derived from Fr. trouss-er, to truss. If the term itself do not rather signify ropes, perhaps it is allied to Sw. tross, a rope, a coil of ropes; Isl. tratsa, funis ab aliis funiculis complicatus. Sw. trissa, however, signifies a pulley.

* TROT, s. 1. Schaik a trot, seems to have been an old phrase for, Take a dance.

"In the fyrst that dancit—Schaik a trot." Compl. S.

2. Used, perhaps in a ludicrous way, for an expedition by horsemen, synon. raid.

"The Covenanters, hearing of this trott of Turriff, and that they were come to Aberdeen, began to hide their goods," &c. Spalding's Troubles, i.

Teut. trot cursus, gressus, succussatio.

TROTCOSIE, s. A piece of woollen cloth, which covers the back part of the neck and shoulders, with straps across the crown of the head, and buttoned from the chin downwards on the breast; for defence against the weather, S.

It seems to be properly throatcosie, because it keeps the throat warm. V. Cosie.

TROTTERS, s. pl. Sheeps feet, S. Secundo, then, a gude sheeps head, Whase head was singit, never flead, And four black trotters clad wi' grisle, Bedown his throat had learn'd to hirsle.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 78.
This term had been formerly used in E. "Trot-ters, shepes fete;" Palsgraue.

TROVE, s. A turf, Aberd. toor, Ang.

"These lands—have for centuries been wasted by the practice of cutting up the sward into turf, for the different purposes of mixing it with the stable and byre dung, (muck-fail;) of building the walks of houses, when it is called fail; of roofing houses, when the sward is pared thin, and for fuel, which they call troves." P. Alford, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xv. 456. 457.

Su.G. Isl. torf, ima arvi gleba ad alendum focum eruta; ab antiquiss. Goth. torfa, effodere; Seren.

Einar, Earl of Orkney, about the year 912, is much celebrated by the Northern Scalds, because he taught the inhabitants of these islands the use of turf. Hence he was ever after honoured with the name of Torf-Einar. V. Barry's Orkney, p. 112.

TROW, s. The wooden spout in which water is carried to a mill-wheel, S. in some places in pl. the trows. It is also called a shot.

Su.G. Belg. trog, E. trough, Dan. trou, Isl. thro. Junius views C.B. trychu, truncare, as the root, whence trwch, troch, incisio; because troughs were anciently trees hollowed out.

To TROW, TREW, v. a. 1. To believe, S. Gud Robert Boyd, that worthi was and wicht, Wald nocht thaim trew, quhill he him saw with sycht.

Wallace, ii. 436. MS.

MoesG. traw-an, Isl. tru-a, Su.G. tro, fidere, credere; Tro ens ord, fidem habere alicujus dictis; To trow ane's word, S.

The prep. in is sometimes added.

Ye gart us trow in stock and stone,
That they wald help mony one.

Spec. Godly Sangs, p. 25.

2. To trust to, or confide in.

Now I persawe, he that will trew

His fa, it sall him sum tyme rew.

Barbour, ii. 326. MS.

The prep. to is sometimes added.

And gyff that ye will trow to me,
Ye sall ger mak tharoff king,
And I sall be in your helping.

Barbour, i. 490. MS.

3. To make believe; often in sport, S. as, I'm only trowing you.

To TROW, v. a. Apparently, to curse.

Messyngeris than sic tithingis brocht thaim till, And tald Persye, that Wallace leffand war, Off his eschaip fra thar presoune in Ayr. Thai trowit rycht weill, he passit was that steid, For Longcastell and his twa men was deid. He trowit the chance that Wallace so was past. In ilka part thai war gretly agast, Throw prophesye that that had herd befor.

Wallace, iii. 25. MS.

In Fdit. 1648. it is thus altered;

They trowd it well, that Wallace past that stead, For Long-castle and his two men were dead:

They waried the chance that Wallace so was past. It would seem, that some early editor, while he retained the first trowit, as obviously signifying believed, changed the second to waried, as being better understood in his time.

Trow tak you, is an imprecation still used in Orkney. It is said that in Norse trow signifies Devil. Isl. tramen, larva vel cacodaemon; thraen, diabolus; drauge, lemur. Su.G. tro is used in profane swearing or imprecation. Tro mig, tro bort mig, dispeream: tro dig, male pereas. Ihre conjectures that tage may be understood,—ut sit, Diabolus me auferat. Gloss. p. 950. 951. Germ. traun is used in a similar sense. V. Wachter.

To TROW, v. a. To season a cask, by rinsing it with a little wort, before it be used; a term common with brewers; also, to trow the brewlooms, Aug.

A.S. ge-treow-ian, in a moral sense, signifies purgare; Germ. trauen, to administer the sacerdotal blessing. We say, to sign or synd a vessel, when it is cleansed by a little water being passed through it; in allusion to the supposed purification of a person or thing, in consequence of making the sign of the cross. Trow perhaps may have a similar origin; especially as Brewers retain a considerable portion of superstition. V. Burn.

TROWENTYN, Barbour, xix. 696. Leg. tranowwityn. V. Tranont.

TROWIE GLOVES, a name given to sponges, Caithn.

"Sponges are found upon the shore in great plenty, shaped like a man's hand, and called by the people Trowie Gloves." P. Dunrossness, Statist. Acc. vii. 396. q. Make-believe gloves, because an ignorant person might view them as such. V. Trow, v. TROWTH, s. 1. Truth, Wyntown. 2. Belief.

Syne thai herd, that Makbeth aye
In fantown fretis had gret fay,
And trowth had in swylk fantasy,
Be that he trowyd stedfastly,
Nevyre dyscumfyt for to be,
Qwhill wyth hys eyne he suld se
The wode browcht of Brynnane,
To the hill of Dwnsynane.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 363.

TRUBLY, adj. Dark, lowering, troubled, muddy; drumly, synon. Fr. trouble.

Throw help thareof he chasis the wyndis awa, And trubly cloudis dividis in ane thraw.

Doug. Virgil, 108. 21.

TRUDGE BAK.

A trudge bak that cairful cative bure;
And crukit was his laythlie limmis bayth.

K. Hart, ii. 54.

From the rest of this description, as well as from the name of the person, Decrepitus, it is clear that the port meant to say that he was hump-backed. The phrase is still used in this sense, S.B.

It may be from Lat. turg-ere to swell. But I would prefer Su.G. trutn-a, id. Isl. thrutn-a, id. throte a tumor.

TRUDGET, v. I dread trudget of you; I suspect that you will do some mischief, or play me some trick; Loth.

Perhaps allied to Alem. trug fraud, trug-en to deceive; as being the same with O.E. treget deceit, treachery, Minot's Poems, p. 31.

-For all thaire treget and thaire gile.

TRUE-BLUE, adj. An epithet formerly given to those who were accounted rigid Presbyterians, and still occasionally used, S.

Hence the title of a pamphlet, published about the beginning of last century, "A Sample of Truc-Bleu Presbyterian Loyalty."

This phraseology seems to have originated during the civil wars in the time of Charles I., when the opposite parties were distinguished by badges of different colours.

"—Few, or none of this army wanted a blue ribband; but the lord Gordon and some others of the marquis' family had a ribband, when they were dwelling in the town, of a red flesh colour, which they wore in their hats, and called it the Royal Ribband, as a sign of their love and loyalty to the king. In despite and derision thereof this blue ribband was worn, and called the Covenanters Ribband by the haill soldiers of the army." Spalding's Troubles, i. 123. V. also p. 160.

TRUFF, s. Corr. of E. turf, S.

Lang may his truff in gowans gay be drest!

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 8. V. TROVE.

TRUFF, s. A trick, a deceit.

Ne bid I not into my stile for thy To speke of truffis, nor nane harlottry.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 272. 4.

Ital. truffa, id. truff-are, to cheat, to deceive, truffiere, a deceiver. In Fr. the sense is limited to that deception that is included in mockery. Truffe a gibe, truffer to mock, truff-eur a mocker. Hence perhaps,

To TRUFF, v. a. To steal, Gl. Shirr. TRUFFURE, s. A deceiver.

Than wox I tene, that I tuke to sic ane truffuris tent.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. b. 23.
TRUGGS, s. A mode of profane swearing, used among the vulgar, S.B.

It is generally viewed as a corruption of troth, to which it is equivalent. But it seems rather derived from MoesG. triggua, Su.G. trigg, faithful, triggua, a covenant. It is an affecting proof of the pertinacity of men in immoral customs, that some of the oaths used in this country seem to retain evident marks of the highest antiquity. Thus Gothe, a common profanation of the name of God, S.B. is evidently MoesG. Gotha, the very term used to denote the Supreme Being, when Ulphilas wrote, during the reign of Constantine the great, that is, nearly fifteen hundred years ago. V. Michaelis' Introd. Lect. sect. 68.

TRUKIER, TRUCKER, s. A contemptuous designation, always implying that the person, to whom it is given, has done something that is offensive, S.

Despiteful spider, poor of sprite,
Begins with babbling me to blame;
Gowk wyte me not to gar thee griet;
Thy trattling, Trukier, I shall tame.
Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 2.

The term seems to convey the idea of deceit. O. Germ. trugh, guile, Teut. droghener, a deceiver, bedriegh-er, id. Perhaps merely a contemptuous use of Fr. troqueur, one who barters or trucks; as persons of this description have not generally been supposed worthy of implicit confidence.

TRULIE, adj. True, not fictitious. A trulie story, S.B. Su.G. trolig, credibilis.

TRULIS, s. pl. Some kind of game.
So mony lords, so mony naturall fulis,
That bettir accordis to play thame at the trulis,
Nor seis the dulis that commons dois sustene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 42. Lord Hailes thinks that this may mean some game which resembles a spindle, from Fr. trouil, id. "I am informed," he adds that trule means some childish game, of the nature of cappy-hole." Note, p. 251.

Germ. torl signifies the game of top. The term, however, seems rather to denote some trundling sort of game, perhaps resembling the bowls; as probably allied to Su.G. trill-a rotari, ut solet globus; Ihre.

TRULLION, s. A sort of crupper, Mearns; the same with Tronach, q. v. Isl. travale, impedimentum?

To TRUMP, v. n. To march, to trudge, S. With that that war weill ner the King; And he left his amonesting,

And gert trump to the assemblé.

Barbour, viii. 293. MS.

And than, but langer delaying, Thai gert trump till the assemblé. On athir sid men mycht than se Mony a wycht man, and worthi, Redy to do chewalry.

Ibid. xii. 491. MS.

Eneas all his oist and hale armye Has rasit trumpin to the toun in hye.

Doug. Virgil, 379. 8.

Su.G. Isl. tramp-a, calcare; Germ. trump-en currere.

Hardyng, however, uses the v. with the prep. up in a different sense.

The Erle then of Northumberland throughout Raysed up the land, and when he came it nere, The kyng trumped up, and went away full clere.

Cron. Fol. 222. a.

It seems to signify, trussed up his goods.

To TRUMP, v. n. 1. To trumpet forth, to sound abroad; with the prep. up.

Tharefore trump up, blaw furth thine eloquence.

Doug. Virgil, 376. 14.

We have the same phraseology in the Battallye of Agynhourte.

They tromped up full meryly, The grete battell to gederes ged.

Ap. Watson's Hist. E. P. ii. 36.

Teut. tromp-en, canere tuba.
2. To "break wind backwards."
In publyk placis fra that day
Scho wes behynd than trumpand ay:
Sa wes scho schamyd in ilk sted,
Quhil in this warld hyr lyf scho led.

Wyntown, vi. 2. 98. TRUMP, s. A Jews-harp. Fr. trompe, Sir J.

Sinclair's Observ. p. 159.

"Like a sow playing on a trump;" S. Prov., spoken when people do a thing ungracefully." Kelly, p. 232. V. Cornepipe.
To TRUMP, v. a. To deceive.

TRUMP, v. a. To deceive.

Than sall we all be at our will.

And thai sall let thaim trumpyt ill,

Fra thai wyt weill we be away.

Barbour, xix. 712. MS. That fals man, by dissaitfull wordis fare, With wanhope trumpet the wofull luffare.

Doug. Virgil, 24.3.

Fr. tromp-er, Teut. tromp-en, id. The E. v. trump up seems to have a common origin, q. to fabricate by deceiving others. As Sw. trumph-a, id. has the same orthography with trumpha, to play at cards, trumph the victorious card, (Seren.); it is not improbable that the verbs, signifying to deceive, have originally a reference to this amusement, which has been so common a mean of deception.

TRUMPE, s. 1. A trifle, a thing of little value.

Ten teyndis ar ane trumpe, bot gif he tak may

Ane kinrik of parisch kyrkis cuplit with commendis.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. a. 10.

2. In pl. goods.

Now, haly fader, thi maieste inclyne, Grant that our nauy thys fyre may eschape, And from distructioun delyuer and out scrape The sobir trumpis, and meyne graith of Troyanis. Doug. Virgil, 150. 55.

"From Belg. tromp, a rattle for little children; tromp-en, to rattle, or play with a rattle;" Rudd. TRUMPOUR, TRUMPER, s. 1. A deceiver.

Mony proud trumpour with him trippit.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 27.

Lord Hailes renders this rattlescull; from the idea that trump signifies rattle, Belg. But Dunbar evidently uses the term elsewhere, in a moral sense, as opposed to gud men, and conjoined with schrewis.

Sum gevis gud men for thair gud kewis, Sum gevis to trumpouris, and to schrewis.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 50.

I am not for a trumper tane.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 86.

Et nulli insidias quondam simulata paravi.

Lat. Par.

I cannot therefore agree with Tyrwhitt, who, referring to the passage first quoted, thinks that the word means trumpeters; Cant. Tales, Note, v. 2673. Fr. trompeur, id.

2. Sometimes used as a contemptuous designation, without any definite meaning.

How durst thow, trumper, be sa bald, To tant or tell, that he was ald?

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 21.

TRUMPH. To play trumph about, to be on a footing with, to perform actions equally valourous, S.B.

Achilles played na' trumph about Wi' him, he says; but judge ye.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 29.

Trumph, S., has the same meaning with trump, E. as denoting the principal card.

TRUNCHER SPEIR, a pointless spear, a spear having part of it lopped off.

With twa blunt truncher speirs squair, It was thair interprise,

To fecht with baith thair faces bair,

For luve, as is the gyse.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 178.

The same with E. truncheon, Fr. tronchet, tronson; from tronc-ir, to cut off, to break into two pieces.

TRUNSCHEOUR, s. A plate, a trencher, S. Syne brade trunscheouris did thay fill and charge With wilde scrabbis and vthir frutis large.-Ne spare thay not at last, for laik of mete, Thare fatale foure nukit trunscheouris for til ete. Doug. Virgil, 208. 43. 52.

Fr. trencheoir, quadra mensaria; from trench-er, to cut, as on these meat is cut.

TRUSTFUL, adj. Trust-worthy.

"If the whole supplicants had been so trustful in a matter so great and universal,—their Lordships could not but have engaged lives, fortunes, and honour, for a good success to follow their advice." Baillie's Lett. i. 42.

TUAY, adj. Two. V. Twa. TUCK, s. Tuck of drum, beat of drum, S.

"The council give orders, that after the muster is over this day, one company of the Militia keep guard in the Canongate Tolbooth, and another in the Abbey, and that the whole Regiment be ready to draw together upon the tuck of drum." Wodrow's Hist. p. 51. V. Touk.
TUEIT, s. "An imitative word, expressing the short shrill cry of a small bird; hence to twitter; Teut. zittern," Gl. Compl.

"The rede schank cryit my fut, my fut, and the oxee cryit tueit." Compl. S. p. 60.

TUFF, s. A tuft of feathers or ribbons.

My Lady, as she is a woman, Is born a helper to undo man.— For she invents a thousand toys, That house, and hold, and all destroys; As scarfs, shephroas, tuffs and rings, Fairdings, facings, and powderings; Rebats, ribands, bands and ruffs, Lapbends, shagbands, cuffs and muffs;

Folding outlays [ourlays], pearling sprigs, Atrys, vardigals, periwigs; Hats, hoods, wires, and also kells, Washing-balls, and perfuming smells: French-gows cut out, and double banded, Jet rings to make her pleasant-handed: A fan, a feather, bracelets, gloves, All new-come busks she dearly loves. For such trim bony baby-clouts, Still on the Laird she greets and shouts; Which made the Laird take up more gear, Than all the lands or rigs could bear. Watson's Coll. i. 30.

Fr. touffe, a tuft, applied to hair, ribbons, feathers, &c. On faisoit il y a quelque-temps, des garnitures d'une grosse touffe de rubans.-Une touffe de plumes ; c'est-à-dire, un gros bouquet, comme celui qu'on met sur les capilenes. Dict. Trev.

TUFFING, TOFFIN, s. Tow, ockam; wading. The tuffing kindillis betuix the plankis wak, Quharfra ouerthrawis the pikky smok coil blak. Doug. Virgil, 150. 39.

Dan. toi, Su.G. stuff, coactum, constipatum uti materia pilei; Ihre. Fr. touffu thick.
To TUFFLE, v. a. To ruffle, to put any thing in disorder by handling it, or tossing in it, S. Tifle, A. Bor.

This might seem allied to Su.G. taefl-a originally to play at dice, from tafwel tessera; in a secondary sense, to contend. But I prefer twefallt twofold, A.S. twy-fyld-an duplicare, to double; because things said to be tuffled, are generally such as are cressed, in consequence of being folded down.

TUG, s. "Raw hide, of which formerly ploughtraces were made;" Gl. Burns, S.O.

Thou was a noble fittie-lan', As e'er in tug or tow was drawn.

Burns, iii. 143. V. Teug.

To TUGGLE, TUGLE, v. a. 1. To pull by repeated jerks, S.

Now we leave Nory wi' her change of dress,-Till we inform you of poor Lindy's fate, That was left corded up at sic a rate. Tuggling and struggling how to get him free, He did great pyne and meikle sorrow dree.

Ross's Helenore, p. 43. 2. Tossed backwards and forwards, handled roughly. -Tousled and tuggled with town tykes. V. Tousle.

3. Fatigued with travelling or severe labour, wrought above one's strength, kept under, S.B. Tuglit and travalit thus trew men can tyre. Sa wundir wait wes the way, wit ye but wene. Gawan and Gol, i. 3.

This may be either from Su.G. toeg-a to draw, or from E. tug.

TUG-WHITING, s.

"About this time some tug-whitings were taken, and by God's providence the fishes became larger." Spalding's Troubles, i. 39. TUIGH, s.

A man at one for to serve lordis twayn, The quhilk be baith contrair in opynion; Be trew to both, without tuigh of treson,— It may wele ryme, but it accordis nought.

Pink. S. P. R. iii. 124.

"Touch," Gl. Pink. But it seems to signify suspicion, from A.S. tweog-an dubitare, tweo a doubt. Alem. zuch-on, Su.G. twek-a, to doubt, twekan doubting. Ihre derives the v. from twaa, because in doubting the thought is as it were drawn into two parts. Hence also Su.G. twe, doubt.

TUILYIE, TULYE, TOOLYIE, s. A quarrel, a broil, a combat, S.

"Chaud-melle,—ane hoat suddaine tuilyie, or debaite, quhilk is opponed as contrair to fore-thought fellonie." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Chaud-melle.

Be that the bargan was all playit, The stringis stert out of thair nokks; Sevin-sum, that the tulye maid, Lay gruffling in the stokks.

Peblis to the Play, st. 19.

Ye do abound in coal and calk: And think, as fools, to fley all faes With targets, tuilies, and toom talk.

Polwart, Watson's Coll. iii. 9.

Sibb. derives Toolye from Teut. tuyl labor. I have not observed, that this term is older than the reign of Q. Mary. It was probably introduced by the application of a Fr. term in a particular sense; as touill-er, to mix in a confused manner, which might be applied to a crowd in a tumultuous state, or entering into a broil. Teut. tuyl-en, however, in a secondary sense denotes rage; furere, Kilian. Gael. taghal, to contend, to drive the ball to the goal, has by some been viewed as the origin.

To Tullyle, Toolie, v. n. To quarrel, to squabble, S.

"Ane French word, Melle, dissension, strife, debate; as wee say, that ane hes melled or tuilyied with ane vther." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Melletum.

"A tulying tike comes limping hame;" S. Prov. Ramsay, p. 17.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 280.

Tuilyie-Mulie, s. The same with Tuilyie, S.B. I know not if mulie should be traced to Teut. muyl-en, to quarrel; Rostrum extendere simultatis aut irae causa, mutire, mussitare, cum indignatione et stomacho; Kilian. V. Tute-mute.

Tullyeour, s. One who is addicted to fighting or engaging in broils.

"Gif there be any injurious persons of their neighbours, or defamers of others, common fechters (tuilycours) or any other malefactors." Chalm. Air. c. 39. s. 73.

Tuilyiesum, adj. Quarrelsome, S.

Tuilyiesum dogs cum happing hame; S. Prov. i. e. Those, who are inclined to brawls, generally suffer by them.

TUILL, s. "Toil, trouble," Pink. In Scotland had not bene sic tuill, Gif this had bein the common rewl. Maitland Poems, p. 221.

If this be the sense, it must be allied to Teut. teul-en laborare. But I suspect that it rather signifies contention, as the same with Tuilye, q. v.

TULCHANE, TULCHIN, s. 1. A calf's skin. in its rough state, stuffed with straw, and set beside a cow to make her give her milk, S.

Hence the phrase Tulchane Bishops.

"Here is a fair shew of restoring benefices of cure, great and small to the Kirk: But in effect it was to restore only titles, which noblemen perceived, could not be given conveniently to themselves; but they gripped to the commodity, in obtaining from the titulars, either temporal lands fewed to themselves, or tithes, or pensions to their servants or dependers. And therefore the Bishops, admitted according to this new order, were called in jest, Tulchane Bishops. A Tulchane is a calf's skin stuffed full with straw, to cause the cow give milk. The Bishop had the title, but my Lord got the milk or commoditie." Calderwood's Hist. p. 55.

"Mr. Patrick Adamson, in a sermon which he preached against the order of bishops, had the following observations, that there were three sorts of bishops, I. The Lord's Bishop, viz. Christ's, and such was every pastor. II. My Lord Bishop, that is a bishop who is a lord who sits and votes in parliament, and exercises jurisdiction over his brethren. III. My Lord's Bishop, one, whom some lord or nobleman at court places to be receiver-general of his rents, and to give leases for his lordship's behoof; but had neither the means nor power of a bishop. This last sort he called a Tulchan Bishop." Cant's Hist. Perth, I. Introd. p. xi.

2. A bag or budget, generally of the skin of an animal, S.B.

-" Flae him belly-flaught, his skin wad mak a gallant tulchin for you." Journal from London, p. 2. 3. The term is metaph. applied to a chubby, sometimes to a dwarfish, child, Ang.

It has been said that Tulchan is an Irish word used in the sense first mentioned; Knox's Hist. Life, xxxiii. But I have met with no evidence of this. It is not improbable, that it is of Gothic origin. Su.G. tolk signifies a model. In re architectonica dicitur modulus vel typus, ad quem plura facienda exiguntur, ut forma crassitie vel longitudine similia sint; Ihre. Isl. túlk-a signifies to entice; pellicere. Now, tulchan, in sense 1., corresponds to both terms. It is a resemblance of the animal, made as like to it as possible: and it is thus made, for the purpose of enticing the dam to give her milk.

TULSURELIKE, adj.

And at his mouth a blubbir stode of fome, Like to ane bore quhetting his tuskis kene, Rycht tulsurelike, but temperaunce in tene. Henrysone's Test. Creseide, Chron. S. P. i. 163. It conveys the idea of furious.

TUMDEIF, s. Some kind of disease, mentioned by Sir John Roull.

-Tumdeif or edroposy,

Maigram, madness, or missilry, &c.

V. Gl. Compl. p. 330. The last syllable is apparently allied to Isl. deife, hebeto, viribns defraudo. Could we suppose the first to be from Su.G. tumme, pollex, it might signify want of feeling or numbness in the thumb, or other joints.

To TUME, v. a. To empty, to evacuate, S. Dan. tomm-er, Su.G. Isl. toem-a, vacuare, A. Bor. toom or tume. V. TEYM.

Tume, Toom, Tome, adj. 1. Empty, having nothing in it, S. Toome, A. Bor. id.

It is used in the same sense by R. Brunne.

Houlate, iii. 15. That the word thevisnek contains an allusion to the cry of this bird, appears from the use of it elsewhere.

"The tuechitis cryit theuis nek, quhen the piettis clattrit." Compl. S. p. 60.

The name is probably meant to imitate the sound made by this bird; like Germ. kiwit; Sw. kowipa, E. pewet, Fr. dishuit, and S. synon. Peeweep, pees-

TURBOT, s. The name commonly given, in our TURN, s. To do the turn. 1. To perform any riece of work or business, S.

"The over-lord sall doe all the turnis and affairs perteining to the heire, and sall persew all his pleyes and actions for him," &c. Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 41. § 7.

-" There was no pay to the waged horsemen and footmen, wherein stood the forces that were reposed in to do the turn." Mr. Ja. Mellvill's MS. Men. p. 229.

2. To be sufficient for any purpose; to give satisfaction. S.

But words I winna langer using be, Nor will sic aff-sets do the turn with me. Ross's Helenore, p. 85:

TURNER, s. A copper coin, formerly current in S., in value two pennies Scots money, and equivalent to a Bodle.

"So far as I know, the copper coins of two pennies, commonly called two-penny pieces, boddles or turners, and also babees, containing sixpences, or half a shilling Scots, such as the English call half-pennies, began to be coined after the restoration, in the beginning of Charles II.'s reign." Introd. to Anderson's Diplom. p. 138.

The learned writer is mistaken, in giving so late a date to the Turner. This coin was struck in the reign of James VI.

-" King Charles' turners, striken by the earl of Stirling, by virtue of the king's gift, were, by proclamation, -cried down from two pennies to one penny; king James' turners to pass for two pennies, because they were no less worth; and the kaird turners simpliciter discharged, as false cuinzies." Spalding's Troubles, i. 197. V. also p. 217.

Since Allan's death, nae body car'd For anes to speer how Scotia far'd, Nor plack nor thristled turner war'd, To quench her drouth.

Dr. Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore. Rudd. seems justly to observe, that "this name is taken from the French, who were used to call their gros, dernier [l. denier], and doubles, Tournois, from the money coined with a great mixture of brass in the city of Tours." Ibid. p. 220. These were also current in S., on account of the friendship between the two nations. They have the inscription, Double Tournois, i. e. a Twopenny piece Tournois; of the reigns of Lewis XIII. and XIV. Thus, their nominal value in S. was the same as in France. Their real value exceeded ours. For a French penny was, according to Cotgr., vo. Tournois, the tenth part of a penny Sterling, ours being only the twelfth.

TURNGREYS, s. A winding stair. A cruell portar gat apon the wall, Powit out a pyn, the portculys leit fall-Rychard Wallace the turngreys weill has seyn; He folowit fast apon the portar keyn, A tour the wall dede in the dyk him draiff,

From Fr. tourn-er to turn, and gre, contr. from degré, pl. degrez, steps.

TURN-TAIL, s. Used as synon. with E. turncoat. Perhaps it originally denoted a fugitive.

" Many of the Covenanters proved turn-tail through plain fear, and came in most willingly to him." Spalding's Troubles, i. 170.

TURNE-PYK, TURNEPECK, TURNPIKE, s. 1.

Wyntown, viii. 38. 74.

2. Any stair of a spiral form built without a house, and resembling one of the towers of a castle, S.

"A turnpike stair is the term used in Edinburgh, and over all Scotland, to denote a stair, of which the steps are built in a spiral form, like a screen [l. screw] winding round the same axis, in opposition to straight flights of steps, which are called scale stairs." Arnot's Hist. Edin. p. 246. N.

"Thus the King accompanyed only with the sayde Maister Alexander, comes forth of the chamber, passeth through the ende of the hall (where the noblemen and his Majesties servants were sitting at their dinner,) up a turnepecke." Account of Gowrie's Conspiracy, Cant's Hist. Perth, i. 196.

"But the Earle of Gowrye and his servants made them for another way up a quiet turnepeck, which was ever condemned before, and was only then left, open (as appeared) for that purpose." Ibid. 202. 203.

Teut. torn, toren, signifies a tower, baecke a pharos, a place for observation. But whether this be the origin, is doubtful.

To TURS, Turss, v. a. 1. To pack up in a bale or bundle, as E. truss, Fr. trouss-er, id. from Isl. truts fasciculus, Belg. tross sarcina.

2. To carry off hastily.

This jowell he gert turss in till Ingland. Wallace, i. 128. MS.

A hundreth schippis, that ruther bur and ayr, To turss thair gud, in hawyn was lyand thar. Ibid. vii. 1067. MS.

Fr. trouss-er also signifies to pluck or twitch up; Cotgr.

3. To take one's self off quickly, to march with expedition.

Thy slicht and wylis sal the not bere away, Nor hail skarth hyne do turs the hame fra vs Vnto thy faderis hous the fals Aunus.

Doug. Virgil, 390. 26.

Thidder hail the pepill of Italia, And all the land eik of Enotria, There doutsum asking tursis for ansuere, And thare peticiouns gettis assoilyet here. Ibid. 207. 42.

4. To turss furth, to bring out what has been kept in store. Turssyt furth ger; Wallace. Turssable, adj. What may be carried away.

"The laird, fearing some trouble to follow, displenished the place, left nothing tursable within."-Spalding's Troubles, i. 221.

TURTOUR, TURTURE, s. The turtle-dove, Lat. turtur.

—Sodeynly, a turture quhite as calk, So evinly vpon my hand gan lycht, And vnto me sche turnyt hir, full rycht. King's Quair, vi. 5.

TUSCHE', s. A girdle, Dunbar. V. TISCHE. To TUSH, v. n. To express displeasure.

TUSK, s. The torsk of Pennant, S. Asellus varius vel striatus, Schonevelde; Gadus callarias, Linn.

"The fish called tusk abounds on the coast of Brassa; the time for fishing is at the end of May. This fish is as big as a ling, of a brown and yellow colour, has a broad tail; it is better fresh than salted." Martin's West. Islands, p. 385.

"It is a fish much esteemed for its delicacy; the meat divides into flakes on being boiled, like that of a salmon: for which reason, as Schonevelde tells us, the Germans call it Scheibendorsch." Pennant's Zool. v. iii. 143. Ed. 1769.

According to Pennant, its Sw. name is torsk. This, however, is rendered cod by Scren., codling by Wideg. Our designation is nearly the same with Isl. thosk-r, asellus.

TUSSOCK (of wheat), s. A tust of wheat in a corn field, generally owing to the vegetating of the nest or granary of a field-mouse, Loth. Sw. test, a lock; Isl. thust-r, a handful of reeds.

To TUTE, v. n. To jut out, to project; also Tute, s. a jutting out, a projection, S.B.

Su.G. tut, rostrum, a beak; Teut. tuyte, id. also, a horn, or any thing wreathed. Hence, TUTE-MOWITT, adj. Having the nether jaw projected.

How fain wald I discryve perfytt My ladye with the mekle lippis!

How scho is tute-mowitt lyk an aep.

Dunbar on ane Blak-moir Ladye, Maitland Poems, p. 97.

Mr. Pinkerton renders this thick-lipped, deriving it from Su.G. tut rostrum. But most probably it is originally the same with Tcut. tote-muyl, tuyte-muyl, brouchus; which properly signifies; "having the teeth and nether jaw more sticking out than the upper;" Ainsw. This agrees better with the similitude, like an ape, than the idea of thick lips. The word is comp. of tuyte rostrum, and muyl os, oris, whence perhaps our mow mouth. Belg. toot, signifies "a wry mouth;" Sewel. V. Mow and Mowband.

Tut-mouthed occurs in a similar sense in E. Somner gives it as synon. with great-lipped, when explaining A.S. wroc, bronchus. It is also expl. in the same manner by Seren.

Isl. tutna intumescere, tutnan tumor, and tut-ur tumidus, (G. Audr. p. 243), seem to acknowledge the same fountain. Perhaps teit-a rostrum beluinum, ibid. p. 237. is the s. synon. with Teut. tuytc. TUTIE TATIE, interj. Pshaw. It is not long since this phrase was in use, S.

V. Toot, v. 2. and Tut-mute. TUTIVILLARIS, s. pl.

Sa mony rackettis, sa mony ketche-pillaris, Sic ballis, sic nachettis, and sic tutivillaris,— Within this land was povir hard nor sone

Within this laud was nevir hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 44.

Lord Hailes observes from Junius, that things of no value were anciently called titivilitia, as the term denoted rotten threads which fall from the distaff, and in general the vilest things of this description, which cheats imposed on the simple instead of valuable merchandise; Note, p. 254.

From the use of this word, however, although somewhat altered, in other places, I suspect that it is a personal designation.

In Kennedy's Flyting, it is written tutevillous, Evergreen, ii. 74. tutivillus, Edin. Edit. 1508. In a Poem in the Bann. MS. describing Cockelbie's Feast, one of the guests is a tutevillus. In another, ibid. p. 104. this designation is given to an evil spirit.

It may bear the sense of rustic; and Ir. tuata-mhail, tuatavail, has precisely this signification; from tuata id. and this from tuath a country. V. Lhuyd, vo. Rusticus.

TUTIWING, s. Leg. Tutilling; a blast or blowing of a horn.

And, as thai war in sic effray, A tutilling off his horne hard thai: And thai, that hes it knawyn swith War of his cummyn wondre blyth.

Barbour, xix. 604. MS.

This word is a dimin. from Toot, and denotes a weaker sound, or that which seems to be so, as being heard at a distance.

TUT-MUTE, s. A muttering or grumbling between parties, that has not yet assumed the form of a broil, S.B.

Contention is sometimes thus vulgarly described: "It began with a laigh tut-mute, and it raise to a hiech tuilyie-mulie."

Teut. tuyt-en, to buzz; Isl. taut-a, murmurare, mutire, taut, mutum murmur, susurratio, G. Audr. Teut. muyt-en, Su.G. mutt-a, to mutter; two synon. terms being conjoined, which is frequently the case in such comp. words. Or mute may be used in the sense of quarrel. V. Tullyle-mulle.

Doug. Virgil, 300. 2.
A.S. twegen, twain, from tweg two. MoesG. twa has twans in the accus. Su.G. twaenne the old feminine of twaa.

The phrase occurs in another passage, which deserves our attention.

Wallace send Blayr, in his preistis weid,
To warn the west, quhar freyndys had gret dreid,
How thai suld pass, or to gud Wallace wyn,
For Inglissmen that held thaim lang in twyn.
Wallace, ix. 1237. MS.

This might, without any violence, signify in doubt, as A.S. twyn and tween denote doubt, hesitation; and twyn-an to doubt. But it seems rather to mean asunder.

It may, however, be worth while to observe, that these terms are formed from twa, tweg, two, as Su.G. twek-a dubitare, from twaa; because, as Ihre remarks, the thoughts, in a state of hesitation, are as it were drawn into two parts. The same metaphor, he adds, prevails in almost all languages. Thus Heb. shandh, dubitare, is from two; sheni, duo; Gr. doin, dubium, doize, &c. from duo; as Lat. ambigo, and dubito, from ambo and duo; MoesG. tusver-ian, haesitare, from twa, in compos. tus; Belg. twantel-en, Alem. zueh-on, id. from twee, and zwey.

To Twin, Twyne, v. n. To part, to separate.

V. U.

V, in some of our old printed books, is invariably used for W; as in the Complaynt of Scotland. It is not therefore to be supposed that W was pron. V; or that it was even written in this manner. In MSS, these letters are properly distinguished. Often indeed W is written instead of V or U; as in grewys for grevys, grieves, lewys for levys, lives. When it is thus used as a vowel, Mr. Macpherson has marked it with two dots, in this manner, W; to distinguish it from W consonant.

The reason why V is substituted in some oldbooks for W, most probably is, that as this letter is not used by the French, these were either printed in France, or, although the product of the Scottish press, executed either by Fr. compositors, or with Fr. types. It may be observed that in S. books printed in France, even where W is used, great aukwardness appears. The capital letter is frequently inserted in the middle of the word. In other instances, for want of the proper letter, v is doubled. The words, therefore, printed with V as the initial letter, will in general be found under W.

VADMELL, s. A species of woollen cloth, manufactured and worn in the Orkneys.

"The old men and women are just in the style of their forefathers. As they are sprung from the Norwegians, they still continue to wear good strong black clothes without dying, called by the ancient Norse, Vadmell, and by them wrought in a loom called Upstagang; but now wrought in the common manner." P. Birsay, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xiv.

This cloth must be often at least, what we call in S. tweeled. For it is also denominated Skaktvadmal, pannus vilior obliquis filis textus; Verel. p. 222. Skakt has the same meaning with S. shacht. V.

Henrysone's Test. Creseide, Chron. S. P. i. 165. This v. has perhaps been formed as primarily denoting the obeisance made by servants, when they expected a vail or vale, i. e. a gratuity from visitors. Johns. derives this from avail profit, or Lat. vale, farewel. Perhaps from Fr. veill-er, to watch, studiously to attend.

Fr. vaille que vaille, Lat. valeat quantum valere potest. Does not the phrase, as used by Doug., rather seem exactly analagous to the Lat., as signifying, "as far as possible, as far as it can go?"

The sense is evidently the same, in the following passage.

The term, as used in E., would seem to be confined to persons. Thus Valentines are defined by Blount: "Either saints chosen for special patrons for a year, according to the use of the Romanists; or men or women chosen for special loving friends by an ancient custom upon St. Valentine's day;" Glossograph.

2. Transferred to the sealed letters sent by royal authority, to chieftains, landholders, &c. for the purpose of apprehending disorderly persons. To be a leiche he fenyt him thair, Quhilk mony a man might rew evirmair; For he left nowthir sick nor sair Unslane, or he hyne yeid. Vane-organis he full clenely carvit.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 19. Lord Hailes conjectures that this may denote the veins of the head. But the learned writer is undoubtedly mistaken. For the phrase is evidently borrowed from Fr. Veines organiques, which, according to Cotgr., has the same meaning with Veines iliaques, "the iliac or flank veines, two main descendent branches of the hollow vein, a right and a left one, from either of which five others issue. The right one," he says, "is opened against the dropsy, and other diseases of the liver; the left one for the passion of the spleen." There is no reason, then, for supposing, with Lord Hailes, that the operation, referred to by Dunbar, was by means of cupping glasses. The carving, or opening of the organic veins, even without the use of these glasses, seems to have been then accounted a nice and important operation.

VANQUISH, s. A disease of sheep, S.

"The peculiar disadvantages of it are,—the pernicious quality of a species of grass to the health of the sheep in 2 or 3 farms on the side of the Dee, infecting them with a disease called the Vanquish, i. e. it weakens, wastes, and would at last kill them, unless removed to another farm; but [they] are no sooner removed than they recover their health, and gradually their strength and fatness. This disease is of a different nature from the Rot; for rotten sheep put upon these farms (I am told) often recover." P. Kells, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. iv. 267.

"In one or two farms a disease also prevails termed the Vanquish. It arises from feeding on dry barren moss, void of all nourishment, to which the creatures are so attached, that they will never leave it till they die of emaciation. In this disease the horns usually become red." P. Carsefairn, Kirkcudb. Statist. Acc. vii. 518.

In these quotations, the designation of this disease is evidently viewed as borrowed from the E. v. It may be observed, however, that Isl. vanke is mentioned by G. Andr. as a disease of sheep. He indeed describes it as especially affecting the brain. Mutilatio sanitatis, praesertim in cerebro. Vankadr, Laesus sanitate cerebri; ovibus accidit; Lex. p. 247.

2. It sometimes particularly denotes a groom.

Menage considers this as the same with Fr. valet, originally written varlet. These terms are accordingly used promiscuously in O.Fr. writings. V. Du Cange. Valetus, Tiro, operarius mercenarius. Bullet gives varled as an Arm. word of the same sense; deriving valet from it.

Some, however, have viewed varlet as a dimin. from Su.G. war, Germ. wer, Lat. vir, a man; as it does not merely denote a servant, but a stripling.

Rudd. observes that E. varlet "of old was taken in a good sense for yeomen and yeomen servants, as in a repealed Stat. 20 of Rich. II. of England." Varlet, jeune homme, jeune galant; Gl. Rom. de la Rose.

Barbour, vi. 22. MS.

Fr. vasselage is used in the old romances, as denoting valour; and, a valiant or worthy deed; Cotgr. The reason of this use of the term, according to Rudd., is, that "at first lands were given by superiors to vassals for military service, and these were best rewarded, who signalized themselves by their valour: the same way as Miles and Knight came to be titles of honour."

Wachter views vassal as a dimin. from L.B. vassus, a client, a dependant; and this he deduces from C.B. gwas, a servant. Verel. derives it from Isl. veislumen, feudatorii, from veisla, a feast. Hence veislumen, those who were bound to serve such as sat at a feast, which was the duty imposed on feudatories by the ancient Goths. V. Seren.

3. It sometimes denotes any thing great or uncommon, Ang.

This, I suppose, is from the show made, or the attention attracted, by an object of this description.

E. gaudy seems the same with our vaudie, with this difference, that the latter retains the Goth. form. Skinner derives the former from Lat. gaudere to rejoice, or Fr. gaude, a yellow flower. Gaude, however, according to Cotgr., denotes the stalk of a certain plant which produces a yellow dye. Seren. derives gaudy from Isl. gaud, the name given to God by the pagan Goths; used, after the introduction of Christianity, to denote a thing of nought. Belg. weydsch might be viewed as allied to our term, as it signifies, taudry, flaunting; Sewel. VAUENGEOUR, s. An idler, a vagabond.

UDAL, adj. A term applied to lands held by uninterrupted succession, without any original charter, and without subjection to feudal service, or the acknowledgment of any superior.

"Previously to that aera [the Reformation], the lands here, like those in the eastern countries, seem to have acknowledged no superior, nor to have been held by any tenure, but were called odal or udal lands; the characteristic of which is, that they are subject to no feudal service, nor held of any superior.—The holders of these lands, or, what is the same thing, the proprietors of them were, of all men, reckoned the most honourable. Hence, the frequent mention that is made, not only in the celebrated Danish historian [Torfacus], and in the noted deduction so often quoted [Wallace's Diploma], but even in the elegant Latin historian of Scotland [Buchanan], of the Proceres Orcadium, or the nobles of Orkney. This appellation, however, could not have been bestowed on all the proprietors of this description, who seem to have been very numerous, but was probably confined principally to the earls, their relations and connexions, who held their lands in this manner." Barry's Orkney, p. 219.

This term has been viewed as synon, with allo-dial.

—"These udal. or allodial lands are directly opposed to fees or feus, which are always subject to a rental or feu-duty to a superior, to which the other never were, but only paid tithe, which appears to have been exacted from almost all lands whatever; and scat, which, in the language of the mother country, is said to signify tribute, land-tax or ground-subsidy." Ibid.

"It is very probable that all the lands in Shetland were allodial or udal. The proprietor had no right to shew but uninterrupted succession." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 584.

The idea attached to udal corresponds to the signification of allodial.

"Allodial subjects, or subjects granted in alode, are opposed to feus. By these are understood lands or goods enjoyed by the owner independent of any superior, or without any feudal homage." Erskine's Instit. B. ii. T. 3. s. 8.

Udal property has, in one instance, been distinguished from allodial, but, as would seem, improperly Formula the state of tenure of land in Secondar the Allo-Scotland. First, the Feudal.-Secondly, the Allodial, which in the German language signifies free, without paying any quit rent, or having a superior; and, Thirdly, the Udal, being a right compleat without writing; this obtains in Orkney and Zetland, and in the buildings of the Four Towns of the parish of Lochmaben.—The lands of Four Towns were granted by one of our kings to his household servants, or garrison of the castle, and the property of each being small, they were allowed, as a kind of indulgence, to hold it without the necessity of charter and sasine, bare possession being a sufficient title. The tenants pay a small rent to the Viscount of Stormont, but have no charter or sasine from him. The property of these lands is transferred from one person to another, by delivery and possession only; but they must be entered in the rental in Lord Stormont's rental-book, which is done without fee or reward." P. Lochmaben, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. vii. 239.

The small rent paid to Lord Stormont may have been equivalent to the scat mentioned above, although afterwards consigned to a subject; otherwise, these towns cannot strictly be viewed as udal property.

In like manner, "some of the udal lands [in Orkney] pay a small proportion of yearly rent to Vol. II.

the King, and to the kirk; and some of them do not pay any thing to the one or to the other." P. Stronsay, Statist. Acc. xv. 393.

Allodial property has thus been distinguished from udal, on the ground that the latter implies "a right compleat without writing." But this appears to have been merely a local peculiarity of possessions of the udal kind, forming no essential difference between them and those called allodial.

Erskine, when speaking of "the udal right of the stewartry of Orkney and Shetland," says; "When these islands were first transferred from the crown of Denmark to that of Scotland, the right of their lands was held by natural possession, and might be proved by witnesses, without any title in writing; which had probably been their law formerly, while they were subject to Denmark; and to this day, the lands, the proprietors of which have never applied to the sovereign, or those deriving right from him, for charters, are enjoyed in this manner: but where the right of lands in that stewartry has once been constituted by charter and seisin, the lands must from that period be governed by the common feudal rules; except church-lands, whose valuation is no higher than L20 Scots, the proprietors of which are allowed, by 1690, c. 32. to enjoy their property by the udal right, without the necessity of renewing their infeftments." Ersk.

There is no good reason to doubt that allodial and udal are originally one term. Erskine indeed has observed, that the former "is probably derived from a, privativa, and leode, or leude, a German vocable used in the middle ages for vassal, or fidelis, (from whence the term liege probably draws its origin;)—for the proprietor of allodial subjects is laid under no obligations of fidelity to a superior." Instit.

Our learned countryman, Dr. Robertson, has adopted Wachter's etymon. "Alode," he says, "or allodium, is compounded of the German particle an and lot, i. e. land obtained by lot. Wachter, Gloss. Germ. voc. Allodium, p. 35. It appears by the authorities produced by him and by Da Cange, voc. Sors, that the northern nations divided the lands which they had conquered in this manner. Feodum is compounded of od possession or estate, and feo wages, pay; intimating that it was stipendiary, and granted as a recompence for service. Wachter, ibid. voc. feodum, p. 441." Hist. Charles V. Vol. I. Proofs, p. 270.

Alode (L.B. alod-is, alod-us, alod-ium, alaud-ium,) seems to be merely odal or udal inverted. This is the opinion of Wachter, vo. Allodium. Loccenius evidently entertained a similar idea. For he expl. odhelby, as signifying an allodial village.—Ille cum allodiali, veteri et principali pago (Odhelby), ex communi pagi silva possidebit ligna cremalia. Sueciae Leg. Provinc. p. 173. Verel. also expl. Odal, bona avita, fundi, allodium; Ind. p. 184.

Odal, according to Wormius, "denotes hereditary goods, or praedia libera, subjected to no servitude; to which feuda [S. feus] are opposed, as lying under this bondage. This word," he says, "agrees with Allodium, which denotes an inheritance derived from ancestors, and inseparable from the family. Hence Allodarii, those who held inheritances of this kind, and could enter into agreements with respect to their possessions, without consulting their lords." Mon. Danic. p. 507. 508.

4 G

The basis of the term odal, udal, undoubtedly is Su.G. od, anc. aud, oed, possession. This is analogous to the etymon of Feod-um given by Robertson. It is rather surprising, that it did not occur to the learned writer, that this etymon of feodum rendered that which he gives of alode extremely suspicious; it being natural to suppose that both these terms would contain a reference to the mode of possession.

There is more difficulty in determining the origin of the termination. It has been supposed, with considerable probability, that it is from ald-ur, aetas, antiquitas, Germ. alt, old, as denoting ancient possession. Accordingly, Su.G. odaljord signifies that which has been long in possession; odalsmadr, a man who possesses an ancient property; odalboren, one who has by his birth the possession of an ancient property; odalby, a primitive and ancient village, i. e. one built by the first inhabitants of a country, as distinguished from those erected in later times. Obrien, and after him General Vallancey, says, that "Ir. allod, ancient, is the original, upon which the Lat. allodium, signifying ancient property, hath been formed."

ty, hath been formed."

Verelius, perhaps with greater probability, derives allodium from all omnis, and aude possessio, plena et totalis possessio, q. as excluding any superior.

Ind. vo. Luta, p. 163.

Some have supposed that al is contr. from Su.G. adel noble. But there is a possibility, that, notwithstanding the change of the vowels, adel and odal may have been originally the same. This might seem to be confirmed, not only from the A.S. synonyme being sometimes written oethel, but from its also signifying, patria, regio. The presumption, however, is still stronger from the Isl. term odalboren, nobly born, being so similar to Su.G. adalborin, and A.S. aethelboren, which have precisely the same signification. Alem. adalerbi is expl. as synon. with alode, Allodium nobile, immune, liberum, hereditas et possessio libera et exemta; Schilt. Gl. vo. Adhal, p. 10.

If this conjecture be well-founded, A.S. aethel has originally conveyed the idea of one who had an allodial property, or who acknowledged no superior. V. Athill.

"From a comparison," it has been observed, between the laws by which this udal property was inherited, sold, redeemed, or transmitted from one person to another, and some of the Mosaical institutions mentioned in Scripture, some have imagined that the former were derived from the latter; and indeed it must be confessed that there are between them many striking points of resemblance." Parry's Orkney, p. 210

Barry's Orkney, p. 219.

We cannot with certainty, however, trace it any farther back than to the irruption of the barbarous nations into the provinces of the Roman empire. The account, which the elegant historian, formerly quoted, gives of the origin of allodial property, may be viewed as' equally applicable to this. "Upon settling in the countries which they had subdued, the victorious troops divided the conquered lands. That portion which fell to every soldier, he seized as a recompence due to his valour, as a settlement acquired by his own sword. He took possession of it as a freeman in full property. He enjoyed it during his life, and could dispose of it at pleasure, or transmit it as an inheritance to his children. Thus property in land became fixed. It was at the same time allodial, i. e. the possessor had the entire right of property and dominion; he held of no sovereign or superior lord, to whom he was bound to do homage, and perform service." Hist. Charles V. Vol. I. p. 256.

This mode of holding property seems to have been introduced into the Orkney islands immediately from Norway, during their subjection to that country, or to Earls of Norwegian extraction. In Norway, it is said, feudal tenures were not known.

V. Barry, p. 218.

Different attempts were made to wrest this right from the inhabitants of the Orkneys. Harold Harfager, about the beginning of the tenth century, commanded Earl Einar and all the inhabitants of Orkney to pay him sixty marks of gold. The landholders reckoning the fine too great, the Earl obtained this condition for them, that he should himself pay the whole fine, oc skylldi hann eignaz tha odol oll i eyonom; omnia in insulis bona allodalia vicissim obtenturus; and that he should hold, in return, all the udal property in the islands."—Long after, at Jarlar atto odol oll, "the Earls possessed all the udal property in the Orkneys, till Sigurd the son of Lewis restored it to the owners." Heimskr. ap. Johnst. Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 11.

Harold Harfager had acted the same part in Norway, as did Einar in Orkney. We learn accordingly, that when his son Hacon succeeded him, it was reported that in all respects he was such a prince as Harold, "with this single exception, that whereas Harold greatly oppressed all the subjects, Hacon desired to live on good terms with them, oc baud at gefa baendom odol sin, having promised to the possessors of land the restitution of their allodial rights, of which Harold had deprived them." 1bid. p. 62.

It is to be observed, that although bondom and baendom occur in the original here, and are rendered in the Lat. version, coloni, the terms are not to be understood as denoting what we now call farmers. For, as we learn from Ihre, bonde, in one of its senses, denotes the possessor of his own inheritance, as distinguished from Landbo, Bryti, &c. which signify one who cultivates the land of another, paying rent, or a certain part of the produce, in return. V. Husband.

UDAL-MAN, UDELAR, UDALLER, s. One who holds property by udal right.

"The Udal-men with us were likewise called Rothmen or Roythmen, i. e. Self-holders, or men holding in their own right, by way of contradistinction to feudatories." Fea's Grievances, p. 105.

"There are six udelars in Deerness, persons whose property, in some parts of Orkney, is so small, as, if let to a tenant, would scarcely draw above a tub of bear, that is, about a firlot of yearly rent." P. St. Andrews, Orkn. Statist. Acc. xx. 260.

"They are occupied, at least some of them, by men here called udallers, who are little proprietors of land, that has never been held by the feudal tenure, nor subjected to either service or payment to any superior." Barry's Orkney, p. 28.

The smallness of the property of these landholders in our times is thus accounted for:

"As these udallers divided their lands among all their children, (the son got two merks, and the danghter one; hence the sixter part, a common proverb in Shetland to this day), the possessions soon became trifling, and were swallowed up by great men, generally strangers, many of whom acquired estates in a very short time." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 581.

Had Dr. Barry attended to this cause of the gradual diminution of the property of these landholders, in proportion to the increase of their number, he would have seen no reason for supposing, that the appellation of Proceres, or nobles, " could not have been bestowed on all the proprietors of this description,-but was probably confined to the earls, their relations and connexions."

Eagerness for political influence has greatly contributed to diminish the number of udallers, as none of this description can vote for a member of Parliament. This is to be viewed as another reason, why, in the present time, the udal rights are to be found attached only to inconsiderable possessions. For as there are not "any persons of note, any more than of extensive property, to be found at present among that class of proprietors;" we are assured, that "all of that description have long ago relinquished their ancient udal rights, and hold their lands by the same tenures as those of the same rank in other parts of the kingdom." Barry's Orkney, p. 220. V. UDAL.

The radical term seems to have been very generally diffused.

Isl. vor, Su.G. waar, Lat. ver, Gr. sae, Gael. earrach, id. One writer, I find, ascribes an Egyptian origin to this word. The Egyptians, he says, having no occasion for any kind of manure, be-cause the land was sufficiently fertilized by the overflowing of the Nile, " it was ordered, that all the rotten straw, mouldy corn, dung, &c. should be gathered and set on fire the first of February .-This day, called the lighted wisps and fires, or, the feast of the purification of the air, was proclaimed by an Isis and a Horus—The Horus was called our or ourim, the fire or firebrands; from whence that season of the year has been ever since called ouer, or wer, or ver, the Spring." Meagher's Popish Mass, p. 178. V. Vor.

VENDACE, s. The Gwiniad, salmo Lavaretus, Linn. S.

" It is affirmed by the fishermen, that there are 15 or 16 different kinds fit for the table, among which there is one that, from every information that can be obtained, is peculiar to that loch [Lochmaben], as it is to be found no where else in Britain. It is called the Vendise or Vendace, some say from Vendois in France, as being brought from thence by one of the Jameses, which is not very probable, as it is found by experience to die the moment that it is touched, and has been attempted to be transported to other lochs in the neighbourhood, where it has always died." P. Lochmaben, Dumfr. Statist. Acc. vii. 236.

This account is evidently incorrect. For this is the Powan of Lochlomond, and the Guiniad of Wales. Pennant, describing the Gwiniad, says:

Geneva, the Schelly of Hulse water, the Pollen of Lough Neagh, and the Vangis and Juvangis of Loch Mabon. The Scotch have a tradition that it was first introduced there by the beauteous queen, their unhappy Mary Stuart; and as in her time the Scotch court was much frenchified, it seems likely that the name was derived from the French, vendoise, a dace, to which a slight observer might be tempted to compare it from the whiteness of its scales. The British name Gwiniad, or whiting, was bestowed on it for the same reason." Zool. iii. 268. V. Powan.

The term were has evidently had its rise from A.S. wer, MoesG. wair, a man; Su.G. waer, Isl. ver, id. Lat. vir seems to have had a Gothic origin. Herodotus informs us, that the ancient Scythians called a man wife. Aio yag zalessi tor ardga. V. Ihre, vo. Waer.

Su.G. waereld, wereld, wergeld, is the price of a man who has been killed, or the fine paid for killing him; otherwise denominated Mansbot. Germ. vergeltung compensation; vergelt-en to satisfy, to compensate. Wergyld theof is a phrase used in the Laws of Ina, c. 72. as denoting a thief adjudged to pay the vergelt. This was also called Theiftbote.

Verelius, however, gives a different view of Isl. verigild, which must be radically the same. He expl. it; Mulcta solvenda secundum aestimationem damni dati,—a verde pretio, i. e. the worth or value of any thing. But he seems mistaken; especially as this opposes the Su.G. idiom.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 110, Dr. Leyden, Gl. Compl. S., justly observes, that it " signifies a corn, or bony excrescence on the feet; is in common use, and pronounced wirrok;" p. 380. He derives it from Lat. verruc-a, a wart. The name is sometimes applied to boils. I have heard it also expl., a pimple on the sole of the foot or heel, which occasions great pain, and often grows to a considerable size. Thus it is distinguished from a corn. It is sometimes written wyrock.

Ther is not in this fair a flyrock, That has upon his feit a wyrock, Knoul taes, or mouls in nae degre, But ye can hyde them .-

Dunbar, Evergreen, i. 254.

A.S. wearrig, wearriht, callosus, nodosus; Teut. weer, callus, nodus, tuber; Gl. Sibb. The affinity of wyrock to the latter is rendered highly probable from a circumstance to which the ingenious Glossarist has not adverted. Teut. weer-ooghe denotes a wart or pimple on the eye-lid, a stythe, or S. stie; chalazion, exiguum tuberculum in palpebris, (Kilian); from weer and ooghe, oculus. This seems to have been improperly applied to denote a pimple on the foot.

VIVDA, s. Beef or mutton hung and dried without salt, Orkney.

VIVE, VIUE, adj. 1. Lively, representing to the life, S. Fr. vif.

"So wee see the viue image of a faithfull Pastor, in the Lord Jesus: he will give his life for the sheepe, as hee saith himselfe." Rollocke on the Passion, p. 16.

In this sense it is used as an E. word.

2. Brisk, vigorous, S.

VIVELY, adv. Clearly, in a vivid light, S. But gin ye like to ware the time, then ye How a' the matter stood, shall vively see.

Ross's Helenore, p. 69. VIVERIS, VIEVERS, s. pl. Provisions for the sustenance of life, victuals, S. Fr. virres. "Item, if it sall be asked, That thair layed money sall have passage for thair viveris? Ye sall resson the comoditie and incomoditie thareof with the counsaill." Knox's Hist. p. 222.

"He sall cume [to the hoist] weill furnished with siluer to bye vievers for his sustentation, and not in hope to burding the cuntrie quhereby he passes, without making of payment." 1 Stat. Rob. 1. c. 5. s. 6.

ULISPIT, pret. v. Lisped; MS. wlispit. And in spek wlispit he sum deill; Bot that sat him rycht wondre weill. Barbour, i. 393. MS.

A.S. wlisp, dentiloquus.

UMAN, the pron. of woman, Ang.

This might seem originally the same with Isl. omann, non vir, effeminatus, from o privat. and mann. But perhaps it is merely a corr. pron. of the E. word, or of A.S. wifman.

UMAST, UMEST, UMAIST, adj. Uppermost, highest.

Endlang the wode war wayis twa: The Erle in the umast lay of tha.

Wyntown, viii. 31. 48. The schaft flew towart Turnus, and him smate Apoun his schulder, aboue the gardyis hie, That rysis vmaist thareupon we se.

Doug. Virgil, 334. 5. Mr. Macpherson thinks that this is a contr. of outhmast uppermost. But it is evidently from A.S. ufemest, ufemyst, supremus; from ufa above, and mest most, the sign of the superlative. MoesG. auhumists, id.

UMAST CLAITH, a perquisite claimed by the Vicar, in the time of Popery, on occasion of: the death of any person.

Item, this prudent Connsall has concludita. Sa that our haly Vickars be nocht wraith, From this day furth thay sal be cleane denudit Baith of cors-present, cow, and umest claith.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 257. Sibb. supposes that this was "probably the sheet which covered the body." But, from the description given of it by Lyndsay elsewhere, it appears that it was the coverlet of the bed. We also learn from the same passage, a curious trait of ancient manners; that it was customary for a man to use his cloak as a coverlet in bed, and for a woman to employ her petticoat in the same way.

And als the Vicar, as I trow, He will nocht faill to tak ane kow: And vpmaist claith (thocht babis thame ban), From ane pure selie husbandman: Quhen that he lyis for till die, Hauing small bairnis twa or thrie: And his thrie ky, withouttin mo, The Vicar must have one of tho: With the gray cloke, that happis the bed; Howbeit that he be purely cled. And gif the wife die on the morne, Thoch all the babis suld be forlorne, The vther kow he cleikis away, With hir pure cote of roploch gray: And gif within twa dayis or thrie The eldest childe hapnis to die, Of the thrid kow he will be sure.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 134. 135. This most oppressive perquisite is in Su.G. denominated Likstol; donarium Sacerdoti ob sepulturam datum. Ihre offers different conjectures as to the origin. But, as Su.G. stole signifies a garment worn by a priest, likstol may be analogous to the umaist claith as being claimed by the priest for his own use; q. the body-garment. The antiquity of the custom of giving him also a cow, appears from what is advanced by the same learned writer, vo. Ko, vacca.

To UMBEDRAW, v. n. Expl. to withdraw. And Venus loist the bewté of hir eye, Fleand eschamet within Cyllenius caue, Mars vmbedrew for all his grundin glaue.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 399. 11.

Sibb. observes, after Rudd., that the initial particle um or un has "here an intensive signification, as in unloose, and in various other instances." But um is undoubtedly the prep. signifying, about, around, corresponding to A.S. umb, ymb, ymbe, Alem. umbi, Belg. om, Germ. Isl. um, Su.G. om, um, circa. Ihre marks the affinity between these and the prep. um and umb, anciently used in Lat. and retained in Amb-arvale, Amb-urbium, Ambire; and Gr. αμφι. Su.G. om also signifies back.

Umbedrew may, therefore, more properly be rendered, turned about, or drew back; as allied to Belg. omdraaij-en, to turn about, omgedraaid, turned about; or omdraag-en to carry about.

UMBERAUCHT, pret. "Embarrassed,—or rather, smote, pursued; from the intensive particle un and beraucht, q. d. raucht, i. e. reached to, or did overtake;" Rudd.

The forthir coist of Italie have we caucht, Thocht hiddirtillis harde fortoun has vmberaucht The Troianis, and persewit vnfrendly.

Doug. Virgil, 164. 41. Thir mony yeris I left unprofitable, Ay sen the fader of goddis and King of men With thunder blast me smate, as that ye ken, And with his fyry leuin me vmberaucht.

1bid. 60. 31.

The sense is, encompassed, environed, from um, A.S. umb, circa, and raucht, from raec-an, rac-an, to reach, to extend, also, to overtake.

UMBERS()RROW, adj. 1. Hardy, resisting disease, or the effects of severe weather. An um-bersorrew bairn, a child that feels no bad effects from any kind of exposure, Border. It is sometimes corr. pron. numbersorrow.

2. Rugged, of a surly disposition, Loth.; an oblique sense.

The etymon of this term is uncertain. But it may either be corr. from Teut. on-be-sorght, negligens curae, non solicitus, Kilian; or comp. of Su.G. ombaer-a, carere, also, ferre, portare, and sorg aerumna, dolor; q. one who is devoid of care, or who bears without injury those things that cause it to others.

To UMBESCHEW, v. a. To avoid.

Bot vmbeschew this coist of Italie,
Quhilk nixt vnto our bourdouris ye se ly,
Bedyit with flowing of our seis flude,
Sen all thay cieties, with wikkit Grekis not gude
Inhabit ar.——

Doug. Virgil, 81. 24.

This is undoubtedly used as equivalent to eschew, v. 37.

Eschew thir cieties and thir coistis al.

Umb has perhaps been prefixed, as denoting the act of avoiding by taking a circuitous course.

To UMBESET, v. a. To beset on every side, to surround.

Grekis flokkis togidder here and thare, And vmbesettis cruelly and sare.

Doug. Virgil, 52. 50. A.S. ymb-sact-an, id. circumdare, circumsedere.

To UMBESEGE, v. a. To besiege round about, to encompass a city with armed men.

Was I not gouernour, and cheif ledar thare, The time quhen that the Troiane adulterare Umbesegit the cieté of Spartha, And the quene Elene reft and brocht awa?

Doug. Virgil, 316. 34.

To UMBETHINK, v. n. To consider attentively, q. on all sides, to view a matter in every possible light, to revolve in the mind.

All umbeweround with his fayis is he.

Barbour, xi. 640. MS.

Seren. derives environ from Sw. wir-a, omwir-a, torquere, literally, to surround with gold thread, from Isl. wyr fila ex orichalco: Germ. wirr-en, Sw. wirr-a, implicare.

Umbeweround seems to be derived from A.S. ymbe-hwearf-an, circumcingere, circumdare, circuire, ambire; from ymbe about, and hwearf-ian, to turn UMBOTH, s. Free parsonage teind or tithe.

"On page second of the Rental are 385 merks of land, also in the Parish of Unst, the teind of which being umboth, or free parsonage teind, is—payable to Lord Dundas as the Crown's Donator of the Lordship of Shetland, who has right to the Bishop's reserved teinds and church-lands.—The 385 merks land—pay of Landmails 128 lisponds, &c. and of umboth or free corn teind no less than 111 cans of oil, and 48 lisponds $20\frac{3}{12}$ merks weight of Butter." King's Quair, iv. 11. UMQUHILE, adv. 1. Sometimes, at times.

Ye may weill be ensampill se, That na man suld disparyt be: Na lat his hart be wencusyt all, For na myscheiff that enir may fall. For nane wate, in how litill space, That God wmquhile will send grace.

Barbour, iii. 256. MS.

This seems to be merely A.S. hwilom, hwilum, hwilon, aliquando, inverted; from umb circum, and hwile intervallum temporis.

2. Used distributively, in the sense of now as contrasted with then.

Tharfor men that werrayand war, Suld set thair etlyng euir mar To stand agayne thair fayis mycht, Wmquhile with strenth, and quhile with slycht. Barbour, iii. 262. MS. also v. 441.

Both [Bot] with themself quhat thay wald tel or crak,

Umquhyle sadlie, umquhyle jangle and jak.
Priests of Peblis, S.P.R. i. 3.

I find vmwhile once used by R. Brunne, in this sense, as contrasted with towhile.

Sir Robynet the Brus he durst noure abide, That thei mad him restus, bot in more & wod side.

Towhile he mad his trayne, & did vmwhile outrage.

Chron. p. 336.

Restus is expl. by Hearne rests. But it should certainly be rescurs, i. e. rescue, O.Fr. rescousse, id. He could not wait till his friends should bring him a supply of troops. V. Rescours.

A.S. hwilon is used in the same manner. Hwilon an, hwilon twa; Nunc unus, nunc duo; Now (or sometime) one, now two; Somner.

Vol. II.

3. Sometime ago, formerly:

Thair standis into the sicht of Troy an ilc, Wele knawin be name, hecht Tenedos umquhilc, Michty of gudis quhill Priamus ring sa stude: Now is it bot ane firth in the sey flude.

Doug. Virgil, 39. 19.

We war Troianis, vmquhile was Ilioun, The schyuand glorie of Phrigianis now is gon. Doug. Virgil, 50. 5.

Skinner mentions A.S. ymbhwile as also signifying, olim, pridem. But this word seems to have been unknown to Somner, Benson and Lye.

That this is an inversion of A.S. hwilom or hwilon, is confirmed by the use of quhilum, in this sense by Barbour.

For Rome quhilum sa hard wes stad, Quhen Hanniball thaim wencusyt had, That off ryngis with rich stanys, That war off knychtis fyngyris taneys, He send thre bollis to Cartage.

Bruce, iii. 207. MS.

In Edit. 1620 and 1670, it is umquhile, which might be the reading of another MS.

It is still frequently used in legal deeds as if it were an adj., S.

"The King to the Schiref greating: Command B. that instantlie and without delay, he deliver and restore to M. quha was wife of N. her reasonabill dowrie in sic ane towne; quhilk she alledges to perteine to her, be gift of her vmquhile husband." Reg. Maj. B. ii. c. 16. s. 53.

"That the lands, rents and riches, perteining to Pitscottie, p. 44.

It is a singular blunder that the learned Whitaker has fallen into, somewhere in his Vindication of Q. Mary, in explaining this term as signifying uncle.

As used in this sense, it is equivalent to, who sometime was husband or brother. Belg. wylen, from wyl, sometime, in like manner signifies deceased. Huysvrouw van Wylen N. N. i. e. Wife to the deceased N. N.

UMWYLLES, s. Reluctance, opposition.

UNCAIRDLY, adv. In a reckless manner, without the exercise of concern or care.

Dispairdly, vncairdly, I hasert ouer the hill.

Burel's Pilg. Watson's Coll. ii. 45.

i. e. "I hazarded myself, without regarding danger."

UNCANNAND, adj. Seems to have the same signification as S. uncanny, as denoting one who is supposed to have some preternatural power.

I bade you alway hold you weill, And namely from that man Gray Steel: For he is called uncannand,

And spoken of in many land.

Sir Egeir, p. 14.

UNCANNY, adj. 1. Not safe, dangerous, S. Thus wi' uncanny pranks he fights;

An' sae he did beguile,

An' twin'd us o' our kneefest men By death and by exile.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 7.

2. Not tender, not cautious, harsh, S. used both literally and metaph.

"I—was, by this experience of his watchful Providence over this great cause, made hopeful he would not suffer it to be spoiled by the imprudence of many uncanny hands which are about it." Baillie's Lett. i. 77.

Whinstanes, howkit frae the craigs, May thole the prancing feet o' naigs, Nor ever fear uncanny hotches Frae clumsy carts or hackney-coaches.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 69.

3. Mischievous; applied to those with whom any interference is dangerous, S.

"It was thought meet that he and his should lie about Stirling,—to make all without din march forward, lest his uncanny trewsmen should light on to call [drive] them up in their rear." Baillie's Lett. i. 175.

4. Applied to one supposed to possess preternatural powers; no canny, synon. S.

They tell me, Geordie, he had sic a gift,
That scarce a starnie blinkit frae the lift,
But he wou'd some auld warld name for't find;
For this some ca'd him an uncanny wight;
The clash gaed round, "he had the second sight."

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 8. V. CANNY.

UNCASSABLE, adj. What cannot be annulled or invalidated, Reg. Maj.; from in negat. and cass-are, irritum reddere.

UNCHANCY, adj. Not lucky, not fortunate, S. "Our ennymes ar to fecht aganis ws, quhome we neuir offendit with iniuris. Throw quhilk thair werkis salbe the more vnchancy and mair odius to God." Bellend. Cron. B. vi. c. 17.

UNCO, adj. 1. Unknown.

"Nae safe wading in unco waters;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 55.

This is the primary sense; A.S. uncuth, id.

2. Strange, unusual. That's unco; that is surprising, S. corr. from A.S. uncuth, incognitus, alienus.

As she hauf-sleeping and hauf-waking lay,
An unco din she hears of fouk and play;
The sough they made gar'd her lift up her eyn,
And O! the gathring that was on the green!
Ross's Helenore, p. 62.

3. Not acquainted; used both with respect to persons and brute animals, that are strange to each other. He's quite unco; He feels himself entirely a stranger, S. Uncouth is used by Bellenden in this sense, as to cattle. V. Homyll.

4. Not domestic. An unco man, a stranger; as distinguished from one who is a member of the family, or familiar in it, S.

Frae fouks a fieldward, nae frae fouk at hame, Will come the antercast ye'll hae to blame; Gin ye be wise beware of unco men.

Ross's Helenore, p. 61.

5. Distant, reserved in one's manner towards another, S.

Uncos, used as a s. pl. News, S.B. Gl. Shirr.

Allace! quhat suld he do? vneist he wyst.

Doug. Virgil, 109. 33.

R. Brunne uses vnnethis in the same sense, p. 75. Hors & hondes thei eté, vnnethis skaped non.— Clerkes vnnethis thei lete, to kirke o lyne to go.

A.S. un-eathe vix, scarcely; Somner. Unneth, Chaucer. Alem. unodo, difficulter. Ihre views Su.G. onoedig, invitus, as allied to A.S. un-eathe. V. Eith.

UNERDIT, part. adj. Not buried.

Vnerdit lyis of new the dede body,

That with his corpis infekkis al the nauy.

Doug. Virgil, 168. 10. V. End, v.

UNESCHEWABIL, adj. Unavoidable, Doug. UNESS, adv. V. UNEITH.

UNFANDRUM, adj. Bulky, unmanageable, Ang. UNFERY, ONFEIRIE, adj. Infirm, unweildy, not fit for action, S.

For thocht the violence of his sare smert Maid him unfery, yit his stalwart hert And curage vndekyit was gude in nede.

Doug. Virgil, 351. 21.
But leal my heart beats yet, and warm;
Thoch auld, onfeirie, and lyart I'm now.
Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 171.

Onfeirie is the more common pron. S.B. Su.G. wanfoer, imbecillis; Ihre, vo. Wan, p. 1035. V. Fery.

UNFLEGGIT, part. adj. Not affrighted.
—Thou canst charm,

Unfleggit by the year's alarm.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 93. V. Flec. UNFORLATIT, part. adj. 1. Not forsaken, Rudd.

2. "Fresh, new;" Rudd. In the passages referred to, the term contains a reference to the act of racking or drawing off wine from one cask to another.

Bot my propyne come fra the pres fute hate, Unforlatit, not jawyn fra tun to tun.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 126. 8. And quha sa lykis may taisting of the tvn Unforlatit newe from the berry rvn, Rede Virgill bauldly, but mekill offence, Except our vulgare toungis desference.

Doug. Virgil, 482. 48.

Belg. wyn verlaat-en, to rack wine, to draw it from one cask to another.

UNFORSAIN'D, adj. "Undeserved;" Gl. Ross.

My wrang, my wrang, gryte is my wrang, she says,——

Wrang unforsain'd, and that we never bought, Rank Kettren were they that did us the ill. Ross's Helenore, p. 29. Perhaps this term may have originally signified, irremediable, irreparable, q. that for which no atonement could be made; Teut. on negat. and versoen-en; Sw. foerson-a, to expiate.

UNFRE, adj. Discourteous.

Thou sleugh his brether thre, In fight;

Urgan and Morgan unfre, And Moraunt the noble knight.

Sir Tristrem, p. 160. st. 39. V. Fre. UNFRELIE, UNFREELY, adj. Inelegant, not handsome.

"Quhy is my fate," quoth the fyle, "fasseint so foule?

"My forme, and my fetherin, unfrelie but feir."

Houlate, i. 5.

i. c. "ugly without a parallel." From un negat. and Frely, q. v.

UNFRELIE, UNFREELIE, adj. 1. Frail, feeble, S.B.

2. Heavy, unweildy, S.B. unfery, synon.

This seems radically different from the preceding, as apparently comp. of Isl. un negat. and fralig-r swift, fleet; also powerful; frialcike, swiftness. Fraleg-ur madr, vir acer; Verel.

UNFREND, UNFRIEND, s. An enemy.

O Lord! I mak the supplication,
With thyne unfreindis lat me not be opprest.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 132.

"It seems his unfriends has made such reformation of that his unadvisedness, that in all hazards he must retreat it." Baillie's Lett. i. 77.

"Many in the house of Commons are falling off our unfriends;" Ibid. ii. 207. i. e. no longer taking part with our enemies.

Thus, as Mr. Macpherson observes, Lat. inimicus is slightly altered from in-amicus. Teut. on-vriend, inimicus, parum amicus; on-vriend-schap, inimicitia; A.S. unfreondlice, parum amice, inimice. UNFUTE-SAIR, adj.

Thrie Priests went unto collatioun,
Into ane privie place of the said toun.

Quhair that they sat, richt soft and unfute-sair;

Thay luifit not na rangald nor repair.

Priests Peblis, S. P. R. i. 3.

"This passage," Mr. Pinkerton says, "seems corrupt." But there is no ground for this supposition. A.S. fota-sare signifies dolor pedum, a pain in the foot; Somner. This phrase with the negat. particle prefixed, seems to be here used as an adj. "They sat at their ease, without pain." Although the reference immediately is to pain in the feet, as arising from much walking, the expression is certainly to be understood more generally, as signifying that they were free from any cause of disturbance whatsoever. The phrase is indeed expl. a little downwards.

Quhair that thay sat, full easily and soft.
UNGANAND, part. pr. Unfit, not becoming.
And younder, lo, beheld he Troylus
Wanting his armoure, the fey barne fleand,
For to encounter Achilles vnganand.

Doug. Virgil, 27. 50. V. GANE.

UNGEIR'D, UNGEARIT, adj. "Naked, not clad, unharnessed," S. Gl. Shirr. V. GEIR. UNGLAID, adj. Sorrowful.

Hir supplication with teris ful vnglaid Reportis hir syster.——

Doug. Virgil, 115. 12.
A.S. un-gladu, tristis, formed like Lat. illaeta-bilis, id.

UNHALSIT, part. pa. Not saluted. Now hir I leif vnhalsit, as I ryde, Of this dangere quhatsoeuer betyde, Al ignorant and wat nathyng, pure wicht.

Doug. Virgil, 285. 41. V. HALLES.

UNHEARTSOME, adj. Melancholy.

"It is an unheartsome thing, to see our father and mother agree so ill; yet the bastards, if they be fed, care not." Rutherford's Lett. p. i. ep. 178. To UNHEILD, v. a. To uncover.

I kneillit law, and unheilded my heid.

Palice of Honour, ii. 45.

A.S. unhel-an revelare, unheled revelatus. V. Heild.

UNHELE, s. Pain, suffering.

It nedis nocht to renew all my unhele.

Houlate, i. 20.

Chaucer, id. misfortune; A.S. un-hele crux, tormentum; MoesG. unhaili infirmitas, invaletudo; un-hails infirmus, invalidus, aegrotus; from un negat. and hails sanus.

UNHIT, part. pa. Not named.

Quha wald the, grete Cato, leif vnhit?
Or quha with sylence Cossus pretermit?

Doug. Virgil, 195. 55. V. HAT.

UNHONEST, adj. Dishonourable.

"He had na sicht to honest nor vnhonest actionis, bot allamerly to his proffet." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 12.

Lat. inhonest-us; Fr. inhoneste.

Unhonestie, s. Injustice.

"That he wald give na credite to ony man that wald murmure the saidis Lordes, or ony of them, be doing of wrang and unhonestie." Acts Ja. VI. 1579, c. 92. Murray.

Murmure is evidently elliptical, for murmur a-gainst, or perhaps, reproach.

TATED IZED P. T. . 1

UNIRKIT, adj. Unwearied.

And the Eneadanis all of his menye

Ithandly and vnirkit luffit have 1.

Doug. Virgit, 479. 22.

UNKENSOME, adj. Unknowable.

"A smith! a smith!" Dickie he cries,
"A smith, a smith, right speedilie,

To turn back the caukers of our horses' shoon! For its unkensome we wad be."

Minstrelsy Border, i. 198.

UNKNAW, part. pa. Unknown.

We se ane stange man, of forme vnknaw, Ane leuar wycht na mare pynit 1 ne saw.

Doug. Virgil, 88. 21.

Leuar is here viewed as an error of a copyist for. lenar, leaner. V. KNAW. UNLATIF, part. pa. Undisciplined, destitute-of proper breeding, so as to be unable to regulate one's conduct with propriety.

The unlatit woman the licht man will lait. Fordun, ii. 376. V. LAIT, v.

UNLAUCHFUL, adj. Unlawful.

"Against the unlauchful taking of profite be captaines and keepers of the Kingis castles." Ja. VI. 1581. c. 1. 25. Tit. Murray.

UNLAW, UNLACH, s. 1. Any transgression of the law, an injury or act of injustice.

"Seven tearmes sould be observed;—the damnage and skaith modified in ane certane quantitie, the words of the court in this maner in the end of the narration, 'Vnjustlie, and against the law, with wouch, wrang and vnlaw." Quon. Attach. c. 80.

"Na exception or defence sould be challenged; nor the defender sould not be estemed as not defending (as not comperand to defend) sa lang as he or his preloquitour defends tort and non reason, that is, wrang and vnlach (that is, to have done na iniurie, nor vnreason agains the Law). 1 Stat. Rob. I. c. 16. s. 1.

"Actiones of wrang and vnlaw," says Skene, appearis to be civill actiones, and ar opponed to actiones criminall, touching life and lim." De Verb. Sign. vo. Tort.

This seems to be the original sense of the term, from A.S. unlugu, unlage, quod contra legem est, injustitia, iniquitas; from un negat. and lage law.

This word occurs, in the same sense, in O.E.

-Guf me dude him vnlawe,

That to the byssop from ercedekne is apel solde make.

R. Glouc. p. 473.

"Injustice," Gl. Hearne.

2. A fine, or amerciament, legally fixed and exacted from one who has transgressed the law.

On to the Justice him selff loud can caw;

"Lat ws to borch our men fra your fals law,
At leyffand ar, that chappt fra your ayr.

Deyll nocht thar land, the unlaw is our sayr:
Thow had no rycht, that sall be on the seyne."

Wallace, vii. 436. MS.

"Quha sa euer be conuict of slauchter of salmound, in tyme forbodin be the Law, he sall pay xL. S. for the vnlaw." Acts Ja. I. 1424. c. 12. Edit. 1566.

A fine seems to have been called an unlaw, because thus a man paid or made satisfaction for his transgression of the law. In the same manner Su.G. sak, which denotes a fault, guilt, is transferred to the penalty; mulcta, quae reatum sequitur; Ihre. It is also called sakoere, from oere pecunia, q. guiltmoney.

We learn from G. Andr., that, in the ancient Code of Isl. Laws, utlaege and utlegd, occur in the same sense; In codice Legum antiquo, mulcta.

3. Used improperly, to denote a law which has no real authority.

"These cleared, that what the high commission had done to them was not only for righteousness, but that their sentences were evidently null, according to the bishop's unlaws." Baillie's Lett. i. 121. To Unlaw, v. a. To fine.

"Gif ane Baxter, or ane Browster is vnlawed for bread, or aill, na man sould meddle, or intromitt therewith, bot only the Provest of the towne." Burrow Lawes, c. 21. s. 1.

UNLEIF, adj. Unpleasant, ungrateful.
No, war not thay, thou suld me se allone,
Thus syttand in the are all wo begone,
Sustenand thus al manere of mischeif,
And every stress baith leifsum and valeif.

Doug. Virgil, 442. 4.

Digna, indigna, Virg. V. Lett.

UNLEILL, adj. Dishonest.

Sum part thair was of vnleill laubouraris, Craftismen thair saw we out of number. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 234. V. Leil.

UNLESUM, udj. What cannot be permitted.
Tell him, na lust to life langare scik I,
Vulesum war sic plesoure I set by.

Doug. Virgil, 367. 10.

Nec fas, Virg. V. Lesum.

UNLUSSUM, adj. Unlovely.

And as this leid at the last liggand me seis,
With ane luke vnlussum he lent me sic wourdis:
Quhat berne be thou in bed with hede full of beis?
Doug. Virgil, Prol. 239. a. 23. V. Lursom.

UNMODERLY, adj. Unkindly; or perhaps rather as an adv.

Thare-fore thai, that come to spy That land, thaim dressyt unmoderly.

Wyntown, ii. 8. 72. From un negat. and A.S. mothwaere, mild, meek.

UNPAUNDED, part. adj. Unpledged.

—" Would it not have grieved them to see the subjects suffer by the relying upon unpaunded trust?" Baillie's Lett. i. 42.

UNQUART, s.

Than thair hors with thair hochis sic harmis couth hint,

As trasit in unquart quakand thai stand.

Gawan and Gol. iii. 3.

This may signify, "in sadness" or "dullness;" as conveying an idea the reverse of Quert, q. v.

UNRABOYTY'I, part. pa. Not repulsed.

Unraboytyt the Sothroun was in wer;

And fast that cum fell awfull in affer.

Wallace, iii. 131. MS. V. REBUT, v. UNREASON, UNRESSOUN, s. 1. Injustice, ini-

And that ye think unressoun, or wrang, Wee al and sundrie sings the samin sang.

Priests of Peblis, S. P. R. i. 7. V. CHESSOUN. "Tort, et non reason, vn-reason, wrang, and vnlaw." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Tort.

This sense is perhaps derived from Fr. raison, which is used to signify justice. V. Unlaw.

2. Disorder.

It is used as corresponding to Misrule, in that title, The Abbot of Unreason. V. Abbot. UNREDE, UNRIDE, adj. Cruel, severe.

Her fader on a day,
Gaf hem londes wide;
Fer in that cuntray,
Markes were set biside;

Bituene the douke that had ben ay, And a geaunt unride .-Beliagog is unrede, A stern geaunt is he.

Sir Tristrem, p. 160. st. 38. 39. " Unrighteous," Gl. But these terms seem to be derived from A.S. un-ge-reod, un-ge-ridu, which both signify barbarous, cruel, rugged. On the latter Somner says; "Hence our unrudy." Unryde elsewhere occurs in the same sense.

Schir Rannald raught to the renk ane rout wes unryde.

Gawan and Gol. ii. 25.

It is also used by R. Brunne, p. 174.

-Fire the sailes threwe.

The stones were of Rynes, the noyse dredfulle & grete,

It affraied the Sarazins, as leven the fire out schete.

The noyse was vnride, it lasted alle day, Fro morn tille euentide, ther of had many affray. Hearne mistakes the sense, rendering unrid, " continual," Gl. He has been misled by the words immediately connected,-it lasted, &c. whereas the phrase is synon. with noyse dredfulle & grete.

UNREST, s. 1. Trouble.

Bot feill tithingis oft syiss is brocht ws till, Off ane Wallace was born in to the west: Our Kingis men he haldis at gret wnrest, Martyris thaim doun, grete peté is to se. Wallace, iv. 376. MS.

Of Job I saw the patience maist degest, -And of Antiochus the greit unrest, How tyranlie he Jewrie all oprest.

Palice of Honour, iii. 32.

2. A person or thing that causes disquietude. "For our private matters in the college, this twelvemonth we have been at peace, our unrest [Mr. P. Gillespie] being quieted." Baillie's Lett. ii. 447.

Teut. on-raste, on-ruste, inquies. V. WANREST. UNRYCHT, s. Injustice, iniquity; Wallace. Dukis, Marquessis, Erlis, Barrounis, Knichtis, With thay Princes war puneist panefully, Participant thay war of thair vnrichtis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 232. A.S. un-richt, Teut. on-recht, injustitia, injuria. UNRUDE, adj. "Rude, hideous, horrible;" Rudd. But as the term corresponds to ater and coenus, it must certainly signify, vile, im-

All the midway is wilderness unplane, Or wilsum forrest; and the laithlie flude, Cocytus with his drery bosum vnnude, Flowis enuiroun round about that place.

Doug. Virgil, 167. 35. Atro, Virg. Fra thine strekis the way profound anone, Depe vnto hellis flude of Acherone, With holl bisme, and hidduous swelth vnrude, Drumly of mude, and skaldand as it war wode. Ibid. 173. 37. Coeno, Virg.

Teut. on-raed, Germ. un-rat sordes, immundities.

UNSALL, adj Wretched. V. UNSEL. UNSAUCHT, UNSAUGHT, adj. Disturbed, troubled, disordered.

Than thai schupe for to assege segis unsaught. Gawan and Gol. ii. 12.

-This Chorineus als fast

Ruschit on his fa, thus fyre fangit and vnsaucht, And with his left hand by the hare him claucht. Doug. Virgil, 419. 24.

Teut. on-saecht, durus, asper, rudis, is evidently allied. V. SAUCHT, adj.

UNSAUCHT, s. Dispeace, trouble, inquietude, S.B.

A.S. un-saeht, un-seht, discordia, inimicitia; Su.G. osackt, id. o negat. being used instead of A.S. un. Insaga, strife, contention, although nearly of the same meaning, seems to be radically different. Ihre derives it from in and sak, strife.
To UNSCHET, v. a. To open, vnschet, pret.

Ye Musis now, sucit goddessis ichone, Opin and vnschet your mont of Helicone.

Doug. Virgil, 230. 51. -Fresche Aurora, to mychty Tithone spous,-Unschet the wyndois of hir large hall.

V. SCHETE.

UNSEY'D, part. adj. Not tried, S.

"A' things are good unsey'd;" Prov. Ferguson, p. 7. V. SEY, v.

UNSEL, Unsall, Unsilly, adj. 1. Unhappy, wretched.

It is unsaul, Bannatyne Poems, p. 45. This may, however, signify, unhallowed, as it is expl. by Lord Hailes. V. sense 2.

Visilly wicht, how did thy mind inuaid Sa grete wodnes?-

Doug. Virgil, 143. 22. A.S. un-ge-saelg, un-saelig, infelix, infanstus, Teut. on-saelig, Alem. unsalih, id. Ihre views Su.G. usel, infelix, pauper, as formed from o or u: privative and saell beatus. Isl. usuell, pauper. 2. Naughty, worthless.

Little angry attercap, and auld unsel ape, Ye grein for to gape upon the grey meir.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 5. Somner expl. A.S. un-ge-saelig as also signifying improbus, naughty. MoesG. sel, bonus, unsel, malus. Augu unsel, an evil eye, Matt. vi. 33. Alem. saligen and unsaligen, in like manner, denote the righteous and the wicked. There is no reason to doubt that A.S. saelig felix, sael prosperitas, have had the same origin with MoesG. sel bonus. For, as Ihre observes, goodness and felicity have so many things in common, that they are fitly expressed in most languages, by common terms.

Unsele, Unsell, s. 1. Mischance, misfortune.

And sum, that war with in the pele, War ischyt, on thair awne wnsele, To wyn the herwyst ner tharby.

Barbour, x. 218. MS.

A.S. un-saelth infelicitas, infortunium.

2. A wicked or worthless person, a wretch. I can thame call but kittie unsellis, That takkis sic maneris at thair motheris, To bid men keip thair secreit counsailis, Syne schaw the same againe till uthiris. Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 207. The King of Pharie and his court, with the Elf With many elfish Incubus, was ridand that night. There an Elf on an ape an Unsel begat. Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12. The term, in this sense, is very ancient; MoesG. unsel, evil, wickedness. V. Seile. UNSELYEABLE, adj. Unassailable. Off Scotland the weir-wall, wit ye but wene, Our fais forses to defend, and unselyeable; Baith barmekin and bar to Scottis blud bene. Our lofes, and our liking, that lyne honorable. Houlate, ii. 6. Saxons used unatellandlic as signifying innumerable; Chron. Sax. A. 1043. UNTELLABLY, adv. Ineffably. The fader then Euander, as they departe, By the rycht hand thaym grippit with sad hart, His sone embrasing, and ful tendirly Apoun him hyngis, wepand vntellably. Doug. Virgil, 262. 47. UNTHINKABILL, adj. Inconceivable, what cannot be thought. With hart it is vnthinkabill, And with toungis unpronounciabill. Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592, p. 175. UNTHOCHT. To haud one unthocht lang, to keep one from wearying. It seems equivalent to the phrase still used, S. to haud one out of langer. She's ta'en her till her mither's bower, As fast as she could gang; And she's ta'en twa o' her nither's Mirys, To haud her unthocht lang. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. ii. 131. V. also p. 130. It seems to be merely, without thinking long; un being used as a negative. Teut. ondeuchtigh, however, is rendered, Curae et timoris expers; Kilian. UNTHRIFTY, adj. Unfriendly, hostile to the prosperity of another. Quhat wyld dotage sa made your hedis raif? Or quhat anthryfty God in sic foly Has you bewaiffit here to Italy?

UNWERD, s. Sad fate, misfortune, ruin, S. Rudd.

A.S. un-wyrd, infortunium. V. WERD. UNWYNNABILL, adj. Impregnable.

"This crag is callit the Bas unwynnabill be ingyne of man." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 9. Inexpugnabile, Boeth.

This is nearly allied to A.S. un-winna, invincibilis; from winn-an vincere.

UNWINNE, adj. Unpleasant.

The leuedi of heighe kenne, His woundis schewe sche lete;

To wite his wo unwinne,

So grimly he can grete.

Sir Tristrem, p. 78. st. 11.

A.S. un-winsum, injucundus, inamoenus, asper. V. WIN.

UNWROKIN, part. pa. Unrevenged. And sayand this, hir mouth fast thristis sche Doun in the bed: Vnwrokin sall we de?

Doug. Virgil, 123. 17. Inultae, Virg. A.S. un-wrecen, inultus; from un negat. and wrec-an, ulcisci, wreog-an, id. V. WRAIK, WROIK. UNYEMENT, s. Ointment.

"Quhen Schir James Douglas was chosyn as maist worthy of all Scotland to pas with Kyng Ro-Vol. II.

bertis hart to the haly land, he put it in ane cais of gold with arromitike and precious unyementis." Bellend. Cron. B. xv. c. 1. Lat. unguent-um.

"The unyementis & drogareis that our forbearis usit mycht not cure the new maledyis." Ibid. Fol. 17, b.

VOCE, s. Voice, S.B.

Ane feyndliche hellis voce scho schoutis schill; At quhais sound all trymblit the forest, The derne woddis resoundit est and west.

Doug. Virgil, 225. 37.

VODE, adj. 1. Empty, void.

Unto thir wordis, he nane answere maid, Nor to my vode demandis na thing said.

Doug. Virgil, 48. 32.

2. Light, indecent.

The rial stile, clepit Heroicall, Full of wourschip and nobilnes ouer all, Suld be compilit, but tenchis or vode wourde, Kepand honest wise sportis, guhare euer thay bourde.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 271. 30.

To Vode, v. a. To void, to empty. Eftir all was vodit, and the lycht of day Ay mare and mare the mone quenchit away,-Within hir chalmer alone scho langis sare. And thocht all waist for laik of hir luffare.

Doug. Virgil, 102. 25. Ubi digressi, Virg. When the company were all VOE, s. An inlet, a sound, Orkney, Shetl. "This inlet or voe furnishes several excellent harbours, such as Busta Voe, South Voeter, and Alnasirth." P. Delting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. i. 390. " Voes,-in the ancient language of these islands, signify such creeks or bays as penetrate far into the land." Barry's Orkney, p. 39.

"The parish is every where intersected with long narrow bays, called here Voes or Friths." P. Aithsting, Shetl. Statist. Acc. vii. 581.

Isl. vog-r., fretum; G. Andr. p. 257. V. Brand's

Orkney, p. 65.

VOGIE, VOKIT, adj. 1. Vain, S.

Of your consent, he says, I'm mair nor fain, And vogie that I can ca' you my ain. Ross's Helenore, p. 112.

"Whisht," quoth the vougy jade,

"William's a wise judicious lad, "Has havins mair than e'er ye had,

" Ill-bred bog-stalker." Ramsay's Poems, ii. 338.

"I was fidgen fain an' unco vokie fan I got out oner her, for as laggart an' trachel'd as I was wi' taavin amo' the dubs." Journal from London, p. 4.

To Waistgude luk and beir neid that I lefe; To Covatyce syn gif this bleis of fyre; To servant Voky ye beir this rown slef.

K. Hart, ii. 66.

Voky seems to be Vanity in dress personified. "In Scotland," Mr. Pinkerton remarks, "they say a man is voggy when he is proud." Note, Maitland's Poems, p. 379. But it properly denotes os-honorifice, veg-ur honor, Su.G. vaeg-a, honorare; or to A.S. bog-an, Belg. pochg-en, to boast, to vaunt. It may, however, have been formed from Fr. vogue, Ital. voga, fame, pre-eminence. 2. Merry, cheerful; an oblique sense, S.B. VOICER, s. A voter.

"-That his voicing should not import his approbation of the commissions of any voicer against whom he was to propone any just exception in due time."-Baillie's Lett. i. 99.

The v. is also used, as by Shakspeare.

VOLE MOUSE, the Short-tailed Field Mouse,

"The Short-tailed Field Mouse (mus agrestis, Lin. Syst.) which with us has the name of the vole mouse, is very often found in marshy grounds that are covered with moss and short heath." Barry's Orkney, p. 314.

Perhaps vole has the same sense with field; A.S. wold, planities; Su.G. wall, solum herbidum.

VOLLAGE, adj. Fickle; Fr. volage.

"-The jugement of Gode (quhilk virkis al thyng) is ane profound onknauen deipnes, the quhilk passis humaine ingyne to comprehende the grounde or limitis of it: be cause oure vit is ouer febil, oure ingyne ouer harde, oure thochtis ouer vollage, ande oure yeiris ouer schort." Compl. S. p. 32.

VOLOUNTE', s. The will.

The ilk stounde of his awin fre volounté, Ioue callis Juno, and thus carpis he.

Doug. Virgil, 340. 5.

Fr. volonté, Lat. volunt-as.

VOLT, s.

Thy tour, and fortres lairge and lang, Thy nychbours dois excell.-Thy groundis deip, and toppis hie Uprising in the air; Thy voltis plesand ar to sie, Thay ar so greit and fair.

Prayse of Lethingtoun, Maitland Poems, p. 255. Vaults, Pinkerton. But perhaps rather applied to the roofs; from Fr. voulte, which not only signifies a vault, but "a vaulted or embowed roofe;" Cotgr. V. Vout.

VOR, s. The spring-time, Orkney, Shetl. V. VEIR.

VOTE, s. A vow.

He " maid solempnit vote that he & his posterite sall use na ansenye in tymes cumyng (quhen tyme of battal occurrit) bot the croce of Sanct Andro." Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 5. Voit, Ibid. B. xiii. c. 7. Lat. vot-um.

To VOTE, v. a. To devote. Votit, part. pa. "Becaus sa gret trubill risis daylie aganis the Cristin pepill, the maist catholik prince Charlis hes votit hym to the deith in defence thairof aganis the ennymes of God," Bellend. Cron. B. x. c. 2. Devovisse, Boeth.

VOTH, s. Outlawry.

"Voth signifies outlawrie, vtlagium." Skene, Verb. Sign. in vo.

Allied perhaps to Isl. vode, Su.G. waada, (pron. woda) periculum. V. Vouthman.

To VOUST, v. n. To boast, S. In siclyke wyse this Juturna beliue Throw out the oistis can the horsis drive, ---And schew hir brothir Turnus in his chare, Now brauland in this place, now voustand there. Doug. Virgil, 427. 13.

Great as it is, I need na voust.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 3. Voust, Voist, s. Boasting, S. a boast, a brag, Gl. Shirr.

And lo as Pharon cryis and doys roust, With haltand wourdis and with mekle voust, Eneas threw an dart at him that tyde, Quhilk, as he gapit, in his mouth did glide. Doug. Virgil, 327. 10.

Thare sal thou se, thare sal thou knaw anone, Quhom to thys wyndy glore, voist and avantis, The honour, or with pane the louing grantis. Ibid. 390. 4.

Whare then was a your windy vousts? Ye that is now sa kneef!

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 23. Perhaps radically the same with boast, v and b being letters of the same organs. Junius derives. boast from C.B. bostio, id.; Seren. from Goth. buse, biesse, rex, dominans. Isl. biasse pugil; Ihre, vo. Biesse.

Vouster, s. A boaster, S. Rudd. V. Woistare. Vousty, adj. Vain, given to boasting.

And chiels shall come frae yout the Cairn-a-. mounth right vousty,

If Ross will be so kind as share in .

Their pint at Drousty.

Beattie's Address, Ross's Helenore, st. 16.

VOUT, s. A vault, S. O.E. id.

"Vout vnder the ground, (Fr.) uoute," Palsgraue; also voulte. This seems of Gothic origin; Sw. hwalfd, arched, vaulted, hwaelfw-a to arch, to vault, also written waelfw-a, vaelfv-a; A.S. hwalf, convexus; Isl. hioel, sphaera.

VOUTH, adj. or s. Prosecuted, or prosecution, in course of law; a forensic term.

"Vouth signifies persewed, calling, or accusation, from Voucher, id est, Vocare, vsed in the auld French and English lawes." Skene, Verb. Sign: vo. Voth.

But the origin is evidently A.S. wothe clamor.

VOUTHMAN, s. An outlaw.

" In our auld Scottish langage ane Vouthman is ane out-law, or ane fugitive fra the lawes." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Voth.

This, in connexion with the preceding word, may perhaps point out the origin of Voth, as signifying outlawry. Vouthman may have denoted one who was legally called, and not compeirand, or presenting himself in court, was outlawed.

VOW, interj. Expressive of admiration or surprise, S.

Yonder he comes; and vow! but he looks fain: Nae doubt he think's that Peggy's now his ain. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 144.

Isl. vo, metuendum quid; also, repentè, ex improviso. V. Verel. & G. Andr.

VOWBET, s.

Yet wanshapen Vowbet of the weirds invytit, I can tell thee how, when, where, and what

The quhilk was neither man nor wife, Nor human creature on life.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 12. It might be conjectured that the word were comp. of two Isl. terms; vo (resembling Lat. ve in Vejovis, vegrandis, vesanus) signifying vain, unlucky, also, what is to be feared; and buete, bot-u, to bless; q. what bears the marks of the curse, or cannot be mended. The term here denotes a child supposed to be carried off by the Fairies; according to a vulgar idea still prevailing in some parts of Scotland.

But the original sense is determined by what is said elsewhere.

A warlock, and a warwolf, a vowbet but hair. Ibid. p. 25.

It therefore seems the same word with wobat, S.A., a hairy worm, which crawls on vegetables, somewhat of the caterpillar kind.

Sibb. renders woubit, oubit, one of those worms which appear as if covered with wool, Gl., as if the term wool or woo entered into the composition. But more probably it is from A.S. wibba, a worm.

A voubet but hair, is a worm in so imperfect a state, that the hair is not yet grown. Wobat is said to be "a hairy caterpillar." Edin. Rev. Oct. 1803. p. 206. O.E. "Warbot, a worme; escarbot," Fr. Palsgraue. V. Wobat.
To UP-BANG, v. a. To force to rise, especially by beating.

By sting and ling they did up-bang her, And bare her down between them To Duncan's burn .-

Mare of Collington, Watson's Coll. i. 48. i. e. They forced her to get upon her feet, partly by beating, and partly by raising her by means of a rope. V. BANG; also STING and LING.

To UPBRED, v. a. To set in order; to upbred burdis, to set tables in order for a meal.

All thus thay move to the meit: and the Marschale

Gart bring watter to wesche, of a well cleir: That wes the Falcone so fair, frely but faile Bad bernis burdis upbred, with a blyth chere. Houlate, iii. 4. V. Braid up the burde.

To UP-BULLER, v. a. To boil or throw up. V. Buller, v.

UPCAST, s. Taunt, reproach, S.

With blyth vpcast and merry countenance, The elder sister then speird at hir gest, Gif that scho thocht be reson differance Betwixt that chalmer and her sary nest.

Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 150. "This did never occasion bitter reflections, or was their upcast before the world, that they trusted God in a day of strait and were not helped." Fleming's Fulfilling, p. 29. V. Cast Up, v. UPCASTING, s. The rising of clouds above the horizon, especially as threatening rain, S. In this sense it is also said, It's beginning to east up, i. e. The sky begins to be overcast, E.

UPCOIL, s. A kind of game with balls. And now in May to madynnis fawis, With tymmer wechtis to trip in ringis, And to play vpcoil with the bawis.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 186. MS. This seems to refer to the ancient custom of tossing up different balls into the air, and catching them before they reached the ground. V. Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 132.

UPCOME, s. Promising appearance, ground of expectation as to the future; the idea being probably borrowed from the first appearance of the braird, or blade after sowing.

"The King on a time was discoursing at table of the personages of men, and by all mens confession the prerogative was adjudged to the Earle of Angus. A courtier that was by (one Spense of Kilspindie), whether out of envie to hear him so praised, or of his idle humour onely, cast in a word of doubting and disparaging. It is true, said he, if all be good that is up-come; meaning if his action and valour were answerable to his personage and body." Hume's Hist. Donglas, p. 235.

A.S. up-cyme, up-comyng, ortus; a springing or coming up; Somner. Isl. uppkomid, proditum est.

To UPDAW, v. n. To dawn.

Thus draif thai our that deir nicht with dauteing [and chere;]

UPLANDS, UP OF LAND, UPON-LAND, UP-PLANE, adj. 1. One who lives in the country, as distinguished from the town.

" Ane Burges may poynd ane vplands man, or the Burges of ane other burgh, within or without the time of market, within or without the house." Burrow Lawes, c. 3. s. 1. Foris habitantes, Lat.

This term, as Mr. Pinkerton observes, is equivalent to landwart frequently used in our laws, as opposed to borough.

2. Rustic, unpolished.

Thus sang ane burd with voce upplane; "All erdly joy returnis in pane."

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 87. John Up-on-land's Complaint is the title of one of our old poems, Ibid. p. 144., borrowed perhaps from Chaucer's Jacke Uplande.

A.S. up-land, highland, a hilly country or region; also, a midland country far from the sea. Up-landisc man, monticola, rusticus, one that dwelleth on a hilly or mountainous soil, or far from the sea coast; Somner. To ealcan cyrcean uppeland; To every country kirk; Chron. Sax. 192. 34.

To UPLOIP, v. n. To ascend with rapidity, to rise quickly to an elevated station.

The cadger clims, new cleikit from the creill, And ladds uploips to Lordships all thair lains. Montgomerie, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 499.

Teut. oploop-en, sursum currere, sursum ferri. V. Lour, v.

UPPIL ABOON, clear over-head, a phrase applied to the atmosphere, S.B.

This phrase is pure Gothic, Sw. uphaalls vaeder, dry weather; from uphaalla, to bear up. Haalla up is used in the same sense in which we say, It will hadd up, i. e. There will be no rain. Det haaller uppe, (om regn), It holds up. Jag vill gaa ut, om det bara haaller uppe; I will go out, if it does but hold up; Wideg. Hence,

To Uppil, v. n. To clear up. It will uppil. a phrase used when it is supposed that the rain will go off, S.B.

UPPISH, adj. Aspiring, ambitious, S. from up denoting ascent; like Su.G. ypp-a elevare, and yppig, superbus, vanus, from upp sursum.

UP-PUT, s. The power of secreting, so as to prevent discovery.

Tho he can swear from side to side, And lye, I think he cannot hide. He has been several times affronted By slie backspearers, and accounted An emptie rogue. They are not fitt For stealth, that want a good up-put.

Cleland's Poems, p. 101.

To UPRAX, v. a. To stretch upward, to erect. Vpraxit him he has amyd the place, Als big as Athon, the hie mont in Trace. Doug. Virgil, 437. 2. V. RAX. To UPREND, v. a. 'To render or give up.

UPREUIN, part. pa. Torn up. Bot eftir that the third sioun of treis. Apoun the sandis sittand on my kneis, I schupe to haue upreuin with mare preis.

Doug. Virgil, 68. 23. To UPSET, v. a. To recover from; applied to a hurt, affliction, or calamity, S. win aboon, synon.

-Folk as stout an' clever, As ony shearin' here, Hae gotten skaith they never Upset for mony year.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 123.

The idea is borrowed from setting up something that has fallen or been overturned; Teut. opsett-en, Sw. upsaett-a.

To UPSET, v. a. To overset, to overturn; as, to upset a cart, boat, &c. by making the one side to rise so much above the other as to lose the proper balance, S. also used as v. n. in the same sense.

UPSET, s. Insurrection, mutiny. And in the caws of that waset, That wyolent wes than and gret, The Byschape of Lwndyn scho gert be Hey hangyd a-pon gallow tre.

Fris. wrant, a litigious person, wrant-en, to litigate.

URE, s. Chance, fortune.

-Bot dryve the thing rycht to the end, And tak the vre that God wald send. Barbour, i. 312. MS.

-" Lordingis, sen it is swa "That vre rynnys again ws her, "Gud is we pass off thar daunger." Ibid. ii. 434. MS.

For thai there ure wald with him ta. Gyff that he eft war assaylyt swa. Ibid. vi. 377. MS.

Mr. Macpherson thinks that, when this word has no addition, it is " generally understood of good fortune." But it seems to be used quite indefinitely. He refers to Arm. O.Fr. eur, " retained in bonheur, malheur, which etymologists derive from heure hour, as if the words signified metaphorically good hour, bad hour; whereas the meaning is obvious and simple without any metaphor." Gl. Wynt.

Eur is used in the sense of hazard, Rom. de la Rose. Teut. ure, vicissitudo. It might be supposed, without any great stretch, that these terms were radically from Isl. urd, Alem. urdi, fate, or the designation of the first of the Fates. But it must be acknowledged, as unfavourable to this etymon, that Teut. ure also signifies hora. Hence the phrase, Ter goeder uren, fortunately, i. e. in a good hour; exactly corresponding to Fr. A la bonne heure.

URE, s. " Practice, toil;" Gl. Pink. A thrid, O maistres Marie! make I pray: And put in ure thy worthic vertews all. For famous is your fleing fame; I say, Hyd not so haut a hairt in slugish thrall. Maitland Poems, p. 267.

In this sense it may be allied to Teut. ure commoditas, temporis opportunitas; Kilian.

URE, s. The point of a weapon.

"And gif he hurtis or defoulis with felonie as. sailyeand with edge or vre, he sall remaine in presoun but remeid, quhill assyth be maid to the partie, and amendis to the King or to the Lord, that it belangis to as effeiris." Acts Ja. I. 1426. c. 108. Edit. 1566.

Edge or ure, i. e. edge or point. This is the same with ord, orde, horde, O.F.

Hys sword he drough out than,

Was scharp of egge, and ord.

Lybacus, Ritson's E.M.R. ii. 81.

Su.G. or, anc. uur, a weapon; Isl. uur, an arrow. Ord is merely the A.S. term rendered acies, cuspis, "the point of any thing, the point or edge of a weapon;" Somner. Perhaps they have some affinity to Isl. or acer. Ure seems radically the same with Wyr, q. v.

URE, s. 1. Ore; in relation to metals, S.

In Lyde contre thou born was, fast by The plentuous sulye, quhare the goldin rivere Pactolus warpis on ground the goldin vre clere.

A.S. ora, Belg. oor, oore, id.

2. The fur or crust which adheres to vessels, in consequence of liquids standing in them, S.B.

This seems only an oblique sense of the same word. Hence,

URY, adj. Furred, crusted. S.B.

URE, s. A denomination of land in Orkney and Shetland.

of land. An ure is the eighth part of a merk. The dimensions of the merk vary not only in the different parishes of Shetland, but in different towns of the same parish; and though in some of the towns, in these united parishes, it will not measure above half a Scots acre, yet so much does it exceed the Scots acre in others, that the whole of the arable land cannot be less than 1600 acres." P. Tingwall, Shetl. Statist. Acc. xxi. 278.

V. Merk. To what is said there, it may be added that A.S. ora, ore, was a denomination of money, whether coined, or reckoned by weight, constituting an ounce or the twelfth part of a pound. As this term was introduced into E. by the Danes, it must have been originally the same with Isl. auri, both the A.S. and the Isl. word signifying an ounce. Auri, est octava pars marcae, tam in fundo, quam in mobilibus; Verel. p. 23. The mode of reckoning, however, was different; Isl. auri being the eighth part of a pound or mark. For the mark in Isl. contains eight onness. V. G. Andr. p. 175.

URE, s. Colour, tinge, S.B.

This may be allied to Belg. verw, Sw. ferg, id.

URE, s. Soil. An ill ure, a bad soil, Ang.

Ir. Gael. uir, mould, earth, dust; Isl. ur, gravelly soil.

URE, s. Sweat, perspiration, Ang. Hence, ury, clammy, covered with perspiration.

URISUM, URUSUM, adj. 1. Troublesome, vexatious.

Astablit lyggis styl to sleip, and restis— The lytil mydgis, and the vrusum fleis, Lauborius emottis, and the bissy beis. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 450. 6.

2. "S. frightful, terrifying;" Rudd.

This learned writer derives it from S. ery, fearful; evidently founding his etymon on the vulgar use of the term. But most probably it is quite a different word. There cannot, at any rate, be the least affinity between ery and urusum, as signifying troublesome. This seems allied to Su.G. orolig inquietus, (the term sum being used instead of lig or like), from oro inquies, comp. of o negat. and ro quies; like Germ. unruhe, id. from un and ruhe. This exactly corresponds to the sense; "the restless flies." V. Roif, rest.

URLUCH, adj. "Silly-looking," Gl. Ross. i. e. having a feeble and emaciated appearance, S.B.

Ayont the pool I spy'd the lad that fell, Drouked and looking unco urluch like. Ross's Helenore, p. 43.

Perhaps q. ooriclike, as chilled by cold, or in consequence of being drenched with water; as the person referred to is supposed to have been nearly drowned, p. 42.

I thought therein a lad was like to drown, His feet yeed frac him, and his head went down. V. Oorie.

But, perhaps, it is rather q. wurl-like. V. Wrould and Warwolf. The latter derivation seems confirmed by the use of A. Bor. url, to look sickly; urled, stunted in growth; whence urling, a little dwarfish person.

To URN, v. a. To pain, to torture.

Quhat I haiff had in wer befor this day,
Presoune and payne to this nycht was bot play;
So bett I am with strakis sad and sar,
The cheyle wattir vrned me mekill mar;
Eftir gret blud throu heit in cauld was brocht,
That off my lyff almost no thing I roucht.
Wallace, v. 384. MS.

Wined, Perth Edit. In Edit. 1648, it is altered still more strangely;

The shrill water then burnt me meikell more. The term is still used, Ang. To urn the ee, to pain the eye, as a mote or a grain of sand does. This term might have been originally limited to what causes pain by the sensation of heat; as allied to Isl. orne calor, orn-a calefacio, orn focus. V. Verel. vo. Ornaz, and G. Andr. A.S. yrm-ed signifies afflicted, tormented. But we cannot view this as the origin of our term, without supposing that it has been corrupted.

To VUNG, v. n. To move swiftly with a buzzing or humming sound, Aberd. bung, S.O. Ye mauna think that ane sae young,

Ye mauna think that ane sae young. Wha hirples slowly o'er a rung, Can up Parnassus glibly vung,

Like Robbie Burns.
Shirrefs' Poems, p. 337.

Vung is more commonly used as a s., denoting the sound made by a stone discharged from a sling, or any similar sound, as that of a humming-top when emitted from the string.

It has a far better claim, than many other words, to be viewed as ex sono ficta. But it may be derived from Teut. Germ. bunge a drum, which Wachter deduces from Su.G. bacng-ia to beat. The adv.

glibly is improperly conjoined.

W.

Some learned writers have viewed-this letter as corresponding to the Iolic Digamma; and have observed, that it is frequently prefixed to words beginning with a vowel or diphthong. In this way they account for the resemblance between many Gothic and Greek terms. "Thus," says Junius, (Observ. in Willeram. p. 32.) "from acres, lutum, is formed wast, limus; from segon, ...

opus,—werk; from εξις, dissidium, concertatio, —werre, dissidium, bellum; from εσεσθαι, esse, fieri,—wes-en; from ειλ-ειν, versare, circumagere,—weil, orbiculus versatilis, a spinning wheel; from εξιιν or ωξιιν, cum cura custodire, —war-en, bewaren, &c. V. Somner, vo. Wase.

The learned Benzelius, Bishop of Lincoping, in his MS. notes on Jun. Gloss., in like manner derives Su.G. ward-a, videre, from og-assu, id. V. Lye, Add. Jun. Etym.

The affinity in several of these words is imaginary, not to mention the whimsical idea of deriving the Gothic, or old Scythian tongue, from the Greek.

WAD, WED, WEDDE, s. 1. A pledge. It is pron. wad, S. and this is the modern orthography. Wed seems the more ancient.

Now both her wedde lys, And play thai bi ginne; And sett he hath the long asise, And endred beth ther inne.

Sir Tristrem, p. 24. st. 30. In the thikkest wode thar maid that felle defens, Agayn thair fayis so full off wiolens; Yit felle Sothron left the lyff to wed.

Wallace, iv. 633. MS.

This is a singular phrase, q. left their lives in pledge, were deprived of life.

"" Somethings are borrowed and lent, be giving and receaving of ane wad. And that is done some time be laying and giving in wad, cattell or moveable gudes." Reg. Maj. B. iii. c. 2. s. 1.

i. e. "He came for the purpose of engaging in the crusade; and for the money, necessary for his expences, laid Normandy in pledge to his brother."

Had I ben mershall of his men, by Mary of Heauen,

I durst haue layd my lyfe, and no lesse wed, He should haue be lord of the land, in length & bredth,

And also king of that kyth, his kynne for to helpe.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 14, b. Thou shalt me leave such a wedde, That I woll have thy trouth on honde.

Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 16, b. Su.G. wad, A.S. wed, Isl. vaed, ved, Dan. vedde, Belg. wedde, Alem. uuetti, Germ. wette. Ihre supposes that the Su.G. term is derived from wad cloth; because, this kind of merchandise being anciently given and received instead of money, when at any time a pledge was left, a piece of cloth was commonly used for this purpose, and hence a pledge in general would be called Wad. According to this view, the Goth. word must be more ancient than Lat. vas, vad-is, a pledge; whence vadimanium, a promise or engagement. It seems evident, at least, that L.B. vad-ium is from the Goth. The term, indeed, assumes a great variety of other forms in L.B., as wad-ium, guad-ia, gag-ium, &c. V. Du Cange.

From A.S. wed, pignus, Junius derives the v. wed to marry; with some hesitation, however, whether it be not rather from C.B. gwed, a yoke. But the first is certainly the most natural idea, as it was customary to espouse by means of a wad or pledge.

Hence L. B. Vadiare Mulierem, Eam sibi in sponsam pignore asserere; Du Cange, vo. Vadium, p. 1385.

WADDS, s. "A youthful amusement, wherein much use is made of pledges;" Gl. Sibb., S.

In this game, the players being equally divided, and a certain space marked out between them, each lays down one or more wads or pledges at that extremity where the party, to which he belongs, chuse their station. A boundary being fixed at an equal distance from the extremities, the object is to carry off the wads from the one of these to the other. The two parties, advancing to the boundary or line, seize the first opportunity of crossing it, by making inroads on the territories of each other. He who crosses the line, if seized by one of the opposite party, before he has touched any of their wads, is set down beside them as a prisoner, and receives the name of a Stinker; nor can be be released, till one of his own side can touch him, without being intercepted by any of the other; in which case he is free. If any one is caught in the act of carrying off a wad, it is taken from him; but he cannot be detained as a prisoner, in consequence of his having touched it. If he can cross the intermediate line with it, the pursuit is at an end. When the one party have carried off, to the extremity of their ground, all the wads of the other, the game is finished.

To WAD, WED, v.a. 1. To pledge, to bet, to wager, S.

WADAND, part. pr. Expl. fearful. Bot the fell qwhile, that thai had, Sa dowtand than thare hartis made That thai war all rycht wadand To fecht in gret rowt hand to hand.

Wyntown, viii. 40. 249. "Ir. uath fear;" Gl. Perhaps there is an error here. Rad is used in another MS. for made, 1. 2. WADD, s. Woad, used in dyeing.

"Of litsters burgesses quha puts their hands in the wadd." Chalmerlan Air, c. 39. § 69.

Skinner renders the term, as here used, a pledge. But the phrase denotes dyers who work with their own hands; as in the preceding section fleshers are mentioned, "quha slay mairts with thair awin hands."

Wad is here put for dye-stuffs in general, because of its being used for laying the foundation of many colours. In le wadd; Lat.

"Waugh wa-gang, a disagreeable bye-taste;" Gl. q. the relish any thing has in going away; Teut. wegh-ga-en, abire, discedere; wegh-ganck, abitus. WAGE, s. A pledge, a pawn.

Or thay there lawde suld lois or vassallage, Thay had fer lewar lay thare life in wage.

Doug. Virgil, 135. 14.

This phrase is analogous to that used by Blind Harry. V. Wed, s. and Walde.
Rudd. derives it from Fr. gage, id. But it must ultimately be traced to Su.G. wad, pignus.

WAGEOURE, s. A stake, E. wager; used by Bp. Douglas as properly signifying a prize for which different persons contend.

Bellenden distinguishes wageours from legionary soldiers.

"Suetonius come in Britane with twa legionis and x. M. wagiouris of sindry nationis." Cron. Fol.

Formed immediately from wage, like soldier, Fr. soldat, from Germ. sold, merces. Fr. gage, L. B. vad-ia, gag-ia, &c. merces; of which the common origin is Goth. wad, pignus.

It deserves observation, however, that Seren. views E. wage conducere, (to wage soldiers), as allied to Isl. veig, res pecuniaria, veig-ur, pretium, pretiosum quid. We find the phrase vageit men used as equivalent to this. V. VAGEIT. WAGGLE, s. A bog, a marsh, S. B. also wuggle.

"Depones, that he knows the place called the Waggle, between which and the water there was a bog, or swell that beasts would have laired in.-Interrogated, If he remembers a high point of land projecting into the Allochy grain, nearly opposite to the Waggle or bog above mentioned?" State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805. p. 74.

Allied perhaps to Teut. waggel-en, agitare, motitare; because marshy ground shakes under one's tread. It can have no affinity, surely, to Isl. vegafall, Sw. waegfall, a way destroyed by the overflowing of rivers, so as to be rendered unfit for travel-

WAG-STRING, s. One who dies by means of a halter.

Šir Gawan and Sir Gal. ii. 16.

It seems to denote the reiteration of strokes; allied perhaps to Su.G. waan-a to labour, winn-a, id. also to fight, pugnare, confligere. "The Bishop shall accuse the Parish; aen ther widhir then wigit wan; and it shall accuse the person who begun the struggle." WestG. Leg. ap. Ihre, vo. Winna. A. S. winn-an. Theod winth ongean theod; Nation shall fight against nation; Matt. xxiv. 7. Hence ge-winn bellum, ge-winne pugna. Alem. uuinn-an, pugnare.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30. st. 9. 66 Spendthrift;" Lord Hailes. But the adj. for this in S. is waisterfow. Perhaps the meaning is, that, in consequence of gluttony, their bellies were so much swelled, that they seemed to have no waists.

To WAIT, VAIT, WATE, WAT, v. n. To know, E. wot.

"Lordys," he said, "ye wait quhat is ado: Off thar cummyng my selff has na plesance; Herfor mon we wyrk with ordinance.

"It is blinde also, in respect they waite not whom fra it commeth." Bruce's Eleven Serm. Z. 2. a.

Wat is commonly used, S. wait, S. A., as an act. v.

"To wait a person, signifies, in popular language, to know from experience." Gl. Compl. p. 379.

I question much, however, if the ingenious editor be right in adding that "it is also used by Minot," in the following passage.

Thare was thaire baner born all doune,
To mak slike boste thai war to blame;
Bot nevertheles ay er thai boune
To wait Ingland with sorow and schame.

Poems. p. 4.

It seems rather to signify pursue. V. next word.

Sn.G. wet-a, A.S. MoesG. wit-an; Ihre. Ulphilas uses the phrase, Ni wait; I know not, S. I watna. A.S. ic wat, scio, S. I wat.

To WAYT, WATE, v. a. To hunt, to pursue, to persecute.

Thare wywys wald thai oft forly
And thare dowchtrys dyspytwsly;
And gyve ony thare-at war wrath,
Wayt hym welle wyth a gret skath.

Wyntown, viii. 18. 38.

A. S. waeth-an, Su.G. wed-a, Isl. veid-a, Germ. weid-en, venari. Ihre derives this Goth. term from wed, a wood, as being the place for hunting. It may perhaps be allied to MoesG. wethi, a flock. Su.G. wedehund, a dog used in the chace. A. S. waethan mid hundum, to hunt with dogs. It may be observed, by the way, that our modern term hunt, although immediately from A. S. hunt-ian, id. must be traced to hund, a dog. V. WAITER.

WAITER, s. A token, a sign; Border. V. WITTER.

WAITH, s. 1.

Philotus is the man,——
Ane ground-riche man, and full of graith:
He wantis na jewels, claith, nor waith,
Bot is baith big and beine.

Philotus, S. P. R. iii. 8.

Claith nor waith seems to have been a Prov. expression; perhaps q. "neither cloth in the piece, nor cloth made into garments." Su.G. wad, A.S. waede, Alem. uuad, indumentum; Franc. uuat, whence uuath-us, vestiarium, uuatt-en vestire, Willeram.

2. A plaid; such as is worn by women, S. B.
Bannocks and kebbocks, knit up in a claith,
She had wiled by, and row'd up in her waith.

Ross's Helenore, p. 53.

WAITH, s. Danger.

Fast south thai went, to byd it was great waith.
Douglace as than was quyt off thair scaith.

Wallace, ix. 1734. MS.

In edit. 1648, absurdly rendered wrath.

This word has no connexion with waith, as signifying the chace, or wandering. I can see no reason why Mr Pink. should say, (Gloss. Maitl. P.) that waith in Henry's Wallace seems to mean accoutrements. It is evidently allied to Su.G. waada, danger; discrimen, periculum, anc. wade; Isl. vode. Jak skilde mik gaerna aff thenna wade; Lubenter hanc aerumnam vitarem; Hist. Alexand. M. ap. Ihre.

It also denotes any accidental loss or misfortune. Su.G. vaadabot, a fine for accidental homicide; vaadeld, accidental fire. Dan. vaade, danger; vaadedrab, accidental homicide.

WAITH, WAITHE, WAITHING, s. 1. The act of

We ar in the wode went, to walke on oure

He lychtyt down, and fra the child tuk all. Wallace, i. 385. 386. MS.

This respects fishing. But it would appear unquestionable, that the term, as anciently used in S., like Isl. veid-a, was applied to both fishing and hunting. Isl, veid-a, venari; piscari; veidi, venatio, vel praeda venatione capta; veidifaung, veidiskap-ur, id. allskonar veidifaung, Res omnes quae venatu, aucupio, piscatu, acquiruntur, ferae, pisces, aves, ova; Verel. Veide, venatio; G. Andr. Fara a veidar met hundum; To go a hunting with dogs; Specul. Regal. p. 619. V. WAYT, v.

WAITH, WAYTH, adj. 1. Wandering, roaming. "Scot. they say, a waith horse, i. e. a horse that wanders in pursuit of mares." Rudd.

2. Impertinent.

-Thocht Crist grund oure faith, Virgillis sawis ar worth to put in store: Thay aucht not to be hald vacabound nor waith, Full riche tressoure they bene & pretius graithe. Doug. Virgil, Prol. 159. 27.

Rudd. is mistaken, in supposing this to be "the same originally with the E. waif, i. e. a thing that is found and claimed by nobody." The same idea is thrown out by Ritson, Robin Hood, Notes, LXXV. Lye, (Addit. to Junius) derives it from A. S. waethan venari. It may have been used to denote wandering in general, as originally applied to wandering in pursuit of game. Wathe, "vagatio; a straying, a wandering;" Somner. Wide wathe; lata vagatio; Caed. 89. 4. Hence wathema, vagabundus. Whether Su.G. wad-a, ire, ambulare, is allied, seems doubtful

3. Wandering, roving.

For thare fadyre dede to take
Revengeans, or wald thare herytage,
That to thame felle be rycht lynage.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 255.

Mr Macpherson renders this would, supposing that the principal verb is wanting, as recover, reclaim, or the like. But wald seems itself to be the proper verb, as signifying to possess, enjoy, or obtain; from A.S. weald-an. Thus, weold rices, potitus est imperio; Lye.

WALDYN, adj. Able, powerful.

"Thair hois war maid of smal lynt or wol, and yeld neuir abone thair kne, to make thaym the mair waldyn and sowpyll." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 16. V. Wald, v. 2.

WALE, s. A well, a fountain; S. wall.

"Pilgremage to chappels, wales, croces, observation of festual daies of saints,—is discharged, and punished." Skene's Crimes, Pecun. Tit. 3. c. 47. To WALE, v. n. To avail.

The hate fyre consumes fast the how, Ouer al the schip discendis the perrellus low: Thare was na strenth of vailyeant men to wale.

Nor large fludis on yet that mycht auale.

Doug. Virgil, 150. 43.

To WALE, v. a. To veil. V. WAIL.

WALE, s. A veil.

Hyr systyr than Dame Crystyane

Of relygyowne the wale had tane.

Wyntown, vii. 3. 20.

WALGIE, s. A wool-sack made of leather, a bag made of a calf's skin, S. B., synon. Tulchan.

This seems allied, by the interchange of letters of the same organs, to Su.G., baelg, a skin; Isl. belgur, which denotes any thing made of a skin; expelle, pelliceus; G. Andr. C. B. bwlgan, also denotes a leathern bag.

WALIE, WALLY, adj. 1. Beautiful, excellent.

I think them a' sae braw and walie,
And in sic order,
I wad nae care to be thy vallie,
Or thy recorder.

Hamilton, Ramsay's Poems, ii. 334.

2. Large, ample, S.; A waly bairn, a fine thriving child; synon. stately.

She bad me kiss him, be content

Then wish'd me joy;

And told it was what had so

And told it was what luck had sent, A waly boy.

Forbes's Dominie Depos'd, p. 37.
But mark the rustic, haggis-fed,—
Clap in his walie nieve a blade,
He'll mak it whistle.

Burns, iii. 220.

My tender girdil, my waly gowdy.

Evergreen, ii. 20.

"Great jewel," Gl. Ramsay.

Waly wacht, Burns; a large draught.

Well, I have made a waly round,

To seek what is not to be found.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 490.

Sibb. renders it also chosen, as if derived from the v. Wale. But it may be allied to A. S. walg, wallig, whole, entire. Waelig, however, signifies rich; Alem. weoleg, id. welig-an, to enrich. Alem. walon bona, otwalon divitiae. These terms Schilter derives from wal, wela, bene; apparently, as we say, Goods, from the correspondent adj. Butit may be proper to observe, that Germ. wal-en signifies, to grow luxuriantly; Belg. weelig, luxuriose crescens, weelig gewas, herba luxurians. Wachter, vo. Wels, derives A. S. welig, opimus, from the Germ. v.

WALY, s. A toy, a gewgaw, S.

Baith lads and lasses busked brawly,
To glowr at ilka bonny waly.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 533. Here chapmen billies tak their stand,

An' shaw their bonny wallies. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 27. V. LANGRIN.

Wallies might thus originally be, q. wealth, riches.

WALY, interj. Expressive of lamentation.

O waly, waly up the bank,

And waly, waly, down the brae; And waly, waly on yon burnside, Where I and my love wont to gae.

Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscell. p. 170. It seems in one place, as if forming a superlative: But perhaps it is merely the interj.

He puts his hand on's ladie's side, And waly sair was she murnin.'

Jamieson's Popular Ball. ii. 271.

A. S. wal-a cheu, utinam, O si, ah, Lat. vah, from wa, woe, and la, O, Oh! a particle expressive of invocation. Wa is merely repeated in A.S. wa la wa, E. wellaway; although Junius seems inclined to view it as comp. of wele felicitas, and away abest, as if the A.S. were deduced from the E. Wa la! se towyrpth that tempel; Ah! thou that destroyest the temple; Mark, xv. 29.

WALY, s. Prosperity, good fortune. Waly fa, or faw, may good fortune befall, or betide. Waly fa me, is a phrase not yet entirely obsolete, S. B.

Now waly faw that weill-fard mow!

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 86.

Gud day! gud day! God saif baith your Gracis!

Waly, Waly, fa tha twa weill fard facis! Ibid. p. 159.

A.S. waela, wela, felicitas, beatitudo, prosperitas; from wel bene.

WALIT, pret. v.

Ane legioun of thir lustie ladies schene Followit this Quene, (trewlie this is no nay;) Hard by this castell of this King so kene This wourthy folk hes walit thame away.

K. Hart, i. 18. Mr Pink. gives this as not understood. The obvious sense is, "moved forward;" Su.G. wall-a, to make a journey, to stroll, to roam abroad; Alem. uuall-en, Fenn. wall-en, id. A. S. weal-ian, to travel as an exile. Teut. wal-en, wael-en, wall-en, id. To this source Ihre traces Fr. all-er, which, he thinks, was originally written gall-er. To WALK, v. a. To watch.

Than till a kyrk he gert him be

Broucht, and walkyt all that nycht.

Barbour, xiii. 513. MS,

That nycht thai maid thaim mery cher; For rycht all at thair eyss thai wer:

Ibid. xiv. 455. MS.

"Obey thame that hais the reule ouir you;-for thai walk for your saulis, euin as thai that mone gif a compt thairfor." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 46, a.

L, without any good reason, is inserted here. as in many other ancient S. words. It occurs in O. E.

in its simple form.

"Se ye wake ye, and preye ye, for ye witen not whanne the tyme is." Wiclif, Mark xiii.

"—Abide ye here and wake ye with me—Myght-ist thou not wake with me oon our? Wake ye and preie ye that ye entre not into temptacioun.". Ibid. Mark xiv.

MoesG. wak-an, A.S. wac-ian, Su.G. Isl. waka, Alem. uuach-en, Germ. wach-en, vigilare. Hence Lyk-waik, q. v.

WALKRIFE, WAKRIFE, adj. 1. Watchful, S. wakrife.

How mony fedderis bene on hir body fynd, Als mon[y] walkrife ene lurkis thare under.

Doug. Virgil, 106. 15. "The sentence pronounced by the Synod of Fife against the rest was approven & ratified by the whole Assembly, acknowledging therein the speciall benefit of God's providence in stirring up the spirits of his servants to be wakerife, carefull, & courageous." Mr Ja. Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 227.

2. Metaph.; kept still alive.

Ane hundreth tempillis to Jupiter he maid, Ane hundreth altaris, quhareon the walkrife fyre Vol. II.

He dedicate, all times birnand schire.

Doug. Virgil, 106. 49.

From A. S. waecce, Germ. wache, watchfulness, (in like-walk, lyk-waik) and rife abundant.

To WALL UP, v. n. To boil up, S.

Su.G. waell-a, A. S. weall-an, Alem. uall-an, Belg. Germ. well-en, Isl. vell-a, aestuare, fervere. Wall, s. A wave.

From Jupiter the wylde fyre down sche flang Furth of the cloudis, distrois there schyppis all, Ouerquhelmit the sey with mony wyndy wall. Doug. Virgil, 14. 27.

The huge wallis weltres apon hie.

Ibid. 15. 39.

Germ. Sax. Sicamb. walle, unda, fluctus; O. Teut. id., abyssus, profundum; ebullitio. Alem. uual, uuala, abyssus. The root is undoubtedly Teut. wall-en ebullire, to boil up. Various terms, indeed, which signify a wave, are evidently formed from verbs expressive of instability or agitation. Thus, Su.G. waag, unda, is from MoesG. wag-jan agitare; boel-ia and E. billow, from bulg-ia, to swell, Gr. oid-ua, from oid-sw, id. Lat. fluctus from flu-ere to flow; and wave itself from Isl. vef-ia to fluctuate. Wall is from the same root with Wele, well-eye, q. v. and E. well a fountain; all as conveying the idea of ebullition.

This term exhibits the origin of the name given to the whale in the Goth. dialects. Alem. uuala, uuel, Belg. Germ. wal, also walfisk, Flandr. walvisch, q. the fish of the abyss, whose enormous size requires a great depth of water.

WALLY, adj. Billowy, full of waves.

Quhaim baith yfere, as said before haue we, Saland from Troy throw out the wally see,

The dedly storme overquhelmit with ane quhiddir. Doug. Virgil, 175. 8.

To WALL, v. a. To beat two masses into one. V. WELL.

To WALLACH, (gutt.) v. n. 1. To use many circumlocutions, Ang.

2. To cry, as a child out of humour, to wail.

The first sense might seem allied to Su.G. wall-a. to roam; the second has evidently an affinity to Ir. walligh-im to howl.

WALLAWAY, interj. Alas; E, welaway. Now nouthir gretest Juno, wallaway! Nor Saturnus son hie Jupiter with just ene Has our quarell considerit, na ouer sene.

Doug. Virgil, 112. 44.

Weil away, Ibid. 48, 6. S. walawa. A. S. wela wa, Su.G. waleva, proh dolor. V. WALY, interj.

WALLEE, s. A morass. V. Well-EY.

WALLEES, s. Saddlebags, S.

Belg. valleys, Fr. valise, a portmanteau. Ihre derives the Fr. term from wad cloth, and laes-a, to include, or lock up, vo. Wad, indumentum. The Su.G. synon. term is waetsaeck, watsaeck, q. a sack for carrying clothes.

WALLY, adj. Beautiful; large. V. WALY. WALLIDRAG, s. 1. A feeble ill-grown per-4 L wrig and werdie.

I have ane wallidrag, ane worm, ane auld wobat carle.

A waistit wolroun, na worthe bot wourdis to clatter.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48.

2. A drone, an inactive person.

Full mony a waistless wally-drag,
With waimis unweildable did furth wag.
Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 30.

According to Lord Hailes, it seems "corrupted from wallowit dreg, a withered outcast, and thence by an easy metonymy signifies any thing useless or unprofitable;" Note, Bann. P.

But this is by no means satisfactory. It appears primarily to signify the youngest of a family, who is often the feeblest. It is sometimes used to denote the youngest bird in a nest; which in Teut. receives the dirty and contemptuous designation, kack-innest; postremo exclusus, postremus in nido; Kilian. Drag or draggle may perhaps mean, the dregs. Teut. dragt, however, signifies birth, offspring, from drag-en, kindt dragen, to be pregnant. The first part of the word may have been formed from a term used among the vulgar, synonwith Su.G. gaell, testiculus; resembling the formation of its synon. Pockshakings, q. v., although with still less claim to delicacy.

It is probable, in wary-draggel, the pronunciation of S. B., is the proper one. In this case it seems to be merely the Goth. phrase, used in the old laws of Iceland, warg draege, the son of an exiled person; filius ab exule genitus; G. Andr. p. 248. Germ. warg and wrag in like manner denote an exile; also, an infamous person. V. WARY-DRAG-

To WALLOP, WALOP, v. n. 1. "To move quickly, with much agitation of the body or cloaths," Rudd. S. B.

2. To gallop.

He sprentis furth, and full proude waloppis he,

Hie strekand vp his hede with mony ane ne. Doug. Virgil, 381. 20.

And sum, to schaw thair courtlie corsis, Wald ryd to Leith, and ryn thair horsis; And wichtlie wallop ouer the sandis: Ye nouther spairit spurris nor wandis.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 265.

Rudd. views this as from the same origin with Fr. gallop-er, E. gallop; observing that G is frequently changed into W. But whence gallop itself? Seren. derives wallop from A. S. weal-an, Su. G. waell-a, to boil; and gallop, from Su.G. loep-a, to run, MoesG. ga being prefixed. They seem, however, radically the same: and we find Teut. wal-oppe, Fland. vliegh-walop, rendered, cursus gradarius, i. e. a gallop. This, I suspect, has originally been an inversion of Teut. op-wall-en, op-well-en, scaturire, cbullire, from wall-en to boil, and op, oppe, up.

To WALLOW, WALOW, v. n. 1. To wither, to fade. Cumb. dwallow, id.

So brynt the feildis, al was birnand maid,

$\mathbf{W} \quad \mathbf{A} \quad \mathbf{M}$

Herbis wox dry, wallowing and gan to faid.

Doug. Virgil, 72. 16.

Laggerit leyis wallowit fernis schew.

Ibid. 201. 5.

2. Metaph. applied to the face.

In thrauis of dethe, wi wallow'd cheik, All panting on the plain,

The bleiding corps of warriors lay,

Neir to arise again.

Hardyknute, Pinkerton's Sel. Ball. i. 13.

3. Transferred to the mind.

To this my wyt is walowide dry

But floure or froyte.-

Wyntown, i. Prol. 123,

It occurs in O. E.

A. S. wealow-ian, wealuw-an, wealw-ian, exarescere, marcescere; Alem. uualu-en, Germ. welw-en, id. This Goldastus derives from ual, flavus, because fading herbs assume a yellow colour. Val color cincritius; Schilter. Wachter in like manner derives Germ. welw-en from falb, A. S. fealw, yellow, which is evidently allied to Lat flavus.

lied to Lat. flav-us. WALROUN, s. V. Wolroun.

WALSH, Welsche, adj. Insipid, S. walsh, A. Bor. "insipid, fresh, waterish." Ray. Lincolns. id.

From thy coistis depart I was constrenyt
Be the commandment of the goddis vnfenyt,—
To pas throw out the dirk schaddois beliue

By gousty placis welsche sauorit, moist, and hare.

Quhare profound nycht perpetualie doith repare. Doug. Virgil, 180. 4.

E. wallowish, id. Skinner derives it from Teut. walghe, nausea. Rudd. and Sibb. view S. warsh, id. as radically the same. But although walsh, and warsh, are synon., the first must be traced to Teut. gaelsch, ingratus, insuavis sapore aut odore; the second, to versch, (versse, R. Glouc. p. 216.) fresh, q. tasteless. Thus, we say that any kind of food is warsh, when it wants salt. Teut. walghe, mentioned above, gives origin to another term, nearly allied in sense. V. WAUGH.

Doug. Virgil, 46. 40.

2. Pregnant.

For sorow scho gave the gast rycht thare. Gret wame wyth barne, scho wes that day, Hyr tyme nowcht nere.——

Wyntown, vii. 7. 95.
To WAMBLE, v. n. To move in an undulating manner, like an eel in the water, S.

Wamble is used in E., but only as denoting the action of the stomach, when it rolls with nausea; a sense in which the term is also used, S.

But stomach wambles, I must close, And with my fist must stop my nose.

Cleland's Poems, p. 95.

Sibb., with considerable ingenuity, derives our v. from wame, as properly denoting the motion of an animal on its belly. Su.G. hwimla has a similar sense. Dicitur de motu vermiculari; Ihre.

WAMBRASSEIRIS, s. Armour for the forepart of the arm. E. vambrace.

"Vthers simpillar of x. pund of rent or fyftie pundis in gudis, have hat, gorget, and a pesane, with wambrasseiris and reirbrasseiris." Acts Ja. I. 1429. c. 134. Edit. 1566.

Corr. from Fr. avant-bras, id. i. e. before the arm; or rather immediately from avant, and bras-sart, a vambrace.

To WAMFLE, v. n. To move like a tatterdemallion; conveying the idea of one moving about, so as to make his rags flap; Fife. Allied perhaps to Germ. waffel-n, motitari, with minserted. V. WEFFIL.

WAN, adj. 1. Black, gloomy.

Her is na gait to fle yone peple can, Bot rochis heich, and wattir depe and wan. Wallace, vii. 814. MS.

—Persauyt the mornyng bla, wan and har, Wyth cloudy gum and rak ouerquhelmyt the are.

Doug. Virgil, 202. 25.

Rudd. takes no notice of this term. It is evidently A. S. wan, wann, wonn, Wan wolcen, atra nubes. Tha wonnan niht mona onlihteth; Atram noctem luna illuminat; Boet. p. 165. V. Wonn, Lye.

2. Dark-coloured; or rather, filthy.

Sum nakit fled, and gat out off that sted,
The wattir socht, abaissit out off slepe.
In the furd weill, that was bath wan and depe, Feill off thaim fell, that brak out off that place,

Dowkit to grounde, and deit with outyn grace.

Wallace, vii. 488. MS.

Editors, not understanding the term, have substituted long; as they have changed furd to Friers.

In the Friers well that was both long and deep. A. S. wan, wonn, also signify filthy; foedus. Wonne wagas, luridi, foedi fluctus; Boet. iii. 19. wonne waelstreamas, foedi gurgites aquarum; Ibid. 30. 12. ap. Lye.

It seems uncertain, however, whether wan, in the passage last quoted, does not merely signify, lurid, q. the dark weill, or eddy of the ford.

WAN BAYN, the cheek-bone.

With his gud suerd he maid a hidwyss wound, Left thaim for ded, syne on the ferd can found, On the wan bayne with gret ire can him ta, Cleyffyt the cost rycht cruelly in twa.

_ Doug. Virgil, 77. 43.

4 L 2

It is used in a similar sense in E., but as denoting a badge of inferior authority, as that borne by ushers, &c.

Under the wand, in a state of subjection.

All cuntre vnsubjectit vnder our wand,

It may be clepyt ane vncouth strange lande.

Doug. Virgil, 219. 38.

"—The wife,—sa lang as her husband was livand,—was vnder his wand and power; and he was lord of all, quhilk perteined to his wife." Quon. Attach. c. 20. § 2. Sub virga mariti, Lat.

Elsewhere this phrase is used apparently as synon. with under the lind; denoting a situation in the open fields or woods.

Ane tyme when scho was full, and on fute fair,
Scho tuke in mynd her sister up-on-land,
And langt to ken her weilfair and her cheir,
And se quhat lyf scho led vnder the wand.

2. Sometimes in pl. it is used, not as denoting different habitations, but different apartments in the same habitation.

Tharewith the brute and noyis rais in thay wanys.

Quhil all the large hillis rang attanis.

Doug. Virgil, 475. 48.

This corresponds with the account given p. 474. 14. in the description of the palace of Latinus.

Amyd the hallis heich lang and braid, &c.

O. E. wone, wonne, a dwelling, is used in the same manner; as appears from a Poem, entitled, "A Disputation bytwene a Crystene man and a Jew," written before the year 1300.

Wyntown, iii. 3. 28. V. also vii. 4. 30. Mr Macpherson derives it from Dan. last crime, fraud, and wan the negat. part.

We find a word much resembling this in A.S., only inverted; leaswene, false opinion, from waenan, wen-an, to think, and leas without. Su.G. handlos is used to denote an accidental stroke. Or it may be q. wandlos, from wand evil, and los, corresponding to E. less, i. e. without evil design.

WANLUCK, s. Misfortune, S. B. wanluk, Maitland Poems.

WANREST, s. 1. Inquietude, S. Belg. onrust. "Shal ye not then be ashamed of that whereinto now ye take pleasure? Shall not this silly ease be turned in sorrowfull wanrest?" Mr Ja. Mellvill's Mem. p. 142.

2. Cause of inquietude, S. B.

Quo' she, I wiss I cou'd your wanrest ken,

Ross's Hetenore, p. 38.

3. Wanrest of a clock, the pendulum.

"—The warrest of a cleck gaes as far the tae gate, as it gede the tither;" S. Prov. signifying, that an unstable person generally goes from one extreme to another.

As Isl. oroa denotes the axis of a wheel, because still in motion; it is singular that, although the Danish word be different, it is formed in the same manner, and conveys precisely the same idea with ours. Uroe, a pendulum, from u negat., and roe rest. The same analogy is observable in Germ. unruhe, id., from un negat., and ruhe rest; and in Sw. oro, as, oron i et hur, the balance of a watch; Wideg. WANRESTFU, adj. Restless, S.

Chr. Kirk, st. 12.

This may perhaps be traced to Su.G. wipp-a motitare se, sursum deorsum celeriter ferri; Isl. veifa, Teut. wipp-en, vibrare. I hesitate whether this may not be viewed as the origin of the v. Wap. Isl. wipp-a to vault, to leap over.

To WAP, v. a. To wrap, to envelope. Gae, fetch a web of the silken claith, Another of the twine,

And wap them into our ship's side, And let nae the sea come in.

-They wapped them round that gude ship's side,

But still the sea come in.

Sir P. Spens, Minstrelsy Border, iii. 68.

The last phraseology, which is perhaps the most correct, claims affinity with Su.G. wep-u, to lap about; Isl. wef-ia, MoesG. waib-an, id. WAPPIN, WAPPYN, s. A weapon, S.

The Romanis than discendit from Enee Rusche unto wappynnis for thare lyberté.

Doug. Virgil, 266. 45. MocsG. wepna, A.S. waepen, Su.G. wapn, Belg. wapen, Dan. waaben, arma. As Alem. waffen occurs as synon. with harnesch, (our harness), Ihre thinks that it may have originally denoted defensive armour, as the breast-plate, &c. from waff-en to surround. But may it not be conjectured, with as much reason, that it originally signified offensive arms; from Isl. veif-a, Teut. wipp-en, to brandish? WAPINSCHAW, WAPINSCHAWING, s. An exhibition of arms, according to the rank of the person, made at certain times in every district. S.

"It is statute, that wapinschaw sal be keiped & haldin." Stat. Will. c. xxiii. § 6.

"It was ordanit in the secound Parliament of our Souerane Lord the King, that ilk Schiref of the realme sould gar wapinshawing be maid foure tymes ilk yeir, in als mony placis as war speidfull, within his Baillierie." Acts Ja. I. 1425, c. 67. edit 1566.

The names of all who appeared, were to be enrolled. These meetings were not designed for military exercise, but only for shewing that the lieges were properly provided with arms; from A.S. waepn, weapon, and sceaw-ian, to show. It was also provided, that a captain should be chosen for each parish to instruct the parishioners in the military exercise; for which purpose they were to assemble twice at least every month, during May, June and July. The Swedes had formerly a term of a similar signification, wapna-syn, from wapn arma, and syn-a, monstrare. V. Ihre, vo. Moenstra. He derives the modern military term muster from Lat. monstrare.

Our word evidently differs, in its signification, from E. wapentake, which seems to be synon. with that division of a county called Hundred. Some, apparently without foundation, derive the term from A. S. waepn, and tuec-an to teach, q. a certain district to be taught the use of arms. Dr Johns. says. that "upon a meeting for that purpose they touched each other's weapons in token of their fidelity and allegiance." Hoveden indeed derives it a tactu ar. morum; but gives a more probable account of the ceremony. When any one, he says, was appointed prefect of the wapentake, on a fixed day, in the place where they were wont to assemble, all the elders rose up to him, as he dismounted from his horse. He, having erected his spear, all that were present came and touched it with their lances; and thus they gave a pledge of their mutual engagement, by the contact of arms. V. Cowel.

This practice was undoubtedly borrowed from the ancient Goths. Among them the mode of decreeing edicts by the people at large, by the clashing of their arms, was called Wanntak. The same word denoted the confirmation of a judicial edict by the touch of arms. The votes being collected, the Judge reached forth a spear, by touching which all his assessors confirmed the sentence. V. Verel. and Ihre in vo. Spelman, vo. Wapentachium, thinks that this custom is to be traced to that of the ancient Germans, and also of the Macedonians, who, when displeased with any measure in their public assemblies, were wont to express their dissatisfaction by striking their shields.

WAPPIT, part. pa.

The feind is our felloun fa, in the we confyde, Thou moder of all mercye, and the menare. For ws wappit in wo in this warld wyde, To thy sone mak thy mane, and thy makar. Houlate, iii. 9.

The only sense given of wappit by Mr Pink. is "warped, turned." But here it certainly signifies, wrapped, enveloped; Su.G. wep-a, to lap about.

Barbour, xvi. 650. MS.

This seems more nearly allied to Su.G. war-a, to be, than to any v. I have met with; q. be good or evil to him, like the Sw. phrase; Ware haermed huru det will; Be this as it will; Wideg. I suspect, however, that it is rather to be viewed as a peculiar use of the following v. V. sense 2.

To WAR, WARE, WAIR, WAYR, v. a. 1. To lay out, as expence, S., as to war silver, to lay out money, S., A. Bor.

"They shall be lyable both for intromission and omission, and shall have no allowance or defalcation of the charges and expences waired out by them." Act Sedt. 25th Feb. 1693.

i. e. bestowed himself.

A similar phrase is used concerning one who is supposed to deserve any cross accident that befals him; It's weill war'd on him, or at his hand, S.

3. To waste, to squander, to throw away. Type nocht thir men, but to sum strenth ve ryd, And I sall pass to get yow power mar;

Thir ar our gud thus lychtly for to war. Wallace, viii. 198, MS. Wear, edit. 1648. Syn to the King he raykyt in gret ire, And said on lowd, Was this all your desyr, To wayr a Scot thus lychtly into wayn?

Ibid. xi. 255. MS. Isl. ver-ia, to buy, to purchase; to sell; to make merchandise; Veria varu sinni, to sell his wares; Teut. waer-en, to promise a price. This has been deduced from waer, true, Alem. war-en. to plight faith, i. e. to verify, to give assurance that the goods sold are sufficient; as the seller was anciently bound to do. Hence E. ware, wares, merchandise, something to be sold. This word seems very ancient; as also found in Celt. C. B. gwarrio, warr-io, to spend money; Ray.

To WARAND, v. a. To protect, S. and E. warrant, to give security against danger.

For wytht hym had Maximiane All the gud fechtarys of the land; Nane left, that evyr wytht strenthe of hand Mycht warand the small folk fra the fycht, Na for to stynt there fays mycht.

Wyntown, v. 10. 547. A. S. waren-ian, cavere sibi, defendere se. Lye Pround is perhaps an error for proud. It may . (Addit. Jun. Etym.) derives E. warrant from A.S. war-ian defendere. This is obviously the origin; analogous to Su.G. waer-a, tueri. Hence waern-a, id. waern, a tower; resembling A.S. waering, a mound, a rampart, a fortress.

> WARAND, WARRAND, s. A place of shelter or defence from enemies.

> > And thai that saw sa sudandly That folk come egyrly prikand Rycht betwix thaim and thair warand, Thai war in to full gret effray.

It occurs in the same sense, O. E. The targe was his warrant,

Rob. de Brunne, Ellis's Spec. i. 121. V. the v. WARBLE, s. A sort of worm that breeds betwixt the outer and inner skin of beasts, S. a swelling on the back of a cow or ox, A. Bor.

A.S. wear, Teut. weer, a knot, puff, or bunch; any thing callous.

To WARBLE, v. n. To wriggle, &c. V. WRA-

WARD, s. 1. A division of an army. Apoun this wyse the oistis and wardis hale On athir part returnyt in batale.

Doug. Virgil, 430. 17. 2. A small piece of pasture ground, inclosed on all sides, generally appropriated to young quadrupeds; as, the calf-ward, the place where calves are inclosed for pasture, S.

Within the ward I might have clos'd thee Where well thou mightest have repos'd thec, Amang the Laird's best fillies,

Watson's Coll. i. 49.

Thus Su.G. waard, not only signifies custodia, but sepes, sepimentum, i. e. the means of keeping in safety; A.S. geard. To WARD, v. a. To imprison.

"It appears from the old records, that a company of players were in Perth, June 3d., 1589. In obedience to an act of the General Assembly, which had been made in the year 1574—5, they applied to the consistory of the church for a licence, and shewed a copy of the play, which they proposed to exhibit. The words of the record, some of them a little modernised, are, 'Perth, June 3d. 1589, The minister and elders give licence to play the play, with conditions, that no swearing, banning, nor one [onie] scurrility shall be spoken, which would be a scandal to our religion which we profess, and for an evil example unto others. Also, that nothing shall be added to what is in the register of the play itself. If any one who plays shall do in the contrary, he shall be warded, and make his public repentance.' That is, he was to be imprisoned, and afterwards to appear in the church to be rebuked in the public place of repentance." Statist. Acc. (Perth). xviii. 522.

E. put in ward; Su.G. waerd-a, custodire. WARD AND WARSEL, security for, pledge,

Ross's Helenore, p. 31.

As ward signifies keeping, warsel seems corr. from wardsel, perhaps from A.S. weard custodia, and sell-an tradere; q. security for delivery of what has been kept. Wachter observes that the Germ. sal, from sel-en, tradere, conveys this idea. Traditionem, praebitionem et exhibitionem ejus rei, cui annectitur—significat; Proleg. Sect. V. Su.G. waerd-a, praestare, sensu juridico.

L. B. warda, E. award. Su.G. waer-ia signifies, in a forensic sense, to purge one's self by oath, (an oblique use of the v. signifying to defend); whence ward, he who has purged himself in this manner; Ihre. Veria the hanum vari varder; Si juramento praestito defendens, liber erit; Seren. Addend. vo. Award.

WARDOUR, s.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 45. Mr Pink. inclines to render it "ward or division; what we call plot of a garden;" Note, p. 387. But perhaps it rather means verdurc. WARDRAIPPER, s. The keeper of the wardrobe.

The wardraipper of Venus' bour To giff a joblet he is als doure, As it war off ane fute syd frog.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 90. Joblet is probably an error for doblet, a doublet. From wardreip, wardrep, wardrip: as wardrobe is written by Dunbar, Ibid. p. 90. 91. 92.

WARISON, WARYSOUN, WARESONE, s. Reward.

> -And hycht all Fyfe in warysoun Till him, that mycht othir ta or sla Robert the Bruce, that wes his fa. Barbour, ii. 206. MS.

Luve preysis, but comparesone, Both gentill, sempill, generall; And of fré will gevis waresone, As fortoun chansis to befall.

Scott, Bannatyne Poems, p. 192. Lord Hailes renders it " remedy, recovery." In this case it would be from Fr. guarison, id. from guarir, guerir, to heal. But it seems rather to signify, reward.

This is its signification in O. E.

-Alle that him served he brouht to warisoun. R. Brunne, 1. 24.

Chaucer uses this term for merite, in the original of Rom. Rose, Tyrwhitt observes that warysoun is donativum, Prompt. Parv. Garysoun, wareson, reward, riches; Gl. R. Glouc.

I apprehend that Fr. guerdon and E. reward, are both from the same origin with this; which probably is Su.G. waerd pretium, or waerd dignus; MoesG. wairths. For a reward is that which is given to one who is accounted worthy in some respect.

As used by Gower, it seems merely to signify provision, sustenance.

My father here hath but a lyte
Of waryson, and that he wende
Had all be lost, but nowe amende
He may well through your noble grace.
Conf. Am. Fol. 26. b. col. 1.

WARISON, s. Expl. "Note of assault."

Two hundred of my master's powers,

Lay of the Last Minstrel, C. IV. 21. This seems radically different from the preceding; perhaps q. war-sound, from Fr. guerre, and son.

WARKLY, adj. Given to work, diligent, S. Germ. wirklich, effective.

WARKLOOM, s. A tool or instrument for working, in whatever way, S. Thus the term is used as to a pen.

But gowked goose, I am right glad,

Sen, Lown, thy language I have laid,
And put thee to thy pen to write;
Now, Dog, I shall thee sae despite,

King Quair, iii. 9.

WARLIEST, adj. Most wary; used metaph.

"Yone is the warliest wane," said the wise king,

That ever I wist in my walk in all this warld wyde.

And the straitest of stuf with richese to ring, With unabasit bernys bergane to abide.

And ding me in the dust.
We men that hes sic wickit wyvis

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 6.

It is sometimes used as an adj. Thus the title of a poem in the Evergreen is,

A bytand ballat on warlo wives, That gar thair men live pinging lives.

I. 51.

The term, throughout the poem, is synon. with evil, especially in reference to the temper, A.S. waer-loga, a hypocrite, a covenant-breaker; a wicked person; compounded of waere a covenant, and loga a liar.

WARLOCK, s. A wizzard, a man who is supposed to be in compact with the devil, or to deal with familiar spirits, S.

"Warlock in Scotland is applied to a man whom the vulgar suppose to be conversant with spirits;" Johus. Dict.

"This Barton's wife had been likewise taken with him, who declared, that she never knew him to have been a warlock before; and he likewise declared, that he never knew her to have been a witch before." Satan's Invisible World, p. 87.

A curious anecdote is told concerning the justly celebrated John Napier of Merchistoun, inventor of the logarithms, who, during great part of the time when he was making his calculations, resided at Gart.

ness in the parish of Drymen.

"He used frequently, in the evening, to walk out in his night gown and cap. This, with some things which to the vulgar appeared rather odd, fixed on him the character of a warlock. It was firmly believed, and currently reported, that he was in compact with the devil; and the time he spent in study was spent in learning the black art, and holding conversation with Old Nick." P. Killearn, Stirlings. Statist. Acc. xvi. 108.

Sibb. views warlo as synon. with this term. But I have met with no proof that it is ever used in relation to sorcery. Warlock seems radically different, bearing strong marks of affinity to Isl. vardlok-r, an incantation, or magical song used for calling up evil spirits. Carmen quoddam magicum quo concinne cantato invitantur mali genii ad indicandum futura; Verel. Ind. p. 284.

It seems to have been a received opinion in this country, that the devil gave all those, who entered into his service, new names, by which they were to be called in all their nocturnal meetings; and that, if any one of them was accidentally designed by his or her proper name, the spell was dissolved. V. Satan's Invisible World, p. 14.

The same idea prevailed in Iceland. It was also believed in that country, that the souls of those, acquainted with magical arts, left their bodies in a sort of lifeless state, when they made those expeditions through the air, which were called Hamfarir, and which were undertaken for magical purposes.

WARM, s. The act of warming, S.

This morning raw, gin ye've all night been out, That ye wad thole a warm I makna doubt.

Ross's Helenore, p. 78.

To WARNE, v. a. To refuse.

The Dowglas then his way has tane Rycht to the horss, as he him bad; Bot he that him in yhemsell had, Than warnyt hym dispitously.

Barbour, ii. 137. MS.

And gaiff gretly feill gudis at he wan;
He warnd it nocht till na gud Scottis man.
Wallace, vi. 777. MS.

In old editions, it is changed to spared. It is also used in a neut. sense.

And swa the land abandownyt he, That durst nane warne to do his will.

Barbour, iv. 392. MS.

A. S. wern-an, wyrn-an, to refuse, to deny; whence waernung denial, wearne repugnance, obstacle. Su.G. Isl. warn-a prohibere, denegare. These may perhaps be traced to MoesG. war-jan, prohibere. Ihre views Gr. agr-soma, nego, as a cognate term.

To WARNYS, v. a. To furnish a castle, or any fortified place, with that provision which is necessary, whether for defence, or for the support of the defenders.

Ibid. iv. 102. MS.

It is used by R. Brunne, p. 293.

His vitaile he has purucid in Brigges forto be, His wynes were ther leid, & warnised that cite. Su.G. waern-a, to defend, to protect; whence waern a fortification, a castle, or the walls surrounding a castle. Germ. warn-en, munire, instruere armis. Fr. garn-ir is evidently from this source; and, among other things, signifies, to furnish, to fortify a weak place. Ihre derives waerna from waer custodia, and naa capere, q. to keep guard.

WARNSTOR, s. Provisions laid up in a garrison, for the sustenance of those to whom the defence of it is committed.

Than Wallace said, Falowis, I mak yow knawin,

The purwyance, that is within this wanys, We will nocht tyne; ger sembyll all at anys, Gar wern Ramsay, and our gud men ilkan; I will remayn quhill this warnstor be gan.

Wallace, ix. 1197. MS.

It is one word in MS. In edit. 1648, I will remain till all the stuffe be gone.

Warinstour, as used by R. Brunne, is expl. "defence, fortification;" Gl. Hearne.

That castelle hight Pilgrym, of alle it bare the flour:

The Sarazins kept it that tym for ther chefe warinstour.

P. 180.

It seems properly to signify, magazine, or a strong hold for preserving provisions.

From Su.G. waern-a to defend, or waern, a fortification, and store, Germ. steur, used nearly in the same sense as the E. word; vectigal, collecta. Thus the idea is, store laid up in a place of defence. By a similar composition, Alem. heristeura signifies military pay; brandsteur a collection of combustibles; and Sw. krigs-behoer, stores for an army or town.

To WARP, v. a. 1. To throw.

The Erle tauld him all his cass, How he wes chasyt on the se, With thaim that suld his awyn be; And how he had bene tane, but dout, Na war it that he warpyt owt All that he had, him lycht to ma; And swa eschapyt thaim fra.

WARP, s. A designation in reckoning oysters, being the term used for four, Loth.

"A hundred, as sold by the fishers contains 33 warp, equal to six score and twelve. The retail hundred contains only 30 warp. Four oysters make a warp." P. Preston-pans, Statist. Acc. xvii. 69.

This is undoubtedly from the v. warp, to throw, to cast; as, in like manner, a cast of herring includes four. Both terms allude to the act of the fishermen, in throwing down a certain number at a time, when counting their fish.

To WARP, v. n. To open; patere, Virg. For bot thou do, thir grete durris, but dred, And grislie yettis sall neuer warp on bred. Doug. Virgil, 164. 25.

This is undoubtedly the same with E. wrap. Dan. wraffla samen, implicare; Isl. reif-a, fasciis involvere, reif-ar fasciae.

To WARRACH, v. n. (gutt.) The term warrachand is applied to those who, from impetuosity of temper, are given to scolding, or to the use of abusive language, S. B.

It seems radically the same with WARY, q. v.

To WARSELL, WERSILL, v. n. To wrestle,

Quha with this warld dois warsell and stryfe, And dois his dayis in dolour dryfe, Thocht he in lordschip be possest, He levis bot ane wrechit life.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 58. And eik quha best on fute can ryn lat se, To preif his pith, or wersill, and bere the gre. Doug. Virgil, 129. 36.

Belg. worstel-en, id. Teut. wersel-en, reluctari, reniti, obniti, Kilian; most probably from wers, wars, contrarius, adversus: for what is wrestling, but one opposing another, by an exertion of strength? From were is formed O. Teut. wers-saem, contrarius, and from wersel-en, werselinghe repugnantia, contrarietas. This analogy indicates their radical affinity. It is equally clear, that E. wrestle is a vitiated mode of pronunciation. WARSELL, WARSTLE, s. Struggle, S.

The warld's wrack we share o't, The warstle and the care o't.

Burns, iv. 15.

WARSET, adj.

"Or gif they be found in the forest in time of nicht lyand, haveand an horne, or ane hound quhilk is called Warset: in that case lauchful witnes being brocht (to testify the trueth) aucht kye sall be payed." Forest Laws, c. 1. § 2.

Skinner seems rightly to derive this from A. S. ware observation, caution, and sett-an to set; as denoting a dog employed by a thief, for watching and interrupting the deer in the forest.

WART, in composition of adverbs, is the same with ward in Mod. Eng., as, inwart inward, utwart, outward. MoesG. wairths, A. S. weard, Isl. vert; Gl. Wynt. Add Alem. uuerti. Wart, locus, is probably the origin. This Wachter deduces from war ubi, E. where.

WART, WARD, s. A tumulus or mound thrown up on high ground, in the Orkney and Shetland islands, for the purpose of conveying intelligence.

"To convey intelligence readily from one place to another, and particularly to spread the alarm in case of the approach of an enemy, the latter were generally thrown up on the highest hill, and had fires of wood and other combustible matter lighted on them; and the name of Warts, or Wards, which they at present bear, has a manifest allusion to this circumstance." Barry's Orkney, p. 95.

Sometimes these were intended for beacons to direct navigators.

"The ancient inhabitants of these islands set up on the eminences around the harbours, warts, or marks to direct the course of vessels sailing along the coast, placing one near the point of each arm of the harbour, and a third near the bottom." P. Unst, Shetl. Statist. Acc. v. 184, N.

This is the same with Isl. vard, Su G. waard, excubiae, custodia, vigilia, E. watch and ward; from vard-a, waard-a, attendere, custodire. Hence Isl. Strandavard, Su.G. strandawaard, excubiae littorales, Ihre; excubiae in littore, Verel.; Botavard, botawaard, excubiae ad speculas positae, Ihre; excubiae in promontoriis ad strues lignorum incendendas, visa classe hostili; Verel.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 16.

2. A puny child, or an ill-grown person of whatever age; pron. warwoof, Ang.

A. S. were-wulf, Su.G. warulf, Germ. werwolf, vir-lupus, lycanthropos, man-wolf. It is undoubtedly the same word which is also pron. wurl, wroul, and worlin, S. used precisely in sense second. Sibb., without any probability, thinks that "warlock may be a corruption of this word."

In Fr. the term is inverted; loup garou, or wolfman. Wachter says, that garou is derived from Celt. gur, vir; C.B. gwr, pl. gwerin. Gwr-a, to wed; gwrach, a woman, a wife. There is no good reason to doubt that gwr is radically the same with Goth. wer, man, 1sl. vair; and, may we not add Lat. vir? But as Fr. guaroul is also used, it is evident that this is merely the Goth. term with g prefixed. Hence it appears that loup, in the other, is redundant.

The Gr. term. Auxandgamos, corresponding in signification to warwolf, was formed from the same idea which prevailed among the Northern nations, that a man might transform himself into the shape of a wolf, and roam in quest of prey, actuated by the disposition of that ferocious animal.

Cornelius Agrippa introduces Virgil, Pliny, and Augustine, as attesting this transformation.

"Virgill also speaking of certayne hearbes of Pontus sayde:

With these, O Merim, haue I seene,
Oft times a man to haue
The fearfulle shape of wilde wolfe, and Him selfe in woodes to saue.

"And Pliny saithe, that one Demarchaus Pharrhasius in a sacrifice of mans bodie, iwhich the Arcadians offered to Jupiter Liceus, tasted the inwardes of a sacrificed childe & was turned into a wolfe, for the which transformation of men into wolfes Augustine thinketh that Pan was called with another name Liceus, and Jupiter Liceus. The same Augustine [De Civitate Dei, Lib. xviii. c. 18.] doth recompt, that when he was in Italie, certaine women witches, like Circes, when they had given inchantments in cheese to straungers, they transformed them into horses, and other beasts of cariage, and when they had caried the burdens that they listed, againe they turned them into men: and that this chaunced at that time to one Father Prestantius." Vanitie of Sciences, Fol. 56, b.

Pliny elsewhere rejects this idea; Homines in lupos verti, rursumque restitui sibi, falsum esse confidenter existimare debemus, aut credere omnia quae fabulosa tot seculis comperimus. Hist. Lib. viii. c. 28.

Solinus, speaking of the Neuri, a Scythian nation, says; Neuri, ut accepimus, statis temporibus in lupos transfigurantur: dein exacto spatio, quod huic sorti attributum est, in pristinam faciem revertuntur; c. 15.

Some, among whom we may reckon the learned Kilian, have ascribed the origin of this fable to the idea which has been entertained by persons disordered in mind, that they were actually transformed into the likeness of other animals. But Wachter justly rejects this view, as those, who were called lycanthropi, were supposed to produce this change at pleasure, and in consequence of an act of their own wills; whereas the idea, proceeding from disease, has always been a source of suffering. He apprehends that the fable had its origin from those who, at stated times, and for the purpose of celebrating certain mysteries, clothed themselves in the skins of animals, and that it was propagated by those, whose interest it was that it should be believed, that this was a real metamorphosis by the power of the deity whom they worshipped.

Finn, in his Dissertation concerning the Speculum Regale, adopts an hypothesis nearly allied to this. He observes that, as the fable, of men being transformed into wolves, was common amongst the ancients in almost every country, it probably originated from the sports, in which persons appeared masked, which were celebrated from time immemorial about the season of Christmas.

Cotgr. explains Loupgarou as if equivalent to Canibal; "a mankinde wolfe, such a one as being flesht on men and children, will rather starve than feed on any thing else."

It is surprising that Verstegan should give credit to all the fables connected with this term. "The Were Wolvis," he says, "are certain sorcerers, who having their bodies annointed with an ointment, which they make by the instinct of the Devil; and putting on a certain inchanted girdle, do not only unto the view of others seem as wolves, but to their own thinking have both the shape and nature of wolves, so long as they wear the said girdle. And they do dispose themselves as very wolves, in wourrying, and killing, and most of humane creatures.

"Of such, sundry have been taken and executed in sundry parts of Germany, and the Netherlands. One Peter Stump, for being a Were-wolf, and having killed thirteen children, two women, and one man, was at Bedbur, not far from Cullen, in the year 1589, put unto a very terrible death, the flesh of divers parts of his body was pulled out with hot iron tongs, his arms, thighs and legs broken on a wheel, and his body lastly burnt. He died with very great remorse, desiring that his body might not be spared from any torment, so his soul might be saved." Restitution, p. 263. 264.

Those, who wish to have further information on this subject, may consult Wachter, vo. Werwulf, and Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 453. 494—496. V. Worlin. The accounts given, by Isl. writers, of the Berserker, greatly resemble the fables concernwarwolfs. V. Eyttyn.

Among the other fanciful names given to pieces of ordinance, or to engines for throwing stones, we find the Warwolf mentioned. It was used by Edw. I. at the siege of Stirling. With it, as we learn from Camden, he "pierced with one stone, and cut as even as a thread two vauntmures [or outer walls], as he did before at the siege of Brechin, where Thomas Maile [Maule] the Scots man scoffed at the English artillery, with wiping the wall with his handkercheif, until both he and the wall were wiped away with a shot." Remains, Artillery, p. 266.

Matth. of Westminster calls this engine lupus belli, p. 449. Annals of Scotl. 1. 279. N. If he has not mistaken the meaning of the term, as used by the E. in military affairs, it must be understood as having a different origin from that which has been explained. It may seem to confirm this, that Langtoft [ii. 826.] mentions an engine used at this siege, called a ludgare or lurdare. "This," Lord Hailes has observed, "is plainly a corruption of loup de guerre, lupus belli, warwolf." Annals, ii. 346.

Grose views the Lupus mentioned by Procopius, De Bello Goth. Lib. i. c. 27, as the same instrument with the war-wolf. Du Cange considers it as different, and as only used for defence, vo. Lupus.

WASH, WESCHE, s. Stale urine; especially as used for the purpose of steeping clothes, in order to their being washed, S. being sometimes substituted for a lie; whence most probably the name.

And thay can mak withouttyn dowt A kind of aill thay call harnis owt; Wait ye how thay mak that? A coubroun quene, a laichly lurdane, Off strang weische sheill tak a jurdane And settis in the pylefat.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 192, 193.

Lynusuy, S. F. K. n. Leg. gylefut.

This mode of washing, which certainly does not suggest the idea of great refinement, has probably been transmitted from the Goths. It is retained in Iceland to this day. Van Troil, speaking of the fulling of wadmal, or coarse cloth, says that for this purpose "they make use of urine, which they also employ in washing and bucking, instead of soap and pot-ashes." Letters on Iceland, p. 114.

"Learn your gooddam to kirn wash;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 49. This has evidently the same meaning, and has a common origin, with another Proverb; "Learn your Goodam to make kail." This is "spoken to them who officiously offer to teach them who know more than themselves." Kelly, p. 233. 234.

Teut. wasch, lotura.

WASTELL. A particular kind of bread.

"They make not all kindes of bread, as law requyres; that is, ane fage, symmell, wastell, pure cleane breade, mixed bread, and bread of trayt." Chalm. Air, c. 9. § 4.

Vastellum, Lat. copy. L. B. wastell-us, id., defined by Du Cange, "a more delicate kind of bread, or cake." Fr. gasteau.

It has generally been supposed, that this was the bread used with the wastell-bowl, in drinking which the Saxons, at their public entertainments, wished health to one another, in the phrase of Waes heil, i. e. Health be to you. V. Cowel. The origin ascribed to this custom in England, is so well known, that it is scarcely necessary to mention it. Rowena, the daughter of Hengist, by the counsel of her father, who wished, by the influence of her charms, to have Vortigern king of the Britons completely under his power, presented him with a bowl of wine, at an entertainment given by Hengist, saying, Waes heil, Hlaford Kyning.

It seems doubtful, however, whether the term is not rather derived from Isl. Su.G. veitsla, weitsla, a feast, from wet-a, a v. used to denote the invitation of many guests. Isl. blotveitzlor, in pl. commessationes sacrae.

The minstrels, who go about playing in the night season, both in S. and E., especially before the new year, are called waits; not, as Skinner supposes, because they wait on magistrates, &c., but because they seem to have been anciently viewed as a sort of watchmen. The word was written wayghtes, in the reign of Edw. III.; "players," says Ritson, "on the hautboy or other pipes during the night, as they are in many places at this day." E. Metr. Rom. I. WATER, WATTER, s. 1. A river, or pretty large body of running water, S.

"Baith seys and watteris geuis be vnjust merchis als mekle to sum landis, as thay reif fra vther." Bellend. Descr. Alb. c. 1.

Bellenden generally uses it to denote a river, sometimes as distinguished from a rivulet.

"Sindry small burnis discendis fra the hillis of Cheuiot, and vthir montanis lyand thair about deuiding Cumbir fra Annardail, and fallis in the watter of Sulway;" Ibid. c. 5. Solveum fluvium, Boeth. It is also used when amnis occurs in the original; Ibid.

It does not appear that A. S. waeter denoted a body of running water. Nor is Ir. uisge, easc, mentioned in Dictionaries as having a similar sense. But it is reasonable to suppose, that this was the case in ancient times; as we find it in the composition of the names of many places situated on rivers. Besides, esk and watter, in some parts of S., are promiscuously used to denote a river. Thus, in Angus, North Esk is most commonly called The Nord Watter, and South Esk The Soud Watter.

Germ. wasser is used in the sense of river, torrent,

&c. V. Wachter.

2. As a generic word, it denotes any body of running water, whether great or small, S.

"Rivers in Scotland are very frequently called waters." Pennant's Tour in S. 1769, p. 93. N.

Bellenden's orthography of the word marks the pron. universally retained in S., except in the Southern counties, where it is sounded q. waitter.

3. The ground lying on the banks of a river, S. "The water, in the mountainous districts of Scotland, is often used to express the banks of the river, which are the only inhabitable parts of the county." Minstrelsy Border, I. 109. N.

4. The inhabitants of a tract of country watered by a certain river or brook, S.

Gar warn the water, braid and wide, Gar warn it sune and hastilie! They that winna ride for Telfer's kye, Let them never look in the face o' me! Minstrelsy Border, i. 103.

"To raise the water,—was to alarm those who lived along its side." N. Ibid. p. 109.

WATER-BRASH, s. A disease consisting in a sense of heat in the epigastrium, with copious eructations of aqueous humour, S. the Pyrosis of Cullen.

WATER-CRAW, s. The water ouzel, S. Sturnus cinclus, Linn. Statist. Acc. xvii. 249.

WATER-KELPIE, s. The spirit of the waters. V. KELPIE.

WATER-MOUTH, s. The mouth of a river, vulgarly Watter-mow, S. B. Thus the mouth of South Esk is denominated in Angus.

"Prout eaedem piscariae et lie cruiffies respective bondantur et jacent a lie water-mouth dictae aquae de Done."-Chart. K. Ja. VI. 1617. State, Fra-

"In the mean time, I'd be glad to see one of the original charters granted by the town to the heritors of Nether Don, to know whether they have got a right to the town's fishing 'twixt the water mouths, or if the town gave it to the heritors of Dee." Lett. 1727, State, Fraser of Fraserfield, p. 320.

WATLING STRETE, VATLANT STREIT, a term, used to denote the milky way.

Doug. Virgil, 85. 43.

Henrysone uses it in the same sense, in his account of the journeys of Orpheus, first to heaven, and then to hell, in quest of his wife Euridice.

Quhen cudit was the sangis lamentable,
He tuke his harp, and on his brest can hyng,
Syne passit to the hevin, as sais the fable,
To seke his wife: but that auailit no thing.
By Wadlyng strete he went but tarying;

It has received this designation, in the same manner as it was called by the Romans Via Lactea, from Vol. II.

its fancied resemblance to a broad street or causeway, being as it were paved with stars. The street itself, it is said, was thus denominated "from one Vitellianus, supposed to have superintended the direction of it; the Britons calling Vitellianus, in their language, Guetalin." Statist. WATTIE, s. A blow, Ang. Su.G. bwat, celer?

WATTLE, s. A tax paid in Shetland.

"Another payment exacted by the grantees of the Crown, is called the Wattle. In the beginning of the 16th century, when Popery blinded mankind, the priests begged, from these islands, money under the name of Wattle, in consideration of the extraordinary benefit which the people were to receive from the liberal distribution of holy water among them." Thay wauchit at the wicht wyne, and warit out wourdis;

And syne that spak more spedelie, and sparit no materis.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 46. Here wauch is used, and rather as a n. v.

Sibb. supposes, without any sufficient ground, that it is "probably from Queych, a drinking cup." Rudd., with more verisimilitude, refers to A. S. veaht irriguus. For the primary idea seems to be that of moistening the throat well. Isl. vokua madefieri, Teut. weyck-en, macerare. V. WAK.

E. swig is probably from a common origin, s being prefixed. Johns. derives it from Isl. swiga. He seems to have mistaken the word used by Junius, which is Isl. siug-a sorbere, rather sugere. This may indeed be the root of the E. word. For a child is said to wacht, S. when sucking so forcibly as to swallow a considerable quantity at once.

WAUCHT, WAUGHT, s. A large draught of any liquid, S.

Teut. walghe nausea, walgh-en nauseare, walghigh nauseosus. Isl. mig velger, nauseo, velge, nausea. But this is only a secondary sense. The primary meaning of the Isl. v. velg-ia is, tepefacere; G. Andr. p. 257. The transition is very natural; as liquids in a tepid state excite nausea.

Doug. Virgil, 417. 32. Lye, (Addit. Jun. Etym.) properly refers to reafe, bestia erratica. V. WAFF.

To WAUK, WALK, WALK, v. a. To full cloth, to thicken it, S. pron. wauk.

"The sheep supply them with wool for their upper garments; this, when spun and woven, is fulled, or walked, as they term it, in a particular manner by the women." Garnet's Tour, 1. 157.

The idea of Dr Garnet, as to the origin of the term, is similar to that of Skinner, (vo. Walker, fullo). He derives it from the circumstance of the women sitting round the board and cloth, and "working it with their feet, one against another." "It is this part of the operation," he says, "which is properly called walking, and it is on this account that fulling mills, in which water and machinery are made to do the work of these women, are in Scotland and the north of England frequently called walk-mills." Ibid. p. 158.

The custom, of fulling cloth with the feet, would seem anciently to have been also practised in Eng-

Su.G. walk-a pressare, volutare, ut solent, qui fulloniam exercent; Belg. walck-en, Ital. gualc-are, id. Ray and Skinnner view Lat. calc-are, to tread, as the origin. This has great appearance of probability, especially as A. S. swurner, a fuller, is from swern-ettan, calcitrare, conculcando agitare. But there is one difficulty. The synon. A. S. term wealcere is undoubtedly from wealc-an, volvere, revolvere, to roll; whence wealc, a revolution. This A. S. v., however, is viewed by Somner and Johns. as the origin of E. walk, to go.

It denotes feet, so loosely connected with the ancle-joints as to bend to one side when set on the ground. Thus, the phrase, shachling feet, is still used. This is evidently the same with Weffil, q. v. WE, WEY, WIE, s. Conjoined with litill; 1.

It is also sometimes used as equivalent to, in a slight degree. Wee, little; Wee and weny, very small, A. Bor.

This word has been viewed as an abbrev. of Teut. weinigh, little; Macpherson, Sibb. But both terms are used, A. Bor. Or of A. S. hwene, few; Lye, Addit. Jun. Etym. vo. Way-bit. But this is far from being satisfactory; as, if I mistake not, no instance of a similar abbreviation can be produced, where only part of the first syllable is retained. Teut. weinigh being apparently from the A. S. word, it is extremely improbable that these terms should be retained in our quhene, few, and at the same time in an abbreviated form.

I cannot, however, pretend to give any etymon that is not liable to objection. It is observed by Wachter, vo. Wan, that Lat. ve, in composition, has the power of diminution; as, ve-grandis, little, literally, not great; Ve-jovis, parvus Jupiter, concerning whom Ovid thus writes;

Vis ea si verbi est, cur non ego Vejovis aedem, Aedem non Magni suspicer esse Jovis?

As in all the examples of the use of this term, which I have observed in our old works, it occurs as a s., the sense of which is determined by the adj. conjoined, I have been apt to suspect, that we did not originally signify little, but may have been a term expressive of time or space. The use of way-bit, A. Bor., for a short way, S. a wee bit, might seem to indicate, that the term had been merely A. S. waeg, weg, Isl. weg, as primarily denoting distance as to space. Way-bit would thus signify a bit of a way. It may be observed, however, that Isl. va is used to denote weight, being applied to that which contributes very little to it. Thad er va litil; parvi ponderis est: vel nullius momenti est; Verel.

WE, WEE, WIE, adj. Small, little, S.

Easop relates a tale weil worth renown, Of twa wie myce, and they war sisters deir, Of quhom the elder dwelt in borrowstown,

The yunger scho wond upon land weil neir. Henrysone, Evergreen, i. 144.

To five or sex wie bairnis, or mo,
They will him hing with raipis rud.
Bot and he tak a flok or two,
A bow of ky, and lat thame blud,
Full saifly may he ryd or go.

Johne Up-on-Land's Compl. Chron. S. P. ii. 33. Shakspeare has adopted this word.

"—He hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard." Merry Wives of Windsor.

WEAN, WEEANE, s. A child, S. bairn, synon.

—Ilka day brought joy and plenty, Ilka year a dainty wean.

Macneill's Poems, i. 19.

The name the weenne gat, was Helenore,

That her ain grandame brooked lang before. Ross's Helenore, p. 12.

Perhaps from A. S. wen-an, O. Belg. wenn-en, Sw. af-waen-ia, ablactare, E. to wean; Dan. afvenner, to take away lambs from their dam. It has, however, been viewed, q. wee ane, synon. with little ane, S. id. Hence Johns., in expl. wee, observes;" "In Scotland it denotes small or little: as, a wee ane, a little one, or child; a wee bit, a little bit." To WEAR IN, v. a. 1. To gather in with caution; used to express the manner in which a shepherd conducts his flock into the fold, in order to prevent their rambling, S.

Will ye go to the ew-bughts Marion, And wear in the sheep wi' me?

Ritson's S. Songs, i. 49.

Teut. weer-en propulsare.

2. As a neut. v., to move slowly and cautiously. One who is feeble, when moving to a certain place, is said to be wearing in to it, S.

WEARY, adj. 1. Feeble; as, a weary bairn, a child that is declining, S.

2. Vexatious, causing trouble, S. as "the weary, "or weariful fox;" Gl. Sibb.

3. Vexed, sorrowful; Gl. Ritson's S. Songs.

Sibb. derives it, in sense 2., from wary, to curse. And indeed, A.S. werig signifies malignus, infestus, from werig-an, to curse. In sense 1. it is from werig lassus, fatigued; and also in sense 3., as the same word signifies, depressus animo.

WEARIFUL, adj. Causing pain or trouble; pron. wearifow, S. V. WEARY, sense 2.

WEASSES, s. pl. A species of breeching for the necks of work-horses, Orkn.; synon. with breacham.

"The oxen be yoaked with cheatts [1. theatts] and haims and breachams, which they call weassis, albeit they have horns." MS. Adv. Libr. Barry's Orkn. p. 447.

Allied perhaps to Su.G. wase, Isl. vasi, a bundle of twigs or withes; as the furniture of horses was anciently made of these. V. RIGWIDDIE, TRODWIDDIE.

WEAVIN, s. A moment, Aberd.

A.S. wiffend, breathing; as we say, in the same sense, in a breath, S. This seems also the origin of E. whiff, which Johns., after Davies, derives from C. B. chwyth, flatus.

WEB, s. The covering of the entrails, the cawl, or omentum, S. apparently denominated from its resemblace to something that is woven; as in Sw. it is called tarm-naet, q. the net of the intestines.

WEBSTER, s. A weaver, S. A. Bor.

Need gars naked men rin, And sorrow gars websters spin.

Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 26.

A.S. webbestre, textrix, a female weaver. The use of this term indicates that, among our forefathers, the work of weaving was appropriated to women. This, it is well known, was the case among the Greeks and other ancient nations, who reckoned it an employment unworthy of the dignity of man. Hence the frequent allusions to this, in the poets.

Tibi quam noctes festina diesque Urguebam, et tela curas solabar aniles.

Virg. ix. 489.

We find indeed, that the Roman writers make mention of Textores, or male weavers. But this name was given to the slaves employed in this business, when, in consequence of the increase of luxury, it came to be despised by women of rank. For, in early ages, it was accounted an employment not worthy of queens. It appears, that among the Jews also, and other eastern nations, women were thus engaged. A loom seems to have been part of the furniture of the faithless Delilah's chamber; as she was no stranger to the art of weaving, Judg. xvi. 12—14. Solomon gives such a description of the good wife, as implies that she wove all the clothing worn by her household; Prov. xxxi. 18—24. V. Wob, Wobster.

WECHE, s. A witch.

"Ane weche said to hym, he suld be crounit kyng afore his deith." Bellend. Cron B. xvii. c. 8. A. S. wicca, wicce, id.

WECHT, WEIGHT, WEGHT, s. 1. An instrument for winnowing corn, made in the form of a sieve, but without holes.

——Ane blanket, and ane wecht also, Ane schule, ane scheit, and ane lang flail. Bannatyne Poems p. 159.

—Ay wi' his lang tail he whiskit, And drumm'd on an ald corn weight. Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 299.

"You shine like the sunny side of a shernie weight." S. Prov. Kelly, p. 378. Weght, Ramsay. V. Sharny.

Meg fain wad to the barn gaen,
To win three wechts o' naething;
But for to meet the deil her lane,
She pat but little faith in.

Burns, iii. 134.

The rites observed in this daring act of superstition, are thus explained in a note.

This charm must likewise be performed, unperceived, and alone. You go to the barn, and open both doors, taking them off the hinges, if possible; for there is danger, that the being, about to appear, may shut the doors, and do you some mischief. Then take that instrument used in winnowing the corn, which, in our country dialect, we call a wecht; and go through all the attitudes of letting down corn against the wind. Repeat it three times; and the third time an apparition will pass through the barn, in at the windy door, and out at the other, having both the figure in question, and the appearance or retinue, marking the employment or station in life."

There are two kinds of wechts, S. B. The one is denominated a windin wecht, immediately used for winnowing, as its name intimates. This is formed of a single hoop covered with parchment. The other is called a maund-weeht, having more resemblance of a basket, its rim being deeper than that of the other. Its proper use is for lifting the grain, that it may be emptied into the windin weeht. It receives its designation from maund, a basket.

Germ. faecher, fechel, focher, fucker, an instrument for winnowing; Belg. wayer, more properly written vecher, a fanner or winnower, from Germ. wech-en, weh-en, Belg. wai-en, ventum facere; Wachter. Su.G. weft-a ventilare. This is the natural origin of wecht; and there is every reason to suppose that it is a very ancient term. As Lat. vent-us, has been deduced from Gr. ass, flare, E. wind is evidently allied; being formed from wai-en, id. of which Junius views it as the part. wayend, q. blowing.

2. A sort of tambourin.

In May the plesant spray vpspringis;
In May the mirthfull mavis singis:
And now in May to madynnis fawis,
With tymmer wechtis to trip in ringis,
And to play vpcoill with the bawis.

Scott, Evergreen, ii. 186. MS. It seems to receive this name from its resemblance of the instrument employed in winnowing; the word tymmer being conjoined, for the sake of discrimination, to denote that it is wooden, whereas the proper wecht is made of skin.

WECHTFUL, s. As much as a weekt can contain, S. pron. weekt fow.

WED, s. A pledge. To WED, v. a. pledge. V. WAD. Hence, WEDKEEPER, s. One who preserves what is deposited in pledge.

"For as to this conscience, it is a faithfull wed-keeper; the gages that it receiveth, it randeris, of good turnes it giveth a blyith testimonie, of evil turnes it giveth a bitter testimonie." Bruce's Eleven Sermons, 1591, Sign. C. 4. 2.

WEDDYR, WEDDIR, WEDDER, s. 1. Weather; used as a general term.

He thocht he to Kyntyr wald ga, And sa lang soiowrnyng thar ma, Till wyntir wedder war away.

Barbour, iii. 387, MS.

And in the calm or loune weddir is sene,

Above the fludis hie and fare plane group

Aboue the fludis hie, ane fare plane grene.

Doug. Virgil, 131. 42.

I traist not with this wedder to wyn Itale, The wynd is contrare brayand in ouer bak sale. Ibid. 127, 49.

2. Wind.

And all the weddrys in thaire fayre
Wes to thare purpos all contrayre.

Wyntown, vi. 20. 105.

And there be a tempest fell
Of gret weddrys scharpe and snell,
Of fors that behowyd to tak

vedur, ventus, turbo. This shews the origin of the term weather-bound, i. e. detained by wind or bad weather. One might almost conjecture, that this were the origin of the term winter, which in Isl. is vetur, very nearly allied to vethur, vedur, weather; as if denominated from the storminess of the weather, which is the characteristic of this season. Ihre, however, derives it from waat, humidus.

Weder seems to retain the sense of storm, Ywaine and Gawin.

The king kest water on the stane,
The storme rase ful sone onane,
With wikked weders kene and calde,
Als it was byfore-hand talde;
The king and his men ilkane
Wend tharwith to have bene slane;
So blew it stor with slete and rayn.
Ritson's E. M. R. i. 55. V. also p. 16. v. 411.

. WEDDIR-GAW, s. Part of one side of a rainbow, appearing immediately above the horizon, viewed as a prognostick of bad weather; pron. weathergaw, S. In some parts of the country, this is called a dog, also a stump.

The term weather-gaw, although I have not observed it in any dictionary, is used in England, to denote the secondary rainbow. This is analogous to Germ. wasser-gall, repercussio iridis; from wasser humor, moisture, and gall splendor. Hence Wachter renders wasser-gall, splendor pluvius; referring to A. S. gyl splendit, Benson.

A weather-gaw, as the term is used in S., corresponds to Isl. vedr-spaer, literally, that which spaes or foretells bad weather; Landnamab. p. 264. Our term seems formed in the same manner with Isl. haf-galle, which has precisely the same signification; Meteorum perlustre in mari, ante ventos apparens; G. Andr. p. 82. col. 2. As haf signifies the sea, one might suppose that the other component term were Isl. galle, naevus, vitium, q. a defect in the weather; did not the explanation given by G. Andr. confirm the sense assigned to gall by Wachter.

WEDDIR-GLIM, s. Expl. "clear sky near the horizon; spoken of objects seen in the twilight or dusk; as, between him and the wedderglim, or weather-gleam, i. e. between him and the light of the sky." Gl. Sibb.

A. S. weder coelum, and gleam, gluem, jubar, splendor; Teut. weder-licht coruscatio.

The term not being understood, editors have taken the liberty of altering the phraseology, as in Edit. 1648.

V. Gl. Compl. p. 331.

This is certainly the same with wytenon-fa, Aberd.

"I was fley'd that she had taen the wyten-on-fa, an' inlakit afore supper, far she shuddered a' like a klippert in a cauld day. Journal from London, p. 7.

This is rendered "trembling, chattering." But it is the term generally used in the North, to express that disease peculiar to women, commonly called a weid; weidinonfa, Ang.

We might suppose that it were allied to A. S. wite pain, suffering, calamity, witn-ian, to punish, to afflict, wit-nung punishment; Su.G. wit-a, to punish, wite, punishment, also any physical evil, &c. But Wedonfaw is merely the onfall or attack of a weid, Border. Onfaw and weid are sometimes used as synon. V. Weid, s.

WEEM, s. 1. A natural cave, Fife, Ang.

"In the town there is a large cove, anciently called a weem. The pits produced by the working of the coal, and the striking natural object of the cove or weem, may have given birth to the name of the parish." P. Pittenweem, Fife, Statist. Acc. iv. p. 369.

2. An artificial cave, or subterraneous building,

Ang.

"A little westward from the house of Tealing, about 60 or 70 years ago, was discovered an artificial cave or subterraneous passage, such as is sometimes called by the country people a weem. It was composed of large loose stones." P. Tealing, Forfars. Ibid. p. 101.

From Gael. uamha, a cave; unless allied to Teut. weme, terebra, a wimble, as an excavation may be compared to what is bored.

Or sinn'd ye wi' yon greetin cheese, Frae which the tears profusely weeze? Morison's Poems, p. 105.

Dr Johns. very oddly derives the E. word from Fr. eaux, waters. But both the S. and E. terms are evidently allied to Isl. vos, voesa, veisa, humor, mador, humectatio, perfusio aquae; G. Andr. vo. Vaete, p. 249. 250. Dan.-Sax. waes, id.; A.S. wos, wose, liquor, wosing, moist, "succi plenus, full of juice or moisture," Somner. G. Andr. views Germ. wasser as formed from wass the genit. of Isl. wattn; and Isl. oes signifies, the mouth of a river.

WEFFIL, adj. Limber, supple, not stiff, S.

A.S. waefol, fluctuans; Teut. wepel, vagus; weyfel-en, vagari, vacillare; weyfeler, homo vagus, inconstans; Germ. wappel-n, motitari; Isl. veif-a, vibrare, veifl-a, to twist or twine one from his own opinion. Here we perceive the true origin of E. whiftle.

WEFFLIN, WEFFLUM, s. The back-lade, or course of water at the back of the mill-wheel,

Ang.

When a mill is so overcharged with water from behind, that the wheel cannot move, the term quuef-wa is used in Su.G. But perhaps the similarity of sound is merely accidental.

The town of Wick in Caithness seems to be denominated from its vicinity to a small bay, although it has been otherwise explained.

the ancient and modern name of this parish, as far as can now he ascertained, is that of Wick, an appellation common all over the Northern continent of Europe, supposed to signify the same with the Latin word vicus, a village or small town, particularly when lying adjacent to a bay, or arm of the sea, resembling a wicket." This word may have been originally borrowed from a pastoral life. To weise the sheep into the fauld or bught, is a phrase still used by our shepherds.

To Weise, Wyse, v. n. To incline, S. But see the sheep are wysing to the cleugh; Thomas has loos'd his ousen frae the pleugh. Ramsay's Poems, ii. 7.

Quhilk causyt him through naturall courss to Quhar he suld sleipe, in sekyrnes to be. Wallace, v. 346. MS.

This v. is undoubtedly formed from that which signifies to know, S. wat, wait, E. wit, wot. The same formation occurs in other Northern languages. Su.G. wit-a, to prove, is formed from wet-a to know; Germ. wiss-en, certificare, facere ut cognoscat, from weiss certus. MoesG. wit-an, to know, is also used as denoting observation and watching. A. S. wit-an primarily signifies, scire: in a secondary sense, to take care, curare, providere. Wachter indeed denies the affinity between the two ideas. "It is one thing," he says, "to know, and another to verify." But the observation made by Ihre is unanswerable. Speaking of wit-a, probare, he says; Est verbum facessans a wet-u, scire; quid enim aliud est argumentis probare, quam facere, ut a'ter rem certo resciscat?

These terms might seem to have a common origin with wall a wave; A.S. weall-an, Germ. wall-en, to boil, to bubble up; wallen des meers, the swelling of the sea. It must be observed, however, that Teut. wiel seems the same with the term corresponding to our wheel. Hence Kilian renders it; Profundus in amne locus quo aqua circumugitur. V. Well-EY. Hence, Bryne the wealleth on helle, Incendium quod fervet in inferno; Lye. As far as we can judge from analogy, this seems to be the origin. For Su.G. waell-a, aestuare, is used in the same sense, signifying also to weld. Seren., however, thinks that it may be traced to Isl. vaul-r, vol-r, jugum in cultro, versus aciem; as in Sw. aeggwella yxor, ferrum securibus jungere, ut apta fiat acies.

A. Bor. to walt, to totter, to lean one way; to overthrow. Moes G. walt-ian, A. S. waelt-an, Isl. vaelt-a, Dan. vaelt-er, volvere, Lat. volut-are. Welter has the same origin; although more immediately allied to Teut. welter-en, Sw. weltr-a, Fr. veaultr-er.

To WELTER, v. a. 1. To roll. To welter a cart, S. to turn it upside down. The E. v. seems to be used only in an active sense; although O.E. waultre is synon. with wallow; Hulget. V. Welt.

Barbour, xx. 368. 370. MS.

Mr Pink. expl. v. 368. "His face was all hewed as with a chissel, scared with wounds." This is undoubtedly the sense. But neither in his, nor in any former edition, as far as I have observed, is the reading of the MS. given. He gives wonnyt, and unwonnyt. In other editions we find wounded and unwounded.

Dreire, perhaps errat. for deir, dere, injury. A.S. waer-ian, wer-ian, Su.G. war-a, waer-ia, Isl. ver-ia, Alem. uuer-ien, Germ. wehr-en, Belg. weer-en, defendere, tueri. MoesG. war-jan, to forbid. Ihre has observed, that, in most languages, "these two ideas of prohibition and defence have been conjoined, the same words being used for expressing both." And indeed, what is a prohibition, but the defence of some object in a particular way, -by the interposition of the authority of him who claims a right to forbid the use of it to others; the prohibition being generally enforced by a certain penalty? Hence waard, custodia, E. guard.

WER, WAR, adj. Aware, wary. This ilk man, fra he beheld on fer Troyane habitys, and of our armour was wer, At the first sicht he styntit and stude aw.

2. Apprehension, fear, I haif nae weir of that, I have no fear of it, S. B.

This seems evidently the sense in the following passage, in which Dunbar represents the devil as going off in fiery smoke.

With him methocht all the house end he tawk, And I awoik as wy that wes in weir.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 26. In wehere, as used by R. Brunne, although expl. " cautions, wary," Gl. evidently significs, in fear.

Conf. Am. Fol. 18, b. It is also used by Chaucer, Rom. Rose, v. 5699. as signifying confusion, according to Tyrwhitt, who derives it from Fr. guerre, which is the term used in the original. This is analogous to the idea thrown out by Rudd. "Perhaps it may be nothing else but the S. weir, i. e. war." In sense second, however, it might seem allied to Belg. vaer, fear. Nor is the conjecture made by Skinner unnatural, that were, as signifying doubt, may be from A.S. waere, ware, cautio; butan ware, sine cautione: for says he, he who doubts exercises caution. It may be added, that the A.S. phrase greatly resembles our but were.

Mr Macpherson views it as perhaps an error "for corslet, a light kind of armour for the body, such as might be proper to wear in hunting." But the corslet must rather have been an incumbrance in hunting. The connexion would indicate that the term denotes a quiver, perhaps from Belg. weer, arms, or wyr, an arrow, and sluyt-en to inclose, q. an implement for holding arrows. Or, light raiment, Su.G. war tegmen, (Isl. ver substamen), and laett levis, or slaett simplex; as we still say, a light wear.

WESTLAND, WESTLIN, adj. Western.

"Our westland shires had, in the rates of monthly maintenance in bygone times, been burthened above other shires." Baillie's Lett. ii. 344.

From the use of westland by Blind Harry, (V. Wesely above), the origin is obvious.

2. A name, imposed on those in the seventeenth century, who adhered to the Presbyterian cause in S. By rigid Episcopalians, it is still given to Presbyterians in general; and, in the West of S., even by the latter, to those who, in a state of separation from the established church, profess to adhere more strictly to Presbyterian principles. The origin of the term has been variously account.

ed for, by different writers.

"The South-west counties of Scotland have seldom corn enough to serve them round the year: and the northern parts producing more than they need, those in the west come in the summer to buy at Leith the stores that come from the north: and from a word Wiggam, used in driving their horses, all that drove were called the Whiggamors, and shorter the Whiggs. Now in that year [1648], after the news came down of Duke Hamilton's defeat, the ministers animated their people to rise, and march to Edinburgh; and they came up marching on the head of their parishes, with an unheard-of fury, praying and preaching all the way as they came. The Marquis of Argyll and his party, came and headed them, they being about 6000. This was called the Whiggamors inroad: and, ever after that, all that opposed the court, came, in contempt, to be called Whiggs: and from Scotland the word was brought into England, where it is now one of our unhappy terms of distinction." Burnet's Own Times, I. 58.

"The poor honest people, who were in raillery called Whiggs, from a kind of milk they were forced to drink in their wandrings and straits, became name-fathers to all who espoused the interest of Liberty and Property through Britain and Ireland." Wodrow's Hist. I. 263.

The latter is the etymon generally adopted. But the former is more probable, even in the opinion of Wodrow, who adds; "If the reader would have another, and perhaps better origination of the word, he may consult Burnet's Memoirs of the House of Hamilton." Ibid.

The common etymon is liable to this objection, that it is founded on a fact which was posterior to the use of the term. The other receives confirmation from the title of a ludicrous poem in MS. penes auct. "The Whiggamer Road into Edinburghe. To the tune of Graysteell; 28th November 1648." It bears the same date at the end.

WHIG, Wig, s. A species of fine wheaten bread.

WHIGMELEERIE, s. 1. The name of a rididiculous game which was occasionally used, in Angus, at a drinking club. A pin was stuck in the centre of a circle, from which there were as many radii as there were persons in the company, with the name of each person at the radius opposite to him. On the pin an index was placed, and moved round by every one in his turn; and at whatsoever person's radius it stopped, he was obliged to drink off his glass.

This is one, among many expedients, that have been devised for encouraging dissipation.

As the term has most probably had a ludicrous origin, it may have arisen from contempt of the Whigs; as the people of Angus were generally not very friendly to them, and might thus intend to ridicule what they accounted the austerity of their manners.

"Wherefore said he [James V.], gave my predecessors so many lands and rents to the kirk: was it to maintain hawks, dogs and whores to a number of idle priests? The king of England burns, the king of Denmark beheads you, I shall stick you with this whingur. And therewith he drew out his dagger, and they fled from his presence in great fear." Lay of the Last Minstrel, C. v. 7.

This may be merely a corr. of E. hanger. It must be observed, however, that E. whiniard, whinyard, is used for a short sword; which Seren. thinks may be from Isl. hwin furunculus, and yeard ulnus, q. the instrument used clandestinely.

WHINKENS, s. pl. Flummery, S. B. sowens,

Perhaps from Su.G. hwink-a vacillare, to move backwards and forwards, because of their flaccidity. The E. term flummery is, in like manner, applied to any thing that is loose or wants solidity.

To WHINNER, v. n. To pass with velocity, S. B.

Isl. hwyn-a, resonare, sonum edere obstreperum; hwin, voces obstreperae et resonabiles; G. Andr. p. 126.

To WHIP aff, or awa', v. n. To fly, to get off with velocity, S. sometimes pron. wheep.

Isl. hwapp-ast, repente accidit; Su.G. wipp-a, motitare se, sursum deorsum celeriter ferri.

WHIP. In a whip, adv. In a moment, S. Alem. quipphe, O. Teut. wap, nictus oculi. Sw. wippen is equivalent to our word: paa wippen, upon the point of doing any thing; Mod. Sax. up de wippe, id. Ihre views the Su.G. v., mentioned under the preceding term, as the origin. We also say, He was within a whip of such a thing, S. B.

Kilian, however, gives fax, lumen, vibratio luminis, as the primary sense. According to this, the term originally conveys the very same idea with blink, S. In a blink, i. e. in a twinkling. The v. wipp-en also signifies to glance, to shine at intervals. Kilian views that as the same word, used in a secondary sense, which signifies to vibrate, to be agitated with a tremulous motion.

On this ground, whip is to be classed with that variety of terms, denoting a moment, or the smallest portion of time, which are borrowed from the motion of light, or refer to it; as, Blink, Glint, Glisk, Gliff, Gliffin, &c.

WHIPPER-TOOTIES, s. pl. Silly scruples about doing any thing, frivolous difficulties, S.

This is probably corr. from the Fr. phrase, apres tout, after all; pour dire, Apres avoir bien consideré, bien pesé, bien examiné toutes choses. Omnibus perpensis; Dict. Trev. One, attached to Gr. etymons, might deduce this from breg propter, and reso, hoc.

WHIPPERT, adj. Hasty and tart in demeanour, or in the mode of doing any thing. Hence whippert-like, indicating irritation, by the manner of expression or action, S.

Isl. hwop-a signifies lightness, inconstancy. But perhaps it is rather formed from the v. Whip, q. v.

WHISH, WHUSH, s. 1. A rushing or whizzing sound, S. B.

2. A whisper, S. B. whisht, Loth.

Lat her yelp on, be you as calm's a mouse, Nor lat your whisht be heard into the house. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 2.

Su.G. hwacs-a, to whizz; wis-a, Isl. kwis-a susurrare, qwis, susurrus; G. Andr. p. 157.

To WHISH, v. a. To hush; part. pa. whist.

"The keeping of the castle of Edinburgh was the last act of opposition, and with the yielding of it, all was whist." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 246.

Seren., vo. Hush, refers to Sw. wysch, interj. used by nurses when lulling their babes; and hwisk-a to whisper.

WHISHT, interj. Hush, be silent, S. bist, whist, E. Chaucer, huiste. It seems to be properly the imperat. of the v.; q. be hushed.

But whisht, it is the knight in masquerade, That comes hid in this cloud to see his lad.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 111.

WHISTLE, s. Change of money, S.

-Now they'se get the whistle of their groat. Ramsay's Poems, i. 56. V. Quhissel.

WHISTLE, s. Apparently, used metaph. for the throat, in the phrase, to weet one's whistle, to take a drink, sometimes applied to tipplers, S.

WHISTLE-BINKIE, s. One who attends a penny-wedding, but without paying any thing, and therefore has no right to take any share of the entertainment; a mere spectator, who is as it were left to sit on a bench by himself, and who, if he pleases, may whistle for his own amusement; Aberd.

WHISTLE-THE-WHAUP, a phrase addressed to one who is supposed to play upon another,

West of S.

Q. "if you are for sport, call upon the curliew;" referring, probably, to the folly of such an attempt, because this bird delights in sequestered places. To WHITE, v. a. To cut with a knife, S.

Burns, i. 363. V. QUHYTE. WHITE-ABOON-GLADE, the Hen-harrier, Stirlings. Falco cynaeus, Linn.

"But of all the birds of prey amongst us, the henharrier, or white-aboon-glade, as he is called, is the most destructive to game, both partridges and muirfowl." P. Campsie, Statist. Acc. xv. 324.

This name corresponds to that of Lanarius albus, Aldrov., Le Lanier cendrè, Brisson. and Grau-weisse Geyer of Frisch. V. Penn. Zool. p. 193.

WHITE BONNET, a name given to the person, who, in a sale by auction, bids for his own goods, or who is employed by the owner for this purpose, S.

This metaph. term seems to signify a marked person, or one who deserves to be marked; in allusion, perhaps, to the custom in Italy by which the Jews are obliged to wear yellow bonnets for distinction, or of bankrupts wearing green bonnets, according to the laws of France. The term is most probably a literal translation of a Fr. phrase, the meaning of which is now lost. For the expression, Bonnet blanc, ou blanc bonnet, is still proverbially used to denote things that are exactly alike, and which may be indifferently put the one for the other.

WHITE FISH IN THE NET, a sport formerly common in Angus, although now almost gone into desuetude. Two persons hold a plaid pretty high. The rest of the company are obliged to leap over it. The object is to entangle, in the plaid, the person who takes the leap; and if thus intercepted, he loses the game.

WHITE-HORSE, a name given to the Fuller ray, a fish.

"Raia fullonica, the White-horse;" Sibb. Fife, p. 119.

WHITIE-WHATIES, s. pl. Silly pretences, from a design to procrastinate, or to blind; frivolous excuses, circumlocutions, meant to conceal the truth, S.

Perhaps the last part of this reduplicative term is the radical one, from A. S. hwata, omina, divinationes, auguria; "gesses, forespeakings, luck good or ill; divinations, soothsayings;" Somner. Warna the that thu ne gime drycraefta, ne swefena, ne hwatena; Take care that thou do not follow incantations, or dreams, or divinations; Deut. xviii. 10.

4 P

W II 1

Thus it might originally be equivalent to freits. Isl. thwaett-a, however, signifies nugari; thwaetting-r, nugamenta; G. Andr. p. 268. Belg. wisiewasie seems to have been formed on the same plan; "fid-dle-faddle, whim-wham;" Sewel. This has much the appearance of an Alem. origin, s, in that language, being frequently substituted for t in other dialects. Germ. waschen, garrire; Wachter. V. WISHY-WASHIES. Drycraefta, in the quotation, is from dry a magician, and craeft craft. According to Somner, and Wachter, (vo. Druiden), the term dry had found its way into Germany from the name of the Druids, to whom great skill in magic was ascribed.

WHITLIE, QUHITELY, adj. Having a delicate or fading look, S. Whitely has been used O. E.

as equivalent to livid.

The seconde stede to name hight Ethiose. Quhitely and pale, and somdele ascendent. Henrysone's Test. Creseide, Chron. S. P. i. 164. " IVhitely things are ay tender;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 78.

"Alas are these pale cheekes, and these whitely lippes the face of my nephew, and the fauour of my beloved Narbonus?" Narbonus, Part II. p. 35.

From A. S. hwit albus, and lic similis.

WHITLING, WHITEN, WHITING, s. A species of sea-trout, S.

In some parts of the Ern, there are pike; and, in some seasons of the year, great numbers of sea-trouts, from 3 lb. to 6 lb. weight. The fishermen call them whitlings, on account of the scales they have at their first coming up the river from the sea." P. Muthil, Perths. Statist. Acc. viii. 488.

"There is also in this river a larger sort of a fish, called a whitling; it is a large fine trout, from 16 inches to 2 feet long, and well grown; its flesh is red, and high coloured, like salmon, and of full as fine a flavour." P. Dunse, Berwicks. Ibid. iv. 380.

"From the end of June, till close-time, there is abundance of fish, after floods, in Esk, and the lower end of Liddel; such as salmon, grilse, sea trout, and whitens, as they are named here, or herlings, as they are called in Annandale." P. Canoby, Dumfr. Ibid. xiv. 410.

It is sometimes written whiting.

"This fish is well known to those who fish in the Annan and the Nith by the name of the hirling. But it is called by other names in other parts of the country. In the Esk, in Dumfries-shire, and in the Eden at Carlisle, it is termed the whiting, from its bright silvery colour. In the Tay, above Perth, it is called the Lammas whiting, from its appearance in the river at that season. In Angus, the Mearns, and Aberdeenshire, it goes by the name of the Phinoc." Dr Walker, Transact. Highl. Soc. S. ii. 354.

Whiting or whiten would seem to be the same with whitling. But according to Dr Walker, the whiting or hirling, after passing the winter in the sea, on its return to the river in March and April, is "called the whiteling, or, as it is commonly pronounced, the whitling; -in the Spey and other rivers in the North,—known by the name of the white trout." Ibid. p. 355.

This learned naturalist views the whiting as a salmon; which he supposes to pass through the different states of the samlet, hirling, whitling, and grilse, before it comes to maturity. Ibid. p. 363. It has, however, been urged with great probability, that they are different species; because the whitings or hirlings have roes, and of course are understood to spawn; Ibid. p. 354. N. Besides, the phinoc which Dr Walker views as the same with the whiting, is said "always to retain the distinctive mark of yellow fins, as well as particular spots greatly different from those on salmon." Mackenzie, Ibid. p. 377.

Sw. hwilling signifies a whiting.

P. Ploughman, Fol. 29. a. Su.G. wig, anciently wig-er, which primarily signifies, fit for war, is used, in a secondary sense, to denote an adult; in the same manner as A.S. wiga, of which the primary sense is heros, miles, is used to denote a man of any condition. The origin is wig battle, contest. For our Goth. ancestors, as Ihre observes, scarcely acknowledged any other virtue than that of valour or strength for war.

WIAGE, WYAGE, s. A military expedition or incursion; used like jornay.

WICK, Wic, s. A word used in the termination of the names of places, signifying a kind of bay, S.

"Where wick is the terminating syllable, the place is not only maritime, but there is always, in its vicinity, an opening of the coast, larger than a creek, but smaller than a bay, whose two containing sides form an angle, similar to that of the lips, terminating in the cheek. It is remarkable, that in the Scotch dialect, this is always termed the wick of the mouth. It does not therefore appear, that there is the least affinity betwixt wick and vicus. The former vocable is for the most part, if not always, maritime; the latter, from the meaning of the word, can have no possible respect to local situation." P. Canisbay, Caithn. Stat. Acc. viii. 162, N.

"All those places, whose names terminate in ic. which, in the Danish language is said to signify a bay, as Tosgic, Cuic, Dibic, and Shittic, hath [have] each of them an inlet of the sea." P. Applecross, Ross, Statist. Acc. iii. 381.

It is perhaps the same term that occurs in the names Greenock, Gourock, &c., especially as there is the bay of Gourock. It has been said, indeed, that the former is from Gael. Grianeg, the Sunny Bay, or the Bay of the Sun. Statist. Acc. v. 559. 560. But I can observe no similar Gael. word signifying a bay. Su.G. wik, angulus; sinus maris: A. 2. A wand, a small switch, S.

Spenser uses this word as an adj. Dan. vigre, vimen. The origin seems to be viger, to yield, or Teut. wick-en vibrare, because of its pliant quality; as Su.G. sweg, virga, from sweig-a incurvare. WICKET, s. The back-door of a barn, Ang.

Belg. wincket, wicket, portula, Fr. guichet. Spegelius derives the term from Su.G. wick-a itare, domum saepius introire et exire, a frequentative from Isl. wik-a incedere. C. B. gwichet, postica, has been traced to gwich, stridor.

WIDDEN-DREME, WINDREM, WIDDRIM, s. In a widden dream, or windream, all of a sudden; also, in a state of confusion. S. B. "At last we, like fierdy follows, flew to't flaught-bred, thinkin to raise it in a widden-dream." Journal from Loudon, p. 5.

Bess out in a widden-dream brattled, And Hab look'd as blate as a sheep. Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 297.

One is said to waken in a widdrim, when one awakes in a confusion or state of perturbation, so as to have no distinct apprehension of surrounding objects for some time. Sibb. explains it, "a sudden gust of passion, without apparent cause;" Gl.

Could we be assured that windream were the more ancient pronunciation, the term might be traced to A.S. wyn-dream, "gaudium, jubilum, jubilatio; joy, jubilation, great rejoicing," Somner; from wyn joy, and dream jubilation. Thus, it might be used to signify the confusion produced by the noise of great mirth, especially when heard unexpectedly. Sibb. refers to Wod as the origin. And indeed A. S. woda-dream is rendered, furor, madness; Somner. Thus the term may have some relation to Wodin or Oden, that deity of the Germans and Goths, who was believed to preside over the rage of battle, and whose name has been rendered by Lat. furor. V. Adam. Bremens. ap. Ihre vo. Oden. Thus A.S. woda dream, S. widdendreme, might be viewed as originally denoting a dream proceeding from the inspiration of Oden; as the term implies the idea of confusion or distraction of mind. In Gl. Popul. Ball. it is, in like manner, supposed to allude to "the dream of a madman."

WIDDERSINNIS, WEDDIR SHYNNYS, WID-DIRSINS, WIDDERSHINS, WITHERSHINS, WOD-DERSHINS, adv. The contrary way, S.

Montgomerie, MS. Chron. S. P. iii. 506.

"The word Widdirsins, Scot. is used for contrary to the course of the Sun, as when we say, to go or turn widdirsins about, i. e. to turn round from West to East: a Belg. weder, weders, A. S. with, wither, coutra, and Sonne, Sunne, Sol, Scot. Bor. Sin." Rudd.

According to this idea, Belg. wederschyn, Germ. widerschein, a reflected light, the reflection of brightness, might seem allied. Our term is indeed used to thenote what is contrary to the course of the sun; this being the most obvious emblem of any thing opposed to the course of nature. But I am convinced, that neither sonne, nor any word conveying the idea of light or shining, can properly be viewed as entering into the composition of this term. It is merely Teut. weder-sins, contrario modo, Kilian. This is the sense, as used in both passages by the Bishop of Dunkeld. In the first, indeed, Rudd. too strictly adhering to the original, Steteruntque comae, renders it, straight up, vpright. But Doug. means literally to say, that the hair of Aeneas stood the wrong way, or the way contrary to nature.

In Sw. raettsyles denotes that which follows the course of the sun. The term, expressing the reverse, s andsyles.

Our ancestors ascribed some preternatural virtue to that motion which was opposed to the course of the sun, or to what grew in this way. This was particularly attended to in magical ceremonies.—Hence Nicnevin, the Hecute of the Scots, and her damsels are thus described.

Some be force in effect the four winds fetches, And nine times withershins about the throne raid.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 17.

V. CATINE.

This is gravely mentioned as the mode of salutation given by witches and warlocks to the devil.

"The women made first their courtesy to their master, and then the men. The men turning nine times widder shines about, and the women six times." Satan's Invisible World, p. 14.

Ross, in his Additions to that old song, The Rock and the Wee Pickle Tow, makes the spinster not only attend to the wood of her rock, that it should be of the rantree, or mountain-ash, that powerful specific against the effects of witchcraft, but also to the very direction of its growth.

I'll gar my ain Tammy gae down to the how, And cut me a rock of a widdershins grow, Of good rautry-tree, for to carry my tow, And a spindle of the same for the twining o't. Ross's Poems, p. 134.

The inhabitants of Orkney ascribe some sort of fatality to motion opposed to that of the sun. "On going to sea, they would reckon themselves in the most imminent danger, were they by accident to turn their boat in opposition to the sun's course." P. Kirkwall, Statist. Acc. vii. 560.

Among the Northern nations, a similar superstition prevailed. Helga, a Scandinavian sorceress, when wishing to give efficacy to some Runic characters, for doing injury to others, observed this mode. "Taking a knife in her hand, she cut the letters in the wood, and besmeared them with her blood. Then singing her incantations, oc geck aufug rangsaelis um treit, she went backwards, and contrary to the course of the sun, around the tree. Then she procured that it should be cast into the sea, praying that it might be driven by the waves to the island Drangsa, and there be the cause of all evils to Gretter." Hist. Gretter. ap. Bartholin. Caus. Contempt. Mortis, p. 661. 662.

This is opposed to the Deasil of our Highlanders,

"The Deasil, or turning from east to west, according to the course of the sun, is a custom of high antiquity in religious ceremonies. The Romans practised the motion in the manner now performed in Scotland. The Gaulish Druids made their circumvolution in a manner directly the reverse.

"The unhappy lunatics are brought here [to Strathfillan] by their friends, who first perform the ceremony of the Deasil, thrice round a neighbouring cairn; afterwards offer on it their rags, or a little bunch of heath tied with worsted; then thrice immerge the patient in a holy pool of the river, a second Bethesda; and, to conclude, leave him fast bound the whole night in the neighbouring chapel. If in the morning he is found loose, the saint is supposed to be propitious; for if he continues in bonds the cure remains doubtful." Pennant's Tour in S. 1772. P. II. p. 15.

"On the first of May the herds of several farms gather dry wood, put fire on it, and dance three times southways about the pile.—At marriages and baptisms they make a procession round the church, Deasoil, i. e. sunways, because the sun was the immediate object of the Druids' worship." Id. Tour in 1769. p. 309.

"That the Caledonians paid a superstitious respect to the sun, as was the practice among many other nations, is evident, not only by the sacrifice at Baltein, but upon many other occasions. When a Highlander goes to bathe, or to drink water out of a consecrated fountain, he must approach by going round the place, from east to west on the south side, in imitation of the apparent diurnal motion of the sun. When the dead are laid in the grave, the grave is approached by going round in the same manner. The bride is conducted to her future spouse, in the presence of the minister, and the glass goes round a company, in the course of the sun. This is called, in Gaelic, going round the right, or the lucky way. The opposite is the wrong or the unlucky way. And if a person's meat or drink were to effect the wind-pipe, or come against his breath, they instantly cry out, Deisheal! which is an ejaculation praying that it may go by the right way." P. Callander, Perths. Statist. Acc. xi. 621. N.

The custom of sending drink round a company from left to right, is by many supposed to be a vestige of the same superstition. There are still some, even in the Lowlands, who would reckon it unlucky to take the opposite course.

Pennant derives the term from Gael. Deas, or Des, the right hand, and Syl, the sun. When referring to this motion as practised by the Romans, he quotes Plin. Hist. Nat. Lib. xxxviii. c. 2. But this is undoubtedly an error for xxviii. 2. For the passage referred to seems to be this.

In adorando dexteram ad osculum referimus, totumque corpus circumagimus: quod in laevum fecisse, Galliae religiosius credunt.

WIDDIE, WIDDY, s. 1. Properly, a rope made of twigs of willow; used to denote a halter, S.

WID

He had purgation to mak a theif

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 20. st. 6.
This Prouerb is of veritie,
Quhilk I hard red intill ane letter;
Hiest in court nixt the widdie,
Without he gyde him al the better.

Lyndsay's Warkis, 1592. p. 303.

"When justice," as Sibb. observes, "was executed upon the spot, the first tree afforded an halter. It was an ingenious idea of a learned person on the continent, to examine the analogy between language and manners." Chron. S. P. II. 6. N.

The term is vulgarly understood in S. as if it denoted the gallows itself. But it is merely such a withe as had formerly been employed at the gallows, and is accordingly distinguished from the fatal tree.

Ane stark gallows, a widdy, and a pin, The heid poynt of thy Elders arms are; Written abune in poysie, Hang Dunbar. Kennedie, Evergreen, ii. 69.

"An Irish rebel put up a petition that he might be hanged in a with, and not in a halter, because it had been so used with former rebels." Bacon. V. Withe, Johns. Dict.

2. This name is given, in Caithness, to a twig, having several smaller shoots branching out from it; which being plaited together, it is used as a whip, the single grain serving for a handle.

Teut. wede, wyd, wiede, salix, vimen. SuG. widia vimen, vinculum vimineum, from wide salix: A.S. withig, id. E. withy. MoesG. with-an, conjungere, copulare. V. Wethy.

Fr. har, hard, a withe, is used in the same sense. Sur peine de la har; on pain of the halter. Tu merites la hard; you deserve the gallows; Fonaine.

WIDDIFOW, VIDDIFUL, s. 1. It properly signifies one who deserves to fill a widdie or halter. This appears from the Prov.

"Ye're a widdy-fou against hanging-time;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 85.

Now, my lord, for Goddis saik lat nocht hang Howbeid thir widdy fowis wald wrang me. Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 183.

Thou art but Glunschoch with the giltit hipps,
That for thy lounrie mony a leisch has fyld;
Vain Widdifow, out of thy wit gane wyld.
Dunbar, Evergreen, ii. 53.

2. Equivalent to brave boys, in sea language.

"Viddefullis al, viddefuls al. grit and smal, grit and smal. ane and al, ane and al. heisau, heisau. nou mak fast the theyrs." Compl. S. p. 63.

3. A romp, S.

In Gl. Compl. and Sibb. it is deduced from Teut. woed rabies, woedigh furiosus. But the phrase, fill a widdie, being still used with respect to one who, it is thought, will come to a violent death, this seems the most probable origin. The Swedes have an analogous term. They call a rogue Galgemat, i. e. one who will soon have the gallows for his mate or companion; Ihre, vo. Mat. Dunbar, indeed virtually expl. the term as equivalent to gane wyld out of ones wit. But this might be merely for the sake of the alliteration. At any rate, it only proves his own idea of the signification.

WIDDIFOW, adj. Expl. "wrathful. A widdifou wicht, is a common expression for a peevish angry man;" Gl. Compl.

The laird was a widdiefu' bleerit knurl; She's left the gude-fellow and taen the churl.

Burns, iv. 54. The widdiefow wardannis tuik my geir, And left me nowdir horss nor meir, Nor erdly gud that me belangit:

Now walloway I mon be hangit! Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 186.

This seems merely an oblique sense of the preceding term, used as an adj.

To WIDDILL, v. n. pron. wuddil. 1. The sense of this v. is rather indeterminate. It is generally used in connexion with some other v., as, to widdil and ban, to widdil and flyte, &c., S.

> Lyke Dido, Cupido I widdill and I warie, Quha reft me, and left me In sic a feirie-farie.

Cherrie and Slae, st. 18.

i. c. I break out into cursing against Cupid. It is evidently intensive. For it is thus translated, Lat. vers. 1631.—Sceleratum taliter arcum, Crudelemque Deum, diris ter mille dicavi. May it be viewed as a derivation from wod furio-sus, or wed-an furere; q. I wax wroth?

- "Quha brekis the secund command? That that sweris be the name of God fulchardie, nocht taking tent of an euil vse, thai that sueris ane lesing, mainsucris thame self, wariis, bannis and widdillis thair saule, to excuse thair fault, or for ony vaine mater. -Thai that will nocht chasteis or snibe thair barnis fra lesingis, sweiring, banning & widling, and techis thame nocht to lofe God and thank him at al tymes.". Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552. Fol. 31. b. 32. a.
- 2. We also use this v. S. in the same sense with E. wriggle or waddle.
- 3. It has also an active sense, like E. wriggle, as signifying to writhe, to winch, to introduce by shifting motion, or (metaph.) by circuitous courses, S.

It's Antichrist his Pipes and Fiddles, And other tools, wherewith he widdles Poor caitiffs into dark delusions, Gross ignorance and deep confusions. Cleland's Poems, p. 80.

The term, therefore, as used in sense 1., may literally signify, to writhe one's self from rage.

A. Bor. to widdle, to fret.

Johns. defines waddle, "to shake in walking from side to side; to deviate from a right line;" deriving it from Belg. waghelen. But surely, Germ. wedel-n is preferable, which signifies, caudam motitare, q. to shake one's tail.

This term, as Sibb. observes, is generally applied to a woman past middle age.

A. S. Su.G. wif, mulier, foemina. Of this word various etymons have been given. Ihre derives it from Su.G. wif, hwif, a woman's coif or hood, as gyrdel cingulum, and linda baltheus, are used for man and woman, in the Laws of Gothland; and, among the Ostrogoths, hatt and haetta, pileus et vitta, had the same signification. Wachter and others derive it from wefw-a, to weave, this being the proper work for females. V. Jun. Etym.

and eaten on the day preceding Lent. Ihre derives the word from het hot, and weck-en, which in Mod. Sax. signifies a round sort of bread. Germ. weck, id. Kilian gives wegghe as synon. with Maene. V. Mane, Breid of Mane.

WIG, WYG, s. This seems to signify a wall. A thing is said to gang frae wyg to waw, when it is moved backwards and forwards from the one wall of a house to the other, q. at full swing, S. B.

Mind what this lass has undergane for you, Since ye did her so treacherously forhow, How she is catch'd for you frae wig to wa'.

Ross's Helenore, p. 104.
A. Bor. wogh, wall. A. S. wag, Su.G. waegg, anciently wag, waegh, Belg. waeg, weeg, paries. Akrum aer gardir wagh, oc himil at thackju; The hedge serves for a wall to the fields, and the heaven for a roof; Leg. Dalecarl. ap. Ihre in vo.

WIGG, WHIG, s. The thin serous liquid, which lies below the cream, in a churn, after it has become sour, and before it has been agitated, S.B.

"They sent in some smachry or ither to me, an' a pint o' their scuds, as sowr as ony bladoch or wigg that comes out of the reem-kirn." Journal from London, p. 9. V. Whig.

To WIGGLE, v. n. To wriggle. V. WAIGLE. WIGHT, s. The Shrew-mouse, Orkn. Sorex araneus, Linn.

"The wild quadrupeds of this parish are, rabbits, the brown or Norwegian rat, the short-tailed field mouse, common mice, and a small species of mice, commonly called here wights, which I have never observed in Scotland." P. Birsay, Statist. Acc. xiv. 317.

This animal is very particularly described in Museum Wormian. p. 321. &c. It seems to have received its Orcadian name from the smallness of its size; as Su.G. wickt denotes any thing that is very small in its kind, being radically the same with wact, aliquid; A. S. wiht, a creature.

Or its name might originate from its supposed noxious qualities; as the aucients believed it to be injurious to cattle, an idea now exploded. Wormius mentions its bite as venemous, whence the name, Sorex aranca; as resembling the spider for poison. Now, Ihre observes that the Su.G. term, already referred to, is especially used in relation to noxious and monstrous animals. Hence, perhaps, its E. name.

WILD COTTON, Cotton-grass, a plant; S. B. also called Moss-crops, S. Eriophorum polystachion, Linn.

WILDFIRE, s. The common name for the Phlyctenae of Sauvages, S. vulgarly wullfire. A. S. wild-fyr, erysipelas.

To WILE, WYLE, v. a. Used in relation to what is accomplished by caution or artful means; as, I'll try to wile him awa', I will endeavour to get him enticed to go with me. The prep. frae or from is generally added, when it refers to things; as, I'll wile't frae him, I will gain it from him by artful means; synon. Weise, q. v.

Beleif ye that we will begyle yow, Or from your vertew for till wyle yow? Lyndsay, S. P. R. ii. 32.

Here's three permission bonnets for ye, Which your great gutchers wore before ye; An' if ye'd hae nae man betray ye Let naething ever wile them frae ye.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 544. Thus fortune aft a curse can gie,

Thus fortune aft a curse can gie, To wyle us far frae liberty.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 37. Su.G. wel-a to deceive, Isl. vael-a callidus essc. G. Andr.; curam gerere, Verel. Su.G. wel denotes art, sratagem; used, as Ihre says, in a good as well as in a bad sense. Isl. vel, id. Verel. Hence Fr. guile, g being prefixed.

To WILE, WYLE, v. a. To select.
WILE, s. Choice, selection. V. WALE.

WYLECOT, WILIE-COAT, s. 1. An undervest, generally worn during winter, S. wylie-caat, a flannel vest, A. Bor.

In this congelit sesoun scharp and chill, The callour are penetrative and pure—
Made seik warme stouis and bene fyris hote, In doubill garmont cled and wylécote.

Doug. Virgil, Prol. 201. 40. "We can shape their wylie-coat, but no their wierd;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 75.

2. An under petticoat.

Sumtyme thay will beir up thair gown,
To schaw thair mulecot hingeand down.

To schaw thair wylecot hingeand down, And sumtyme baith thay will upbeir, To schaw thair hois of blak or broun.

Maitland Poems, p. 327. Rudd. thinks that the designation may perhaps be from E. wily, "because by its not being seen, it does as it were cunningly or slyly keep men warm." The origin seems quite uncertain.

WYLFULL, adj. Willing; q. full of will.

I than, set in lyk assay,

Wylfull is my det to pay.

Wyntown, i. Prol. 80.

WILFULLY, adj. Willingly.

Thair frendschip woux ay mar and mar;

For he scrwyt ay lelely,

And the tothir full willfully.

Barbour, ii. 172. MS. Of Rainfrwe als the barowny Come to thare pes full wilfully.

* WILL, s. What's your will? a common Scotticism for, "What did you say?" It is also given as a reply to one who calls. It is used by Foote; and is perhaps common in low E. This is at least as old as the time of Gawin Doug-

" May thow not heir? Langar how I culd schout!"

'What war your will?' "I will cum in but doubt." King Hart, ii. 3.

WILL, s. Apparently, use, custom; pl. willis.

And on the morn, quhen day wes lycht,

The King raiss as his willis was.

Barbour, xiii. 515. MS. Use, edit. 1620.

WIL

It may, however, merely mean, study, endeavour; A. S. will, Teut. willa, studium.

WILL, aux. v. "Be accustomed, make a practice of;" Gl. Wyntown.

Bot the few folk of Scotland, That be dry marche ar lyand Nere yhow, thai kepe thaire awyne, As til ws is kend and knawn, And will cum wyth thare powere Planly in yhoure land of were, Oure day and nycht will ly thare-in, And in yhoure sycht yhour land oure bryn, Tak youre men, and in presowne Hald tham, quhill tha pay ransown. Wyntown, ix. 13. 53, 55.

This is still a common idiom in S. But, as far as I have observed, it is especially used by those who border on the Highlands, or whose native tongue is Gaelic.

WILL, WYLL, WIL, WYL, adj. 1. "Lost in error, uncertain how to proceed," S.

And the myrk nycht suddanly Hym partyd fra hys cumpany. And in that myrk nycht wawerand will, He hapnyd of cas for to cum til That ilke new byggyd plas, Quhare that Erle than duelland was.

Wyntown, vi. 13. 105. To go wyll, to go astray, S.

Sche thame fordriuis, and causis oft go wyll Frawart Latyn (quhilk now is Italy).

Doug. Virgil, 14. 5. It is very frequently conjoined with a s. As, will of rede, at a loss what to do, inops consilii; V. REDE, s. Will of wane, at a loss for a habitation.

Than wes he wondir will off wane, And sodanly in hart has tane, That he wald trewaile our the se, And a quhile in Parys be.

Barbour, i. 323. MS.

It is used by Blind Harry, not directly as signifying, at a loss for a place of habitation but,-for a place of security.

The woman than, quhilk was full will off

The perell saw, with fellone novis and dyn, Gat wp the yett, and leit thaim entir in.

Wallace, vi. 179. MS.

"Scot. I'm will what to do. It. He's so will of his wedding, that he kens na whare to woo; Prov. Scot. i. e. There are so many things which he may obtain, that he is in doubt which of them to choose;" Rudd.

Ramsay gives it differently; "Ye're sae will in your wooing ye watna where to wed;" S. Prov.

Su.G. will, also willt, willse, Isl. vill-ur, id. villa, Sw. willa, error; Isl. vill-a, Su.G. foerwill-a, to lead astray. These terms are also transferred to the

2. Desert, unfrequented.

Himself ascendis the hie band of the hill, By wentis strate, and passage scharp and wil.

Doug. Virgil, 382. 5.

Art thou sa cruel! I put the cais also, That to nane vncouth landis thou list go. Nouthir to fremmyt place, nor stedis wyl, Bot at auld Troy war yet vpstandand stil: Aucht thou yit than leif this weilfare and joy? Ibid. 110. 31.

Isl, ville is also used in the sense of ferus; as, ville goltr, a wild boar; Su.G. willa diur, wild animals.

The word is undoubtedly radically the same with E. wild. The Su.G. term is often thus written; and S. to gang wild, is synon. with will. It is probable, that the primary sense is that first given above. Animals might be denominated wild from their going astray.

WILSUM, adj. In a wandering state, implying the ideas of dreariness, and of ignorance of one's course, S. pron. wullsum.

V poun sic wise vncertainlie we went Thre dayes wilsum throw the mysty streme, And als mony nychtes but sterneys leme.

Doug. Virgil, 74. 22.

He blew, till a' the wullsome waste Rebellowin' echoed round.

Jamieson's Popular Ball. i. 244. Sw. en villsam vaeg, an intricate road or way; a road, where one may easily go astray; Wideg.

WILLYART, WILYART, adj. 1. Wild, shy, flying the habitations and society of men.

For feir the he fox left the scho, He wes in sick a dreid:

Quhiles louping, and scowping Ouer bushes, banks, and brais; Quhiles wandring, quhiles dandring, Like royd and wilyart rais. Burel's Pilgr. Watson's Coll. ii. 18. 19.

2. Sometimes applied to one of a bashful and reserved temper, who avoids society, or appears aukward in it, S. But O for Hogarth's magic pow'r To show Sir Bardy's wilyart glowr, An' how he star'd and stammer'd.

Burns, i. 139.

noddy, Cockandy, Pope," &c. Neill's Tour, p.

The term Sea-Parrot corresponds to its Germ. name, See-Papagey. It is also called Islandsk Papegoye, i. c. the Islandic Parrot. V. Penn. Zool. p. 512.

WILLIE-POWRET-SEG, s. The name given by children in Fife to the Porpoise.

WILLIE WHIP-THE-WIND, a species of hawk, Ang. V. STANCHELL.

WILRONE, s. A wild boar.

The bich the cur-tyk fannis; The wolf the wilrone usis; The muill frequentis the annis, And hir awin kynd abusis.

Scott, Chron. S. P. iii. 147.

This word is overlooked by Sibb. It is evidently very ancient. Su.G. vild wild, and rune, a young boar. V. Ihre, vo. Ron, pruritus. Isl. rune, verres non castratus; Verel. The poet is here describing unnatural attachments.

WIMBLEBORE, s. A hole in the throat, which prevents one from speaking distinctly, S. in allusion to a hole bored by a wimble.

To WYMPIL, WOMPLE, v. a. 1. To wrap, to fold, S.

Thare capitane, this ilk strang Aventyne, Walkis on fute, his body wymplit in Ane felloun bustuous and grete lyoun skyn. Doug. Virgil, 231. 55.

Wimpler, s. A waving lock of hair.

Doun his braid back, frae his quhyt head,

The silver wimplers grew.

Vision, Evergreen, i. 214. V. WYMPIL.

To WIN, v. n. To dwell. V. Won.

To WIN, WYN, WINNE, v. a. 1. To dry corn, hay, peats, &c. by exposing them to the air, S. Sibb. writes won as the v. But this is properly the pret., anciently wonnyn.

> It fell about the Lammas tide When yeoman wonne their hay The doughtie Douglas gan to ride, In England to take a prey.

> > Hume's Hist. Dougl. p. 104.

"Little attention is paid, by the general run of farmers, to win the grain in the stook." P. Wattin, Caithn. Statist. Acc. xi. 267. N.

"The place quhar he winnes his peitts this yeir, ther he sawis his corne the next yeire, after that he guidds it weill with sea ware." Monroe's Iles, p. 46. This respects the island of Lewis.

"Cutting, winning, and carrying home their peats, however, consumes a great deal of time."

P. Wattin, Caithn. Statist. Acc. xi. 268.

2. Often used to denote harvest-making in general.

> For syndry cornys that thai bar Wox ryp to wyn, to mannys fud: That the treys all chargyt stud With ser frutis, on syndry wyss. In this suete tyme, that I dewyss, Thai off the pele had wonnyn hay. bers in the country." Pitscottie, p. 10.

"Becaus kyng Henry was this tyme in France, and the corne to be won, thay war content on all sydis to defend thair awin but ony forthir inuasion of othir quhill the nixt yeir." Bellend. Cron. B. xiii. c. 4. Jam messis instarct; Boeth.

Su.G. wann-a, Alem. wann-on, Belg. winn-en, A. S. wind-wian, ventilare. Su.G. Isl. winn-a, to wither. In Isl. it is used especially with respect to herbs and flowers. Forwyned is an O. E. word of the same meaning, mentioned by Skinner, and expl. marcidus, arefactus. But he erroneously derives it from A. S. dwyn-an, tabescere. Ihre gives Wisna as synon. with Win-a. V. WIZZEN.

Teut. winn-en corresponds to sense 2.; colligere fructus terrae. The origin of the A.S. v. windwian, is wind, ventus; and, as it is a compound v., perhaps Teut. wij-en purgare. V. Wecht.

To WIN, v. a. To raise from a quarry, S. won. part. pa.

46 Gif onic person be not infeft with sik priviledge, hee may na-waies forbid, trouble or molest the King, or ony of his lieges to do the premisses: Or to win staines, quarrell, or to exerce ony vther industrie to thair awin profite and commoditie, within the floud marke of the sea." Skene, Verb. Sign. vo. Ware.

The menstral wan within ane wanis That day full weil he previt, For he come hame with unbirst bainis, Quhair fechtars wer mischevit.

Chr. Kirk, st. 15.

This term has been occasionally used, in some of these senses, by O. E. writers.

-That no schyppe sholde in wynne.

Rich. Cueur de Lyon. -" That no creature might wynne to her."

Fabyan's Chron. Syns at our narrow doores they in cannot win, Send them to Oxforde, at Brodgate to get in.

Heywood's Epigrams, Warton's Hist. E. P. iii. 90.

Warton renders it enter in, observing that win is probably a contraction for go in. To winne to, to attain, Chaucer, Rom. Rose, v. 3674. Palsgraue mentions this word. "I winne to a thing, I retche to it." He subjoins, however; "This terme is farre northren."

A. S. Alem. winn-an, Germ. winn-en, signify in general, to obtain, to acquire. But our term, although perhaps originally the same, is rather to be traced to Su.G. and Isl. In these languages, the v. assumes different forms; Su.G. inna, hinna, hwinna, winn-a, Isl. vinn-a. But Ihre reckons winn-a the most ancient; viewing win, labor, as the root. In Su.G. it is sometimes used without, at other times with, a preposition. Jag wet ej huru laangt jag hwinner i dag; Nescio, quatenus hodie pergere valeam; Ihre, vo. Hinnu. I wat na how fer I may win, the day, S. I know not, how far I may be able to proceed on my journey to-day, E.

Erke Biskopen tha ey laengre wann, An til Nykoeping, ther do hann.

Archiepiscopus ulterius ire non valuit.

Chron. Rhythm. p. 308. Ibid. "The Archbishop wan na ferrer than til Bykop-ing," &c. S.

Hinna upp en, aliquem praegressum assequi; Ibid.; to overtake one who has gone before, E. to win up to him, S. Laga at du hinner up din broder i studier; Take care to equal your brother in learning, Wideg. Tuk care to win up to, or with, your brother, S. Han skall komma, om han hinner; He shall come, if he has time, Wideg.; according to the S. idiom, If he can win. Hinnu til corresponds to win to or til, S. Han sprang, men hann icke til maalet; He ran, but did not reach, (win to) the goal. Hinna aut, to reach;

Jag kan icke hinna aat baegaren; I can't reach. E., (I can na win at, S.) the pot. WIN, s. Gain.

He sailit over the sey sa oft and oft, Quhil at the last ane semclie ship he coft; And waxe sa ful of warldis welth and win. His hands he wish [washed] in ane silver basin. Priests Peblis, S. P. R. i. 10.

It is elsewhere used in the same poem. V. Bud. They tine thir steps, all thay quhaevir did sin In pryde, invy, in ire, and lecherie; In covetice, or ony extreme win.

-And covetice of warldly win Is bot wisdome, I say for me.

Lyndsay, S. P. R. i. 246. 247.

A.S. win signifies labour, the proper source of gain. But I do not find that it ever occurs as denoting gain itself. Germ. winne is used in the latter sense; as well as Belg. Sw. winst, from winnen, winn-a, lucrari.

To WIN, v. a. To wind (yarn), S., corr.

from the E. word.

An' ay she win't, an' ay she swat, I wat she made nae jaukin.

Burns, iii. 130.

WINACHIN. This term is equivalent to winnowing, in the Buchan dialect. But as used by Forbes, the meaning must be different.

> For Agamemnon winachin, Diana's wench had stown; An' wad na gie her back again, Bat kept her as his own.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 20. WINCHEAND, part. pr. Perhaps cursing or imprecating.

Mr Pink., however, explains it wincing; Select Scot. Ball. Gl. V. Winze.

WYND, s. An alley, a lane, S.

—Thai til Edynburgh held the way; In at the Frere Wynd entryd thai, And to the Crag wp throwch the town Thai held thare way in a rawndown.

Wyntown, viii. 30. 48. "There is little or no change made on the other passages called wynds and raws. Only it is to be observed, that in all those which have been made in the city or suburbs for at least fifty years past, we have neither gates nor wynds; they are all streets and lanes." Statist. Acc. (Aberdeen) xix.

"Edinburgh and Stirling, two of the principal towns in Scotland, are situated on hills, with one wide street, and many narrow lanes leading from thence down the sides of the hills, which lanes, from their being generally winding, and not straight, are called winds." Sir John Sinclair's Observ. p. 165.

I hesitate if this be the origin. These lanes are generally straight. Perhaps rather from A.S. windan to turn, as these are turnings from a principal

To WIND, v. n. To magnify in narration, to tell marvellous stories, S.; perhaps from wind ventus, as by the same metaph. a person of this description is said to blow. Hence, WINDER, s. One who deals in the marvellous, S. Nearly synon. is Germ. windmacher. a braggadocio, a noisy, pretending, swaggering fellow.

WINDCUFFER, s. The name given to the Kestril, Orkn.

"The Kestril (falco tinnunculus, Lin. Ross's Helenore, p. 56.

2. Metaph. used to denote any trifling obstacle. "He that is red for windlestraws should not sleep in lees." Ferguson's S. Prov. p. 14.

"No windlestraws, no bits of clay, no temptations, which are of no longer life than an hour, will then be able to withstand you."-Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep. 214.

A.S. windel- streome, "calamus; a reed, a cane, a wheate or oaten straw, of some at this day called a windel-strowe;" Somner. Calamus, ex quo conficiuntur sportae, Lye; from windel sporta, a basket, Lancash. a windle.

To WINDLE, v. a. To make up (straw or hay) into bottles, S. Teut. windel-en, fasciis vel fasciolis involvere; Gl. Sibb. Hence, WINDLEN, WONLYNE, s. A bottle of straw or hay, S.

"Let the muckle horse get the muckle wonlyne;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 50. V. STRAE.

It is now written windlen, which more properly marks its origin. V. Kemple.

WINDOCK, WINNOCK, s. A window, S.

"Faill not, but ye tak guid heyd that neither the dasks, windocks, nor duris, be ony ways hurt or brokin-eyther glassin wark or iron wark." Letter, Ergyll, Stewart, &c. Statist. Acc. (P. Dunkeld) xx. 422, N.

"When poverty comes in at the door, friendship flies out at the winnock." Ramsay's S. Prov.

Isl. vindauge, vindoega, Su.G. windoega; according to Ihre, from wind the higher part of a house, and oega an eye, because of the round form of the window. And indeed, round windows are often used in the upper part of buildings.

WIND-SKEW, s. An instrument used for preventing smoke. It consists of a broad piece of wood, to which is fixed a long handle. This is placed on the chimney-top, and the handle hangs down the vent. It is altered from its former position, according to the change of the wind; Mearns.

Perhaps from Su.G. wind, and skufw-a, sky, vitare, Alem. scu-an, sciuh-en; q. what eschews the wind. Or wind may be from Su.G. wind a torquere, because of its change of place.

This, in Ang., is called a wriggle, perhaps q. wringle, from Teut. wringh-en, torquere; or from Su.G. wrick-a, id. The reason of both designations may thus be viewed as nearly the same.

There is a possibility, however, that windskew may be originally the same with Isl. Su.G. windsked, a little varied in signification; Asseres tecti, qui culmen et corticem tegunt, ne a vento dissipentur; Verel. p. 294. Asser prominulus, qui a pariete pluviam defendit; a sked, assula; Ihre. He views wind as here signifying the higher part of a house.

wins, in the direction of Dundee.

WINSEY, adj. Of or belonging to wool, S. B. apparently corr. from E. woolsey. Cotton-winsey denotes what is made of cotton and wool; Linen-winsey, of linen and wool, linsey-woolsey.

WINSOME, adj. 1. Gay, merry, cheerful, S. B. Near what bright burn or crystal spring, Did you your winsome whistle bring?

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 108.

I gat your letter, winsome Willie.—— Burns, iii. 248.

This seems the more aucient sense. A.S. winsum, wynsum, jucundus, lactus, amoenus, gratus; suavis, dulcis; Franc. wunnisam; hence wunnisam feld, Paradisus; Otfrid. ap. Schilter. O. Teut. wonsaem, jucundus, lactus; Kilian. Lye derives the A.S. word from wyn, joy; Alem. wunne, Teut. wonne, winne, id.

2. Comely, agreeable, engaging, S.

Ritson's S. Songs, ii. 27.
The Galliard to Nithside is gane,
To steal Sim Crichton's winsome dun.

Minstrelsy Border, i. 284.

A. Bor. wunsome not only signifies, "lively, joyous," but, "smart, trimly dressed;" Grose.

The Franc. phrase used by Otfrid, wunnisam sconi, approaches to this; delectabilis pulchritudo, Schilter.

It is possible, however, that the word in this sense may be radically different. For Su.G. waen, Isl. vaenn, signify beautiful, pulcher, amoenus. Hun war miog vaen pijka ok frid; Erat puella admodum pulcra et venusta; Biblia Isl. Gen 24.—Ihre views this word as very ancient; as allied to A.S. wine, delectus, to Lat. venustus, and also to the name of Venus.

WYNSIK, Ballade, S. P. R. iii. 133.

Ibid. v. 7. 337.

It is justly observed, Gl. Wyntown, that this mode of reckoning prevailed among all the nations in high latitudes, the greatest part being put for the whole; and that, for a similar reason, the southern nations computed by summers.

The learned Spelman asserts, perhaps rather fancifully, that in honour of the infernal gods, the ancient northern nations did not reckon by days and years, but by nights and winters; according to that of Tacitus, Nox diem ducit. Hence, he adds, their nocturnal sacrifices. Vo. Herthus.

Moes G. wintr-us, hyems; also, annus. Be the warth twalib wintrus; When he was twelve years old; Luk. ii. 42. A.S. winter has both senses. And thus the same passage is rendered, A.S. version; And tha he waes twelf wintre. Hence gewintrad, grandis aetate, grown to full age, Su.G. winter is used in both senses; and Isl. vctur; hiems, pro integro anno, Verel.

WINTROUS, adj. Wintry, stormy.

WYP, s. A wreath, a garland.

With lynning valis, or lyke apronis lycht, Thay war arrayit, and thare hedis dycht In wyppys of the haly herb varuane.

nerb varuane.

Doug. Virgil, 411. 3.

Varuane is the herb vervain, much used by the Romans in their sacred rites. Wyp seems to be originally the same with MoesG. waip, wipja, corona, the term used to denote the crown of thorns plaited by the Roman soldiers (Joh. xix. 5.), apparently in resemblance of the wreaths or chaplets given to victors. This is nearly allied to Oop, q. v. WYR, s. An arrow.

"Than till his boy he said in hy,

"Yon men will slay ws, and that may.
"Quhat wapyn has thow?" 'Ha Schyr, per-fay,

I haiff bot a bow, and a wyr.'—
He taisyt the wyr, and leit it fley,
And hyt the fadyr in the ey,
Till it rycht in the harnys ran.

Barbour, v. 595. 623. MS.

Vyre occurs in the same sense, O. E.

And as a vyre
Whiche flyeth out of a myghty bowe,
Awey he fledde for a throwe,
As he that was for loue wode,
Whan that he saw howe it stode.

Gower, Conf. Am. Fol. 28. a. Fr. vire signifies "the arrow called a Quarrell; used onely for the cross-bow;" Cotgr. Arm. bir, an arrow. Isl. aur, telum, sagitta; G. Andr.

Our term might seem allied to Su.G. waer-ia, Belg. ge-weer, Germ. wehr, ge-wehr, ge-waer, any kind of arms or warlike instruments, from waer-ia, weer-en, wehr-en, to defend.

To WYR, v.a. To "sling down," Pink. It is used to denote the circling motion of a crane, employed by those within the walls of a besieged town, to let down burning faggots on the works of the besiegers.

Johne Crab, that had his geir all yar, In his fagaldis has set the fyr; And our the wall syn gan thaim wyr, And brynt the sow till brundis bar.

Barbour, xvii. 704. MS.

Burel's Pilgr. V. Suoufe.

It seems properly to signify, to wreath, to move in a circle, to whirl about; Su.G. wer-a, Mod. Sax. wyr-en, Fr. vir-er, Lat. gyr-are.

To WIRK, WYRK, v. a. 1. To work, to cause, to accomplish.

The wyis wroght uther grete wandreth and weuch,

Wirkand woundis full wyde, with wapnis of were. Gawan and Gol. iii. 5.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 126.

2. To make, to form.

Quhat sall I do? Alace that I was wrocht! Get Symon wit it war my undoing.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 78.

Moes G. waurk-jan, facere; A.S. wirc-an, wyrcan, id. used with respect to creation; Uton wircean man; Let us make man, Gen. i. 26. Alem. uuirchon, Isl. virk-ia, verk-a.

Perhaps these words appear in a more radical form in Isl. yrke, yrk-ia, arare, colere terram; from yr-ia, id. glebam radere. V. G. Andr. p. 137.

WIRK, WERK, s. Work.

On to the tyme that he this werk haiff wrocht.

Wallace, iii. 277. MS.

WYROCK, s. A sort of corn on the foot. V. VIRROK.

WIRRY-COW, s. 1. A bug-bear, a scare-crow, S. Wirry-carl is sometimes used as synon. Gl. Sibb.

And draggl'd sae 'mang muck and stanes,
They look'd like wirrykows.
Ramsay's Works, i. 260.

2. The devil, Gl. Shirr.

Hamilton evidently uses the term in this sense, in one of his Epistles to Ramsay.

Lang may thou live, and thrive, and dow, Until thou claw an auld man's pow;

And thro' thy creed, Be keeped frae the wirricow,

After thou's dead.

Ramsay's Poems, ii. 346.

Su.G. wisn-a, foerwisn-a, primarily denote the withering of flowers. Win-a, which Ihre views as more ancient, is used in the same sense.

To Wisen, v. a. To wither, to cause to fade, or make dry.

This seems precisely synon. with Whitie-whaties, q. v. It is nearly the Belg. term.

To WISY, v.a. To examine, &c. V. VESY. To WISK, v.a. To hurry away, as if one quickly swept off any thing with a besom.

Bot quhen I walknyt, al that welth was wiskit away. Doug. Virgil, 239. b. 15.

The E. v. whisk is now used in the same way, S. Germ. wisch-en, to wipe; Su.G. wiska, hwiska, a besom.

To Wisk away, v. n. To move off nimbly, S. whisk, E.

Bot suddanly away thay wisk ilkane Furth of our sicht, hie vp in the sky. Doug. Virgil, 75. 50.

WYSK, s. A quick motion, S. whisk.

Bot the King, that him dred sum thing,

Barbour, v. 641. MS.

With ane wysk may be viewed as used adv. in the sense of quickly.

Fresch Bewtie with ane wysk come [up] belyve,

And thame all reistit war that never so kene.

To WISS, Wisse, v. a. To wiss one to any place or thing, to direct, to guide, to put in the way of obtaining it, S. Can ye wiss me to the way? Can you direct me to it?

Wisse is used as signifying to guide, Sir Tris-

To Crist his bodi he yald,

Barbour, iv. 478. MS.

In S. wiss is often used for E. wish. But there is no affinity to this v.

"Anes wood, never wise, ay the worse;" S. Prov. Ferguson, p. 5.

WYSS WIFE, Wise-wife, s. A periphrasis for a witch, S.

"Most of this winter was spent in the discovery and examination of witches and sorcerers. Amongst these, Agnes Samson (commonly called the wise wife of Keith) was most remarkable, a woman not of the base and ignorant sort of witches, but matron-like, grave, and settled in her answers, which were all to some purpose." Spotswood, p. 383.

Wise woman is synon. in E.

"Pray, was't not the wise woman of Brainford?" Shakspeare.

"At this daie it is indifferent to saic in the English toong; She is a witch; or She is a wise woman." Scott's Discourie of Witchcraft, B. V. c. 9.

In the same manner, witches are in Germ. called weissen-frauen; in Belg. a witch is witte-vrouwe. Stylo Francorum et Alamannorum vaticinari dicuntur non solum divinitus inspirati, quos prophetas vocamus, sed etiam conjectores et hariolatores. Gloss. Keron. propheta uuizzago; Gloss. Pez. arioli uuizzagun, pythonessa uuizzaga; Wachter, vo. Weissagen, vaticinari. The Egyptian magicians are in the A. S. version called wisustan witun, Gen. xli. 8. from the superl. wisest, wisust, sapientissimus. Witega, witga, denotes both a true prophet, and a diviner.

Isl. vit, knowledge, is used, in a secondary sense, to denote magical arts; and vaett for a witch. Hence, says the author of Gl. Landnamab., our old term, vitk-r, a magician. To the same source he traces E. witch; although this has been generally referred to A. S. wicca, id. Wicc-ian signifies to fascinate, to use inchantments. West-Goth. wit-a, to fascinate; Seren. vo. Witch. E. wizzard is evidently from Alem. uuizz-an scire.

These designations all equally originate from the claim made by witches and sorcerers to superior wisdom; or from the supposed extent of their intelligence, in the judgment of others. V. Keysler. Antiq. Septent. p. 504.

This mode of expression has been used very early. In Egypt, the term wise-men seems to have been synon. with magicians. "Pharaoh called for all the magicians in Egypt, and all the wisemen thereof;" Gen. xli. 8. Ex. vii. 11. In our own country, whatever knowledge was ascribed to persons of this description, it was, however, generally believed that their own lot remained a secret to them. Hence the reflection, in that humourous Song, The Rock, &c. which seems to have been proverbially used in former times:

But they'll say, She's a wise-wife that kens her ain weerd.

V. Ross's Helenore, p. 133.

WYSS-LIKE, adj. Possessing the appearance of propriety, prudent, decent, becoming; also, used as an adv.

A.S. wis-lic prudens; Germ. weislich; discreetly, judiciously.

Danbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 54. st. 1. "Wisdom," Gl. Lord Hailes. But perhaps with wysure signifies, with men distinguished for wisdom; from A. S. wisra, sapientior. It may, however, be referred to Belg. wyser, Alem. wiser, prudens.

A.S. wit, ge-wit, scientia, notitia. This is perhaps the primary sense; although Dr Johns. views the E. term as originally denoting the mind. In a simple state of society, knowledge itself would probably receive its name in the first instance, which would at length be transferred to the mind as the subject or seat of it. To suppose the contrary, is certainly to ascribe too much abstraction to an uncivilized people. It perhaps confirms this idea, that the s. is evidently from the v.

To WYT, v. a. To shun, to avoid.

It wes gret cunnandnes to kep

And wyt sic wawis; for ay amang
The wawys reft thair sycht off land.
Barbour, iii. 714. MS. Lat. vit-are.

It may, however, be meant for with, being written wy' in MS.

WITCH-BELLS, s. pl. Round-leaved Bell-flower, S. Campanula rotundifolia, Linn.

There is a considerable analogy between this and its Sw. name in Dale-karlia. This is Macrebiael, i.e. the Mare's bell; the night-mare being viewed as an incubus or evil genus. They are also called Thumbles, S.B. i.e. thimbles, which corresponds to their name in Gothland, Fingerhatt, q. a. covering for the finger.

To WITE, v. a. To blame, to accuse; the prep. with being often added, as, Ye need na wite me with that, S. For is also used.

S. Prov. Wite your self, if your wife be with bairn; spoken when peoples misfortunes come by

Doug. Virgil, 9. 40.

A.S. Su.G. wite is used, in a secondary sense, for the consequence of blame, that is, punishment. In A.S. it denotes both civil and corporal punishment. Hence Flit-wyte, the fine paid for a broil, S. fliting. Blodwyte, &c. Isl. vijie, noxa; vyt-a, vitii notare aliquem, vytt-ur, vitii notatus; G. Andr. p. 256. This writer seems to view it as allied to the Lat.

WYTELESS, adj. Blameless.

"If all be well, I's be wyteless." S. Prov.—
"spoken with a suspicion that all will not be well; and if so, I have no hand in it;" Kelly, p. 202.
"They wyte you, and you no wyteless;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 72.

WYTENONFA, A name for a disease. V. WEDONYPHA.

WITH. To gae with, v. n. To miscarry, to fail, to go contrary to inclination or expectation, S. It is used both with respect to persons and things: He's gane with aw the gither; He has completely gone wrong; either as respecting one's circumstances, or moral conduct.

With is here used as in A.S. and as Su.G. wid, signifying against. A.S. with-ga-en, with-ga-n, to oppose.

WITH THAT, adv. Upon that, thereupon; denoting one thing as the consequence of another.

Tresoune thai cryt, traytouris was thaim amang.

Kerlye with that fled out sone at a side.

This v. resembles A.S. with-haebban, which not only signifies resistere, but continere, retinere. WITHOUTYN, prep. Without.

Thai gart serwandys, with outyn langer pleid, With schort awiss on to the wall him bar: Thai kest him our out of that bailfull steid.

Wallace, ii. 252. MS.

This in MS. is generally written as two words. The acute Mr Tooke rejects all former derivations of without, affirming that "it is nothing but the imperative wyrthutan from the Anglo-Saxon and Gothic verb weorthan, wairthan, -esse." Divers. Purley, i. 217. Thus he views it as literally signifying, Be out; as analogous to But. This, however, seems to be too great a sacrifice to hypothesis. Even, on his own ground, it would have been more natural to have deduced this term from A.S. witan, discedere, to depart, to go away, to go forth. For ut witan is expressly rendered, Foras discedere, exire; Boet. p. 186, Lye.

It appears, however, that it is composed of A. S. with versus, denoting motion towards a place, and utan extra; as with westan, versus occidentem,

To WITHSAY, v. a. To gainsay, to oppose, to speak against.

Barbour gives the following account of the conduct of the English, under Edw. I.

And gyff that ony man thaim by Had ony thing that wes worthy, As horss, or hund, or other thing, That war plesand to thar liking; With rycht or wrong it have wald thai. And gyf ony wald tham withsay, Thai suld swa do, that thai suld tyne Othir land, or lyff, or leyff in pyne.

Wyntown, vi. 18. 378. Su.G. witr-a, id. Notum facere, indicare, Ihre. Isl. vitr-ast, innotescere, apparere et praemonere. In Isl. it seems especially to respect the manifestation of a person. Hence witran, an apparition; Witrur, a term synon. with Alfar, Elfur, our Elves or Fairies, because these little demons (daemonioli) sometimes made their appearance. Verel. Ind. p.

WITTIR, s. 1. A mark, a sign, i. e. an indication.

"Quhat end that your purposs sall ta.

"For in this land is nane trewly

"Wate thingis to cum sa weill as I."

Barbour, iv. 642. MS.

A. Bor. wittering, a hint. Isl. vitr-a is given by Verel. as synon. with Sw. foreboda, to prognosticate; and, as we have seen, is frequently used to denote preternatural appearance. It seems derived from MoesG. wit-an, scire; and is thus allied to the various terms respecting prophecy or divination, mentioned under the article Wyss Wife.

WITTER-STONE, s. Apparently, a stone originally placed as a witter or mark.

"-Find, that the mill-dam and mill-land of Pitlessie have been past memory as it now is, and that it is not the occasion of the regorging of the water upon the mill of Ramorney; and that the stone called the witterstone is not a stone for the regulating thereof." Fountainhall, i. 66.

WITTER, s. The barb of an arrow or fishhook, S.

To WITTER, v. n. "To fight, to fall foul of one another;" Gl. Sibb.; perhaps to take one by the throat. V. next word.

Belg. veter, a point; Teut. wette, acies cultri. WITTERS, s. pl. Throats.

This seems corr. from Lat. guttur.

WITTINS, s. pl. Knowledge. Without my wittins, without my knowledge, S.

This seems the E. part. in pl. used as a s., unless from the A.S. part. wittende, knowing.

WITTIS, s. pl. The senses, the organs of sense. Myself is sound, but seikness or but soir; My wittis fyve in dew proportioun.

Henrysone, Bannatyne Poems, p. 132. It is used in the same sense by Chaucer.

"This is to sayn the dedly sinnes that ben entred into thyn herte by thy five wittis." Tale of Melibeus, p. 281. edit. Tyrwhitt.

WIZEN, s. The throat, S.

It is also used as a s. like bricht, schene, &c. denoting a woman of rank, or splendidly dressed.

The wedo to the tother wlonk warpit thir wordis. Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 50.

Here corrected from edit. 1508.

A.S. wlonce, wlance, gay, splendid, rich. This adj. seems to have been also used substantively, to denote an elegant woman. Wlanc wundenloce wagon; Splendidam tortam capillis (foeminam) portabant; Lye. Wlonce monige, magnates plurimi, is a phrase also used.

It is not improbable, that this word gives us the origin of the vulgar term, Flunkie, universally used in S. for a servant in livery; q. one who wears a gaudy dress, as referring to his parti-coloured attire.

WOAGE, s. A military expedition. WIAGE.

I have ane wallidrag, ane worm, ane auld wobat carle.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48. It may be the same word which is frequently used, Ang., although generally pron. wobart, signifying feeble, decayed; as, a wobart, or wobat, bairn, a child that appears weakly or decayed. Wobart-like, having a withered or faded look.

It seems, however, to be properly a s. and the same with woubit, a hairy worm. V. Vowber.

WOCE, s. Voice.

A. S. wudu, Belg. woud, id. The S. pron. is wud.

WOD, Wod, Vod, adj. 1. Mad, S. wud. One is said to be wud, who is outrageous in a state of insanity.

Fra Butlar had apon gud Wallace seyn, Throuch auld malice he wox ner wod for teys.

Wallace, xi. 402. MS.

A wod dog, one that has the hydrophobia, S. "Quhen it [the sterne callit canis] ringis in our hemispere, than dogis ar in dangeir to ryn vod, rather nor in ony ythir tyme of the yeir." Compl. S. p. 89.

It also occurs in this sense, O. E.

—Bitten by a wood-dog's venom'd tooth.

Fletcher's Fatthful Sheperdess, Act. ii.

This seems to be the primary sense. MoesG. wods is the term used in describing the demoniac, Mark v. 18. who was exceeding fierce. A. S. wod, amens, insanus. Isl. od-ur, id. Belg. woedt. This sense is retained in O. E. woode.

"Tweye men metten him that hadden develis and camen out of graves ful woode so that no man myghte go bi that wey." Wiclif, Mat. viii.

2. Furious with rage; denoting the act, S. It is sometimes conjoined with wraith or wreith, angry, q. angry to madness.

Maist cruell Juno has or this alsua

And from the schippis the vistis on sche callis,
Standard wodwraith ennarmed on the wallis.

Doug. Virgil, 59. 27.
Wod wroith he worthis for disdene and dispite.

Loid. 423. 16.

A.S. wod furiosus. Isl. od-ur is used both as signifying insanus, and ira percitus.

This is most probably the origin of the name Odin or Weden, the great God of the Northern nations, whence our Wednesday; from od-ur, or wod furiosus. Some have viewed this deity as the same with the Mercury of the Romans. But as, like Mercury, he presided over eloquence, in other respects his attributes correspond exactly with those of Mars. For he is still represented as the God of battle, as dispensing the fate of it, and as feasting on the slain. V. Verstegan, p. 80. His name seems indeed to express the rage of battle; and his character is analogous to that of Mars, as described by the Poet.

Amyd the feild stude Mars that felloun syre, In place of mellé wod brym as ony fyre; The sorrowful Furies from the firmament By the goddis to tak vengeance war sent. Doug. Virgil, 269. 9.

3. Having a fierce or fiery temper; expressive of the habit. A wud body, a person of a very violent temper, S.

4. Ravenous; in relation to appetite.

Bot the vile belly is of thay cursit schrewis
Haboundis of sen maist abhominabill,
And pail all tyme thare mouthis miserabill
For wod hunger and gredy appetyte.

Doug. Virgil, 75. 1.

5. Wild, as opposed to an animal that is domesticated. Hence wod catt, a wild cat. The term is used metaph. by Blind Harry.

Houlate, ii. 24. MS.

Here, as in Bann. MS. rowch, saw, wethis, are put for rowth, sall, withis, in S. P. Repr.

It seems doubtful whether the word in MS. be not rather wodwiss, as ro and w are often undistinguishable.

According to this reading, the original term most probably is A.S. wude-wase, in pl. wude wasan, satyrs, fauns, Gl. Aelfric, p. 56. (unfael wihtu, synon.) from wudu a wood. The origin of wasan is uncertain.

This A. S. term seems to have been corr. into wode-house, O. E., used in a similar sense.

"Those [actors] said above to have been on board the city foyst, or galley, are called monstrous wilde men; others are frequently distinguished by the appellation of green men; and both of them were men whimsically attired and disguised with droll masks, having large staves or clubs, headed with cases of crackers. At the bottom of the thirty-second plate is one of the green men, equipped in his proper habit, and flourishing his fire-club; and at the top a savage man, or wode house, a character very common in the pageants of former times, and [which] probably resembled the wilde men." Strutt's Sports, p. 282. This immediately refers to the age of Henry VIII. V. p. 190, also 279, N.

Drable, mentioned by Holland, may signify servant; Teut. drevel, a servant, a drudge, a slave; mediastinus, Kilian.

WOFT, s. The woof in a web. V. WAFT. To WOID, v. a. To divide.

A felloun salt with out thai can begyn; Gert woid the ost in four partis about, With wachys feyll, that no man suld wsche out. Wallace, viii. 744. MS.

Edit. 1648, Divided.

WOYELEY, adv. Sir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 24. He shal be wounded, I wys, woyeley I wene.

It refers to the treacherous manner in which King Arthur is said to have been slain. A.S. wolice prave, inique; wo-lic, pravus.

WOlk, pret. v. Fled, wandered.

The voce thus wyse throwout the cietie woik.

Doug. Virgil, 39. 12.

Vagatur, Virg. ii. 17.

Rudd. refers to Ital. vog-are, Fr. vog-uer, to swim; viewing these as well as woik, as perhaps derived from Lat. vag-ari. But undoubtedly, it is more probably the same with A. S. woc, woce, ortus est, suscitatus est, from waec-an, suscitari; E. awoke. Or it may be from A.S. weolc revolvit from wealc-an. But the former is preferable.

WOYNE, s. Maitland Poems, p. 164.

wine, Su.G. winne, labor, winn-a, wond-a, laborare, curare.

WOISTARE, Woustour, s. A boaster, S. vouster; Rudd.

Bot war I now, as vmquhile it has bene, Ying as yone wantoun woisture so strang thay wene,

Ye had know sic youtheid, traistis me, But ony price I suld all reddy be.

Doug. Virgil, 140. 49.

Sic vant of woustours with hairtis in sinful statures,

Sic brallaris and bosteris, degenerait fra thair naturis,—

Within this kand was never hard nor sene.

Dunbar, Bannatyne Poems, p. 43. st. 9. Rudd. views this as the same with waster, wastour, in P. Ploughman; probably led to adopt this idea from its being rendered by Skinner, Thraso, a hector. But the term there evidently signifies a spendthrift or prodigal. Those of this description were persons who songe at the nale, who would give no help to the Ploughman to erie, i. e. till, his half acre, but hey trolly lolly, Fol. 32. b. Therefore Peter thus addresses them.

Ye be wasters I wote wel, and Trueth wot the sothe,——

Ye wast that men winnen, with trauayle and wyth tene,

And Truth shall teach you his teme to dryue, Or ye shal eat barly bread, and of the broke drinke.

It is indeed afterwards said;

-Than gan a wastoure to wrath him & wolde haue fought,

And to Piers the Plouwman he proferd his gloue,

A britoner, a bragger, and bofeted Pierce also, And bad him go pysse with his plow, forpyned schrewe. Fol. 33. a.

But the terms britoner, and bragger, shew that wastoure conveys a different idea. It is under the later character that this ancient writer lashes the clergy for their prodigality and indolence. V. Voust.

WOLK, pret. Walked.

On salt stremes wolk Derida and Thetis, By rynnand strandes, Nymphes and Naiades. Doug. Virgil, 402. 27.

WOLROUN, s.

I have ane wallidrag, ane worm, ane auld wobat carle,

A waistit wolroun, na worthe bot wourdis to clatter.

Dunbar, Maitland Poems, p. 48. In edit. 1508, it is crandoun, apparently the same with Crawdon, q. v. But wolroun appears preferable, because of the alliteration.

This word seems synon. with Culroun. It is well known that q and u are frequently interchanged. Now Su.G. gall signifies testiculus, and Teut. ruynen castrare. That gall was also written wall, is highly probable from the variety of similar terms. allied in signification; as Germ. wol, pleasure, luxury; Alem. welun, id. welig, voluptuous; Germ. wal-en luxuriose crescere, wels amia. V. WALAGEous.

Geffrey of Maundeuile to fele wrouh he wouh, The deuelle yald him his while, with an arowe on him slouh. i. e. "to great wrath he waxed." The writer seems to play on the designation of this Geffrey, in the second line. A. S. wo, woh, wohg, weoh, perversitas, pravitas, error. But its primary signification is curvatura, flexio; being transferred from that which is lite. rally crooked to what is morally so. Wo, woh, wohg, weo, are also used adjectively; pravus, perversus. They also signify, crooked, distorted; curvus, tortus. Wough, in the quotation, sense 1., may indeed be viewed as an adj. From woh, in its literal sense, are formed, woh. fotade, having distorted feet, woh-handede, &c.; in its metaphorical, woh-dom, unjust judgment, wohfull, full of iniquity, &c. Woge gemeta, unjust measures. Isl. vo simply signifies, a sudden or unexpected calamity; volk, misery. WOUDE, pret. Waded. That this is from A. S. wog-un, nubere, appears from the use of wogere, procus, amasius, a wooer, a suitor; S. wowar. Seren. thinks that E. woo has primarily signified the lamentation of love-sick swains, as being nearly the same with Sw. voi-u sig; queri, lamentari.

A. S. wuna, Su.G. wana, Isl. vande, id. The same verbs, which anciently signified to dwell, also denoted custom or habit. Thus Alem. uuon-en manere, (whence Germ. wohn-en habitare,) occurs with the prefix, ki-uuonent, solent, ki-uuonin, solito. Hence also uuonaheite, consuetudo, uuone, mos. The transition is very natural. For residence or habitation is merely permanency in a place. And what is custom or wont, but permanency in a thing? Wowne, adj. Wont, accustomed.

From "Fr. fray, sperma piscium, [Isl. frae, semen,] whence the E. fry: or from the A. S. wreath grex." Rudd. Su.G. wrath signifies a herd of swine. To WRABIL, v. n. "To crawl about." Rudd. more properly, to move in a slow undulating manner, like a worm; to wriggle; S. warble, wurble; as, to wurble in or out. It is sometimes used actively, as to warble, or wurble, one's self out, to get out of confinement of any kind by a continuation of twisting motions.

Tent. wurbel-en, Belg. wervel-en, gyros agere, in orbem versare. Belg. wervel is used in composition, to denote the joints of the back-bone; as would seem, from their power of flexion. Perhaps these terms are allied to Su.G. hwerfl-a, to move in a circle, in gyrum agere; whence hwirfwel, vertex, hwerfla in orbem cito agere; Ihre.

Wyntown, i. 13. 27.

It is sometimes written wrack.

"To make any publick dispute I thought it not safe, being myself alone, and fearing, above all evils, to be the occasion of any division, which was our certain wrack." Baillie's Lett. i. 132.

 As denoting one who threatens or brings vengeance or destruction.

This vengeabil wraik, in sic forme changit thus.

Euin in the face and visage of Turnus Can fle, and flaf, and made him for to growe, Scho soundis so with mony hiss and how.

Doug. Virgil, 444. 19. This is spoken of one of the Furies,— Clepit to surname Dire, wikkit as fyre,
That is to say, the Goddis wraik and ire.

Ibid. 443. 30.

This seems to determine the origin of E. wretch, as properly denoting one who is the object of vengeance.

WRAITH, WRAYTH, WRAITHE, WRETH, s. 1. Properly, an apparition in the exact likeness of a person, supposed by the vulgar to be seen before, or soon after death, S. V. Gl. Sibb. A. Bor. id. also swarth.

Ibid. 342. 21. Imago, Virg.

Nor yit nane vane wrethis nor gaistis quent Thy chare constrenit bakwart for to went. Ibid. 339, 15.

It seems to be the same word that is elsewhere written wrachis, from the similarity of c and t in MSS.

And were not his expert mait Sibylla
Taucht him thay war bot vode gaistis all tha,
But ony bodyis, as waunderand wrachys waist,
He had apoun thame ruschit in grete haist.

Ibid. 173, 27.

Mr Tooke expl. this vapours, as synon. with rack, rak; justly commending Rudd. for not altering the text. But how can the learned writer excuse himself for using this liberty with respect to wrethis, Doug. Virgil, 339. 15.; wrathis, 341. 42.; and wrayth, 342. 21., which he alters to wrechis, wrachis, and wraych? V. Divers. Purley, II. 393.

"Phi. And what meane these kindes of spirits, when they appeare in the shadow of a person newly dead, or to die, to his friends?"

"Epi. When they appeare vpon that occasion, they are called Wraithes in our language: Amongst the Gentiles the diuell vsed that much, to make them beleeve that it was some good spirit that appeared to them then, either to forewarne them of the death of their friend, or else to discover unto them the will of the defunct, or what was the way of his slaughter; as it is written in the booke of the histories prodigious." K. James's Daemonologie, Works, p. 125.

"The wraith, or spectral appearance, of a person shortly to die, is a firm article in the creed of Scottish superstition. Nor is it unknown in our sister kingdom. See the story of the beautiful lady Diana Rich.—Aubrey's Miscellanies, p. 89." Minstrelsy Border, I. Introd. clxvi.

This word is used in the same sense, A. Bor. Fetch synon.; only it seems restricted to "the apparition of a person living." Gl. Grose.

 The term is sometimes used, but improperly, to denote a spirit supposed to preside over the waters.

The wraiths of angry Clyde complain.

Lewis's Tules of Wonder, No. 1.

Hence the designation, water-wraith, S.
Scarce was he gane, I saw his ghost,
It vanish'd like a shriek of sorrow;
Thrice did the water-wraith ascend,
And gave a doleful groan thro' Yarrow.
Ritson's S. Songs, i. 155.

"I believe gin ye had seen me than (for it was just i' the glomin) staakin about like a hallen shaker, you wou'd hae taen me for a water-wraith, or some gruous ghaist." Journal from London, p. 4.

The wraith of a living person does not, as some have supposed, indicate that he shall die soon. Although in all cases viewed as a premonition of the disembodied state; the season, in the natural day, at which the spectre makes its appearance, is understood as a certain presage of the time of the person's departure. If seen early in the morning, it forebodes that he shall live long, and even arrive at old age; if in the evening, it indicates that his death is at hand.

Rudd. says, "F. ab A.S. wraeth-an, infestare." Other conjectures have been thrown out, that have no greater probability. I have sometimes thought that the term might be allied to Su.G. raa, genius loci, whence Siveraa, a Nereid, a Nymph. In Dalekarlia, as Ihre informs us, (vo. Raa,) spectres are to this day called raudend. But I rather incline to deduce it from MoesG. ward-jan, A.S. weard-an, Alem. uuart-en, custodire; as the apparition, called a wraith, was supposed to be that of one's guardian angel. A.S. weard, Isl. vard, Alem. Germ. wart, all signify a guardian, a keeper. Now the use of swarth, S.B. shows that the letters have been transposed, in one or other of the terms; so that the original pronunciation may have been ward or wart.

When the maid informed the disciples, that the apostle Peter was standing before the gate of the house in which they were assembled, they said, "It is his angel;" Acts xii. 15. This exactly corresponds to the idea still entertained by the vulgar. If literally rendered, in our language, it would be, "It is his wraith," i. e. his guardian angel. For the notion, that every one had a tutelar angel, who sometimes appeared in his likeness, was not peculiar to the Jews, but received by the ancient Persians, by the Saracens, and by many other Gentile nations. V. Wolf. Cur. Philol. in loc.

WRAK, WRAIK, WRACK, WRECK, WREK, s.

1. Whatever is thrown out by the sea, as broken pieces of wood, sea-weed, &c., S.

2. It is often appropriated to sea-weed, S.

"The Polack— is frequently caught close by the shore, almost among the wrack or ware." Barry's Orkney, p. 295.

"The shores abound with plenty of fine broad leaved rich sea-weed or wreck for manure." P. Ballantrae, Ayrs. Statist. Acc. i. 113.

This receives different names in different parts of S.

- "Button wrack, and ludy wrack, are best for kelp, and the only kinds used, unless the price be very high. Except these two kinds, every other is very expensive in manufacturing, and produces but little kelp." P. Kilfinichen, Argyles. Statist. Acc. xiv. 181. 182.

"There are amongst them that will not suffer the wrack to be taken off their land, because (say they) it keeps the corn warm." Pennecuik's Tweeddale, p. 6.

4. Trash, refuse of any kind.

Anc wreche sall haif na mair,

For all his wrek and wair.
For all the wrak a wreche can pak,
And in his baggis imbrace,
Yet deid sall tak him be the bak,
And gar him cry, Allace!

Blyth, Bannatyne Poems, p. 182.

Lord Hailes confounds this word with Frack, ready, q. v. But, in this poem, the wealth of a miser is represented as mere trash, because he can carry nothing away with him, when he leaves this world; and is therefore characterized by two metaph. terms, both used to denote the refuse cast out by the sea, wrek and wair. IVrak is used in the same sense in another poem.

Quhill I had ony thing to spend, And stuffit weill with warldis wrak, Amang my freinds I wes weill kend.

Bannatyne Poems, p. 184. st. 2. Su.G. wrak not only signifies what in E. is properly denominated wreck, but any thing that is of little value, mere trash; Dan. vrag, id. This, however, has not been the original form of the word, but rak, rek. Thus wag-rek, bona naufragii, is from wag, waag, a wave, and rek-a, to cast away, to drive, q. what is driven ashore by the waves. Su.G. rak is synon. with wagrek; Ihre, vo. Reka. Wagrech seems to be the origin of O. Fr. varech, whence Skene improperly deduces ware; L.B. varect-um, warect-um, Jus vareci. Isl. hrak, res abjecta; Olav. Lex. Run.

This is distinguished from riddling; as in the latter operation, every thing is allowed to pass through the sieve except the straw. By the way, I may remark that, although Skinner naturally enough deduces A. S. hriddel, a sieve, from hredd-an, liberare, because grain is thus freed from the chaff, he does not seem to have observed that Teut. red-en signifies to sift, whence Germ. reyter-en, id. To WREE, v. a. To writhe. V. WRY. WREGH, s.- Wretch.

Luctantem, struggling, is the word used by Virg. in the latter passage. In the former, wriggle seems correspondent, as there is an evident allusion to the barbarous custom of tying a cock to a tree, and throwing at it.

Rudd. views it as probably corr. from wriggle. It seems nearly synon. with O.E. wrall, which Junius renders, curam atque solicitudinem alicui rei impendere. It occurs in a work ascribed to Chauc. In winning all their witte they wrall.

Ploughmans Tale, v. 349. Junius derives it from Dan. wrolig, discrucior animo, disquietor; wrolig sinde, mens distracta.

Y consonant corresponds to A.S. G before a vowel. This has generally in S. been printed 3, from the resemblance of the A.S. letter to the form of the Roman 3, although there is not the least affinity as to power. Sibb. has observed, that "the printers having no such character in their founts,-substituted 3 in many of the early printed books," whence, " in the sixteenth century, it came to be written in its short form, or without a tail, and at last, in more instances than one, to be pronounced as if it actually had been s or z."

But this, I apprehend, must not entirely be laid to the charge of our typographers, but perhaps primarily to the inaccuracy, if not, in some instances, to the ignorance of the writers or copyists of MSS., who, in writing the A.S. g, did not properly distinguish it in form from the long z, or 3. V. Macpherson's Rules for reading Wyntown's Chronicle.

This being a gross corruption, which can serve no end but to mislead or perplex the reader, it is uniformly rejected in this Dictionary, even where the language quoted has been printed in this manner. There can be no objection to this change, that would not be equally valid against the correction of any other error in orthography. For antiquity can never sanction absurdity.

Sibb. has justly remarked, that in some of the most ancient MS. copies of Wyntown's Chronicle, and Barbour's Bruce, the words year, yearn, young, &c. are written yhear, yhearn, yhing, &c. which ascertains the pronunciation beyond a doubt. This holds true, at least, in a variety of instances.

He also observes, that the power of the A.S. g, in the instances referred to, "was uniformly gh." That it was so, is probable. But we have not sufficient evidence for asserting this without limitation. G, in the same connexion, is aspirated in Belg. V. Sewel's Nether-Dutch Academy, p. 3. This seems to be the reason why Kilian writes the prefix ghe, as ghe-waer, certus, ghe-weer, arma, &c. But in Germ., before e and i, it is pron. as y consonant. Galso, the seventh letter of the MoesG., being entirely different from the third, which is written precisely as the Gr. Gamma, seems to have been pronounced as y consonant. Thus Gr. เดโน is written by Ulphilas gota, เชชินเด gudaioi, เชชินร gudas, &c. The Northern writers in rendering this letter use j, which has the sound of y. Vol. II.

Rudd. observes that "it is very ordinary with old authors to prefix y or i to verbs, participles, and verbal nouns, for ornament or the verse's sake: which they have done in imitation of the Anglo-Saxons, who made the same use of their ge, afterwards changed into y or i."

But, as far as I have observed, scarcely any of our writers have adopted this mode, except the Bishop of Dunkeld: and it is certainly foreign to our dialect of the Goth.; in which there is hardly a vestige of any prefix, similar to that of the A.S., having been used.

There seems to be no necessity for particularizing these words; as, in most instances, the only thing, that distinguishes them from common E, is the use of this prefix. Doug. uses ybaik tor baken, ybe for be, yberied for buried, ybore for born, ybound for bound, ybrokin for broken, &c. Any, that deserve particular attention, will be found under the letter I.

It may be added, that, in the south of S., y consonant is prefixed to a variety of words which are elsewhere pronounced without it; as yaik for ache, yaiker an ear of corn, yield age, for eild, yill for ale, yesk hiccup, for eesk, S.B. &c. &c. This must be attributed to the connexion of the southern counties with the Anglo-Saxons; as y, in this form, is merely the vestige of A.S. ge prefix. It is not so easy to account for the similar use of this consonant, in some instances, in Banffs. and Buchan.

Teut. gade denotes a mate, male or female, properly among birds. Sibb. views the word as formed from the v. to go; yaid, or yede, signifying gone, spent, or wasted." Chron. S. P. i. 340.

YAD-SKYVAR, s. Apparently, one who drives an old mare.

This is one of the terms used by Dunbar in his Flyting.

Mutton dryver, girnal ryvar, yad skyvar, foul fell thee.

Evergreen, ii. 60.

From Fad, q. v. and perhaps Su.G. skiufwa to drive.

To YAFF, v. n. 1. To bark; properly denoting the noise made by a small dog, to yelp, S.

2. To prate, to talk pertly; used as expressive of contempt, S.

It seems the same with O.E. yawlp, allied to A.S. gealp-an, exclamare, gloriari; Isl. gialf-ra, incondita loqui. The latter term nearly expresses the idea in sense 2.

As it is written zaik, it may perhaps be z proper, and thus be meant merely for shake.

YAIR, YAIRE, YARE, s. 1. An inclosure, commonly of a semi-circular form, built of stones, or constructed of stakes and wattled work, stretching into a tideway, for the purpose of detaining the fish when the tide ebbs, S.

"All they quha hes cruves or yares, stanks, or mylnis in waters, quhere the sea flowes and ebbes, or quhere salmon, troutes, or the frye of anie fisch of the sea, or of fresch waters ascends and descends; that ilk hecke of the cruves sall be at the least twa inche wide." 1 Stat. Rob. I. c. 11. s. 1.

Qui habent croas, vel piscarias, seu stagna, &c. Lat.

"There are a good number of salmon caught on the sea coast, sometimes by nets and cobles, called a stell fishing, but chiefly by means of yaires, or small inclosures, built in a curve or semicircular form near the shore. At high water the salmon comes within these yaires, and at low water is easily taken, having no way to escape." P. Killearn, Ross. Statist. Acc. i. 282.

"The—Vair Fishings, so productive in this parish, seem to be almost peculiar to it. A yare is built of stones gathered from the tide water mark, about four feet in height, and of considerable length, and stretches out into the river in the form of a crescent, or of three sides of a square; but to give it a probability of succeeding, it must proceed from a point of land, so as to inclose a bay." P. Cardross, Dunbartons. Statist. Acc. xvii. 217.

2. It is also used to denote a sort of scaffolding, which juts out into a river or frith in a straight line, S.

"Upon the point of these inches, they erect what are called yares, a sort of scaffold projecting into the water, upon which they build little huts to protect them from the weather; from these scaffolds they let down at certain times of the tide, their nets, and are often very successful in taking the smaller fish, such as herrings, garvies or sprats, sparlings or smelts, small whitings, haddocks, sea trouts and eels." P. Alloa, Clackman. Statist. Acc. xviii. 597.

There seems scarcely any reason to doubt that yare, yair, is radically one with E. wear, "a dam in a river, fitted for taking fish," Baillie; also, expl. "a net of twigs to catch fish," Johns. This is from A.S. waer, wer, piscina, septum, piscatorium, piscium capiendorum et custodiendorum locus; "a place or engine for catching and keeping of fish;" Somner. Isl. fiskaver, fiskever, id. (piscina, G. Andr.) Franc. uuiere, Belg. wijer.

Junius derives the Franc. word from Lat. vivarium. Somner, with more propriety, refers to A.S. be-wer-ian, cohibere, to restrain. Hence, he says, nostratium warren pro vivario;—Gallis, (G. pro W. amantibus) garenne. To these we may add L.B. gueren, vivarium piscium, as well as warenna, id. Da Cange.

We might conclude, from analogy, that yair and wear are from the same fountain; as various Goth. words, beginning with g, gu, and y, are to be viewed as belonging to one stock. Thus E. garden, S. garth, and yard, are not radically different from S. ward, L.B. wara, signifying an inclosure, a piece of ground fenced by a wall, hedge, ditch, or palisade.

But we have no occasion for analogical reasoning; as gaerd has been anciently used in the same sense with wer. For as the A. Saxons called a wear wer, fisc-wer, the Swedes gave it the name of fisk-gaerd. In Legibus Patriis, dicitur decipula, confecta ex contis in orbem positis, ad decipiendos pisces, qui immissi exitum non inveniunt; Ihre, vo. Gaerd, sepimentum.

To this term our yare seems immediately allied, the g being softened into y. It is to be observed that fi.hgarth, although not mentioned by Johns., is a term used in the O.E. laws, as would appear, precisely in the same sense with wear and our yare. Skinner refers to the 23d Henry VIII. c. 18. It is also used, S.B.

"Tenants who live on the banks of a burn sometimes build a fish-garth or dam, with an opening to receive a kind of osier basket, or what they call an hose-net for catching fish." P. Peterculter, Aberd. Statist. Acc. xvi. 389.

It confirms the idea, that wear, garth, and yare, are all from the same root, that the Sw. term for a warren, is kanin-gaerd, our cuningaire, in which the g is still retained, i. e. an inclosure for rabbits. Warren, indeed, in its primitive sense, denoted an inclosure for fishes and fowls, as well as for smaller

It may be supposed, that wer, and garth or yare, are derived from terms radically different, because we find not only MoesG. ward-jan, A.S. weard-ian custodire, be-wer-ian, defendere, and Su.G. waeria, id.; but MoesG. gards, in aurtigards hortus, as well as A.S. geard, Su.G. gaerd, Isl. gard-r, sepimentum. But the MoesG. and A.S. nouns are, I imagine, to be traced to the verbs ward-jan and weard-ian. Su.G. waerd-a custodire, tueri, is undoubtedly from the same source with gaerd-a, sepire. The latter merely expresses a particular mode of keeping or protecting; i. e. by means of a fence. The difference of form only illustrates, what is well known as a characteristic of the Goth. dialects, that g and u are often interchanged; and shews that this has been the case in a very early period. Perhaps we may view the Ital. and Fr. mode of pron. as uniting the different forms of the Goth, dialects, in the combination of g with u. V. Cruve.

YAIR-NET, YARE-NET, s. A long net extending into the bed of a river inclined upwards, and fixed by poles, S.B.

"Interrogated for the heritors, Whether the feith-nets, and conceit-net, and yare-net, are stentnets? depones, That they are not; and that no net[s] can be counted stent-nets, unless such as cross the water." State, Leslie of Powis, &c. 1805, p. 78.

The contrary, however, is asserted on the other side. "The conceit, and yare nets extend at least three fourths across the channel of the river, and are fixed, stented, and immoveable nets, which proprietors of the fishing are expressly discharged, by the foresaid decision, from using." Ibid. p. 356.

"That the yare-net is about thirty-six fathoms in length, and about two and one-half fathoms in depth; and the conceit-net is thirty fathoms in length, and two and one-half fathoms in depth; and the poles that fix each end of the yare-net may be about two fathoms and one-half in length." Ibid. p. 109.

YAKEE, s. A double tooth, whether in man or beast, Orkney.

This is undoubtedly allied to Isl. iaxl, a grinder, dens molaris, G. Andr. p. 131; and to ialk-r, which denotes feeble manducation, munching, Ibid. p. 129.

To YALD, v. a. To yield; pret. yald. So tyl hys hart stoundis the pryk of deith; He weltis ouer, and yaldis vp the breith. Doug. Virgil, 339. 40. The gaist he yald with habundance of blude. Ibid. 56. 50.

Isl. gialld-a, retribuere, luere.

YALD, YAULD, adj. Sprightly, alert; active, vigorous, S.A. Loth. A yauld ganger, a powerful walker.

I can see no reason why Sibb. should conjecture, that this may be from A.S. ield, barren.

Isl. gilld-r expresses the same idea; Viribus et virtute praestans; gilld-a, valere.

YALLOCH, s. A shout, a shrill cry; the act of yelling, S. also yalloch.

pstert Rutulianis samyn complenyng Wyth ane yalloch and carefull womentyng, Quhil all the hyllis rummesit thaym about, And fer on brede thik woddis gaif ane schout.

Doug. Virgil, 447. 4.

Su.G. gal-a to cry, to vociferate; gell-a, to resound; Belg. gill-en, to squeak, Sewel. To YAMER, YAMMER, YAWMER, v. n. 1. To shriek, to yell, to cry aloud.

The birsit baris and beris in thare styis Raring all wod furth quhrynis and wyld cryis, And grete figuris of wolfis eik in fere, Youland and yammer and grislie for to here.

Doug. Virgil, 204. 54.

Yamer, also yomerand, occurs, 8ir Gawan and Sir Gal. i. 7. rendered "muttering," in Gl. But from the connexion it evidently conveys a stronger idea.

There come a Lede of the Lawe, in londe is not to layne,

And glides to Schir Gawayne, the gates to gayne;

Yauland, and yomerand, with many loude yelles, Hit yaules, hit yamers, with waymyng wete.

2. It is now generally used, as signifying, to fret, to whine, to whimper, S.

It is surprising that Rudd. should say of a word, which has so many cognates; Vox, ut videtur. a sono confecta. Sibb. properly mentions Germ. jummer-en, plangere; jammer, luctus, planetus; A.S. geomr-ian [geomer-ian to groan, to grumble] and perhaps Lat. gem-ere.

It may be observed that yomerand most nearly resembles the A.S. v. while yamer has greater affinity to the Germ.

To the terms already mentioned, we may add A.S. geomer, plaintive; Su.G. jaemmer, a groan, Isl. ymr, whence ymr-a, to groan heavily. Perhaps the root is retained in Isl. ym-ia, to emit a querulous voice, to groan, whence ymr.

YAMER, YAWMER, YAMERING, s. 1. A cry, a yell.

The air was dirkit with the fowlis,

That come with yawmerss, and with yowlis. Dunbar, Bannatyne Prems, p. 22. st. 16.

YARD, YAIRD, s. A garden; properly of potherts; also called a kail-yard, S.

Vnto ane plesand grund cumin ar thay,— The lusty orchartis and the halesum yardis Of happy saulis and wele fortunate.

Doug. Virgil, 187. 18. "And trow nocht that he tholit na paine in his saule, for he said himself quhen he was in the yaird afore he was takin: Tristis est anima mea usque mortem." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, 1552, Fol. 102, b.

A.S. geard, Su.G. gaerd, Belg. gaarde, sepes, area clausa, septum. Gards has evidently the same signification in MoesG. aurtigards, a garden. I need scarcely say, that the E. term has the same origin, although it has borrowed its form from Ital. giardino, Hisp. gardin, Fr. jardin.

YARE, YHAR, YORE, adj. Ready, alert, in a state of preparation, S.B. Chaucer, id.

Doug. Virgil, 113. 52.

A.S. georne, georn, studious, diligent, careful, earnest. The latter is merely this word in the superlative form, geornest, geornost, most diligent; Su.G. gerna, anciently giuernt, Isl. girnt, Alem. gerno, libenter; solicite, vehementer. Yerne is also used by Chaucer as an adv. V. YHARN.

YARNETS, s. pl. An instrument for winding yarn, S.

YARPHA, s. 1. Peat full of fibres and roots, Orkney.

2. Peat combined with clay or sand; a denomination of soil, Orkney.

"This substance, combined with clay or with sand, forms a soil here as common as any other, and universally known by the name of Yarpha, or bog soil, whose characteristic is a black colour connected with the power of retaining moisture, which has been supposed to account for the dampness prevalent in the country." Barry's Orkney, p. 10.

Isl. jarp-ur signifies black, dark-coloured. But the radical term in yarpha seems to be iard, Su.G. jord, earth; perhaps originally the same with iardfall, eruptio terrae, Su.G. iordfall, sinking of the earth; or contr. from wordtorfva, turf, sod. Isl.. joerve, exarata gleba, arv-um.

YE, YIE, term. (corr. printed zie).

It has been supposed, that this had its rise among our ancestors, by the pronunciation of e mute, in words of Fr. origin, as is commonly done by the Dutch at present. In this manner chenyie is deduced from Fr. chaine, sainyie from saine. Gl.

Compl. vo. Chenyeis.

But there is no evidence that the Scots ever pronounced e mute. The form of many of our terminations seems to have proceeded from an imitation of the liquid sound used by the French, in consequence of g preceding n in the original word; or, where this was not the case, in consequence of the S. noun following the form of the verb which retained the sound of the Fr. infinitive or participle; as en-chainer, en-chainé. Failyie is merely Fr. faillir or failli; tailyie, a slice, taillir, or

In some instances, the term ye or yie has originat. ed from the softening of vo, or ve, the last syllable of some Lat. words. Thus assoilyie is from absolve, the beginning of a prayer for the dead, in the Romish Litany.

And ane vther yeilde was collected for resisting the rebelles in the North;" vo. Herreyelda.

It does not properly signify a gift: being evidently from A.S. geld, gild, a tax, tribute, custom; also, payment, compensation; from geld-an, gildan, to pay, to discharge a debt. Su.G. geld, what is expended, whether under the name of a fine or tribute; geld-a to pay. Hence, Germ. Belg. geld, money, geld-boete, a fine; Germ. geldstrafe, id. V. YEIL.

Montgomerie, Watson's Coll. iii. 4. "A yell sow was never good to grices;" S. Prov. Spoken to those, who, having no children of their own, deal harshly by other people's." Kelly, p. 1. An' dawtit, twal-pint Hawkie's gaen

As yell's the Bill.

Burns, iii. 73.

2. A cow, although with calf, is said to gang yeld, when her milk dries up, S.B. Thus, a yeld cow is distinguished from a ferry or farrow cow, which is one that continues to give milk for a longer time, as not being pregnant. In the same manner, a yeld nurse signifies a dry nurse. This is an improper sense.

"The yell cattle vary in numbers according to the season of the year—cattle not giving milk; N." P. Tungland, Galloway, Statist. Acc. ix. 317.

3. Applied to cattle or sheep that are too young to bear, Dumfr.

4. Applied metaph. to broth.

"Any thing is better than the yell kail, S. Prov. An apology for having little, or bad, flesh meat. Yell is properly what gives no milk; here it signifies, boil'd without meat, or having no butter."

Kelly, p. 42.

Both Rudd. and Sibb. derive it from A.S. eald, old. But there is no affinity. The origin is Isl. gelld, gall, infaecundus, effaetus; gelld aer, pecus sterile, non pracbens, aer signifying a ewe; gelldast, to give no milk, lactem cohibere; G. Andr. In like manner, gallvid signifies wood, or a tree, that bears no fruit; and gallnoet, E. gallnut, q. a nut that has no kernel: argalli, Specul. Regal., anni infoecunditas, annona declinans, q. a yeld year. Dan. gald, Su.G. gall, id. gallko, vacca sterilis, precisely our yeld cow. Ihre views Isl. galle, vitium, defectus, as the origin; whence gallad-ur, vitiosus. He has a suspicion, he says, that the Isl. word properly denotes that kind of defect which is caused by magical arts, and that it may thus be derived from galld-r, incantatio. This conjecture, indeed, may seem to have considerable connexion with our term, in one sense; as almost all the Northern nations have formed the notion, that milk is peculiarly under the influence of witchcraft, as well as cattle in general.

Germ. gall also signifies barren. But Wachter assigns to it a different origin; Sterilis, quia castrato YELDRING, YELDRIN, s. A yellow-hammer, S. Emberiza citrinella, Linn.; tautologically yellow-yeldrin, also yellow-yite. Yold-ring, A. Bor. Youlring, Sibb. Scot.

"Citrinella, the Yellow Youlring." P. 18. An ingenious friend has supplied me with the following account of the vulgar prejudice against this

"The superstition of the country has rendered it a very common belief among the illiterate and child. ren, that this bird some how or other receives a drop of the Devil's blood every May morning. Children hang by the neck all the yellow-hammers they can lay hold of. They often take the bare gorbals, or unfledged young, of this bird, and suspend them by a thread tied round the neck, to one end of a crossbeam, which has a small noose hung from the other: they then suddenly strike down the stone-end, and drive the poor bird into the air. This operation they call Spangie-hewit." Hewit seems derived from A.S. heuet, heuod, the head. Spang is to fly off with elasticity; q. to make the head spring or fly

In other parts of S. this devoted bird's communication with the Devil is believed to be far more frequent. For it is said to receive three drops of his blood every morning.

The first part of the word is evidently from A.S. geole, Su.G. gul, yellow. The term. rin, properly, as would seem, ring, may respect the yellow ring which at least partly adorns the neck of this bird. A.S. geole wearte, luscinus, (for luscina) Gl. Aelfr.

To YELL, v. n. To roll, a term applied to a ship. Yawl, id. is used as a sea-term, E.

- By her tumbling and yelling the mast shook so loose, that Mr. Robert, the old man being dammisht and mightless, had much ado to fasten the same." Mr. Ja. Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 179.

YELLY, YEALTOU, used as an interj. expressive surprise, S.B. "Yelly, yea will you, [rather, ye]; yealtou, yea wilt thou?" Gl. Shirr.

Ye bla' my whistle! It wad fell ye—I lat you halt a while! Na, yelly, 1 wad be laith.

Shirrefs' Poems, p. xix.

Geme, s. is used by Chaucer, Gamelyn, v. 1633.
Take, yonge meine, geme.

A.S. gem-an, gym-an, to take care of, to keep, to observe, to attend; Isl. geym-a, Su.G. goem-a, anc. gym-a, animum attendere, custodire; Ihre. Franc. gom-a, Alem. goum-a, koum-a, Teut. goom-en, id. These verbs are nearly allied to MoesG. gaum-ja, videre. For seeing and preserving, have been evidently viewed as cognate ideas. V. Wer, v.

The various Northern verbs, which are synon. of yeme, have been traced to Isl. gaa, attendere, prospicere; also, as a s. cura attenta. V. Ihre, vo. Goem, and Gl. Gunnlaug. S.

YEMAR, YHEMAR, s. A keeper, one who has any object in charge. This designation is given to a groom.

And gyff hys yhemar oucht gruchys, Luk that thow tak hym magre his.

Barbour, ii. 124. MS.

YEMSELL, YHEMSELL, s. 1. The act of keeping, custody.

And Waltre Stewart of Scotland,
That than wes young and awenand,
And syne in laucht wes to the King,
Haid sa gret will and sic yarning

Ibid. ii. 136. MS.

"Yemsel, of ane castell, the custodie and keeping of ane castell.—For yeme, in our auld language, is to observe and keepe, as quhen in time of singular battell, they quha standes by, and behaldes, ar commanded to keepe, & yeme the time of the derenyie, the weapons fra the hands of the appealer and defendour." Verb. Sign. in vo.

2. It is used nearly in the same sense with mod. wardship, guardianship, tutorage.

And syne the thrid bataill thai gaff Till Waltre Stewart for to leid; And to Douglas douchty of deid. Thai war cosyngis in ner degre, Tharfor till him betaucht wes he. For he wes young, bot nocht for thi. I trow he sall sa manlily Do his dewoir, and wirk sa weill, That hym sall nede ne mar yemseill:

Barbour, xi. 329. MS. Yeinseill, Ed. Pink. Skinner ludicrously derives this s. from the A.S. and Teut. particle ge and mese a table. But it retains the very form of Isl. geimsla, Su.G. goemsel, custodia. As Su.G. goema obliquely signifies, to hide, goemsel also denotes a lurking place. YERD, YERTH, s. Earth, soil. V. ERD. Also, To YERD, to bury. V. ERD, v.

Spalding uses the term in sense 3.

"They found yerded in the yard of Drum, a trunk filled with silver work," &c. Troubles, ii. 184.

Yerthe sometimes occurs in O.E.

"I take one out of the yerthe that was buryed;" Palsgraue.

YERD-FAST, adj. Firmly fastened in the ground,

Now thy groans in dowy dens The yerd-fast stanes do thirle.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 6. Some magical influence is, by the grossly superstitious, ascribed to a stone of this description.

Her feet fixt 'gainst a yird-fast stane, Her back leant to a tree,

An' glowrin up, she made her mane; O, new Moon! I hail thee.'

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 32. V. Mone.

A.S. earde-faest is used in a general sense, as signifying, "placed, planted, settled, founded, grounded;" Somner. Hence, eardefaest beon; in loco habitationis suae perdurare; Oros. 5. 4. ap. Lye. Isl. iardfastr stein, saxum in terra immotum.

YERD-MEAL, s. " Earth mould, church-yard dust," Aberd. Gl. Shirr.

YERE, adv. Certainly. To yere, too surely, or truly.

Or quhat bettir may I beleue, than he has said?— Quhidder gif he for reuth furth yet anis ane

Or of his luf had pieté? Na not to yere. Doug. Virgil, 112. 42.

Rudd. overlooks this term, which is from A.S. geare, gere, certo. Geare is also used as an adj. He wiston geare; They were sure; Luk. xx. 6.

YERESTRENE, s. " The night before last." Gl. Sibb. This seems a corr. of Here-yestreen, q. v. also Here-yesterday. To YERK, v. a. "To bind tightly, as with a small cord;" Gl. Sibb.

He derives it from A.S. gerd-an, cingere. If not from gearc-ian, parare; abbrev. perhaps from gerecc-an, corrigere, regere; whence ge-reccelic, strictus, firmus.

To YERK, v. n. 1. To be in a state of fermentation, a term applied to beer, Ang.

Perhaps a frequentative from Germ. gaer-a, Su.G. goer-a, effervescere. Drickat goeres; cerevisia, addito fermento, effervescit. It may, however, be merely a peculiar use of the E. v. because of the quickness of motion.

- 2. "To do any thing with agility," Gl. Shirr. S.B. This differs from the E. v. only as being used in a neut. sense.
- 3. To be busy, or keenly engaged, applied to the mind.

"I will say nothing, but I will yerk at the thinking." S. Prov. Kelly, p. 182.

Su.G. yrk-a, however, has a sense somewhat analogous; postulare, insistere; Seren. vo. Jerk.

To YERK, YARK, v. a. To beat, to strike smartly, S. jerk, E., yark, A. Bor.

But ere the sport be done, I trow Their skins are gayly yarkit And peel'd thir days.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 74.

A.S. gerecc-an, to correct, to punish; Isl. hreckia to beat, pulsare; jarke, pes feriens.

YERK, s. A smart blow, a jerk, S.

YERN-BLITER, s. The name given to the snipe, S.B. sometimes pron. yern-bluter. It appears to be the common snipe, or Scolopax Gallinago

"The niest morning they had me up afore the sky, an' I believe afore the levrick or yern-bliter began to sing, an' hurl'd me awa to Portsmouth." Journal from London, p. 9. V. EARN-BLITER. To YESK, v. n. To hiccup, S. V. YEISK.

To YESTER, v. a. To discompose. I never yester'd him; I never gave him any disturbance,

This is perhaps the same with Gaster, Essex, to startle, scare, or affright suddenly; or with Gaster'd, as used by Beaumont and Fletcher.

"If the fellow be out of his wits, then will I never have any more wit whilst I live; either the sight of the lady has gaster'd him, or else he's drunk." V. Divers. Purley, p. 461.

Mr. Tooke mentions Gaster in connexion with Agast.

It may be allied to Su.G. yster, ferox, or A.S. ge-styr-an turbare. Seren. derives agast from A.S. gast spectrum, q. terrified in consequence of seeing a spectre. Junius gives the same etymon.

YESTREEN, YISTRENE, s. Yesternight, S. Lat vs go birn: for in my sleip yistrene The figur of Cassandra prophetes Gaif me birnand fyre brandis.-

A.S. geat, O.Belg. gat, id. Su.G. gaatt, postis januae; Isl. gat-r, guett-er, ostium, janua, Verel. gaatt, giaett, ante latus, latera ostii, G. Andr. p. 84. The origin is probably gat, foramen, from gat-a, perforare; as door has been derived from Germ. thor, thur, foramen. It may, however, be from Su.G. gaa, to go, q. a passage; as door has also been traced to MoesG. thairh, A.S. thruh, per, through, because it is that by which we pass from one place to another. V. Doer, Ihre.

To YET, YETT, YYT, v. a. 1. To pour, S. yet, yett, poured.

On yet, poured on. Ouer al the schip discendis the perrellus low: Thare was na strenth of vailyeant men to wale, Nor large fludis on yet that mycht auale. Ibid. 150. 44.

Belg. giet-en, A.S. geot-an, Isl. Su.G. giut-a, MoesG. giat-an, Germ. Alem. giezz-en, Germ. giess-en, fundere; Su.G. utgiut-a, effundere. Hence Jute, to tipple, jute, weak and bad liquor, S. q. v. Exte, Exmore, to pour in, is from the same origin. 2. To cast metals. Yyt, molten, cast.

Sum gonkis quhil the glas pyg grow al of gold

YETLAND, YETTLIN, adj. Of or belonging to "The ploughs in general are of Small's construction. They have a cast yetland mould-board, which is curved." P. Ormistonn, E. Loth. Statist. Acc. iv. 167.

A. Bor. yetling, a small iron boiler, is evidently from the same origin. The term is also used as a s., pron. yettlin, S. Su.G. giut-a is commonly used in this sense. Giuta en klocka, to cast a bell; giuta stycken, to cast guns. Teut. ghiet-en, id. Metael ghieten, conflare, fundere; ghieter van metael, fusor, conflator; Kilian. Germ. giess-en, id. Belg. een klok gieten, to cast a bell.

YETHER, s. "The mark left by tight binding, as with a small cord," Gl. Sibb., Border; probably allied to A. Bor. yeather, " a flexible twig, used for binding hedges;" Grose.

To YETT, v. a. To fasten in the firmest manner, to rivet, Loth. Ruve, synon. Perhaps allied to Isl. gat-a, perforare.

YEVERY, adj. Greedy, voracious.

"Gif thay war skalit, vtheris (quhilkis war mair yevery and tume) suld licht in thair rowmes, and souk out the residew of hir blude, quhilk war vnproffitabil." Bellend. Cron. B. xii. c. 7. Alias (muscas) recentes ac famelicas, Boeth.

A.S. gifer, gifra, gifre, avidus, vorax, rapax, gulosus. Wael gifre fugel, a fowl fond of carrion; gifer, a glutton. Perhaps Su.G. giri, girig, and Teut. ghierigh, avidus, are allied.

To YHARN, v. a. Eagerly to desire. The kynryk yharn I nocht to have, Bot gyff it fall off rycht to me.

Barbour, i. 158. MS.

A.S. georn-ian, gyrn-an, desiderare, concupiscere; MoesG. gairn-an, Su.G. girn-as, Isl. girnast, cupere. V. YARNE.

YHUMAN, YUMAN, YOMAN, YEOMAN, S. 1. A person of inferior station; as, a husbandman or farmer.

" Item, all guha are inferiour in parentage, are husbaudmen, (or yeomen). And the Cro of ane husbandman, is saxtene kye." Reg. Maj. B. iv. c. 36. §. 4. Rustici, Lat.

This has been deduced from Fris. gaeman, comp. of gue, Belg. guw, gouwe, a country, a village, and man, q. the inhabitant of a village. But perhaps it is rather from Teut. ghe-meyn, A.S. geman, communis, vulgaris.

As Junius renders gaeman, incola ejusdem pagi, Sibb. views it as "corresponding with Scot. Portioner, the owner of a small piece of land." Yeoman, in E., indeed bears this sense; as denoting "a man of a small estate in land." But I have met with no evidence that it was ever thus used in S. When Skene gives it as synon. with husbandman, we cannot suppose that he understood the latter as denoting a landed proprietor.

2. It seems to signify a farmer's servant. In the contré thar wonnyt ane That husband wes, and with his fe Offtsyss hay to the peile led he .-And him selff, that wes dour and stout, Suld by the wayne gang ydilly; And ane yuman, wycht and hardy, Befor suld drive the wayne; and ber Ane hachat, that war scharp to scher, Wndre his belt .-

Barbour, x. 172. MS.

The term, however, may be here used according to the signification following.

3. It also denotes a peasant or inhabitant of the country employed as a foot-soldier. Yhumanry, the peasantry armed on foot.

And of all Irland assemblit he Bath burges and chewalry; And hobilleris and yhumanry .-And Schyr Richard of Clar in hy, Quhen Schyr Eduuard wes passyt by, Send lycht yomen, that weill couth schout To bykkyr the rerward apon fute.— Bot Schyr Colyne Cambell, that ner Was by quhar thai twa yhumen wer, Schowtand amang thaim hardily, Prykyt on thaim in full gret hy. 4. As used by Blind Harry, it denotes soldiers on horseback.

YHUMANRY, s. V. preceding word.
YIE, term. (printed Zie). V. YE.
YIELD OF THE DAY, the influence of the sun; also, the height of the day. When the ice melts, although there be no proper thaw, it is said to be owing to the yield of the day, Ang.

This may be from E. yield, as denoting that the frost gives way. But it might be traced to A.S. eld, S. eild, age, q. the advancement of the day, analogous to the use of the term height. Isl. ellding. age, is used somewhat in a similar sense. Nactur ellding, senium noctis, diluculum; the age of the night, the dawn of day. So in Lat. senium lunae denotes the last quarter of the moon.

YILL, s. Ale, S. This is the vulgar pron. in the West and South of S. "Yill-wife, or browster-wife, a woman who brewed and sold

Sibb. writes earm, yearm, explaining it, " to teaze or importune in the whinning manner of a mendicant;" and deriving it from Teut. arm, pauper, MoesG. arm-an, misereri. Perhaps more immediately allied to Isl. harm-a, lugeo, plango; harm-r luctus; G. Andr. p. 107. Jarm-a, balare, jarmur, vox avium; Verel.

Morison's Poems, p. 121.

Also written Ewden-drift, q. v. This may be formed from the old part. pa. of yield, q. snow which is driven as yielding to the force of the wind. Did we seek a more antiquated source, we might suppose a resemblance to the name of Odin, A.S. Eowthen the great deity of the Goths, q. the effect of the power of Odin; especially, as, according to their mythology, he had the direction of the air and tempests.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 218. To YOUK, YUKE, YUCK, v. n. To itch, to be itchy, S. yuck, id. Lincoln.

Junius mentions this as a S. word, referring to the Prov., " I'll gar you scart where you youk not; i. e. I'll make you scratch where you itch not." This Prov. is used metaph.; as when a parent threatens to beat a child. It is commonly expressed in this manner; I'll gar you claw where ye're no youky.

It seems also to signify the causing of pain or vexation of mind without any previous apprehension.

By the way, it may be observed that A.S. gist, Su.G. gaest, Isl. jast-r, which all denote the flower of beer in a state of fermentation, are to be traced to Alem. ges-en, Su.G. gaes-a, jaes-a, to ferment. Su.G. jul, Dan. jule, juledag, Isl. jol, A.S. geola, geohol, gehhol, gehul, id.

Mr. Pinkerton has justly observed, that this was " originally the Gothic Pagan feast of Yule or Jul;" Gl. Maitl. Poems. The ancient Goths had three great religious festivals in the year. Of these Yule was the first. It was celebrated at the time of the winter solstice, in honour of the Sun, whom the Goths worshipped under the name of Thor. As at this period the Sun began to return, they expressed their joy in this manner, and endeavoured to secure a propitious year. Mallet's North. Autiq. i. 130. 131.

It must be acknowledged, that the same confusion may be remarked in the Gothic mythology, as in that of Greece and Rome. The attributes of one deity are often transferred to another. Hence the Sun is sometimes recognised by the name of Odin; and we are informed, that this deity was denominated, by the inhabitants of the North, Julvatter, or the Father of Yule, because this feast was observed in honour of him. V. Keysler, Antiq. Septent. p. 159. This confusion may in part be accounted for, by a circumstance which Mallet has taken notice of. The different northern nations had their partialities; and as they all observed the feast of Jul, some might ascribe the honour to one deity, and others to another. "The Danes seem to have paid the highest honours to Odin. The inhabitants of Norway and Iceland appear to have been under the immediate protection of Thor; and the Swedes had chosen Freya for their tutelar deity." North. Antiq. i. 97.

I. Many conjectures have been formed as to the origin of the Name. Some have derived it from Gr. 18205, which denoted a hymn that was wont to be sung by women in honour of Bacchus, as appears from the following verse:

Δευδαλίδας τευχεσα καλας ηειδεν ιελες.

'' And preparing the salted flour, she sung the plea-

"And preparing the salted flour, she sung the pleasant Iuli."

Didymus and Athenaeus assert, that the hymn was in honour of Ceres; and the same thing is intimated by Theodoret, in his work De Materia et Mundo, when he says; "Let us not sing the Iulus to Ceres, nor the Dithyrambus to Bacchus." By the way, it may be remarked, that, according to the learned Verelius, Ceres was by the Goths called Frigga or Freia. Not. in Hervarar S. p. 52. Hickes observes, that this agrees very well with the Yulegames of our ancestors, who celebrated this feast after the completion of harvest, and at the commencement of a new year, over the labours of which Ceres was supposed to preside.

It has been objected to this derivation, that it is improbable that the Goths would borrow the term from the Greeks. But if we could view the words as having a common origin, it might rather be supposed that the Greeks had borrowed theirs from the Goths, as the Pelasgi seem to have been of Scythian extract. With our ancestors, however, the worship of Ceres was certainly appropriated to Freya, while Yule was consecrated to the Sun.

G. Andr. very fancifully derives Isl. Jol, the name of this feast, from Heb. j, jobal, i. e. jubilee. Others have traced it to Lat. jubilum. Some have more reasonably referred to 12, gul, laetari.

Because the 25th of December was reckoned the middle of winter by Julius Cesar, it has been conjectured that the Goths gave the name of Jul to this day. Venerable Bede, in one passage, seems to embrace this opinion. V. Worm. Fast. Dan. L. i. c. 7. Our Buchanan, having observed that Yule was a revival of the ancient Saturnalia, adds, that the name of Julius Cesar was substituted for that of Saturn. Nostri Julia id festum vocant Caesaris videlicet nomine pro Saturno substituto. Hist. L. i. c. 24.

But it is extremely improbable, that Yule should receive its designation, among the Goths, from Julius Cesar. "For what reason," as Loccenius inquires, "would they give this honour to him, who, so far from subduing them, never came into their territories?" According to Strabo, who lived under Augustus and Tiberius, the regions beyond the Elbe, where the sea was interposed, were quite unknown to the Romans in his time. Lib. vii. p. 249. V. Loccen. Antiq. SueoGoth. p. 23.

Wormius, although in one place he seems disposed to concede, that the Cimbric name of this feast was adopted out of compliment to Julius, elsewhere prefers a different hypothesis. "The months called Giuli (including part of December and January) receive their denomination from the retrograde motion of the sun, causing the increase of the day.—The name originates, if I mistake not, from the winter solstice, because then the sun seems as it were to rest, before he approaches nearer to the Equator. For, to this day, huile denotes rest, as at huile, to rest; and the change of H into G is easy." Fast. Dan. p. 41.

The A.S. gave the name of Geola to two of their months, December and January, calling the first Aerre-geola, or the first Yulc, and the second Aeftera-geola, or the later Yule. Bede supposes that they received this designation, a conversione Solis, in auctum diei, from the sun turning back, to the lengthening of the day; the one preceding, and the other following, this change. De Temporum Rat. c. 13. Ihre adopts this idea, observing that C.B. chayl signifies retrogradation.

Nearly allied to this, is the opinion of those who derive it from Su G. huel, or rather hiul, rota, a wheel. Ihre has observed, (vo. Hiul) that, in the Edda, fagra hwel, i. e. beautiful wheel, is one of the designations of the Sun. Perhaps, it may be added, that a wheel seems to have been the emblem of the sun, in the old Danish Fasti.

Others understand the name as simply signifying The Feast. The learned Hickes views i or j, and A.S. ge, merely as intensive particles, conjoined with Isl. and Su.G. ocl, commessatio, compotatio, convivium, symposium. The term literally signifies ale or beer, the chief liquor among the Goths; and metonymically, a feast.

In Isl. i indeed is an intensive particle, often prefixed to words for the greater emphasis; as igillde, a great price, isurt, very bitter, igraenn, very green, &c. Dr. Thorkelin adopts this etymon; Fragments of Irish History, p. 94. V. Mallet's North. Antiq. ii. 68. Gl. Eddae Saemund. vo. Aul. It is a singular coincidence, that Ir. and Gael. cuirm, which denotes ale, also signifies a feast or banquet.

Isl. jol has also been viewed (q. jo-ol) as "denominated in honour of the god Jaw or the Sun. As ol, according to the original use of the word, signifies nourishment in general, from ek el alo, and thus includes the idea both of meat and drink, it more especially denotes a joyous and splendid feast. Very fat meat is called jolfeitt kist; and a well-fed horse, allin hestr. Some have derived Jol from the eating of horse-flesh. This animal, indeed, was sacred to the Sun (Jaw), and was doubtless, in ancient times, sacrificed in honour of this deity." Gl. Eddae Saemund., vo. Jolnar.

Passing a variety of other etymons, I shall only add that of several learned writers, who derive the term from MocsG. uil, the Sun; C.B. haul, Arm. gouil, hiaul, id. The resemblance of the Gr. name of this luminary, name, has been remarked.

Where there is so great a diversity of opinions, I cannot pretend to determine which of them ought to be preferred. I shall only say, that the latter derivation, and that from huel, rota, together with that of Hickes, seem to have the chief claim to attention.

II. This festival, among the Northern nations, was the great season of SACRIFICE. On this occasion human victims seem generally to have been offered to their false gods. According to Ditmar, (in Chron.), at this general convention, the Danes once in nine years increased the number of human sacrifices to ninety-nine. Besides these, they offered as many horses, dogs, and cocks in place of hawks. V. Ihre, vo. Hoek, p. 912.

The Persians sacrificed horses to the Sun. This noble animal was, indeed, sacred to him. We must view it as a remnant of the same Eastern idolatry, that the Goths offered horses at the feast of Yule. V. El. Sched. de Dîs. German. p. 102.

"The Greenlanders at this day keep a Sun-feast at the winter solstice, about Dec. 22. to rejoice at the return of the Sun, and the expected renewal of the hunting season." Crantz's Hist. Greenland, i. 176. V. Mallet, ii. 68.

The Goths used also to sacrifice a boar. For this animal, as well as the horse, was, according to their mythology, sacred to the Sun. To this day it is customary, among the peasants in the North of Europe, at the time of Christmas, to make bread in the form of a boar-pig. This they place upon a table, with bacon and other dishes; and, as a good omen, they expose it as long as the feast continues. For to leave it uncovered, is reckoned a bad omen, and totally incongruous to the manners of their ancestors. They call this kind of bread Julagalt; Verel. Not. ad Hervarar S. p. 139. For a fuller account of this ancient custom, V. MAIDEN, s. 2.

Hence, as has been observed, we may perceive what is meant in the Indiculus Superstitionum et Paganiarum Synodo Liptiniensi subjunctus, sect. 26. when we meet with this title, De Simulacro de Consparsa Farina. Keysler, ut sup. p. 159. 160.

In our own country, the use that is made of the Maiden, or last handful of corn that has been cut down in harvest, bears a striking analogy to this custom. It is divided among the horses or cows, on the morning of Yule, sometimes of the new year, " to make them thrive all the year round." To this custom Burns seems to allude, in his beautiful Poem, entitled, The Auld Farmer's New-year Morning Salutation to his Auld Mare Maggie, on giving her the accustomed ripp of corn to hansel in the new year, iii. 140.

A guid New-year I wish thee! Maggie, Hae, there's a ripp to thy auld baggie, &c.

This custom varies in different places. In some, the horses generally get a feed of corn on the morning of Yule; and the Maideu is given to the horse called the Winder, which leads the rest in the plough.

The ancient Romans had a rite analogous to this, in the celebration of the Feriae Sementinae, a festival appointed to be kept at the beginning of seedtime, for imploring their deities, particularly Ceres and Tellus, to give success to their labours. On this occasion, the oxen, used for labour, were crowned with garlands, and received a double portion of food. In allusion to this custom, Ovid says;

State coronati plenum ad praesepe juvenci.

Fast. Lib. i.

Something similar to the custom of the Julagalt has evidently subsisted in the Orkney Islands, although the vestiges of it are not now understood.

"In a part of the parish of Sandwick, every family, that has a herd of swine, kills a sow on the 17th of December, and thence it is called Sow-day. There is no tradition as to the origin of this practice." Statist. Acc. xvi. 460.

This, indeed, may be viewed as a relique of the heathen worship of the ancient Goths, in sacrificing a boar to the Sun.

It is the opinion of some learned writers, that the Sun was worshipped under the name of Saturn. Servius (in Virgil. Lib. i.) says, that the Assyrians worshipped Saturn under the name of Bel, and that the Sun and Saturn are the same. V. Minut. Fel. Not. p. 45. 46. It is certainly a well-founded idea, that Bel or Belus, the great god of the Chaldeans, was the Sun. This is asserted by Macrobius, Lib. i. c. 22. Uranus, i. e. the Heaven, being the father of Saturn, and Rhea, or the Earth, his sister and wife; it seems highly probable, that the worship of Saturn was originally derived, by the western nations, from that of the Sun as adored in the east. At the same time, it is evident that they incorporated many things of their own into this part of their mythology. But as they had different deities that bore the same name, they seem to have often jumbled together allegories concerning nature, the history of their departed heroes, and mere fables, in their accounts of one particular deity.

By supposing that Saturn was another name for the Sun, we can easily account for the striking similarity of the rites used by the Romans in their Saturnalia, celebrated in the latter part of the month of December, to those of the Northern nations. Nay, as the Celts undoubtedly worshipped the Sun under the name of Bel or Belenus, and as some of the most solemn acts of the Druidical worship were performed about this season; we find Goths, Celts, and Romans, conspiring in the observation of a great feast at the time of the winter solstice.

As the Druids then employed their golden bill, for cutting the mistletoe, it is remarkable, that the falx, the bill or scythe, was the badge of Saturn, because he was supposed to preside over agriculture; Rosin. p. 294. Banier's Mythol. ii.

His worship, in another respect, agrees with that of the Sun. For it seems to be admitted, that human sacrifices had been offered to him by the Carthaginians; Banier, ibid. p. 258. In the same manner the Pelasgi are said to have worshipped him; Rosin. ut sup.

A custom, similar to that of the Julagalt already described, prevailed among the ancient Italians, in the worship of Saturn. We are informed by Dionysius of Halicarnassus, that Hercules, on his return from Spain to Italy, abolished the horrid custom of offering human sacrifices to Saturn; and, having erected an altar to him on the Saturnine mount, presented those offerings, which the Greeks call runala axva, which, according to the Scholiast on Thucydides, were of paste figured like animals; Banier's Mythol. B. i. c. 3. p. 259.

Something of the same kind has been observed among the Egyptians. According to Jerome, indeed, it would seem to have been a general custom among the heathen, to distinguish the end of the old year, or the beginning of the new, by peculiar religious ceremonies.

The passage I refer to, is his comment on these words, Isa. lxv. 11. "That prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish the drink-offering unto that number." He renders it, "That place a table to Fortune, and pour out upon it;" or, according to the Septuagint, " pour out a drink-offering to the daemon." Then he says; "But there is an ancient idolatrous custom in all cities, and especially in Egypt and in Alexandria, that on the last day of the year and of the last month, they place a table covered with meats of different kinds, and a cup mixed with honey, expressive of abundance, either of the past, or of the future year." These words, That prepare a table for that troop, are viewed by the learned Vitringa, as respecting the worship of Apollo or the Sun, who, he apprehends, is there in Heb. called Gad; as he renders Meni, explained in our version, "that number," the Moon. In Isa. lxv. 11. V. Mone.

In our own country, there are still several vestiges of this idolatry. In Angus, he, who first opens the door on Yule-day, expects to prosper more than any other member of the family during the future year, because, as the vulgar express it, "he lets in Yule." The door being opened, it is customary with some to place a table or chair in it, covering it with a clean cloth, and, according to their own language, to "set on it bread and cheese to Yule." Early in the morning, as soon as any one of the family gets out of bed, a new broom besom is set at the back of the outer door. The design is, "to let in Yule." These gross superstitions, and the very modes of expression used, have undoubtedly had a heathen origin; for Yule is thus not only personified, but treated as a deity, who receives an obla-

It is also very common to have a table covered, in the house, from morning to evening, with bread and drink on it, that every one who calls may take a portion: and it is deemed very ominous, if one come into a house, and leave it without participation. However many call on this day, all must partake of the cheer provided.

It was customary with the Romans, at this season, to cover tables, and set lamps on them. This is one of the observances prohibited as heathenish, in the early canons of the Church. V. GYSAR.

Here I may also mention some other ridiculous rites practised on this day. Any servant, who is supposed to have a due regard to the interests of the family, and at the same time not emancipated from the yoke of superstition, is careful to go early to the well, on Christmas morning, to draw water, to draw corn out of the stack, and also to bring in kale from the kitchen-garden. This is meant to ensure prosperity to the family.

A similar superstition is, for the same reason, still observed by many on the morning of the New-year. One of a family watches the stroke of twelve, goes to the well as quickly as possible, and carefully skims it. This they call " getting the scum or ream (cream) of the well."

This superstitious rite, in the South of S., is observed on the morning of New-year's day.

Twall struck.—Twa neebour hizzies raise;

An', liltin, gaed a sad gate;

'The flower o' the well to our house gaes, 'An' I'll the boniest lad get.'

"Upon the morning of the first day of the new year, the country lasses are sure to rise as early as possible, if they have been in bed, which is seldom the case, that they may get the flower, as it is called, or the first pail-full of water from the well. The girl, who is so lucky as to obtain that prize, is supposed to have more than a double chance of gaining the most accomplished young man in the parish. As they go to the well, they chant over the words, which are marked with inverted commas." Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 30.

This seems to be a very ancient superstition; and may perhaps be viewed as a vestige of the worship of wells, which prevailed among the Picts. This rite was not unknown to the Romans. Virgil attri-butes the observation of it to Aeneas. The act of skimming water with the hand was one of the rites necessary in order to successful augury.

- Et sic affatus ad undam Processit, summoque hausit de gurgite lymphas, Multa deos orans, oneravitque aethera votis.

Virg. ix. 23.

Or, as it is rendered by the Bishop of Dunkeld: And thare withal with wourdis augural, Eftir thare spaying cerymonis divinal, Vnto the flude anone furth steppis he, And of the stremys crop ane littl we

The wattir liftis up into his handis, Ful gretumlie the Goddis, cuhare he standis, Besekand til attend til his praier.

Doug. Virgil, 274. 15.

The stremys crop, i. c. the surface of the stream. III. Yule, as has been already observed, was celebrated as a FEAST, among the ancient Goths. At this time, those who were related had the closest intercourse. They used by turns to feast with each other. These entertainments they called Offergilden: for the term gild denotes a fraternity or association, for the purpose of having money, meat, drink, &c. in common. Keysler. Antiq. Septent. p. 349. Thence gild or guild among us denotes a society possessing a common stock.

It was also customary during Yule, particularly in Sweden, for different families to meet together in one village, and to bring meat and drink with them, for the celebration of the feast. The same custom was observed, when there was a general concourse to the place where one of their temples stood. Erat veterum more receptum, ut cum sacrificia erant celebranda, ad templum frequentes convenirent cives omnes, ferentes secum singuli victum et commeatum, quo per sacrificiorum solennia uterentur, singuli etiam cerevisiam, quae isto in convivio adhiberetur. Snorr. Sturl. Heimskring. S. Hakonar, c.

I need not say, that this is most probably the origin of the custom still preserved among us, of relations and friends feasting in each other's houses, at this time. The vulgar, in the Northern counties of S., have also a custom which greatly resembles the Offergilden. On the morning of the new year, it is common for neighbours to go into each others houses, and to club their money in order to send out for drink, to welcome in the year. This is done in private houses.

During the times of heathenism, the solemnities of Yule lasted three days. The festival seems to have been sometimes continued for eight days. Ha-kon Skulderbreds S. c. 11. 14.

The festive observation of this season, even where there is no idea of sanctity in relation to the supposed date of our Saviour's birth, is far more general in the N. of S., than in other parts of the country. There is scarcely a family so poor, as not to have a kind of feast on Yule. Those have butcher-meat in their houses on this day, who have it at no other time; it being the day appropriated for the meeting of all the relations of a family.

Among the lower classes, it is universally observed according to the Old Style. "Our fathers," say they, "observed it on this day;" and, "They may alter the style, but they cannot alter the seasons."

The ancient inhabitants of the North were never at a loss for the means of celebrating their Yule. Johnstone (Antiq. Celto-Normann.) has a Note referring to this subject, which exhibits their character in its true light. "The Scandinavian expeditions," he says, "were anciently conducted in the following manner. A chieftain sailed, with a few ships, for Britain, and collected all the scattered adventurers he could find in his way. They landed on the coast, and formed a temporary fortress. To this strong hold they drove all the cattle, and having salted them, the freebooters returned home, where they spent their Jol, or brumal feast, with much glee. Such an expedition was called a Strandhoggua, or strand slaughter." P. 65.

IV. The GIFTS, now generally conferred at the New-year, seem to have originally belonged to Yule. Among the Northern nations, it was customary for subjects, at this season, to present gifts to the sovereign. These were denominated Jolagiafir, i. e. Yule-gifts. They were Benevolences of that description, which, if not given cheerfully, the prince considered himself as having a right to extort. Hence, it is said of Hacon, King of Norway, A. 1093. Hann tok tha oc af vid tha iolagiafir; Is quoque tributa, quae donorum Jolensium nomine solvi debebant, eis remisit. Johnstone, Antiq. Celto-Scand. p. 230.

The Romans, at this season, were wont to send presents of sweetmeats, such as dried figs, honey, &c. to which they gave the name of Strenae. This was meant as a good omen; and, by this substantial emblem, they also expressed their wishes, that their friends might enjoy the sweets of the year on which they entered; Rosin. Antiq. p. 29. 250. The custom which prevails in S., of presenting what the vulgar call a sweetic-skon, or a loaf enriched with raisins, currants, and spiceries, has an evident analogy to this.

In some of the northern counties of S., the vulgar would reckon it a bad omen, to enter a neighbour's house, on New-year's day, empty-handed. It is common to carry some trifling present; as, a bit of bread, a little meal, or a piece of money.

Those gifts were also called by the Romans Sa_{-} turnalitia; Rosin. p. 294. Saturnalia,—says Ter. tullian, strenae captandae, et septimontium, et brumae, et carae cognationis honoraria exigenda omnia, &c. De Idololatria, c. 10. V. also his work, De Fuga in Persecutione, c. 13.

Tertullian severely reprehends the Christians, for their compliance with the heathen, in paying some respect to these customs. "By us," he says, " who are strangers to sabbaths, and new moons, once acceptable to God, the Saturnalia and the feasts of January, and Brumalia, and Matronalia, are frequented; gifts are sent hither and thither, there is the noise of the Strenae, and of games and of feasting. O! better faith of the nations in their own religion, which adopts no solemnity of the Christians." De Idololatria, c. 14. We accordingly find that the Strenae were prohibited by the Christian church. V. Rosin. Antiq. p. 29. and vo.

The Strenue are traced as far back as to king Tatius, who, at this season, used to receive branches of a happy or fortunate tree from the grove of Strenia, as favourable omens with respect to the newyear; Q. Symmach. ap. Rosin. p. 28.

It appears that, in consequence of the establish. ment of the monarchy under Augustus, all orders of people were expected to present New-years-gifts by the emperors themselves: Sucton, in August, c. 57. During the reign of this prince, these were given at the Capitol. But Caligula was so lost to a sense of shame, as to publish an edict expressly requiring such gifts; and to stand in the porch of the palace, on the Calends of January, in order to receive those which people of all descriptions brought to him; Sueton. in Calig. c. 42. Even Augustus pretended to have a nocturnal vision, requiring that the people should annually, on a certain day, present money to him, which he received with a hollow hand, cavam manum asses porrigentibus praebens; Id. in August. c. 91. It was reckoned a handsome enough way of receiving gifts, when the bosomfold of the cloak was expanded. But when they were received utraque manu cavata, as it would be expressed in S., in goupins, it was accounted a species of depredation. Hence rapine was proverbially expressed in this manner. V. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 16. Rosin. Antiq. p. 29.

The Strenae were considered as of such importance, that a particular deity was supposed to preside over them, called Dea Strenia; Rosin. p. 28. This might be the principal reason why they were condemned by Christians in early times. To have any concern with them, might be reckoned a symbolising in some sort with idolatry.

V. This season, in very early times, was characterized by such Dissipation, that even the more sober heathens were scandalized at it.

Among the Northern nations, "feasting, dances, nocturnal assemblies, and all the demonstrations of a most dissolute joy, were then authorised by the general usage." Mallet's North. Antiq. i. 130.

On account of the hilarity usual at this season, Wachter concludes, that Germ. jol-en, to revel, Belg-joolig, homo festivus, as well as Fr. joli, and E. jolly, have all their origin from Jol, Yule.

The Saturnalia, among the Romans, at length

The Saturnalia, among the Romans, at length lasted for seven days, the Sigillaria being included. During this season of festivity, all public business was suspended; the Senate, and the courts of Justice, were shut up. All schools also had a vacation; Rosin. p. 98. I need scarcely remark the striking similarity of our Christmas Holidays.

Masters and servants sat at one table. Some, indeed, say, that masters waited on their servants. Every thing serious was laid aside; and people of all ranks gave themselves up to jollity; Bochart. Phaleg, p. 3.

There can be no doubt that, in the dissipation by which the new year is ushered in, we have borrowed from the heathen. The account, which Seneca the Philosopher gives of this season, might seem to have been written for our times. "It is now," says he to his friend Lucilius, "the month of December, when the greatest part of the city is in a bustle. Loose reins are given to public dissipation; every where may you hear the sound of great preparations, as if there were some real difference between the days dedicated to Saturn, and those for transacting business. Thus, I am disposed to think, that he was not far from the truth, who said that anciently it was the mouth of December, but now the year. Were you here, I would willingly confer with you as to the plan of our conduct; whether we should live in our usual way, or, to avoid singularity, both take a better supper, and throw off the toga. For what was not wont to be done, except in a tumult, or during some public calamity in the city, is now done for the sake of pleasure, and from regard to the festival. Men change their dress.—It were certainly far better to be thrifty and sober amidst a drunken crowd, disgorging what they have recently swallowed." Epist. 18. Oper. p. 273.

I have not met with any proof that the Romansdisguised themselves during the Saturnalia; although this custom seems to have prevailed, during the same season, among the Celts, as it certainly did among the Goths. But such disguises were permitted in the worship of Cybele, the mother of the gods. To this purpose we have the testimony of Herodian. "Yearly, in the beginning of Spring, the Romans celebrate the feast of the Mother of the gods. On this occasion, the most striking symbols of wealth, which any one possesses, even royal furniture, and the most wonderful productions of nature or art, are wont to be carried before the deity. Liberty is given to all to indulge themselves in any kind of sport. Every one assumes whatever appearance is most agreeable to him. Nor is there any dignity so great, that a man may not invest himself with the emblems of it, if he pleases. Such pains are taken to deceive and to conceal the truth, that what is real cannot easily be distinguished from what is done in mimicry." Hist. Lib. i. c. 32.

Cybele, it may be observed, is admitted to be the same with Rhea or the Earth:

The ancient Northern nations worshipped Frea or Frigga. Her festival was observed in the month of February. She seems to correspond to Cybele in the Roman Calendar. As Cybele was the Mother of the gods, Frea was believed to be, not only the daughter, but the wife of Odin; Mallet, ii. 30. In the Edda it is declared, that all the other gods sprung from Odin and Frea. She was the same with Herthus, Hertha, or the Earth. Tacitus describes her under this very designation, of the Mother of the gods. Matrem Deûm venerantur Aestii; insigne superstitionis formas aprorum gestant; German. c. 45. The Northern nations indeed sacrificed to Frea the largest hog they could find. This exactly agrees with the Roman mode of worshipping Cybele. For they sacrificed a hog to her; Rosin. p. 232.

With respect to the disguisings customary, during this festivity, among the Goths, and also in our own country, V. Abbot of Unresson and Gysar. It may be added, that Dr. Johnson, in his Journey to the Western Islands, mentions a custom, which has probably been transmitted from the Norwegian lords of the Hebrides.

"At new year's eve, in the hall or castle of the laird, where at festivals there [is] supposed to be a very numerous company, one man dresses himself in a cow-hide, on which others beat with sticks; he runs with all this noise round the house in a counterfeited fright; the door is then shut, and no re-admission obtained after their pretended terror, but by the repetition of a verse of poetry, which those acquainted with the custom are provided with." V. Strutt's Sports, p. 188, N.

Vol. II.

During Yule, our forefathers seem to have been much addicted to Games of Chance. This custom still prevails. Even children lay up stores of pins, for playing at Te Totum. In some parts of the country, merchants generally provide themselves, about this time, with a coarser sort, which they call Yule-pins.

This custom is analogous to that of the Romans. Although games of chance were prohibited by the laws, these provided an exception for the month of December. V. Adam's Antiq. p. 458.

One species of amusement, on this day, S.B. is wad-shooting. This signifies shooting at a mark for a prize that is laid in pledge. V. WAD-SHOOT-ING.

VI. Candles of a particular kind are made for this season. For the candle, that is lighted on Yule, must be so large as to burn from the time of its being lighted till the day be done. If it did not, the circumstance would be an omen of ill fortune to the family during the subsequent year. Hence large candles are by the vulgar called Yule-candles. Even where lamps are commonly used, the poorest will not light them at this time.

There is no reason to doubt that this custom has been transmitted from the times of heathenism. Rudbeck informs us, that Su.G. Jule lius denotes "the Candles of Yule, or of the Sun, which, on the night preceding the Festival of Yule, illuminated the houses of private persons through the whole kingdom." Atlantic. P. ii. 239.

There is a striking conformity between this rite and that of the ancient Romans, in their celebration of the Saturnalia. They used lights in the worship of their deity. Hence originated the custom of making presents of this kind. The poor were wont to present the rich with wax tapers: Cereos Saturnalibus muneri dabant humiliores potentioribus, quia candelis pauperes, locupletes cereis utebantur. Fest. Pomp. Lib. 3. Yule-candles are, in the N. of S., given as a present at this season by merchants to their stated customers.

By many, who rigidly observe the superstitions of this season, the Yule-candle is allowed to burn out of itself. The influence of superstition appears equally in others, although in a different way. When the day is at a close, the portentous candle is extinguished, and carefully locked up in a chest. There it is kept, in order to be burnt out at the owner's Late-wake.

I may observe by the way, that the preservation of candles has been viewed by the superstitious as a matter of great importance. This notion seems to have been pretty generally diffused. An Icelandic writer informs us, that a spakona, a spae-wife or sybil. who thought herself neglected, in comparison of her sisterhood, at some unhallowed rites observed for foretelling the fate of a child, cried out; "Truly, I add this to these predictions, that the child shall live no longer than these candles, which are lighted beside him, are burnt out." Then "the chief of the Sybils immediately extinguished one of the candles, and gave it to the mother of the child to be carefully preserved, and not to be lighted while the child was in life." Nornagestz Sag. ap. Bartholin. Caus. Contempt. Mortis, p. 686.

VII. A number of MISCELLANEOUS SUPERSTITIONS may be mentioned, in relation to Yule, which are still regarded by many, especially in the North of S. Some of them, like those already referred to, may be traced to heathenism; others seem to have had their origin from the darkness of Popery. The bare mention of them must, to any thinking mind, be sufficient to shew their absurdity.

In the morning one rises before the rest of the family, and prepares food for them, which must be eaten in bed. This frequently consists of cakes baken with eggs, called Care-cakes. A bannock or cake is baken for every person in the house. If any one of these break in the toasting, the person for whom it is baked, will not, it is supposed, see another Yule. V. CARE-CAKE.

On this day, as well as on New-year's-day, Handsel-Monday, and Rood-day, superstitious people would not allow a coal to be carried out of their own house to that of a neighbour, lest it should be employed for the purposes of witchcraft.

The generality of people in the North of S., even of those who have no attachment to the rites of the Church of England, so far retain a traditionary regard for Yule, that they observe it as a holiday. They would reckon it ominous to do any work; although they can give no better reason for their conduct, than that "their fathers never wrought on Yule."

Women seem to have a peculiar aversion to spinning on this day. This bears strong marks of a pagan origin. The ancient heathens would not suffer their women to spin on a holiday. Hence Tibullus says:

Non audeat ulla lanificam pensis imposuisse manum.

And Ovid relates, that Bacchus punished Alcithoe and her sisters for presuming to spin during his festival.

There is a singular passage in Jhone Hamilton's Facile Traictise, which, while it affords a proof of the traditionary antipathy to spinning on Yule-day, also shews how jealous our worthy reformers were against the observation of all festival days.

After declaring the opposition of the Caluinian sect to all halydayes except Sonday, he says; "The Ministers of Scotland—in contempt of the vther halie dayes observit be England,—cause thair wyfis and servants spin in oppin sicht of the people upon Yeul day; and thair affectionat auditeurs constraines thair tennants to yok thair pleuchs on Yeul day in contempt of Christs Nativitie, whilk our Lord hes not left vnpunisit; for thair oxin ran wod and brak thair nekis, and leamit [lamed] sum pleugh men, as is notoriously knawin in sindrie partes of Scotland." P. 174. 175.

The term Yule is also used for Christmas; A. Bor. They have their Yu, or Yule-batch, i. e. Christmas-batch; their Yule-games, and Yule-clog, or Christmas-block. "In farm-houses, the servants lay by a large knotty block for their Christmas fire, and, during the time it lasts, they are entitled, by custom, to ale at their meals;" Grose's Gl. Yele occurs in the same sense in O.E.

His Yole for to hold was his encheson.

R. Brunne, p. 49.

Bourne, speaking of the custom of lighting up candles, and of burning the Yule-clog, says, that it "seems to have been used as an emblem of the return of the Sun, and the lengthening of the days. The continuing of it," he adds, "after the introduction of Christianity, may have been intended for a symbol of that Light which lightened the Gentiles;" Antiq. Vulgar.

"In Yorkshire, and other Northern parts, they have an old custom after sermon or service on Christmas-day, the people will, even in the churches, cry Ule, Ule, as a token of rejoicing, and the common sort run about the streets singing, Ule, Ule, Ule, Ule, Ule, &c. V. Blount's Dict. vo. Ule. V. Yule-e'en.

That some such childish cry was anciently used in S. at this season, seems probable from the old Prov., "It is eith crying yool on anither man's stool;" Ramsay's S. Prov. p. 45.

To YULE, YOOL, v. n. To observe Christmas according to the customary rites.

"The lords refused to let the lady marchioness go to the castle with her husband, unless she would ward also, and with great intreaty had the favour to yool with him, but to stay no longer." Spalding's Troubles, i. 48.

YULE-E'EN, YHULE-EWYN, s. The night preceding Christmas, the wake of Yule, S.

Till Auld Meldrum thai yeid thair way,
And thar with thair men logyt thai,

A-pon a Yhule-ewyn alsua Wyttalis, that to the Kyng suld ga Of Ingland, that at Melros lay, He met rycht stowtly in the way.

Wyntown, viii. 36. 69.

This the A.-Saxons denominated Myd-wyntres maesse-aefen, vigilia Nativitatis Christi. For they called Christmas itself mid-winter, and myd-wyntres maesse-daeg, i. e. the mass-day in the middle of winter; as, for a similar reason, they gave the name of mid-sumer to the day observed in commemoration of the nativity of John Baptist.

The Northern nations called this night Modranect, or Moedrenech, (Modranatt, Ihre,) not according to the sense given by Sibb., as being "the night of mothers," but the Mother-night, "as that which produced all the rest: and this epoch was rendered the more remarkable, as they dated from thence the beginning of the year, which among the northern nations was computed from one winter solstice to another, as the month was from one new moon to the next." Mallet, i. 130. We learn from Wormius, that to this day the Icelanders date the beginning of their year from Yule, in consequence of ancient custom which the law of their country obliges them to retain. They even reckon a person's age by the number of Yules he has seen; so that one who has lived during the celebration of this feast for twenty times, is said to be twenty years of age, although he was born on December 24th, or the very day preceding Yule-e'en. This night they denominate Jolanat; and he who, according to this mode of reckoning, is twenty years of age, is said to have lived xx Jolanaetur; Fast. Dan. Lib. i. s. 12.

A similar mode of reckoning is retained in some parts of S. V. SINGIN-E'EN.

The Goths also called this Hoekanatt; because, in times of heathenism, on this occasion hawks were sacrificed. Ihre observes, (vo. Hoek), that, as this feast was instituted in honour of the Sun, the Egyptians, according to the testimony of Horapollo, accounted hawks sacred to that luminary, because, by a secret power of nature, they could stedfastly look at him.

The vulgar, in the North of S. especially, have a great many ridiculous notions with respect to the eve of Yule, and on this night observe a number of superstitious rites.

It is believed by some, that, if one were to go into the cow-house at twelve o'clock at night, all the cattle would be seen to kneel. This wild ideaseems to refer to our Lord's being born in a stable. Many also firmly believe, that the bees sing in their hives on Christmas-eve, as welcoming the approaching day.

It has been observed, on the word Yule, that on this day women abstain from spinning. On the evening preceding, they will not even venture to leave any flax or yarn on their wheels; apprehending that the devil would reel it for them before morning. Women in a single state assign another reason for this caution. Their rocks would otherwise follow them to church on their marriage-day. If any flax be left on their rocks, they salt it, in order to preserve it from satanical power. If yarn be accidentally left on a reel, it must not be taken off in the usual way, but be cut off.

The same caution is exercised on Good-Friday; but a reason is given, different from both of these that have already been mentioned. On this day, it is said, a rope could not be found to bind our Saviour to the cross, and the yarn was taken off a woman's wheel for this purpose.

It is a striking proof of the tyrannical influence of custom on the mind, that many who have no faith in these observances, would nor feel themselves.

easy, did they neglect them.

Some farmers, I have been assured, are so extremely superstitious, as to go into their stables and cow-houses on Kule-e'en, and read a chapter of the Bible behind their horses and cattle, to preserve them from harm.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 75.

BAND (TO TAKE), to unite; a phrase borrowed from architecture. "Lord make them cornerstones in Jerusalem, and give them grace, in their youth, to take band with the fair chief Cornerstone," &c. Ruth. Lett. P. iii. ep. 20.

Banwin, s. As many reapers as may be served by one bandster, Fife, S.A. perhaps from A.S. band vinculum, and win labor.

Barns-breaking, s. Any mischievous or injurious action; in allusion to the act of breaking up a barn for carrying off corn. For proof, V. Quhaip in the raip.

To Bash, v. a. To beat to sherds, Loth. Smash,

Su.G. bas-a, to strike. Hence,

Bash, s. A blow, S.A.

The taen toor a' her neebour's mutch,

An' gae her a desperate bash on The chafts that day.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 36.

To Bash up, v. a. An iron instrument is said to be bashed up, when the point is bowed in, Loth. It is nearly synon. with E. bevel.

Isl. basse, pinnaculum a tergo in securi Romana; G. Andr.

Bass. Add; Bass is used S. for the inner bark. Batter, 1. 4. for active r. active BAUCHLE, v. Add; Bachlane is evidently the part. pa. of the v. used in a neut. sense.

Na dentie geir this Doctor seikis,"—— •

A bair clock, and a bachlane naig.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 327. Expl. is stumbling." It may perhaps be used in this sense. But it is properly equivalent to E. shamebling; as denoting a loose, aukward, and unequal motion. In this sense it is applied both to man and beast, S.

BAWSY-BROWN, 1. 1. for hopgoblin r. hobgoblin BE, prep. 3. Add; It occurs in the same sense in the Pref. to the Legend of the Bp. of St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 305.

Be thir lait bischopis may this teall be tauld, Bearand na fruite bot barren blockis of tymber. BEARANCE, s. Toleration, S.

Whan for your lies you ask a bearance, They soud, at least, hae truth's appearance. Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 96.

BEENGE. Add; Beenjin, (improperly written), is expl. " fawning." This sense is very nearly allied to that given.

But view some blades wi' houses fine,-While beenjin slaves ca' them divine,

What then? a prey

To languor, mid thae joys they pine The lec-lang day.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 187.
Beguile. Insert as proof 1. "I verily think the world hath too soft an opinion of the gate to heaven, and that many shall get a blind and sad beguile for heaven; for there is more ado than a cold and frozen, Lord, Lord." Ruth. Lett. P. iii. ep. 48.

Begunkit, part. adj. Cheated, Clydes. V. Be-GECK.

Behufe, 1. 2. for Bereeynthia, r. Berecynthia

Bejan, v. A literary friend has furnished the following illustration. This ceremony is performed. in Edinburgh on the King's birth-day. The patient is thereby said, by the mob, to be burgessed, or made a burgess. According to this idea, when a country boy, who was attempting to escape, took refuge in a shop, the owner of it having said to the rabble, that they should not abuse a stranger in that manner, they answered, that they only wanted to make him free.

Beld, adj. Add; It occurs in this form in Maitl. Poems, p. 193.

My curland hair, my cristel ene, Ar beld and bleird, as all may se.

Belene. Add; It has been conjectured, with great probability, that grenes so grene should be greues, i. e. groves, so grene.

Belghe, s. Eructation, E. belch. "This age is defiled with filthie belghes of blasphemy.—His custom was to defile the aire with most filthie belghs of blasphemie." Z. Boyd's L. Battell, p. 1002, 1186.

This approaches to the ancient form of the E. word. For Huloet gives belke or bolke, (S. bok) as signifying ructo, and synon. with balche. A.S. bealc-an, id. Seren. views Goth. bell-a, cum sonitu pelli, as the radical word.

To Beller, v. n. To bubble up. "Are they not Bullatae nugue, bellering bablings, watrie bels, easily dissipate by the smallest winds, or rather euanishes of their own accord?" Bp. Galloway's Dikaiol. p. 109.

This seems radically different from Buller; as perhaps allied to Isl. bilur, impetus venti, bilgia, fluctus maris, bolg-a, intumescere, or belg-ia, inflare buccas; G. Andr.

Belling. Add; This etymon is confirmed by the explanation given of the term by Phillips; "Belling, a term among hunters, who say a Roe belleth, when she makes a noise in rutting time. Belleth is used by Chaucer, and expl. by Urry, " belloweth, roareth;" Tyrwhitt, id.

Belt, v. 1. Add to sense 2. "Belt our lovnveis with verité, put apon vs the brest plait of rychteousnes." Abp. Hamiltour's Catechisme, F. 189, a.

3. To surround, to environ, in a hostile manner. "Ambrose hauand victorie on this wyse, followit on Vortigern, & beltit the castel with strang sege." Bellend. Cron. B. viii. c. 19. Arctissima circumdare obsidione; Boeth.

Beltane, col. 4. l. 26. for festval r. festival BENT, sense 3. Add; from King Hart. i. 19.

For battell byd thai bauldlie on you bent. Besid, pret. "Burst with a buzzing noise, like bottled beer," Dunbar; Maitland Poems. V. Gl. Pink. This is the same with S. bizzed.

Besle, v. l. 5. for naugari r. nugari

BE-WEST, prep. Towards the West, S. "We marched immediately after them, and came in sight of them about Glenlivat, be-west Balveny some fewmiles." Baillie's Lett. ii. 266.

The schipman sayis, Rycht weill ye may him

Throu graith takynnys, full clerly by his men. His cot armour is seyn in mony steid, &c.

Wallace, ix. 104. MS. i. e. "You may certainly distinguish him from his men, by obvious marks." BYBILL, col. 2. l. 4. for byb e r. byble To BICKER, for v. a. r. v. n. Add; An' on that sleeth Ulysses head

Sad curses down does bicker.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 6. Expl. "rattle." It properly belongs to sense 1., as referring to the rapid succession of smart strokes. Add to sense 3.

Three lusty fellows gat of him a clank; And round about him bicker'd a' at anes.

Ross's Helenore, p. 47.

It is properly meant to express the noise made by the quick motion of the feet in running; synon. brattle.

Big, v. 1. 7. for be r. he BIGGIT. Add; This term, as applied to the body of man or beast, respects growth; weill biggit, well-grown, lusty. "The man was well bigged, of a large, fair and good manly countenance." Mr. Ja. Melvill's MS. Mem. p. 54.

To BILL, v. a. To register, to record.

In Booke of Lyfe, there shall I see mee billed. Author's Meditation, Forbes's Eubulus, p. 166. BIRD, l. 19. for James V. r. James I.

BIRD-MOUTH'D. Add; "Ye must let him hear it, to say so, upon both the sides of his head, when he hideth himself: it is not time then to be birdmouth'd and patient." Rutherford's Lett. P. i. ep.

BYRE. Add; "Byer, a cowhouse, Cumb." Gl. Grose.

BIRLIN, misplaced after BIRN. Add; "The Laird of Balcomy-being lanched a little from the coast,-was suddenly invaded by-Murdach Macklowd [of Lewis] with a number of Birlings, (so they call the little vessels those Isles men use)." Spotswood, p. 466. 467.

BIRN, 1. Add; from A. Douglas's Poems, p.

Now a' thegither, skin an' birn, They're round the kitchen table.-

BIRN, 2. Add; It rather seems allied to C.B.

bwrn onus, byrnia onerare; Davies.
BISHOP'S FOOT. Add; Good old Tyndale furnishes us with an illustration of this phrase. "When a thynge speadeth not well, we borowe speach and saye, The Byshope hath blessed it, because that nothynge speadeth well that they medyll wyth all. If the podech [pottage] be burned to, or the meate ouer rosted, we saye, The byshope hath put his fote in the potte, or The byshope hath played the coke, because the byshoppes burn who they lust and who soeuer displeaseth them." Obedyence Chrysten man, BYTESCHEIP, s. Robert Semple uses this word as a parody of the title Bishop, q. bite, or devour, the sheep.

They halde it still vp for a mocke, How Maister Patrick fedd his flock; Then to the court this craftie loun To be a bytescheip maid him boun; Becaus St. Androis then dependit.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 313. BLAD, 1. Add; To ding in blads, to drive in pieces. "Mr. Knox—was very weak, & I saw him every day of his doctrine go hulic and fair with a furring of martricks about his necke, a staffe in the one hand, & good godly Richard Ballandine his servant holding up the other oxter, - & by the said Richard & another servant lifted up to the pulpit, where he behoved to lean at his first entry; but or he had done with his sermon, he was so active & vigerous, that he was like to ding the pulpit in blads, & fly out of it." Melvill's MS. p. 20.

BLAIR, s. The name given to that part of flax which is afterwards used in manufacture; properly, after it has been steeped, taken from the pit, and laid out to dry. For after it is dried, it receives the name of lint; Ang.

This in E. is called harle, V. Encycl. Brit. vii. 292. col. 1. perhaps a dimin. from Dan. hoer, flax.

The word might seem to have a Goth. origin, although somewhat varied in signification. Sw. blaer, and lin-bluer, denote the hurds or hards of flax. Dan. blaar, coarse flax, tow, hurds; Wolff. Isl. blaeior has a more general sense, as signifying linen cloth; lintea, Verel.

The term is also used as a v., in a sense nearly allied to that of the s. When the flax is spread out for being dried, after it has been steeped, it is said that it is laid out to blair. The ground appropriated to this purpose is called the blairin, Ang.

It is probable that the s. should be traced to the v., as this so closely corresponds in sense to Isl. blaer, aura, spiritus. Tha er blaerin hitans maetti hrimino; Cum spiritus caloris attigit pruinam; Edd. Thus the term evidently respects the influence of drought, which is precisely the meaning of the v. blair. A.S. blaw-an, to blow, gives us the radical

It is in favour of the idea, that the s. is derived from the v. that the ground on which peats are laid out to be dried, is also called the blairin, Ang.

BLAIT, 1. Add; V. BLOUT, adj.
BLAIT, 2. Add; 3. Cold, unsatisfactory. "Mr. Robert Gordon of Straloch, and Dr. Gordon in Old Aberdeen, went to Marischal for peace, and to eschew blood; but they got a bleat answer, and so tint their travel." Spalding, i. 143.

BLASTIE, s. A shrivelled dwarf, S. in allusion to a vegetable substance that is blasted.

BLAZE, s. A name given to allum ore, S. BLERKIT, Legend Bp. St. Androis, p. 307. expl. in Gl. "blacked;" but it seems to signify, deceived.

Heirfore, deir Brethrene, I wish you to bewar; Sen ye are wairned, I wald not ye were blekkit; To thair deceatfull doctrine come not nar, Singand lyk Syrens to deceave the elected.

Isl. blek-ia, id. fallere, decipere. Mik bleckir ast; Me decipit amor: blectur, deceptus; Verel. Blecking fraudatio, G. Andr.

BLENTER. Insert, as sense 1. A boisterous intermitting wind, Fife.

Now cauld Eurus, snell an' keen, Blaws loud wi' bitter blenter.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 31.

This, which seems to be the primary sense of the word, suggests its formation from A.S. blawend, bleowend, the part. pr. of blaw-an, bleow-an, flare, to blow; blawung, flatus.

BLUDDER, v. n. l. 1. after mouth, add, or throat Bodgel, s. A little man, Loth. perhaps properly bodsel. V. Bop.

Bogill, and Bogill-Bo, l. 1. r. hobgoblin Boiken, s. The piece of beef in E. called the brisket, S.

BOLDIN. Add; Hence, Bowding, s. Swelling. "When I wrote this, I was not yet free of the bowdings of the bowells of that natural affection," &c. Mellvill's MS. p. 192.

Bole. Add; from A. Douglas's Poems, p. 107. Ben the house young Peggy slips, Thro' the benner bole she ventures,

An' to aunty Eppie's skips.
Boo. Add; "The principal chemis-place, i. e. the head-buil or principal manor." Fea's Grievances of Orkn. p. 58.

I have given the orthography Boo, as this word is invariably pron. both in Ang. and in Orkn. . If Bol should be considered as the original form, it corresponds to Su.G. bol, which, like bo, Isl. bu, signifies domicilium. It seems originally to have denoted the manor-house of a proprietor. Teut. boeye, tugurium, domunculum, casa, must certainly be viewed as originally the same word. The obvious affinity of Gael. bal to Su.G. bol has been elsewhere mentioned. V. Bal. It may be added, that Teut. balie approaches nearly in signification, denoting an inclosure; conseptum, vallum, Kilian; a. place fenced in with stakes being the first form of a town.

Boon (of shearers), s. A company or band of reapers, as many as a farmer employs, Dumfr. V. Kemp, v. It seems allied to A. Bor. "to boon or buen; to do service to another, as a copyholder is bound to do to the lord;" Gl. Grose. Isl. buandi ruricola, buanda cives; q. those who dwell together, from bu-a habitare; Su.G. bo, id. also, cohabitare, whence bonde ruricola.

BORD, s. sense 2. Add; from A. Douglas's Poems, p. 145.

Her mutch is like the driven snaw.

Wi' bord of braw fine pearlin.

For etymon, V. Burde.

BOUGHT, 1. after line 5. insert; " Bought of the arme, le ply du bras;" Palsgr. Fol. 21, a.

Bow (of lint.) Add; This word has been common to the Goths and Celts. C.B. bul, folliculi seminis lini; Davies.

Bra, Brae, sense 2. Barbour, vi. 77. MS.

Endlang the wattyr than yeld he On athyr syd a gret quanteté, And saw the brayis hey standard, The wattyr how throw slik rynnand.

Brabblach, s. The refuse of any thing; such as of corn, meat, &c. Fife. Gael. prubal, id.

To BRAG, to defy, S.B.

Gae hand in hand, ye'll brag high rank, Or heaps o' siller.

Morison's Poems, p. 83.

Brehon, penult l. for Antiquaries r. Antiquities Breid, s. l. 1. for i r. in BREIRD. The surface, the uppermost part, or top, of any thing, as of liquids. "We beseech you therein to perceive & take up the angrie face & crabbed countenance of the Lord of hosts, who has the cup of his vengeance, mixed with mercy & justice, in his hand, to propine to this whole land;of the which the servants of his own house, and ye in speciall, has gotten the breird to drink." Declaration, &c. 1596, Mellvill's MS. p. 279.

This is evidently the same with BRERD, q. v. The idea, thrown out in the latter part of that article, that this is not allied to brord spica, but to brerd summum, seems confirmed by the definition which Somner gives of the latter; "Summum, labrum; the brim of a pot, or such like, the shore or banke, the brinke."

Brettys, l. 18. for Ang. r. Aug Bril, s. The merrythought of a fowl. Os, quod vulgo Bril appellatur, adeo in hac ave cum pectore connexum est, ut nulla vi avelli queat. Sibb. Scot. p. 20. This is merely Teut. bril, specillum; ossiculum circa pectus a specilli similitudine dictum; Kilian. For the same reason this bone elsewhere in S. is called the spectacles. V. Breells.

BROCHT, s. The act of puking. Ben ower the bar he gave a brocht. And laid among them sic a locket; With eructavit cor meum. He hosted thair a hude full fra him.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 313,

C.B. broch, spuma. This seems originally the same with Braking, q. v.

Brod, a board. Add;-" When that utheris war compellit to kiss a painted brodde, whiche they callit Nostre Dame, they war not preassed efter ones." Knox's Hist. p. 83.

Brogh, s. Ye man bring brogh and hammer for't, i. e. You must bring proof for it, Loth.; perhaps corr. from brok, the remains of what is broken; q. both the thing injured, and the instrument with which the injury was done. Brogh might be viewed as originally borch, a surety. But what connexion has this with hammer?

To Brogle, v. a. To prick, Loth. synon. brog,

BROODIE. Add; 2. Brudy, prolific, applied to either sex. "The Pichtis had afore ane vehement suspitioun, that the brudy spredyng of the Scottis suld sumetyme fall to hie dammage of thair posterite." Bellend. Cron. B. i. c. 5.

BRUKIL. Add; 7. Apt to fall into sin, or to yield to temptation. "Sa, lang as we leif in this. present warld, we ar sa fragil & brukil, be resone of carnal concupiscence, remanand in our corrupit nature, that we can nocht abstene fra all & syndry. venial synnis." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, F.

BRUSIT. Add; L.B. brusd-us, brust-us, acupictus; Du Cange. V. Burde, 2.

BRUSSLE, s. Bustle, Loth. perhaps from A.S. brastl-ian, murmurare, crepere.

To Buck, v. n. To aim at any object, to push, to butt, Perths.

Alem. bock-en to strike; whence Wachter derives bock, a he-goat, although the etymon may well be inverted. Su.G. bock, impulsus, ictus.

To Buck out, v. n. To make a guggling noise, as liquids when poured from a strait-necked bottle, S. probably formed from the sound.

To Buckle, v. n. Add, from Macneill's Poet. Works, i. 10.

Soon they loo'd, and soon ware buckled, Nane took time to think and rue.

Buffer-stool. Add, from A. Douglas's Poems,

Jean brought the buffet stool in-bye, A kebbuck moul'd and mited.

Buge. Add; "Bouge furre, rommenis, peaux de Lombardie;" Palsgr. F. 21, a.

BUMBART, s. Add; It occurs in its literal sense, as denoting a drone, or perhaps rather a flesh-fly. "Many well made [laws] wants execution, like addercope webs, that takes the silly flies, but the bom. bards breaks through them." Mellvill's MS. p. 129.

Bunewand. Add; Bunwand, S.B. is the Cow Parsnip, Heracleum sphondylium, Linn.

Burde, 2. Add; C.B. broud-a acupingere, brout, broud, opus acupictum, brwd, instrumentum acu pingendi. Du Cange, vo. Brusdus.

Burra, s. The name given in Orku. to the most common kind of rush, which there is the Juneus Squarrosus.

Bursen. Insert before the quotation from Baillie; 2. It often signifies, overpowered with fatigue; also, so overheated by violent exertion, as to drop down dead, S. The s. is used in a similar sense; He got a burst.

BUTT. Add; Schilter gives but, terminus, limcs, as a Celt. term; L.B. but-um.

To CAB, v. a. To pilfer, Loth. perhaps originally the same with CAP, q. v.

CABARR, s. A lighter. "They sent down six barks or cabarrs full of ammunition," &c. Spalding, ii. 57. The same with GABERT, q. v.

CADIE. Add; The origin, assigned in Dict. to this designation, is confirmed by the mode of writing, and therefore of pronouncing, the term Cadet in S., in the days of our fathers. "Who can tell where to find a man that's sometimes a Protestant, sometimes a Papist; turns Protestant again; and from a Cadee, become a Curate? &c.—Moreover, it's but very natural for a Cadee of Dunbarton's Regiment, which used to plunder people of their goods, and make no scruple to rob men of their good names, not to be believed." W. Laick's Continuation of Answer to Scots Presb. Eloquence, p.

33. also twice in p. 38.

To CAMP, v. n. "The King, with Monsieur du Bartas, came to the Colledge hall, where I caused prepare and have in readiness a banquet of wet and dry confectious, with all sorts of wine, whereat his Majesty camped very merrily a good while." q. strove, in taking an equal share with others. V.

KEMP, v.

CANE. Add: This term is not to be understood, as denoting tribute in general. A literary friend remarks, that it is confined to the smaller articles, with which a tenant or vassal is bound annually to supply his lord for the use of his table. He objects to the example of cane aites, given by Skene; observing that money, oats, wheat, or barley, stipulated to be paid for land, is never denominated kain, but only fowls, eggs, butter, cheese, pigs, and other articles of a similar kind, which are added to the rent. Thus David I., in a Charter to the church of Glasgow, grants, Deo et ecclesie Sancti Kentigerni de Glasgu, in perpetuam elemosinam, totam decimam meam de meo Chan, in animalibus et porcis de Stragriva, &c. nisi tunc quando ego ipse illuc venero perendinens et ibidem meum Chan comedens. Chartular. Vet. Glasg. But the term seems properly to denote all the rude produce of the soil, payable to a landlord, as contradistinguished from money; although now more commonly applied to smaller articles.

CANNILY, 2. for Ibid. r. Baillie's Lett. i.

CAP, v. to excel. Add; A. Bor. cap, to puzzle.

CAPES. This word seems to be of general use. In Loth. it signifies, 1. The grain which retains the shell, before it is milled: 2. The grain which is not sufficiently ground; especially where the shell remains with part of the grain.

CAPPLE. Add; "There is matter to win credite in Court; he is the Kings man, an honest man, a good peaceable minister that goes that way, and they are seditious, troublesome, cappet, factious against the King, as means or reasons in the contrare." Mellvill's MS. p. 300.

CARMEN. Add; "Mr. Peter Blackburn our colleague was-a very good and learned man, but rude & carlish of nature." Mellvill's MS. p. 43.

Carrow, s. A great cannon, a battering piece. "The earl Marischal sends to Montrose for two cartows.—The earl—had stiled his cartows and ordnance just in their faces." Spalding, i. 172. Teut. kartouwe, L.B. cartuna, quartana, Germ. kartaun, Fr. courtaun, id. Wachter derives it from Lat. quart-us, as denoting the weight of powder.

CASCHET. This term, I am informed, does not signify, either the King's Privy Seal, or his Signet; but a plate of silver, on which is engraved a fac simile of the King's superscription, which is stamped on a variety of writings or warrants for deeds under the other seals, instead of the real superscription, which, since the scat of government was transferred to London, it was thought unnecessary to require in matters of common form, passing by warrant of, and in consequence of revisal by, the Barons of Exchequer.

CATBAND. Add; I suspect that a chain drawn across a street, for defence in war, also received this name. In this sense, perhaps, Spalding uses the term. "The town-began to big up their own back gates, closes, ports, have their cat-bands in readiness," &c. i. 109.—" He had his entrance peaceably; the ports made open, and the cat-bands casten loose." ii. 159. 160.

CATERANES. Add; It is supposed to be the same term, which occurs in the Cartular. Vet. Glasg., in a charter of Maldoveni Earl of Levenax [Lennox], A. 1226. in which he makes this concession in favour of the clergy of Levenax (Clericis de Levenax); Corredium ad opus servientium, suorum qui Kethres nuncupantur, non exiget nec exigi permit. tet a Clericis memoratis.

CAT-GUT, s. Fucus filum, Bay of Scalpa, Orkn.

Neill's Tour, p. 191.

To CAVE over, v. n. To fall over suddenly, S. -" Sitting down [on] a bedside, he caves back over so that his feet stack out stiff and dead." Mell. vill's MS. p. 32. "But the hot rowing & the stoup with the stark ale hard beside him made him at once to cave over asleep." Ibid. p. 115. CAVEL. Add; V. KILE, a chance.

CAVEL, 3. l. 1. r. translated

To CHAFF, v. n. To chatter, to be loguacious. Loth. This is undoubtedly allied to Teut. keff-en. gannire, latrare, q. to bark.
CHAFFER, s. The Round-lipped whale, Shetl.

CHIMNEY, CHIMLEY. Add; Corn. tschimbla, a chimney; Pryce.

CHINE, s. The end of a barrel, or that part of the staves which projects beyond the head, S. chime as in E .- "That they keep right gage, both in the length of the staves, the bilg-girth, the wideness of the head, & deepness of the chine," &c. Acts Cha. II. 1661. c. 33.

Chuk, s. Asellus marinus Squillam molliorem referens, nisi quod quatuor tantum pedes habeat. An qui Dumfrisiensibus the Chuk dicitur? Sibb. Scot. 34.

To CIRCUMJACK, v. n. To agree to, or correspond with, W. Loth.; a term most probably borrowed from law-deeds, Lat. circumjac-ere, to lie round or about.

CLAIR, v. Add; In this sense it is still a common phrase; I'll gie you your clearings, S.

Vol. 11.

To CLANK down, v. a. To throw down with a shrill, sharp noise. "Loosing a little Hebrew bible from his belt & clanking it down on the board before the King & Chancellonr, There is, sayes he, my instructions & warrand, let see which of you can judge thereon, or controll me therein that I have past by my injunctions." Mellvill's MS. p. 97. Teut. klanck, clangor, tinnitus, from klincken clangere, tinnire, O.Su.G. klink-a.

To CLARK, v. n. To act as a scribe or amanuensis, S. from clerk.

To CLEED. Add; 4. To shelter, to seek protection from. "He had quitted the company of the Gordons, and cled himself with the earl Marischal his near cousin, and attended and followed him South and North at his pleasure." Spalding, i. 232.

CLEW. Add; I am at a loss whether we should view this as having any connexion with the Rhombus, a kind of wheel formed by the ancients under the favourable aspect of Venus, and supposed to have a great tendency to procure love. This is mentioned by Theocritus in his Pharmaceutria. V. El. Sched. de Dis German. p. 159. It was an instrument of inchantment, anciently used by witches. While they whirled it round, it was believed that by means of it they could pull the moon out of heaven. V. Pitisci Lex. vo. Rhombus.

CLIP. Add; This term denotes a colt that is a year old, Buchan.

To CLOW, v. a. To beat down, used both literally and metaph. Galloway. Allied perhaps to Su.G. klo-a, unguibus veluti fixis comprehendere, manum injicere, from klo, a claw; from the use of the nails in the broils of savages, or from that of the talons of a bird of prey.

CLUNK, v. Add; Gael. gliong-am, a jingling noise, chink.

COCKANDY. Add; The Puffin having different names into the composition of which the term cock enters, as Bass-cock, &c. (V. WILLICK); this is perhaps q. cock-duck, from cock gallus, and Su.G. and, Isl. aund, A.S. ened, Alem. enti, Germ. ente, anas; and may have been originally confined to the male. Thus Cock-paddle is the name of the male Lump-fish; and Su.G. anddrake, the male of ducks, Germ. enterich, id. Wachter derives this from ente anas, and reich dominus; and Ihre (vo. And) observes, that in more ancient Gothic, trak, trek, drak, denote a man. Isl. aund forms the termination of the names of several species of ducks; as Beinaund, Straumaund, Stokaund, Toppaund, Graffnaund, &c. G. Andr. p. 12.

Cod-Bair, s. 1. The large sea-worm, dug from the wet sands, Lumbricus marinus, Linn. Loth. This is elsewhere called Lug, q. v. 2. The strawworm, or larva of a species of Phryganea, Ibid.

Collegenar, s. A student at a college, S. "The grammars had 20 days play, and the collegenars had eight in Old Aberdeen, conform to use and wont at Yool." Spalding, i. 287. Colleginer, ibid. 331.

To Conuein, v. n. To agree. The halines of the doctrine conucinis not to the conuenticle of the Calministes." Hamilton's Facile Traictise, p. 141. Lat. conven-ire.

CORCOLET, s. A purple dye, made from Lichentartareus, Shetl.

Cossnent. Add; To work black cossnent, I am informed, signifies in Ayrs. to work without either meat or wages. The phrase is often used with respect to a cottager who gives part of his labour for a house.

COUCHER. Add; I gied [gave] him the coucher blow, S.O. i. e. he submitted to receive the last blow.

To CRAB, v. a. To irritate, to provoke. "Now for his [Mr. A. Mellvill's] patience, howbeit he was very hot in all questions, yet when it touched his particular, no man could crab him, contrare to the common custom." Mellvill's MS. p. 42. Teut. krabb-en, lacerare unguibus.

CRACK, v. Add; This v. signifies to boast, Norfolk; to converse, A. Bor.

CRAIT. Add; A. Bor. crates, panniers for glass and crokery, Gl. Grose.

CRAMPET. Add, from Meston's Poems, p. 11.

And for a crampet to his stumps,

He wore a pair of hob-nail'd pumps.

CRANK, s. Add; A. Bor. cronk; the noise of a raven; also, to prate.

CRAP. Add; Baith crap and root; literally, top and bottom; metaph., beginning and end, S.

CRAWCROOFS. Add; Crow-berries are called crake-berries, A. Bor. from crake, a crow.

CRAWDOUN. Add; A. Bor. craddenly, cowardly. CREEZE, s. Crisis. Ross's Helenore, p. 52.

At this the lassie's courage got a heeze,

And thinks her wiss is now come to the creeze. Croot. Add; 2. The youngest and feeblest of a nest, or of a litter of pigs, S.A. wrig, synon.

To Crop the causey, to walk boldly in the street; literally, to keep the uppermost part (S. synon. the crown) of the causey. "All the covenanters now proudly crop the causey, glad at the incoming of this army." Spalding, i. 176. "The one faction cropped the causey courageously, pridefully and disdainfully; the other faction was forced to walk humbly." ii. 183.

Sometimes the v. is used by itself. "Montrose—syne goes to his council of war, not to committee courts, treacherously cropping within his land." ii. 274. V. Crap.

CROUS. Add; A. Bor. id.

CROWDIE. Add; A. Bor. id. "oatmeal scalded with water," Gl. Grose.

CRUER, s. A kind of ship; apparently the same with CRAYAR, q.v. "One of our Cruers, returning from England, was onbeset by an English pyrat, pilled, and a very good honest man of Anstruther slain there," &c. Mellvill's MS. p. 182. id. 183.

Cummer. Add; Jhon Hamilton writes comere. "What meanis the prophete, be this wyne that ingendres virgens? Is it sik quhairof thay tipple willinglie at thair Comeres banquets?" Facile Traictise, p. 48. also 49.

Cuttie, s. The Black Guillemet, S.O. "On the passage I observed several Black Guillemots, Colymbus Grylle, which the boatmen called cutties." Fleming's Tour in Arran.

CUTTIE-BOYN, s. A small tub for washing the feet in, Lanarks. Avrs. This has been expl. q. for washing the cutes or ancles. But the first part of the word is rather from Cutty, short, q. v.

DAFFIN. Transfer the proof, sense 4. to sense 3. Add; 5. Derangement, frenzy. "Going to France, -there he falls into a phrenzie and daffine, which keeped him to his death." Mellvill's MS. p. 58.

DASE. Add; Adase seems to have been sometimes used in the same sense, O.E. "Rochester bothe abhomynable and shameles:—and so adased in the braynes of spyte, that he can not ouercom the trouthe, that he-careth not what he saythe." Tyndale's Obedyence of a Chrysten man, F. 54, b.

DAUER. Add; Daver is expl. weaken, Gl. A. Douglas's Poems, in reference to the following passage, p. 141.

'Tis no the damag'd heady gear, That donnar, dose, or daver.

DEAD-MEN'S BELLS. Add; Some of the valgar, in Loth., make a superstitious use of these bells. When they suppose that an infant has been injured by magical influence, or as they express it, gotten ill, (perhaps also for preserving them from this dreaded calamity) they pull a quantity of fox-glove, and put it in the cradle.

DEFAISE, v. For deduct r. discharge. DEFAIS-ANCE, 1. rather a discharge or renunciation of a right or claim. It is thought, that it may denote the extinction or determination of a right, whether by discharge of the creditor, or by some other fact to which he may not be a party. It is therefore viewed as a more general word than discharge. O.Fr. desfaicte, a riddance; as se desfaire signifies to rid.

Deltit, adj. Treated with great care and attention, for the prevention of any possible injury, Banffs. Isl. daellt denotes any domestic property which is useful; Domesticum familiare proprium, utile; Verel.

DERETH, s. The name of some kind of office. Robert, Abbot of Dunfermline, grants, Symoni dicto Dereth filio quondam Thome Dereth de Kinglassy, officium vel Dereth loci prenominati, et annuos redditus eidem officio pertinentes. Chart. Dunferml.

DING ON, v. Add; "There fell out in Murray a great rain, dinging on night and day without clearing up," &c. Spalding, i. 59.

DINK. Add; 2. Precise, saucy, Fife. She's far frae dorty, dull, or dink, But social, kind, an' cheery.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 24.

DIRR, adj. Torpid, benummed, Loth.; also, v. n. as, My fit dirrs, a phrase used in relation to the foot, when there is a stoppage of circulation. It seems originally the same with E. dor, to stun, which Seren. derives from Su.G. daer-a infatuare.

DISDOING, adj. Not thriving, Clydes.

DYUOURIE. For ibid. r. Skene, Verb. Sign. vo.

Doil'd. Add; This is expl. "fatigued," Gl. A. Douglas's Poems. It occurs, p. 152.

–Hame they gang fu' cheery, In balmy sleep their banes to steep; They are fell doul'd an' weary This Maiden-night.

Doul'd is merely doil'd, according to the Fife pronunciation, which changes oi into ou; as the pot bouls, i. e. boils. But I hesitate as to the propriety of the explanation given. If really thus used, it must denote that stupefaction which is the effect of fatigue.

Dolfnes. For apounsie r. apoun sic

To Donnar, v. a. To stupify, Fife. V. Proof, above under DAUER.

To Douce, v. a. To knock; Douce, s. a stroke, Fife. A. Douglas's Poems, p. 128.

They douce her hurdies trimly

Upo' the stibble-rig; As law then, they a' then

To tak a douce maun yield.

This is the same with Doyce, Ang. and the old v.

Dusch, q. v.

To Dover. Add; from A. Douglas's Poems, p. 139. Jean had been lyin' wakin' lang,

Ay thinkin' on her lover;

An' juste's he gae the door a bang,

She was begun to dover.

Driddles, Fife, is supposed properly to denote the intestines of an animal slaughtered for food.

Drow, s. A severe gust, a squall. "About one afternoon comes off the hills of Lamer moor edge a great mist with a tempestuous showre and drow, which or we could get ourselves takled did cast us about, &c. It pleased God mercifully to look upon us, & within an hour and a half to drive away the showre & calm the drow, so that it fell down dead calm." Mellvill's MS. p. 115. Isl. draufa, unda maris, Edd. G. Andr. Gael. drog, the motion of the sea.

DRUSH, s. The dross of peats, Banffs.; corr. from the E. word, or allied to DRUSH in Dict.

Druttle. Add; Isl. drosla, consectari haesitanter, is perhaps a cognate term. This may be a deriv. from dratta pedissequa; G. Andr. p. 52.

Dungeon of wit, 1. 4. Lothbury is an errat. in the Edit. from which I have quoted for Lochbuy.

Dunt, s. Add; At a dunt, unexpectedly, Stir. lings. q. with a sudden stroke; synon. in a rap.

EARN, v. Add; To earn, to curdle, A. Bor. EARNY-couliss, s. pl. Tumuli, Orkney; especially in the Southern Isles. Isl. Arinn hella denotes the rock on which the sacrifices were offered in the times of heathenism. But it seems to have no affinity. The term is undoubtedly comp. of Isl. ern annosus, and kulle tumulus, Su.G. summitas montis, q. ancient tumuli. As this term in Orkney is synon. with How, Howie, and Castle-howie; Verel. gives Sw. hoeg as the synonyme of kulle.

Easing. Add; A. Bor. easings, the eaves; Gl. Grose.

Eipp, sense 1. Add; A. Bor. eald, id. "He is tall of his eald; he is tall of his age;" Ibid.

EYTTYN. Add; Redeaten occurs, as if equivalent to canibal.—" They prefer the—friendship of the Guisians & the rest of these monstrous redeatens in France who celebrat that bloody druken feast of Bartholomew in Paris," &c. Mellvill's MS. p. 109.

ELDER, last l. for pro vita aut culpa, r. ad vitam aut culpam. Add; A different reason is assigned, Knox's Hist. p. 267. "Quhilk burdane thay patiently susteaned a yeir and mair. And then becausthey culd not (without neglecting of thair awen private houses) langer wait upoun the publict charge; they desyred that they micht be releaved, and that uthers micht be burdeined in thair roume: Quhilk was thocht a petitioun ressonabill of the haill Kirk," Ensenye, 2. Ensign. V. Proofs of this sense, vo.

GAWE, s. and UPHYNT.

ERD-HOUSES. Add; The name, in this instance, is the same still used in Iceland: Jardhus, domus subterranea; G. Andr. p. 129. The designation given to a castle, in that interesting country, also bears a striking analogy to a name still more commonly given in S. to these subterraneous buildings. Jardborg, castellum vallo munitum, Verel. i. e. an erd-burg. This also illustrates what is said concerning the Pictish buildings, Dissert. p. 29. It is most probably to an erthe house of this description that Thomas of Ercildone alludes, Sir Tristrem, p. 149. as he says that it was wrought by Etenes, or giants, in ancient days. V. the passage, vo. Wouch.

FAIK, v. Add; Fecket is expl. " flecked, particolonred," Gl. Rits. in reference to the following passage, S. Songs, i. 189.

O see you not her ponny progues,

Her fecket plaid, plew, creen, mattam?

But it undoubtedly signifies folded, or worn in folds, as being the same with faikit.

FAILYIE, s. Insert as sense 2. (making that marked 2. to stand as 3); A legal subjection to a penalty, in consequence of disobedience. "But no friend came in to this effect, thinking verily it was a snare devised to draw gentlemen under failyies." Spalding, ii. 225.

FEENICHIN, adj. Foppish, fantastical, Fife; apparently corr. from E. finical.

To KEEZE, to twist, sense 1. Add; I downa laugh, I downa sing, I downa feeze my fiddle-string.

A Douglas's Poems, p. 43.

FIAL, s. "Order was given that the drum should go through Aberdeen, commanding all apprentices, servants, and fials, not to change their masters while Martinmas next, with certification that they should be taken frae such masters as they feed with." Spalding, ii. 108.

This might seem to signify retainers, from Fr. feal, trusty, faithful, L.B. fevalis, and most probably fealis, as fealiter occurs. But from the connexion with feed, it may be a s. formed from the v.

fee, q. persons hired.

To Findle, v. n. To trifle, as at work, by making no progress although apparently busy, S. perhaps from Isl. fitl-a palpito, modicum tango; fite, minusculi alicujus opera, aut tactus levis; G. Andr. p. 71.

FIER, adj. Sound, healthy, S.

There's Jenny comely, fier, an' tight, Wi' cheeks like roses bloomin'.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 22.

This is the same with FERE, FER, q. v

FINGER-FED, adj. Delicately brought up, pampered, S.A. perhaps q. "fed with the spoon," in allusion to a child who has not been suckled.

FINGERIN. Add; Hence the phrase fingram stockins, S. Colvil's Mock Poem, P. ii. 9.

There fingram stockins spun on rocks lyes.—

FITSTED, s. "The print of the foot," Gl. Shirt. S.B. from Isl. fit foot, and Isl. Su.G. stad, A.S. sted, locus; q. the place where the foot has been set, or stood; for stad is from staa, to stand.

FLAW, s. An extent of ley or land under grass; sometimes, a broad ridge; Orkn. Isl. fla, planus, latus.

FLING, s. sense 2. from A. Douglas's Poems, p. 43. Dark cluds o' sorrow heavy hing Owre ilka ce; An' a' because ye've got the fling.

FLISK, v. Add; 2. To be fliskit, to be fretted.

But, Willie lad, tak' my advice,

An' at it binna fliskit. Ibid. p. 71.

FLUTHER, s. Hurry, bustle, S. But, while he spak, Tod Lawrie slie

Cam wi' an unco fluther,

He 'mang the sheep like fire did flee.

An' took a stately wedder. Ibid. p. 97. Expl. " flutter." But the word, I suspect, primarily respects the sudden rushing of water. V. FLODDER.

Foggie, adj. [Insert as sense 1.] Mossy, S.

Now I'll awa, an' careless rove

Owre youder foggy mountain. Ibid. p. 87.

Fore, s. Add; It is used in the same sense, S.O. It's no mony fores I get; I meet with few opportunities of an advantageous nature.

Forjesket, Forjidged. Add; The latter seems merely a metaph. use of O.Fr. forjug-er, "to judge, or condemne wrongfully; also, to disinherit, &c. to out by judgement;" Cotgr. or of L.B. forjudicare, corr. from forisjudicare, both used in the same sense. V. Spelman and Du Cange.

Forsel, s. An implement made of gloy and bands [or ropes made of bent, &c.] used for defending the back of a horse, when loaded with corn, hay, peats, ware, &c. Orkn. Flet synon. Caithn. V. CLIBBER.

Fow, adj. Add; Haaf-fow, fuddled, S. This corresponds to Sw. half-full, id. Seren. vo. Tippled.

To Foze, v. n. To lose the flavour, to become mouldy, Perths. E. fust. Fr. fusté, taking of the cask, from fuste, a cask. Isl. fue, however, signifies putredo, fuen putridus.

FRAIKIN, s. Flattery; sometimes, fond discourse, resembling flattery, although sincere, and proceeding from that elevation of the animal spirits which is produced by conviviality, S. A. Douglas's Poems, p. 135.

Now ither's hands they're shakin', Wi' friendship,love an' joy; Ye never heard sic fraikin', As does their tongues employ.

FREFF, adj. Shy, Roxburghs.; probably formed from fra or frae, from; like S. fram, strange, fraward, froward, and many Goth. words, FROATHSTICK, s. Watson's Coll. iii. 47. a stick for whipping up milk or making a sillabub, S.B.

GAMBET, I. 24. Add; Perhaps both gowre, and Fr. gorre, are allied to Isl. gaar, vir insolens (Gr. yave-os superbus); gaura gang, insolentias et strepitus; G. Andr. p. 85.

GAMP, adj. Seemingly, playful, sportive. In yonder town there wons a May, Snack and perfyte as can be ony,

She is sae jimp, sae gamp, sae gay, Sae capernoytie, and sae bonny.

Herd's Collection, ii. 23.

Perhaps from the same origin with GYMP, v. and

s. q. v.

GARSTY, s. Something resembling the remains of an old dike, Orkn. Isl. gardsto, locus et longitudo sepimenti, cnm ipso sepimento; Verel. Or from gard, an inclosure, and stija saginarium, a place in which weaned lambs are inclosed; G. Andr. p. 224.

GASH, adj. Add; 4. "Well prepared;" metaph. used in a general sense, S. A Douglas's Poems, p. 147.

The saft o'en cakes, in mony stack,

Are set in order rarely,

Fu' gash this night.
GAUT. Add; "Gawts and gilts, hog-pigs and sow-pigs;" Yorks. Dial. Clav.

GELORE. Add; "Golore, great plenty, or abundance." Clav. Yorks.

GERSSMAN. Add; "In an agreement between the churches of Eccles, and Stirling, which was made before David, his son Earl Henry, and his Barons, mention is made de Hurdmannis, et Bondis, et Gresmannis, et Mancipiis, MS. Monast. Scotiae, p. 106, ap. Caledonia, p. 720, N. (u). Hence perhaps Gersmanystoun, the name of some lands in the county of Clackmanan, given by David II. to Robert de Bruys; Robertson's Index, p. 76. No. 97.

"There was not a lock, key, band, nor window left unbroken down daily to the tenants, cottars, and Grassmen, who for fear of their lives had fled here and there," &c. Spalding, ii. 187.

GYNKIE. Add; This word signifies a giglet, Renfrews.

GIRD, s. A hoop. Add; Hence, GIRDER, a cooper, Loth.

GYRIE, (g soft), s. A stratagem, circumvention, Selkirks. evidently allied to INGYRE, q. v.

GLATTON, s. A handful, Clydes. synon. with GLACK, q. v.

GLOAMIN. Add; GLOAMIN-STAR, s. The evening-star, Loth.

GLOY, s. Add; This word in Orkney is understood differently; being expl. "straw of oats, kept much in the same manner as in harvest [in the sheaves, it would seem only the oats being taken Glunsh, v. The idea of its being formed from Gloum derives strength from the pron. in Fife. This is glumch, or rather glumsh.

An' whan her marriage day does come,

Ye maun na gaung to glumch an' gloom.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 45.
To GNAP, 1. Add; 2. To bite at, to gnaw. "In the nethermost [window] the Earle of Morton was standing gnapping on his staffe end, and the king & Monsieur d' Obignie above," &c. Mellvill's MS. p. 55.

GORBACK, s. A sort of rampart, or longitudinal heap of earth thrown up, resembling an earthen wall, and suggesting the idea of its having been originally meant as a line of division between the lands of different proprietors; Orkn. It is also called Treb. Su.G. goer-a, Isl. gior-a, facere, and balk-ur, strues, cumulus; q. a heap of earth forced up; or Su.G. balk, a ridge unploughed, q. a balk made by art.

To Gonge, v. n. A term used to denote the noise made by the feet, when the shoes are filled with water, Fife; synon. Chork. V. Chirk. Gossiprie, s. Intimacy.—"As to that bishop-rick he [Mr. P. Adamson] would in no wise accept of it without the advice of the Generall Assembly, & neverthcless er the next Assembly he was seized hard & fast on the bishoprick, whereby all gossipric gade up between him and my uncle Mr. Andrew." Mellvill's MS. p. 36.

Go-summer. Add; "The go-summer was matchless fair in Murray, without winds, wet, or any storm; the corns was well winn," &c. Spalding, i. 34. Expl. "the latter end of summer," Gl.

Gourse, s. pl. The garbage of salmon. "Since the beginning of the troubles, and coming of soldiers to Aberdeen,-few or no corbies were seen in either Aberdeens., at the Waterside of Dee or Don, or the shore, where they wont to flock abundantly for salmon gouries." Spalding, i. 332. The refuse of the intestines of salmon is still called salmon gouries, and used as bait for eels, Aberd. Isl. Su.G. gor, gorr, sanies, excrementum. Hence, says Ihre, the proverbial phrase, Ega med gorr och haar, to possess any animal, cum intestinis et pilo, with the entrails and hair; or, as otherwise expressed, med hull och haar. V. Hilt and HAIR. E. garbage has been viewed as comp. of gor and bagge, sacculus, q. totum compositum intestina includens; Seren.

Goustrous, Insert as sense 1. A goustrous nicht, a dark, wet, stormy night; including the idea of the loudness of the wind and rain, as well as of the gloomy effect of the darkness; Dumfr. Add to etymon; In sense 1., which seems the original one, it more nearly resembles Isl. giostr, ventus frigidus, aura subfrigida; giost, afflatus frigidus; giostugr, gelidus, subgelidus; giostur, aer frigescit; G. Andr. p. 89 most probably from gioola, aura frigida; Ibid. q. gioolstr, &c.

Gramashes. Add; L.B. gamacha, pedulis lanei species, quae etiam superiorem pedis partem tegit, vulgo Gamache; Du Cange. He subjoins, that, in Languedoc, garamacho is synon.

GREY, s. A badger, K. Quair, v. 5.

The herknere bore, the holsum grey for hortis. I am informed, by a gentleman, who has paid particular attention to this subject, that, in old books of surgery, badger's grease is mentioned as an ingredient in plaisters; undoubtedly as holsum for hortis, i. e. hurts or wounds. He views the designation herknere as applicable to the wild boar, because he is noted for his quickness of hearing, and when hunted halts from time to time, and turns up his head on one side, to listen if he be pursued. O.E. graie, graye, id. Palsgr. Huloet.; gray, Dr. Johns., although he gives no example. The animal seems thus denominated from its colour. In Sw., however, the name is graefling, apparently from graeft-a to dig.

GREW. Delete. "Grey is used in the same sense,

King's Quair, v. 5."

GRYMING. Add; But perhaps we may rather view the term as slightly changed from the Isl. v. 2mp.rs. graan-ar, which has precisely the same together; as denoting the effect of the appearance of the Irst flakes of snow on the ground. Primis nivium floweriks terra canescit; Run. Jon. Dict. p. 401.

GRIP. Add; C.B. grit, lapis quidam arenosus; Davies.

Guar. Add; 5. Swelled with rain, S. "They could not ride the water, it being great," &c. Spalding, i. 198.

Gulbow, s. Expl. "a word of intimacy or friendship; Orkn. Isl. gilld sodalitium, and bo incola, q. a member of one society?

GULSOCH, s. A voracious appetite, Ang. Teut. gulsigh, gulosus, ingluviosus, vorax.

HABBLE, v. n. sense 2. Add; Sic habblin' an' gabblin', Ye never heard nor saw.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 121.

" Speaking or acting confusedly;" Gl.

HACKREY-LOOK'D, adj. Having a coarse visage, gruff; or pitted with the small-pox, Orkn.

To HAIG, v. n. Perhaps, to cry as a calf; Moray. The caure did haig, the queis low;

And ilka bull hes got his cow.

Jamieson's Popul. Ball. i. 286.

If, to frisk, to skip; it must be allied to Su.G. hi-a, Isl. hy-a, ludire, ludificare. Hiog, in anc. Dan., signified folly; Ihre, vo. Hacgoma, vanitas.

HAILSOME, adj. Wholesome, S. "The Ministers of thir new sectes hes na vther subterfuge,—bot to reject the hailsome doctrine of thir most lernit and godlie fathers." Hamilton's Facile Traictise, p. 22. Germ. heilsam, sanus, from heil, Su.G. hel, health. V. Hell.

HALD, v. Add; To hald in, v. n. To spare, to be frugal, S. v. a. To save, to render unnecessary, S. "Ik presbyter had given up—the names of the disaffected ministry within their presbytery,—whilk held in their travels frae coming to Tarriff to the meeting." Spalding, p. 195.

Tarriff to the meeting." Spalding, p. 195.

HALLOKIT. Add; Hallagad, id. Orkn.; expl.
"a person somewhat foolish."

HAUP. Add;

But he could make them turn or veer, And hap or wynd them by the ear.

Meston's Poems, p. 16.

HEART-AXES, s. The heartburn or Cardialgia, Loth. The common cure for it, in the country, is to swallow sclaters, or wood-lice. A.S. heort-ece, id.

HECKABIRNEY, s. Any lean, feeble creature, Orku.

HECKAPURDES, s. The state of a person, when alarmed by any sudden danger, loss, or calamity, Orkn. q. a quandary.

To Heckle on, v. n. To continue in keen argumentation. The King—entering to touch matters, Mr. Andrew broke out with his wonted humour of freedom & zeal, & there they heckled on till all the house and closs both heard much of a large hour." Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 302.

HEYTIE, s. A name for the game elsewhere denominated Shintie, Loth. It is also called Hummie, ibid.

HEREYESTERDAY. Add; The ancient pron. is retained in Banffs., without the aspirate; air-yesterday.

HERSKET, s. The Cardialgia, Orkn. the same with Heartscald, q. v.

HINK, s. "But the doing of it at that time, and by such a compaction, was a great hink in my heart, and wrought sore remorse at the news of his death." Mellvill's MS. p. 307. Perhaps q. halt, from Teut. hinck-en, Germ. hink-en, claudicare, Su.G. hwink-a vacillare.

HODLACK, s. A rick of hay, Ettrick Forest.

Holf, col. 3. after 1. 42. Add. The learned Strutt. has thrown considerable light on the reason of this designation in later times. " During the government of Henry the Third," he says, "the just assumed a different appellation, and was called the ROUND TABLE GAME; this name was derived from a fraternity of knights who frequently justed with each other, and accustomed themselves to cat together in one apartment, and, in order to set aside all distinction of rank, or quality, seated themselves at a circular table, where every place was equally honourable." In a Note on the word Just, it is observed; "Matthew Paris properly distinguishes it from the tournament. Non hastiludio, quod torneamentum dicitur, sed-ludo militari, qui mensa rotunda dicitur. Hist. Angl. sub. an. 1252." He adds; "In the eighth year of the reign of Edward the First, Roger de Mortimer, a nobleman of great opulence, established a round table at Kenelworth, for the encouragement of military pastimes: where one hundred knights, with as many ladies, were entertained at his expence. The fame of this institution occasioned, we are told, a great influx of foreigners, who came either to initiate themselves, or make some public proof of their prowess. About seventy years afterwards, Edward the Third erected a splendid table of the same kind at Windsor, but upon a more extensive scale. It contained the area of a circle two hundred feet in diameter; and the weekly expence for the maintenance of this table, when it was first established, amounted to one hundred pounds.—The example of King Edward was followed by Philip of Valois king of France, who also instituted a round table at his court, and by that means drew thither many German and Italian knights who were coming to England. The contest between the two monarchs seems to have had the effect of destroying the establishment of the round table in both kingdoms; for after this period we hear no more concerning it. In England the round table was succeeded by the Order of the Garter," &c. Sports and Pastimes, p. 109. 110.

Hoir, 1. I have fallen into a mistake in supposing, that the idea of giving a place in the heavens to Arthur had originated with the Bishop of Dunkeld. Lydgate, in his Fall of Princes, B. viii.

c. 24. speaks of this as an astronomical fact well known in his time. He calls Arthur the sonne, i. e. sun, of Bretayn.

Thus, of Bretayn translated was the sonne Up to the rich sterry bright dongeon; Astronomers wel rehearse konne, Called Arthur's constellation.

Holliglass, s. " A character in the old Romances;" Gl. Poems 16th Cent.

Now Holyglass, returning hame, To play the sophist, thought no schame.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 311.

"" Speaking of the Councell, that he had called them Holliglasses, Cormorants, & men of no religion." Spotswood's Hist. p. 424. Can this be a corr. of Gallowglass, a term used by Shakspeare?

Hollion, s. A word in Ang. sometimes conjoined with hip. The precise sense seems to be lost.

An' o'er, baith hip an' hollion, She fell that night.

Morison's Poems, p. 24.

Su.G. hel och haallen (hollen) entirely, quite. Home, adj. Close, urgent, S. "The city, both magistrates and ministers, are now engaged-in very home and earnest petitions for the erection of general and provincial assemblies," &c. Baillie, ii. 169.

HOSTELER. Add; This word retained its original sense so late as the reign of Charles I. " Night being fallen, he lodges in Andrew Haddentoun's at the yett-cheek, who was an ostler."-" James Gordon, Ostler of Turriesoul." Spalding, i. 17. 39.

Hup, Legend Bp. St. Androis, p. 324. Ane cryis, Gar pay me for my eall .-How dar this dastard hud our geir? "Hoard," Gl. perhaps rather hide. V. Hod. Hummie, s. V. Heytie.

HWINKLED-FACED, adj. Lantern-jawed, Orkn. perhaps q. having sharp corners, from Su.G. hwinckel, an angle, a corner.

JANTY. Add; This is undoubtedly the same with E. jaunty, expl. by Dr. Johns. "shewy, fluttering." Bailey gives what seems its proper sense; " romp-JIMP, adj. 2. Add; Apparently, the same with skimp in vulgar E. as in Garrick's May-day.

Then the fops are so fine, With lank wasted chine, And a little skimp bit of a hat.

This form of the word confirms the etymon given, vo. Gymp.

To Jirble, v. n. To spill liquids, Fife. It seems to have been originally the same with Jirgle.

Innerly, adj. Affectionate; possessing sensibility or compassion; S.A. Sw. innerlig, affectionate, from the bottom of one's heart; Wideg. from inner, inward, interior.

Inspraich. Add, from Legend Bp. St. Androis,

Tua leathering bosses he hes bought; -Heir all the inspraich he provydit.

Immist, adj. Uppermost, Banffs. V. Umast. YRLE, s. A dwarf.

Wansuckitfunnling, that Nature made an yrle,&c. Kennedie, Evergreen, ii. 49. V. WANSUCKIT. Isl. yrling-r vermiculus, G. Andr. p. 137. a small worm; also applied to the young of little beasts. Or it may be corr. from wurl, one of the forms which warwolf has assumed. As, however, nirl denotes a dwarf, S.B. it is possible that n has been omitted by Kennedie, or by some copyist, as not belonging to the term. For where words have not formerly been written, beginning with a vowel, It is sometimes doubtful, whether n belongs to them, or only to the article preceding; the pronunciation being in both cases the same.

Joblet, Maitl. Poems, p. 90. V. WARDRAIPPER. Jouk, s. Add; 5. A trick, a deception.

To George Durrie he played a juike, That will not be foryet this oulke.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, p. 339. Add; "They punish-delinquentsmaking them stand in Jogges, as they call them, Pillaries, (which in the country churches are fixed to the two sides of the maine doore of the Parish-Church) cutting the halfe of their haire, shaving their beards," &c. Maxwell's Burthen of Issachar, 3. Jursie, adj. Expl. "big-headed, dull, and having a slothful appearance," Orkn.

KEEK, s. V. proof, vo. Wintle.
KITTLE, adj. Add to sense 2. "This year riding up to Carnbie-upon a kitle hot ridden horse,he cuist me over on the other bank with the sadle betwixt my legs," &c. Mellvill's MS. p. 183.

Lagabag, s. The hindmost or last, Fife; apparently from lag and aback.

LAITHLY, LAIDLY. Add; A lascivious person is commonly designed "a laidly lown," Ang. But it seems very doubtful whether this be radically the same word.

LAYKYNG, s. Play; applied to justing. -Ramsay til hym coym in hy, And gert hym entre. Swne than he Sayd, 'God mot at yhoure laykyng be!' Syne sayd he, 'Lordis, on qwhat manere

'Will yhe ryn at this justyng here?'

Wyntown, viii. 35. 76. V. LAIK, s. 3.

LAYME, LEEM, adj. Earthen. 'As the fyire preiffis and schawis the layme vessellis maid be ane pottar, sa temptatioun of troubil preiffis & schawis iust men." Abp. Hamiltoun's Catechisme, Fol. 187. b. V. Lame. In definition del. ware. " Are we not God's leem vessels, and yet when they cast us over an house we are not broken in sheards." Ruth. Lett. P. i. ep. 48.

LAING, s. A small ridge of land; as distinguished from Skift, which signifies a broad ridge; Orkn. LAMB'S TONGUE. r. Corn mint, S. Mentha arvensis, Linn.

To LAND, v. n. To end, S. Callander's MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Laenda, appellere; pertinere. But our term is merely a metaph. use of the E. v., from the idea of terminating a voyage. How did ye land? How did the business terminate? q. How did ye come to land?

LAPRONE, s. A young rabbit. "Forsamekill, as the derth of scheip, cuningis, and wylde meit daylie incressis, & that throw the slauchter of the young Lambis, Lapronis and young poutis of pertrik or wylde foule:-that na maner of persoun tak vpone hand to slay ony Lapronis or young poutis, except gentilmen and vthers nobillis with halkis, &c. Acts Mar. 1551. c. 21. Edit. 1566. Lapron in E. Loth., as I am informed, denotes a young hare, as syuon. with lerret.

LASCHE. Add; Isl. hlessa, onustus, fessus, from hlesse onero. Under this adj. insert

To Lash out, v. n. To break out, to be relaxed in a moral seuse. "O shelter mee and saue me from the visoundnesse of a deceitfull heart, that I lach not out into the excesse of supperfluitie of wickednesse." Z. Boyd's L. Battell, p. 826. MocsG. laus-jan, Su.G. locs-a, liberare, solvere.

LAST. Add; This seems to be from Isl. hlas, quantum portat traha vel currus, q. a carriage-load; from hless-a onerare, to load; G. Andr.

LATIENCE, s. Leisure; a word mentioned by Callander, MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Lis-a, mora, otium. This seems the same with S.B. leeshins, id. V.

LATRON, s. A privy, Fr. latrine. "He also tirred the latrons in the college, whereby the students had not such natural easment as before," &c. Spalding, ii. 47.

LATTER-MEAT, 8. "Victuals brought from the master's to the servants' table," S.

Anes thrawart porter wad na let Him in while latter meat was hett;

He gaw'd fou sair.

Ramsay's Poems, i. 237.

To LAW, v. a. To litigate, to subject to legal investigation and determination, S.

LAW-FREE, adj. Not legally convicted or condemned. "The earl answered, he would prefer him to his good-brother Frendraught; but to quit him who had married his sister, so long as he was lawfree, he could not with his honour." Spalding, i. 17.
To Leather, v. n. To go cheerfully, to move briskly, S. a low word.

An' shearers frae the hamlets roun' Wi' souple shanks war leatherin.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 142.

LECHE, v. Add; "To leich the sare, Scot." Callander's MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Laek-a, mederi.

LECK, s. The name given to any stone that stands a strong fire, as greenstone, trapp, &c. or such as is generally used in ovens, Fife, Loth.

LEEM, adj. Earthen. V. Layme above.

LEESOME. (Insert vo. Leifsum). 3. "Easily moved to pity," S.A.

Ye wives! whase leesome hearts are fain To get the poor man's blessin, Your trampit girnels dinna hain,

What's gien will ne'er be missin.

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 27.

To LEET, v. a. To nominate with a view to election, S.

"Mr. David Calderwood—has pressed so a new way of leeting the Moderator for time to come, that puts in the hand of base men to get one whom they please, to our great danger." Baillie's Lett.

ii. 261. V. Leet, s. Leg-bane, s. The shin, S. Callander's MS. Notes on Ihre, vo. Laegg, os.

To Leif, to live. Add; A.S. be-lif-an signifies superesse, to be left, to remain; be-liftend, vivens, superstes, remanens, living, surviving, remaining: Somner.

Leil, sense 5. Add; In this sense, although figuratively, it is applied to maledictions.

An' on that sleeth Ulysses head Sad curses down does bicker; If there be gods aboon, I'm seer He'll get them lecl and sicker.

Poems in the Buchan Dialect, p. 6. To Lein, v. n. To cease. It occurs in a curious attempt at wit, at the expence of Lauderdale and Rothes.

But Scotland's plague's, a plague of Dukes: But they're such Dukes as soon do tyre To plash together in one myre, And so the one the other out pakes, Which makes folk think they're all but Drakes. --For pareing time, and all the year, Is one to them, they never lein; Harvest and Hay time they're as keen In their debating, as it were After the last of Januare.

Cleland's Poems, p. 96. V. LEEN. To LEIP, v. n. Apparently, to boil. Myn wittis hes he waistit oft with wyne;

And maid my stomek with hait lustis leip. King Hart, ii. 62. V. LEPE, v.

To LENE, v. a. To give, to grant. V. SYTHENS, and LENIT.

LENT, adj. Slow. "The last trick they have fallen on to usurp the magistracy, is, by the diligence of their sessioners to make factions in every craft, to get the deacons—created of their side.— But this lent way does not satisfy. It is feared, by Wariston's diligence, some orders shall be procured by Mr. Gillespie, to have all the magistrates and council chosen as he will." Baillie's Lett. ii. 435. Fr. lent, Lat. lent-us, id. This is perhaps to be preferred, as the origin of Lent-fire, to that given in Dict.

LENTRIN KAIL, broth made without flesh, S.

—The bowl that warms the fancy An' promps the tale,

Must mak, neist day, my lovely Nancy Sup lentrin kail!

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, i. 182.

LERROCH, s. This is evidently Gael. larach, the site of a building, or the traces of an old one.

In its auld lerroch yet the deas remains, Whare the gudeman aft streeks him at his ease.

Fergusson's Poems, ii. 58. To Let on, sense 1. Add; "While I pray, Christ letteth not on him that he either heareth or seeth me." Z. Boyd's L. Battell, p. 315.

Add to sense 2.

But they need na let on that he's crazie, His pike-staff wull ne'er let him fa.'

Rev. J. Nicol's Poems, ii. 157. LETTERON, sense 2. Add; "The whole expences of the proces and pices of the lyble, lying in a severall buist by themselves in my lettron, I estimate to a hundred merks." Mellvill's MS. p. 5.

LEWRAND, part. pr. Expl. "lowring;" rather, lurking, laying snares.

The legend of a lymmeris lyfe,—Ane elphe, ane clvasche incubus,
Ano legerand lawrie licherous.

Legend Bp. St. Androis, Poems 16th Cent. p. 309. It is merely a different orthography of Loure, v. q. v. The sense given is confirmed by the junction of the adj. with the s. lawrie, a crafty person; as the passage contains a further illustration of Lowrie, id. sense 2.

LIAM. This word is still used in Tweedd. for a rope made of hair.

Ly-by, s. A neutral, q. one who lies aside. "I appeal in this matter to the experience and observation of all who take notice of their way; and how little they trouble others, their master [Satan] fearing little, or finding little damage to his dominion,—by these lazy ly-bies and idle loiterers." Postscr. to Ruth. Lett. p. 513.

LIFEY, adj. Lively, spirited, S. Callander's MS. Notes on Ihre.

LILY, s. The aphthae, a disease of children, S. LIMITOUR. Add; Tyndale gives a different view of the meaning of this word. "Howbeit suche maner sendynges are not worldly, as prynces sende theyr Ambasadours, no nor as freres send theyr lymyters to gather theyr brotherhedes whiche muste obeye whether they wyll or wyll not." Obedyence of a Chrysten man, F. 50, a.

LINDER. Add; This garment, which is generally made of blue wooflen cloth, sits close to the body, and has a number of flaps or skirts all round, hanging down about six inches from the waist. The tradition in Ang. is, that it was borrowed from the Danes, and has been in use since the period of their invasions.

LIN-PIN, LINT-PIN, s. The linchpin, S. Su.G. lunta, paxillus axis, Belg. londse.

LYPE, s. A crease, a fold, S.

LITHRY. Add; This seems originally the same with Ladry.

LITTLEANE. Add; Hamilton writes this as a compound term; "The declaration—of thy wordis lichtens, and gewis trew intelligence to the lytil anes." Facile Traictise, p. 69.

LOAGS, s. pl. Stockings without feet, Stirlings. Logs, Loth. synon. Hoeshins, Moggans, q. v.

LOAN, LONE, s. "It concerns his Majesty's lieges—to repair when and where he thinks fitting, upon 48 hours advertisement, with 15 days lone. These are therefore to require and command you,—to be in readiness, and prepared with 15 days provision."—"Ilk heritor to furnish his prest men with 40 days loan, and arms conform." Spalding, i. 115. 248. Also 116, II. 234. It is here explained by provision, but seems properly to signify wages, pay; Germ. lohn, id. Sn.G. loen, merces, from laen-a, to give. V. Laen, Ihre, p. 30.

LOCKMAN. Add, after 1. 16. "The Provost and Bailies of Edinburgh, as Sheriffs within themselves,—do judge Alexander Cockburn their Hangman or Locksman within three suns,—for murdering in his own house one of the licensed Blue-gown beggars," &c. Fountainhall, i. 169.

LOMPNYT. Add; It is singular, that the Gael. retains the same word with that in Isl., only with Vol. II.

a slight change of the vowel: Lonn, timbers laid under boats in order to launch them the more easily, Shaw.

Lonnachs, s. pl. Quick-grass, (Triticum repens) gathered in a heap for being burnt, otherwise called wrack, Mearns.

Lour. Add; 5. To run, to move with celerity. "His men leaves the pursuit, and loups about to lift him up again; but as they are at this work, the said James Grant—loups frae the house and flees." Spalding, I. 31. "It is said that the natives lap to arms, about 20,000 men;" p. 331. Sign. Ff. It still bears this sense, S. B.

----This made my lad at length to loup,

And take his heels.
Forbes's Dominie Denosed, v. 27

Forbes's Dominie Deposed, p. 27. Hence Land-louper, q. v., q. one who flees the country.

In most of the Northern languages, this is the primary sense. Su.G. loep-a, Belg, loop-en, Germ. lauff-en, Isl. leip-a, Dan. lob-er, to run. Su.G. lopp, cursus, loepare cursor.

6. To Lour on, to mount on horseback, S. "The marquis—loups on in Aberdeen.—He lap on—about 60 horse with him;" Spalding, I. 107. The prep. is sometimes inverted. "At his onlouping the earl of Argyle—had some private speeches with him." II. 91.

7. To Lour out, to run (or spring) out of doors.
When gentle-women are convoy'd,

He soon loups out to bear their train.

Many's Truth's Travels, Pennecuik's Poems, p. 104. LOURD, adj. Sottish; Fr. id. "Well: this is his least, al-be-it even a lourd error." Forbes's Eubulus, p. 23.

LOURE. Add; The term seems to be still used in this sense, Fife, as in A. Douglas's Poems, p. 141.

Kate had been hinmaist ay before, An' in her bed lang lourin.

Luck. Upon lucks head, on chance, in a way of peradventure. "Therefore upon lucks head, (as we use to say) take your fill of his love." Ruth. Lett. P. II. ep. 28.

LUCKEN, v. Add; 3. To gather up in folds, to pucker; applied to cloth. "Haddo prepared himself nobly for death, and caused make a syde holland cloth sark, luckened at the head, for his winding-sheet." Spalding, II. 218.

LUNKIT. Add; Lunkit sowens, sowens beginning to thicken in boiling, Loth.

Maiden. Add; We learn from Godscroft, that Morton had caused this instrument be made "after the patterne which he had seen in Halifax in Yorkshire;" p. 356.

* MAIDEN, s. The designation commonly given, by way of honorary distinction, to the eldest daughter of a farmer, S.

MAIL-FREE, adj. Without paying rent, S. imperly written meal-free. "But the truth is, that many of you, and too many also of your neighbour church of Scotland, have been like a tenant that sitteth meal-free, and knoweth not his holding while his rights be questioned." Ruth. P. I. ep. 3.

MAIST, adv. Almost, S. V. Proof, vo. Mumps. MAISTER. Add; 3. A designation given, by the courtesy of the country, to the eldest son of a Baron or Viscount, conjoined with the name from which his father takes his title, S. "About this time the Lord Banff and Master of Banff's grounds were plundered, and the master (his father being in Edinburgh) unhappily hurt a serjeant." Spalding, 11. 263.

4 2

MALAGRUGROUS. Add; Perhaps it is of Gael. origin; from mala, having gloomy brows, (V. BAMULLO), and gruagath, a female giant, also, a ghost superstitiously supposed to haunt houses, called in Scotland a Browny; Shaw.

MANE. Breid of Mane. Add; Palsgraue expl. Payne mayne, payn de bouche. This, according to Cotgr., is the same with Pain mollet, "a very light, very crusty, and savoury white bread, full of eyes, leaven, and salt."

Marrow, s. Add. 4. An antagonist. V. Proof

VO. ONTER.

Mase, s. A kind of net, with wide meshes, made of twisted straw ropes; used in Orkney. It is laid across the back of a horse, for fastening on sheaves of corn, hay, &c. also for supporting the cussies, or straw-baskets, which are borne as panniers, one on each side of a horse. It is most probably denominated from its form; Su.G. maska, Dan. mask, Teut. masche, signifying, macula retis, the mesh of a net.

MAUN, Muckle maun. Add; —Uncanny nicksticks - Aften gie the maidens sick licks, As mak them blyth to skreen their faces Wi' hats and muckle maun bon-graces. Fergusson's Poems, ii. 68.

MAZER. Add; Isl. mausur bolli, Sw. masarund dryckeskop; poculus ex betula adultiori, nodosiori, adeoque duriori confectus, q. mazer-bowl or cup. V. Verel.

MERCH. Add; 3. Transferred to the mind, as denoting understanding. "The ancient and lernit-Tertulian sayes, that the trew word of God consistes in the merch and invart intelligence, and not in the vtuart scruf & externel wordis of the scriptures." Hamilton's Facile Traictise, p. 31.

METHINK. Add; Semys me is an example of the same construction; Doug. Virgil, 374. 19.

O douchty King, thou askis counsale, said he, Of that matere, quhilk as semys me,

Is nouthir dirk nor doutsum, but full clere. Him thocht is used in a similar manner; Barbour, iv. 618, MS.

Him thocht weill he saw a fyr, &c.

MILKNESS. Add; 4. The produce of the dairy in whatever form, S. "-Grass and corns were burnt up and dried in the blade, whilk made also great scarcity of all milkness, butter and cheese." Spalding, II. 27. The passage from Ross, given sense 1., properly belongs to this.

MILKORTS, or MILKWORTS, s. The name given to the root of the Campanula Rotundifolia, S. B.

MIRROT. Add; Meeran signifies a carrot, A. berd. Gael. miuron, id.; miuron geal, a parsnip; Shaw. This is q. a white carrot; geal signifying white.

Mischantnesse, s. Wickedness. "So they for their greater satisfaction, and contentment, delight to play out their sceane; -which I confesse is so profound and deep a folly, and mischantnesse, that I can by no means sound it, &c." Hume's Hist. Doug. p. 153.

MISGAR, s. A kind of trench, in sandy ground, occasioned by the wind driving away the sand; Orkn. Perhaps from Isl. missgiori, misgera, delinguere; misgerd, delictum, used in a literal sense.

To Misgully, v. a. To cut in a clumsy manner, to mangle in cutting; Fife, q. to use the gully or knife amiss; synon. MARGULYIE, GUDDLE.

MIXT, part. pa. Disordered; applied to one who is in some degree ailing, Banfis. In other places, it denotes partial intoxication, q. tipsy.

Moggans. Add; This word has been of general use. For Shaw expl. Gael. mogan "a boothose". He renders Galligaskin by the same term.

Molligrant. Add; Molligrunt; Loth. Isl. mogl, refragrantium obmurmuratio. Muli signifies, cloudy, gloomy. Nokot litit mulin: Vultu tristi et nubilo; Verel. Perhaps the last syllable is from E. grunt, Sw. grymt-a, id.

Mononday. Add; Some, who might well be supposed more enlightened, will not give away money on this day of the week, or on the first day of the Moon.

MORTAR-STONE, s. A stone formerly used for preparing barley, by separating it from the husks; as serving the same purpose with a mortar in which substances are beaten, S.

Mortersheen. Add; -" The other two regiments-was scattered here and there, and many of the horses dead in the mortechien." Spalding, II. 275. Fr. mort aux chiens, a carcase for the dogs; from the hopeless nature of this disease?

MORTYM. Add; This is supposed to be the common Martin, Hirundo urbica, Linn.; often called mertym, South of S.

Mossfaw, s. Any building in a ruinous state, Fife; viewed as meaning, most, or almost, falling.

Moss-CHEEPER. 2. This term is also used to denote the Tit-lark, Alauda prateusis, Linn. "In descending the Urioch hill, I found the nest of a titlark, or Moss-cheeper." Fleming's Tour in Arran.

To Mote, 1. v. a. To pick motes out of any thing, S. 2. v. n. Metaph. to use means for discovering imperfections, S. V. Proof. vo. SAYARE.
To Mouligh, v. n. To whimper, to whine,

Avrs. Isl. moegl-a, to murmur, moegl, act of murmuring. Teut. muyl-en, to project the snout from displeasure or indignation, to mutter, to murmur; from muyl, the mouth.

MUFFITIES. Add; The term is used in the same sense, Orkn.

Mullis. Add; "He had no coat, but a pair of black breeks, white socks, and a pair of mools on his feet." Spalding, II. 218.

MURMLED, adj. A man or beast is said to be murmled about the feet, when going lame, Loth. S. A. sometimes murbled. Probably from A. S. maerwa, Su.G. mocr, Teut. merwe, murwe, Germ. murb, tener, mollis, q. made tender. Teut. morwen mollire.

Mushinfow, adj. Cruel, W. Loth.; perhaps q. mischant-foro.

NACKS, s. A disease of poultry, of the asthmatic kind, cured by smeering their nostrils with butter and snuff, Loth.

NAR, Poems 16th Century, p. 292, given in Gl. as not understood, means nigher, being merely the comparative in its A.S. form, near propinquior, from neah propinguus.

Quhen all wes done, we had not bene the nar. NEB. Add; 3. Applied to the snout. "You breed of Kilpike's swine, your neb's never out [of] an ill turn." S. Prov. p. 362.

Neck-verse, Add; This phrase has been common in Henry VIII's time. Hence Tyndale says of the Roman clergy: "But hate thy neyghboure as moche as thou wylt, -yea robbe hym, morther hym, and then come to them and welcome. They have a sanctuary for the, to save the, yea and a necke uerse, if thou canst rede but a lytle latenly thoughe it be neuer so soryly, so that thou be redy to receyue the beastes marke." Obedyence of a Crysten man, F. 69. a.

Newings, s. pl. Novelties. "Strokes were not newings to him; and neither are they to you."

Ruth. Lett. P. III. ep. 27.

To NIGHT, v. n. To lodge during night. "They nighted for their own pay in the Old town." Spalding, I. 291. Isl. naatt-a, pernoctare.

NIRL. Add; 3. It is often used to denote a puny dwarfish person, whether man or child, S. B. Sometimes an udj. is conjoined; as, a weary nirl, a feeble pigmy.

NIRLED, adj. Stunted; applied to trees, Loth. most probably q. knurled. V. NIRL.

NIVLOCK, s. A bit of wood, around which the end of a hair-tether is fastened, for holding by, Banffs. Aberd. from nieve, Su.G. naefwe the fist, and perhaps lycka, a knot, fibula, nodus; Ihre.

Now. Add; Isl. kalk, kiaelke, literally the check; metaph. an isthmus, a promontory; G.

Andr. p. 139.

For Olai Lex. Run. (in several places) r. Olavii. OMNE-GATHERUM. Add; This term was in use in the 16th century, although written somewhat differently. It occurs in Legend Bp. St. Androis, p. 332.

Of his auld sermon he had perquier. -Of omnigatherene now his glose, He maid it lyk a Wealchman hose.

Orntren. Add; This is evidently the same with Cumb. Orndoorns, afternoons drinkings; corrupted, says Grose, from onedrins; Prov. Gl. A. Bor.

earnder signifies the afternoon.

Germ. undern, onderen, to dine, prandere, meridiari; Wachter. Ulphilas uses undaurnimat for dinner; Luke xiv. 12. Unday, with the A. Saxons, properly denoted the third hour, that is, according to our reckoning, nine A. M. Junius (Gl. Goth.) shews from Bede, I. iii. c. 6, that this, with our forefathers, was the time of dinner. A. S. vndern mete is explained both breakfast, and dinner; and indeed, it would appear that it was their first meal, or, in other words, that they had only one meal for breakfast and dinner. Both Junius and Wachter view the Goth. terms as derived from C.B. anterth, denoting the third hour. According to the latter, this is transposed from Lat. tertiana. Eender, or yeender, Derbysh., which must be viewed as originally the same word, retains more of the primary sense: for it signifies the forenoon; Gl. Grose.

Osan. Poems 16th century, p. 186, given in

Gl. as not understood, is for Hosannah.

-Angels singes euer Osan In laude and praise of our Gude-man.

Formed obliquely from A. S. ut-ian expellere, E.

OUTRED, s. Add; 3. To clear; used as to paying off debt. "The whilk sum, by the special blessing of God in the tythings, I might easily have outred,-if the boarding of my foresaids fellow labourer & school-master had not been upon me." Melvill's MS. p. 5. Sw. utred-a, to disentangle. Owkly, adj. Weckly, S.

But nae man o' sober thinkin E'er will say that things can thrive, If there's spent in owkly drinkin What keeps wife and weans alive.

Macneill's Poetical Works, i. 19. V. Oulk. Pace and Paisses should have been thrown together.

PAFFLE. Add; Poffle, Lanarks. It seems doubtful, whether this has any affinity to O. E. picle, pightel, pingle, a small parcel of land inclosed with a hedge; Phillips.

PALYARD. Add; It is pallart, Legend Bp. St.

Androis, p. 313.

Freir Johnstoun, and Maguhane about him. Tua pallartis that the Pope professis.

To Pander, v. n. A corr. of Pawmer, Perths. PAPPANT. Add; Peppint, Bauffs., is used in sense 2; being applied to those who exercise great care about themselves or others, for warding off any thing that might be hurtful. The v. is also in use; to peppin, to cocker, to treat as a pet; synon. pettle.

To Party, v. a. To take part with. -44 This house of Abernethie were friends and followers of the Cummins, and did assist and party them in all their enterprises." Hume's Hist. Doug. 16.

To Passivere, v. a. To exceed, W. Loth. probably corr. from pass over.

Peerie. Add; Peerie-wirrie, very little or small, Ork. Peile. v. l. 33, for Ibid. r. Acts Ja. V. 1540. Add; -When I threw out the idea, that Peil might be the same with E. pile, I had not observed that this is confirmed by the orthography of our term in that act of Parliament in which it first occurs.

-" That na persounis dwelland outwith Burrowis vse ony merchandice: And that nane pak nor pile in Leith, nor vthers placis without the Kingis Burrowis vnder the pane of the escheting of the gudis to the Kingis vse, that beis tappit, sauld, pakit, or pilit agane this statute." Acts Ja. IV. 1503. c. 119. Edit. 1566. 2. The phrase packing and peiling is now metaph. used to denote unfair means of carrying on trade in a corporation; as when one, who is a freeman, allows the use of his name in trade to another who has not this privilege, S. "The Saddlers-were erected into an incorporation, by seal of cause, in 1536, with exclusive privileges.-James Dunlop and others, merchants in Glasgow, [1757], entered into copartnery, purposing upon their own stock and credit, to carry on the manufactory of saddles, principally for exportation. They assumed as partners three persons who were freemen of the incorporation; and they set up shop in their name. The incorporation brought an action against them, concluding that the three, saddlers should be discharged to pack and peel with unfreemen, and the merchants prohibited to work in the business appropriated to the incorporation.— That they shall not pack or peel with unfreemen. nor cover unfreemen's goods." Faculty Decisions, Vol. II. p. 30. 31. (Edin. 1788.)

PERRAKIT, s. A designation given, in Fife, to a sagacious, talkative, or active child; apparently corr. from E. parroquet.

PENKLE, s. A rag, a fragment, Perths.

PIKE, v. 2. Add; "Finding us contrare our course, --- he cuist about & pyked on the wind, holding both the helm and sheet." Mellvill's MS. p. 115.

PIK-MIRK. Add;

Thanks, quo' Will ;--- I canna tarry, Pik-mirk night is setting in. Macneill's Poetical Works, i. 16.

PINALDS, s. pl. A spinet; Fr. espinette. "Our Regent had also the pinalds in his chamber." Mell-vill's MS. p. 18.

PIRRIEHOUDEN, adj. Fond, doating, Perths. perhaps from Teut. paer, a peer, an equal, and houden held, as denoting mutual attachment.

PIRZIE, adj. Conceited, Loth. q. an A per se, a phrase much used by onr old writers; or from Fr.

parsoy, by one's self.

PLUKUP, s. Poems 16th Century, p. 299. -Na expencis did he spair to spend, Quhill pece was brocht vnto ane finall end. Quhar as he fand vs at the plukup fair, God knawis in Scotland quhat he had ado With baith the sydis, or he culd bring vs to.

This is left without explanation in Gl. But at the plukup fair certainly signifies, completely in a state of dissention, ready to pull each others ears.

Pluck, v. S. B., signifies to spar. They pluckit ane anither, like cocks. The E. phrase to pluck a crow, is allied; also Belg. plukhaair-en, to fall together hy the ears. The word in form, however, most nearly resembles the E. v. to pluck up, as signifying to pull up by the roots.

POCKED SHEEP, old sheep afflicted with a disease resembling scrofula, S.

POCKMANTEAU, s. A portmanteau, S., literally a cloak-bag.

-Bearing his luggage and his lumber,----In a pockmanteau or a wallet.

Meston's Poems, p. 3. Poiner, s. One who gains a livelihood by digging feal, divots, or clay, and selling them for covering houses, and other purposes, Invern. "Her father said, that the people she saw were not tenants on the Green of Muirtown, but were poiners or carters from Inverness, who used to come there for materials." Case, Duff of Muirtown, &c. A. 1806.— Por, s. A thrust with a sword. "Missing his ward, he gets a por at the left pape, whereof he died." Mellvill's MS. p. 194. "Por of a rapier;" p. 196. Teut. porr-en, urgere.

PRETTY. Add: In this sense it is said of Capt. Forbes, nicknamed Kaird; "He was a pretty soldier;" Spalding, i. 243.

4. Handsome, well-made; as applied to soldiers, nearly equivalent to able-bodied. "The laird was not at home, but his lady with some pretty men was within the house, which was furnished with ammunition, &c." Ibid. i. 220.

PRICK. Add; 2. An iron spike. Of Morton it is said; "He was condemned to be headed, - and that head that was so witty in worldly affairs—to be set on a prick on the highest stone of the gavell of the tolbooth, that is towards the publick street."-Mellvill's MS. p. 79.

Purie, s. A small meagre person, Orkn. Purles. V. Proof, vo. Feather-cling.

Pur, v. Add; To put on, to give a gentle push, as when one intends to give a hint to another to be silent, S. "Maister Robert Bruce, assistit with Mr Andro Melvin —ceassit not to defend that here. sie, albeit Dunkisone puttit on him to desist thairfra." Hamilton's Facile Traictise, p. 114.

PUTTER, s. A corr. of petard. " He had about 800 men, whereof there were some towns men, and six putters, or short pieces of ordnance." Spalding's Troubles, p. 233.

QUHA-SAY, s. Expl. "remark;" Legend Bp. St. Androis, p. 334.

Then, when this turn cott tuke gude nycht, Half way hameward vp the calsay, Said to his servandis for a quha say; ' Alace, the porter is foryett!'.

It seems to signify a mere pretence; allied perhaps to the latter part of the alliterative Belg. word wisie-wasie, a whim-wham.

QUHAM. Add; 2. A marshy hollow, whether with or without stagnate water, Loth.

Quhang. Add; "They are ay at the whittle and the quhang;" S. Prov. i. e. always in a state of contention.

RACHLIN. Add; A. Bor. rockled, " rash and forward, in children;" Grose.

RACKSTICK, s. A stick used for twisting ropes,

S., from E. rack, or Su.G. raeck-a, to extend.
RAY, s. Add; Hence brak ray, went into disorder; Poems 16th Cent. p. 255.

Fra credite I crakit, kindnes brak ray, No man wald trow the word that I did say. RAISE, v. Add; Ross's Helenore, p. 45.

The herds that came set a' things here asteer, And she ran aff as rais'd as ony deer.

RAMPS, s. A species of garlick, Allium ursinum, Linn., Loth. Ramsons, E. This is merely the Goth. name, Sw. rams, allium ursinum, in Goth. land; ramsk in Scania; ramslock, West-Gothland, (Linn. Flora Suec. p. 103.): most probably from ram, Isl. ram-r, strong, harsh, rank. Thus ramslock literally means, the rank or strong-tasted leek. In this sense, Ramsh, adj. q. v. is used, S. B.

RANDY, adj. Quarrelsome, scolding, S. Meston's Poems, p. 6.

A warrior he was full wight, A rambling, randy, errant knight.

RANTY-TANTY. Add; This is described as a weed which grows among corn, with a reddish leaf, boiled along with langkail, S.B. Its E. name I have not been able to learn.

RATCH, s. "Little auk, Alca Alle;" Orkn. "In Shetland, rotch and rotchie." Neill's Tour, p. 197. This seems a corr. of the name Rotges, given to this bird in Martin's Spitsberg. V. Penn. Zool. 517. Red, to loose, Insert 1. 18.; The A.S. phrase is similar; Geraedde hire feax; Composuit crines suos. Bed. 3. 9. from geraedian, parare.

RED, to counsel. Under this v. Add;

Rede, adj. Aware, q. counselled. V. Proof, vo.

REEL, REILE, s. 1. Violent or disorderly motion, S. similar in sense to the E. v. "There may be a reel among their affections, as they receive the word with joy." Guthrie's Trial, p. 137. From Sw. ragl-a to stagger, a derivative from rag-a, huc illuc ferri, ut solent ebrii; Ihre. This may be the idea originally suggested by Reel, as denoting a certain kind of dance. 2. A loud, sharp noise, rattling, S. 3. Bustle, hurry.

They have run oure with a reill

Thair sairles sermone red yistrene.

Diatl. Clark & Courteour, V. SAIRLES. Reive, s. A name given to what is considered as an ancient Caledonian fort. "These mounds are perfectly circular, with regular fosses; the one is styled the Meikle Reive, in the language of the country, and is about a hundred yards in diameter." P. Campsie, Statist. Acc. xv. 377. Perhaps

q. the large inclosure. V. RAE, and REEVE. REWELYNYS. Add; The Rivilings, worn in Orkney, are made not only of cow-hides, but of seal-skins, untanned and undressed.

RYCHTWIS, adj. Used as denoting what is legal; rychtwis born, as opposed to bastardy; Wallace. V. Gup, sense 3.

RODDEN-FLEUK, s. The turbot, also Roan-fleuk, Aberd. Mearns; Raan-fleuk, Loth. "By some singular chance, the holibut, a coarse dry fish, is in Scotland styled the Turbot, which in Scotland is called Rodden-fleuk; the last word being a general denomination for flounders, and other flat fish."—Pinkerton's Geography, I. 192. This has been expl. q. red-flounder. Some think that it is designed from the colour of the spots, as resembling the berries of the Roan-tree.

To Roose, v. a. Fish, which are to be cured, are first thrown together in a large quantity, with salt among them, and allowed to lie in this state for some time. This, by the curers, is called roosing them, S.

Rose, s. The disease called Erysipelas, S .-"The Erysipelas, or St. Antony's firesome parts of Britain is called the rose." Buchan's Dom. Med. p. 276. Su.G. ros, Germ, rose, Teut. roose, (vulgo rosa, Kilian,), id. The disease has evidently, because of the colour of the eruption, borrowed its name from the rose; as this, according to Wachter, is from Germ. rot; according to Ihre, from Su.G. rood, red.

Rouch, s. The coarser, also, the largest part of any thing, is vulgarly called the rouch o't, S.O. a. the rough part of it.

Roup, s. A close mist, Border; pron. roop. SANDBLIND. Add; 2. It also signifies purblind, short-sighted, S. Gl. Shirr. Sanded, short-sighted, A. Bor. Grose.

SANE, v. 2. Add, from Ross's Helenore, p. 65. She —frae the ill o't sain'd her o'er and o'er.

Sanschuch, adj. Wily, crafty, Buchan; allied perhaps to Gael. seannach a fox, whence seannachal cunning; 'or to Isl. sannsagar-menn, prophets (Verel.), from sann-ur (Su.G. sanir) true, and saga narration.

SARBIT. Add; This exclamation may have originally expressed the sensation of pain. For Isl. sar-beit-r signifies, exulcerans; Verel.

SARK. Add; SAKKING, adj. Cloth for making coarse shirts, S. "Order was given out to search the country for hides, gray cloaths, and sarking cloath," &c. Spalding, i. 289.

SARKED, (SARKIT). Add;

I shall hae you shod and sarkit. Ere the snawy days come on.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 84.

Scalliard, s. A stroke, W. Loth. Isl. skell-a to strike with the hands, skell-r a stroke. Perhaps Scluffert, S. B. is the corruption.
To Scam, v. a. To scorch, S. V. Skaumit.

Scance, v. Add; 3. To give a cursory account of any thing, S.

Bout France syne did skanse syne An' warn'd them ane an' a' T' oppose ay sic foes ay,

An' stand by king an' law.

A. Douglas's Poems, p. 133.

Now round the ingle in a ring,

On public news they're scancin. Ibid. p. 151. Scanclishin, s. Scanty increase; also, smallremainder, W. Loth.; corr. perhaps from E. scanty, which Junius derives from Dan. skan-a, Sw. skon-a,

SCLATER. Insert, as definition; The Wood-louse,

Oniscus asellus, Linn., S.

Sclithers. Add; The term properly signifies loose stones lying in great quantities on the side of a rock or hill, Loth.; allied perhaps tu Germ. schlitz-en, disjungere.

Scon, s. An instrument for scooping, Clydes. SCUM, s. A greedy fellow, a mere hunks, S. perhaps a metaph. use of the E. word.

Sea-coulter, s. The Puffin, Alca arctica, or Coulter-neb. Avis marina, Sea-Coulter dicta. Sibb. Scot. p. 22.

SEN. Sen syne. Add, from Wyntown, v. 10. 346. Thus Constantyne ——gave all the land,

That Papys sene-syne had in there hand. Session, Sessioun, s. The name given to the Consistory, or parochial eldership in Scotland, S. It consists of the minister, who constantly presides; of the Ruling Elders; and of Deacons, who have a right of judgment only in causes which respect the support of the poor, or the management of ecclesiastical temporalities. All ordinary causes, in which the congregation are interested, are tried and determined by the Session. In some cities there is one general session for the different parishes within the liberties. "This ordour has been ever observed sen that tyme in the Kirk of Edinburgh,—that the auld Sessioun befor thair departure nominat 24 in electioun for Elders, of quhom 12 are to be chosen, and 32 for Deacounes, of quhome 16 ar to be elected." Knox's Hist. p. 267. V. Elder, Elderschip.

SCHOUTTS, s. pl. A. Hume, Chron. S. P. iii.391.

What plesour war to walk and see

Endlang a river cleir,-

The salmon out of cruives and creills

Uphailed into skoutts.

Perhaps skiffs, yawls; from Belg. schuyt, cymba, linter; Isl. skuta navigium.

SELCOUTH. Add. Skinner mentions this word as occurring in P. Ploughman; but he has misquoted the place.

---Much people saved of selkougth sores.

SET, (expl. attack). Add; Perhaps it is merely a metaph. use of the word as signifying a tack or lease. Shale, s. A name given to allum ore, S.

SHAMLOCH, s. A cow that has not calved for two years; W. Loth. Gael. simlach, id.

SHANKIM, s. A person, or beast, that has long small legs; Orkn. V. SHANK.

SHEARIN, s. The act of cutting down corn, S.

To morrow we'll the shearin' try, 'Gain' breakfast-time, if it be dry.

A. Douglas' Poems, p. 114.

2. By a common metonymy, harvest in general, S. Shed. Add; Sheed of land is used in the same sense, Orkn.

SHEEPS-SILLER, s. Common Mica, whether found in granite, or in micaceous shistus rocks; q.

the silver of sheep.

SHIRRAGLIE, s. A contention, a squabble; Loth. Su.G. skurigla, increpere, to make a noise, to chide. Germ. schurigl-en, molestia afficere, to trouble, to disturb. MoesG. agla, tribulatio. Ihre, without a sufficient reason, prefers Ital. scoreggia, a lash. Wachter derives it from Germ. schur vexatio, and A.S. egl-an vexare, cruciare.

SHODE-SHOOL, s. Watson's Coll. iii. 47. a wooden shovel, shod with iron, S. B.

Shots, s. pl. The boxes of a mill-wheel, which contain the water by which it is moved, S. B.

SIBBENS. V. SIVVENS, Dict.

SILLY. Add; 6. Timid, spiritless, pusillanimous. "Marischal—commanded the baillies to take out of their town 20 soldiers,—with eight score pounds in money for their forty days of loan; whilk for plain fear they were forced to do, being poor silly bodies." Spalding, i. 241.

SITHENS. Add; 2. Sense. "Now sithens our SITHENS. Add; 2. Sense. "Now sithens our forefathers, which lived most iust, could not be made iust in the deedes of the lawe;—of necessitie we are compelled to seeke the iustice of a christian man, without all lawe or workes of the lawe." H. Bal-naues's Confession, p. 69.

SII: IST, adj. Expl. laying aside work in the mean time; Perths.

SKARRACH, sense 1.1.2. after weather, Add; Ang. Fife.

Skaumit. Add; it is sometimes written scamed. "This wise and valiant M'Donald—wrote to the committee of Murray—a charge, with a fiery cross of timber, whereof every point was scamed and burnt with fire." Spalding, ii. 216.

Skift, s. A broad ridge of land, as distinguished from Laing, a narrow ridge, Orkn.; from Su.G. skift intervallum, a division, skift-a, to divide.

Shed is nearly synon.

SKINKLIN (vo. SKINKLE). Add; It properly signifies the sparkling of a bright irradiation; Ayrs.

Skreigh, v. Add; Gael. sgreach-am to shriek, sgreach-a screech.

Skreed, v. Add; Gael. sgread-am to screech, sgread a screech.

SKUG, s. 5. A pretence; S. Sibb. Hist. Fife, p. 34. "In case ye go to this work again,—making God's glory, the cause of his Kirk, of your King and Common weill, to be but pretences and scuggs,—the Lord shall curse the work," &c. Mr Ja. Melvill's MS. Mem. p. 122. Add; Su.G. fara til skogs in exilium ire, S. to fare till a skug, V. Ihre, vo. Taang, alga. It is evident that both the v. and s. S. and A. Bor. more nearly resemble the Seandinavian terms, than A.S. scua, umbra.

SKUL. Add; Perhaps Gael. sgalg, a bowl, is from Dan. skal, id. as having been imported into the western islands by the Norwegians.

SLEEK, s. A measure of fruits, or roots, &c. containing forty pounds; as, a sleek of apples, onions, &c. S.

SLIEVE-FISH, s. The Cuttle-fish; Frith of Forth. V. KEAVIE.

SLINKIN, s. Deceit, Fife; A. Douglas's Poems, p.78.
I'm no sae foolish as aver,—

That they alike disposed are, To flatt'rin and to slinkin.

Slinkin' as a part. or adj. is expl. Gl. "cheating, deceitful." This is nearly allied to the E. v. from A.S. slink-an, to creep.

Slusch. Add; Dan. slask-er, to paddle, to puddle.

SMATCHET. Add; It is, I find, once or twice applied to a man, in the same sense, with a different orthography, which is perhaps more genuine, as being the most ancient; Legend, Bp. St Androis, p. 340.

Bot ay the mair this smatcher gettis, The closser garris he keip the yettis.

SMITTLE. Add, from Legend Bp.StAndrois, p.333.

When Monseir gaid vuto his mess, Into ane gallerie neir besyde; Thair wuld this halie bischope byde, Saying, forsuith, it was not smittel.

Sneeshin. Add; 2. A pinch of snuff; S.

-Else they are not worth a snishen.

Meston's Poems, p. 25.

SNIFTER. Add; 4. Metaph. used, like heesic, to denote the effect of a strong purgative potion, S. B.

Souch, s. Add; 4. Used as equivalent to cant, S. Give them the souch, they can dispense With either scant or want of sense.

Meston's Poems, p. 15.

Spaig, s. A skeleton; Clydes. Teut. spoocke, spoke, Su.G. spok, spectrum, phantasma; supposed to be formed from Isl. puke, diabolicum phantasma.

To Spark, v. a. To soil by throwing up small spots of mire, S. Hence spark, a spot of mire; evidently an oblique use of the E. word. It also signifies a small particle of any thing. It occurs in this general sense in a poem more than two centuries old. V. YYRNE.

* Spectacles, (of a fowl) s. pl. The merry-thought, S. V. Brit.

Speen-Drift. Add; This has anciently been of more general use. "A tempestuous showre and drow-carryed us back almost to the May, with such a how wa, [hollow wave] and spin drift, that the boat being open, he looked for great danger, if the stormy showre had continued." Mellvill's MS.

SPYNDLE, 1. 2. for six hanks, r. four hanks.

SPRAYNG. Add; 2. A ray. "About the month of January, there was seen in Scotland, a large blazing star, representing the shape of a crab or cancer, having long spraings spreading from it." Spalding, i. 41.

Spree. Add, from A. Douglas's Poems, p. 144.

Syne hame they gang fu' hearty, To busk themsels fu' trig an' spree;

For raggit they're and dirty .-

STACK. Add; This word is used in the same sense; Orkn. "At a little distance from Papa Stour, lyes a rock encompassed with the sea called Frau-a-Stack, which is a Danish word, and signifieth, our Lady's Rock." Brand's Orkn. p. 109.

STAIG. Add; We have another proof of the ancient application of this term, perhaps in a general sense, to the male of animals. A. Bor. steg denotes a gander; Grose.

STAMPHISH, adj. Unruly, unmanageable, W. Loth. from Teut. stamp-en to kick, or perhaps originally the same with STUMFISH; q. v. STANE-CHACKER. Add; 2. This name is also applied to the Wheat-ear, Motacilla Oenanthe, Linn. S. the chack or check of Orkn. "The Wheat-ear is generally known in Scotland by the appropriate name of Stane-chacker." Fleming's Tour in Arran. STEIKIS, s. pl. Poems 16th Cent. p. 294.

Sum gat thair handfull of thir half merk steikis, Will have na mair within ane yeir nor we.

This word has been handed down from the A. Saxons. It is undoubtedly an improper application of styc, stuca, styca, which denoted a small brass coin, in value about half a farthing. This is derived from sticke, a fraction, a small part, as being their lowest denomination of money. Su.G. stycke pars, frustum; also, moneta minuta; rundstycke, a penny.

Stell, v. sense 1. Add; To stell a gun, to point it, to take aim; Loth.

STELL, s. Add; S.B. this denotes an enclosure in which cattle are confined, higher than a common fold.

STUGHIE, s. Something that fills very much, as, food that soon fills the stomach, Loth. Hence, STUGHRIE, s. Great repletion, Loth. V. STEGH.

STUROCH, s. Meal and milk, or meal and water stirred together; Perths. Crowdie, synon. Teut. stoor-en, to stir.

Supersault, s. The somersault, or somerset; catmaw, synon. "His head going down, he loups the supersault, and his buttocks light hard beside me, with all his four feet to the lift." Mellvill's MS. Mem. p. 184. Fr, soubresault, id.

To Sushie, v. n. To shrink, W. Loth. apparently from the same source with Sussy, q. v. Fr.

soucier, to infect with care.

To TAK on, to enlist. Add; "The drum went through both Aberdeens, desiring all gentlemen and soldiers that was willing to serve in defence of our religion,—that they should come to the Laird of Drum younger, and receive good pay; whereupon divers daily took on." Spalding, ii. 165.

TANGIE, s. A sea-spirit, which, according to the popular belief in Orkney, sometimes assumes the appearance of a small horse, at other times that of an old man. The name is supposed to originate from Tang, sea-weed. The description seems nearly to correspond to that of Kelpie, q. v.

TARROW. Add; 4. To complain. I darena tarrow, I dare not complain; Clydes. From this v. is formed the adj. TARLOCH, slow at meat, lothing, squeamish; Ibid.

Tickles, s. pl. Spectacles; Banffs. apparently a mere abbreviation.

To Tent, v. n. Add; O. E. "I tente to my business," Palsgraue, Fol. 388.

Topfaw, s. Soil that has fallen in, or sunk from the surface; Fife.

Tosie, sense 1. Add, from Meston's Poems, p.55.

-She's got her Jimrie cosie,

Of well mull'd sack, till she be tosie.

Tottle, adj. Warm, snug; Perths. synon. Cosie. Gael. teoth-am, teothaich-am, to warm.

TREB, s. The same with Corback, q. v. TRUCKIER. Add; It denotes a woman of a loose character, S. B. a waggish or tricky person, Border. TUSKER. s. An instrument made of iron, with a wooden handle, used in Orkney for cutting peats; perhaps q. twaeskaer, from Sw. twae two, and skacr-a, to cut; that which divides or cuts in two.

TYTE, 1.8. Add; as tyte, id. Clydes.
UMBOTH. Add; This word is understood, by gentlemen of the law, as properly signifying, alternate. Thus, umboth teinds are such as are exchanged by rotation; so that those, which the bishop has the one year, belong to his clergy the next, and vice versa.

Voust, s. Add; Hamilton writes vosting, Facile Traictise, p. 36.

Vow, interj. In addition, V. WAAH, below.

WAAH, s. Expl. "any thing that causes surprise and admiration;" Orkn. Isl. va, also vo, malum insperatum; sometimes, any thing unexpected, but most commonly used in a bad sense. Teut. wee vae.

WALTERARS. Poems 16th Cent. p. 248; over-

- Wulterars of courts ye lat suborne yow.

WANLAS. Add; This was evidently used in E. as a term of the chace. "Wanlass, (a term in hunting) as, Driving the Wanlass, i. é. the driving of deer to a stand; which in some Latin records is termed Fugatio Wanlassi ad stabulum, and in Doomsday-Book, Stabilitio venationis;" Phillips.

"Illi custumarii solebant fugare Wanlassum ad stabulum,—i. e. to drive the deer to a stand, that the Lord may have a shoot;" Blount ap. Cowel. But this use of the term, it must be acknowledged, so far from elucidating it, leaves it in still greater obscurity; for here wanlas seems to signify, not the act, but the object that is driven to a stand.

WARSH. Add; Versse has been already mentioned, (vo. Walsh), as signifying, fresh. Our warsh appears in other forms in O. E. It is evidently the same with weryshe, inconditus, (Huloet.) q. not pickled or salted. For Elyot expl. inconditus, wearyshe; and Skinner after Gouldman, werish, inconditus, insipidus, insulsus. "Werish (old word) unsavoury;" Phillips.

Weik, 1. 18. for beach of a river, r. reach of a river; Somner.

WEIRD. For a proof of Weird being viewed as a person, V. WIDDERSYNNIS, l. 15.
